Saji is probably halfway saying it to himself. Everyone thought that but they just nodded in agreement.

"Well, since there's also things like {Magic.Items} as expected I doubt it reaches the leaders of other top teams but even then it should be much higher than the normal members."

Zenom said with his arms crossed.

"Wai..Is there no one here that seeks after romance? Like bonds and stuff.."

Ralpa said as if she was shocked but her face was laughing. It seems that her remarks just a moment ago were just raising a problem and not her own assertion. Hearing that, Saji was a bit embarrassed for replying seriously himself.

"Probably..the fact that they're former "Japanese people" I'm sure, is the only thing that can't be bought with money. Though even that can't be said for everyone unconditionally. If you were to say something extreme then how much could you sell the relationships between Japanese people for? that sort of thing works as well. I don't think it would be strange for there to be people that sell others for 1 gold coin."

When Gwine said that, Saji remembered himself about one year ago.

During that time he felt like he was at the peak of his life in his hometown of Rockfall village. He had to dig through his faded and forgotten memories, trying to wring them out as he failed a number of times and was finally able to make the thresher, which he was considerably praised over by his owner and the lord. He was in ecstasy over just 1 gold Shu and a pair of chickens. If it was me at that time then rather than something like Japanese who I had no familiarity with I'd have put priority on 1 gold coin I'm sure.

Thinking that I smiled. Also, the one who abandoned the two people who released me from the slave ranking blinded by money was myself. In some meanings was it trying to defend myself? But, I can hold my chest out and say that my choice wasn't a mistake. Saji was happy enough that he could get defiant and think that.

The next morning, we went running as usual but soon after Saji was ordered to sing a song by Al. {British}. Since Saji idolized rock he didn't know any songs to sing at a time like this but since a song that you sing during field trips in elementary school was specified he was somehow able to sing it. All over the place there were parts of the lyrics he was worried about but everyone else followed with him. Since singing while running also works as training to increase lung capacity he wasn't against it. In the first place, in this town of Baldukk even if they act a bit audacious, Saji as a member of the {Slaughterers} no one would complain about it. Without even paying any mind to the trouble it causes in the early morning singing loudly was fun and even refreshing.

That night, Al gathered his three slaves and explained the outline of yesterday night. All three of them showed disapproval to changing owners even temporarily but in the end since Al ordered them they reluctantly obeyed.

For the time being as a first hand to play, Zuru and Maruso need to start going to places they don't normally go and complain about things. They'll make small complains about their jobs as slaves having increased recently.

However, there wasn't a feel that they were able to act very well.

Since they weren't able to say even a single complaint towards their master. They're treated the same as normal combat slaves and when it comes to meals while it's just breakfast and dinner, they're allowed to eat however much of whatever they please so that is happiness. Even though that's the case they're still paid somewhat high wages as well. It's something they seized from another party but Zulu was provided with high class metal armor banded-mail and Maruso has an extremely high quality sword merchant Fuggusu produced broad sword. Both of those aren't the type of equipment just a mere combat slave would be allowed to use. However, since it's an important job they were ordered by their master they couldn't slack off, the two of them could only say things they didn't actually think. A reasonable number of eyes caught sight of those two.

There was a chance in the dungeon to lower Al's reputation.

Conveniently it was in this teleport room on the 5th floor.

Furthermore, the other group was {Sun.Ray}. After Zenom exchanged looks with Ralpha she desperately twisted her head and so everyone other than Al would notice just as decided before-hand she put her left hand on her land knee and started talking about meaningless things. She started making fun of {Sun.Ray} over the low nutritional value of their cucumbers at a volume they couldn't hear. Bel and Miduchi noticed right away and reacted. Maruso put in a loyal retort. Just as expected, Al ended up snapping.

After returning from the dungeon, we went to sell the magic stones and Al declared that all of Saji's debt had been repaid. A smile appeared on Saji's face. In an unbelievably short period of time he was able to pay off a huge amount as 5,000,000 Z. Furthermore, since he was also properly handed his wages and the leftovers so in these four months the amount Saji obtained was over 6,000,000 Z. Since there was the charge for staying at a high class inn and the necessary things he had to buy there wasn't much remaining on hand but to Saji he was able to repay it in a shot period that exceeded his expectations.

While Saji was floating in good spirits, Ral found another good chance to pick a fight with some adventurers who came to sell magic stones. Ral said something to make fun of the amount the adventurers earned, hearing that Saji looked at the magic stone on top of the scale and it certainly was a cute magic stone. It was about the same size as the magic stones of the ogres we're always obtaining but the color was a lot darker.

(Ehe..Starting next month I'll be earning way more than something like that. Don't be arrogantly picking a fight with our Ral-san over something at that level. Ah!)

It's the sign when she's standing up. Noticing that Saji tried to say something in a panic but they were thrown out of the story by the old man who runs it.

During dinner that night Saji made a huge mistake. It wasn't the same as usual, they were in the middle of a party celebrating the repayment of Saji's debt, Al left his seat for a short while. Saji was completely engrossed in eating a delicious fish off the bone.

He was scraping off the meat around the eyes with the slightly rough tongue of a Cat-people.

(De..Delicious! How delicious is this! For fish to be this good! I don't even know how many times I've been moved by this same thing since I came to Baldukk. Until I came here since I was further inland I hadn't eaten fish. I wonder if after all fish are best for Cat-people?)

It was then that an angry voice echoed through the store.

she looked down at Ral. This time for sure, I need to say something that is helpful.

"U..Umm..Th..The two of you, sto..stop it! Pleeease~ stop it~!"

(Fumu, I think it was very good acting that approached the real thing. The feeling of panic should have come out as well. Even I can be useful at times. I've even become able to stab ogres with the spear on the 7th floor without flinching!)

Saji triumphantly returned to the inn and everyone rejected him.

Additionally they also came to the conclusion that the leader Al is useless so they had to take into consideration that there might be obstacles in their plan from here on out and even reported that they were excluded from the plan.

There's nothing to do other than feel down.

I wonder if there's anything I can do to be useful?

I need to think of something. Saji twists his head just like the time with the thresher. However, he quickly remember. At the end of last year, shortly before they released him from being a slave the time when they went to the brothel and used condoms, what he thought of! Fortunately the {Slaughterers} have a holiday during Golden Week.

(It's just a bit but I have some money, as expected it won't be enough to buy Cathy until I enter the dungeon a number of times more. It should be fine if I use this money.)

Thinking that Saji started to twist his head over what he can do to what extend with his limited budget.

Starting the next day it was just the contents but Saji immediately started making a prototype. However, it was extremely difficult to skillfully make minced meat, quite literally it takes backbreaking amounts of work. Things weren't going very well. While he was making it he felt like the color of the pork he bought ended up changing colors as well. And then, he remembered. There's no preservatives. Things like O-157 are dangerous.

When he tried asking the butcher he purchased the pork from and they said they didn't know of anything that sounds almost like magic like that. It depends on the season but raw meat only lasts at best~ one day. If two days pass then people with weak stomachs will get diarrhea. It seems that if you put it in a refrigerator and properly replace the ice then it'll last another few days.

Taking into consideration the time it takes to purchase the meat and process it then if he can't do the work with a refrigerator then he'd like a bit more time. If this business doesn't go well then won't he'll just be of completely no use to everyone, additionally he remembered back to how his hobbies ended with how to make instruments as well.

While thinking that as Saji was dabbling and causing trouble for the butcher Miduchi passed by and asked him what he was doing. Such and such as he discussed the details, Miduchi put her hand to her jaw and thought about it.

"I don't know if it will be of reference for you Saji-san, but it's not as if I don't have something in mind on that. There's a variety of different mushrooms cultivated in my country. A lot of them are the same as ones from "Earth" but I think a lot of them also didn't exist as well. Among those there's a mushroom called Soruhoggu. It's a mushroom that is the source for a poison called Sorira but during the process of making that poison a white power comes out. It seems that corpses of mice lasted for a considerably long time without rotting after touching that powder. It could be possible that it's a preservative."

Hearing that Saji was so overjoyed he felt like he could jump up but there's no guarantee it's really a preservative so it's too soon to relax. However, it might be good to think of it as one step forward. While Saji was pleased he discussed various things with Miduchi. She might have pitied Saji from being excluded from the plan. She might have been moved by Saji's feelings of wanting to be useful to everyone. However, to Saji it didn't matter whichever it was.

Furthermore, since Saji was excluded from the plan for the time being he had to have meals alone or together with Al's slaves.

That night, while Al was gone to the capital, this time Gwine picked a fight with Zulu.

"Zulu, stop using your hands and use the {chopsticks} or fork! I feel disgusted just watching. You already know how to use them right."

She pulled back her chair and if you look closely she has her left hand on her left knee. Hearing that Zenom and Maruso suddenly grabbed their knife and chopsticks.

"I was told to eat however I please by master. Gwine has no right to order m."

Zulu said as if he didn't care at all as he started grabbing the meat and vegetable stir fry with his left hand and carried it to his mouth, then he wiped his dirty fingers on the tablecloth. It seems it was unexpected for Zulu to be told off on that matter and he made a slightly annoyed expression.

"It's unrelated to Al-san. I'm saying that I feel disgusted from it!"

(Zulu, sorry)

"I only obey master and nobles. There's no reason for me to listen to what Gwine says."

(I wonder what she'll say next? Huh? Somehow it's gotten a bit fun)

"Wha! When Al-san comes back I'll tell on you!"

(We've already gathered attention, I guess this is fine already)

"Do as you please, I'll eat however I like."

(Is she a child! I heard that Gwine was older than me but..)

"Is that so, then feel free to do as you please. Though Al-san likes things that are refined. I wonder if he can endure the fact that his own slaves are eating in a vulgar way and causing the surrounding people to feel disgusted?"

(Since it's this occasion, it might be good to have Zulu start properly eating with tableware)

"Gu!! Didn't Gwine not use tableware at first as well!"

(She says painful things)

"But I sympathized with Al-san's way of thinking and now I'm properly able to eat elegantly."

"Just stop already, why don't we properly eat in a refined way with the tableware. Zulu aren't you fine with that as well?"

If Zenom hadn't smoothed things over the dispute might have continued a while longer.

The next morning, Bel and Gwine started fighting in the miscellaneous goods store and then that evening Ral and Miduchi started fighting over something stupid again in the middle of the main street.

Even further during lunch the next day, Zenom, Toris, Ral, and Zulu teamed up and started fighting with team Miduchi, Gwine, Maruso, and Larry over something in a restaurant.

That night Ral and Miduchi started picking faults over each others hairstyles again.

It was already completely known between adventurers that there was discord between Ral and Miduchi.

They themselves thought they were picking fights under various cases but whenever it didn't involve other party members Ral was always picking fights with just Miduchi. Since that was the case, the number of arguments between Ral and Miduchi naturally increased.

And then after several days passed, Al returned from the capital,

Saji tried inquiring with him about the production of {Sausages} while feeling timid inside but he was relieved that there wasn't any particular problem with it.

That night when they were having dinner at "Pegizu" a bar Saji brought his best prototype. It seems the seasonings were just a bit too strong but even then Saji was happy that it was popular with everyone. Since he was told that he can freely use the porter and cook of the {Slaughterers} Larry, so he decided to put in some more fighting spirit and make more {Sausages}.

After that several weeks passed. Since the discord between Ral and Miduchi had spread around that had become the focus. They would make it seem like the leader Al was lacking in management ability and chase him out of the party then he would enter {Sun.Ray} like that. Hearing that Al made a slightly amazed expression but in the since he already said he would leave things to them~ he just obediently lowered his head and accepted everyone's plan.

Of course, when it's time for him to return everyone will lower their heads and say, "After all we're not good without you. Please come back to us." By doing that we can put emphasis on the fact that he was somehow able to manage the wild horses that are Ral and Miduchi. Obviously, Ral and Miduchi will have to keep fighting after Al leaves and increase the scale to make it seem like even Toris can't handle it. If they find a good chance then somewhere around the 1st floor against monsters that aren't very dangerous, they could have someone witness their fight as the cause for someone skillfully getting injured.

Around the time they just entered the middle of May, the magic tool that the {Slaughterers} had put up for sale since last year seems to have sold for a considerably high price. Excluding Saji and the slaves, everyone got a bonus that reached 2.5 or so gold coins. Since the sale of magic tools wasn't included as a bonus on Saji's contract all he could do is look while biting his fingers but in the first place when they obtained that magic tool he was still doing jobs in the fields. Also, he had gotten plenty of compensation up until now.

Even looking at things in a favorable light Saji is still at the level of a beginner and he still hasn't found anything out about the level ups or whatever that he's half in doubt about. If he gets greedy he'll be punished.

He decided to think like that.

On a day off around the end of May, the {Slaughterers} decided to leave Al behind and go to the capital to have fun.

It seems that Miduchi will accompany Saji to some place. The destination was a healing clinic which is managed by a dark elf healer named Tukerin. It seems that Tukerin is famous even in the capital and when they asked the location from a member of the knight group on patrol through Rombertia they immediately replied with the precise location.

According to what Miduchi said it seems that healing clinic acts as an embassy for the country she was born. However, she herself didn't know the specific location of it so she had to ask a member of the knight group. After entering the waiting room filled with patients and one of the gnome employees went into the back. After a short while of waiting like that the employee and a dark elf came out to confirm Miduchi's status before they started whispering some kind of old-fashioned words. I wonder if she's Tokerin? Soon after just Miduchi was allowed into the back room. Miduchi waited for a short while in the room and a dark elf in their 50s entered.

"Are you Tokerin-san?"

"Yeah, I'm Tokerin."

They said that and stretched out their right hand. She grabbed Tokerin's right hand while they confirmed each others status. So their full name is Baidu~nsu.Tokerin. Just as rumored it seems they're a retired member of the rank 1 warrior class and they have all of the elemental magic skills.

"I'm rank 1 warrior class Chizumagurol. I came today with several requests. Before I start talking, please confirm this."

After saying that Miduchi took out the scimitar on her waist and put it on the table in front of her. Seeing such a splendid sword Tokerin must have had some thoughts on it, Tokerin timidly stretched out their hand and confirmed the status.

"O..Oh..This is..What a wonderful sword..However, is there something about this?"

"I think you can already understand it's not a sword that just a single warrior should be walking around with. The one granted me that sword was her majesty Lilus."

Hearing the line Miduchi carelessly stated, Tokerin's eyes went wide with amazement and they froze up.

"What!..How overwhelming..However, I can accept what you say that it was something her majesty was in possession of..Rather, I certainly can't think of anything other than that..Ha!!? Has Chizumagurol-dono had audience with her majesty!?"

Tukerin's voice was trembling when they finally reactivated.

"Yeah, last summer, I had an audience with her majesty, and was directly granted this sword. It seems that in the past it was her majesty's favored sword."

"Oh, Oh! So this sword was a favored item of her majesty!"

Tukerin caressed the blade of the sword once more with a trembling hand.

"On that occasion, I was ordered to a special mission by her majesty. Right now I'm acting as an adventurer in Baldukk in relation to that."

"Is it fine to talk to me about that?"

"Yeah, if it's just this much then there's no problem. However, anything more than this is no good. Today I'm here to request the assistance of Tukerin-dono in relation to that."

"Please say anything at all. I'll do whatever I can."

"Thank you very much. Is there any soruhoggu here? And then do you the method to purify sorira from that?"

"So you're in need of sorira is it. Of course we have some.

Periodically the acquisition members come to replenish our stick. We don't have a very large amount at all but it's fine if we hand over all we have on hand."

Tukerin leaned forward with a happy face on the verge of tears at the honor of being able to cooperate on a mission directly ordered by her majesty the Queen. Since she already imagined things would become like this Miduchi apologized in her heart and politely lowered head thanking Tukerin. But, she also said that what she needed was the disposable waste white powder that was produced during the purification of sorira from soruhoggu.

"Pl..Please wait just a moment. I'll confirm it now."

hurry. And then, soon after Tukerin came back in with a woman of the same age. It's the employee who just confirmed Miduchi's status.

"This is my wife Rodu~gu. She also received the training for the rank 1 warrior class but on the final ascertainment test she ended up falling through. She ended up as a rank 2 warrior class but when we got married she retired from being a warrior and entered the family as a part of the service ranking. After we had two children, with the younger child became an adult I decided to retire as well. It was just as the former official was feeling nostalgic and wished to return back to Erurehei so thanks to that we've been acting as a couple and healers here for over 10 years."

Rodu~gu made a gentle smile as she greeted and shook Miduchi's hand. They simply explained the circumstances and after calming down Rodu~gu from trembling in surprise and being moved the same as her husband, they explained what she wanted and she was able to understand right away. However, they only had a small amount of soruhoggu right now. It seems that the next supplement from the acquisition ranking will be in the fall. Since it couldn't be helped she said that was fine so she asked them to purify sorira and asked to receive the white power produced through that. Of course Rodu~gu accepted it immediately.

When they left the healing clinic, she said that depending on the case they might need a large amount of it in from here on so on that occasion they might come to request for more, and didn't forget to mention that she might come to request other cooperation as well.

During that time Saji was quietly waiting in the waiting room.

"It's just a bit but it seems we'll be able to receive a little bit. They said they would deliver it in two weeks."

Saji smiled hearing Miduchi's words.

And then just a bit after the middle of June, around the time the temperature started to increase quite a bit.

"Basutorial, are you properly saving your money up? You haven't been wasting it right?"

After returning from the dungeon, Al asked Saji. With a considerably serious expression.

"Yeah, of course. Right now about the only money I've used is on the prototypes of {Sausages} I guess."

"I see. About how much do you have saved up right now?"

"Around 1,500,000 I guess. If I receive around 500,000 this time as well then it will reach 2,000,000. Umm..And then, I have a request to make as well but.."

It seems that Al is worried about Saji's wallet. He hadn't forgotten about it. Saji was a bit relieved.

"It's a holiday right? I already know. After the next time we get back from the dungeon it's fine for you to rest."

However, the words that came back were ruthless. If it's that then

I can only rest for a total of two weeks(the usual 3 days off + 1 week from not having to enter the dungeon, and the following 3 days off for a total of 12 days, 2 weeks) right! It takes two weeks at a slow pace on a horse to get to Rockfall village. If you pay an additional amount to a passenger carriage and give it your best then you might get there a bit faster but even then it wouldn't make it in time.

Al laughed seeing Saji turn pale white. I wonder if he's enjoying himself? A dark something spread out in Saji's heart.

"Don't make a face like that. Two weeks is plenty. Ah, after we finish selling the magic stones everyone accompany me. Ah, this is an order."

While feeling dull and depressed he went to the magic tool shop to sell the magic stones and after receiving his bonus of 510,000 Z, 2 gold Shu and 1 silver coin, just as he was told Saji followed at the rear of everyone as they were guided by Al.

After walking for about 20 minutes, the place they arrived was a house he didn't know. No, it's probably not a house. There's a small signboard above the door but Saji didn't have the composure remaining to read it. Al told everyone to wait outside for a bit and entered the store alone. I wonder if it's something like a hidden restaurant or something. All of the meals they've eaten together were like a dream to Saji but this day he just felt depressed.

After a short while Al showed his face and ordered everyone to enter the store when Saji was welcomed with a nostalgic voice.

"Saji!!"

Is it a dream or illusion? The moment she recognized Saji after he entered the store Cathy jumped into his chest.

"Cathy!!"

He properly embraced her as she jumped over and raised her face.

Show me your face even closer.

Embrace me even tighter! Even more!

"I was always watching! I was always listening! But, that one week when I couldn't see you I was worried. If I couldn't see you anymore, or hear your voice, what would I do.."

Cathy started sobbing while being embraced by Saji.

"The congratulatory holiday is two weeks. It's plenty right?"

Al said while making a vulgar smile as he grinned looking at Saji embrace Cathy. It seems that the members of the {Slaughterers} who were watching from a bit of distance away couldn't hide their surprise but no one was making this sort of vulgar smile. Gwine was completely crying at the situation and the women Miduchi, Bel, Ral, and Maruso had some light tears in their eyes for some reason after being moved. After looking at Al again Saji got a bad feeling from the vulgar smile on his employers face but he was so happy right now that even that sort of face felt loving.

Ah, Al hadn't forgotten about it. He had properly seen through everything and made preparations!

I'm grateful!

While he was thinking that a female elf with a kiseru,

"That'll be 1,782,000 Z."

said that. In a fluster he came to his senses but the only money on him is the 510,000 Z he just received.

"Hurry and go get it. Run!"

Hearing Al's order while still making a vulgar smile, Saji ran out as if he was being pulled and ran through the town of Baldukk in the twilight evening.

He rushed into his room in Boil Manor and after putting the 510,000 Z he just received into his container for money he started running back again. His grinning and smiling won't stop. He couldn't hold back that it wouldn't stop. It would be good if it's not a vulgar feeling smile like Al though...

When he returned to the house from just now and looked up. "Slave Store, Ronslail" was written. When he put his hand on the door about to open it, from inside he heard the voice of "That's horrible!" from inside. It seems it's Miduchi's voice. I wonder what in the world happened in the short period of time? Thinking that Saji started to open the door.

"Che...Listen carefully. She arrived here around the end of April.

Certainly I didn't tell anyone about that. Of course I won't deny the small feeling of wanting to surprise him as well."

What was that? Cathy has been here since April!?

Shit!! That bastard!

The face that Saji thought was loving just now started to seem like a devil.

"But you know, think carefully about it. What do you think would have happened if I had told that to Basutorial at that time? He might have died in a hurry to earn money even just a bit faster you know?"

"U...I guess..That's.. true..as well?"

He could hear Miduchi's voice rapidly fade from the other side of the door.

He couldn't turn the handle the of the door.

Certainly..Certainly it's just as he said.

If he had seen Cathy's face at that point in April he would have gotten quite a bit impatient.

If you even just make a single mistake the ogres on the 7th floor will get you with a fatal blow.
Though Saji has grown quite a bit compared to the start, it's still no different from comparing the moon to a snapping turtle between him and the other members.
Or rather, his abilities back then were even less than they still are even now.
"It's just as Al said. There's no meaning if Saji were to have died."
This deep voice is Zenom I guess?
..If I were to die then all of the money that Al spent on Cathy would have turned into a complete loss.
Saji's head didn't reach the point of thinking that Al hadn't paid any money and put it on a tab.
Even if he hadn't paid yet Al would have bought Cathy though.
He took on that much risk and even paid close attention to my own feelings and safety.
"There's no guarantee that telling him everything would end up with good results after all."
The calm voice sounds like Toris.
Even Cathy should have been able to live safely during her time at the slave traders.
Judging from her words just now he was able to understand that she should have already seen Saji.
She even heard his voice..The song! During the days they're on the surface he was made to sing a song every morning while running and she heard that!
Come to think of it we always passed in front of here along this road while running.

Around the time in winter when he joined the {Slaughterers} putting aside the route on top of the outer crater outside of the town, he said he gets bored of the road so he didn't have a fixed route. But before any noticed it had become a fixed route.

That was to show my appearance voice to Cathy...

I'm an idiot.

It's only obvious that Al wanted to quickly tell me ever since Cathy arrived.

Even though I have no abilities at all he didn't show even a single displeased face and let me gain some valuable experience.

He taught me to write and even taught me magic.

He also let me train with the spear as well.

Additionally he even paid me money that doesn't match up to my true abilities.

Everything in front of me becomes cloudy from tears.

However, if here, I cry over this reason then Al's feelings would have been meaningless.

If I'm going to cry then I should just make them tears over reuniting with Cathy.

Saji twisted the door knob.

Chapter 204 (Reverse)

That morning Saji woke up with a good feeling. There was a bit of numbness remaining in his left arm that Cathy was using as a pillow but that let Saji feel a definite weight. Last night they drank a lot and after returning to Boil Manor unable to do anything the two of them fell asleep just like that.

Today they'll slowly have breakfast together then after that the two of them will go to the temple to release Cathy and then have the wedding ceremony, after that is shopping. As a wedding gift Saji received 200,000 Z from his employer Al, other than that he also received 100,000 Z each from Miduchi, Zenom, Toris, Bel, Ral, and Gwine, the three slaves Zulu, Maruso, and Giberuti gave him things like a knife, accessory, or tableware. Adding it together with his bonus remaining from the dungeon yesterday and Saji's current money is just over 1,000,000 Z, after releasing and marrying Cathy, since he also gets paid on the 1st day of next month, there's still 500,000 Z in leeway after the necessary expenses like inn and food until the end of the month. Saji kissed Cathy who had already opened here eyes in his arms before getting up from the bed.

"Now, let's go out. First off is food! Today is going to be busy!"

It was when he was putting on the clothes he just purchased last month and put on his rubber sandals, he suddenly noticed that Cathy doesn't have any shoes. (Ah, I need to buy some sandals as well. It's not a honeymoon but it might be good to go to the capital for a few days to do some shopping) Without even trying to hide the smile that naturally appeared on his face he started on the way to the restaurant with Cathy who was still wearing worn-out clothes.

"Eh? I'm fine with just porridge."

While Cathy was showing reservations with just a single bowl of oatmeal porridge, Ah, come to think of it I did too..and he remembered how it overlapped with himself previously, Saji said, "There's no need to hold back. I'm earning enough for you to eat however much of whatever you like. One day I'm sure you'll start to work as well though..Just this year your husband has earned a myriad of Z." while holding his chest high and ordered some more bacon, eggs, some smoked oyster, and white bread.

"Saji is amazing!! But, about how much is a myriad? Around 10 silver coins?"

Saji remembered that she can't do calculations. Prior to that she knows the denominations up to 10,000 but she doesn't know the digits higher than that. That's why probably, the only thing she can imagine without thinking anything is up to 99,999. If you were to continue life as a serf of Rockfall village then shopping that exceeds several tens of thousands of Z is pretty much unthinkable(even that if you think about the income or position of a slave that's something that only happens once every few years) so you could say that's plenty but from here on out things won't go that way.

While feeding her some thickly cut bacon cooked over a high flame with the oil come down, along with some eggs lightly covered in pepper, and white bread with the smoked oyster on it and Cathy started silently crying from being deeply moved just like Saji once upon a time.

Saji thought Cathy was so cute he couldn't help it how she would say "This is delicious!" and get engrossed with it every time she tried eating something. After listening to her story it seems that during the time she was at the slave traders place she always ate vegetable soup and wheat porridge and occasionally there was seconds of the wheat porridge and black bread. Since it seems that there was properly large vegetable pieces in the vegetable soup even then you could say it was considerably better than her eating habits in Rockfall village.

After they finished eating the two of them next started towards the main event of today, the temple. There were parents holding healthy children around 1 years old who seem like they can expect growth from here on out waiting in line to get the naming ceremony done. He lined up at the back together with Cathy. Of course, on the way to coming to the temple he properly stopped by "Slave Store, Ronslail" and picked up the proof of sale.

While they were lined up a middle aged woman dressed in robes who seemed to be an employee of the temple came walking around asking everyone what ceremony they wanted. Saji's reply was simple. "I want to release her, Cathy, from being a slave and after that marry her." Hearing that the employee and surrounding people all offered words of blessing.

(Ah, this feels so good!)

He scratched his head while embarrassed and said, "No~ don't they say if you get married in June the bride will become happy. I want to make her happy." and said a famous marketing slogan for a wedding chapel before, "Huh?" twisting his head. Was that from roman mythology...Everyone around him was making faces like, "That's my first time hearing that." Somehow he started to feel a cold sweat coming on as Saji tried to laugh, "A ha ha.." to cover it up.

After waiting for about an hour, they were safely able to finish the two ceremonies, and after making an offering of a total of 350,000 Z Saji checked Cathy's status a number of times.

(Catherine.Basutorial huh..No matter how many times I look at it, it's good..)

While Saji was thinking that and grinning and Cathy was looking at her own status as well as Saji's while(Ah, I was really able to marry Saji! I'm happy!) grinning.

Now then, the next place the two started towards while grinning was the clothing store. Since Cathy only has the worn-out clothes that she's been wearing since the past and it's getting a little bit too small, so first they need to buy some clothes. Since he still had a lot of money remaining they can just buy an appropriate outfit and then after lunch they'll leave a message before heading off to the capital and slowly take their time for a week or so.

The two of them purchased a neat shirt, pants, and several pairs of underwear at the clothing store. After buying those and returning to Boil Manor what waited for Saji was a surprising contract. He would graduate from being an apprentice and after his holiday was over his compensation would double, he signed and received his portion of that contract and then after telling Al he would be going to the capital for a week to purchase some sandals as well as playing around, went out in high spirits.

While riding the passenger carriage shaking on the way to the capital Saji starting thinking about where to go first.

(In order to buy sandals we definitely need to go to Greed Company but before even that there's a place I want to go right..Though I don't really know about it for sure so I guess this is fine to put off..)

First off Saji went to Greed Company to purchase sandals and introduce Cathy, but the head clerk Rozural.Rogu wouldn't take the money.

"Think of it as a wedding fit from us. Even though we didn't know, since we couldn't do anything for the wedding of a friend of Al-sama. Please don't mind it."

(Somehow, it feels like I've come to sponge off them? I didn't have that intention though..)

Also, the employee Reira.Yotlen tried asking in a whisper.

"Do you have any Saya?"

"Yeah, I received some from Al-san as a wedding gift. I'm fine on that end."

Saji replied in a low voice as well. Cathy was playing with Hanna and Kamunal. Since they're also the same Cat-people they got along together quickly.

Saji confirmed the location of a precious metal store with Reira and left Greed Company. They wandered around their first large city sightseeing while heading towards the precious metal store he was told about and in a short while they arrived at the store. Among nobles there's also the custom of giving {Marriage Rings} but other than nobles that considerably prosperous the custom hasn't sunk in almost at all.

However, Saji by all means wanted to give Cathy a ring. Of course something that's too expensive is impossible but he wanted to send her something that would be in commemoration. As expected a platinum or gold ring is impossible but if it's silver then it should be alright. If allergies become a problem then we'll deal with it when we get there. It's fine if I just buy her another one. Thinking that Saji confidently walked into the precious metals store while Cathy hesitantly followed after.

While Cathy was feeling troubled seeing all of the blinding accessories in the precious metal store, Saji gave her a silver ring that cost 60,000 Z. It's just a cheap article but for Saji right now this was his limit.

(Come to think of it I remember hearing it's supposed to be three months of your wages. In my case it's 600,000 Z huh..Huh? Was that the engagement ring? Well whatever. However, 600,000 huh..What the, if it's just that much then I can earn it after entering the dungeon just once. It might be good to come again.)

He safely gave Cathy a marriage ring and after they wandered around the capital looking at famous places for a few days but after a single store entered Saji's sight he was drawn to and entered it. It was an instrument store. While Saji was evaluating the stringed instruments his expression was a harsh one that wouldn't let anyone near. After asking the clerk he tried sounding them out a bit and would click with his tongue or tilt his head as time passed. Without eating for half a day just spending it in the store together with Saji without saying a single complaint, Cathy could be said to be the model wife.
In the end, Saji threw down the large sum of 230,000 Z to buy a single lute(an instrument that resembles a guitar).

One week later, when Saji returned from the capital, he enjoyed the time he slowly spent together with Cathy since they were in the capital. He would wake up in the morning and go for a light run, after that he would shower to wash away the sweat and have breakfast together with his new wife, then they would go out to the cool side of the lake as he teaches her to write simple words. Cathy was considerably fast at learning letters. Saji was(Sh..She's faster than..even me?) even shocked.
With lunch at noon in between during the afternoon he taught her some fundamental arithmetic while enjoying some tea quietly. Though different from letters which are just a matter of remembering them she was a bit bad at arithmetic. After that he did just a bit of spear training at the edge of town before the two of them went to eat some delicious fish and wine. Of course, he played the lute he purchased when they were in the capital as well. After that, when they returned the inn they used up the rubber hygiene products he received as a wedding gift.

When it came to using the rubber hygiene product Saji felt an indescribable feeling. He's never even used the pig's bowels in this lifetime so he doesn't have anything to compare them with. The last time he used them was in the super high class brothel of the capital and since the atmosphere wasn't ordinary he couldn't remember the feeling of using it. When it actually comes to using them he felt the quality wasn't as good as the ones he remembered from his past life. Additionally it was a bit painful that the size was just a bit small. However, since he already understand that there was the difference between heaven and earth of having them or not so he didn't make any complaints at all.

Incidentally, the preservatives had long since arrived but as expected he didn't want the first thing he did as part of his newlywed life to be cutting up meat on a cutting board to make minced meat so he decided to forget about {Sausage} making for a short while.

After spending a few days like that it became the day for everyone to return from the dungeon. After counting the days the two of them spent the day wandering around the area of the entrance plaza waiting for everyone to return. Close to the evening when the members of the {Slaughterers} appeared from the entrance Saji and Cathy immediately ran up.

"Welcome back, Al-san."

Saji greeted him with his hand around Cathy's waist.

Cathy is bashful while showing her new ring.

Seeing that all the members tease them.

"Oh~ we had a big catch this time as well. Everyone, shall we go?"

They all went to the usual magic tool shop in succession and sold the magic stones. This time as well they were able to make in the latter half of 50,000,000, so Saji thought that was excellent.

Simultaneously he thought (So the earnings don't change whether I'm there or not..huh. I need put some effort into it!) that.

Of course, since Saji didn't participate in entering the dungeon this time he wasn't given a bonus. The congratulatory holiday might be paid but since he's properly paid wages at the 1st of every month so that's only obvious. During dinner of that night Saji and Cathy talked about the various things they saw in the capital and time passed as Saji played the lute he purchased in the capital.

The first day of July, including the slaves everyone of the {Slaughterers} gathered without running to do a final confirmation of Bel's plan. Today after this they'll go to the temple and Al will sell Zulu, Maruso, and Larry to Toris. And then Al will vacate the Boil Manor and move to a different inn.

They confirmed the days for when Al should get into contact after leaving the {Slaughterers} based on {Sun.Ray}'s schedule and when he might join them and in the end they were all handed this month's salary. Just as planned they all went to the temple when it was just about 9 in the morning.

Since it was something they already spread as rumors since yesterday around noon there was already a dozen or so onlookers in front of the temple. The ones who are the talk of the street {Slaughterers} have their leader breaking away. If that's really true then they would definitely like him to join their party. Around half of the people who gathered were different adventurer party members thinking that and the remaining half were just there to confirm the rumors and simply onlookers.

During the time Al isn't around, obviously his room will be open but it came to Miduchi continuing to pay for and secure it. However, in order to keep it a secret publicly, Miduchi would use Al's room, and during that period Cathy would use Miduchi's room.

When the {Slaughterers} quickly returned to their inn they all gathered in Zenom's room and immediately started a conference. Though that's the case it was just a final confirmation that nothing was missing and didn't take much time at all.

For the time being the situation is one that they can only pray that Al is able to skillfully join {Sun.Ray}.

The next day was normally a day for them to enter the dungeon but the {Slaughterers} decided not to enter the dungeon until the first information comes from Al. This is because they also felt there was a need to check their formations and cooperation during combat since the leader Al left and since others might predict that it was believed to not be very unnatural. In the morning they went to the edge of town and broke a sweat while training, after the afternoon, while they were in town though they were in a lull state Miduchi and Ralpa still continued pretending with their boring disputes the same as usual.

Since Saji was excluded from those things it couldn't be helped so he would wander around town with Cathy or go out to the lake, and killed time teaching Cathy arithmetic. It was then that Saji suddenly realized.

(Come to think of it, she was considerably fast to learn letters but slow to understand arithmetic..There might be a problem with the way I'm teaching but..However, since she was able to learn letters that easily she should have some talent right..)

It was when he thought that far, there was something that dawned on him.

(The information on the Status appears to me as Japanese. However, I wonder how it looks to Cathy? In the first place, when we got married she looked at my and her own status a number of times..Even though she shouldn't have been able to read or write at all..)

"Hey~ Cathy. When we got married you were looking at the status but you shouldn't have been able to read letters right?"

"Yeah, is something strange about that?"

"If you can't read letters then there's no meaning in looking at status right? Rather, are letters even properly appearing on it?"

"Eh? Of course? That's the case. But, things like my own name I can tell from the shape and things like numbers my parents already knew after all. I understood the general meaning. Though I say that just my own. No one would teach me after all."

"I see..So that's why you were able to learn them pretty easily.."

Saji was able to understand it but if it's like that then in just the case of the large majority of slaves and Free People it might quite easy to teach them letters, is what he thought. Also, he was able to guess that the reason why the commoners and nobles which make up the lesser percentage of the population don't easily teach letters to those of the lower social standings was because they would be troubled if they got more intelligent. Things like that, I wonder what kind of objective Al has for the country he declared he was going to make, and started thinking that, if I have the chance next time I'll try asking, and also thought that.

Putting that aside, yesterday, there's already started a fierce invitation battle over Al.

It was already predicted that it would be somewhat fierce but for this many parties to call out to him, including Al himself no one in the {Slaughterers} was able to predict it. Putting aside the parties from the top teams down to second-rate, even the adventurers below that you could call riffraff were wandering around looking for chances to call out to him.

Thanks to that you can't observe who is approaching him until they get considerably close.

Several days later, the {Slaughterers} received contact from Al.

Just as planned he was invited and able to join {Sun.Ray}. Also, it seems that {Sun.Ray} will be entering the dungeon this month from the 6th for eight days and then from the 21st for eight days, maybe up to nine days, as well as information on the members, the ones who can use magic, what elements they have, and detailed records of their rough abilities based on the short period he trained with them. Although, since it's also possible they were hiding their true abilities in combat during training so he also wrote it's best to estimate them as being a bit higher.

Also, it was important but the 18th of this month is a full moon for the secondary moon Neitari but it was also written that they take that day off. It's implied but basically means investigate it. After reading this report Miduchi said she had connections in regards to investigating so there's no problem with that. Hearing that Saji thought (I guess she's going to ask that dark elf in the healing clinic).

In any case, for the next eight days starting tomorrow all of {Sun.Ray} will be in the dungeon. We need to do what we can right now. Think that the temporary leader of the {Slaughterers} decided not to enter the dungeon but gave out jobs to each of the members. Saji was allocated the job of developing {Sausages}.

Ever since he showed the prototype before Saji has made prototypes of {Sausages} contents several times on days off but he's already raised the level of completion a few degrees. Since the pork that's sold on the market is salted before being sold if you don't immerse it in water first it's too salty that it can't be eaten.

Also, since it was the same for the ones who preserved with spices at the same time as salting, he's already given up on making use of pork preserved in salt. After all the biggest problem here is the method of mincing the meat. Cutting it into small pieces and then hitting with the knife takes a considerable amount of work. By all means the meat grinder is necessary. However, he didn't know the structure of the meat grinder from his past life.

I wonder if it's just a matter of passing meat through some gears?

Otherwise just passing through a bunch of small blades? Regardless of which it is there's no helping it right away. For the time being I can only start challenging from places I can. The best thing is after all to make the contents with raw pork that's minced up and just a bit of salt and spices mixed inside. I heard from Al that it's good to add water at that time.

The method is to mix in shaved ice.

(Shaved ice! Shaved ice huh..If it's a fixed blade like on a shaver then if you freeze it maybe it would work for mincing pork..But,

I've never heard of or seen anything like shaved ice. After all I guess there's no way other than to make it myself..)

Saji felt like he had entered a dead end. He had a big of confidence in his dexterity with his hands but he remembered that he already had quite a bit of trouble at the point he made the thresher. Saws are expensive but not a price that he can't afford right now. If he enters the dungeon again then he should be able to buy one without problem. In that case, Saji thought it would be best to start putting work into the casing for now.

Without delay, he decided to go and buy some pig's bowels.

After asking at the butcher and it seems that changing pig's bowels into condoms is something like a secondary job for the butchers.

The rubber condoms that Al sells are one-time use while the pig's bowels are made to be used a number of times. The sale price itself wasn't all that different from rubber saya so since the pig's bowels can be used a number of times, you could say they have the advantage. However, it's certainly they aren't something that feel very good and since most people originally threw them away after using them, the only ones who used them a number of times were poor people.

The bowels membrane can be obtained if you put the bowels into slightly hot water of about 60 degrees C and then carefully peel them apart before they cool down. Of course, the large portion other than the bowels membrane is possible to eat. There's almost no part of a pig's body that can't be eaten.

Saji bought about 4 meters of the bowel's membrane before it was processed into a condom and brought it back right away to try and put the contents inside. What was made..was quite good. However, after all the method of mincing the meat still wasn't good enough to satisfy Saji at all. After letting Cathy try it and it got a good reputation but other than porridge no matter what Cathy eats she thinks it's good so her statements in regards to food aren't all that useful, in the end he repeated making prototypes and eating them himself and letting Larry try them as he made adjustments for many days.

During that time, the members of the {Slaughterers} went to the capital and investigated the location and scale of the temples, on that occasion he checked multiple butchers in the capital but compared to Baldukk the price of pig's bowels had dropped in price quite a bit. Obviously they pulled Saji out of making prototypes of {Sausage} and did formation training without Al outside of the outer crater during that time as well.

Also, in order to aim for {Scavenger Crawlers} they wandered around the 1st floor for three days and were able to bring back a total of five {Scavenger Crawler}'s worth of feelers and sell them to a shop that deals in medicine. Of course, for the sake of camouflage, including some considerably expensive items they also bought paralysis poison to use against ogres. Close to half of it they put into the bottom of a bag of Al's understand and handed it over to the owner of the inn while saying it was something Al forgot and pushed it on him.

There was the idea of splitting up the sale price of the magic stones gained on the 1st floor equally but since Zenom firmly declared "It's only obvious for Toris who's acting as the leader to get more than half of it" they ended up splitting it up just like that. Though since it only ended up totaling around 1,000,000 Z everyone's true feeling was that it didn't matter.

Just, after that when he returned to the inn just Toris was(It's fine since I'm paying for the food and entry tax from the start but doing the calculations for splitting it up evenly would be troublesome..) a bit relieved. In regards to leading the party in combat for close to the past year they have experience splitting the party up to the 5th floor so there was no problem but he somehow remembered the tension from the first time he was given command.

And then,(This is the tax calculated every month depending on social standing and then that amount is collected, make record of this, then at the end of the year he would go to the government office and pay the calculated taxes for each person right..Even though there's no calculation software, all of it done by hand..It makes sense why there's always a lot of paper in Al-san's room.) he showed a bit of admiration towards Al. And then, with the paper that's definitely not cheap he remembered he never touched on the price to buy it even for things like contracts.

(Adding to that he also looks after everyone's training..He went into the dungeon on days off with Miduchi-san and Zulu for his own spell training..and then should have been thinking his company as well. If he didn't have a grasp on the accounting situation over there then there's no way he could do something like management. It's a bit rude but I can't imagine that Ryogu-san or his family could do it..)

Toris was able to understand that he's still far from Al. If you were to ask if Toris could do it or not then it's possible.

However, the difference in ability in whether he has the ability to make it possible to put into practice and actually putting it into practice are absurd to even compare in the first place. He was able to think of the difficulty of continuing that for several years without taking a rest.

On his days off, there's running in the morning and then after that it's just a matter of using a random magic every couple hours and after that it was just a matter of doing training when it decided, Toris was a bit embarrassed of himself for being satisfied with that. At the same time, he showed admiration for the mentality that could continue with putting in effort in order to fulfill his dreams. And then, he also felt vexing feelings towards Faruergaz and Hirosukol for making fun of Al's dream without knowing anything.

(Of course~ reincarnated people are excellent. We want them as allies and if we have them it's reassuring. However, their remarks were irritating. And, I can't say anything about other people huh..Just because I have days off I've spent too much time just wandering around killing time. But, I already understand. At the very least the current Al-san, no, if I can easily exceed the current Al-san's level, then something like a Count is just another dream. I need to reach the point where Al-san can relax and confer peerage to me..After the matter this time calms down I should discuss things from here on out with Bel as well. We don't have anymore time to be playing around.)

After thinking that far Toris continued thinking beyond that.

(This time, I thought it was only obvious that command was left to me. I just made a bit of a plan like a leader and I wanted to try putting that into practice, with such simple feelings I said something like it would be a good experience for myself. Just like I know Al-san he should also know about me. It should have been a decision that required quite a bit of courage...I'm sure he had various things he wanted to say as well, he left everything along the base line to us. Even going to the point of taking on the most danger himself..In the first place, even if the matter this time goes well, I wonder how merit there actually even is for Al-san..)

Toris started greatly worrying about it.

(Taking in those two as members is a big merit. That's for certain.

Their Unique Abilities we heard from Saji are quite something.

Particularly just as Bel said the day something like 【Resistance(Virus Infection)】 turns into an enemy would be close to a nightmare. If they were to take the clothes or corpse of a patient with an infectious disease and throw it into the source of the river then it would already be out. If you think of it in reverse then that sort of trump card is something you would absolutely want to have in your own hands. Since they kind wander around here and there in territories without being suspected or getting sick..)

Toris's thoughts continue forward.

(Including that Faruergaz as an ally is a large merit. However, his fallen reputation is a demerit for Al-san. Of course, just as Al-san it's still at the level he can restore but..if we really go to the point of wiping out {Sun.Ray} then it's strange for people to imagine that leaving the {Slaughterers} itself was just an act.

On the contrary it might even be possible it raises his reputation.

This is also a test case for those two as well. How they assess

Al-san and us who went to the point of putting ourselves in danger to wipe out {Sun.Ray} and get our hands on them. If they get angry over the fact that we deceived and wiped them out then I'm sure those sort of softhearted people wouldn't be useful from here on out. There's no way they could do something like war. It's only obvious they would weigh us down somewhere. However, if just as Bel said, if they know everything and recognize it, then we'll be able to accept them as splendid allies.)

At the same time, he thought this as well.

(Bel thought things through considerably seriously...Che...I guess that means I'm still falling behind Bel...If I don't quickly reach a level where I won't embarrass her I might end up being rejected. I need to give my best and..Ah, I guess it's that sort of thing..)

It seems Toris noticed something and after making an expression like he understood something, he closed his mouth and started thinking even more in a daze. He only had time until Bel took a shower and returned but after Bel saw him thinking with a serious face and his arms crossed she quietly closed the door and left him alone.

When {Sun.Ray} returned from exploring the dungeon another report from Al arrived. According to that {Sun.Ray}'s activities in the dungeon are almost the same as on the surface excluding the 1st and 2nd floors, they depart in the morning and go to a fixed camp in the evening, then return. Also, it seems their abilities are a bit behind {Black.Topaz} which we saw in combat against the {Frost Lizard} once in the past.

"Just that much huh..Then the fact that those two can't make it into their first party must mean they aren't anything special I guess?"

Hearing that Ral evaluated them like but Saji didn't think that was the case.

On the way from Rockfall village to the capital the way they wiped out close to 10 goblins from on top of a horse with Saji on the back still remained clearly in his impression.

"I wonder about unconditionally assuming their abilities based on just that reason. After all they did receive investiture as true knight. In the first place, it's only been three months since they joined {Sun.Ray} which has a lot of members right? If you think about the fact that they can't properly drill over the formations then it's only obvious the first party of {Sun.Ray} has always been doing drills on formation and cooperation."

Zenom said that rebuking his daughter.

"But, it's difficult to decide that it's completely fraud right.."

"I wonder about that? For example if on the 18th of this month no one moves to obtain them then I think you could call it fraud.

Well, we still can't tell things like but in any case we'll know soon. We should receive the next report the next day as well."

Gwine and Miduchi have no interest in the abilities of {Sun.Ray}'s first party so they talked about the matter in regards to the charms instead.

"..In the first place it's plenty just being able to guess their abilities. If it's just this much then it would be easy to wipe them out with multiple ogres on the 7th floor."

Bel made a slight smile while evaluating them and after that we continued with our meeting. The details were about luring them into the ogre mage room and waiting until they were on the verge of being wiped out for the {Slaughterers} to come running and have just the one witness survive. In Bel's opinion it would be best if they could do the same thing for the second party as well and use the rescue a condition for them switching to our party but since that's impossible as expected we abandoned it.

At the end of discussing the situations we could predict quite a bit to Al we said,

"Lure {Sun.Ray} to the 7th floor and lure them into an ogre mage room there. Show off Al's abilities to them on the way to the room, if possible use a bit of paralysis poison on a small number of ogres and let {Sun.Ray} fight against them in order to mistake the abilities of the ogres. After arriving at the room, if possible try to get at least a few minutes to meet up with us while acting independently (this raises the chances of proposing a pincer attack from behind). Since Al doesn't have a map of the 7th floor we'll made preparations and signs to lead Al."

Just like that we sent a list of instructions and then entered the dungeon to start making preparations.

In regards to investigating things on the night of the 18th, Miduchi already said with plenty of confidence that things were perfect so we decided not to worry about it. We prepared an excessive amount of food and after calculating the amount of time we'd need for making preparations, we decided to enter the dungeon the day after tomorrow.

The {Slaughterers} arrived at the teleport room of the 6th floor on July 19th and quickly got to making the preparations. Since the teleport room on the 7th floor leads to the ogre mage room in the South, we put signs at the teleport destinations we had already identified, then put those along the split paths leading to the room so Al wouldn't get lost. The reason why chose the South room was because there were a lot of large rocks rolling around the entrance to the room from the side leading to the teleport room, so it's easy to hide ourselves.

Furthermore, while we were in the middle of making those preparations a single incident occurred. It was when the combat members had split up into groups three to investigate the teleport destinations. Using magic from a distance is effective against ogres but since the paralysis poison is the most effective, Toris took command of Gwine and Saji who were using the spear to maintain distance, Bel who can use the bow took control of Zenom and Zulu, and the other one who can use the bow Miduchi was managing Ral and Maruso. Additionally, since Zenom and Ral use axes as their weapons even if they smear paralysis poison on them only the first attack has much effect so they were split up.

Since Toris had no bow he prepared himself to be the group that was in the most danger but the largest number of ogres they've met in the halls at once until now is 5 so they read it that if they just use paralysis poison there shouldn't be any problem and they weren't worried about it at all.

Since Miduchi is quite skilled in close combat as well, Zenom and the slave who's skill was quite good Zulu were put under the command of Bel, and she ended up taking command of Ral and Maruso herself.

The place where that Miduchi's group teleported unfortunately was right next to a group of five ogres. It was just as those ogres took the shape of surrounding the teleport destination as well. Miduchi quickly shot one of those that was right in front with an arrow dipped in paralysis poison but the paralysis poison isn't something that takes effect immediately. Following that while she was shooting the next ogre by it with an arrow Ral and Maruso each took on one ogre. However, here Miduchi dropped her bow on the ground and used magic while pulling out her scimitar. Almost simultaneously Maruso noticed and warned Ral, "Watch out!!"

Ral had completely forgotten. Other than the teleport crystal rod in the center of the dungeon they can only be seen or touched by the ones who teleported using them. While the pedestal which has a height of about 70 - 80 cm and stretches out another 1 meter for the thin crystal rod, putting aside the crystal rod, the pyramid shaped pedestal looks like a splendid obstacle.

She unintentionally predicted that the attack that comes from that direction would have a later timing.

Immediately Miduchi created a large amount of air behind her and sent Ral flying.

However, either she had good luck or Miduchi calculated it, since she just flew into a group of bushes a few meters away she didn't suffer any major injuries. The ogres who were hit with the same wind were blown away as well though it was just a distance of about 1 meter they still ended up having their stances collapsed. Without missing that opening, she immediately sent a {Stone Arbalest} flying and finished off the one that was near Ral. However, there Miduchi couldn't completely avoid the attack from a different ogre in another direction.

Different from Al, Miduchi is the same as most normal people and has to remain concentrating quite focused in order to activate spells, during that time she can't take almost any actions. Of course, extremely slow speed like a turtle is possible but something like that doesn't have much meaning at all. Even then while it was incomplete that she was able to avoid a direct hit immediately after activating a spell was worth admiration. Although, that attack itself was from an ogre that took the paralysis poison, so it was just a bit but it's actions were getting dull.

Even the ogre's club which just grazed Miduchi's left shoulder was enough to leave her with a large injury. However, it's not as if Miduchi passed out. She quickly switched to using the scimitar with her remaining right arm and instead cut off that ogre's arm while also cutting the arm of another ogre nearby it off at the same time.

"Sorry, I can't use the bow anymore!"

After hearing those words from Miduchi, Maruso started using her broad sword with the paralysis poison smeared on it to apply small wounds to the ogre in front of her.

When Ral finally jumped out of the bushes she chanted

"beku.nosu.nimuru.fon.saizu.ka.doren!" to send a {Flame Arrow} at the ogre that was coming up from behind Miduchi.

After they finished off all of the ogres and while Ral was using {Cure Light} on Miduchi twice Maruso was confirming the teleport destination number. It seems it was a miss.

"..Thank you for saving me.."

While Ral said that apologetically, Miduchi replied "You're welcome" while smiling.

"You know I, don't really like, Miduchi very much.."

Without meeting eyes, while Ral was just looking at the condition of her wounds she whispered. She used a healing spell but the flesh that was torn off her shoulder hasn't sealed.

"Oh, that's a coincidence. It's the same for me."

Miduchi endured the pain while lifting the edges of her lips and replying.

"Nn, I know.."

Ral said while carefully cutting the leather around in the area of the wound with a knife.

"I see."

"What are you saying? Let's quickly go back."

Maruso interrupted the talk between the two.

When they returned to the teleport room on the 6th floor they soon ended up being in the care of Toris and Bel's healing spells. After having Bel use {Cure Serious} 7 times including another 5 uses of {Cure Light} from Toris, Miduchi finally felt her ability to concentrate and use spells return. After that just one use of {Cure All} was plenty.

After that they took a break to recover mana and they all decided to do the investigation of teleport destinations.

That night, after they finished their meals in the teleport room on the 6th floor, Ral started talking to Miduchi.

"Miduchi..I still don't think I can come to like you. But, I think I could become your friend. Would you try using {Party-ization} on me once more?"

Ral stretched her hand out to Miduchi while speaking in a loud voice all the other members of the {Slaughterers} could hear. Miduchi quietly grasped Ral's hand she stretched out. Furthermore, in order to carry out this plan Miduchi's Unique Ability {Party-ization} is absolutely required. They've already explained to the slaves it's a special type of magic. Also, since Miduchi's proficiency level is still low there's a limit to the number of people, so two of the slaves still can't be included.

"..Ah..I see..it's this sort of feeling..Ah, Al, he's already entered the dungeon I see..Though I don't know what floor it is..He~ Hmph, so this is how it feels."

Everyone who was watching over with their hearts beating had their expressions loosen up. Everyone felt that Ral was added to {Party-ization}.

"Hm..Hmph..It's not like I feel like I could like you either..You charge at me for no meaning after all...Well, but, if..if you say you want to become my friend and lower your head, then it's fine if I let"Ha!? If I just come out a bit easy what is it? That attitude!? This opportunist!"Yo..You called me an opportunist again! This bitch brat! Stop trying to show some sex appeal!"You're a brat as well right! Don't get so full of yourself, this rotting corpse!"I'm not a brat! I'm already over 40!"Then you're long since an old bag! Hmph, you're jealous of my youth right!?"Ha..wait until you at least have breasts as big as mine before you try to compete. This flat chest!"Fl..Fl...They aren't flat!"Oh my, but he said that if it's just that much you don't know which side is her back!

"Mukyi~!! Don't lie! Al wouldn't say something like that! In the first place I already know! That hair color, it seems it's unsightly if it's black? Don't be making it white, this make-up old bag~!"

Before it turned into a fight that turns into a grapple Zenom forcefully entered between them and separated them before slapping them. If the both of them weren't women Zenom might have had to stand on the tips of his toes.

"Stop that already! The two of you! This isn't the time to be doing that right now!"

Saji shrugged his shoulders like "This is no good~"

In the end investigating the teleport destinations took a full two days. Starting the next day they teleported into a location which leads to the teleport room and then moved to the Southern ogre mage room from there. It's to place the landmarks on the split paths along the way. They got close to the ogre mage room and then returned, this time they included another teleport destination, they placed them at every split pathway they could think of. The {Slaughterers} took almost a full two days for the work.

And then, they circled around the wall of the ogre mage room while going to the teleport room on the 7th floor and after making that their camp sight, they started sweeping up the ogres along the way to the entrance of the ogre mage room. They did a number of round trips around the outside of it and carefully make sure there was nothing they were overlooking.

They had heard from Al that monsters revive in the dungeon after time passes and from their experience up until now they understood that they definitely revive but not a single one of them could have predicted that the fact that they didn't have a grasp for that duration would end up leading to the failure of the plan in the end. Rather, they even felt satisfied that they were able to finish up their expected preparations in four days instead of the five originally expected.

While taking walks they went in directions other than the South and defeat ogres while continue to standby as the {Slaughterers} waited for Al to appear on the 7th floor, in the early morning of July 25th, the sensation they had been waiting for appeared. The leader Toris stood up.

"Al-san has arrived on the 7th floor. Let's start making preparations. Once Al-san started moving we will as well. Larry, start making preparations for lunch."

All of the combat members started silently confirming their equipment. Soon after Larry handed out bentos with sandwiches he made to each person and then they started waiting for movements from their real leader.

They had already finished sweeping up the path to the ogre mage room in the South yesterday evening. They should be able to arrive at the entrance of the room in less than an hour. Since they departed with a considerable amount of leeway, they arrived at the waiting place around 10 am.

They carefully checked the surroundings to make sure there were no goblins or ogres and Miduchi scouted out the ogre mage room. She made casual use of the spell {Detect.Life} while also hiding her presence as she confirmed the appearance and number of the ogres. Miduchi returned and "There's 11 ogres. As expected I can't tell if there's ogre mages mixed in or not but with that many of them I'm sure several are mixed in." reported that.

After hearing Miduchi's report, Bel, "Yeah, it's no different from the last time we passed through. All we need now is for Al-san to skillfully lead {Sun.Ray} and then it would be good if he can come over here alone." said while smiling and looking at the tune of her bow strings.

Just like that we continued to wait and even after it got close to noon, {Sun.Ray} was still a considerably distance from the room. Toris decided to finish up eating now so everyone ate lunch. Since he received everyone's words that today is the critical moment Larry prepared sandwiches using luxurious beef. Everyone recognized that he had started to prepare roast beef since they arrived at the 6th floor but they were looking forward to when it came out. The white bread had completely swollen up from absorbing the meat juices but it was sandwich good enough to not mind something like that.

Finally Al arrived on almost the opposite side, around the Southern entrance of the room. After arriving he quickly stopped moving so it was believed he was taking a break.

"Now everyone, we can't let our guard down for even a moment already. Everyone properly hide yourselves behind the rocks. There's no guarantee Al-san will be able to come alone after all. It's fine right now but once Al-san starts moving we need to completely hide in the shadow of the rocks."

After a short while Al started moving and aimed straight for the center of the room. Feeling that everyone gasped thinking, did {Sun.Ray} charge into the room? but while Toris was keeping his cool he said, "It's probably scouting. But, this means that after a short while there's a higher chance he should start taking action. Everyone, don't let your guards down." and everyone agreed. Saji couldn't tell if it was as Toris said and Al is alone or not but after all it seems it was reconnaissance, after a short while they felt him return to his original position.

And then after another short while, they finally started to feel Al walking along the wall as Saji licked his lips from the tension.

All of the {Slaughterers} moved into the shadows of the rocks and crouched down.

Al was moving considerably slow.

"This is irritating."

It's only obvious for Ral to talk to herself so no one replied.

They just kept crouching down and waiting. In order to feel Al's movements Saji had his eyes closed as he concentrated. There were a considerable number of members who had their eyes closed while following his movements.

Another 300 meters..280 meters..260 meters...

"They've gotten quite a bit closer."

Bel said something they already knew. Everyone was concentrating their consciousness on Al. The {Slaughterers} were lined up in roughly three rows as they waited. In the front line from the left was Angela, Saji, and Bel. In the middle line from the left was Ralpa, Gwine, and Toris. And in the back line from the last was Zulu, Zenom, and Miduchi. Since their position was setup so in front of them was rocks and on their right was the wall of the passage, normally the left side would be the front.

240 meters..220 meters...

They might be able to see him pretty soon. Saji moved a bit to try and look out from the gaps of the rock in the direction of the room.

"Sh...Don't move yet!"

Zenom and Toris warned in a whisper. Momentarily Saji froze up his body trying not to move.

It was just then!

"Giooo~tsu!"

Just as they heard the roar of an ogre they were completely not expecting from right behind them, Zenom raised his voice with a "Gu!!" as he took a hit from an ogre's club to the back and was sent flying into the wall. He's not moving at all. He's either lost consciousness or seriously injured.

"Father!!"

Ralpa who reacted immediately tried to stand and move into a position to guard Zenom and was hindered by Gwine who tried to pick up her spear from the ground as she tripped forward. But, thanks to that she was able to evade the attack from a different ogre.

However, soon after Zulu and Toris ended up taking attacks from ogres and were mowed down as if mowing the grass. It seems those two were still conscious and struggling.

Even after being ambushed by ogres the {Slaughterers} didn't prepare to flee. It was a shock that three people were defeated suddenly but if it's just a crisis of this level they've experienced it a number of times. However, this time everyone's posture was too bad.

"Miduchi-san!"

Bel turns around with her face stiff as she pulls her bow and calls out to Miduchi.

Miduchi immediately understood the meaning of that as she jumped over the fallen Toris and jumped towards the ogres that suddenly attacked while sending out the orders with her Unique Ability. At the same time she cut off the arm of an ogre that was about to swing it's club down on the fallen Zenom again as she ran by it.

But there were too many ogres. There were 5 of them. Even after passing by it's side there was another ogre waiting beyond that.

She ended up jumping into that of her own will.

Saji and Gwine weren't able to go on guard with their spears right away either and thanks to Ral who tripped over that they weren't even able to aim it towards an ogre right away. The only one who was somehow able to stand at the front while her fallen allies made the footing worse was Maruso and if she doesn't put in some desperate efforts to hold out even more serious injuries will probably appear.

Gwine and Saji quickly fixed their stances with the spear and while each one of them took on an ogre, it's severe that Ral isn't standing at the front line while she's trying to use healing magic on Zenom.

"Ral! Stand up!"

Bel sends an arrow flying towards an ogres eye while reprimanding her. After that entered her ears she stood up as if she remembered and Miduchi was struggling several meters away surrounded by 4 ogres. One of those seems to have already been defeated as it was laying on the ground not moving much at all and the first one she cut of the arm of has some serious wounds as well. But, she's outnumbered and overwhelmed, while being surrounded Miduchi took a direct swing from an ogre to her side and bounded off of the fallen Zenom before flying all the way into the rocks they were hiding behind.

"Miduchi!!"

Ral shouted. However, while she needs to use healing magic when she tried to approach a different ogre from the one that defeated Miduchi threw it's club. She ended up catching her feet on that. She reflexively stuck her hand out trying to stop from falling over but what she grabbed was the leather armor band of the fallen Zenom. Since that band tore Zenom's appearance became as if half of his leather armor was removed.

Simultaneously Bel felt the sensation that {Party-ization} was cut off but also felt hope in the fact that Al was running nearby as well. She noticed that the trembling in her hands had disappeared as she pulled back the bowstrings and was aware of the smile on her face.

Saji and Gwine had already gotten into their stances. After Gwine jumped over Zulu she was maintaining her distance from one ogre and on her side Saji was lined up as they had a two spear line up formed to keep the ogres in check. An arrow stabbed into the eye of the ogre that Miduchi cut off it's arm and the ogre let out a dull scream as it fell over. Three more.

It was then. A number of stone spears came flying and flew over everyone's head keeping the ogres in check.

Since Saji was too engrossed in the combat in front of him he had no leeway to notice Al's approach through {Party-ization} and was surprised by the speedy rescue that came running.

Side Story 27 - In the Case of Mitsuse Ryouichi (Age 34 at time of accident)

One day, during an employee meeting before classes start at the Private High School Ryoichi works, he received contact that one of his student's parents passed away. The Principal said "I have an important meeting with the Education Committee so I'll appear at the wake tonight and you their homeroom teacher should go to the funeral tomorrow." Furthermore, this school was also Ryoichi's alumni.

(Mu..I had heard that their parent was sick but...So they passed away huh..How unfortunate. If I remember correctly their house was in Kanagawa..It can't be helped, I guess tomorrow I'll have to head out after about one hour of class.)

There's a considerable amount of distance between the school which is in the Arakawa district and the student's house. Since he had already received an explanation that the funeral starts from noon so just in case he should probably leave the school just before 10 am. If he returns right away he might make it in time for the last class. Of course, he should make it in time for the club activities of the Kendo club he's the advisor for as well.

"Ah, Mihoko. One of the parents for a student I'm in charge of suddenly passed away...No, it wasn't an accident or anything. They were originally ill. And, I'm attending the funeral tomorrow. Sorry but could you prepare my mourning dress, necktie, and a string of beads. Ah, the cuffs as well. Once it's over I intend to return to the school just like that..Father's one is fine. Also, please leave out one more normal necktie as well."

He heads towards the classroom while getting into contact with his wife over the cellphone. He needs to explain the circumstances to the other students as well, putting aside the funeral tomorrow, he needs to properly warn the students who go about their behavior at the wake so they don't act in a way embarrassing to our school.

The next day, the funeral ended without any problems, right now he's on the train on the way back. He coincidentally ran into his five year younger brother Kenji at the place of the funeral. They ended up running into each other at a far too unexpected place but it's not like they could just start intimately talking there either. Kenji ended up attending with a senior at the company he works as well. After the funeral ended, the three of them had lunch, then got on the express train to Shinjuku.

It seems that Kenji's senior has a reserved personality, also, he may have been showing restraint for us siblings but he didn't participate in the conversation almost at all and soon after sitting down on his seat in the train fell asleep. Seeing this as a good chance, Ryoichi had Kenji show him a video taken of his niece Yuma.

Ryoichi has one other younger brother than Kenji but he doesn't have any women in his family than his mother and wife. Because of that, he found the younger girl in his family so cute it couldn't be helped. He can't deny how unusual it is but the school he works at is also a boy's convex school as well. Ever since his son entered elementary school he's gotten even more cheeky and it's true he's still cute but girls have a different type of cuteness to them is something he understood after seeing his niece Yuma. Right now, what they're talking about while watching the video is the layout for the new house that his little brother is planning to build. Kenji is working for a decent company as well but as expected he still isn't making enough in his 20s to build a single house. He heard that their parents are going to take on the burden of half of the amount so they can use that for the down payment.

On Ryoichi's end, he is the home room teacher that teaches physical education in an integrated convex boy's school, and one that's super first-rate for preparing to enter college so his income is considerably high, and while he was still in his 20s he started a 30-year loan on a family house where his parents live with him. He often hears his parents that are living with him grumble about wanting to see Kenji and their grandchild Yuma.

"..Give my regards to sister-in-law-san as well."

"Oh~..owa~!!!"

"Whaguhoe!!!"

.....

After he opened his eyes once more, he spent several days just dazing out.

(For me to have been saved..It's strange?)

(It's difficult to move and my eyes can't see very well, my ears can hear but I can't tell what they're saying at all..)

(Ah, I'm hungry again!! I'm hungry! I can't hold back!)
"U,ua! Uaaaaa~!!!"
(This is bad..Am I to the point where I can only drink something like this..)

(..Was Mitsuse Ryoichi all just, my dream? Even for that to be the case it was an unusually long and real dream.)
(Otherwise was I reborn...Fu...There's no way.)
(In other words that time, after all I died...) (Died..After all did I die? I already can't remember it very well..Is this the dream?)

"A,aa,Agyaaa~!!"
(How stupid..However..)

.....
(A foreign country huh..I wonder where this is?)
(It seems like English is mixed in but I can't really tell.) (It's just somehow, but I can tell they're saying something like someone is coming.)
(It doesn't matter. I just finished eating so I'm tired. I can't hold back!)

"A, ua, u~aaa~n!"
(What the, it seems it's already evening. I'm hungry!)

.....
It's not like Ryoichi was obligated to do anything so he just lived randomly and idly. It's not like he had any objective in particular or even anything he wanted to do either. He wasn't troubled with eating, he learned the language, and learned the writing as well.
It's just somewhat, but he felt like he learned the common sense of the place he was born as well. It's unfortunate that he spent his time spaced out too much that he didn't notice the important point of this world for several years.

Mitsuse Ryoichi, now known as Arnic.Strife, was born as the youngest third son of Strife sub-Baron family the lord of a village called Ridasu. He had two older brothers and two older sisters but since even the youngest older sister was 8 years older than Arc, rather than older brothers and sisters he couldn't think of it as more than just the number of nagging parents had increased. In Arc's common sense he was an embarrassing end child. After all, Arc's oldest brother was already an adult when he was born and while he didn't have any children, he was even married. Though even he, before Arc turned two years old both him and his wife went to war and both of them passed away though.

This place could be said to be a remote region surrounded by a deep forest. Other than the residents of the village the only chances to get into contact with people from the outside is the caravan and their escort that comes along once a month. Though that's the case, if you just walk along the narrow road that curves around about 10 Km you can reach the neighboring Rozasu village and if you go about the same distance in a different direction there's also Merudasu village, so it was just a matter of Arc not really have any interest in it. He would go fishing in the river and catch bugs with the neighborhood children (the squires children), in his own opinion he was quite busy with the duties of a child.

In his past life, it's a question whether Arc himself realized it might have been the recoil from his complex of being a child that didn't play outside much. Seeing Arc energetically play, the way his parents, brothers, and sisters would smile and show affection for that Arc might have been a cause as well. In any case Arc was enjoying his new life.

Incidentally, the first time Arc found out about {Status Open} was when he was four years old. One day it was when a caravan that came to the village had hunted a strange bird along the way.

One of the escorting adventurers happened to see it flying by by chance and fired an arrow but either their skill was good or it was a coincidence, the arrow hit and the bird fell to the ground.

The large bird with beautiful blue wings seems to have been a Bundo bird according to its status. Though no one of that caravan or its escorts knew about it but its unusual and beautiful so they carried it along thinking the lord of the village they were on their way to, his father, would buy it.

That time since everyone was touching the bird while saying {Status Open}, it caught his interest so Arc tried copying them and learned something new. Seeing the blue window float up between himself and the corpse of the bird after using Status Open and Arc was so surprised he almost fell over. It's not incorrect to say this was the first time he recognized this wasn't Earth but a different world.

Seeing non-humans all he thought of it was it being a difference in customs or culture for this place and close to cosplay. It's not like things like clock magic tools or others would be in a place an infant can reach them and the lighting magic tool was never used in front of Arc either so he didn't know about them. And then, he also considerably displeased that no one taught him about it. Though that's the case, normally if you see it once then there's no need to look at it again a number of times so if they've seen something similar then there's no need to look at it in the first place. Also, it seems it's impolite to look at the status of every little thing. In the off chance they were to suddenly use it on someone it's an extremely rude behavior. Arc thought (Certainly, it's not something that would be good to teach to a small child) and accepted it.

As proof of that he got bored of it after one day. Even if he uses it on things it only shows the name and even when it comes to using it on living creatures after using it once you pretty much can imagine the details for the rest. Since you can learn their birth date and special skills it's convenient if you want to put it that way but he was quickly able to comprehend that it's something you can't use on someone you're meeting for the first time and either trust them greatly or not at all. Normally it seems around 10 years old, they teach it along with {Cantrips}.

However, Arc hadn't forgotten his own status.

【Arnic.Strife/15/5/7429】

【Male/14/2/7428】

【Human.Sub-Baron Strife Family Third Son】

【Unique Ability: Polymorph.Self】

He doesn't really get what this unique ability is about and even when he hid and tried saying "Transform!" nothing happened as well. In his past life, while remembering television shows from when he was kid he shouted it while taking a pose but when after all nothing happened he thought (am I an idiot?) and fell to the ground feeling depressed.

However, there's several non-humans in Ridasu village as well.

Non-humans all have some sort of special skill so if he tries using it in the same way then he thought he might be able to use it, he tried asking one of the gnome squires right away.

"Arc-sama, if you just think about using {Inclination.Sensing}, and you end up using it...Just now I actually tried using it." and he was told that, next he tried asking a dwarf squire and "Arc-sama, {Infrared Vision} can be used at any time. However, if you use it in the daytime it's too bright and your eyes hurt so I wouldn't use it right now." is what he was told.

After that he tried asking several non-humans the same but they were all "if you just think about using it you can use it at anytime" so he was quickly able to understand that {Polymorph.Self} was different from special skills and probably something special. Also, even when he tried asking his parents and older siblings it seems they didn't know what a Unique Ability was. Judging from the name it's probably some kind of special ability that only he can use. He wanted to try using it but in the without being able to use it, it didn't take much time at all for it to be buried in dust in a corner of his memory.

After that time passed, on New Year's Eve before he was about to reach the year he turns 7 years old. Starting from the beginning of the year Arc was told to participate in training with the sword. In Arc's opinion things like swords, spears, wars, and conflicts he didn't want any part in them but since it's an obligation as a noble, there was no way for him to deny it. It's only obvious for even women to hold a sword or spear and participate in war and when it comes to commoners and Free People there's even conscription. The only ones who have died in battle that Arc knows is his older brother and his wife but it seems that about one in every 20 years there's a casualty from Ridasu village.

By this point the realistic future plans that Arc had some recognition of among the highest possibility was, taking a wife from a nearby village (it's not as if there aren't any daughters of the squires his age but they weren't really to Arc's liking. In the worst case he thinks that can't be helped as well), starting up a new squire family that serves his household the Strife family. As a runner-up marrying into a different squire family. Next after that is marrying into the squire family of a different lord somewhere, though in the worst case without being put in the knight group he might end up being conscripted and die in action though as expected he thinks that possibility is low.

Also, after he started training with the sword, if it seems he has some kind of talent with martial arts he thought trying to enter the knight group might not be bad as well. Just, it seems that the knight group for Duke Stahlz Territory where Ridasu village resides is quite something so he can guess that it would be considerably difficult to pass. In his own sensitivity, he thought it was like the third son of a farmer in Hokkaido or Tohoku during the Meiji or Taisho era trying to enter a college somewhere and the level of ability needed for that. However, as an assessment factor it seems the pursuit of knowledge is considerably low. Therefore he gave up on that route without any regrets.

Arc was just thinking (Well, I intend to put some effort into it but things that you aren't suited for just aren't for you and you can't do things you can't do. Though in the off chance I have some kind of talent on that end I'll put in effort as if I'm going to die) something on that level.

(Most likely, saving up money after enlisting to the knight group and then using that as capital to start up some kind of business is the best. If I can make some huge profits then it's fine just like that and if I can't earn anything at all then if I just return to Ridasu village if I hand a bit of money to one of my older siblings who has taken over the family from the old man then I'm sure they would employ me as a squire.)

It doesn't seem to be very steep so it can't be called a mountain, but Ridasu village is surrounded by terrain that could be called hills, and the fact that there's no confirmed cases of dangerous monsters in the nearby areas was one of the factors that diluted his interest in the sword, spear, or martial arts.

"A monster dragon will come and eat bad children."

And even though he was disciplined like that, he only found out that monsters really exist after he was five years old. That time it was just a single goblin's corpse and it seems the brawn y slaves that work at the mine(or mining hill might be a better term) all surrounded and kill it so it was pretty worn-out. Seeing that Arc just thought (Even if they're monsters are they just relatives of the ape?) and that was his recognition. In other words, he didn't take them seriously. Also, he didn't have the original knowledge that monsters are normally things that appear in groups.

Incidentally, the primary industries of Ridasu village are forestry and mining. The head squire works almost as if overseeing things on the spot so for Arc who only knows that world it seemed that aiming for the head squire was the easiest. Cutting down trees, knocking the branches off, then sending them down the river to another village to obtain lumber. The mining was digging up hills and finding iron, copper, and very rarely precious metals. In both cases they were things that he had no useful knowledge from his past life about at all.

Also, there wasn't even a single person in his village that could use magic as well(most likely, the fact that there was no one who could teach it in the village created a vicious cycle and everyone stopped being able to use it) so he only had the recognition of it as being on the level of a slightly of hand.

Regardless of what he does, Arc just felt it was the first turning point like turning point in his life after being reborn. He thought it was about time to stop spending all of his time playing around, just those sorts of feelings.

(I might end up being conscripted after leaving Ridasu village and since caravans have escorts it seems like there might be robbers as well. It seems it would be best to do things a bit seriously here.)

In his dream world he was in the Kendo club during middle and high school. Just like that he ended up entering the university in the city that the largest number of students at his high school enter, then after graduating from college he ended up getting his teaching certificate and settling down at the high school that was his Alma mater. The class he was in charge of was physical education. The club activities he acted as advisor for was the Kendo club.

Personally he didn't feel like he was strong so it's not like he had confidence in his Kendo. Just in case he was a rank holder but his abilities were at the level where if he was careless he might even lose to his high school students.

Everyday, he saw his family and the squires stabbing and beating the targets with wooden spears and swords that are far heavier than those used in Kendo. Since he was raised watching that, honestly speaking he was even a bit nervous.

(I can't imagine that I have that much physical strength..)

The system of swordsmanship was fundamentally different from that which makes use of bamboo fencing sticks or Japanese katana. You could call it Western swordsmanship, learning to use the one-handed sword, cutting is just a subsidiary attack method and in the end the main is to aim for vitals with thrusts and stabs. Cutting down, cutting up, cutting horizontally, everyone was freely using a double-edged blade with one hand.

(Even if I look at the real thing they're low quality cast iron huh..Even if you cut with this it wouldn't be able to do much.

Beating down with it still seems to fit better. The sword won't cut much at all, this really seems like Kendo is useless. Even when it comes to the foot work since it's one-handed..If I had used two swords it might have still come in handy though..)

Arc's training is still focused around swinging the wooden sword and learning the stance with the heavy wooden spear but he was told he has talent for it.

(Well, for the time being, the basics are..I guess Kendo isn't all that useless either, is what it means)

Just like that, he somehow or other continued training with the sword and spear for about a year and a half. One hot summer day about six months after he turned eight years old, Arc was thrusting the wooden spear towards the target as usual. It's not just a matter of thrusting but one of the squires stands near the target and tries to parry Arc's spear with their sword to interfere with his attacks.

It's said that the ideal attack with a spear is one that can penetrate the target without any influence from that interference.

It's only obvious when it comes to thrusting the spear but it also needs a strong grip strength to maintain proper hold on it.

"E~i!!"

While putting fighting spirit into it as he thrusts with the spear it's easily parried.

While do that countless times the accident occurred. Maybe some dust or something got in his eyes, one time the squire moved to parry Arc's spear and ended up tripping over his own feet.

Ah!! just as he thought that it was already too late. Though the end was blunted and there's no tip to the spear so it won't kill, unfortunately the wooden spear made from durable oak went straight through the eye of the squire who fell over and destroyed his brain. Of course the squire died instantly.

While Arc was unable to move and in a daze, everyone else gathered nearby. He heard voices saying to check the status but just as the strange resistance he felt gave Arc a bad premonition, the squire had unfortunately passed away.

Arc unsteadily approached the squire while calling out his name but there obviously wasn't any response.

That night, just as Arc was feeling like he couldn't get to sleep he realized he was in a strange space.

Through his meeting with God Arc was able to learn a bit of the truth and was considerably surprised. It was so shocking that even though this morning, while it was an accident, he felt like he would completely forget the fact that he just killed a person. He himself being reborn after an accidental death, that there were a lot of other victims than himself, and accompanied by that the possibility that what he thought was a dream could be reality surfaced. Suddenly his past family became more vivid. His son, wife, parents, and little brother and his family, their faces.

After confirming the truth a number of times, he started asking about doubts he's had since a while back. The way to use his own Unique Ability.

Of all things, in order to use {Polymorph.Self} the conditions for it are to be touching the body tissue of someone who is the same race, gender, and has a similar build to himself. He couldn't get God to tell him anymore than that but it seems that even a strand of hair is plenty for body tissue.

However, just when he was going to try changing the questions he was asking the time he was given ran out.

The next morning after opening eyes Arc thought of trying it out right away. There's several human boys with a similar build as himself in the village. Now then, how should he go about testing it, and after thinking that far Arc suddenly realized.

(I wonder if the transformation for {Polymorph.Self} will happen in an instant? If that's the case then it's bad..)

"Arc, I understand your feelings but don't make such a strange face from the morning."

His second oldest brother Arvin who's quite a bit older cautioned him.

"Come now Arv. That sort of thing only just happened to Arc yesterday, that's not something you should be saying. Rakorugu's funeral is today starting noon, Arc you should go to the river or something until then. If you don't want to eat then you don't have to force yourself and it's fine if you take a rest from training for today as well. However, you absolutely have to appeared at Rakorugu's funeral."

His mother smoothed things over. Honestly speaking something like yesterday's accident had already flown off somewhere for Arc but it's just as he wanted to be gain some time alone.

(I should depend on those words here. I just wanted some time to think about various things)

In a hurry he tried to make his expression seem like he was disheartened and "Then, I'm sorry. I want to be alone for a bit."

said that before leaving the house. He felt a bit apologetic towards Arv who was making an awkward expression but he still just looked down while staggering out of the house and running off towards the riverside.

(Wait! Don't hurry. Wasn't that itself nothing more than a dream?

It wouldn't be strange even if it was a dream that my imagination created either...But, I can certainly see the red characters of the Unique Ability and it remains in my memory awfully vivid. Probably my thought processes as well..they're especially abnormal.)

The fast running had at some point changed to a fast walk.

(Thinking about it like that and it's still too soon to decide it was just a simple dream. However, if I calmly think about it something like transforming isn't something I can test out so easily..Or rather, becoming Kamen Rider or something, so it wasn't a transformation like that! If you say transformation normally it's that right!)

He's already at the point of simply walking.

(..Well that's fine. However..and, in other words I guess it's the ability to become other people? And if it's not a person that I know then..No, even if it's someone I don't know if I can just get some hair or a cut nail as long as they're of the same race, gender, and a close build then I guess I can take their appearance..It seems it can be used for various things..)

After Arc arrived at the riverside he picked up a rock and threw it into the river.

(I can think of several uses to it...However, all of them can only be done after perfectly understanding the characteristics of {Polymorph.Self}, otherwise the danger is even greater. Not to mention, the probability of fundamentally exposing myself to danger is high..I guess first off is getting a grasp for the characteristics.)

Next he sat down on a rock and picked up another rock and threw it subconsciously.

(This isn't the only information I got from the dream. There were a lot more even more important things as well. Though it's not too late to start thinking about that stuff after testing out {Polymorph.Self} to prove it wasn't a dream.)

Arc spent his time until noon like that. Even after the funeral until evening he became a dweller of the riverside but when everyone from the village saw Arc like that they took detours around and tried not to approach him.

The next day, Arc said he wanted to be alone again and after eating breakfast left the house right away. In order to avoid being seen he spent a good bit of time picking a location no one would approach.

(..I..I'm going to do it..Eh~ transform!!)

He pulled out the hair from one of the slave children that he secretly obtained during the funeral yesterday and while looking at it he strongly concentrated on using his Unique Ability.

"!Gu,gugugugu!!Go!!Gugaa~!!"

His eyes are flickering. A pain runs through his entire body as it creaks. The pain continued for a considerably long period and when the pain reached a point where he was on the verge of losing consciousness, it finally started to recede.

"Haa..Haa..Haa..."

He held his own body with both arms and was even drooling as he writhed around but now it's not painful at all. I wonder if the transformation has already completed? He nervously looks into the river surface.

"Fu..Eh, heehe..eeehe."

He can't tell the features of his face but the color of his hair he can see in the water's surface which should have been black until just now looks to be lime green. It might just be his imagination but it seems like his physique has changed as well. His height has increased a bit and he feels even thinner. These are characteristics of the hair's owner as well. When he looked at his hand the color of skin seems to have gotten slightly whiter as well.

"This is, amaz~ing!"

Arc spontaneously raised his voice in excitement. And then, how about it, he felt like something was very off with the sound of his voice. It's not his own voice that he was used to hearing until now but at the same time it differed a bit from the voice of the owner of the hair as well.

(Ah, the way you hear your own voice and other people hear it is different after all. I guess it sounds like this to him?)

Since he was so excited over his body transforming he completely forgot about it. All things are eventually visited by the concept of time.

"Ofu~!!Ge!!Ga!!Gugigigi!!"

(Ouchh!! Owowowowowowowowowowow!)

Suddenly that pain attacked him again. After suffering for what felt like an eternity, he looked into the water's surface and he had returned to black hair. The amount of time he was transformed was a mere 10 minutes or so. Also, if he thinks about it now his body seemed to have hurt for about the same amount of time. (What should I do? I still have the hair, should I try it once more? But, experiencing that pain again is..)

Arc flinched remembering the pain from just now. It's not unreasonable.

(No, I need to check if even if my status had changed..At the very least that much..)

While enduring the sudden fatigue he felt shortly after the blinding pain receded, Arc fell asleep as if he fell unconscious after confirming that far. After that, he was forcefully made to open his eyes while writhing around from the pain that hit him but once the pain receded he ended up falling asleep just like that. When he opened his eyes the sun was almost mid-way through the sky. He carelessly slept for five hours or so.

In a hurry he returned to his house and the lunch he ate while gauging his families facial expressions was tasteless like chewing sand.

Seeing Arc like that his family thought he was even more depressed than yesterday.

"Arc, if you're feeling bad then it's fine for you to rest today as well."

His father called out to Arc as he was slowly eating with his head faced down. An eight year old child, while it was an accident, killed a person. Exactly how much of a shock that would be, they were quite worried about it. Since they were doting on their youngest child, taking him into consideration they intended to exempt him from training for a short while. Since he's reasonably skilled as well, if it's just resting from training for one week or so then this child should be aware to make up for it right away, he might have been thinking that.

After going out to the riverside alone again, Arc picked up a rock and threw it while thinking.

A year or so has passed. Whenever he transforms he makes sure it's always after 9 pm when his family is asleep and he goes to some vacant land a bit away from his house to do it. Of course, he doesn't do it on days the weather is bad either. Also, recently he's started to take a rest from doing it. It hurts after all. In the first place, since he's spent this much time it's only obvious but Arc has already gotten a decent grasp on the details of the Unique Ability {Polymorph.Self}.

1. The amount of time it takes from start to finish for the transformation is 10 minutes each. However, as the level of the Unique Ability increased the time required has slowly gotten shorter. Right now at the highest level it's most likely around 1 minute each.
2. While he's transformed it's possible for him to release the transformation at any time he wills it. However it's only obvious, but that is accompanied by the pain of the structure of his body being changed.

3. While he's transformed (the time until the duration of the effect expires) if he touches the catalyst once again while trying to use the ability, using that point in time as the starting point he can increase the duration of the transformation without undergoing the pain. If he's prepared to undergo the pain it's also possible for him to transform into someone else (obviously he needs a hair from the target) as well.
4. While he's transformed he can display (it seems) the status of the target just like that. Obviously, he has no way of seeing his own status while transformed.
5. As the level of his Unique Ability went up the amount of time he can remain transformed increased. It's not as if he precisely measured it (or it would be more accurate to say he couldn't) but at it's current maximum level of 9, he believes the time he can remain transformed is considerably long. Until it reached level 5 he was somewhat able to measure the increases in time but by that point he already had more than 5 hours. If it goes according to his expectation then it should be 2560 minutes now or he should be able to remain transformed for close to two days.
6. Currently it's possible for him to transform over 100 times consecutively. It seems that during the time he was resting, it might be from getting used to the ability from the number of times used, but the number of times he could use it slowly increased. Somehow though, he felt like every 2 ~ 10 times he would reach his limit, he felt it increased about 1 more time. However, as expected it should already be plenty. Since he underwent that pain at least twice every day he's gotten quite a bit used to it and while the amount of time it takes for each transformation has gotten considerably shorter, things that hurt still hurt.

Up until now what has been established is just that much but as a matter of fact there's one more important thing he hadn't forgotten about. Leveling up. In his past life Arc never even once played a video game. However, he knew what kind of thing they were. After all he was born in the year 1980. The {invader game} already existed when he was born and before he reached elementary school a famous computer role playing game was up for sale. There were kids among his classmates that enjoyed computer games quite a bit but he had no interest in those at all.

However, ever since he was appointed as a teacher at the high school of his Alma mater he saw some of his students playing with those sorts of things. Obviously, while interacting with those students he ended up learning some knowledge on things like that. However, even if he knows about it as knowledge, it's not like he was familiar with the details either so even after seeing the status window he couldn't relate it to games right away. Or rather, it might be abnormal to relate it to games from just that much. However, the various information he learned from the meeting the existence calling itself a God. The keyword level up included in that. Status window. Monster. Magic. Non-human. Special and Unique skills. All of those things accumulated and were connected within him and he felt like he finally got a grasp on it.

(What the, so this was the dream? No, I really can't think that it's a dream. No matter what it's too long and for a dream it's unnatural that I wouldn't open my eyes from the pain I feel when I transform as well. Does that mean I was really reborn?) He wasn't able to gain any confidence in it but the final conclusion he arrived at was there's a high possibility he ended up in a vegetative state during the train accident and he's watching a long dream. Nevertheless, if he's seeing a dream then that means he has brain waves. He thought the possibility was highest that through some kind of shock his consciousness just wasn't returning.

Even as Arc he tried to think if there was some way he could return his consciousness but he gave up right away. After all even that pain he feels from using {Polymorph.Self} won't open his eyes. He probably wouldn't open his eyes unless he did something on the level of suicide. In that case, he just thought he might as well enjoy this dream as much he pleases. Obviously, he thought about committing suicide as well but in the worst case he definitely couldn't wipe the possibility that it wasn't a dream from the corner of his head so he couldn't bring himself to test that far.

Currently, Arc has been making a certain hypothesis. The hypothesis of leveling up himself through the acquisition of experience points. If this world is the result of his imagination and a dream then it makes plenty of sense. He might have been subconsciously interested in the games his students talked about. During his time in college, he at least went to game centers together with his friends before but the ones he saw there were just fighting games or ones where you control a fighter plane to shoot down enemies that were the fad at the time.

While Arc had knowledge about the so-called role playing games, he had no interest in them at all so before he realized they were building up dust in a corner of his memory.

However, maybe he had interest in them somewhere?

(After all, just like this I'm even seeing them in a dream~)

He felt a bit surprised that he noticed some feelings of excitement budding inside but without thinking too much about it he dedicated his thoughts to a different matter.

(I'm sure it's important to build my own body as well. If this Hyumu race or whatever is the same as the humans I know then it should be plenty to start running from around 12 years old. I've already long since started flexibility exercises after all..I guess I'll take on the sword and spear a bit more seriously..I'm still 9 years old but knowing the forms and stances shouldn't end up useless.)

Arc was a man who can put as much effort needed into it as long as he has an objective. He graduated from one of the prominent schools focused on higher education in the city and then completed a degree in physical education science at a school that's called the highest academic center in Japan. He can brag about the fact that he has far more knowledge about the most efficient ways to train the body than the average muscle-brained teacher who graduated with a degree in physical education from any random university.

Arc properly put all of his effort into the places he could, and in places it was still too soon, he remained aware of his surroundings while slacking off while his consciousness leaned towards the most efficient ways to train his body. If he has the same body structure as a human then it should be possible to continue training until around 30 years old. Of course, it's not like he's aiming for the Olympics or wants to become the ultimate soldier so he wasn't going to the point of recklessness. He turned several training menus into habits and focused his objective around deepening his understanding of the movements needed for swordsmanship and spearmanship on Orth.

(No matter how I look at it not a single person is exercising with the objective of training their bodies. They must not think that things like stamina or endurance are necessary beyond just what is needed for getting into formation during wars or moving from place to place. If it's just that much, then you could say the stamina built up naturally from training regularly is plenty after all...Hmph, as expected of the culture level being at just the 15th century or so. The specialized training for increasing physical abilities being included as a part of military training was only taken up at around the end of the 18th century for some faster countries. The ninja groups of Japan are like the exclusion of exclusions after all. Even that only got methodological around the end of the 16th century.)

Something like clever sword techniques don't have much meaning in front of a suitable amount of stamina. Of course, Arc has no intention of objecting to polishing skill with the sword or spear at all. He understands it's something important as well. But, just as expected of someone who has been in contact with Kendo for a reasonable duration, it's possible to reach a certain level depending on the amount of training you put into it, but when it comes to reaching a high level it's something you can only reach at the end of effort that would make you feel insane, and any levels beyond that require just the small handful of people who have talent who also end up arriving in that realm after put in enough work that blood starts to run.

After being reborn, or otherwise since it's a dream world, you could say he just didn't see the meaning in putting in the effort to reach that level. In other words that's the reason and it's just a matter of him not feeling like seriously devoting himself to using the sword or spear. However, it's not like he could completely not train either so while slacking off a bit he considered the training a reasonable amount and behind that he was still somewhere thinking in the case that it was a dream.

(The sword and spear are plenty at the average level. Rather than that increasing my stamina is more effective. In the first place rather than something like, it should be far more important to learn the cultures of other regions in this world or about leveling up.)

He spent his time thinking that. He's already got a rough mark on the method to acquire experience points. It's fine if you just kill living people. Of course, it's probably not limited to just people. He thought it might be fine for horses or cows as well. However, all of those sorts of large domestic animals are expensive so he couldn't afford to kill them. Pigs are valuable as well, in the first place only a single family is raising them in the village. There's chickens as well but they're important poultry for obtaining eggs.

Then what should he do? While getting tired of thinking Arc thought about becoming the apprentice of one of the hunters in the village but if it comes to that he might end up having to spend the rest of his life as a hunter. It's putting the cart before the horse. He even thought of transforming into someone else and going on a murder spree but for the time being he can only transform into children. Whether his physical strength after transforming is still the same or changes to the target he transforms into was something he couldn't really confirm yet. In either case it seems there's not much difference so for the time being it can't be helped but eventually it should become an important question. Eventually he'll need to verify that as well but at the current point there's no helping worrying about it.

(It can't be helped worrying that far right now. Even if I were to become someone else if that person was always together with someone else on the day of the crime then it might develop into a problem as well.)

He's already come to terms with the concept of pushing his own crimes on to someone else. Arc only thought it as(it's just a dream I'm sure so something like placing the blame on someone else is nothing at all. In the first place even if I were to kill someone it's all in a dream. It doesn't matter at all) nothing more than that. However, because the feelings of (it's not a dream) are still remaining somewhere, he couldn't reach the level of abandon where he would boldly commit murder in the middle of the day.

Just like that one and two years passed. He was taught simple {Cantrips} from his parents. Around almost the same time, there was one extremely important thing that was identified. At the time Arc was testing out the problem of exactly how far the difference in build could be from the transformation target. He secretly gathered the hair of the human men in the village and while looking at those in his hand he would try using {Polymorph.Self}. Even if he doesn't know who's hair it is he just transforms and checks the status he can figure out who it belonged to right away so there's no need to try and collect them from specific individuals.

If he just goes to a random human household and says "give me some water" then when he goes inside and sits down he can get as many hairs as needed.

From the hairs he gathered just like that he was able to establish the general viable range of the transformation. Most likely it's around +/- 20% in terms of height. In terms of body weight it seems the limit is around +/- 50%. There's probably no limits on the age of the target. There was no change in the number of times he could use {Cantrips}. However, he was able to confirm that even if the target didn't have the special skill {Cantrip} he could still use it. During the time when he still didn't have the {Cantrip} special skill even if the target he transformed into had it he couldn't use it as well.

However, he thought that still wasn't enough to determine whether or not he could use the targets skills as if they are his own.

Since it's hard to say he truly understood how to use {Cantrips} at the time, so he doesn't know whether or not he can use their skills, would be the more correct way of putting it.

Since it seems magic is a special skill as well, if he transforms into a magician whether or not he would be able to use magic is difficult to say. It's regrettable that there's no magicians in the village but just according to what he's heard even magic can't do anything too amazing so he didn't have much regrets in regards to that. It's unfortunate that he can't transform in non-humans of different races. He thought that but at one point he randomly felt like trying it and he was able to transform without problem.

(Either I heard it incorrectly or God lied to me huh?)

He thought that but soon after realized it doesn't matter at all, he decided to try out using the special skills of non-humans. The one Arc transformed into was a dwarf that's over 10 years older than him.

(Oh! So this is infrared vision huh? So it's like seeing temperatures like a thermography..But, you can only see right in front of you it seems...It seems like it wouldn't have much use other than the middle of the night like right now.)

He could see only about 3 meters and since no matter how hard he tried to look beyond that point it was just his normal vision of darkness Arc was a bit disappointed.

One day when another couple of years passed.

Some travelers different from a caravan appeared in the village.

The travelers seem to be calling themselves adventurers. Since Ridasu village has no inn, it's customary for caravans who stop in the village to split up between the lord and squires houses to stay the night.

Around the time his afternoon training ended Arc learned that some travelers had come and (If there's someone with a build close to mine then this time I might be able to use them as a target for transformation) smiled to himself. Around the time they've left and things have cooled down, he even thought of transforming into one of the target that is one of the travelers and murdering a random slave family in the middle of the night to test out leveling up.

That's what Arc was thinking but after his training finished, when he returned to his house and saw the face of the traveler he froze up. There was a total of four people who seemed like allies in the yard of his house, the face of the boy standing in the center of them talking was without a doubt that of his little brother Kenji!

Of course, it wasn't the exact same face of Kenji he was used to seeing from the time he was in middle school. It was a strange face where if you were to take Kenji's features from that time and mixed in Western features just like that. However, he hadn't lost his features to the point where he couldn't recognize it was Kenji's face.

He almost spontaneously yelled out "Kenji!" but somehow was able to hold himself back. Fortunately the boy who looked exactly like Kenji still hadn't noticed Arc.

(I want to talk with him without creating a racket. Or rather, I want to surprise him.)

Arc quietly entered the house from the back entrance and started observing them without being noticed. After a short while each of the travelers split up to different squire's houses they were going to stay the night at.

After the last one parted ways, while watching that for a few seconds just as the man who seems to be Kenji turned around he tried calling out "Kenji" in a low voice. Just as he thought, there was started reaction as he started restlessly looking around his surroundings and when Arc came out of the window that he was observing from when Kenji was about to yell "Big bro!?" in a loud voice he grabbed his hand and pulled him away from the house.

"Be quiet. Are you, Kenji!?"

"Big bro! I've been searching for you all this time! After all you were here!"

"Your voice is loud. We'll probably end up having dinner in another 30 minutes."

"Ha? Dinner? That doesn't matter at all! I finally was able to meet you. I've been searching for one year already!"

"Hn..I see. Even though it's a dream, thanks for your trouble."

"Huh? Dream?"

"That's fine for now. Rather than that why were you searching for me? Why are you here in this dream? Is Mihoko and Yuma not around?"

"I don't get what you mean. What are you saying?"

The two of them continued their conversation for a short while in the bushes a bit of distance from Arc's house but 30 minutes passed by in no time at all. He somehow managed to calm down Kenji and after hearing the objective of his visit he was surprised by one thing after another.

First off, it's only obvious but Kenji doesn't have the recognition that this Orth is Ryoichi, in other words Arc's world of dreams.

Kenji on Orth goes by the name Hekusa Barnes and he started saying unscientific things like they were reborn.

"You've already met God right? Didn't you hear about it at that time. Ah? Could it be you still haven't met it?"

Seeing Kenji say that seriously without thinking of that as a dream he found it so amusing he almost laughed out loud. However, Arc's body went stiff hearing the things he was told next.

"If you're acting too carefree then it's dangerous. If we're careless we Japanese people might eventually end up being hunted you know."

"Hunted? By What? A dragon?"

However, Arc soon replied as if making fun of it.

"It might not be unreasonable that you can't believe it. But, listen carefully. Right now I've become something like a house guest for the Duke Belgridd family and Prince Alexander."

"Ha~? That's quite amazing of you. A lifestyle of ease and comfort, I'm envious."

"What are you saying? It's not something that big of a deal. It might be more correct to say I'm acting as a private mercenary or army. In any case the prince is a reincarnated Japanese person that died in that accident just like us. There's also a number of other Japanese people together with him."

"Eh? That was serious?"

"Why would I lie about something like that...In any case, it's still just my intuition but that guy is dangerous~ He might seriously be planning to take over this world after he becomes the King of this country."

"World conquest, that's good. If you're a man then you need to have big dreams."

"Idiot, what are you saying. It's seriously dangerous~ That's why even though I thought there was a low possibility to it I was frantically searching for big bro. I heard from a merchant in Hesshu that there was a boy with black hair and eyes in this Ridasu village so I came hoping for it."

"Oh~ I see, thanks for your work."

"..Big bro, you've changed.."

"I haven't changed."

"Or else, are you acting so lightly because you seriously think this is just a dream?"

"Eh..."

"Well, right now is fine. However, I'll just say this. This isn't a dream. It's reality. Everything doesn't go as you please just like a dream after all.."

Arc couldn't believe what Hekusa was saying at all. However, it's not like he didn't have some thoughts on that portion either.

"..Well, something like that is fine. I want to slowly talk over things tonight."

"I don't particularly mind but.."

"Do you have a father, mother, and siblings?"

"Of course I do. It's only obvious right?"

"Got it. In any case I'll greet them when we have dinner but it's my lifetime request so big bro just remain quiet. I won't let things end up badly. In any case if you come with me to Randogurizu then we can talk in more detail along the way...Or else does big bro not want to leave his family in this world?"

"Hn~ It doesn't particularly matter but as expected killing them is a bit"

"Why does it turn into talk of killing them!? I'm just asking if you want to leave the house and serve the prince with me! Or did you already decide to enter the knight group?"

"Ah, if it's that sort of things then that might be good..Something like the knight group is impossible right?"

"Nn, then the talk should end quickly. In any case, just think you're been deceived by me and don't talk to me for a bit. We'll talk plenty tonight."

After the two of them returned to the house they didn't even exchange glances. Hekusa explained that he directly serves Prince Alexander of Devas Kingdom and that he came to draft members for the prince's imperial guard. At the same time he let Arc's parents confirm both the officially issued plate of Duke Stahlz family used for passing through their territory and the plate issued by Duke Beruguriddo that's only given to considerably high up retainers. On the back of the issued plates the name Hekusa.Barnes certainly carved into it.

"Since that's the case it comes to serving the royal family so putting aside the future right now we're focusing on calling out to the younger children of various nobles. I can't reveal it but there's a special condition to it as well. I can use the special spell that can identify those people so I'm the one directly traveling around to various places."

While Arc was watching his parents listen to Hekusa's remarks he was thinking (he's saying quite good things but what's a special spell. Magic at this point?) but he didn't notice that inside of his head a different awareness had started to sprout.

Several days have passed since Hekusa his little brother from his past life appeared.

Arc was exchanging information with Hekusa on an almost daily basis. And then, he succeeded in obtaining quite a bit of information. Among that was the fact that he was able to confirm Hekusa adored and wanted to rely on him just the same as Kenji in his previous life. Also, while they're still low level it's big that he had already acquired the magic special skills. He might be able to learn magic. Also, he owns a house in Radogurizu and even supposedly has a slave that serves him.

Furthermore, it was big that he was able to test and confirm details about his Unique Ability that he had no means of confirming all on his own at the riverside on the edge of the village in the middle of the night.

"However, as expected of big bro. That {Polymorph.Self} really amazing!"

As the details of the ability were gradually identified, Arc noticed that Hekusa gradually got even more excited.

"What are you saying? Even your {Skill Invalidation} is quite something as well right?"

Arc put his hand on his while replying a bit fed up with it.

"Nn~ But you know, even then when compared to big bro's {Polymorph Self} I just can't help but feel. Mine is completely useless when it comes to just living normally. In comparison, no matter what the situation, I can only think of ways that big bro's could be useful at any time."

That's certainly true and Arc thought once again but didn't put into words.

"If there was a problem to it then it would be getting used to it I'm sure. It requires a considerable amount of practice. AS expected it won't work through ordinary methods."

"Hn..I see. But I feel like big bro could somehow manage that as well."

"Don't say it so easily. Even your {Skill Invalidation} I can feel it when you intend to use magic, so if I practice with it I feel like I could use it but it doesn't go very well. Well, putting that aside, I'm really glad you came here."

"What are you saying? Did you forget the imagine that God showed us? Even if I wanted to I, couldn't forget it...Right below my name was big bros so I had faith you were living somewhere.."

Come to think of it Arc thought it was a dream when he met with God so he remembered just casually shrugging it off. He wasn't seriously trying to gather information from the start. Of course, since he has memories that were forcefully poured into his head he hasn't forgotten the conversation or occurrences themselves but he couldn't properly remember the image. Even then he thought it was a well-made dream and honestly speaking, even now he thinks the possibility is considerably high that he's watching the continuation of the dream. However, after all somewhere in his heart the feelings (it might be reality) are remaining. While listening to Hekusa talk about how he searched for him for a year and his upbringing and troubles and it was just a bit but Arc's awareness started to change. I guess his younger brother was coached by the rough seas of the harsh world of Orth, he felt he had grown mentally a bit. Of course, there's a portion he feels has become more of an idiot than before as well but when thought about it more carefully it wasn't that he had become an idiot but his sensitivity just returned to what it was in the past felt like a better fit.

(Could it be..I'm pretty sure it's unlikely but is it really not a dream? No, there's no way that could be the case...There's no way this is reality. In the first place, something like being reborn with memories and thought processes still intact, how could you believe in that...But you know..God huh..If you were to say that God could do something like that then there's no way to object to it...Furthermore, in that case it would mean something like Gods actually exist in reality. Magic as well and my {Polymorph.Self} would be reality even..)

Arc shook his head to shake off the thoughts he was having and started talking to Hekusa.

"I've confirmed the general outline. By the way your allies..What sort of relationship do you have with them? How much of the circumstances do they know?"

"Yeah, it's just as I talked about before, in addition to searching for big bro I've been drawing a map of the country but I've hired them as escorts along the way. Well, they're something like guardsmen or SP. There's no way they'd know about something like the circumstances of being reborn. I was forbidden to speak about it from the Prince as well. Our relationship is..we've been together through various things for one year. Everyone, is fellows with a pretty good feel to them."

"Do they have any kind of background relationships to them?"

"Background relationships..They were all originally just simple adventurers. There's no way that's the case right? Of course I'm sure they have families but it's like they all live on their own."

"Then it should be fine to get rid of them huh.."

Hearing Arc whisper that with his arms cross Hekusa was shocked.

"Get rid of!? What are you saying?"

"Think carefully, Kenji. I can transform. If it's now then as long as they're a man, excluding really small children..babies and infants..then I can transform into anyone. In other words, I can become them including their status and everything. Certainly, it's just as you said it's something that can be useful in any situation."

Seeing Arc make a smile while saying that Hekusa made a suspicious expression for a short while but soon thought of something.

"That sort of thing huh.."

"It's that sort of thing. But, going to the capital needs some preparations."

Arc said that while thinking (After all is it a dream? His ability to grasp things is strangely high for Kenji).

"Yeah, certainly. We need to crush a number of possibilities things might seem suspicious. Yeah, got it. Since big bro says..It's unfortunate but certainly it seems that there's no choice but for them to die...Killing them itself shouldn't be all that difficult as long as it's not from the front, and.."

"Hn? And?"

Arc was interested in the words Hekusa stopped saying partway through. Normally it was a voice soft enough to miss it but since they're discussing something like this he was interested in it.

"Nn, I don't know if you know about or not and it's suspicious if you'll believe me but promise that you won't laugh."

"Yeah, of course. I won't laugh, I promise."

And then, Arc heard something surprising. Of course, it was something he lightly imagined. That time, God said "if something doesn't level up you can't meet it". However, with this his resolve was decided.

(Leveling up from experience levels..It's decided. After all it's a dream, this world. If that's been determined then I feel like I can do anything!)

"..In other words, it's believed that if you kill some kind of living creatures then you level up and slowly get even stronger. Honestly speaking, I'm not saying it in confidence either but there's several pieces of circumstantial evidence so I can't help but think that it's not completely mistaken. Also, Alex, Sel, and Myulu all completely believe in it...It seems it's to the point that on the Judgement days they've negotiated to rotate taking turns executing criminals who are given the death penalty. Recently it seems like Ren thinks so as well...On the way here I had them let me finish off monsters and stuff that appeared as well."

(Gyahhahaha, this fellow is a child. With just that..Huh? If it's a dream then I guess that's fine huh? If that's the case then I can't afford to be doing nothing anymore either.)

"I see. Since it's before adulthood I thought it was a bit early but I guess it's time for me to leave the house as well."

"Big bro, is that alright? It's fine if you don't overdo things in a hurry. If I continue to say I haven't found you yet I can still pull out more money."

Hekusa thought if they were going to finish off his adventurer allies then they should at least do everything they can to prevent Arc's existence from being exposed.

"Yeah, that's certainly true. But, the sooner the better. It should be best to start make preparations early. It's necessary to gain as much information as we can while we're still young."

"Nn, if big bro says so then.."

Hekusa felt a strange sense of relief with how confidently and boldly Arc said it.

"Since that's the case we've already confirmed the intent of sub-Noble Arnic.Strife as well. We'll make him into a direct imperial guard of the prince and he'll end up spending several years training. He won't be able to get into contact for several years and depending on the case this might be your last time meeting in this lifetime. Please finish saying your farewells."

Hekusa politely lowered his head to Arc's parents and decisively stated. From Hekusa's opinion he thought the decision was already decided. There's no reason they would refuse it.

"Oh! Envoy-dono, our Arc has, no, Arnic is going to be an imperial guard of prince Alexander!"

"What a great honor! Arc, make sure you do your duties properly!"

"Father, Mother, of course I will. Arc will definitely show you that he can be useful to his highness the prince!"

"Arc. For you to..I'm envious..Make you're remain steady."

"Arc, take good care of yourself.."

"Arc, give it your best. And then, if there's a good man then introduce them to me!"

"Brother Arv, sister-in-law Misu..I'll take care of my duties so as to not dirty the Strife name. Also, sister Evessa, as expected that is..I can't promise you but I'll try."

Arc's upper older sister is married into one of the squire households. His younger older sister is still in the house but she's 22 years old and since a suitable age for marriage.

Two days after that, Arc gathered together his belongings, and left Ridasu village while clinging to the back of one of Hekusa's adventurer allies riding a horse.

They continued traveling for about a week and it was a short while after they entered the Royal Family's Direct Territory. After they had breakfast in a certain village and departed, around the time it was almost noon.

(Now then, I guess around here should be fine..)

"Today, shall we find an adequate camping place after getting past the next village?"

"Even though you say that Hekusa...Since sub-Noble Strife is together with us as well, it's our first candidate for imperial guard right? Even if we don't go out of our way to do something like camping.."

The leader of the veteran adventurers said that but the one who responded was Arc.

"Well~ if it's just one or two nights of camping there's nothing to it. I'm alright. Also, you camp out while training as well right? If I just think of it as advance training there's no problem at all. Rather I'm the one who wants to request it."

"Nn..Thanks for saying that, Arc. In the first place, camping here is something that's necessary. We'll leave look out to Arc tonight. The training of an imperial guard isn't something like this but we need to look at your aptitude after all. Everyone else be careful not to lend him a hand as well."

"..Well there's not many monsters around this area so I think there should be any problem though.."

Even then the adventurers were a bit worried but since Hekusa argued them down saying it was a condition for becoming an imperial guard and said it would be fine to drink a bit of alcohol as well they honestly obeyed. If it's Hekusa who've they shared meals with for around a year that says it like an examiner while looking at Arc then it can't be helped and there's almost no monsters in this region. It was big that they assumed it shouldn't develop into any large problems.

They were easily able to finish off the three adventurers by mixing some paralysis poison into the low-quality cheap alcohol. There once again, a characteristic of {Polymorph.Self} that he couldn't test until now was identified. Even after the target has died as long as he's touching a portion of their body it's possible for him to transform.

"Fu...Just as I thought. Since I was able to transform using hairs that fell out from quite a while but I thought there wouldn't be a problem but.."

"Yeah, I guess so. If it's this then just as big bro said.."

After taking all of the threes belongings they buried them in a hole in the bushes on the side of the road, then after taking turns sleeping until morning and the siblings walked on leading the four horses. Since Arc didn't have the skill of horsemanship. It took several days but after the two were able to sell two of the horses in a reasonably large town, they took their time arriving at the capital Randogurizu while teaching the older brother to ride a horse.

After they arrived at Hekusa's house in the capital they immediately ordered his slave to dig a deep hole in the yard and after the two of them cooperated to kill Hekusa's slave, Arc transformed into that slave. The corpse was buried inside of the deep hole he dug himself.

"We'll go to Ren's place tomorrow. Big bro should accompany me while still acting as him. Listen to the conversation carefully and make sure you properly get a grasp on Ren's personality and my way of speaking."

"Yeah, of course. Even when it comes to becoming someone else if I don't know about their surroundings then.."

"That's right. Well I'm sure it'll take at least a year for them to get out of the knight group. We need to properly figure things out about the capital until then...Make sure you practice even more with the horse as well. I'm sure they aren't doing it seriously either way but even then they're being trained by the White Phoenix Knight Group so if your skills are too bad they might become suspicious of it."

"Oh~ leave it to me. You know about me right? I can do anything."

"That's right..Since the past big bro has always been able to do anything. If it's big bro then I'm sure it's fine. I'm sure things will go well."

"That's only obvious. Fufu, I'm looking forward to it."

Arc and Hekusa exchanged glances while laughing happily.

Chapter 205: Rebirth

7445, Month 7, Day 30

I let my thoughts run over how pathetic I was, letting the fish that should have swallowed the hook get away while I was leisurely putting on airs. I wonder why Hirosukol disappeared? I can think of several reasons but no matter which it is they already don't matter anymore. At the very least he chose of his own free will to disappear from in front of everyone. If you were to ask if I find it regrettable about Hirosukol disappearing then it is but it can't be helped thinking and complaining about things that have already taken place.

There's already six reincarnated people affiliated with me. If Kuro and Mary join in as well then that will be eight people. If Faruergaz is added to here then that's nine people. If we include the disappeared Hirosukol then that's ten people. When it comes to reincarnated people then it wouldn't be strange for there to be one or two people who don't get along with me. There's no other choice than to make the matter this time into provisions for the future.

Including me 39 Japanese people reincarnated on Orth. Among those eight people passed away while they were still babies so that leaves 31 people remaining. And then, Dereonola was already executed and disappeared so that leaves 30 people. The fact that I was able to get a grasp on the location of and somewhat gain familiarity with $\frac{1}{3}^{\text{rd}}$ of them by the time I'm 17 years old is big.

Of the remaining 20 people I wonder around how many are still alive? Even if I think about it there's no clues at all so I guess it's just a waste of time spent thinking huh? I'm interested in the reincarnated people that are supposedly in Devas but for the time being there's nothing I can do and I don't have that much room to spare either.

In the first place there's no way they would know about me, no, us either way. If Miki, no, Lilus didn't tell me then I still wouldn't know myself. The difference between predicting it and being convinced of it is like that of heaven and earth. Even with just that you could say I have good luck.

While Faruergaz is still staring up at the sky as if he was looking at some sort of illusion of Hirosukol floating in the air, I called out to him saying, “Please excuse me” and then started on my way to the gathering place of the {Slaughterers} Murowa. Ah, I guess I should at least show my face before that..No, I guess it’s fine later.

“Al-san, we’re very sorry.”

“We let our guards down at the very end. I’m sorry.”

I entered Murowa and the moment Toris and Bel noticed me they ran over and apologized. It’s fine I’ve already heard that a number of times. We already had a reflection meeting as well. While the two of them were lined up with their heads down I just raised my hand without saying anything.

“But, everyone ended up getting hurt, and if things went one step in the wrong direction it was considerably dangerous..We’ll take responsibility. Please say anything at all.”

“No matter how dangerous of a role it is.”

Toris and Bel said that laudably lowering their heads. It pissed me off a bit.

“Hey, you two. Listen carefully. Don’t say something like taking responsibility so easily! In the first place, exactly what and how would mean you’ve taken responsibility? Responsibility isn’t something you take after something has happened! It’s something you’re carrying from the start!..you might not understand still but think carefully.”

After saying it firmly I said, “Next time think of something that will be useful. You all gained experience that will help from here on out.” and had them sit down.

These shitty brats..learn from Zenom. I’m sure even Zenom had regrets and reflected on it. He should feel some responsibility as well. It’s the same for me too. But, Zenom and I already had the resolve to bear the responsibility for our decisions. I have no intention of saying it’s fine as long as you have the resolve though. Since things like responsibility weren’t mentioned during the reflection meeting, I could have sworn they knew that but for them to say it here. Don’t be acting like spoiled brats.

With everyone gathered together I faced them. At the edge Basutorial was lined up sitting next to Catherine. It doesn't particularly matter though. There's no need to think about her until they say something from their end. I ordered some appropriate beer and pork skewers. This is a good lunch for today.

Now then, shall I started a shitty uninteresting discussion...

"It's been decided that {Sun.Ray} would all be absorbed by the {Slaughterers}, but Hirosukol is different. We found out that he disappeared of his own will. He so politely even left behind a farewell letter. It seems he wants to keep some distance for a while."

Everyone starts noisily trying to ask things so I stop them and continue speaking.

"It's something person him self decided. It can't be helped. However, at the very least the other 14 people excluding him have decided to become affiliated with us. I mentioned it a bit a couple days ago but we'll be switching to three parties. It's only obvious but we won't be splitting the combat forces up evenly between each party. Everyone will fundamentally continue like this. Though one or two from the {Slaughterers} will enter the second and third parties as commanders."

When I clearly declared that everyone went quiet.

"I intend for everyone other than, Gwine and Basutorial, and also Giberuti to take turns as the commanders of the second and third parties. Including myself we'll take turns in order but it's no guaranteed that it'll always be just one person. Ralpha, Zulu, Angela. For the time being I have no intention of sending any of you over alone. It'll be in a pair with Zenom, Toris, Bel, Miduchi, and I one of us. That's why at a minimum two people and a maximum of four people, will be leaving the current {Slaughterers}. Prepare yourselves for it."

I tilt my beer mug that finally came out and continue talking.

"However, from here on out there will come a time when we need the second and third parties to switch to support for the first party to aim towards the lower floors. Putting aside the 8th or 9th floors, if you intend to aim for the 10th floor or beyond I'm sure a support party is definitely needed. When that time comes I'm sure it'll be difficult to advance without a full party so we'll have the people who were dispatched to the second and third parties group back up with us along the way."

And then, finally I add on.

"The people who are dispatched to the second and third parties will get 2% of the magic stone sales of the first party just the same as usual as well as getting an equal share from what the party they're in earns as compensation. Well, think of it as something like travel compensation. However, don't think you'll be able to enjoyable earn it. Since it's necessary to raise the second and third parties until they can at least act as support parties. It will be considerably difficult and the responsibility is heavy. In any case, the members who go to the second and third parties prepare yourselves. It's necessary for you to hold full responsibility after all."

I looked at Toris and Bel again while saying it. I couldn't tell if they got it or not but even then their expressions seemed to tense up like had reached a conclusion on it. Alright.

"I plan to enter the dungeon the next day the day after tomorrow. In regards to the first leaders, but I'll have Toris and Bel go. Toris will have Ralpa and Bel will have Zenom go with them. Kamu and I will discuss how to split up their parties this evening. I think I'll be able to talk about what kind of shape it will take tomorrow morning."

After I said that much I ate a couple of the pork skewers that came out and then got up from my seat. I left some money on the table while saying, "Then I'm returning to my inn. I only paid for it up until today." and left the store.

I cleared out of "Kairugu's Inn" and returned to Boil Manor then just like that went towards one more place. I showed my face for a bit in "Slave Store, Ronslail". I went to confirm if there's any news on the combat slaves entering soon and I got the information that they'll be sold in the slave market of the capital at the end of next month. While putting emphasis on stocking up to the Madam, I was able to guess, "Then I guess that means the conflict this time is already over".

I wonder if older brother and the others are arriving in Bakuddo village around now? Or else maybe they've already long since started on their way here? It would be good if no one died but..No, older brother and sister were both on the battlefield, there's no any casualties would have appeared from the village. In the first place older sister who should have been on the campaign hasn't returned yet..She hasn't yet right? If she's already returned and just ignored me then I'll seriously cry.

In regards to the second and third parties that I discussed with Kamu but Faruergaz and his allies five, including Nyuman and Harurein, those seven will be the third party, and then the remaining members will be the second party is how we shaped it. Though it ended up that only Faruergaz can use magic in the third party but we decided to pass it as the dispatch members making up for that. Regardless I have no intention of letting them overdo things until their abilities match up and depending on the case it's very possible I could have them earning experience points against orks and hobgoblins on the 1st and 2nd floors. I guess you could call it the first party, if we dispatch one or two members from the {Slaughterers}, furthermore if they can use magic then things should be fine.

After finishing my discussion with Kamu I returned to Boil Manor. And then, Miduchi was sitting in my bed making a huge face. So you were still here.

"Hey, that is.."

Miduchi is showing a new rubber bag while licking her lips with her forked tongue to try and tempt me. I understand the feeling. I want to do it as well. But, there's something I need to calmly think about for a bit.

"What is it, it's already late so return to your own room. It seems Cathy didn't use your room almost at all. There's no problem right?"

"Bu~"

This fellow, you're not a brat so stop trying to come on to it so heavy. Can't you be a bit more patient?

"What are you bu~ing about. Tomorrow you have to look over formation training as well so go to sleep early."

“Bu~bu~”

“Are you a pig! You’re loud~ so put your clothes on and leave. I still have things I have to do. I’ll be your partner slowly tomorrow, so just let me be alone for today.”

“Che.”

I push Miduchi out of the room while she’s clicking her tongue and after I was left alone I slowly started gathering my thoughts. After that, I checked my room to see if anything had changed. It seems nothing in particular had changed and it was properly kept clean. With Miduchi’s personality I thought she wouldn’t make a mess but I was relieved it was just as I imagined. Ah, I guess the brat would do the cleaning huh?

Suddenly I remember and checked the wooden box at the side of my bed and a number of rubber bags had decreased. Not to mention four bags of the new model have disappeared! Those two, in just a single month, and they should have been entering the dungeon as well..Not to mention they shouldn’t have had that much leeway these past few days. After all Bel is a frightening woman.

The normal type has decreased as well but it seems Basutorial and Angela are within the range of common sense. I switch the payment left in the wood box to my wallet while thinking how it’s a bit unpleasant that I can tell everyone’s circumstances like this.

Year 7445, Month 8, Day 1

One day later, today, I told all of the members of the reborn {Slaughterers} ahead of time to meet at 8 am in front of Boil Manor. Everyone has already finished breakfast. In front of everyone I announce the members of each group I discussed with Kamu last night and we moved to the vacant lot that {Sun.Ray} used. This one is more spacious after all.

“Out of Zenom, Miduchi, Toris, Bel, and myself, one of these five will be the leader of you all. The only one of us who can’t use magic is just Zenom but when Zenom is the leader I’ll have someone who can use magic go with him so there’s no need to worry.”

All of the members of the former {Sun.Ray} nodded. Everyone was able to calm down because the details of the teams were easy to predict, since it was something I discussed with Kamu and decided I was saved no one brought up any complaints. Since the quality of the magic stones you earn from in the dungeon are completely different I was worried about complaints but it seems it was needless worries.

In regards to training, Zenom and I were the ones who focused on beating the methods of the {Slaughterers} into them. In regards to magic, we're having them periodically use attack spells and get them used to using a single attack spell. It's only obvious but since the use of spells require mana and concentration, so the people who meet a certain level fundamentally only practice using healing spells. When it comes to adventurers they'll also add one type of attack spell to that, which they only practice it if they feel like it.

Normally even if it's training you don't do things like practicing attack spells. Since it'll expose your skills and above all else it's mentally exhausting. That's why, when you practice it's only obvious to do it in the dungeon when no one else is looking. However, to me their skills with magic don't matter at all so I chose to have them periodically use up half of their MP in order to increase the proficiency level with their spells instead.

Obviously there were some complaints about that but when I said, "The member of the original {Slaughterers} who's got the lowest skill with magic excluding Basutorial who just learned it is Gwine. If you can use it to attack faster and in more varied ways than her then I'll recognize your argument about exposing your skills. Hey, Gwine. Use a moderate level attack spell towards that rock and tree." and ordered her, then she immediately used, {Flame Bolt}, {Air Cutter}, and then finally one shot of {Flame Javelin}, after everyone saw her use all o three of those in at longest 5 seconds of concentration the complaints stopped. Gwine still has 18 MP remaining.

"Hey..She's 17 years old right?"

"Yeah, that's right. Three types at that speed even.."

"I'm, 25 years old but..if it's just {Stone Bolt} then I can use it even faster though. Three types is impossible. It's been quite a while since I stopped practicing arrows and since Javelin uses a lot of mana I haven't practiced it very much..It takes 10 seconds.”

“I’m 25 years old as well. If it’s just {Stone Arrow} then I can use it even faster but..”

“That’s the member with the lowest skill?”

“No, I was healed by them on the 7th floor but that time as well..”

“That’s astonishing.”

“Then, that Dark Elf, is even above that..”

“This level is the bare minimum line. Also, just as you know the {Slaughterers} don’t run away from monsters in the dungeon. If there’s something unexpected then it’s different but fundamentally we take on every monster we encounter. Including the room bosses all of them. That’s why attack spells are important. Healing spells are important as well but we consider them just as important as those. Those who can use magic should keep that in mind.”

While looking at surprised faces of the nearby members, I faced the members of the former {Sun.Ray} and continued my words.

“We even use magic sometimes when doing formation training. Of course those times we do it in the forest on the other side of the outer crater or depending on the case in the dungeon. However, since everyone hasn’t reached that level yet there’s no need to take into consideration cooperation training that uses magic yet. I guess so..when the entire party is able to clear through the 1st floor in 4–5 hours and only need to use healing spells 5–6 times or so, and roughly the same on the 2nd floor as well. Once you’re capable of doing this then you can aim for the 3rd floor I guess.”

“{Slaughterers}..”

“It all makes sense..”

“Just as Kamu said, I’m sure things were quite irritating for him in {Sun.Ray}.”

“After all they can do it..”

“There might already be people who have hard but the {Slaughterers} enter the dungeon in the morning and by the evening of that day we arrive in the teleport room on the 3rd floor. As expected the 4th and 5th floors take a bit more time but we use about half a day for each of those floors. Also, we fundamentally always get some proper rest every night. From the morning we entered the dungeon until the evening of the next day if we can reach the teleport room of the 5th floor, it's fine for you to think that's the minimum line for entering the team at the front line. Of course, we're defeating all of the monsters and room bosses we encounter along the way and gathering the magic stones."

Well, if they can seriously do this without freezing things in ice then I'll think about it. If I were to use the current {Slaughterers} members as the standard then Zenom is on the level of 7–8 people and at Toris's is on the level of 2 people or so level of spell users on the roles of attacking and healing, since Gwine's map is considerably useful they can probably manage it. Putting aside Zenom class, I can't imagine there's magicians on the same class as Toris rolling around here and there though so it's unlikely. As far as I know even among the top teams there aren't any.

Ah, I'm talking about mana amount. Putting it in terms of the level of magic special skills, then putting aside level 5, there's level 4 inside of all of the top teams. In terms of just level they're above Toris. Incidentally the most powerful magician in Baldukk among the adventurers other than the {Slaughterers} is old man Rozuwela who has his entire party made of combat slaves. He can use all elemental magics at level 5 and his void magic is even close to level 6, in terms of just level his abilities exceeded Miduchi the first time I met her. He's already over 40 and still active after all. In terms of MP his aggregate amount is 54. If it's him then he should have been able to sue {Cure All} since quite a while back.

In any case, just like this we spent the morning confirming our formations and had all of the members of {Slaughterers} learn the abilities of the former {Sun.Ray}.

Before anyone noticed the original {Slaughterers} kept the same name, the second party was named {Butchers}, and the third part was called {Sooner}. {Butchers} is also an unpleasant name but it's not as if I can't understand it but what in the world is {Sooner}. In that case wouldn't it be fine as {Slayers}?

Afternoon, when everyone was eating lunch Zulu, Angela, and Giberuti all lowered their heads to me saying “Please buy us back”. Toris said, “They’re too excellent of slaves for me. I’m leaving them to you.” as well as they requested of me with plenty of acting power that’s not even worth comparing to Basutorial’s ham acting, so after we finished eating, we went to the temple and I bought back the three.

On our way back from that, I asked what happened with their wages for last month and it seems they already received it from Toris yesterday. The amount was the same as what I paid them. Well, I guess so. Since there was a bit of time until the afternoon training, I thought of going to drink some tea with Miduchi and the slaves when I ran into a fellow I didn’t want to meet.

“Yo~ if it isn’t sub-Noble Greed that appears before my eyes? I’m glad to see you’re as shitty cheeky as usual. Show me your face for a bit.”

Viruhaima of {Verdure.Brotherhood} and Anderson of {Black.Topaz} were drinking tea at an open terrace cafe. How troublesome~

I told Miduchi, “order some appropriate tea and drink it. I’ll come after.” and sat down on an open chair at their table.

“Hey, you really managed to pull that off well, this bastard.”

“Really, I couldn’t even imagine that things would become like this..”

“Ah, one bean tea.”

I figured it was something like this. I order some bean tea from the waiter.

“I’ve heard the rumors. It’s already over for Rindobel and the others.”

“It seems Haruku and Bin were accomplices as well.”

It seems they want to hear the details from me. But, I just remained quiet without talking about anything.

“Well, my expectations completely missed their mark but..it’s quite troubling.”

“I think it’s somewhat fine since they took revenge for Geru. But, I’m amazed you did something so roundabout as handing them over to the knight group. Even though if you just kill them inside of the dungeon there would be no future trouble.”

Geru is the member of {Black.Topaz} that was lured out using the charms as bait. Even though it's someone who betrayed(?) them and entered another party she still mentions revenge..She's as soft as usual.

"That's the unpleasant thing about this guy. He doesn't overlook a thing or~ rather~, he's completely uncute~rather, he doesn't show any weaknesses. Really, he's a bastard you can't let your guard down with."

"In the end, {Sun.Ray} was absorbed by the {Slaughterers} huh..I'm sure you intend to make them into support for you all but..I can't believe you were aiming to absorb them."

My bean tea arrived.

"Ah, give me some roasted beans."

Since I only had a light meal eating some beans should be fine. Bean tea and roasted beans go together well after all.

"Listen!"

"Listen to us!"

I stare at their two faces.

"Wha..What is it..staring at me that much."

"What the, Anderson, are you getting embarrassed? Think about your age."

"Ha!? There's no way that's the case right!"

I laughed a bit and said "You promised not to say any complaints no matter what things up like right?" and took a sip of bean tea.

"This bastard, after all you were aiming to absorb them! I could have sworn, you planned to split them up from inside and after collapsing them, you would wipe them out..Shit."

"I won't complain over every little thing at this point. If I knew from the start then I would have tried to get a piece of it and pull out Haruku, Bin, Kamu, or Misu but since I promised after all, since I'm indebted to you as well I won't say anything at this point. Just.."

"Just?"

"I thought we'd say something just in case. We've decided to cooperate together. From here on out we're aiming for the 7th floor."

Ho~ Though after all that's what I thought. I guess this is a declaration of war then.

"Fu..I see now. I thought that might be the case. Since it seems like the two of you had been acquaintances long before the matter this time..Well, I'm sure it's something you can tell so I'll say it but starting tomorrow including my porter we'll be heading to the 7th floor of the dungeon with seven people. Since we're already used to it just the 7th floor is quite light for us there's no problem though."

I munch on my roasted beans after they came out while saying.

"Hmn, so you're trying to say it would be hard for us? Don't come crying later."

"So you have confidence. But it would be best if you don't underestimate us. Since we're going to find the treasure on the 7th floor before you."

There's no altars on the 7th floor~ Ah, there might be something like gems or ores but I don't feel like searching. I see, putting aside the ogres, the other top teams also try digging up ores in the dungeon. {Sun.Ray} was often digging up gold and silver ores as well. Feel free to take all the detours you want around ogres and kill time.

After that we just went over some random stuff and confirmed just the important points. I think it's probably not the case but whether they would cooperate with {Gehenna.Flare} as well. Just as I predicted they didn't have a relationship with them so I was a bit relieved. Well it's pretty much impossible for them to cooperate or get absorbed by another place. Just in case, I was curious about it.

Tomorrow we're aiming for the 7th floor without Toris, Bel, Zenom, or Ralpa, those four people.

Well, I'm sure we'll somehow manage.

Chapter 206: Sister-In-Law

Year 7445, Month 8, Day 4

After the seven of us arrived at the teleport room on the 6th floor around noon we just took a light shower before taking a reasonable break and then stepped foot on the 7th floor. Since it's necessary to properly make the teleport room on the 7th floor into a front line base, while the second and third parties, no, the {Butchers} and {Sooners} are starting over from the foundations on the upper floors I intend to do a number of round trips carrying in the various materials and luggage we need.

Zulu and Angela stand at the front and Gwine and Basutoral support them with spears. Miduchi accumulates damage with magic and bow and gives out instructions to everyone from behind. Giberuti and I carry the luggage while watching that from a bit of distance away. If it's up to three ogres then I can almost afford to watch safely. These guys have already been fighting ogres for close to a year. They're already considerably used to them. Giberuti has already passed through the 7th floor before as well so he doesn't seem to be showing any sort of fear towards the vicious looking ogres holding clubs.

Even Basutoral who was always nervous and afraid when he entered the {Slaughterers} can calmly deal with the movements of the ogres without overdoing things, Gwine is doing a good job of keeping track of Zulu and Angela's movements at the front as she keeps the ogres in check, and Miduchi is luring them into easy to attack positions.

If they can properly deal with three ogres with these numbers then there shouldn't be anymore problems with the 7th floor. After all, I guess the cause of last time was confusion after they were suddenly ambushed and lost all of the front line except for Angela huh...

Come to think of it on the occasion of taking short breaks this time they were always trying to setup two people as sentries. There's far too many unknown factors as to when, where, and how monsters will revive in the dungeon. Even if they have the main group sit with their backs together if they suddenly revive in the middle of the sentries then there's not much meaning to it, since it could result in a crisis from splitting up the forces I had them stop it. It's something that can be resolved if everyone just sits in a circle and keeps an eye out behind the backs of those across from them after all.

The cause of the last time was they were too focused on a single direction and let their guards down from behind. If they even had just one person watching behind they wouldn't have been ambushed. Since I was going to arrive in another dozen seconds and it was unknown if I was alone or not so Miduchi said they intended to confirm the moment I entered the range of the spell {Detect.Life}.

Since I'm making use of spells as well I can't say it loudly but I feel like they're relying too much on spells. Putting it frankly whether I was alone or not it wasn't a very big problem. If I was alone they could have just called out to me when I approached and if I wasn't they would have been able to tell after I got close.

In the first place the reason why everyone was hiding behind the rocks was because we had assumed that would be the case.

Close to evening, we arrived at the teleport room on the 7th floor.

We dig a hole in the ground and bury a bucket, make a foot bath, spread out a rubber cloth and spread it out on the raised ground to create the base for the shower. Then after cutting down some adequately thin trees near the entrance of the room and using those to make the frame of the shower we returned to the surface. We properly rested in our inns and the next day we carried even more materials.

Year 7445, Month 8, Day 5

We're carrying luggage again. This time we need to carry the rubber cloth that will act as the walls for the shower room and various types of tableware. We've already finished carrying in the stove so there's no need to worry about the kitchen. When we arrived in the teleport room on the 3rd floor that evening and the third party {Sooner} had setup camp. It's a total of 9 people including Ginger, Hisu, and the Faruergaz party, lead by Toris and Ralpha. Since the spot next to them was conveniently opened we decided to setup camp for tonight there as well.

"What is it? Since when have you been here?"

Why are you on the 3rd floor? Bel and the others were properly in the inn.

"Ah, Al-san. We've been camping here since the evening of the day before yesterday."

Toris replied to my question.

So when we arrived at the 5th floor {Sooner} was in the 3rd floor huh...Though I say that, it's an unthinkable speed for the previous {Sun.Ray}.

"What about injuries?"

"One person got a bone fracture in their leg, after that it was three people with stabs and cuts to the arms and legs or so."

Ralpa replied.

If it's a bone fracture then as long as they have Toris who can use

{Cure Serious} then they can recover to being able to move right away and since Ralpa and Faruergaz can use healing spells as well it didn't end in anything serious it seems.

"I see, how was the state of combat?"

"Ah, there's not much to worry about on that end. As expected of the former {Sun.Ray}. They're properly remaining cautious towards monsters and no one was afraid of them either."

"But it was after all just as we heard. It seems that they've even spent an entire day in the dungeon before without entering combat even once."

Since that reply was something I imagined I wasn't surprised.

"Also, on the map we confiscated the locations you can dig up ores were listed. What should we do? Should we aim for it?"

"It should be fine to just ignore the level of ores that can be found on the 3rd or 4th floors. Rather than that let them accumulate as much experience in combat as possible. There's only pitfall traps on the 1st floor so return to the 1st floor starting tomorrow. There's no need to push yourselves continuing to camp inside of the dungeon either. It's fine if you just fortify your formation and use {Audible Clamor} to lure monsters. If it's the entry tax then a couple of gnolls is plenty to earn it back right."

"I understand."

"It's fine if you just test out reorganizing the formations as you think is necessary against goblins and gnolls. It's fine to enter the rooms as well but make sure you're confident that it's definitely an easy win before you enter. Anything after that I won't say anymore."

"If it's the 1st and 2nd floors then if Toris and I are here then the room bosses are fun.."

When I glared at her she shut up. So she still didn't get it...

"Listen carefully Ralpa. Alright, I won't say it twice. The fact that you all can fight decently is something I've long since known, that doesn't matter at all. Think carefully about for what reason I've left these guys in your care. Also, why I still can't let you alone look after them as well."

I pulled Ralpa's ear and whispered to her. Ralpa made a frown from the pain but nodded unexpectedly honestly.

After confirming that I returned to the {Slaughterers} camp. It's right next to them though.

"Did Ral say something again?"

Gwine was combing her beard after washing her face with some water Miduchi made.

"Nn..Well yeah. It's nothing important. Rather than that let's eat."

I look at Giberuti who's stirring the soup while replying.

.....

Year 7445, Month 8, Day 7

While we were making progress with turning the teleport room on the 7th floor into a base by the time things started to get dark we returned to the surface. We went to the magic stone dealer right away to sell our magic stones and then I paid each member their bonuses. I told the three slaves that we'd be having dinner at the usual Murowa before sending them ahead to Shuni their inn. By the time we returned to Boil Manor the sky was considerably dark and the lights started to appear in the restaurants of Baldukk.

We returned to the inn, took a shower, and I was thinking of going to eat dinner but I still don't see Toris, Bel, Zenom, and Ralpa anywhere. Either they're still in the dungeon or since we got back late they've already gone ahead to eat.

Since it couldn't be helped I decided to go to Murowa together with Miduchi, Gwine, Basutorial, and Cathy but in Pegizu which is along the way we found Toris and the members of {Sooner}.

I stopped Gwine who was about to call out to them and after slowly shaking my head we went towards Murowa. It seems they've started to get it a bit. If it's like this then around now Zenom, Bel, and the {Butchers} should be eating somewhere as well.

I guess I must have been smiling since I was in a bit of a good mood. When Gwine was looking at me with a strange face I said, "It's fine so don't worry about it. Let's go." and started walking towards Murowa.

After finishing up our meals we returned to Boil Manor and I heard simple reports from the four who were being transferred. Miduchi was laying in my bed with some thinly sliced cucumbers stuck to her face. Since it's creepy when I told her to stop she said, "If I don't do proper maintenance when I'm still young in my teens then I'll be troubled 10 or 20 years later!" so I decided to ignore her.

The {Butchers} did nothing but continue combat and hunt monsters on the 1st floor these past six days it seems. While there were a considerable number of members with light injuries there doesn't seem to have been even a single serious injury. If you think about the combat potential then it's only obvious but I wonder if it was also largely Zenom's ability after being placed at the front line by Bel?

In terms of results they earned over 3,000,000 Z (3 gold coins) in magic stones these six days. That's about 500,000 Z (50 silver coins) per day in earnings. In terms of each individual persons cut, Bel, Zenom, and I each get about 300,000 Z. However, as expenses there's 540,000 Z for the entry taxes and 60,000 Z or so for food expenses, so I'm about 300,000 Z in the red. It seems they were gathering all of the magic stones from goblins as well, but well I'm sure that sounds about right. Bel was making a mortified face as she looked down and whispered "I'm sorry." before going silent.

I guess because he's the elder, Zenom paid in advance on the expenses but after looking at Bel like that with a kind expression he apologetically lowered his head and said to me, "Sorry that we ended up causing you some losses Al." However, he also whispered in a voice just I could hear, "Even then for that port, Bel earned some valuable experience. I'm sure she'll make good use of it."

Furthermore, while the members of {Butchers} earned more than they did during their time in {Sun.Ray} it seems they were making very satisfied faces. Most likely, they still remember the sensation of splitting up the profits from the 26 ogre magic stones we split up between the remaining seven of us in the first party when we went to the 7th floor. It exceeded just over 3,000,000 Z per person after all so it can't be helped.

In comparison {Sooner} not only experienced some heavy injured like bone fractures but they made an amount that barely didn't reach 2,000,000 Z. That's a share of 200,000 Z per person but since they only re-entered the dungeon three times the entry tax was half that at 270,000 Z as well as food expenses of 60,000 Z for a total of 330,000 Z. Even on this side I was about 130,000 Z in the red.

Well, I'm sure their abilities are lower than the {Butchers} after all and in essence the number of times they entered combat was probably low as well so that sounds about right.

Ralpa said, "Since I thought this would be the case from the first day I told Toris we should aim for ores on the 3rd and 4th floors.."

I gave the brat saying cheeky things a flick to the forehead while saying "It's fine if you don't worry about something like that. I already included this happening in my calculations from the start. It's fine if you just be aware of the fact that you're eating that much money." and laughed while Ralpa was holding her forehead.

Seeing that Bel and Toris both were making similar regrettable faces as they apologized. It's fine as long you understand.

Something on this level, it doesn't even add up to 1 magic stone from an ogre.

On the {Slaughterers} end we just passed through the 7th floor twice but since we passed through the ogre mage room both times we ended up with 39 magic stones from ogres and other mixed magic stones worth about 2,500,000 Z for total earnings of around 35,200,000 Z. It's a bonus of about 700,000 Z per person. I guess it's because I flicked her head, the four of them properly accepted it.

"I'll decide the next leaders when we're training the day after tomorrow. Thanks for your work."

And said that before ending the meeting.

.....

Year 7445, Month 8, Day 8

After I finished my running, I ate breakfast together with the three slaves and Miduchi and then returned to my inn. And then Rozural had come to the inn. It seems that he left the capital on a carriage early this morning.

Dangerous~ If it was a bit earlier then I wouldn't have been at Boil Manor but Kairugu's Inn.

"Ah, Al-sama! Mill-sama has returned! She arrived at the capital yesterday night and on her way back stopped by the store."

Oh~ so sister came back!

"And? The others, everyone from the village!? Are they safe!?"

"Yeah, according to what Mill-sama said everyone was safely able to return to Bakuddo."

I see, I'm relieved.

"The battle itself seems to have quieted down around the end of May and then it seems around the end of June the troops that joined the campaign gradually started to depart leaving just the defense troops. Since Mill-sama and the first knight group seem to have departed ahead of the master and former master so she said they probably still haven't arrived back in the village yet."

Mu, I guess that means father is the former master and brother is the master? Since he was always called Farne-sama it feels off but..because he lead everyone into the battle, I guess that means he was recognized as a full-fledged lord by everyone? Otherwise is it just my imagination? It doesn't matter either way.

"Can I meet with sister?"

"What are you saying. It's for that sake that I came here.

According to Mill-sana she has today and tomorrow off."

Rozural smiled and pointed to the back of the carriage. I guess he's saying to hop on. Then without restraint..Ah, that's right.

"Wait just a moment. I'll go though. I'm sorry for your trouble but since there's also the return I'll go on my own horse. But there might also be others who want to come to the capital as well. I don't think it will take very much time so wait just a moment."

I said that before entering the inn and calling out to everyone.

The ones going to the capital other than Miduchi and I are Zenom, Basutorial, and Cathy.

After we split ways with Zenom and the others at Greed Company we went to the headquarters of the first knight group just like that for the meeting. Sister came out right away.

"Al, have you been well? It seems you've grown a bit taller again.

Did Rozural go out of his way to call for you? Thanks...Are you Chizumagurol-san?"

Sister came out wearing just her under armor while talking in rapid succession and then looked at Miduchi who was holding the reins of our two horses next to me.

"Wa, Yes. It's nice to meet you, my name is Midu~ritto.Chizumagurol. Please call me Miduchi."

Miduchi's stiffened up. Are you an idiot? There's not a single good thing about being liked by sister.

"Hm~~n, it seems you're an adventurer together with Al right? Come with me to the back for a bit."

"Hey, sister! What do you intend to do!?"

Calling her to the back, is she a decades old delinquent? I can't relax thinking about it.

"Nothing in particular, I just thought I'd test her out a bit."

Don't screw around this shitty woman!

"Rather than something like that tell me about what happened in the battle. I've heard that no one died in action though."

"Really~ I'm not talking to you right now...Hey~ Midu-cchi, show me your skills."

Who's this Midu-cchi! Don't be giving her nicknames all on your own! Even Miduchi, look, she's withering back right.

Rozural is surprised as well.

"..Do you not have any confidence? If you want to get along well with me then come to the back. We have as many wooden swords as we need. If you don't like it then it's fine if you turn it down as well."

Mill raised her chin up a bit while glaring over Miduchi as she said it.

"..I'm in your care, "sister-in-law-san""

Miduchi pushed the reins of the horses into my hand and said while standing firmly by my side. You need to stop saying things that will go to the trouble of encouraging her as well.

"It's not like her chest is big enough to borrow~ thoughhya"

When I put in a retort a fist immediately came flying from sister.

I managed to avoid it at hair's breadth.

"Rozural! Hold down Al! Make sure he doesn't move a single step from there!"

After Mill ordered that of Rozural she yelled towards the headquarters of the first knight group, "Gahashu! Tove! Make preparations for a practice match! Open up the second training grounds!" Since Mill is ordering them that Gahashu and Tove are probably squires.

"Hey, don't joke around! Miduchi there's no need for you to accompany her doing stupid things either!"

I said that but the two of them were already not listening to what I say. Rozural grabbed my arm and said "It's an order from Mill-sama. Al-sama, please don't move from here." Of course it's not like I can't shake him off but as Miduchi calmly said "It's alright, it's not like I'll let myself get killed right" and walked off I just quietly watched that and let myself remain caught. ..Well, certainly she won't get killed. Since Miduchi's skill with the sword is pretty good as well even if it's sister who's always training with the first knight group everyday, it wouldn't be strange for her to win.

"Al-sama, it should be fine to leave them alone here. Mill-sama is just jealous because she feels like her toy has been taken from her."

While he remained holding on to my arm Rozural said that. I already know, something like that. That's precisely why I don't want to just quietly watch the shitty woman pick a fight with my woman over that stupid reason.

"Shit. Miduchi, if you're going to do it either way then beat her into the dirt! Also, sister can't use wind magic!"

As a result Miduchi couldn't win against sister. They fought three times and she lost once and somehow managed to bring things to a draw twice. I don't really know why but it seems that both sides didn't use any magic other than healing spells during the intervals between matches. Shit, if she wasn't using a wooden one but that sword then she might have won. In that case, sister probably would have been seriously injured though. If it's me I can fix it even if an arm or leg gets off, and I guess that's not the problem huh?

When Miduchi came back with her head down a bit she said,

"Ha..She's strong. All of my throwing knives and shuriken were avoided or hit down and when I tried to exchange blows with the sword she smoothly evaded and I ended being countered." Even though Miduchi's level has gone up quite a bit recently, that shitty woman though, I guess she's not just dazing out on the battlefield either. Come to think of it, before I noticed her level had gone up to 12. If I remember correctly before she dispatched at the end of last year it should have been 9. Even though she's not an adventurer she gained experience points at a frightening speed.

I wonder if she polished her skills in training and gained experience in live combat? Otherwise, the training of the first knight group provides a considerable amount of experience? Or maybe both? Well whatever.

"Are you satisfied now?"

When Mill returned with her under armor still dirty from exchanging blows with Miduchi I glared hatefully at her and she grinned and smiled as she started talking to Miduchi and not me.

"You're pretty good. But you still have a ways to go. If you can't win against me then "Hey! Miduchi is just an adventurer! There's no way she'd win so easily against a true knight of the first knight group!"

"..You be quiet. Lord Greed, I wasn't able to win today but next time definitely.."

"It's fine if you call me Mill. But you know Midu-cchi, it's no good for you to call me "sister-in-law-san" yet."

..Are these two idiots?

What did I come here to do again? Ah, that's right, I wanted to ask about everyone from the village as well as Kuro and Mary who should have been participating as members of the Webdos Knight Group.

Chapter 207: Anticipation

Year 7445, Month 8, Day 8

After hearing a conversation like they'd been doing some sports and thinking about some stupid things the details I heard from sister weren't all that far off from what I expected. The stage for the battle this time was a village called Myuze on the Eastern part of the Dirt Plains and it seems it was originally a village that was pioneered by Rombert Kingdom around 50 years ago or so. After that, the lord of the village changed around three times and up until a short while ago Devas Kingdom was in control of it. The dispatch this time was an invasion of that Myuze village.

The one in charge of the overall command was Viscount Kenudus the third company commander of the first knight group and the core forces this time were the second knight group and Webdos knight group. Other than that there was a number of smaller territories knight groups besides Webdos who's members didn't even add up to 300 people and the total forces added up to around 2,300 people or so.

The composition of the 2,300 people was around 200 people including retired knights who were permitted to be on horseback(More than half of those are former knights and lords of villages like brother, or even if they're not knights the relatives of lords and nobles like father), around 1,200 people including archers and infantry, then the remaining number was largely made up combat engineers, supplies, and those sorts of support units needed for setting up a military encampment from the second and fourth knight groups. These supply units as well as escorts and command of the combat engineers also end up needing infantry and commanders to oversee things as well.

From the first knight group including Viscount Kendusu who was acting as the commander and sister there was another 20 people dispatched. Half were knights and squires and then the other half were an exclusive supply unit with high mobility. Sister participated as an advisor for someone named Radoru who was a fourth or fifth company commander of the second knight group as they split the entire army into three groups and he was leading the right-wing. The dispatch unit that included Bakuddo village and the Webdos knight group was the core of the left-wing and the leader Sendhel. Webdos was the commander of the left-wing.

The various random additions like the knight groups of small territories which are difficult to take command of and the remaining units of the second knight group were all gathered and positioned in the center where Viscount Kendusu, two other true knights of the first knight group, and three squires took command over everything.

Around midway through February they arrived in the King's Direct Territory roughly 90 Km to the north of their objective location of Myuze village in Zango the capital of the Zangotto region which Count Jobu acts as governor of, there most of the army of Rombert Kingdom excluding a portion of units gathered and started training for about a month on the deployment. No matter how late they are by this point the Devas side would have detected the organization of an invasion army from Rombert Kingdom. About one month later the highest levels of Devas should have been conveyed the information.

After that, following a week long march, they arrived at the point roughly 10 Km north of Myuze village and setup an encampment in Bekkosu village which was the front line at the time. The army of Rombert Kingdom swallowed up the roughly 200 members of the second knight group that were stationed in Bekkosu village for defense and then finished up the organization of the invasion army.

Just before April, after Rombert Kingdom's army finished organizing itself they spent a week setting up a simple field encampment around 8 Km South-west of Bekkosu in a plains area that could act as bridgehead. By this point Devas should have already grasped the fact that Rombert's objective was Myuze village but since Karuhe village which was about 10 Km to the West of that was important as well they couldn't leave it alone. In the first days of April the Kingdom's army started moving 10 Km to the west from their objective of Myuze village then in order to deal a blow to Karuhe village they started marching to the South-west. Of course this was a diversion, their objective was limited to Myuze village.

Since Viscount Kendusu created a situation where he had to split up their important defense members he sent the combat engineer unit ahead to Karuhe village and for the time being showed an army on the scale of close to 1,000 people in the distance. The combat engineers waited for the time they were notified of before hand and then started withdrawing to the bridgehead at their fastest speed.

With a fixed difference in time, the combat members who were late to leave the bridgehead they had fortified started moving roughly 6

Km towards Myuze village in the South-East.

Obviously the defense forces of Myuze village on the Devas side intensely resisted this. Since the march was slow just like in the middle ages, it's only obvious the Devas side had long since been aware of it. The defense force was selected from the surrounding villages in Devas and they were sent to Myuze and Karuhe villages.

Since the Rombert side also read this, they had no choice other than to just split their defense forces as well.

On the Devas side the defense could be considered a success if the main army of the defense on an equal scale as the invading army gathers from somewhere and moves to Myuze village during the time they're somehow resisting the invasion and securing both villages.

On the other hand it's Rombert's victory if they're somehow able to force the defense forces into surrender and make the village into an occupied territory before Devas's defenses arrive.

In order to capture a base defended by an army in the 1,000s they need an army with equal mobility that's about three times the number. Rombert Kingdom's this army this time has over 1,200 people in just combat members. In order to force them into submission an army with equal mobility over just over 4,000 would be needed. Even if they temporarily divert some of the infantry into combat engineers, including the supply units they would need an army of close to 6,000 people. Just, Devas's army has a large number of conscripted soldiers so their mobility falls quite a bit behind Rombert Kingdom's army. Sister said that they would need even more than that.

There's records that the Emperor Otto the Second of the Holy Roman Empire commanded an army of 2,000 cavalry and 4,000 infantry with shields in the year 981 AD but Orth is just a bit above that, though since it falls behind the level of Japan during the warring states era, in order for them to take back Myuze village with power after it's fallen once there's no method other than moving the permanent army to exceed them in number by a certain amount.

I don't know whether or not they would come from something or other Gurizu the capital of Devas Kingdom which is several hundred Km in the south but I'm sure they would have to do the bare minimum organizing of it as well, even if they skip over the training they won't make it here in just a month or so. The Rombert side fully understood that and put it into their calculations. The average number of combat members in each of the villages that exist along Devas side of the front lines of the Dirt Plains is estimated to be around 200 from information gathered using spies and scouts up until now. Even if they were to get reinforcements from neighboring villages there's a large enough number to capture it all at once gathered.

They performed two attacks on Myuze village and during that time took a certain number of prisoners from the reinforcements trying to move from Karuhe village. A short while after the third attack the defense unit of Myuze village suggesting surrender.

It was in the middle of April.

The family of the lord of Myuze village even down to the women and children were killed in front of the villagers(Since they're the lord, if they reside there then their assets are confiscated, and unless they're from a considerably influential family a ransom is meaningless. And then, it was just a matter of them not being from an influential family), the remaining living members of the defense unit are employed as workers for the combat engineers and a register is made of them all as war prisoners.

When I tried retorting to sister how Rozural said something like, "The battle itself was suppressed around the end of May" this morning she said "It's just talk while stopping in restaurants on the way back. Since you never know who might be listening, we cover up the things we talk about outside." And then also said, "Make sure you cover it up when you talk about it outside for another six months or so as well. Rozural as well." I wonder if the schedule for a battle that's already ended is really that important of a point? No, I guess it's proof of the training given to the true knights of the first knight group huh?

After that a governor was dispatched and until they finish organizing the troops to occupy the village again they kept Devas in check while keeping an eye on things. The defense army that was believed to be sent by Devas Kingdom to both Myuze and Karuhe villages entered Karuhe village and after that didn't show any sort of movements towards recapturing it, then one month after that while leaving a slightly large defense unit it was confirmed they had started withdrawing. Around almost the same time negotiations for ransom started up.

Those whose ransom was successfully paid were released and then around the end of June the first knight group that sister belongs to started returning in order. The war prisoners whose ransom wasn't paid are pulled along when the second knight group returns to it seems they're still on hold for a short while longer.

Supposedly it seems there was a few of the knight ranking who were permitted to be mounted included so I can hold my hopes high. I don't intend to leave the position of head slave to Zulu so easily but there's no guarantee I would be able to confirm an even greater level of loyalty on top of being superior.

It seems that sister who was in the unit on the right-wing only knows the general movements of the Webdos Knight Group that was in the left-wing unit but it seems she wasn't interested in anything other than whether or not there was any damage to the Bakuddo village dispatch unit.

Obviously, she didn't even know about the existence of Kuro and Mary. She sure is a useless sister although it's not like I had told her about them before hand(It might have been fine to mention it before she departed last year but I didn't want to bother sister who's a true knight anymore than needed), so this is nothing more than me making complaints. From the start older brother is familiar with Kuro and Mary and they were in the same left-wing unit so sooner or later I should get information on their end as well.

In any case it's good that sister and the people from Bakuddo village were all safe. I'm a bit worried about Kuro and Mary but since it was an invasion strategy that ended in success against a village the chances of them being taken prison are close to zero. In the first place since Kuro and Mary are both Free People they should still be in their third year as squires. If I were to state my own wishful observations then they'd probably have been deployed in one of the supply units as guards for Webdos knight group and been on the battle field with the feeling of a field trip. No, it's not like I know though.

The casualties for Robert's side this time was about 40 people and about 50 seriously injured. Though I say that there were only about 10 people who suffered injuries serious enough to urgently put their lives in danger and within a few days after the enemy surrendered sister fully healed them it seems. It seems that the largest number of casualties were infantry members of the second knight group that was in the central unit.

In comparison the casualties on Devas side supposedly exceeded 100.

The number they captured as prisoners was around 400. Among those over 200 were seriously injured to the point of not being able to move so it's a great victory. It seems they managed to capture around 200 prisoners from their supply units. Since horses and cattle can't easily be used on Orth the number of people in the supply units is considerably high. Of course, it's not as if there are no horses or cattle used for the supply units but obviously they're confiscated.

Since I was able to hear the general summary, I congratulated her on her return once again and excused myself from the first knight group's headquarters.

I returned to my company and while I was killing time playing with Anna and Hanna, Zenom returned carrying various smoked meats. He shared a bit of them with me and I found something unusual.

Analogue cheese made from soy. It seems to have the name {Kazotto}.

Since bread exists, yeast is known but the yeast for even something like this had been discovered? When I tried eating it, just as expected from something smoked, it had a {smokey} fragrance and was quite literally cheese.

While Miduchi and I were showing admiration for the smoked analogue cheese and it was just as Basutorial and the others returned, after letting him have a bit he started persistently questioning Zenom on where he bought it. It seems he thought of mixing it into the sausages. It seems Basutorial went to buy the pig's bowels to use as sausage casings and a saw. Since the structure of a meat mincer is simple I taught him as far as I could remember but it seems he intends to make one. If you were to draw a design of knives like cross shaped shuriken that revolve around or a plate with lots of holes in it then make a request from a blacksmith they might be able to make it.

The problem is the roll part but I told him if no matter what he can't make it to let me know. It might become practice for the spell {Transmute.Rock.To.Mud} but doing that is really exhausting. I can put in the effort to make the parts for a gun but I'd like to be pardoned from concentrating several hours just for the sake of making the roll for a meat mincer, if you intend to make it into a business then it would be more convenient to have someone else other than me manufacture it as well. But in the end, I feel like I'll have to make the first one.

Around evening we returned to Boil Manor with the three who had reserved seats on the public carriage to Baldukk.

Year 7445, Month 8, Day 10

"Then, we'll finish today's training here. Starting tomorrow we're entering the dungeon again but this time the leader we send from the {Slaughterers} to the {Butchers} is Toris. Miduchi will act as assistant. Bel will lead {Sooner} and Zulu will be the assistant."

After seeing everyone nod I declared the end and ordered the slaves to gather the wooden swords and spears for training use.

When I returned to my inn there was contact from "Slave Store, Ronslail". It seems the slave market will be opened in the capital around the 25th of this month. So if I go around the 27th then they should have the combat slaves somewhat prepared. Yeah, the next after that next time we enter the dungeon ends on the 25th so it's convenient for us as well.

Zenom, Ralpha, Gwine, Basutorial, Cathy, Angela, Giberuti we eat dinner together with those eight while Basutorial and Giberuti are having a lively conversation over the sausage making they're challenging. Basutorial and Giberuti went out to the capital again yesterday and investigated the producers of analogue cheese while buying a considerable amount of it. After saying that minced meat and cheese have a good affinity he said he'd prove it and made some prototypes to feed to everyone while asking opinions.

Unexpectedly Angela who is usually reserved showed interest in the deliciousness of cheese and was eating more than Ralpa. Of course, Ralpa refused to lose as she showed off her gluttony as well but since Basutoral's already realized there's no meaning in feeding Ralpa, he was busy trying to protect the failed hamburger mixed with cheese and bacon with cheese on top of it.

Furthermore, as far as they've investigated only a few small companies make analogue cheese and the amount produced isn't very high either.

"If business gets on track would you buy out one of the companies?"

Basutoral's face was serious as he asked that and I almost nodded to it. It's fine if it's cheap but it's not like there's only one of them so it's not something that can be monopolized either. It's plenty if you can just stock up on the product. Since there's several producers he can purchase from there's not much meaning in buying the company itself I'm sure.

Rather than that(It would be better to educate Catherine into the head of the sausage factory or in charge of the sales store, since I'm sure slaves will be necessary as well, you need someone to use them right?) and I had trouble holding myself back from commenting on their household affairs.

Well, it's also possible to leave a factory or store in the hands of a slave as well but it seems that slaves that can do calculations for several 100,000 or 1,000,000 Z on the level of a company are even more expensive than combat slaves. If possible if Catherine can do something like that it would be a big help though.

While I'm at it, maybe we should just buy a number of normal slaves when I buy combat slaves at the end of the month. Ah, No, I guess it's not too late after the circumstances are in place for the factory and the store huh...

"It seems like {pizza} can already be made right? Even {cheese dog} or {cheese burger} might work.."

While I was thinking like that Ralpa was drawing up her own rose-colored dreams on her own but that sort of small business doesn't matter at all. It would be far more profitable to mass produce sausages and wholesale them and incomparable to that. Also, putting aside {pizza}, wouldn't the names be {kazotto dog} and {kazotto burger}?

"That's enough of that discussion already. Since we're leaving matters regarding the {sausages} to Basutorial, if you have something to discuss over it then do it with him. Rather than that, in regards to tomorrow but"

After gaining everyone's attention I continued my words.

"If we carry in luggage once more then we should be finished making the base on the 7th floor. I'm thinking of having everyone fight against ogres for a bit and if we're in good condition we'll take a look at the 8th floor."

Everyone's faces tensed up and they were also grinning.

These greedy fellows.

I'm sure they're thinking that if the magic stones of ogres on the 7th floor is that value then the 8th floor is even higher

right?

Something like that is already obvious.

Of course, it's not like we're going to explore the 8th floor.

We're just going to take a look at it.

If possible then I want to see what kind of monsters are in the passages, just that.

No, just confirming what's going on with the passages.

I guess it's fine if it's just Gwine and I huh?

Chapter 208: Into The 8th Floor

Year 7445, Month 8, Day 13

We arrived at the teleport room on the 7th floor(I had been calling it the "teleport crystal rod" but while late I noticed other adventurers were calling it the teleport crystal) around evening.

We lowered our luggage we had been carrying and were finally able to take a breath.

This time we passed through the desert room of the 7th floor but a group of large brown colored lizard monsters called {Kuraguzado} came out. Of course, the instant I thought it was our first time seeing them I froze and killed them without waiting to see what happens. The magic stones were about 30,000 each and while they fall quite a bit behind ogres there were 14 of them so they should be around 3,000,000 Z. They were some good earnings. When I Identified the corpses just as expected they had almost no MP and didn't have any magic special skills so it seems the ice was the right answer.

Starting with the small tableware shelves and placing various miscellaneous goods, spare blankets, soap types, buckets for laundry in their fixed locations, while watching Giberuti start making preparations for dinner I had Angela massage my feet while soaking them in the foot bath. Furthermore, in regards to soap there's proper soap produced through the oils of plants and animals as well but it's not of a very good quality. Recently we've putting several of these berries from something called the Soap-tree into a net and using that. I feel a bit like it's returning to the ancient times but since this still seems to be of a better quality as soap recently we've completely moved over to this. Whether we're washing our hair, faces, bodies, tableware or laundry we're making use of these for all of it.

It seems Zenom's finished his shower. I thank Angela and after adding more hot water to the shower bucket took one myself. It's fine to directly use magic from my hand to take a shower as well but it's unpleasant having to concentrate mentally while taking a shower so if we have the facilities then this is better.

Following me was Ralpha and then around the time Gwine was finished taking her shower dinner was ready. Everyone had a large serving of leafy vegetable salad along with the main dish of a pork fry and then after Basutorial the slaves started taking showers in order as well before we started discussing things for tomorrow. After confirming all of the usual attention points in the end, "Tomorrow morning, we'll enter the 8th floor once just to take a look. The main stream exploring is still a ways ahead. Don't hold your hopes too high."

I particularly said it towards Ralpha. After confirming she had obediently nodded we went to bed early.

Year 7445, Month 8, Day 14

Just before 5:00 in the morning I awoke to Giberuti preparing breakfast. After leaving my blanket, Basutorial and Angela had already woken up and we're sitting on the bench..and I guess they were the final lookouts huh? One of them must have woken up Giberuti as well.

"Do you want to take a shower?"

"Ah, can I request one?"

Since they should have been keeping lookout since around 3:00 am, they probably want to take a hot shower and properly wake up pretty soon. Soon after I climbed out of my blanket and went to the shower room while scratching my ass and resisting yawns, went up the stairs in the back of it and filled the bucket with slightly hot water. Basutoral entered the shower room right away and it seems he's taking off his clothes.

I put some cold water in the washing bucket and use that to wash my face. Zenom, Ralpa, and Gwine started to wake up hearing the sounds of washing and showering. Everyone's started to put their equipment on. After I put my combat boots on I put on the under armor of my rubber protectors which have recently started to get a bit small and fix them in place with bands. As expected it's started to reach it's limit~ I made them with quite a bit of room but it's already gotten pretty tight. It's about the time to re-make them.

Just going off of height it would be a perfect fit for Miduchi or Angela but since they're women there's also the problem of figure.

Ah, you can't just not use the body parts of it. Since all of the arm and leg parts are connected to the body parts in some way or form. Toris isn't all that different from me in height but his legs are longer and Basutoral's race is considerably slender so it doesn't match up at all. Giberuti might be able to wear it..Though

I don't intend to let him join the combat so there's not much meaning huh? If he wants it it'd be fine to give it to him though.

After that we ate the breakfast prepared by Giberuti and after confirming our equipment, grabbed on to the teleport crystal.

"It's just limited to looking at the state of the 8th floor. In the case that there's monsters right nearby I'll earn time so everyone return. Don't try to fight. If you carelessly try to move you'll get in the way of my spells after all. Then, let's go..Mikofurie!"

The room we teleported into was like a 20 meter in diameter hemisphere ellipsoid with no exit. A room like a short wine glass on it's side. Single grain walls and up until the roof the feel is almost like being inside of a cave similar to the 1st floor. While we were still in the middle of the room holding the crystal rod after teleporting in the six of us immediately scattered while going on guard with our weapons but let alone monsters there wasn't even a single bug crawling along the ground.

For the time being, it seems the worst case of teleporting into the middle of a group of monsters wasn't the case, so everyone is looking around restlessly at the first glance of the 8th floor. The air is stagnant and it's just a bit difficult to breathe. I thought about using wind magic to create some air but since it seemed like it would raise the atmospheric pressure I decided to stop.

"Somehow this is a bad omen.."

Zenom whispered. For sure.

"Shall we return huh.."

After looking around for a bit I whispered that and then confirmed the arrow on the pedestal before writing "O N E" on a rock that stands out beyond that with a brush, then we returned to the 7th floor.

The next place we teleported into was complete darkness.

Instantaneously I used my Unique Ability Identify and at the same time used the spell {Light} on a rock that appeared in the sight.

We're surrounded by walls again! or at least just as I was thinking that I noticed that we were just close to the dead end of a hallway. There's nothing that resembles a monster in the range the light reaches. I can't see any suspicious silhouettes in the direction the hall stretches out using Identify vision either. It seems the hall stretches out far enough that even Identify vision can't see all of it. It's completely beyond the effective range of the spell {Detect.Life}.

The walls have the same grain and just the same as the 1st floor it's like a cave up to the ceiling but the air is moderately dry and while there's no wind that can be felt it isn't unpleasant and difficult to breathe either. The width of the hall is around 20 meters and I guess the highest point of the ceiling is around that as well? Almost like a slice of high kamaboko I guess.

While we can't see any monsters, there's small millipedes, centipedes, and some kind of strange bugs crawling around here and there. If it's just this many bugs then they've been around up until now as well but it might just be my imagination but the number seems quite high? or at least that's what it feels like maybe.

"It's dark."

"So we suddenly entered a darkness area huh..And, North is that way."

Ralpa points in the direction the hall stretches out.

On each of the floors from the 2nd floor up until the 6th floor there was a very small portion of each floor made up of dark areas that has walls with the same grain and the walls don't give off any light. Though I say that the halls are usually only at most about 100 meters so they aren't anything special. Even if we carefully proceed down them it doesn't take more than using the spell {Light} a couple times to pass through. I wonder if this is similar to those areas. We call these sorts of areas "darkness areas".

Of course there's close to light at all but it seems that Basutoral and Zulu can see slightly with their special skill {Night Vision}.

After that it seems like the areas connected to the darkness area which give off light enters so it's hard to call a true darkness as well. Of course, if the distance increases quite a bit then even if it's with {Night Vision} you won't be able to see anything.

"What should we do? I've been using {Mapping} since the start so it's still effective but"

"Suddenly starting from a darkness area is just a bit. Shall we reenter one more?"

After checking the arrow on the pedestal of the crystal rod we wrote "Γ√4" in the direction it pointed.

We checked the surface of the teleport crystal and after confirming it's started flickering with the incantation again we all grabbed on to it. After confirming everyone was holding it I chanted the incantation and we returned to the 7th floor again. Even though we returned after only a few minutes Giberuti didn't stop cleaning things up. It's not particularly an unusual occurrence after all.

For the third time and we teleported into the middle of a hall.

Walls with the same grain the ceiling is properly giving off light as well. It seems we've entered a normal area this time for sure and I was a bit relieved. Of course, we weren't surrounded by monsters either.

"Hmph, it's normal..Ah, North is that way."

After Gwine confirmed the direction Ralpa pointed she just focused on looking down the directions the hall stretches out. It seems she's memorizing the slight rocks protruding out. I confirm the pedestal again and then write the next "three" ahead of it before checking the ends of the hall.

Mu, it's only slight but it seems there's some air flow. Judging from this state the hall probably continues down for quite a distance. Since the darkness area from just now was a dead end we couldn't feel the flow of air but the hall this time has a capacity that feels like it might be connected to a monster room somewhere.

"It seems like there's a slight air flow as well. It's proof monsters are wandering around. Maruso, do you smell anything?"

Zenom asked Angela but Angela had her eyes closed and was trying to pick up scents before that.

"I can smell an unfamiliar scent from that direction. I think it's probably monster shit or something though."

Angela pointed down one of the directions of the hall the air is coming from while replying. Of course~ if she can tell some kind of odor then that direction is the only obvious one.

I guess because he's tense from entering a new floor Basutorall swallowing sounded awfully loud.

"Since it's the long-awaited chance let's at least see what kind of monsters there are. Then, shall we try going in that direction?

Carefully now. Since we don't know what kind of traps there might be proceed cautiously. We'll advance with the {Double Trail}, Angela and Ralpa will take the lead..ah, No, after all let's just confirm if there's any traps around here. After confirming there's no traps we'll lure monsters to us."

Since it can't be helped rushing I didn't use {Find.Trap}, {Detect.Snare}, or {Perceive.Pitfall}. Ralpa and Angela are hitting the floor with the pole we prepared before hand. Gwine and Basutoral are walking around poking places with their spears as well. If I don't have them do this occasionally their skills might dull after all.

"Try prodding the walls up to around our height as well. It would be unpleasant if there was another strange trap after all."

Before long we had completely investigated up until around 50 meters ahead from the teleport crystal and confirmed there were no traps.

"Alright, up until around 10 meters in front of us and around 40 meters behind past the teleport crystal is safe regardless of if we jump or roll. We'll take on the enemy with the {Reverse Triangle} centering around Zenom with me at the summit. Let's go."

Ralphai s on the left side of the front row, Zenom is in the center, Angela on the right side, and everyone is lined up with around 5 meters between. The second row has a distance similar to the first made up of Gwine and Basutorial. Then the third row takes formation around me while I slowly use the spell {Audible.Clamor} about 50 meters ahead on a random rock I could see with Identify vision.

A loud noise almost like a tire rupturing echoes through the 8th floor.

When I was looking further down the hall with Identify vision and I could see several specks with wings coming approaching in the distance.

【Male/1/12/7444.Giant Cave Cricket】

【State: Good】

【Age: 0 Years Old】

【Level: 6】

【HP: 65 MP: 1(1)】

【Strength: 10】

【Speed: 35】

【Dexterity: 5】

【Endurance: 5】

There's several dozen of those and they're springing through the center of the hall heading over here.

It doesn't seem like they have any sort of special skill and while it says giant in the end they're just crickets. They aren't much of an opponent. If she does it calmly then even Gwien in the middle row can use magic so it should be possible for the five of them to deal with it.

Well, if I just send one shot of {Fire Ball} in that will probably wipe out a few of them assuming it doesn't take out half or so and that should increase the light as well...

"Something is approaching.."

"Yeah, rabbits? It feels like they're leaping along the ground."

"They seem like grasshoppers."

It seems Basutoral can see them.

When they approached to around 200 meters ahead I sent five shots of {Fire Ball} with missile added flying towards them. It seems the ones that took direct hits and were in the immediate vicinity of that died instantly.

Remaining is..eight more huh?

"I'll provide backup as suitable. Kill them!"

.....

The giant crickets had a height of close to 80 cm. However, their

HP wasn't anything special so almost all of the individuals died from just a single good hit from the tomahawk, broad sword, and spear.

The magic stones had a value of around 10,000 each so they're pretty good earnings, even the experience points was close to 400.

Since it was a waste of skipping over the magic stones of the ones

I finished with {Fire Ball} we waited for around 20 minutes to see if anymore monsters would approach and then after confirming if there were any traps along the way with spells we gathered them all.

"Now then, Al. What are we going to do? Shall we try proceeding a bit?"

Zenom asks me but I had no intention of proceeding from the start.

Today wasn't for exploring but just checking the state of things on the 8th floor. There's no guarantee that crickets are the only monsters either.

"No, we won't proceed today. It's plenty if we can confirm the state of the 8th floor after all."

I crack my neck to the sides while replying.

"Are we going to lure more monsters again?"

"We aren't doing that either. Even after waiting this long nothing came along. Either there's nothing near here or if there is it's insanely slow like slimes. We should return once and try going to a different area."

I said that urging everyone along and we returned to the 7th floor.

We spent the entire morning teleporting into a total of seven locations and entered combat ten times. Among those five times was with the crickets, three times was with {Giant Mantis}, which were once again basically just huge praying mantis. Twice was against {Giant Millipedes} which were huge millipedes that reached a size of around 3 meters in all. It's all just bugs. The values of the magic stones were all pretty similar as well.

Honestly speaking, I thought Ralpa, Gwine, Angela or the women would at least raise a scream from all of the insects but there's no one with that sort of cute side among us. Only really Basutoral who made a pretty unpleasant face when disassembling them to gather the magic stones.

I only thought they were pretty disgusting when I saw the huge crickets as well but I guess because they're too big they don't really seem disgusting as bugs. The scythes of the praying mantis and the poison from the millipedes require plenty of caution but since we were able to confirm they aren't very powerful enemies at all you could say we've achieved our objective for this time.

Starting from the afternoon we went back to fighting ogres on the 7th floor again.

After thinking about it once again taking on ogres is a lot more tense. They're a lot more dangerous as well, since trying to lure them over is as expected scary they have the flaw of having to explore the halls to search for them but the value of their magic stones is completely different and the amount of experience points for each individual ogre is higher as well.

After all I guess we should spend until the end of this year gaining experience on the 7th floor and leveling up?

If we do it until the end of this year then putting aside {Sooner}, if the {Butchers} buy some combat slaves and we have Ginger or Hisu switch parties then Kamu might be able to act as leader after all...No, that is...

It was when I was eating dinner together with everyone that night while thinking about those sorts of things.

"If it's like that then wouldn't the boss of the rooms on the 8th floor be easy? Since they say that the first King of Rombert founded the country on treasure from the 8th floor, tomorrow, how about we try going to a room?"

The thoughtless one dyed blonde suggested. I thought you would say that for sure.

"It might not be a bad idea to take a look at the state of things.

I want the mapping information for the 8th floor as well."

The woman with a small build who's recently gotten into the hobby of playing with her beard agrees. Certainly the mapping information we gained for the 8th floor today is close to nothing after all. I thought you would say that as well.

"Even if you say that but..as expected wouldn't the strength of the room boss be on a completely different level? Even today we fought against three types of bugs but there might still be even more. Wouldn't it be best to go to the rooms when we have even more people?"

As expected of Angela, she's a good slave who's properly undergone my training. Not to mention since it seems that starting from the 8th floor only the first King and his allies had stepped foot there. Since it seems that the first knight group's investigation party had made it to the 7th floor before. I doubt we can be too careful no matter how cautiously we proceed on the 8th floor.

"It's just as Angela said. In the first place, look at Zenom and Basutorial. They properly understand the objective this time. As proof of that they aren't saying to do unreasonable things like you all right? We're not doing it. This time it's just for investigating. Tomorrow we'll just spend the morning luring monsters over and fighting again."

In the first place, up until the 7th floor while it was fragmented we at least had the information on the primary monsters that appear on each floor. Think carefully about that.

Even though we've only seen a few different types of monsters I'm amazed they could say we could manage the 8th floor. Even though we still don't know much at all but if at least it's not a time when Miduchi is around it's too frightening to go even further inside.

Also, the problems with the 8th floor isn't just monsters right?

Chapter 209: Expensive Shopping

Year 7445, Month 8, Day 15

Again, we teleported into the 8th floor from the morning.

The first monster we ended up luring on the 8th floor this morning was a {Giant Mantis}. It died from one hit of Ralpa's {Flame Arbalest}. Bugs sure are weak to fire. Gwine ended up burning it to death with {Flame Thrower} as well. After their wings catch fire they go up in flames in an interesting way, stop moving right away and die. The smell of burning proteins spreads around the surroundings but I guess the reason it isn't even the slightest bit appetizing is because it's from bugs.

Since we've already found out that burning them to death makes it easier when we go to disassemble them and collect the magic stones, it might be good to center on using fire magic from here on out.

Thinking like that since Toris can't use fire magic he have bad affinity with the 8th floor.

And then once again today we repeated teleporting into the 8th floor countless times until close to noon, since there was no change in the types of monsters that come out it was just as we were getting sick of them already.

In terms of time it was probably just as were finishing our last monster calling before lunch, it was that sort of time when the fourth type of monster appeared.

When I saw it from the distance using Identify vision I doubted my eyes.

That is~ isn't it a {Scavenger Crawler}!?

Furthermore there's even 5 of them!

Even if I try identifying if it's the same thing I've seen countless times in the boss room on the 1st floor. However, it seems these {Scavenger Crawlers} have lived quite a while, both their age and level were a bit high. On average they were level 15. The height is 3 meters and their girth has a diameter of around 80 cm, things like that are running over here at about the speed of an adult. Zurorororo!!! and you can hear the sound from them dragging their bodies along.

The passage this time turns to the right about 300 meters ahead but during the time I was looking at the identify window they've approached by about 50 meters.

"Somehow I hear an unpleasant sound.."

"This sound..{Scavenger Crawler}?"

"After all it seems they were in other places..This scent is that of {Scavenger Crawler}!"

"Shit..They're too far so I can't see them.."

"..Be quiet..It's not just one! There's a lot of them! Al, we're depending on you!"

I guess the electricity I used like in the past is good. Since it seems like there's multiple targets I used the spell {Chain Lightning}. Only the two in the rear were remaining. However, it seems they've weakened quite a bit from taking the electricity. Just like that when I tried using Identify on them their HP had cut 70 remaining.

"Hmn, it seems they've been weakened considerably. Basutoral, finish them off."

As they approached us Basutorial stabbed them with his spear just as I ordered and the two remaining died. They have high levels and there's their special skills as well so as usual the experience points they give is a lot but it feels like the value of the magic stones were higher than usual? or at least a little bit since they were 7,000 or so each. However, for 5 {Scavenger Crawlers} to appear at once..If it was a party with no flexibility in their mana they'd be on the route to getting wiped out. It was the same for the ogres on the 7th floor but it seems it would be best to think there's no room to relax on the 8th floor either.

Since the smell was terrible I left the dissection up to Angela but since she was wincing from the bad odor the {Scavenger Crawlers} give off as well there were tears welling in her eyes. When she handed the five magic stones over to me with a pale face I thanked her for her work and put them into my rubber pouch along with the feelers we collected from all of them.

We returned to the 7th floor and when I gave her the right to the first shower she seemed a bit happy.

Year 7445, Month 8, Day 16

We returned to the surface in the evening. Starting this time we cleared out the ogre mage room on the 7th floor once a day so our earnings are huge. We had a total of 71 magic stones from ogres. Adding to that the magic stones from the 8th floor have a decent value as well so including it with the earnings up until the 6th floor and it largely exceeded 65,000,000 Z. Additionally we'll sell the feelers of the 5 {Scavenger Crawlers} to the drug shop as well.

That isn't even 100,000 Z in total.
However, everyone is quite pleased.
I pay out the bonuses to the members of the {Slaughterers} and take the reports from Toris and Bel about the {Butchers} and {Sooner}.

"I'm sorry..That is.."

"Umm..I'm very sorry.."

Of course it was that state of things last time. I'm sure the losses will continue for a while. Most likely, won't it start to show some profit around the time they get to the 4th and 5th floors? But you know, on {Sooner}'s end Rodrick and the combat slave he owns Karimu both leveled up this time and reached 9.

You all had that sort of period as well and if you were to ask me even right now is something like an extension of that...Though that's same for me as well.

"Don't worry about being in the red. What's important is gaining the experience and learning things from leading them after all. It's a weird way of putting it but you could say they're all teachers of you all I've sent in as leaders. It's only obvious that the fee for the course is somewhat expensive right?"

Right, they're teachers that it's possible they'll teach you through example. I'm sure you'll experience scary and painful things as well. You might even suffer serious injuries, depending on the case you might lose your lives. More or less everyone who enters the dungeon has that sort of resolve. If were to say some extreme logic then in the case a powerful opponent appears and even if they suffer damage then...

Since everyone can earn experience that connects to the future that amount is chump change and not a waste at all.

Of course, I don't want anyone to die though. Whether it be the {Butchers} or {Sooner} they're all people that have relationship with me. I'm sure they want to take every chance they can get for promotion and I want more members who can get promoted to come out as well. Obviously, right now I want to put priority on the members of the {Slaughterers} gaining experience, but it's no big deal, I don't mind if they're overtaken.

"Now, everyone let's go and eat. But for tonight just avoid any heavy drinking. Tonight, when everyone returns I want to talk about things from here on out including the 8th floor."

After I said that the seven of us excluding those on leave went to eat.

After 8 pm all of the {Slaughterers} gathered in my room in Boil Manor and we reported things about the 8th floor. Since we don't have any proper information on the monsters, I declared that for the time being we'll take the safe route and focus on luring monsters into the halls of the 8th floor as we grasp their characteristics and types. We'll continue this until at least the {Butchers} can reach a level where they're fine without anyone being dispatched from the {Slaughterers}.

Also, around the end of this month I'll be able to buy a number of combat slaves so in that case I should be reduce the number of members dispatched to both the {Butchers} and {Sooner} by two. Nothing can be helped by hurrying, I told them that right now rather than hurrying ahead we'll properly gain some experience and strengthen our combat forces so we can take on any opponent that appears. After all even Rombert the First gave up on this 8th floor of the dungeon. Though I say that, it's probably not because he was blocked by a powerful enemy he couldn't win against but because he got his hands on a large treasure I'm sure.

Starting from this three day break I'm eating breakfast and dinner together with {Sooner} on the first day and then eating breakfast and dinner together with the {Butchers} on the second day. The third day is with the {Slaughterers}. Since I'll be dispatching to their parties as well. I need to properly maintain contact with them.

Since today is the first time I'm together with everyone in {Sooner}. This time Bel was the leader and Zulu was the assistant but I wonder how everyone in {Sooner} felt about her leadership. Since we ended up returning late I wasn't able to sell the feelers from the {Scavenger Crawlers} at the drug store so after doing my running I told Bel that I would stop by the drug store to sell the feelers on my way to the restaurant.

When I arrived at the restaurant Bel and Zulu were sitting next to each other while saying something to everyone around them. Since I arrived at the place a bit late, I quietly sat down at the end while thinking. It might be good to ask Zulu who was acting as assistant and it's something I obviously need to do. However, I wonder how everyone else thinks about it? I guess I'll try asking Rodrick who's sitting next to me huh? No, I should stop with that. I should only make decisions based on the results from the reports of the person them self and the assistant. It's practice for myself as well.

"Ya~ good morning, it's my first time in this restaurant but what's good in the morning?"

I asked Rodrick who was sitting next to me in a quiet voice.

"Ah, Gree..Al-san! Good morning. Though it was on the 1st floor, we defeated 18 room bosses this time! I guess even we can manage things when we try them."

No, I already know the result. Rather than that what's delicious?

The bacon and eggs you're eating? It seems be half-done and that looks pretty good as well.

"That's right. And, is that goo"Ah, Al-san! Everyone, listen well?

The reason why we {Slaughterers} were able to earn so much every time we enter the dungeon, I'm sure you already know but there's a reason to it. Previously we all were trained by Al-san just like you are right now."

It seems Bel couldn't hear my talking from the edge of the table.

"Previously, I think Toris said it as well but the {Slaughterers} method of clearing the dungeon is fundamentally different form other parties. Just as the name of the {Slaughterers} represents we cut down everything that appears in front of us.

As a result we've gotten used to the combat and we can travel down the shortest route with no need to go to the trouble of taking detours. Please think that the first standard is clearing through the 3rd floor in half a day. For that sake the 1st floor is just a matter of around three hours. We defeat all of the opponents along the way, and no matter when and what appears, we can clear through the 1st floor in three hours. Until we reach that stage we won't be going to the 2nd floor."

I'm sure everyone's already heard this discussion a number of times right..No, they're all listening pretty enthusiastically. Even Zulu is nodding. You sure are an actor~ I guess the same bacon and eggs as Rodrick is good. I called over the waiter and ordered bacon, eggs, bread, and some soup. There's not a large difference in the breakfast menu of any restaurant. It seems that this place doesn't have any white bread sitting around.

Bel is eating while explaining just how important not running from combat is to everyone. Since {Sooner} falls behind in abilities it's particularly important to strongly burn it into their consciousness so it can't be helped. Being urged on by Bel, Zulu occasionally adds in his own opinions. However, it's a bit unpleasant how at the edges of everything he says he adds "we need to be grateful to master" to try and dress it up as a favor. Well, you could say that's only obvious for a slave so I don't think anyone is probably paying any mind to it.

..However, she sure is stiff, Bel. She's giving off a different feel from how she normally acts. The things she's saying are easy to understand and it seems she's picking out simple words but the ambiance she's wearing is stiff. It's not like she won't forgive objections or that sort of thing but..I guess her tone of speech and expression are stiff.

She sure is young~ How nice~ I had a time like this as well..When I was a newly assigned platoon leader and had my own subordinates for the first time. Around half of my subordinates were younger self-defense official who were working on a term basis but among them there were some older ones as well and among the sergeant majors there were even people on the same age as father or so. Probably, Bel is frantic right now. If you look at the scale it's on the level of a squad but even then almost all of them are older than her.

..There's no need for me to say anything. I've left everything in regards to {Sooner} to her until the day after tomorrow. It's fine if I can just get along with everyone in {Sooner}.

Year 7445, Month 8, Day 27

After everyone in the {Slaughterers} finished their running, I had breakfast together with the {Butchers} where Zenom was acting as leader and Bel the assistant, then I started walking to "Slave Store, Ronslail" together with Miduchi, Ralpha, and Gwine. If things go as planned then they should have gotten stock of combat slaves from the war prisoners yesterday night or today. It might be a bit too impatient, or at least I felt that may be the case but I don't think it's a waste to properly show that I still intend to purchase and I'm looking for to them.

However, after all it was too soon. The madam still hasn't returned from the bidding and according to the statement of the head clerk who I talked with they should arrive this afternoon. Additionally, they said there's also confirming how well they've been disciplined and if the discipline is still lacking they need to do it even more thoroughly so it's not guaranteed they would be able to hand them over just today or tomorrow, and he put emphasis on that. Ah, I guess that's true.

"No~ when I was thinking that it would be an expansion to our forces I couldn't restrain myself.."

I scratch my head while leaving.

"It's alright, Greed-sama is of the greatest priority after all. We won't show them to others so please take your time to inspect them in the afternoon."

The head clerk politely said that while lowering their head and saw us off to the doorway of the store.

We didn't return to Boil Manor but entered the dungeon with the four of us and started training with spells until the afternoon to kill time. In order to earn the entry tax we tried luring some monsters just once but it was 5 hobgoblins so we deliciously hunted them.

After we took a slightly slow lunch with the four of us, we started towards "Slave Store, Ronslail" one again. Along the way we caught sight of Basutorial talking about something at an ironware store that deals in pots and pans while accompanied by Cathy and Giberuti but since he seemed busy talking enthusiastically we didn't call out to him.

"Welcome, Greed-sama."

It was just as Madam.Ronslail was departing her carriage.

"Ronslail-san, how did things go? Were there any good ones?"

I wonder if there was any skilled knights?

"I was able to purchase 6 combat slaves and 3 normal slaves this time. However, I still haven't finished confirming the discipline of all of them so I'm very sorry but could you wait until the evening to come again?"

I was told that but for the time being I just had her show them to me. Since it seems the load of the carriage had the normal slaves on it, I had her show me the combat slaves tied up behind the carriage. It seems the reason why there's not many is because she had to spend quite a bit of money to land the bids on the ones from knight families. Sorry about that. However, I'll let you profit for that portion. Probably.

It seems they've already finished the naming ceremony to the slave standing in the capital. During the stage of being war prisoners it's still possible they could have their ransom paid so they don't do the naming ceremony to change them to the slave standing. They supposedly don't do the naming ceremony until they've been dragged to the capital and are put up for bid by the largest slave dealer in the Kingdom Benisshu company. After the bidding they undergo the naming ceremony for the first time. The reason for that is because they might have a noble social standing or be knights so during the bidding process they show their status to the slave traders as proof.

I decided to look at the ones that the madam was suggesting. Of the five that were former knights who didn't have their ransoms paid and ended up being up for auction this time, it seems she managed to win the bid on two of them. Since I said that younger ones are better it seems she didn't even glance at the combat slaves beyond their late 20s. In most cases among the adventurers in Baldukk, the ideal age for combat slaves is said to be in the early 30s and that's preferred. In comparison it seems that the younger ones are preferred for the army.

Meisun.Garuhashu, Male, 22 years old, Laios, Level 9, Former Knight

(5 years experience), from a Viscount family, earth magic level 2, water magic level 2, void magic level 2.

Umu. He's appropriate for the number one candidate. It's plenty for her to boast about him being expensive.

Henry.Okonneru, Male, 24 years old, Hyumu, Level 8, Former Knight (5 years experience), from a commoner family.

This fellow is splendid as well. AS expected of Madam.Rosnlail.

There's no loss even if I guarantee that I'll buy these two. The rest weren't knights but seem to be soldiers huh?

Rubano.Firenoto, Male, 21 years old, Dwarf, Level 6, from a commoner family.

Emerentsia.Osubaruto, Female, 20 years old, Tiger-people, Level 5, Free Person.

Ottirie.Masorotarun, Female, 18 years old, Elf, Level 5, Free Person.

Jesutasu.Manzokki, Male, 16 years old, Wolf-Person, Level 5, from a commoner family.

Umu, I don't need the two women. I'll buy the four men.

Garuhashu was 30,000,000 Z. I had predicted it to some extent but he's expensive!

Okonneru was 20,000,000 Z. Just as expected from him being a knight as well but the price was high.

Firenoto was 7,500,000 Z. That's normal.

Manzokki was 7,200,000 Z. A bit cheaper than the average I guess.

~and that totaled up to 64,700,000 Z huh? Personally this sort of expensive shopping, even among my past life, I think it's since I bought my condo..Ah, that was on a loan, and I hadn't finished paying it off.

They'll confirm their discipline and depending on the state they could be handed over even tomorrow but if that isn't the case it could take up to a month. That can't be helped either. I said I would pay a deposit of 2,000,000 Z per person once I withdraw it from the temple. After that I need to properly check their abilities.

Right now they only just arrived after being dragged along from the capital so after saying I'd come by to check their abilities in the evening when I bring along the deposit, we left the store.

I went again that evening and confirmed their abilities. Yeah. If it's this then there's no problem. It seems the two former knights can skillfully use the shield and the two soldiers were able to use the bow a bit along with the shield.

Furthermore, it seems that the disciplining wasn't at a level that Madam.Ronslails was satisfied with so she said she couldn't hand them over right away. Oh my...

Chapter 210: Delicious Yellow Fat

Year 7445, Month 8, Day 28

After finishing some simple cooperative training incorporating all three teams and then eating lunch, Miduchi and I were enjoying some tea together slowly.

"Come to think of it, it's almost been exactly a year today since I joined the {Slaughterers}.."

Miduchi said after taking a sip of tea and returning the cup to the table. There's nothing tasteful like saucers or other tableware.

"Ah, so it's already been a year huh..Time passes by quickly."

"I still haven't really gathered much of the ingredients as well..Hey, does it seem like you still won't be able to use the spell {Cure Disease}?"

Miduchi looks at me with an expression like she's praying. It's a pathetic story but when it comes to the spell {Cure Disease} I haven't been able to acquire it so easily like all of the spells I have up until now. Since there's countless people with illnesses in this Baldukk if I were to become able to use it then I'm already in situation where I could practice it easily though.

All of the spells I wanted to learn up until now if I just recognized "they definitely exist" and know the name of them that seems to match up to my image then continue trial and error I've been able to master them in at longest a few months.

However, when it comes to the spell {Cure Disease} just as you would expect with the source of the information being the Demi-God Lilus, even when I recognize without a doubt "it definitely exists", I can't master it. I've been challenging it with the resolve that it involves quite a bit of difficulty in acquiring and not something that can be done right away but things that aren't working just won't work. I think there's almost no chance that Lilus lied to Miduchi and there's no meaning in that after all.

In the first place, regardless of the information about a spell that can cure diseases from Miduchi I've been trying to find a way to do it since long before that. When I had already halfway given up on it, I heard that information from Miduchi and it was around this time last year that I was burning with motivation over it...Even teacher Mila said she doesn't know about it so it's not like I could have her show it to me in front of my eyes but since I can't deny the existence of the spell at all we're in this predicament.

"Sorry...I've been trying to make time to work on it but..I can't get a grasp on it at all in the current situation."

"I'm sorry. It's not like I'm blaming you.."

I can tell that much just from looking at your expression. Miduchi has been overdoing things quite a bit in gaining experience with magic think that if I can't do it she herself would. It's the same for me but whenever we have days off she's often entering the dungeon together with Zulu or Angela. Thanks to that her elemental magics hit level 6 several months ago and her void magic has even increased to level 7. It's the result of dealing damage to monsters with magic in the most efficient method for gaining experience points.

"No, it's fine. In any case I'll continue to try testing things out."

"Yeah..when it comes to the location of the ingredients we have some decent prospects, but several of them are difficult after all..right."

"Yeah..It's not like I have any proof of it but for the time being I don't intend on leaving the dungeon, so in that regards..there's also things like timing so I can't say anything.."

"Nn, after all the most severe is the {Wyvern} and {Vampire Lord}.."

"Also, the {Dragon}..huh.."

When it comes to the things like black newts they're wandering all around the place near wells. When it comes to the Shurika there were a few if you wander around a bit of distance away from Bakuddo as well. Rather~ Myun should know of their living environment. When it comes to the {Scavenger Crawler} if you just wander around on the 1st floor unless you have some seriously bad luck you can encounter one within two days. I've heard that the Kuntokigaeru aren't all that uncommon in the wetland areas in the South and it seems the {Rock Vipers} live in the mountain areas around Miduchi's home town. Things like hairs and nails we can get our hands on at any time and even when it comes to the raw liver if it's just a small piece then it's fine to take it from me.

The difficult ones are the three types listed above but since it seems that {Wyverns} are known to live and occasionally~ seen in the mountain ranges to the Northeast, if we just spend some time searching our chances of finding one are high. I had never heard about {Wyverns} until Miduchi mentioned them but it seems they're something like inferior dragons. However, since their strength is no comparison for the real thing with how much it's dropped it's not as if I don't feel like we could win if we fight as well.

Though I can't be sure.

In regards to the {Vampire Lord} I told Miduchi how we previously killed a {Vampire} on the 4th floor but she said something like "If it's a dungeon where {Vampires} appear then it wouldn't be strange for a {Vampire Lord} to appear even further inside." It seems like it's something like the boss of {Vampires}. Both Miduchi and I can use {Anti-Magic Field} and if it's us who were able to finish off that {Rotten.Eye.Ball} from head on then I'm sure we'll be able to manage somehow.

However, the problem is the dragon. As far as I know there's no definite proof that they exist. I've heard legends that in the past there was one in the Dirt Plains but..regardless since it was something from over 100 years ago I don't know if it really existed. However, a result of discussing it with Miduchi and we came to the conclusion that it be unnatural for there not to be dragons in this sort of world.

For now our only clue is just that there was one in the Dirt Plains. According to Miduchi it seems they live for 100 or 1000 years so they're like a reptile that has a tremendous longevity. I haven't said it to her but if that's true then I don't think it would be strange for a mate or child still to be remaining alive somewhere in the Dirt Plains.

Just, it seems that they're no joke in how strong they boast. Their bodies are huge, they spit out breathe of ice, acid, poison, electricity, or fire over wide areas, and can even flying through the sky. It seems it's not unusual for them to be highly intelligent and use magic as well. It's not even strange for them to have enough power to wipe out an entire country alone and for some reason she declared that proudly to me. What is that sort of perfect living creature.

In any case, in regards to the ingredients for the medicine we're in a stalemate for now. The highest possibility is that somewhere even further in the depths of the dungeon we might be able to encounter that {Vampire Lord} or whatever, is what it means. Of course, while they can supposedly fly through the air, since dragons are reptiles it seems there are also ones that would prefer being in a dungeon as well so we can't deny the possibility that we'll encounter one in the depths of Baldukk dungeon either. Though it might just be my own personal opinion I think we probably won't run into one. I mean, they're huge right? Even in the higher parts of the dungeon the ceiling is at most 100 meters, even if there's supposedly some individual types that prefer dungeons...They should at least do some exercise. Before they end up getting bed sores.

"Right now all we can do is aim even further into the dungeon."

"Nn, that's right. Also, starting tomorrow the {Slaughterers} are on holiday for a week. In three days~ or so I'm going to teacher Mila's place again after all..I'll tell everyone this evening."

"I guess so."

Zenom, Bel, and Angela are looking after the {Butchers}, Toris, Ralpa, and Zulu in {Sooner}, Basutorial is getting help from Giberuti and Catherine to make sausages and it was a good chance so Gwine decided to join a barbecue party she was invited to being held by {Gehenna.Flare} on September 1st. So it should be okay if Miduchi and I show our faces at my company in the capital and then go to the Fairy Village.

It's possible we might run into the {Butchers} and {Sooner} on the 1st floor but if I let Miduchi who's skilled at hiding herself go ahead there's almost no worries on that end.

Year 7445, Month 8, Day 29

"..And also, we've run out of the new model of Saya. We've had quite a few customers who liked the samples say they'll and to sell some to them but there's already none remaining."

I show my face in the company and confirm our stock of products that have gotten low, Rozural reported that to me while giving me details on the demand. When I tried asking for more details on it and it seems an envoy has come for the royal family a number of times. Up until now I've brought the stuff for deliveries whenever we delivered the armor but since there's been no armor deliveries recently I've just done deliveries to them whenever I see the chance. However, I somehow feel like the behavior of the Queens was strange after seeing the normal model of Saya.

What the, did they like the new model that much? They sure are shy~

They didn't say anything to me when I made deliveries but it seems like the studded ones were popular. Well I still have a lot remaining in my inn so things should be fine for a short while.

Other than condoms there's still a couple pairs remaining of the high end boots but sandals, shoes, and rubber cloth are already sold out. It's only slightly but it seems the number of repair jobs on boots and armor has increased as well. That's only obvious because the number of users has slowly increased after all.

In any case if we can't replenish our stock then putting aside Ryogu and the others, there's no job for Yotlen.

If I calculate back to around the time sister returned and take into consideration that after withdrawing they would have returned to the village once then I probably can't hope for any replenishment on the stock for a short while longer. This time, since the war only just finished I doubt there will be anything like this again for a short while after but it might be a good idea to hurry up Basutoral on the sausages I've left to him as well.

After discussing things with Rozural, Miduchi and I had him start looking for a house that slaves can live in.

"Do you intend to have Bakuddo send over some slaves?"

Rozrural said a bit surprised.

"No, as expected there's no way I'd do that. I thought of buying some new slaves. Depending on the case I might buy a new place like the rubber workshop as well. The {sausage} factory that I talked about just now. We'll need laborers to work there. Well, I'll bring some {Sausage} along next time so we can discuss it once more while eating that."

Slave brats in their early teens are pretty cheap. Furthermore the supply of them is high so I can buy as many as needed. If we properly drill the proper concepts of hygiene into their heads while they're still soft then I'm sure they'll become good workers. In the off chance that there's someone superior mixed in among them then it's even more profit. If it comes to that then it would be nice if I could bring the factory leader or other things to them as well~ Cathy is fine as well but as expected I'd feel a bit bad making her live separated from Basutorial. The people themselves haven't said anything about it either.

No, they're still newlyweds of only about two months. It would be stranger for them to say something during that sort of period. Also, it's not like Cathy is an adventurer, let alone one of my subordinates. I'm sure she'll be having kids as well. It wouldn't be strange for Basutorial to have his own family plan going.

"What the~ after all you weren't rejected huh.."

Hey, winged insect. So you were saying that seriously...Rather~ even though you were proudly boasting your own lack of ability to remember things, why can you remember that. I don't get the meaning~ Dealing with him is mentally exhausting.

"And then, teacher Mila. There's a spell I'd like you to teach me this time as well but.."

"It's fine~ But, before that.."

"The fish right. Of course we've brought along a lot of them again this time as well...They're over here."

When we opened up our bags filled to the brim with dried fish the fairies all let out a cheer and smiled. It feels good that they get happy no matter what happens.

Miduchi and I exchanged glances and smiled before we grilled up some fish on the stove and ate some sandwiches we had prepared for ourselves.

"By the way teacher Mila, I've heard that the most effective ways to invalidate attack spells fired from a distance are {Anti-Magic Field} and {Dispel Magic} that's used instantaneously but are there any other methods?"

Miduchi tried asking teacher Mila after taking the sandwich out of her mouth. Umu, it leaves a good impression how she's properly calling her teacher as she calls her.

"There's several. The representatives would be {Resist type spells} and {Turn Magic} I guess."

Teacher replied while gulping as she watched the grilling dried fish on the stove. Ho~ so there's something like that as well?

"Resist..I can get the image but it's not like they're invalidating it right?"

Miduchi asked a bit strangely. Why? If you say {resist} then isn't it resistance? If you succeed at resisting then usually things have no effect and if you fail you end up taking it, isn't that how it works? Otherwise, maybe it's like the kind of resistance from electrical circuits a {resistor} sort of feel? Though if it's like that it's not as if I don't get it.

"Ho~ I'm surprised you know. It's just as you said the {Resist type spells} normally focus around softening the negative effects of the magic used rather than completely invalidating the effects."

I guess some of the fat that dripped off the fish evaporated in the fire from the stove but it gave off a bit of smoke and teacher Mila narrowed her eyes as she watched that. I see now~ After all it was the {resistor} type.

"There's quite a bit of depth to it. The sales point of the {Resist type spells} is that they can be used on other people I guess."

Karl said from the other side of the stove of teacher Mila while staring at it. In your case, rather than the details of your statements, why is it I can't help but remember the expression of Ralpa being a glutton?

"After that there's the meaning of classifying them as well...If you end up being attacked with ice and the spell {Resist Water} shows the maximum effectiveness it can then by the time it passed through it will have just become cold air. Though I say that in order for an {Ice Javelin} used by a normal magician to turn into just cold air it would require a tremendous amount of mana and when it comes to just dealing with the attack {Ice Javelin} itself using {Anti-Magic Field} like that uses far less mana."

Teacher Mila is moving her face following the movements of my hand as I flip over the fish. However, in that case I thought it should be plenty if there's just {Anti-Magic Field} right. That's why, I tried pointed that out. Also, I intentionally didn't touch on it but I can certainly understand the valid uses of it. Since if you use it something like a {filter} then that's probably possible I'm sure.

"If you don't know it then it's not unreasonable to say something like that. The biggest difference between {Anti-Magic Field} and {Resist type spells} is the duration of their effects. If you use {Anti-Magic Field} while moving around you can't use other spells right?"

In my case I can move around and swing the sword but it's certainly true other spells at the same time is impossible. I see now, if you just use it once then like the spell {Light} even if you leave it alone you don't need to concentrate to maintain it. Also, I'm sure it's a big difference that you can sue it on other people as well.

"Teacher Mila, then in that case today please teach us those {Resist type spells}."

"Nn, that's fine."

It took until close to midnight again but I was able to learn the spells {Resist Fire} and {Resist Air} while Miduchi was able to learn {Resist Earth} and {Resist Water}. Once we return to the surface Miduchi and I will teach each other the spells we learned this time and then it's necessary to practice them.

Chapter 211: Business (Preparation)

Miduchi and I left the dungeon around the time the date changed and after returning to the inn we left our horses we fell asleep until morning just like that. The two of us are still young and have healthy bodies so staying up one night or so is no problem but obviously it's not as if we don't want to sleep. We're just simply tired and there's no reason we need to return to Boil Manor in a hurry so it was just troublesome and we fell asleep like that.

Just past dawn we woke up and after checking out of the inn we returned to Boil Manor. It was just four hours but we properly got some sleep so it's no obstacle in being active. When we returned to the inn it seems it was after everyone had gone out for running. Now then, shall we go and run as well? I urge along Miduchi as she makes a slightly bothersome expression and after we put our protectors on and fill our rucksacks with weights we started running. I don't know if it's because of the increase in ability values in proportion to my level or just simply because I've been running for several years and used to it so my fundamental stamina is different but if I don't carry along the added weight including Miduchi I quickly put distance between everyone else.

After we returned to the inn and the four who were dispatched to the {Butchers} and {Sooner}{Since Zulu and Angela are in a different inn it's probably before they joined up) were already gathered in front of Boil Manor fully equipped. Gwine and Basutorial who weren't entering the dungeon didn't have their equipment on but were on the spot as well. In front of Toris, Bel, and Ralpa Zenom was saying something like, "Let's do a proper job again today without letting our guards down."

There the two of us returned from running and out of breath.

"Oh Al, Miduchi. Morning."

Zenom noticed and called out to us first. While breathing with a Ze~Ze~ we replied and as we had our hands on our knees catching our breath everyone greeted us. After regaining my breath I went to call out to Basutorial but ended up going into a coughing fit.

During that time Miduchi finished up greetings and started talking to Gwine.

"How was yesterday?"

"No~ They brought out some pretty good alcohol and the meat was delicious as well. After all {Gehenna.Flare} is an interesting party right~"

Gwine replied with a smile. Of course I mean you're pampered like an idol after all.

There's no way they wouldn't make it fun for you.

"Also, Garun-san, he's kind and cool, I look up to him~"

Ah is that so, eventually I feel like I'll end up receiving a request for saya from you as well..

While looking at those two on the side I called out to Basutorial.

"Basutorial, do you have any plans for today?"

"No, just the same as usual with not much difference. Together with Cathy and Larry on the meat mincer.."

"Ah, that, about the meat mincer. Sorry but you're out of time.

Sorry about that. As long as you have the materials I'll make the roll today. If it's necessary then additionally the knife and plate as well. Go and get some brass ore or copper-nickel ore before coming. I'm sure it's not all that expensive so at least pay for the cost of materials yourself."

Brass(Brass*), copper and nickel alloy, and additionally bronze all exist as ores. Furthermore, brass refers to brass* and when it comes to something familiar to Japanese people it's the material used in the 5 yen coin. It differs from what is commonly referred to as brass ore. It's also my number one candidate for cartridges in the future. Since the bracelet Myun had was made of brass as well I thought that alloys were being produced. When I went to Keel and tried asking in a blacksmith, I was a bit surprised to hear that it was normally being taken out of ores during the refining process.

When I found out about this I thought it made quite a bit of sense.

Eh? About how low the techniques are in regards to the production of alloys and metallurgy on Orth. I mean, if a large number of metals already exist in the form of ores then the only thing that will develop is metallurgy for the sake of mining. It was to the point where I thought if I search I might find ores for the special steel that makes up the materials of my sword as well. Well, it doesn't seem to be major so even if it does exist it's probably only just a bit though.

He must have been at his limit, when I smiled at Basutorial as he was overjoyed, I took a breath and entered the inn while wiping my sweat.

Stop getting so happy..Feel a bit mortified over it. Ah, I guess if I can make something with brass then he might be happy over the possibility I could make a wind instrument as well. That guy likes music after all~ AS expected I won't make any instruments though.

However, if he just makes use of a few tricks I think he could even make a roll though. Since screws themselves already exist. Since it's difficult to use a meat mincing roll if the pitch spaces are fixed so you would either need to have it order made or in worst case, carve out a sample with wood first. I think he had at least that much time though. I can't understand not doing it even though he had the need for it. Since he didn't do it did he not need it?

and I even start to wonder that.

It's fine even if you fail. Let's actually do things.

Basutorial purchased some brass ores from a blacksmith during the morning and came along. He was even able to buy 20 kg of brass ores with 20 silver coins. If I take the brass out of here then it will probably end up with about half that weight. I place a large bucket on the floor of the room and after putting the brass ores inside of it I used the spell {Transmute.Rock.To.Mud} to change it into mud. Even though I've gotten quite used to it, it still takes about an hour and during that time I always need to maintain my concentration on it so it's exhausting. I ended up breaking a sweat again. Additionally I've gotten a bit of a nosebleed. When it comes to using spells that require concentrating for hours on end before activating I often get them. Ah, it's not particularly anything unusual. It seems it's the same for most people as well. And then I immediately use water magic and mix void and water magic to sort out just the brass. During the sorting process I also perform molding and constructed a revolving knife, plate, and roll. Once it enters the void magic phase it only takes about 1 second of concentrating so it suddenly gets a lot easier. A bonus. Since I had the materials on hand already I made the body and handle as well. Also, in order for him to open up holes as he pleases in the plate with no holes, vise, and roll I made some screws and stuff with the remaining materials.

Basutorial made an apologetic face while watching me do that but when I handed him the parts he made a sparkling smile.

"The size of the parts should be a perfect fit..the vice for fixing it to a table I made as a bonus. If you pack in too much meat at once then it might end up blocking the gaps on the connection portion between the roll and the handle in the back of the main body so be careful. Well, if you're just using it normally then it should be pushed back out by the roll during that process so I don't think it will get blocked up through."

While Basutorial was happily putting it together and spinning the handle around I called out to him and started a serious discussion over making it into a somewhat large business.

"In that case, just this one probably wouldn't be enough right.."

"That's only obvious right. However, I'm sure you understand since you were watching but as expected I don't want to do that anymore.

Since you already have that do something about it yourself."

"Yes."

"Then I'm going to take a shower. Let me eat some proper sausages tonight."

"Please leave it to me!"

"Ah~"

After I got refreshed taking a shower and returned to my room I continued discussing things with Basutorial after relaxing for a bit in between. It seems he's already confirmed his routes for stocking up. He intends to turn it into a product and start test sales in Baldukk immediately. It seems he intends to leave the production and sales during the test sales up to Cathy.

It seems that Basutorial had been teaching Cathy arithmetic for this sake. Hmph. But, once it starts selling I'm sure it's not something that can be handled with just one person.

"If I were to try and get a company license I don't know how much time it would end up taking. Also, while the percentage of my bonus went up, I can't buy countless slaves and I would have to feed them as well. Not only is there the problem of the money required for stocking up on ingredients but above all else I don't have a base for the production or sales. Please let me use Greed Company."

"Yeah, I had that intention. Once it's started to make profits how about 60% for you and 40% for the company?"

"Eh? That much!?"

"Ah, No, to be more precise 60% would go to Cathy. It's fine to make that her wages."

Basutorial let out a large voice in surprise. Yeah. Well I guess it's fine. From my standpoint it's like investing in you.

It's fine for the time being since I don't know if it will really make any profit. If his portion is higher than I'm sure he'll put that much more effort into it and with that if we can raise some slaves then it's far bigger.
"It would probably be good to make it in your room at first and then setup a stall in the plaza. After investigating the reputation
I guess around one week should be fine for deciding on an appropriate price? If it seems like things will work out we could buy or borrow a shop and we could make a store or factory in the capital as well. Think about and investigate about how much capital you need and give me a presentation on it. If it makes sense to me then I'll pay the full amount."

"I understand!"

"Ah, after that if you have the spare time then go to the capital.

I'm having Rozural do investigations for the factory."

"I'll try going right away tomorrow."

Give it your best.

.....

"Oh! So this is.."

"Yeah, this is.."

"It's delicious!!"

We let Zenom, Zulu, and Angela eat the prototype sausage after they returned from the dungeon.

Without smoking it (we couldn't since we didn't have the time), it's just some minced meat with a bit of salt, spices, and seasonings for flavor boiled and lightly grilled. I'm sure the flavor still needs some adjustments so it can't be called a completed product yet. However, the degree of completion has risen considerably. The crunch in the consistency is good along with it not just being finely chopped but the feelings of chewing from the minced meat is properly there as well.

Of course all of the other members were pleased eating one each as well.

"Is there already no more?"

Ralpa came out demanding seconds but there's already no more.

Rather~ since I already thought you would say it I made sure we made just enough to match the number of people. If I didn't do that then we'd all end up eating sausages here and we wouldn't be able to go out to eat with the party that entered the dungeon today.

Rather sorry about that, everyone.

"I'm sorry, Ral-san. Since it's still a prototype that's all I made."

Basutorial and Cathy lowered their heads to Ralpa. As expected since Ralpa was apologized to she had no choice but to given up and made a disappointed expression. Look, you've already gotten to sample it so go take your shower already and go eat dinner with the members of {Sooner}.

"Then, I guess we'll head to Murowa huh?"

I call out to Miduchi, Gwine, and the Basutorial couple before quickly walking off.

It's only obvious but it's not like just the Basutorial made the prototype. Giberuti made it together with them as well. And, Giberuti isn't here. Around now he should be at Murowa smoking something. Also, since the afternoon Miduchi, Gwine, and I the three of us went to find the mustard plant. Mustard itself was technically already being sold but after all you know, if you're a Japanese person then you need mustard that sharply passes through your nose.

Tonight we're going to eat our stomachs full of delicious sausages.

I'm looking forward to it~

Ah, tomorrow when everyone goes to the dungeon in the morning I intend to properly let them bring along enough hot dogs for the number of people as well.

Pardon me if they cool down. If you're discontent then have Ralph or Bel make some fire.

Year 7445, Month 9, Day 6

Hmn, it can't be helped worrying about it so I guess it's fine to just go with this and that fellow that seem obedient huh?

"Then in that case Ronlail-san, I've decided on this child and that child. How much are they?"

"Since we just gained quite a bit of profit from Greed-sama the other day. How about 1,000,000 each?"

Oh~ no matter what the case if it's that price then wouldn't there be almost no profit.

"That's quite cheap. Well I understand that they're a different set of digits from combat slaves though..I still might buy another couple of them but I'm relying on you at that time as well."

"Yeah, of course. That's fine. I'll offer a good price when it comes to general slaves."

And, the madam is quite shrewd as well. I guess that means when it comes to general slaves which were originally cheap and have a low profit margin {two* pay} is fine. I guess that means she intends to profit from the expensive combat slaves. Well it's fine. If the sausage business ends up getting on track then I'm sure I'll come to buy a lot more after all. She's going to make those ones cheap as well right?

I purchased two scrawny 11 year old slave children for 1,000,000 Z each. It seems one was the child of a slave that belonged to a merchant that went out of business the capital and the other was similarly the child of a slave that belonged to a shop in the capital who's business had started to decline. Since both of them were born slaves it seems there's no need to re-educate them. I paid the money and after taking the proof of sale just like that we went to the temple and performed the naming ceremony.

John.Kurein, level 3, human, male.

Terry.Whites, level 3, human, male.

Girls would have been fine as well but there were only ones that were much older and had a higher price. It's not like I'm buying a housekeeper or maid after all and I'm sure they'll be carrying some reasonably heavy luggage when stocking up on meat as well. I just went with boys that seemed like they would be able to build up some strength in the future.

After the ceremony had ended and the two of them were the Greed Family's Owned Slaves I brought them into a restaurant that acts as a cafe. After ordering some random sandwiches and bean tea, I let them eat.

"Listen well, I'll say it from the start but my primary occupation is as an adventurer. I'm normally in the dungeon. Since I intend to have you help out with business that deals with food we probably won't meet very often. Normally a Free Person older sister named Catherine.Basutorial will be looking after you two. Alright?"

""I understand, master.""

That's a good reply.

"I think your job will get busy right away. That's why stamina is important. Make sure you properly eat without restraining yourselves. The cost of inn and food will all be covered by me so there's no need to worry about it. You two are still children and your bodies are small so I'll have you stay in one room together in the inn. I'll prepare two sets of bedding. Don't fight. Also, your starting wages will be 6,000 Z per month. It's fine for you to use or save them up as you please."

""! I understand, master.""

"You've finished eating right, then for the time being we're buying your daily necessities so come with me."

After paying for the meals we left the restaurant and started on the way to Boil Manor.

"Miduchi, prepare the daily necessities for these two. I'm going to Shuni to prepare the inn for them. Once you've bought it return here."

"Nn, got it."

After Miduchi said that she crouched down to meet eye level with them and smiled while saying, "The two of you, tell me your names. I'm Midu~ritto.Chizumagurol. Call me Miduchi or madam. I'm looking forward to working with you."...I don't even feel like retorting every time anymore. Do as you please.

After pushing the two slaves on Miduchi, I went to Shuni and started negotiations to prepare a room with two beds next to Giberuti's room and managed to get it for 3,000 Z per night for the two of them. After returning to Boil Manor and it was at almost the same time as Miduchi returned with the two of them. It seems she properly prepared new and clean clothes as well. There's also underwear and towels as well. Yeah, since they're going to be dealing with food it's important to remain clean.

"Cathy, starting tomorrow teach these kids various things. I'm leaving it to you."

"Yes, Greed-sama, I mean Greed-san. Please leave it to me."

After Cathy said that just the same as Miduchi she crouched down to meet eye level with the two and greeted them.

That night when everyone was eating dinner Giberuti said, "You two, so you were born in Rombertia huh? That's nice~ If master's business goes well then I think the two of you will probably be able to work in Rombertia. Make sure you do a proper job."

something like that. Would you please stop with that~ The two of them were making sparkling eyes while saying something like,

""Then, we can see our mom and dad?"" Look, hearing that everyone started making questionable expressions while looking at me.

"I'm going to take a piss~"

I ran away to the toilet.

Chapter 212: Meat Stick 2

Year 7445, Month 9, Day 7

Morning, when I left Boil Manor in order to go running, not just Zulu and Angela were waiting in front but Giberuti brought along

John and Terry as well. It seems everyone else is still getting ready.

"Morning."

""Good morning, master!""

When I greeted them the five slaves all returned my greeting at the same time.

"John, Terry. Do a proper job starting today. You might not be used to things at first but listen closely to the things Catherine and Giberuti say and it's fine if you take your time so carefully think about things."

""Yes!""

They sure are obedient. I really like obedient fellows.

"Giberuti, I made some ice and left it in front of my room. In order to make it easy to use I split it up into three different sized buckets so use it as you please. Since the temperature has decreased a bit I don't think it will melt for a short while. If there's any left over then throw it away in the back."

I made a total of around 100 kg of ice. It's a considerable amount but even if I leave that much around since right now is the start of September it won't last until evening.

"I understand."

I finish up talking over some finer details with Giberuti and soon after Basutorial came out accompanied by Catherine. I left Giberuti and the two slave boys in Catherine's care and ordered the two children to properly listen to things the adults say and do their jobs. In addition I handed Giberuti a bit of extra money for stocking up they should be doing today just in case. During that time everyone else was gathering outside.

"Alright. Then shall we go?"

While being seen off by Catherine, Giberuti, John, and Terrry the 9 of us excluding Zenom started our running.

We returned from running and after having breakfast we joined up with the {Butchers} and {Sooner} as everyone from the {Slaughterers} did some training until lunch. After lunch when everyone returned to the inn the sausages Catherine and the others were making were of everyone's interest. In just half a day of work what amount were they able to produce and exactly what level of completion were they at?

Today, since morning they've been stocking up on the flavoring and meat other than the casings. Of course, soon after we went out for our running this morning they had breakfast and then went to the butcher I'm sure. In regards to the stocking and money I felt like Catherine was still a bit unreliable so I left it to Giberuti.

"I wonder how much they were able to make? Around 100 of them?"

"100..No matter how you think about it isn't that too few..."

"Hn, I see. Then around 1,000 of them?"

"..Ral sure is extreme. Since it's the first day, wouldn't 200-300 be plenty?"

Ralpa is completely out of the question but Gwine's estimates weren't half bad I guess? Since this time is the first day we had planned for them to be producing around 300 of them to sell. Even if they don't all sell today we'll be smoking them as well, since we're boiling them and then cooling them down right away, as long as they properly have ice on their side to leave them in then the quality should be no problem until tomorrow or the day after tomorrow.

The size of the sausages being produced are using the bowel's of a pig as casings so a thickness of about 3-4 cm, frankfurt size and the length should be around 15 cm so I guess they should be around 100 grams each? Since there's also other things mixed into them as well in order to make around 100 of them they should have stocked up on about 9 kg of pork. 27 kg for 300 of them. We were questioning putting in close to 10% in other mixed ingredients but while the flavor gets a bit lighter mixing in shaved ice gives it a smother taste and reduces the number of failures. It also reduces the number of rupturing accidents when boiling them. It's to the point where it would even be fine to add a bit more.

When we arrived at the Boil Manor the brat ran up and gave us some complaints.

"Basutorial-sama, please do things like smoking outside of your room...If you're going to do it then please use the roof."

Oh~ I guess that's only obvious. It's not like there's ventilation so if you were to do something like smoking inside of your room it would overflow with smoke. If it's just a bit then there's no major problem with the window being open but when it comes to smoking sausages in the 100s the amount of smoke would be on a different level. It seems we've done something bad.

Everyone politely apologized to the brat and then proceeded towards Basutorial's room. I wonder if John and Terry are properly working below Giberuti and Catherine?

No one was in the room. There was just the meat grinder and the table it was fixed to and everything else was cleanly put into order. On the side of the table there's a bucket and what appears to be the leftover pig's bowels using for casings was inside of it.

It seems everyone is already on the rooftop. The rooftop is usually pretty empty with just the water tank for the shower and a pole for drying clothes. Certainly it might be just right for boiling, smoking, and airing out sausages.

Just as expected everyone was gathered on the rooftop in the middle of their work under Giberuti's lead. They washed the completed sausages to get rid of any scraps and then starting from the ones that were wiped dry of moisture they're smoking them. On the side of that they have a pot with boiling water and Catherine is maintaining the temperature of the fire so it doesn't boil over while they boil the sausages that have finished smoking.

The smoker that Giberuti and Basutorial made wasn't all that big at all. In terms of volume it's about 4, 1 To(18 liters) cans worth.

Even if you make good use of how you're hanging them I think around 100 at a time is the limit. The pot they're boiling the water in is the portable type size that adventurers use so it's at best useful for making enough soup for 10 people. Since it's around 3 liters it can probably only boil around 10 of them at a time.

On the side of that is a large pail with the remaining half-melted ice I made this morning, it seems around 20 frankfurts are floating in it after being smoked and boiled.
Wumu, no matter how I look it's inefficient. Or, rather, putting aside the smoker, the stove and pot are small. With this it's vague whether they might even be able to make them all by the evening. There's no helping it if they spend this much time just making a mere 300 of them. After taking the change from Giberuti for stocking up, I added 1 gold Shu(250,000 Z) to the amount and handed it back while ordering "Go and buy a larger stove and pot".
The expenses for this time was around 8,000 Z for a total of roughly 27 kg of pork and various parts. In terms of casings Basutorial had already prepared around 15 of them at 4 meters or so each pickled in salt and those cost 1,000 Z each for a total of 15,000 Z. The spices and seasonings and such was at most around several hundred Z in total. If you include the wood chips for smoking and the magic stones for the stove then it probably won't even reach 24,000 Z.

The cost of ingredients for one of them is around 80 Z huh?

Expensive, that's expensive.

Particularly the casings are expensive. Since there's a demand for condoms in Baldukk, even if it's before they've been processed the fact that they have a high price is the largest problem. Since it seems that if we could stock up in Rombertia let alone half price it seems they're even 1/3rd the price so it might be best to think about stocking up in bulk there. With just that we should be able to drop the cost of ingredients by around 30 Z. If we can make one of them 50 Z then..if we sell them for around 200 Z then that will be decent I guess. No, if I think about the preservatives that we weren't using this time then the cost of ingredients should go up even higher. It's like water on a hot stone but it might be best to think about increasing the amount of shaved ice and lowering the cost price.

Suddenly I realized. I picked up one that was completed and whispered {Status Open} in a small voice.

The blue window that I haven't seen very often recently opens up.

【Pork(Food Preparation Complete)】

Well I thought that would be the case. Next. This time the green window I'm used to seeing opened up. Shit, why didn't I realize this until now. Though it's been quite a while since I stopped myself from using 【Identify】 to check the status of food though...

"Fuhi"

I made a strange noise.

A short while after Giberuti returned with the stove and pot he bought and using that they were able to finish up the boiling of 30 at once. It's gotten a bit better but it seems it's going to require even more funds invested in the facilities and equipment.

That one large-scale stove magic tool we ended up selling once upon a time, I wish we had kept it...If it was that then as long as we could prepare a large container-like pot then we could have boiled 300 all at once.

Even though we're entering the dungeon tomorrow, Giberuti, Catherine, and Basutorial were all opening a stall in the entrance plaza. They paid 5,000 Z for the stall, which was around five times the normal (normally it's around 1,000 Z for a single stall of about 2 meters) to the knight group that manages the plaza to force their way in. It's a shady method we can do only because we're acquaintances with Church-san from the Baldukk knight group. A frying pan was placed on top of the stove that was used to boil the sausages and this time they're frying the frankfurts while stabbing them with skewers.

They've already prepared a bottle of mustard as well. And then, they're selling them for the atrocious price of 300 Z each. Isn't that the price of a night stall in a festival in Japan? If you don't go luxurious it's enough to buy a single meal. Moreover they aren't just mobilizing the {Slaughterers} but also the {Butchers} and {Sooner} to act as sakura*. Excluding Rodrick the others, John, and Terry almost all of them are well-known adventurers in Baldukk.

Those sorts of fellows are all surrounding the stall biting into frankfurts on skewers.

"Isn't 300 Z a bit expensive?"

Ralpha said a bit sharply while waiting in line. That opinion is only nature but...

"It's a test sale after all. It's difficult to raise the price later but it might be just right for the starting cost. If they sell at this price then there's no need to sell them for cheaper after all and if they aren't selling at all then can't they just keep an eye on the sales and slowly lower the price?"

Bel replied. That's right.

"Ma..Master, they smell good right. I want to quickly eat some."

Angela's nose is moving as she smells the scent. It seems her tail is shaking a bit as well. That's right isn't it, I want to eat some soon as well.

"Yeah, I'm hungry..this is quite difficult."

Zulu puts his hand to his stomach while looking at the mountain of frankfurts. It's almost dinner time after all~ That's not unreasonable. However~ that's quite the amazing sound coming from your stomach.

"I prefer the sausages when they've only just been boiled though..they seem delicious~"

"Yeah, that one time we ate them, the ones that were just boiled. Those were delicious as well but I liked the ones we ate the other day more."

"Akdam-sama, we were able to try out a bit of the ones today after we had just boiled them but they were extremely delicious!"

"I've never eaten something that delicious before!"

"Fufu..From here on out you'll be able to eat a lot. There's still lots of delicious things left in the world after all."

"Yeah, eat lots from here on out. It's a child's job to eat."

Gwine and Zenom were pleasantly talking to John and Terry. It seems the first few of them are almost done frying.

Miduchi took two of those and after putting plenty of mustard on one she handed it to me.

I took it and bit in.

Along with the snapping consistency of biting into it the sourness of the mustard on the surface and the fat from the pork mixes together in a nostalgic flavor.

The fragrance passes through my nose and stimulates my appetite even further.

After chewing even further the crunch in the consistency still feels good as the juices from the meat spread out in my mouth.

Yeah, it's good!

They're pretty big so 300 Z isn't half bad.

When I suddenly looked to the side Miduchi was using her forked tongue to lick the fat that was dripping down the surface of the frankfurt.

After she met eyes with me she made a teasing smile and started wrapping her long tongue around the frankfurt.

Stop playing with your food.

Please play with my frankfrut later.

"Oh, I was late. I went to buy these so the three of you should wear them. They match."

Toris bought three shirts that were dyed black. A uniform huh?

"Also, since Saji and Larry are in charge of the cooking. Make sure you properly put this around your head so no hairs fall out."

Additionally he handed a thin towel like white cloth to the two guys.

I guess he's saying to wrap it around their heads like pirates.

The frankfurts gradually keep frying up.

"Wamu..N! This, it's even more delicious then that {obento} the other day!!"

Misu raises her voice in admiration. That's only obvious since the ones we gave to them the other day weren't even properly smoked after all. Of course these ones are more delicious.

"Oh! This flavor, I can't stand it! It goes well with mustard."

Binsu was biting into it like a delicacy as well. The mustard is good too right. If it comes to this then I want to do something about ketchup as well. Though there's nothing that can be done.

"They have a good consistency too right!"

Hisu has already eaten close to half of hers. It seems she intends to use mustard on the remaining part. It seems like Binsu can't wait for her to finish putting it on.

"Master! If you put mustard on them they're even more delicious right!"

One of Rodrick's slaves, Denda, called out to Rodrick in admiration.

"Right!? I like {sausage} as well.."

"You've eaten them before?"

"Yeah, in the past..However..this sure is good."

Rdorick replied while looking off a bit into the distance.

"Ah, I've already finished it..Give me one more!"

"You're the same as usual, Rokko. Exactly how much of a glutton are you?"

"Kevin you're already on your second one too right? I saw it."

"Hee~ I've started to feel like drinking some beer."

"Right..It has this fragrance after all so it seems like it would go well with beer. Hey~ how about trying to prepare some beer?"

"If they do that then the customers will settle down and won't pass through right?"

"I guess that's true..Give me one more!"

Everyone is already enjoying themselves as they please around this point.

"Delici~ous! Are they called Sausages~Hn? Baldoggie?"

"They cal these sausages but this is a food that was newly made in this town of Baldukk after all! That's why they're Baldoggie!"

Basutorial was giving a lecture while making a cut into the frankfurt as he moved it to pass over the flame well. Before I realized it there was a price tag on the table saying "1 Baldoggie 300 Z". The Baldoggie is fried with a sizzling sound on the frying pan with lard spread out in it.

On the side of that Giberuti was looking at the cooking while quietly putting skewers on them.

Now then...I guess I'll have one more huh?

【Wood Skewer】

That's only obvious. It's hot but it can't be helped.

I see now. Though there's a lot more that I don't get but..really thank you for your work, indeed.

"Oh~ that sister, give me one as well~"

Our first customer has come and called out to Catherine who was acting as the salesperson. It's a drunk old man. Judging from the blisters on his rough hands he's probably an artisan who finished up work early to have a drink.

"Yes, here you go. That'll be 300 Z. Please use as much mustard on it as you please."

"Here you go, 1, 2, 3, and 300. Is it fine if I put it on with this spoon?"

"Yeah, but for the first bite you should try it just like that. If you want to change the flavor then please try putting some mustard on it."

Catherine courteously deals with the sweaty and drunk old man. Umu.

It seems she has talent for the night entertainment business. Ah,

No, she was still a slave until just the other day wasn't it. The one who said that she should deal with any customer as if they were her master was me.

"He~ Now then~oo!! This is delicious!"

Catherine smiled seeing the old man eating the Baldoggie deliciously.

"Then next is the mustard oo...ofu!! This is good too!"

The old man who was saying it's good, it's good while biting into it, disappeared in the twilight of the town of Baldukk.

Everyone was watching over the reaction of the old man. Before we noticed everyone was moving their heads to see off the old man.

It seems that all of us standing around the stall biting into Baldoggie acted as a good advertisement. Countless people were passing by before we noticed a number of customers came along.

"Ah, that, give me one."

"Welcome, that's 300 Z."

"300!? That's a bit expensive..Well I guess it's fine."

"Oh! Delicious!! Is this mustard huh? Oh! This is good too!!"

"Thank you very much~!"

"What's this? He~ Baldoggie? From Baldukk, a play on words. Give me one as well."

"Welcome~!..Yes, here."

"What's this? What's this!! It's delicious~!!"

"What the, what is it!? A new stall is it? Hmph, for all of the {Slaughterers} to be gathered and eating. Oh~ sister, give me one as well!"

"Yes, that'll be 300 Z, here you go."

That is, if it isn't the Tiger-people woman that's like a gorilla who's in one of the second-rate parties? It's a bit rude but jsut as she looks she's like a gorilla and it seems she can't even read characters after all.

Uhihi~"

The gorilla woman made a vulgar smile while paying the money and taking the Baldoggie as she licked the end and bit into it.

"Right? But my husband has an even better one."

Catherine said that while turning around to Basutorial. Basutorial courteously lowered his head. That guy, he's a member of the first part of the {Slaughterers} you know. It seems since Basutorial, Catherine, and Giberuti were wearing matching black shirts and have the white clothes tied around their heads the gorilla woman didn't notice they were the {Slaughterers}. Though it was Toris's idea..that's just like a noodle joint from some place.

"He..Is that so. Ngu. Delicious! This is!"

"Please make sure you eat all of it!"

"O..Oh! Like I would leave any remaining! Give me one more!"

"Thank you for your business."

It seems she can handle stupid customers as well. If it's this then she should be fine. Including myself the sakura* all split up into small groups as we went to get a proper meal.

Around two hours after we were eating at Murowa and the three of them grouped up with us. It's still only around 8 pm.

"That was fast."

After I said that and the three of them were a bit excited as they happily reported things to me. It seems they managed to sell one every 20-30 seconds or so. However...even though we didn't even do any kind of advertisement momentum is quite amazing.

Including the sakura* there were sales of 90,000 Z huh? Fumu. If it's this then it seems it will make it as a business. If we just keep it at selling around 300 of them from a stall and sell another 1,000 or so for a slightly cheaper price to a restaurant in wholesale then it could make it to around 150,000 Z a day. We'll need to make sure they don't setup stalls for them when we wholesale..I guess it doesn't particularly matter though.

There's no need to always continue to do the sales through a stall ourselves. Even at longest around six months to a year should be plenty. Ah, it might be good to do when mixing in beef, cheese, or other parks of pork as well when announcing them as new products. No, maybe I should have them start making those sorts of new products right away? I guess it doesn't matter either way. In any case, even if I estimate it on the low end the overall profit should be around 100,000 a day. Assuming 20 days in a month that's 2,000,000. The labor costs including the fixed expenses are the wages for the two slave boys inn and food costs is around 200,000, the magic stones for the stove are..around 200,000 I guess? 1,000 for Catherine and 600,000 for me. Well, that should be plenty for the time being. After several months I'll check up on the state of things and consider increasing the number of people, the amount produced, and it's reputation in the town while deciding which direction to stretch out the business. After I had thought that far while poking at some Ibodi and Keiswago fried fish together with Toris, I pushed things about the sausages back to a corner of my mind.

We've been entering the dungeon again since three days ago. This time the members of the {Slaughterers} are starting with me, Zenom, Bel, Gwine, Basutorial, and Angela the six of us and we have Giberuti enshrined as the cook in the teleport room on the 7th floor. Toris and Ralpa went to the {Butchers} while Miduchi and Zulu departed to {Sooner}.

During the time everyone is in the dungeon, we put the sales of sausages on hold, and they just focus on making further adjustments to the mixing ratios of spices. It takes the shape of leaving it to Catherine, John, and Terry but it's probably better to leave things in regards to a flavor that matches the tastes of Orth people up to them, since the ones buying them are most likely to be largely from the slave standing and Free Peoples. Basutorial said they could do as they like with it but I agree completely.

Today were doing the opposite of what we did last time, we're killing ogre mages on the 7th floor in the morning for earning magic stones to sell and then in the afternoon were investigating the monsters on the 8th floor while also doing the operation of earning experience points.

When it comes to the crickets, mantis, millipedes, and basically just enlarged bug monsters we burn them, occasionally when {Scavenger Crawlers} appear we'll collect the feelers along with the magic stones. We were able to confirm some new monsters but it was basically a sub-type of the cricket and while there were some vague differences in it's appearance, it's on the level of a difference in color and pattern. Generally there's nothing that's really changed. Even if I use identify it's just small differences in the details and ability values, also that they have a weak poison or so.

If we just make sure not to let our guards down and use attack spells focusing around fire magic then we can kill them without any major problems. The result of discussing it with everyone was that just in case we would spend the rest of this year confirming monsters like this. On the 8th floor in half a day we can lure monsters and engage in combat around 10 times using {Audible Clamor} is how it feels.

During one time of entering the dungeon for the latter three days, that's roughly 30 times. Since we should enter the dungeon around 23 times until the end of the year that adds up to gaining combat experience on the 8th floor around 400 times. The number of times we teleport should exceed 2,000. Since it's a floor we have almost no information on, I thought if we don't get at least this many samples then you can't say we understand the monsters that wander around the floor after all.

Year 7445, Month 9, Day 23

After eating breakfast I walked to "Slave Store, Ronslail". It's been about one month since then. Since we're entering the dungeon again starting the 26th so if possible I'd like to take over the slaves today.

"Ya~ Ronslail-san. How is the disciplining going? If it's going well then I'd like to take over them pretty soon but.."

"Oh, Greed-sama..Nn? Well I guess it should be fine. They've become quite obedient after all and I'm sure as adventurers there's training you need to do as well. I'll make preparations for you to be able to do the naming ceremony around noon."

The madam replied cheerfully. I guess I was a bit early? though the difference is probably just a few days so it seems there's no problem.

"That's great. Well then, I'll come back around then. Ah, that's right, they haven't gotten out of shape right?"

"They are combat slaves after all. Of course we haven't. We have them swinging wooden swords and spears every day."

As expected I guess she wasn't letting them have practice matches.

If they end up getting injured it would be terrible after all.

"Well then, I'll come again after lunch."

I said that before leaving the store and going to Shuni where I have the slaves lodging. I need to secure four rooms. Just in case by last month I had already said I intended to put another four slaves in so I think they'll take that into consideration but I guess it's still a bit too early to call it the end of the month.

Well, if they don't have any open rooms then just for the short period until we enter the dungeon the next time I'll have to find them a different adequate inn. In terms of the building Shuni is a two floor wooden building but there's 12 separate buildings and it's a stupidly huge inn so for the most part I doubt there will be any problem when it comes to open rooms though.

The first building has 12 rooms facing each other on the first floor aimed towards a slightly large family and on the second floor there's another 22 rooms aimed towards individuals for a total of 34 rooms. Zenom and Ralpa temporarily lived in one of those. The second building is just individual use rooms and there's a total of 48 of them. Bel lived in one of those at first. Just as can be expected of some of the first built buildings they're considerably old and decrepit so the cost of lodging is considerably cheap. The width of each individual room is probably around 4 tatami mats and the family rooms are double that I guess? The area of the floors should be the same for the first and second floors.

The third building has rooms aimed at families and there's a total of 32 of them. The fourth building was just like the first building except a bit larger and there's a total of 16 family rooms and 26 individual rooms. Zulu and Angela live this building. The fifth, sixth, and eighth buildings have the same layout as the second building and the seventh and ninth buildings have the same as the third, while the tenth to the twelfth buildings have the same as the fourth. There's several shared toilets in the corners of each building. Also, there's eight wells dug up in the wide land they're on.

Incidentally Giberuti lives in the fifth building. Since John and Terry are next door they live in the same fifth building. There's one more, slightly smaller building as well but that's the inn and living space for the manager and employees.

It's the largest inn in Baldukk where the rooms cost 1,000-3,000 Z a night (the price changes based on how old the building is and the area of the room) so there's everything from poor Free People to slightly wealthy slaves and up to mid class adventurers with low abilities living in them. Just like this, around 20% of the population of the town of Baldukk(around 7,000 people) live in collective living facility like inns like this. Though the only one with close to 500 rooms in one place is this Shuni. If you add them up probably over 1,000 people are living here though. Just this inn could fit two Bakuddo villages with easy.

It's just at the level of a cheap lodging house but there's no large shared rooms and one of the biggest selling points that's mentioned about it is that even all of the individual rooms has a lock on the outside and a latch on the inside with keys. The president of Shuni Company that runs the inn is a commoner but he's also an influential person in Baldukk.

It's only obvious but there was no problem with taking some rooms. They probably always have some openings in rooms. Since the adventurers that stay in this inn probably die at a rate of about one or two per month after all. If there's no sort of special message left before hand or advance payment then if they leave their rooms for over 2-3 days their belongings are disposed of and it's made into an open room. When it comes to the inn costs for my slaves I usually try to pay over a months worth at a time in advance so there's no need to worry about it.

After taking the rooms, I went to the temple to take out some money and returned to Boil Manor.

On my way returning to Boil Manor, I encountered Basutorial,

Catherine, and Giberuti returning from shopping. It seems they even bought chick meat and beef. They were talking about trying various ratios of mincing the meat for prototypes. Since there will be another four new combat slaves joining us in the afternoon, I said if they have leeway in the ingredients to feed them some as well before going to Zenom's room. Just as I expected Ralpa and Gwine were there. It seems they're doing spell training.

"The two of you, the new combat slaves will be joining this afternoon. Do you want to come to the naming ceremony?"

When we went to buy them they didn't seem all that interested in it.

"Wun, it's fine. After practicing some spells together with Gwine, today after this we're going to the capital to buy some new clothes. There's also the errand Saji asked us to do as well."

"Together with Zenom-san the three of us are going to the capital."

Ah, I guess they're going to buy casings (pig's bowels) huh?

"Oh, I see. Be careful. Are you returning in the evening?"

Ah, that's right.

"That's just right, while you're at it could you stop by the company as well. It's fine if it's Rozural or anyone else but could you tell them to secure enough rubber for four pairs of rubber sandals?"

"Yeah, got it. Also, we're returning by dinner. Putting aside Gwine, father and I have to join {Sooner} for dinner after all."

This time Zenom and Ralpa are with {Sooner} while Bel and Angela are with the {Butchers}. Toris has been giving it his best swinging the sword on the 8th floor and concentrating on finishing them off.

"Ah, that's right. How have things been going with Ginger and Hisu?

Are you getting along?"

"Yeah, somewhat I guess. After trying to talk to Rodrick and he's a good guy as well."

"Hn, I see. Get along well."

"I intend to stay the night over there. I made a promise to buy some clothes for Anna-chan and Hanna-chan."

It seems Gwine is planning to stay the night in the capital since she doesn't have much relation with the former {Sun.Ray}.

"I see, I'm sure they'll be overjoyed. It's fine to take your time."

Anna and Hanna sure are loved. Just as would be expected from their deceased father who was running a business, their mother Leila can do some simple arithmetic as well. It seems they're being taught various things by Leila now. Eventually I'd like to take the time to properly educate them as well but when I look at the state of things with Catherine and I've been thinking it might be good to just throw all of the educating jobs on Basutoral.

Of course, it's very welcome for Gwine to teach them as well. When it comes to Anna and Hanna as well, if possible I'd like for them to become future managers of Greed Company but they're nothing more than employees and not slaves so I can't coerce them and I have no intention of doing it either. Even if they were to separate from Greed Company I think being able to do arithmetic would be a great weapon for them.

When I returned to my room Miduchi was folding the clean laundry the inn had brought back and putting it on the shelves.

"This afternoon those four combat slaves I bought previously are joining us. Today do you have any kind of plans?"

"Wun, since the last time you went to buy them you said the discipline duration would take about a month so I didn't make any plans in specific for this break. We need to go and buy equipment and stuff right?"

"Yeah, sorry about that."

"Rather than that, is everyone from your family still not coming? I still haven't greeted your parents after all.."

"Wun, since sister just returned last month I think it should be pretty soon though..And, I think it will only be father or mother just one of them that come this time. From here on out as expected

I doubt two of them would come at the same time?"

Assuming they are coming it would probably be father. I'm sure mother is engrossed in teaching magic to Zetto and Becky after all.

And since brother became the official lord as expected I'm sure he and sister-in-law don't feel like this could come.

"Regardless of the case I want them to come soon...Since we've run out of things to sell, it's really troubling.."

When I sat down on a chair and Miduchi made some tea.

.....

"How about this?"

The old blacksmith said bluntly to my former knight slave while handing him a long sword.

After taking the drawn long sword Garuhashu tried swinging it around a bit before tilting his head, I guess it didn't fit very well, he handed it to Okonneru. Okonneru started swinging the sword around a bit and nodded satisfied before trying a different way of swinging it.

I was just having the slaves pick out their weapons to purchase from the stock of a blacksmith. Since Garuhashu and Konneru were both true knights they automatically end up in positions on the front line. Since Firenoto and Manzokki were both soldiers they should be better with spears and halberds. We need to go to a different blacksmith for those.

Since there was only a few swords in stock it's not like they have that many choices. The two of them spent around 20 minutes picking out their swords. The spears took a bit more time. Just as would be expected from soldiers Firenoto and Manzokki preferred weapons with a long reach. Or rather, it seems they didn't learn how to use the sword in the army. It seems they didn't learn how to use the sword from before they became soldiers like Zulu so I guess they were training with the spear from the time they were kids.

When I tried listening to their stories after all it seems there's some differences in the army of Devas Kingdom and Rombert. Things in that area don't matter at all for now. Well, I've heard the general outline from Bel and Zulu so I already knew most of it but it seems things are quite different depending on the region they're from as well so I was able to understand that there's a lot of differences. Something like the army, army system, and training details of another country, there's no need to know it for now.

Right now I'm an adventurer that fights monsters after all. We started towards the leather crafters shop and ordered leather armor for the four of them. I've spent quite a bit..2,000,000 Z on the two long swords, 1,000,00 Z for two spears, and 2,400,000 Z for four suits of leather armor so that's a total that's largely exceeded 5,000,000 Z.

If you include the cost of purchasing the slaves themselves it's over 70,000,000 Z. I won't let you die so easily~

I called out Giberuti and had him buy their daily necessities until the evening. I handed 100,000 Z in money to Giberuti and said if that wasn't enough to pay in advance before handing him the keys to the inn.

After splitting ways with the slaves, Miduchi and I returned to our inn and did spell training with the two of us until dinner.

"The four of you, introduce yourselves."

"I'm Meisun.Garuhashu. I'm looking forward to working with you all.

My weapon is the long sword and I use a kite shield as well. Also,

I'm good at using the spear to fight while mounted."

"I'm Henry.Okonneru. Everyone it's nice to meet you. I use the long sword and kite shield as well. When it comes to combat on a horse I prefer the lance."

"Em Rubano.Firenoto. Nic'ta mecha~ Mastah bough mah a halberd."

"I..I'm Jesutasu.Manzokki.. I'm in everyone's care. My weapon is the spear. I'll give my best to be useful to everyone."

They each stood up one at a time from the table and introduced themselves to everyone here.

"Alright. They're not here today but there's still a number of other members as well. I'll let you meet the people not here now eventually~ so it's fine if you can just remember the names of everyone here today. Also, I intend to bring you all to the capital tomorrow. We need to make sandals for you after all."

After I said that the four of them were all surprised. It seems they think I'm going to order leather sandals rather than the pre-made straw sandals. Seeing that Giberuti took the belt off of the rubber sandals he was wearing and showed it off to them. Don't do that when we're eating. I made a bitter smile.

"This is a rubber sandal. It feels good to wear and lasts quite a while. Since you all different from me and combat slaves after all. Eventually you might even get rubber sole boots like Zulu-san. Make sure you do a proper job."

I guess he didn't mention Angela's name because she's not here?

"Then, since this is your first meal with everyone. Basutorial, how is it?"

"Yeah, we made various things today as well. I'll prepare them right away. Well please try out the flavors of them."

If they eat and drink some good things I'm sure we'll get to know their characters.

Chapter 214: Newbie 2

Year 7445, Month 9, Day 25

"We were told to run every morning. Excluding Zenom-san and Larry we run together with everyone."

Hn? It's Okonneru's voice. Since I purchased the four combat slaves the other day, today and tomorrow the {Slaughterers} including Giberuti are all performing formation training(Since I didn't know whether I could purchase the slaves until the other day up until yesterday there were quite a few members with plans. Since the last day of the three day break is originally a training day there's no one who would make plans for it). Not just on the days off, but we force one day in on what is normally the fixed date for entering the dungeon but we've been working around it by sliding the days over.

I thought someone would complain about it but it was a bit unexpected that no one said any complaints. I guess as members of the {Slaughterers} they're showing their obedience to me or because our forces have increased from the combat slaves, they might be trying to make into viable fighters even just a bit sooner to raise their own safety, it's unknown but if no one has any complaints then there's no problem.

Right now were on our noon break as Giberuti distributes frankfurts made into hot dogs to everyone resting in the shade. There was the advice of us reincarnated people so it's been placed between bread with pickles and sauerkraut.

"Hey is that really true? You've been ordered to do it by AI?"

That voice like it's amazed is Rokko huh?

"Rokko, it seems that isn't the case. Even though they're like that it seems not a single person was forced to do it in the {Slaughterers}. I tried asking Zulu so there's no mistake."

And that's Kevin.

"Eh? Is that so? I~ could have sworn it was something necessary to crawl up into the ranks of the {Slaughterers} though...So, on our day off I tried going running with Kamu, Misu, Kimu, and the others."

Eh? Is that so? Rokko, how unexpected..No, I guess that's rude.

"He~ so even you use your head. And, how did it go? I'm sure you just ended up getting exhausted right? I think it's just a waste of effort, the so called profiting from wearing yourself out though."

"This thing above my shoulders isn't just a beautiful ornament.

But, ah, that's the case. Even today we got exhausted just walking past the outer crater right? I understood well that if you run you get even more exhausted. By the time we all had reached the summit of the outer crater we were exhausted so we ended up walking back.

And, that's when I thought of it."

"Of what?"

Kevin didn't retort on the beautiful part and just continued on.

It's the usual after all.

"The fact that this is a "test of guts". Certainly AI is amazing~

After training together with him I get that even more now. However, don't you think that's not the case for the other members of the {Slaughterers}?"

"Nn..Well, Zenom-san, Miduchi, and maybe Ral around that area are pretty up there but other than that..Whether it be Toris or Zulu, honestly speaking I think they're not all that much different from us."

"Uho~ Up until just a short while ago you were always calling him Firefreed-san but now it's Zenom-sana huh?"

"Since we're already the same allies isn't it fine..Stop poking fun over every little thing...I~'ve always respected that person. If I can talk to him on friendly terms then I'd like to talk that way."

I guess it's because Kevin is the same Dwarf, I already knew he respected Zenom.

"I see. Well putting that aside, I've understood it well from having consecutive battles on the 1st floor. Probably even when it comes to Toris or Zulu unless we can push them back during the start we can't win. If they can endure it even just a bit I think we'd lose. They have some amazing guts. Even after defeating monsters and taking the magic stones they start moving right away with almost no rest. And then with composed faces they start fighting the next monster. They're persistent even when it comes to the training after all."

"Yeah, if you put it like that then..That might be the case. If we were to fight at full strength then they can probably keep moving for a longer period than us."

Hmn...

"..Really, you can actually feel the fact that the {Slaughterers} were earning from magic stones."

"And then, returning to the running, but you know, that's probably in order to build up the guts. However, it's tiresome you know~ I think I'll be satisfied in the {Butchers} for the time being. Our earnings are pretty decent after all."

"Yeah, certainly I feel our earnings have increased. When we were in {Sun.Ray} we would enter the dungeon twice a month and the times when it was low there were months we earned 150,000 Z as well..Though if it was a lot then it would reach 1,000,000. Though when it comes to the {Slaughterers} right now we enter three times a month, not to mention it's six days of returning back the same day and we're making 200,000 - 300,000 every time. That's 700,000 - 800,000 a month. This is huge. Not to mention while we might suffer some injuries on the 1st floor as expected it's pretty unlikely we'll die. Since they're sending over healing magicians after all."

"We won't die but it's exhausting to here you feel like you're dying.

"No doubt about that~"

"Umm.."

Finally Okonneru called ou to them a bit timidly.

"Oh, we were just continuing on with things leaving you behind.

Sorry~ about that..Umm?"

"I'm Henry. Henry.Okonneru. You sure are bad at remembering things as usual, Rokko."

"Yeah, that's right. Henry. Sorry~sorry~"

Didn't you just say it wasn't just an ornament?

"No..That is, what you two were just talking about it, is it true?"

"Ah? About what? Rather~ you don't need to be so careful about talking politely like that. We're not your master or the head slave. Let alone, we have no connection to something like noble-samas after all."

"That's right, when it comes to both Rokko and I you've seen us talking normally with the same combat slaves as you Zulu and Maruso right?"

"Ah, yes. But the two of you are both older than me and I've heard that you're first-rate adventurers so.."

"Nn, well, that's true, I guess."

"Come to think of it, you were made into a slave from that conflict the other day right."

"..That's right."

"You were a knight right? Was no one willing to pay the ransom?"

Kevin..are you really asking something like that...And I guess it can't be helped showing reservation towards a slave?

"I guess so. My family wasn't a very wealthy one after all. It can't be helped. I've decided to think I had good luck just that I was able to keep my life."

"That's true, let's live optimistically. I don't know how much you cost but if you're lucky we might find an amazing treasure and you could end up be rewarded after all."

"It's just as Kevin says. If he finds something with a price tag of several billion then Al is going to become a noble of some place right. And then wouldn't all of his slaves now become commoners? Not just you slaves but even the route to become proper squire households could open up for us. I don't know how things are in Devas but I'm the third son of a commoner. Since I don't have any chance as the head of family if I were to normally marry like this then I'd end up as a Free Person. Even if I were to return to my household if I don't pay a decent amount of money to my father or sister and the lord then I can't make a new household after all, unless I remain single the entire time I'd eventually become a serf after all."

"Things like that are the same for Devas."

"I see. And, what was it again?"

"Th..That discussion about running being a test of guts."

"Yeah, about that..Nn? Come to think of it, Henry~ You said you were told to run every morning right. Who said it?"

Come to think of it that was the case. I don't remember saying something like that and up until now I haven't forced a single person along. I told Basutorial he should go running as well but didn't order him to do it. I just said since he's running if he should run together with us. Since he's a reincarnated person as well if he's noticed the effectiveness of it then he should run together with us. As proof of that Zenom still isn't running together with us.

"It was Zulu-sama. Since master goes running daily in order to act as escort for him I was told to run together as well. But, they were running too fast so along the way I wasn't able to keep up with them.."

"So they just left you behind Henry?"

"No, the four of us that were bought together quickly ended up being unable to keep up with them. Zulu-sama lowered his speed matching up to run with us but even then it seems he didn't run half the usual amount."

"Fuee, though I thought a knight would have the guts for it.."

When it comes to simple running there's almost no relation to guts.

Even if you put more effort into it you can't put anymore speed out than you have the stamina for and what it takes to continue running for long distances without breaks is something beyond just guts.

The only reason you feel like you're putting guts into it is because you've been relaxed until then. If it's something you could do about with just guts then martial arts athletes would be able to run faster and longer than anyone else. Regardless of whether it's through rain or wind, or even if you're left behind continuing to run everyday without rest is guts.

People with no guts won't continue with the exercise and can't continue studying either. In order to reach the level considered first-rate you need guts as well as talent as well but even if it's someone without talent if they just have guts and put effort into continuing with that field then even if they don't eventually make it as first-rate they could make it as second-rate.

There's people that say being able to put in effort is a talent as well but I don't think so. When it comes to just continuing to put in effort as long as they have guts anyone can do it. It's an excuse of those who don't have enough guts and can't continue putting in any effort. I think it's nothing more than self-justification for trying to run away from things that are difficult or painful. Though if you say that this time they try to say guts is a talent as well. I can't help but tilt my head over this way of thinking.

That person must just have some reason for not seeing the meaning in continuing to put in the effort or guts. Like they want to do something else or they have some other field of specialty they want to make use of their talent in, I think it's just something like that. I think it's only obvious that every person has things they're suited and unsuited towards. If they don't want to overdo things then it's fine if they just put the effort into things suited to them.

If they want to reach a certain level even if it means overworking themselves then regardless of whether or not they have talent I just think it would take guts. Guts isn't a talent, I think it's an eruption of emotion. If you aren't afraid of the potential misunderstandings then you could call it the same as desire. In other words it's an eruption of the desire for how much you want to gain some kind of technique, skill, or knowledge. They say that people who have a lot of desires find it difficult to understand those who have few but that might be the case.

But you know, whether it be few or many, everyone has desires.

After all they're feelings. If someone has an extremely low amount of that they don't call it not having talent(though it's a matter of if you're making desire = guts and guts = talent), but just that they're mentally ill. They're sick people that need treatment.

That's why, I have no intention of forcing anyone else to do the running. If you feel it's necessary then it's fine if you do it and if you don't think it's necessary there's no need to do it. If they think it's necessary and ask me what to do to run more efficiently then I'll tell them but if they don't ask I'm just ignoring it.

Judging from his state it seems Henry is trying to understand the meaning in running. I'm sure he still has some restraints towards me so it's hard to ask directly, I guess. After he understands what he does, and what about the other people, it's a good place to keep an eye on things. Whether it's Rokko or Kevin they seem to have caught on to something.

It's easy to teach them. Normally you might think the activity of running is just a pointless waste of energy but by continuing it you can gradually train your stamina. Even the sword swinging and practice matches that first-rate adventurers love by continuing it they get faster at swinging or thrusting the sword, or to be more precise, their movements get sharper. The movements to make when facing off against an opponent, feints, the timing for switching between defense and offense, those things are polished and you can naturally do them without thinking. It would be good if it acts as a chance for them to notice it's the same as that. If they can't accept it and reach that point with their own power then after that, it won't lead to them putting in the guts of their own free will.

Increasing people who just do the things they're told and ordered will come much later, it's fine just when I make a country and gather soldiers. If it's everyone right now then I'd like for them not to end as just simple soldiers.

Year 7445, Month 9, Day 26

Everyone's accepted that Garuhashu and Okonneru have a sufficient level of ability to act as front line on the 1st floor. Firenoto and Manzokki are also using the pole-arm during combat and should be reasonably useful as well.

"Then, I guess so. For the time being the next time we enter the dungeon I'll have Zenom lead the {Slaughterers}. The members are Ralpa, Toris, Bel, Gwine, Basutorial, Zulu, Angela, and Giberuti. Miduchi will be the leader of the {Butchers}. I'll also send Okonneru and Firenoto there. I'll be the leader of {Sooner}. I'll also bring Garuhashu and Manzokki."

Things got a bit noisy. It's my first time separating from the {Slaughterers} since we absorbed {Sun.Ray} but since it's fine not to include the combat slaves I purchased this time in when splitting up their shares after all. Everyone's cut should increase a bit.

However, it's almost been two months since they joined us. Whether it's Kamu, Misu, or Binsu I don't care who but would someone just say they want to be the leader already. Well it's still fine but you know.

On our way back to the inn, when we passed by the government office there was a notice for the day of judgement. It's 10 days later on October 5th. When we return to the inn I wonder if a notice of acting as witness will be waiting for us?

Otherwise since the witness is just for the fraud portion it might be fine for just Binsu to do it.

Toris read it out for the members who can't read letters but you could particularly feel the mood changed for everyone in the former {Sun.Ray}. I guess that's only obvious.

"..And, in other words, since that's the case we'll stay in the dungeon a bit longer for 8 days next time."

After I declared that and everyone turned around to look at me before nodding. But, they quickly returned to grim expressions while whispering with the person next to them. That can't be helped. Then I guess we'll break things up here for today. Everyone eat dinner as you please.

Chapter 215: Grading.

Year 7445, Month 9, Day 27

Now then, shall we go...

After running together with Miduchi and the four new slaves and finishing breakfast we had plans to meet up with the former members of {Sun.Ray}, the {Butchers} and {Sooner} in the entrance plaza. Right now we were following behind Miduchi leading the {Butchers} into the dungeon and just paid the entry tax of 100,000 Z (10 silver coins) ourselves as we step foot on the stairs leading down.

The teleport crystal room into the 1st floor was open. Though it's only obvious since the time we enter the dungeon is a bit later than other adventurers due to time spent running and other circumstances. Even then there's a number of adventurer groups that are repeating teleporting into different teleport destinations. The {Butchers} were already lined up at the end of the waiting line to teleport and checking their own equipment.

"Garuhashu, Manzokki. There's no problem with your weapons right? Make sure you properly check them."

I call out to the new combat slaves as well and pulled out the long sword on my left hip to confirm it's condition. Following that is the knife I have in the band on my thigh, the throwing needles on both arms, and then we line up right behind the {Butchers}. Finally I confirmed the map of the 1st floor I had in a container at my right waist while waiting for our turn to teleport.

"The {Slaughterers} huh.."

"Just look, that's some amazing equipment."

"Yeah, the equipment of a first-rate adventurer is extravagant."

"Idiot, that person is Kalstalan-san. It's only obvious he has some banded-mail."

"Hn? There's some faces I don't know."

"Yeah, it seems they bought some new combat slaves. Supposedly from Ronlail again."

"After all that store, are they good?"

"We can't buy something like metal armor but if it's a slave then..Should we pool our money together to buy one?"

"Don't be stupid, who would though...If you'll let me have ownership of it then I'll think about it."

"He..The idiot is you...If someone like you was their owner they'd die right away and it'd be a heavy loss."

"Hey, we're next after the next, everyone confirm your equipment."

"Got~it!"

Even if listen to rumors like that while doing nothing it's just a waste of time so I decided to have a simple meeting over the formations of using {Arrow Head} while moving and {Reverse Triangle} while in combat. The {Reverse Triangle} formation has two cases one where I'm participating in the combat and one where I'm not. In the past, they should have done it when other members from the {Slaughterers} acted as leaders so excluding my two new slaves they should get a grasp on it quickly. On the 1st floor you could say that just those formations are plenty.

I guess it's about our turn.

"Goreda!"

Miduchi and the {Butchers} teleported into the 1st floor in front of us.

We waited a bit over 10 seconds for the teleport incantation appear in the crystal again and everyone grabbed on to it.

"Garuhashu. Make sure you properly grab it. If it's half-assed just you could end up being left behind!"

After being warned by Ginger, Garuhashu fixed his grip on the teleport crystal with his expression tense as he licked his lips.

Alright, there's no one else holding on to it in a half-assed way.

"Then, let's go. Zettafu!"

.....

The moment we teleported in everyone let go of the teleport crystal and turned around. It seems there's no monsters around us.

The direction the arrow on the pedestal was pointing is the wall.

When I went to approach it to confirm the number and Sanno approached it as well. The wall has the number "121" written in the {Common.Language}. While I was spreading out my own map Rodrick opened his map after being told the number by Sanno as well. Ginger, Hisu, and Ruttsu were looking on to Rodrick's map as well.

Come to think of it Rodrick had bought Gwine's map.

..I've found it. Here huh? There's five rooms until we'll reach the teleport crystal room in the center of the 1st floor. Well, it should be fine. I quickly rolled up the map and after putting it back into the container I was going to call out to Rodrick and the others. It seems they still can't find it. I briskly walk next to Rodrick and pointed to the rough area on the map while telling them.

"Right now we're here. We're going that direction. The formation we're going with until we encounter enemies is {Arrow Head One}."

After getting into formation with me at the lead of the arrow and we immediately started walking. Rodrick is in the rear and the edges of the arrow are his combat slaves Denda and Karimu. Of my combat slaves, the former knight Garuhashu is behind me on the right and on the opposite side is Sanno. Directly behind me is the former soldier and combat slave Manzokki and behind him is Ginger, and Ruttsu, continuing back to Rodrick in the very rear, Hisu is also between them with her bow.

..Umm, the first left, then the next right, then to the left on the third time..and, then about 100 meters ahead of that was a pitfall. In about 10 minutes we walked a distance of about 500 meters and then after the split path of this corner is a pitfall, or at least we've arrived where it is. We didn't encounter any monsters up until here.

I carefully look around the corner in the direction we're going.

Using {Detect.Life} is mentally exhausting so I don't feel like using it for something like the 1st floor.

There's something. Even if I don't use Identify I can tell something is gathered around 40 meters ahead. That is..Goblins huh..It's a group of around 20. I guess they're taking a break or something? A considerable number seems to be sitting around. Just in case I tried looking beyond them with Identify vision but I couldn't see anything else or other monsters to be cautious of.

"There's Goblins. Around 20 of them. Since they're just the right opponent show me how you deal with them without me. The distance is about 40 meters."

After I said that in a whisper and moved to the rear then Sanno, Garuhashu, and Rodrick who were holding shields then also Rodrick's slave who was holding the warhammer Denda, and Karimu who uses the battleaxe stood at the lead. Between them Ginger, Ruttsu, and Manzokki would attack with their spears, and Hisu backs everyone up with the bow, that sort of formation.

"I, it..it's my first time fighting monsters and.."

Manzokki seems to be considerably tense.

I patted him on the shoulder from behind and whispered in his ear

"Relax. They're weak opponents. It's fine if you just wait for the front line to break the opponents posture and stab them with the spear. It's simple." and I also said "In the worst case I'll back you up." to try and calm him down.

Seeing that Ginger said "It's just as your master says. In the past I've seen him fight against an opponent that was so strong there's no comparison with those goblins. Even in the worst case there's no chance of us being killed." and tried to encourage him. Hearing that Manzokki's expression got a bit softer and it seemed like he was able to relax a bit.

Ah, come to think of it, when we saved Ginger on the 6th floor there was something like that.

However, it seems that Manzokki was only finally able to relax hearing the words of the oldest veteran adventurer in this {Sooner}. That's fine but I wonder if he wasn't able to relax just from hearing my words? It's fine since I'm still just a brat after all though. But, Manzokki is one year younger than me at 16 years old. I'm sure rather than someone like who isn't all that different age a veteran adventurer like Ginger would seem more reliable. An old man's wisdom rather than a turtle's experience I guess. Putting that aside, I wonder who I should have take command of the combat? According to the reports I've heard that Ginger seems to be the best choice and the runner-up would be Rodrick. Since it's the first time, I guess Ginger is the safe choice?

"We'll charge in at 3, 2, 1. Hisu back us up with the bow. Alright?

3..2..1..Now!"

Ginger took command and raised her voice as the signal. At the same time everyone raised war cries like "Uoo~!!" while charging into the group of goblins. Even when the goblins were caught off guard they still stood up and tried to fight back against {Sooner} with their clubs and wooden spears as they approached.

However, in the end they're just sad goblins. They managed to stand up in a hurry but there were even ones that dropped their weapons and ended up tripping and falling over.

I moved to the side of Hisu as she fired her bow and watched over the battle from the rear.

After all it seems like they can win against goblins with no problem. After a short but intense battle I confirmed the damage and just Rodrick's slaves Denda and Karimu suffered some light injuries but there was nothing severe. The injuries themselves weren't anything that would keep them from moving either and just simple bruises. Even if you just ignore it without treating it they won't die from them. Of course, it's far from a heavy injury like a bone fracture.

Rodrick used {Cure} on Denda and Karimu and my combat slave Garuhashu used the healing spell {Cure Light} on Sanno, additionally I used the spell {Cure Serious} on everyone who was hurt so not even the pain would be remaining. Since their HP wasn't completely recovered it was a bit troublesome but I used {Cure Light} as well.

After that we walked around the 1st floor and I had them enter combat a number of times. They didn't need my assistance almost at all. Since just about every battle there was some light injuries I had basically turned into a first-aid box. This, if a healer had treated all of them wouldn't it exceed around 1,000,000 Z per person? No matter how much money they have it probably wouldn't be enough~ Thinking like that and I feel like I profited a bit.

In today you could say I was almost perfectly able to get a grasp on the abilities of {Sooner}.

The number one in abilities was after all Virginia.Nyuman(Ginger).

It's also big that just her level is far above the rest at 15. She precisely stabs monsters with her spear through the gaps of the front line. She's also considerably skilled at keeping monsters in check. Honestly speaking as a fighter her technique with the spear is high enough to the level where it's even rude to compare Gwine and Basutorial with her.

In terms of her ability to lead you could say there's no problem there either. I guess because she's experienced a number of perils she's able to remain composed and calmly deal with the situation.

If she can remain like this even on the 6th and 7th floors then she would be reliable but..in that regard I'm sure Gwine and Basutorial are veterans so when it comes to their overall abilities I can't say anything. Though it might not be something to make comparisons over.

It's certain that {Sun.Ray} was a first-rate party after all and even among the initial reconnaissance members for the 6th floor she wasn't one of the suckers. I guess I'll use her as the standard for 100 points huh?

Following her is the number two Hsiurura.Harurein(Hisu) and Rodrick.Faruergaz(Rodrick). Once again Hisu has experienced combat a completely different number of times so she's always able to remain calm and pick out her targets.

Rodrick was trained by a knight group and has experience in war so if it's this level of front line then it's fine to see him as quite reliable. Those sword techniques he learned in the knight group seem to exceed the average adventurer around there as well. It's also big that he can use magic. But, I'd like for him to train a bit more with magic. Also, every time his allies get injured he seems to panic a bit. 75 points and 70 points.

He falls behind these two a bit but my combat slave

Meisun.Garuhashu(Mekku) isn't losing. Including the fact that he can use the spell {Cure Light}, I thought it's only as expected from him costing 30,000,000 Z. The only experience he has in war is the one from last time but even then that's plenty. I wonder if it's because he's properly got the basics covered with the sword skills he trained as a knight, they're properly working against monsters as well.

The reason he seems to be making expressions that look a bit stiff, I wonder if it's because he's confused over the distance between his opponent and there being some forms he can't use? Otherwise, after all because it's his first time in the dungeon? Since he can use water magic his efficiency with using healing spells is good as well, though I might be looking at things a bit optimistically he's still plenty passable with the two above. 70 points.

Next up is Sannose.Kumiru(Sanno) and Rutsogu.Samyueruga(Ruttsu) these two. It seems they were average adventurers up until they started teaming up with Rodrick and the others. There's quite a few times when they show off exceptionally good team work. Sanno seems to have times when he charges in a bit too far but I guess you could say Ruttsu keeps a good eye on that? Both of them get 65 points.

Dendoru.Sumaisu(Denda) is one of Rodrick's combat slaves and he's a huge man who swings around a warhammer. He's a combat slave that was part of something or other second-rate party that collapsed near the end of last year. The owner of him who died also owned Karieru.Makusu(Karimu) and the two of them ended up going to the family of the bereaved as assets where they were sold to Ronslail's store.

Both of them have quite a bit of strength and they're Laios, which is a race blessed with superior physical abilities, so you could say they're considerably skilled fighters. Just, whether it be the time they were in the second-rate party, before they entered {Sun.Ray}, or even after they entered {Sun.Ray} since it seems in the end they never received any proper training, there's a lot of excess in their movements, and you can strongly feel that they're leaving everything to their strength. Both of them get 50 points.

And then, finally is my combat slave Jesutasu.Manzokki(Jesu). It seems he was from the commoner ranking and received a bit training but at best it's that much. If he continues like this things could get harsh. He's using the spear but if I were to even try comparing them Basutorial and Gwine would probably get angry.

In terms of technique Manzokki seems to have a wider variety of forms but since recently both Gwine and Basutorial have accumulated quite a bit of severe live combat experience against ogres, when it comes to just the "sweeping thrust" form the sharpness would probably even exceed Ginger. If it's up to the 2nd or 3rd floors then the other members can probably cover it up by supporting him but on the 4th floor suddenly the doors open as the undead ambush your party from right in the middle. In that case..he might die...40 points.

I guess around there? Now then, it's almost evening. I guess we'll stop things around here for today and return to the surface. It might be good to have Rodrick take command of the combat tomorrow.

Today is the eighth day since I've started entering the dungeon with {Sooner}. Entering the dungeon with them ends with this time today. The amount of money we made from sales of magic stones earned this time was? 4,480,000 Z, around 560,000 Z a day. Since I get my share plus one, excluding my two combat slaves splitting that up into 9 that's roughly 498,000 Z. If you think about it in terms of earnings for a single day then it's a new high record for {Sooner}. However, when it comes to just the entry tax it cost a total of around 800,000 Z and then there's the food expenses as well. After all it ended up as a big loss for me.

In regards to the {Butchers} which Miduchi was leading the income and expenses was pretty similar. Even though we can cover it up plenty with the amount being earned from the {Slaughterers}, it's still pretty harsh, this. It's certainly true that it costs that much because we're leaving the dungeon everyday but if we weren't doing that then we'd have to spend the night in the dungeon and then it would be difficult to get plenty of rest and while it's just the 1st floor someone might end up suffering serious injuries from exhaustion of the consecutive battles.

Well, just this there's no helping it.

In regards to the {Slaughterers} since Miduchi and I weren't around as expected they just circled around the wall of the ogre mage rooms so their earnings shouldn't be lower than usual. I thought that would be the case but of all things they found a stupidly huge {Opal} in one of the altar rooms on the 6th floor. According to Identify the value is 8,600,000. That's a market price of 86,000,000 Z. Since it's a gem I'm sure the price will be about half of that but it's still a huge profit. It's almost to the point where I felt a bit apologetic taking over 80% of the earnings even though I wasn't participating. Sorry about that~

By the way, according to the details I heard from Miduchi about the {Butchers} every night and what I knew from acting together with {Sun.Ray} in the past I can more or else assess them as well.

However, I want to properly accompany the {Butchers} once as well and see through things. There's also the slaves after all.

In any case, ever since the other day when the notice of the day of judgement came out, the topic has come up frequently in {Sooner} as well. I wonder if Ginger doesn't have any lingering attachment towards Haruku? I wonder how everyone feels about Zemyunel who often took command of them? In regards to the Rindobel couple that was the leaders? I feel like I want to frankly ask their feelings as well but I don't think it's a topic I should ask about from my side. No, right now I'm the leader so I guess it wouldn't be bad to ask either.

But, I guess it's fine. Later~three days from now is the day of judgement. If I just watch Binsu's testimony(after all he was summoned as a witness. I was as well though), at that time and the state of everyone else I should be able to tell.

Chapter 216: Imitation Shop

Year 7445, Month 10, Day 7

It's finally become the day of judgement.

Basutorial and the others anticipated this and started negotiating to stock up on the necessary ingredients for sausages before we entered the dungeon last time. Thanks to that we were all busy yesterday. Basutorial left in the morning alone in order to stock up on the pig's bowels so he wasn't around but we ended up with an amount of meat that we couldn't cover with just one meat mincer. It was close to being convinced with tears but I was essentially threatened by everyone's begging so I ended up having to make another meat mincer while my nose bleeds out again.

When I finally finished making the second meat mincer and went to wipe my bleeding nose while basking in the feelings of satisfaction, I could hear the noises of everyone enjoying themselves from upstairs. Everyone else was having fun making use of the first meat mincer to make minced pork and it seems they're in the process of sausage making. Under Catherine's leading they're trying to fill the casings with minced meat but there's a bit of a trick to it so it seems they weren't able to do it well.

"I'll do it next."

"Let me do it after that."

"Koloil-sama, you put your left hand like this."

"Ah, it tore.."

"It's fine if it's just a bit."

"Isn't it simple!"

"Zenom-san sure is skillful!"

And just like that, I can everyone's voices like they're really having a great time.

Even though were right nearby, there should only be one floor difference, but during that I've been alone staring at a wall with my hands over some ores while clenching my teeth and bleeding from my nose while concentrating so I feel a bit lonely but I guess this much can't be helped. While covered in sweat I brought it up to them and they raised cheers over the meat mincer I just made and as Ralph plundered it from me, everyone else said I was too dirty from the sweat to be around the food products, so I was chased out.

This is hard to accept.

Even then just filling the casings ended up taking them into the night and after that they had to work through the night smoking and boiling them. Catherine, Terry, and John were used to the operation but because of the problem of stamina they ended up going to sleep early in the night and after that everyone ended up working the night with almost no sleep under the instruction of Giberuti.

That labor ended up bearing fruit and in just a single night they made close to 2,000 sausages.

If we end up not being able to sell them tomorrow like this it would be hard to make eye contact. The money doesn't matter at all but all of that trouble being for nothing is mentally painful.

Zenom, Giberuti, Zulu, and Angela the pure Orth people said, "It'll absolutely sell. If it doesn't then it's fine if we buy it all with the money we've saved." so since they were willing to say it that far we ended up making them.

We put an application for a stall in the plaza in front of the government office immediately after the notice was placed up and we even purchased a proper table, extra stove, frying pans, and such.

"I remember back to the school festival."

"Ah, that, I was thinking the same thing. It was fun right.."

Toris and Bel were whispering to each other while setting up but it seems they're having fun.

"Are the school festivals for college fun?"

"Since we only know the culture festival of our school after all.."

Ralpha and Gwine were asking Miduchi.

"The scale of them is different after all. They're fun!"

Hearing that Ralpha and Gwine laughed while going to the inn to get the sausages for selling. I stand next to Miduchi and call out to her as well.

"Come to think of it~ self-defense university had a festival in commemoration for the opening of the school, that was pretty fun. Since there were exchange students from the armies of foreign countries as well, everyone would setup imitation shops with the cooking of their home town. I went around eating with my friends until we were about to collapse."

"..If you have friends right..Wouldn't it be fun.."

"Eh?"

"I, only went to the school festival of my university during the first year..Since I didn't have any friends to go around with it was boring..After that every year during the period of the school festival I would play net games and go around killing monsters.."

"I..I see..But, you have them now right? Friends."

"..Yeah. Today, I'm in charge at lunch after all! We're going to sell a lot!"

Isn't good if they can make up for their past?

As long as they make sure to properly not forget about the fact that it's business it's fine for it to be fun. There's nothing bad about that at all.

I sit down next to Binnodo.Gekudo(Binsu) on one of the seats for witnesses while wearing my high class formal clothes that have no use other these sorts of occasions. I guess Binsu is considerably tense, he's been fidgeting over and over next to me as if he can't calm down.

"Gr..Gr..Greed-kun I'm amazed you can remain that calm.."

Binsu gulped and started talking to me in a small voice.

"..I'm used to it after all.."

Attending a day of judgement like this..how many times has it been again? I appear in it pretty often right. Of course I still think I've properly watched the lashings and hangings from the audience with everyone else while drinking alcohol and eating something more often than like this though.

Since we the {Slaughterers} center around reincarnated people, excluding Zenom and my slaves, the majority of us are still brats and don't really have much interest in the enforcement of punishments so we often come with the feel of viewing sakura trees bloom while drinking and eating. Though things will be busy this time.

"I see..It's my first time and hi..his majesty the King will directly talk to us right? I..I really doubt I can calm down.."

Binsu's knees are still trembling the same as usual.

"Whether or not you'll end up directly having to talk to his majesty, depends on Koritto and the others response..If they deny the charges then you'll be called as witness but if it's a judgement they accept then you won't end up being called. Well I think you'll probably end up being called though. In the first place we've gathered quite a bit of evidence up until yesterday so it's not like there's any problem right?"

Ever since the incident roughly two months ago, the members of the former {Sun.Ray} went around gathering evidence and submitted several pieces of it to the knight group. I had also gained information through Miduchi's connections that the Rindobel couple hadn't done any activity towards collecting the charms in the capital since the start of the year.

Today I heard they've even called the one who commanded and summarized that investigation, Tukerin, a famous healer in the capital. The crimes of the Rindobel couple are of great interest to the town of Baldukk so they're scheduled to take place just before lunch when the most attention is gathered so Tukerin still hasn't arrived here yet.

Just like that, the judgements steadily continue and along with that time continues to pass. The judgements which started at 8 in the morning exceeded tens of cases already and it's reached close to lunch in no time at all. Tukerin had already arrived and was sitting next to me with an uninterested face. After all the dark elf I caught sight of in the capital previously was this old man.

Judging from his well ordered features he was probably quite the good looking guy when he was younger.

Finally the Rindobel couple, Harukein.Fumizu(Haruku), and Binsukol.Zemyunel(Bin) were brought out to the court stand like place. The King glanced at the documents for a bit and then flatly declared the charges while asking if they accept their crimes or not. His expression was considerably harsh right from the start.

Judging from it, he probably already heard the general outline the other day or this morning.

"..Such charges as these of the crime of fraud, furthermore the same crime of fraud towards a noble, the appropriate punishment for the suspects KroittoRindobel and Meiria.Rindobel who are recognized as the principal offenders, is 26 lashings with a whip, a fine of 125,000,000 Z (125 gold coins), and decapitation along with their heads displayed on the prison gates for one week.

Also, suspects Harukein.Fumizu and Binsukol.Zemyunel are recognized as serious offenders for the same crimes and each should receive punishments of 21 lashings with a whip, a fine of 100,000,000 Z, and death by hanging. Suspects, do you accept the charges and submit to your punishment?"

The Rindobel couple denied their crimes. Haruku silently shook his head up and down to accept it and Bin denied the crimes the same as the couple. Well it's just as expected. The duration of my {Suggestion} spell has long since ended but since he was under the influence of it once, it won't overturn the fact that for the period of time he was under the influence from it he deeply thought about the things he did to himself.

Around now he should be thinking something like, "I want to get revenge on the couple that I dedicated myself to that extent who abandoned me. For that sake it's necessary to reveal all of our crimes. Obviously I won't be able to escape punishment in the process of that either."

Since Haruku obediently accepted his crimes his assets had long since been confiscated and all of it was submitted to the knight group but in the first place it wasn't enough to reach the amount of the fine. Also, since he obediently accepted his crimes he'll most likely just get executed by hanging and most likely go without being lashed with a whip.

In any case, putting aside Haruku since there's still those who haven't accepted their crimes we'll end up being called as witnesses along with the evidence. In terms of order first off the evidence is stated. The knight group of Baldukk reads out the evidence submitted by the members of the former {Sun.Ray}.

Among those was the crimes they committed in the past confessed to by Haruku and the matter of the magician Santosu(the fact that the money he paid wasn't returned) who died in the dungeon in the spring of this year was included as well. Also, the fact that nobles were included(referring to Binsu) as the victims was reported without missing a thing.

The King silently listened to those. And then, it reached the stage of questioning the witnesses. Binsu, me, and Tokerin moved over to the witness seats near where the King was standing on the platform. We all took the same retainer's greeting but since it's a trial we were made to stand up right away.

"Witnesses pledge to the God of Law and Truth that you everything you speak is without falsehood."

The three of us make the pledge one after the other.

"You..Tukerin huh..It's been a while...For you to act as the witness for a fraud like this. Fuffu. Nn...Mu."

The knight commander of Baldukk and what seems to be the knight who's in charge of protecting him whispered something into the King's ear. If I'm certain that person was..Ah, that's right. He's the King's eldest son. Prince Richard.Rombert the Fourth. He's a member of the first knight group but he should still be just a platoon commander.

I've heard before that the leader of the guards of the King has to at least be at the class of company commander or greater to be given the duty but I guess a prince that might become the future King is an exception. Although, it seems the possibility of this persons child, in other words the King's grandchild being the next King is higher. Though it seems they're still two or years and just an infant. The former King was supposedly the grandfather of the current King after all.

"..I see. Yeah, that's right..Got it."

The King makes suggestive responses while looking at me. It was an unpleasant look as if he was evaluating me once again. I just remained quiet with my gaze lowered.

"We've interrupted things..Witness Binnodo.Gekudo sub-Noble. Pledge before the God of Law and the Truth that you speak no falsehoods and give your testimony."

The King first ordered Binsu to give his testimony.

"..And that's the reason why putting aside my little sister who passed away, while I got back the amount of money I paid, during that time, since that money ended up being dead capital I ended up missing business chances and it was impossible to invest it in other ways."

Yeah, he's talking just as we practiced a number of times since last night. He's sweating an amazing amount from the tension but that can't be helped. These sorts of people aren't unusual. Now then, I guess next up is me?

"Well then, foreign merchant leader Baidu~nsu.Tukerin, pledge to the God of Law and Truth that you speak no falsehoods and give your testimony."

Though his status is the same as Miduchi and says Lail Kingdom Commoner {Lilac} though. Well, the only ones who actually have the words commoner in their status are dark elves. Normally it's something or other Family or Squire something's Second Child after all..It must be special. However, foreign merchant leader is it. I wonder how it's different from the president of a company? I guess I'll try asking Miduchi later.

"I, Baidu~nsu.Tukerin, speak only the truth in the name of the God of Law and Truth, and then I pledge to the almighty your majesty
*****."

I heard your majesty Lilus whispered in a small voice from next to me but..I guess it doesn't matter huh?

Tukerin stated that he received the request to investigate from a certain connection so he went asking around centering around the temples in the poor areas. At the same he recorded that on some paper(!) and submitted it all at once. A member of the knight group received that and acknowledged that it matched up with Tokerin's testimony.

Also, in a corner of the audience there was a group of the witnesses Tokerin found during his investigation from the poor areas as well as around 20(!) low ranking nobles mixed in and they were willing to give testimony to the fact that it was properly investigated and organized, so that added to the reliability in Tokerin's investigation materials.

Obviously the details of that was proof of the fact that since the start of the year there was no activity in the capital relating to the buying of God Notes.

"..I've made my judgement. I give Koritto.Rindobel the punishment of 36 lashes, a fine of 150,000,000 Z, and decapitation with his head displayed above the prison gates for 10 days. The punishment for Meiria.Rindobel is 36 lashes, a fine of 150,000,000 Z, and decapitation with her head displayed above the prison gates for 10 days. The punishment for Harukein.Fumizu is execution by hanging. The punishment for Binsukol.Zemyunel is 31 lashes, a fine of 120,000,000 Z, and decapitation with his head displayed for 3 days."

It seems he doesn't need my testimony.

The punishments were carried out and it reached the lunch break.

I was going to call out to Tokerin to thank him and invite him to lunch but Prince Richard.Rombert the Fourth ran up to us and told us both to come to the government office. Come to think of it it seemed like Tokerin and the King were acquaintances. In the past, I wonder if he made some sort of request from him?

The King was standing in the shadow of the gate for the government office a bit further in behind some plants.

Tuker and I took the retainer's greeting and knelt down.

"Tukerin. Honestly answer my question. What is your relationship with that Greed over there?"

He~ so that was what it was?

"There's no direct relation. I just received a request to investigate by chance."

I wonder if it would be best not to touch on the topic of Miduchi?

"Chi...You're as shrewd as always. Like you would move over something like an investigation request. Not to mention that level of fraud...Well, that's fine. Was it that Greed who directly made the request for you to investigate?"

"No, your majesty. It's because the request came from one of our countrymen who's a subordinate of his. If that wasn't the case then.."

Oh, so it's fine to mention it?

"Ah, it seems there was one dark elf under him. I see, if that was the case then, Well..Hey. Greed"

"Ha"

"There's nothing more I need from you. Calling you out..Hmn, come to think of it, I heard. You supposedly reached the 8th floor right."

"Ha"

He sure is quick to hear things.

"...It's fine, you can take your leave. Tukerin, it's been a while.

Let's eat lunch. Come along"

"Ha...If you'll excuse me"

"I humbly refuse."

Eh!!?

"Why? I made preparations for catering at the best restaurant in Baldukk because I heard you were coming. It's stewed tongue and steaks from a young cow."

Oo!! That sounds good! And expensive! If Tukerin-san isn't going to eat it then let me!

"You're the same as usual~ your majesty. The reason I refused was because there's something even better to eat."

"What?"

What?

"Since it's been a while since we last met. It's fine for me to treat your majesty."

It can't be..No..there's no way right?

"Ho? If you're going to say that far then it's delicious right?"

"That's only obvious. Supposedly it's a food that was newly created this Baldukk. I ate it myself this morning as well but..that was..the best."

No, stop it! Something like that isn't what you feed to a King right! We only have one type of flavor today as well. There's not even any beef mixed into it.

"I'll prepare some right away. Greed-san. Can I rely on you for it?"

"Huh..That is..Prepare what?"

Ah, after all..This old man, just when I thought he came late so he was eating sausages huh? Come to think of it they did mention we were in his case for the preservatives or something like that...Though we're still experimenting in various ways with the preservatives so we haven't used them in the product yet.

"That great product you all have created. "Baldoggie" was it? With plenty of mustard and..Ah, I'll stop there. Your majesty, that's the most delicious when it's freshly made. Shall we go? It's right over there."

"Hmph. I see, it bothers me a bit that Greed is related to it but well I guess it's fine. Lead the way."

"Ha, Wa ha!!"

His majesty the King ignored all the customers lined up as he skipped to the front and while everyone in the surroundings was kneeling he ate five of them.

It seems it was good publicity and the 2,000 Baldoggie's were sold out by the evening.

That evening, we were saved that we still had some remaining when an order for 10 Baldoggie arrived from Dorureon. The King even tried to order some to take back with him but since our experiments with the preservatives still haven't finished, as expected we turned that down.

Chapter 217: The Minimum Stamina

Year 7445, Month 10, Day 7

"Gree..Al-san. Umm, the one who came to the Baldoggie stall at lunch was, hi..his majesty right?"

It was when I had sat down to start eating dinner together with the members of {Sooner}, Rodrick who was sitting diagonally across from me tried asking me that timidly.

"Hn? Yeah, that's right."

I ended up replying a bit harshly. Ah~ even though it's not related to Rodrick I wonder if it ended up sounding disagreeable...

Really, that old man, he even made me deliver sausages to Dorureon..Why should I have to run to Dorureon while carrying sausages...

"Everyone was watching! That his majesty would eat the Baldoggie, isn't that amazing!"

Rodrick said it a bit excited in a loud voice. Why at this point?

"Look, it was true right?"

"Tha..That was serious..I had gone to take a shit at that time so.."

Hearing that Sanno and Ruttsu were whispering to each other in the corner.

"Fufu..The leader of the party master is a member of is connected to royalty, no, his majesty the King. Isn't that amazing!?"

"Oh~ as expected of master right. He is the eldest son of Count Faruergaz after all!"

Rodrick's combat slaves Denda and Karimu were both proud. However, aren't the things you two are saying strange? Isn't that unrelated to Rodrick...

"So that person was his majesty Thomas.Rombert the Third huh.."

"Ha~ I don't know what's going on anymore.."

My combat slaves Garuhashu and Manzokki seemed dumbfounded. Something like that doesn't matter at all.

The problem is Ginger. She's been pouring vodka down her throat like it's water since a while ago. Hisu is on her side saying something while trying to hold her back but Ginger just keeps pouring one glass after another as if she's possessed by something.

The judgements ended before lunch today but the enforcement of the punishments happened after lunch in a different plaza while other judgements were still going on. Our Baldoggie stall was in an area right near the judgement plaza so they sold lazy crazy but we ended up leaving Cathy, John, and Terry to look after things while my four new combat slaves help them out and the {Slaughterers} including myself, and a total of 15 of us went to watch the enforcement of the punishments.

The Rindobel couple and Zemyunel were made to bite on to a gag as some brawny members of the knight group whipped them over 20 times then decapitated them. The only one who's head flew in a single hit was Meiria and both Koritto and Zemyunel took two swings of an axe. Their heads are still on display in the plaza in front of the government office.

When Haruku was given the punishment of hanging he looked at Ginger but Ginger turned eyes away. Haruku made a sad expression for just a bit moment but it remained in my impression how he laughed when he looked at the heads of the Rindobel couple right nearby. That time I was standing close by Ginger just in case she might do something. After she turned her eyes and looked at the ground to the side it ended with her whispering, "Idiot Gesshu".

Most likely, Ginger still had some feelings for Haruku. Whether she's regretting the fact that she couldn't properly look at his face to the very end, otherwise, the fact that she was dating someone who was betraying everyone and as a result was hanged to death because of that. I can't tell that far. However, I'm pretty sure that some sentiment of regret was largely shadowing over her.

I have no intention of trying to do anything for her. I'm sure she herself doesn't need something like that either, sorting out her feelings is something she should do herself. I think it's best to leave her to herself for now. In the first place, starting with Haruku the one who dragged all of the former {Sun.Ray} members into a trap on the lower floors was me after all. If you just look at it from the surface it seems like Haruku snapped and dragged the three of them in with him as he blew himself up but you could say the direct cause was me using {Suggestion} at that time.

Though I say that, it's not like the four of them were executed from having false charges made against them, if you take into consideration all the things they've said and done until now and the fact that a noble like Binnodo.Gekudo(Binsu) was included in that, it was just a matter of their judgement being made official. It should be something that Ginger already understands but it's also something she can't accept so easily emotionally.

If you were to ask me, I'm fine as long as it doesn't have any influence on the group training we have tomorrow. Though if she's just got a hangover I'll at least use {Neutralize.Poison} on her.

"Master, would it be alright to ask? With his majesty the King what sort of..."

Garuhashu tried asking with a nervous feel. I swallowed what I was chewing and when I went to open my mouth to reply someone interjected from the side.

"Hey, Mekku. Even though you're just a slave you shouldn't be asking about things like that. Though I say that, this is something I was interested in as well. Why don't I ask that question. And,
Al-san, in reality what about it? Were you royalty?"

Ruttsu said that. It's only obvious, I'm sure everyone is interested. It's long since been known that I sell armor to the first knight group but getting the King to eat sausages over just that is unbelievable after all. Ruttsu is a kind fellow who pays good attention. I guess it's because the amount of time I've lived my life in my past life was longer but unless I'm asked a considerably impolite question whether its from a combat slave or anyone else I'll reply to it without paying too much mind to
it.

However, commonly it's not seen as a good thing for a slave to pry into their masters affairs. After all slaves are slaves.

Fundamentally they don't have any human rights nor do they pay taxes. Down to every hair and the last drop of blood, they're entirely the owner's "belonging". Ruttsu was trying to cover for the new combat slave Garuhashu while acting like it was to resolve his own doubts.

"No, there's no way I'd be royalty. I have no blood relation, we're complete strangers. It's just, in connection to the business I do I also do direct deliveries to the royal family. During the process of that I've encountered him a number of times, I'm sure that's why his majesty remembers me."

Rodrick has been buying condoms from me and since his older sister is her highness Queen Marinen so I thought he might know everything about my relation on that end but I guess even if he knows that sort of thing isn't something you talk to everyone about. Everyone other than Rodrick was nodding to themselves. Just like that we continued with our meals and time passed.

"Hisu. Sorry but look after Ginger-san for tonight. It's fine if you just pull her to the training tomorrow without being late."

I said that while putting two silver coins in Hisu's hand. A short while later including myself everyone finished their meals and left in small groups. Every since we entered the place in the evening Ginger has been expressionless as she gulps down vodka and slamming her cup on the table requesting more. She's probably not eaten much of anything.

The next morning Hisu dragged Ginger who had become like a zombie out where I used {Neutralize.Poison} on her, then after letting her drink some water, I throw another bucket or so over her head and she finally seemed refreshed.

"I'm alright. I'm already alright.."

I made a bitter smile while seeing the depressed Ginger say that then after using wind magic to dry her off we all started the training.

Year 7445, Month 10, Day 8

Starting today when we enter the dungeon I decided to look over the {Butchers}. After all as a party their overall combat abilities aren't worth of a comparison to {Sooner}. There's no problem with moving just Ginger over to here(Rather switching her out with Kimu or Jeru who's positions overlap would probably large raise the combat abilities of the {Butchers}), but if I were to do that then I'd have {Sooner} to worry about so I can't just go with the momentum on that one.

However, as expected everyone(excluding my combat slaves Henry.Okonneru(Henry) and Rubano.Firenoto(Rubi)) were part of one of the top teams and they can safely overcome combat on the 1st floor. Though I don't know what would happen if they concentration reaches its limit. Maybe I'll bully them to that point for today?

I was thinking these sorts of things while watching the first battle. We continued for a short while and around the point we passed through two rooms and were deciding which direction to go at a cross road I smiled at all of the members who were looking at me and said.

"Then, it's about time you show me how you get serious. I'll start things off."

While I was in front of everyone as they looked at me with puzzled expressions I used the spell {Audible Clamor} to make the loudest noise I could in the other three directions than one we just came down. They all were surprised for a moment and their expressions changed to those filled with fear and caution but I grinned and said, "It's alright, as long you don't die instantly I'll fix you up. The other day all of my elemental magic levels went up after all. I can even use {Cure All} now."

And then, I declared "Everyone fall back around 30 meters behind me. I'll show you an example." while pulling out my beloved long sword and going on guard. I picked up a random rock from the ground used the spell {Light} on it to make it easier to see.

Kamain.Mishausu(Kamu) and Binoodo.Gekudo(Binsu) hold back Rokasuto.Keinesutan(Rokko), Kevin.Firestarter(Kevin), Jerutodo.Ramiresu(Jeru) who were about to say something and left just me in the center of the crossroad as they withdrew backwards.

Ah, I already know that watching me won't be a good example.

Recently I've been busy with things so I just haven't been able to enter the dungeon on my days off and rampage to my heart's content. Putting aside my skill my intuition will get dull. There's no big reason other than that.

"Ah, Misu. If the light disappears use {Light} on an arrow and shoot it into an appropriate corpse. Also, since we just came from that direction I'm pretty sure it's fine but just in case make sure you properly remain cautious of our backs."

After ordering that of Mifesu.Ransun and I started jumping, stretching, and swinging the sword in my right hand around warming up. I also confirmed to make sure there was properly 10 throwing needles in each of my gauntlets and that they were working properly as a simple shield.

In a few minutes around 5 hobgoblins came from the front, a bit over 10 gnolls from the left, and a bit after that around 20 goblins came charging at us from the right.

Now then~ I've already prepared myself to suffer a few injuries. If I'm up against this number then even I'll be in danger if I don't get serious. Ahead of this crossroad an area of about 10 meters in every direction is the battlefield.

Starting off I used just shot one of {Flame Arrow Missile} towards the hobgoblins that appeared in the front and after that I don't intend to use any spells. If I do that then the hobgoblins will get cautious and not approach so easily.

After that if I just make use of the difference in time to quickly finish up most of the gnoll group then it'll probably fine.

And, I guess that's the largest problem though. It's a battle with time.

The gnolls charge at me from the cave on the left with their spears at the ready.

I run off in a large arc and while evading the spears thrust out I put some fighting spirit into it as I cut through three of the spears all at once.

Soon after the spear of another gnoll was thrust towards me.

I evade that as well and after grabbing it with my left hand at the same time I cut through it with the sword in my right hand.

Immediately I crouched down and rolled to a different gnoll that was confused and used my sword to stab it in the throat killing it before kicking it away to pull my sword out.

I turn while cutting the throat of another one and steal the spear it held with my left hand.
It's not like the tips are made of metal either way so it's just a wooden stick with a sharpened end.
There's no much difference regardless of which end you use to thrust and in the first place the attack power of it is limited.
I swing it around while holding another gnoll in check and start running, then turn another three consecutive gnolls into a bloodbath.
With this that's half of the gnolls.
An arrow giving off light stabbed into one of the gnolls that was on the ground.
I guess I'll finish things up while this arrow is still shining.
There the group of goblins charged at me while screaming gabugyabugya.
But, the goblins are attacking both the gnolls and I.
As expected of goblins.
They'll attack anything that moves.
No, I had already anticipated it though.
If the goblins had arrived first I'm sure the gnolls would have attacked the goblins as well.
With the gnoll's spear still in my left hand I stab a goblin nearby with my sword and pull it right away.
It's already a free for all.
With this even if the hobgoblins come they can't take any actions to take control.
While I was spinning around here and there stabbing with my sword like a dance and look.

Before I realized it the hobgoblins had come and started fighting and including them there's already less than 10 remaining.

During that time I haven't taken a single clean hit.

Though I was smacked with the handles of spears being waved around.

Probably around the outer parts of my left thigh, my back, and my right upper arm have some bruising but it's no big deal.

Hey, that hobgob over there, don't run away showing me your back.

I take a throwing needle out of my left gauntlet and throw

it.

I was even praised by Miduchi for my skill with the throwing needles that Myun taught me.

It beautifully pierced it's head and the hobgoblin fell over forward without making a sound.

Almost as if that was the signal, the gnolls and goblins that had still been standing let out dull screams before starting to retreat. I killed one of them from behind with a throwing needle but the rest was too troublesome so I let them go.

Suddenly the {Light} on the arrow disappeared. It seems I properly was able to fight for over 5 minutes. As expected even my breathing is a bit heavy. Though I still feel like I could fight for several times longer than this as well.

I make some water to wash my sword and after wiping it with my hand towel put the blade back into it's scabbard.

I use {Cure All} twice each on my thigh and back where I can feel a bit of pain and after a total of six times along with my HP fully recovering the pain had completely disappeared. When using healing spells on yourself it's fine regardless of whether you touch the spot or not and the light won't show from below my armor, it's convenient being able to treat the bruises from being hit without anyone noticing.

I turned around and called everyone over.

"Okonneru, Firenoto, gather the magic stones."

I ordered the two combat slaves who were making surprised expressions seeing my fighting strength to gather the magic stones and I gather my throwing needles while continuing.

"Mishausu-san, I leave the remaining combat to you. Feel free to use my slaves without restraint."

After placing the throwing needles in my right gauntlet, I opened up the map again. There should be another crossroad ahead of the left direction..Yeah, there is one. Let's start here next. No, or maybe this side is better? But, it's a bit far after all...

In the end everyone except me split up to gather the magic stones.

As expected with just two people it would take too much time but I guess since there were no combat slaves in {Sun.Ray} who would gather the magic stones without saying anything, so they just didn't seem to pay any mind to it. If they split up with the 9 of them it shouldn't even take 20 minutes. Me? There's no way I'd do it. There's a lot of people after all.

Looking at the map while occasionally checking our surroundings and being alert is my job. I decided to think that while making excuses to myself for not working as I observed the corpses of the gnolls, hobgoblins, and goblins...It seems around half of them were female but after all it doesn't seem like any of them are pregnant. I've seen enough corpses of monsters to be tired of it in this Baldukk dungeon but I'm already used to how much the monsters I've defeated are lacking in livelihood. Confirming if any of them were pregnant has almost just become a habit.

About the only living creature in the dungeon of Baldukk that gives of feelings of any sort of lifestyle are the fairies and it seems even they only have babies born once every several years to several decades. Since it seems they live a stupidly long period of time so it can't be helped that there's that much of an interval between but even they said they ate things like fruits from trees or grass and captured fish from the pond with magic. I don't really get it right.

I can hear the whispering voices of everyone while they're gathering the magic stones but I'm sure it's just about me, but since they've already become my subordinates it's kind of late for that. It doesn't really matter.

After we moved ahead a bit more just like with {Sooner} I watched their fighting from the rear.

Fumu, even after everything's been said and done as expected Haruku was first-rate. Things would probably be difficult for anyone other than Kamu of these members to act as leader. I think it's also big that Kamu's main arm is the bow so she can calmly look over the entirety of the battlefield but the timing she gives out orders is good as well. She gives each of the members their own role and keeps in mind positioning them so they can follow each other up.

I guess also because it's the 1st floor, other than Kamu and Misu who use the bow, everyone else is fighting at the front and they're using the bow to support when necessary. Since even Binsu who can use the spear and magic is standing at the front with a long sword in hand, the front line is built firmly. I guess you could say they're using their high abilities to live up to the face value of the {Butchers}.

There's no problem with my combat slave the former knight Okonneru either and since Firenoto is fortified with Rokko and Kevin on both sides, he's able to fight safely as well. The monsters on the 1st floor aren't very strong so rather than trying to come up with some complex formation, just like this having everyone line up at the front in a semi circle and supporting them from the back with the bow makes a better use of their attack power. When the number of opponents has decreased they can have both flanks move forward and at the same time have the center pull back to easily switch to surrounding them from all directions as well.

When I was showing a bit admiration, it seems that Toris and Bel, the members of the {Slaughterers} who were dispatched as leaders were taking command like this so she was just mimicking them. However, I somehow felt a bit happy that it was proof they were properly trying to learn even from the command of some younger brats. This method only works until the 2nd floor or so. Not to mention only when they have a member of the {Slaughterers} who can use healing spells at a decent level. Starting from the 3rd floor the monsters start to get a bit stronger, so as expected it's difficult to use, and they properly understand that.

I worked them to the bone until evening. Everyone was completely exhausted from the tension and consecutive battles. While Firenoto never suffered any actual injuries, he ended up throwing up from fatigue. Obviously after we returned to the surface I forced him to eat dinner. He's still only 21 years old. Since he's young I'm sure he'll be alright.

"Tomorrow I want to see how much time it takes for you to reach the teleport crystal on the 1st floor. I'll follow from the very rear.

Leave being cautious of things from the back to me."

When I smiled and said that to Kamu and she said, "..I thought it would be about time..Well there's no choice than to give it our best." while looking at me. And then asked, "Hey, do you intend to make me the leader?"

"Hn..I guess so, since you were also recommended by Haruku-san, you're one of the candidates. But, just as I said previously I don't want to decide. I have no intention of pushing something someone doesn't want to do on them either. Also, in regards to switching members between the teams I also intend to take my time and see through things. Excluding a few exceptions I fundamentally intend to split the teams up based on abilities after all. I intend to do some member changes this month so it's fine not to think too deeply about it for now."

After I said that Kamu made a surprised face and happily said to everyone.

"Jusst a moment, listen to this. It seems this month he's going to split up the teams in a new way!"

Hearing that everyone got excited.

"Oho! Are you serious! I want to join the {Slaughterers} as well!"

"Idiot, that's impossible for you~ Even the other day you were done in by Maruso right."

"I'm, not good with the bow or spells like Bel..I guess it's no good.."

"I think I could probably win against Saji!"

Hey now, is it fine not to ask how I intend to make the selection?

Well I guess it's not something that needs to be said now.

"Everyone! Be quiet. We still haven't heard the method for selecting members."

"That's right. How do you intend the members up?"

It can't be helped~

"Yeah, anyone who wants to enter the {Slaughterers} will first have to show that they have the bare minimum stamina. Or to put it more frankly it will be how quickly you can run a fixed distance. I intend to put some observers along the running route so you can't cheat. If you can run it within the time I've decided then you'll gain the right to challenge. After that while there's "some exceptions" it's fine for you to challenge anyone. However, the opponent you challenge must use the same type of weapon. On top of that, since I also want to see your cooperation I'll have you do a three on three practice match rather than one on one.

Of course it's fine for you to use magic as well. If out of three matches you win the most then it's fine to switch you out."

If it's this then can I at least drag it out six months to a year?

Tomorrow I'll have Miduchi who's leading {Sooner} run at her maximum speed..No, on the next break I'll have Basutorial run at his maximum speed and measure the time. Wouldn't it be fine if I make the time about one minute faster than that?

Chapter 218: Older Sister

Year 7445, Month 10, Day 9

It was just past noon when the {Butchers} arrived at the teleport crystal room on the 1st floor. Since we entered the dungeon at 8 am that comes out to clearing through the 1st floor in about 4 hours. Being able to do it at this speed without freezing monsters is pretty good. But you know, I can't approve of them that easily. They suffered a lot of injuries after all. Also it was a big that this time we were lucky to teleport into a location which was close to the shortest route as well. I'd say the rough distance from the location we teleported was around 5 km.

"How about it? What time is it now? Misu"

"Wait just a moment. It's 12..16."

Rokko questioned Misu who has a clock magic tool. Everyone was listening with great interest.

"Hmm..Since we entered at 8 am then, 3 hours and 26 minutes huh?"

What do you mean "Hmm", how in the world did you even calculate that...It doesn't make any sense. Even if he has enough skill I don't want to let a person like this in the {Slaughterers}. I should have said there was a paper math test as well.

"It's 4 hours and 16 minutes...It's far from 3 hours right."

Kamu said while slumping over a bit.

Maybe I'll give them a bit of a hint.

"That, it's a copy of the map Rodrick bought right? It's fine for you to trust in it more."

I said with my arms crossed while leaning against the wall.

They spent too much time being careful of traps. Also, they're still too careful of monsters. Even though we've made them fight that much~ are they still afraid of them? Or else is it the traits of an adventurers that's been ingrained in them?

"Certainly, it still can't be called perfect. But of the ones that are on the market that's the closest one to perfect. The {Sun.Ray}'s map of the 2nd floor and beyond was quite some but how was it comparing the {Sun.Ray}'s map of the 1st floor to that one? Think carefully about that."

After I said that everyone gathered their heads together and started stating their opinions.

"Hey, what did that mean?"

"Don't ask me. There's no way I would know right?"

"Certainly..there's far more trap locations drawn on this map and you can see that almost every passage has been drawn."

"..So it's even more accurate than the map that Rindobel-san and the others were making?"

"The shape of the outer circumference is close to an O. All of the maps from when we were in {Sun.Ray} were oval."

"An O..They call them circles."

"It's fine either way. If Al is saying it then it's probably true that this map is several levels higher."

Worry and be troubled, young'ns. Putting that aside, it's lunch,

I'm hungry. Though we were only walking slowly~

"Okonneru, Firenoto. Start preparing the food. I'm hungry."

After ordering the two slaves to make meal preparations I sat down on some dirt that someone made along the wall. And then I put one leg on the knee of my other and started scratching the dirt in the nicks on the sole of my boots off with a throwing needle.

As expected since I've been wearing them for over three years and pretty soon..I replaced the soles once but the rubber that was covered the leather surface has started to peel off all over and while there's no cracks in the surface of the hardened ebonite at the tips of the toes there's some parts scraped down. Above all, it's a problem that it's started to become a tight fit. The worn-out cloth I had been packing into the ends of it, I had completely stopped with at around this time last year but it seems my body still wants to get even bigger. Though if you were to ask the bigger problem is the width of my feet increasing.

"I..If you'll please, master."

10 Baldoggie were put into a pot that was held in front of me. It's Firenoto. After I put some hot water that was almost boiling into the pot he lowered his head to me and put the lid on it. Since we aren't carrying a stove if we just leave them to boil in water that hot for around 4-5 minutes they're just right. After that if we just put them into some bread with a slice in it along with some leaf vegetables and mustard or mayonnaise then the hotdog is completed.

If while you're eating the first batch you boil one more then it's more than enough to satisfy the high calorie consumption of adventurers. Even more so, the former {Sun.Ray} members often endured a poor diet while in the dungeon. There's no way they'd complain about it.

When I was still entering the dungeon carrying several hundred cucumbers I remember thinking, "If these weren't cucumbers but sausages then". No, I like cucumber as well. If you dip them in mayonnaise and eat them they're good but after all I really want to eat some umekyu or morokyu~

While waiting like that the hotdogs were finished so I bit into one. Delicious.

Everyone is deliciously eating them after all, this, wouldn't it sell well to the people carrying cucumbers into the dungeon? Well, it can't be helped trying to sell to something like adventurers though.

"By the way, why do you call them {hotdogs}? They're unrelated to {dog}s right?"

Okonneru asked me while sitting in front of me and eating a hotdog as well.

"..No clue...The one who named it was Basutorial, so ask him."

Sorry. I didn't expect that sort of tsukkomi all of a sudden.

Year 7445, Month 10, Day 13

After we left the dungeon and it seems {Sooner} still hadn't come back out. Thinking we should gather in the entrance plaza when I was killing time discussing the reflection points from today with the {Butchers} before long {Sooner} returned to the surface so I broke up the group.

Walking besides Miduchi who was commanding {Sooner}, the two of us returned to Boil Manor.

And then, there was three carriages stopped in front of Boil Manor.

Two of those were ones I had seen before. So they've finally come huh? We're saved...We were supposed to be entering the dungeon until tomorrow but it seems I'll be taking the day off tomorrow. If I don't replenish the stock already, I'm starting to feel sorry for the Ryogu's and Yotlen who have to lower their heads all the time.

"Ah!!"

It seems Miduchi's realized as well and a bit of blood is rushing to her head. I wonder if she's tense? It's alright, you won't get eaten alive.

The caravan from Bakuddo has increased by one carriage this time and each of the carts has a pile of luggage in them. I can see several nostalgic faces surrounding them as well. Oh? That is..Kerry huh? Though he wasn't supposed to be a squire but...I don't know the Wolf-people woman standing next to him..Was there a person like that?

"Ya~ it's been a while."

I called out to the leader of the squires who were gathered around the carriages. It was Beckwith. Aizen said the former head squire. I don't see the current head squire Sean so he must have come along as the leader of the squires. Since he's already at a good age overdoing..I wonder if he was acting as the coachman? Or else, since he's passed the difficult age of 50, maybe he's come to see the royal castle in commemoration?

"Oh! Al-sama. It's been quite a while! I'm Bekkusu."

Yeah, I know. There's no way I could forget. Along with father, brother, and sister-in-law, I was also under the care of Bekkusu quite a bit. Up until my sword training centered around practice matches I was trained pretty hard by Bekkusu...His white hair has increased quite a bit and his height as well..I guess that's just because I've taller huh?

"Al-sama! It's been a while. Umm, this person is.."

Kerry ran over to me. Next to him he brought along that woman.

"It's nice to meet you, Alan-sama. My name is Mial.Dokush, I'm Kerry's wife. We got married in the spring of this year. I'm from Badetto village."

"He~! Congratulations! I'm Alan.Greed. In the past I've been in the care of Kerry quite a bit. I said some selfish things and forced them to bring me along hunting causing quite a bit of trouble. Look after Kerry from here on out."

Mial is four years younger than Kerry at 19 years old. It seems she's the daughter of a commoner from Badetto village. Since they had some connections she married in to Kerry's family in the spring of this year. This time the number of carriages increased by one so they needed to increase the escort members as well but since it was soon after the war and the squires needed some rest father came up with the idea of employing them in a hurry. That explains why there's a number of old men that normally don't come. It must have centered around people who didn't join the war this time. Although, it might have been just right for honeymoon trip since Kerry and the others don't usually leave the village other than hunting for a number of days. Though only nobles have that sort of custom. ..Come to think of it Mial has rubber protectors on as well. Just the same as Kerry she doesn't have the shield attachment on her left hand but it's a custom version where the heavy armor and defensive power is focused on the limbs rather than the body. It's not for use in war versus people. It seems to be a new model for versus beasts. She must work as a hunter as well. This one might actually be better for adventurers..No, there are also of monsters that use weapons as well so the defensive power of the body is important too. The helmet is the same type as everyone(you could the same as me as well) it seems. There's been almost no improvements made on that end.

Ah, that's right. I wonder who came along this time?

"Is it brother this time? Or else.."

I asked towards Bekkusu.

"It's the former master. We only just arrived here and were about to take an inn.."

While Bekkusu was in the middle of replying to me, we heard father's voice.

"Ah, it seems they don't have enough rooms. It seems around half of us will have to stay at a different inn..Al. So you returned? It's good to see you're healthy..Are you Chizumagurol-san?"

"Ah, father. I'll introduce you. This is Miduchi, Midu~ritto.Chizumagurol."

"A, it..it's nice to meet you. My name is Midu~ritto.Chizumagurol."

Miduchi lowered her head. Looking from the side she seems a bit tense.

"Yeah. I've heard from Shani. I'm Heguyiyal.Greed. It's fine to call me Hegald. It seems Al is always in your care. Thanks."

"I..I as well..a..am always in his, careth!"

What is careth...There's limits to how tense you can get. It seems even Miduchi realized that she bit her tongue and hit herself in the forehead.

"In any case, everyone is tired from the long trip right? You should enter the inn and take a rest. Also, I'll prepare another inn as well. How many people is it?"

"Nn..Take one for six people. Also, what are your plans for tomorrow?"

"Yeah, I intend to make it a day off. But, I want introduce everyone as well so I kind of want you to stop by Baldukk again on your way back?"

"Hn? I see. But, it's not like we're in any particular hurry. We can stay here for 2-3 days and.."

Uwa, don't say it so leisurely.

"No~no~no. We're the ones who are in a hurry."

I shook my hand in front of my chest a number of times while continuing.

"The store in the capital has long since been completely out of stock and about the only stuff remaining is a small amount for the royal family. There's a never ending number of claims from our frequent customers. Also, there's a huge line waiting from the knight group as well..I want to go and deliver the stock tomorrow."

"..I see. Then we'll go and make deliveries in the capital tomorrow and stay one night there. Then the day after tomorrow is it fine if we return back here again?"

"Yeah. It would be a big help if we do that. Also, I've bought six more slaves. I'll introduce you tonight."

After saying that I had John run to take rooms for six people in an inn and had Terry run to the {Butchers} and {Sooner} to convey that we would be taking the day off from entering the dungeon tomorrow and I wouldn't be able to join for dinner tonight. Additionally I told him to bring all of my combat slaves back as well.

During dinner when I was introducing the slaves, Manzokki said something like, "I'm give it my best in {Sooner}." I guess father didn't care for the name {Sooner}, though it was also because he was drunk but he decided on his own to rename it the {Exterminators}. Since it sounded good I thought the {Slayers} I came up with before was good though. Well it doesn't really matter though.

Also, after dinner, we talked a bit in my room before going to sleep but I was told, "If you already properly understand what it means for your races to be different then I won't say anything. I have faith in you and if you say that's good then I think it's fine if you marry a dark elf as well. But, the nobility has the nobility's, a lord has a lord's, and royalty has the royalty's responsibility, No, duty that comes with being one. It's fine as long as you don't forget that." After all it seems they were a bit worried about having children.

The next day we went to the capital and first off went to make deliveries of armor and take sizes from the knight group.

Incidentally, the number of suits being delivered this time was 22.

At the end of last year, when we were taking orders we accepted double the normal number. However, when I counted the number of boxes of armor in the carriage there was 23 of them. There's one suit too many. This is...

Everyone, sorry about that. So you prepared a new one for me since my body has grown bigger huh?

I'm grateful.

Thinking that I watched as measurements were taken for the next orders and crossed my arms while nodding to myself. And then, father approached me and said, "Take off your clothes." Behind him was Jim, one of the veteran squires of Bakuddo, with a measuring tape in his hand.

Huh?

"Since your height has grown, even though you made it a bit large, from what I could see yesterday your current armor is as expected small right? Also, you're already 17, it's unlikely you'll grow all that much more right. We'll make it just a bit larger so we're taking your sizes as well. Ah, don't worry about it, it's my treat."

Eh?

No, I mean, isn't one there.

That, wasn't for me? It can't be, just a box?

"That one is for her, Midu~ritto."

Father said that before calling over Miduchi and talking to her. It seems Miduchi was surprised over how sudden it was as well.

"At the end of last year Shani she would make some clothes and took her sizes. Supposedly they made it only just a bit larger. It seems they took in a variety of opinions over it so it ended up a slightly different shape. Teacher her how to put on later."

Ha~?

When did that happen?

I never heard about this...

Something like that, at least tell me about it.

I'll be troubled, it's not like were brats after all.

Eh? You were forbidden from speaking?

You heard it was taking your measurements for clothes?

I mean, he said it even took your opinion in to mind and isn't the normal shape...

They told you it was a market investigation over what shape of armor is the easiest to use?

..Is that so.

"Al-sama, do you have requests? We were able to slightly increase the hardness of the ebonite on the surface so we were able to increase the defensive power of it while the weight still remains the same, if you're fine with the defense remaining the same we can make it a bit light as well?"

Jim said that while quickly measuring my body with the measuring tape.

"Yeah..the weight is fine at the same as it is now. It would be better if the defensive power goes up.."

"Is that so. We'll make it using the armor from three years ago as reference."

"Yeah. Also, just the gauntlets of my armor are specially made. I'll give you the details later."

While we were doing that things got noisy. Sister huh?

"Oh, Mill! Over here!"

Father called out to sister. After noticing that sister ran over with a happy face. If she had a tail like Angela it probably would have been swinging. Weren't you by his side everyday 3 or 4 months ago? Right now he's my dad! Kerry approached her right away to report his wedding and introduce his bride. Stay away just like that.

Miduchi you go and slow her down as well!

Thinking that I pointed towards sister with my chin while looking at Miduchi.

I guess she understood my intentions, Miduchi went over to sisters side where I had been pointing. Umu, that's how it needs to be.

"Really. Wasn't sister just by father's side a short while ago? She came running over like a dog, how embarrassing~"

When I said that to father with a bitter smile and father said,

"Don't say that. Even like that she gave it her best. Since I couldn't really praise her too much on the battlefield. At least for tonight...Hn? Al, you..Well it's fine. Certainly I haven't met with you very often and weren't together for very long." while laughing happily.

"U..Umm, Mill-san.."

Alright, keep her stalled.

"Oh~ if it isn't Midu-cchi? Hmhmph. Do you want to have a go at it?"

Oh, as expected of my older sister who has a low brain capacity.

Just like that go off somewhere. Miduchi it's fine for you not to follow after her as well.

"Eh? I'd love to but..umm, today is"

"Ah, it arrived right."

She noticed that Miduchi was looking towards the box of armor in the back of the carriage.

"Yeah, and then, since it's already alright to talk about it so...umm, I'd heard that it was clothes from Bakuddo and..I was surprised. Thank you very much! I'm happy!"

"It's fine, don't worry about it. It's something sister-in-law Shani and I both paid for after all. It's not like I use my money for much of anything either way."

Miduchi's armor, so it was sister-in-law Shani and sister that paid for it huh..Miduchi, she should have a considerable amount of money saved up now though...She said that she only just had her new leather armor made last year and she properly maintained it so it was still plenty within it's lifespan. Clothes are reasonably expensive but as expected no comparison to armor. Miduchi must not have been very concerned about it hearing that it was clothes.

Sister has a high salary being in the first knight group and sister-in-law Shani is the first wife of the lord of Bakuddo which is profiting from rubber.

In the first place, what are Bakuddo clothes? Something like that doesn't exist. Cotton is grown in Bakuddo but we didn't do any spinning so we never produced any cloth. Either the town of Doritto or at best Keel is where they're made. In the first place about the only designs they make over there are unfashionable and completely give off the feel of living in a remote area so it's far better to get clothes made in the capital.

"Got it? Al"

"Yeah.."

Sorry, sister.

I'll give the right to staying in the same room as father tonight to you so you can have plenty of time to talk to him.

Also, I'll let you eat some Baldoggie as well.

Chapter 219: Qualifications*

Year 7445, Month 10, Day 15

After introducing father and the other squires from Bakuddo to everyone, in the afternoon father and the others started on their trip back to Bakuddo. All of the members of the {Slaughterers} are employees of Greed Company so putting aside the parents of the founder, it's necessary for them to get familiar with important business clients. In the worst case if something were to happen to me right now brother would end up inheriting Greed Company after all.

After that, when the members of the {Butchers}, {Exterminators}, and {Slaughterers} all moved together, I discussed the fact that I had established several gateway tests.

"..In regards to the threshold for the marathon, but I think rather than making it one of us it should be an average time."

Bel offered her opinion right away. I see now.

"What's average mean?"

"Like I would know."

"It has the meaning of in the middle."

"Is that so?"

"..The speed that Rokko-san and Kevin-san can run at is different right. The speed which is just in the middle of between Rokko-san and Kevin-san is average, and that's how it's used. If we increase the numbers then we add the speeds of everyone together then divide it by the number of people and we'll understand the middle speed for everyone."

Rodrick was explaining to the members of {Butchers} and {Exterminators}. Sorry for troubling you.

"Yeah, and, I intend to do the screening on our next break so with that intention. Just remember the standard is the current members. It's a test for only those who want to take it. There's three subjects. A stamina test, a skill test, and a cooperation test. After that, there's a couple members that absolutely can't be removed from the {Slaughterers} as well."

After I said that far I looked around at everyone. No one is saying anything while waiting for me to speak.

"First off, me. And then there's Gwine who helps out with producing the map. I won't let these two be moved. Although, I might end up going to both the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} from here on out. The only two who I have absolutely no intention of moving around is just these two. It doesn't matter who you challenge of the remaining members. However.."

I thought I could hear the sound of everyone gulping.

"The only ones who can designate a person as a challenger are just those who have passed the stamina test first. The time that will act as a standard we'll measure today after this right now so the members of the {Slaughterers} should remain here. Ah, it's fine for Zenom and Gwine to skip out. Anyone who passes the stamina test gains the right to designate someone to challenge. The person who's been challenged can't run from it. And, then. What I'll have you do there isn't a practice match."

Everyone made slightly confused expressions. Just a moment ago I said practice "battle" after all. But, a practice match is no good. In the end you can't get serious against another person and can't use magic at full power.

"I'm going to have you fight against ogres on the 7th floor. The next time we enter the dungeon we'll take the challengers along to the 7th floor. Listen well, it's still a part of the test on our way there. I'll be watching your cooperation and such. And then I'll have the challenger and the challenged fight three one on one matches against ogres on the 7th floor. Fundamentally the one who takes less total time wins. I think it'll take a reasonable amount of time to find just the right one to fight, but well, if we have two days that should be plenty."

Several people were already making expressions as if they had given up. No wait, isn't that only obvious? We're aiming for the 8th floor and beyond. How are you going to manage if you can't even deal with an ogre?

"If you can use magic then obviously it's fine if you use it and it's fine for you to use any weapons as well. However, poison is not allowed. If you need help I'll intervene right away so you can relax. Though you'll fail at that point. Well~ as long as you don't die instantly I'll save you."

There was just a bit of laughing.

"Also, one more thing. If you have a partner then it's fine for you to team up with them as well. For example if other than yourself, there's one more person you by all means want to join together with, if that person agrees as well then it's fine to challenge as a two person or three person group as well. In that case, the ones being challenged will be a two person group as well though. If you want to think it would be best to form a group of front line attacker and rear support, then feel free to do that.

Ah, and after that, for the time being I don't think there's much meaning to it, but {Sooner}, rather, if there's someone who wants to go from the {Exterminators} to the {Butchers} then that's fine as well. I'll change the assessment method a bit so if there's anyone who wants to do that just let me know."

After saying that I told everyone they could break up. However, no one was leaving and they were just talking with other members in the area.

If they have time then maybe I should get them to help out with observing the measurements?

It would help to prove that there was no unfairness as well.

"Zulu, Angela. Before you go to Boil Manor return to your inn and get some towels and a change of clothes."

.....

It was the right answer to remove Zenom and Gwine from the marathon.

In the first place dwarves are slow at running.

Even then I think Gwine who's continued with the running is considerably better but she's still no comparison to the Elf Toris and Rabbit-person Bel. Recently even Basutorial has been faster than her.

Also, I decided to avoid running as well.

I mean if I were to seriously run it would have quite a bit of influence on the average time after all.

Obviously there's no culturally convenient tool like a stopwatch that exists so it's just measuring the rough time with a clock magic tool.

The course is our usual running course.

We'll depart from Boil Manor, run up to the summit of the outer crater from the West, then descend from the Eastern road down the outer crater and return to the Boil Manor again like that.

The overall distance should be around 20 km I guess?

There's no way to accurately measure the distance.

I think it's roughly around a half-marathon?

On the days I can I'm always running this course.

Recently I think I can cover it in about 2 hours or so?

According to Miduchi, there's a steep incline ascending up the hills of about 12% or so along the way and the condition of the roads are bad as well.

Even our shoes are badly made rubber sandals.

I think it's plenty to think that far.

"It's fine to collapse when you return. Run as fast as you can to at least that extent. Since this time will end up being the barrier after all. Make sure you raise the hurdle higher."

We return to Boil Manor and in front of the members of the {Slaughterers} who are wearing sandals and light clothing when I arrogantly gave that lecture Rokko said, "Is Al not intending to run?" I have him and Kamu, the two of them checking the times. Though I say that it's a simple job of just patting Kamu on the shoulder whenever someone reaches the goal point to check the clock magic tool.

Everyone else has long since split up to various locations along the ascent, the summit, and in the middle of the town on the way back.

We should be able to start in another 10 minutes or so.

"..That's right. Al you should run as well."

Ralpa said with her arms crossed while stretching herself. She's grinning.

"No way! Ah, but it might be good to do that."

While stretching Bel said that with a smile of deeper meaning on her face...Mu, they aren't jiggling much. Come to think of it didn't Miduchi say they found a store that sells something like a sports bra.

"..It can't be helped~ But it's fine not to include my time in the calculation. It's a record just for reference."

Ralpa and Bel made slightly disappointed faces. I've already seen through you.

If you want to prevent being forced to switch parties then run like your lives depend on it.

Well, it might be interesting for me to try running at my full speed with none of my usual weights on in a light condition as well.

My time was 55 minutes and 30 seconds. It was quite a bit faster than I thought. I made full use(intended to) of my unbelievably high status that would normally require being over level 80(since there's times when Speed and Endurance have increased by 2). Furthermore there's mountains and valleys, rocks laying all over the path of the road and it's uneven, very rarely there's even some mud so it's close to the worst state possible. If it was on a neatly paved level surface on Earth it would probably be an absurd record breaking that's less than 2 decimals places.

Uppu..I feel like I'm going to throw up.

Even trying to do the mental concentration required to control my mana and create mana feels extremely exhausting.

If I push myself it's not like I can't do it though..Ah~ it's been quite a while, this irritating sensation of not being able to use magic.

..I'd like to just be left alone for a short while.

.....Fu.

.....Uffuffu.

..Zulu, that day three years ago, I couldn't overtake you.

Though I already knew that I had passed you quite a while back...

Since I started carrying weights as well right away and gradually increased the amount it didn't seem all that different from usual. I felt like I would have gotten depressed if I took off the weights and there wasn't much of a difference at all so I hadn't tested it out. But...

Fu~ I've finally..relaxed a bit.

"I'm going to take a shower.."

I said in a mutter to Kamu and Rokko before dragging myself into Boil Manor, rolling into the shower room, taking off my clothes drenched in sweat, and then sitting down on the floor of the shower room under the water.

After bathing in water from the top of my head, I was finally able to catch my breath.

I quickly washed away the sweat and for the time being returned to my room with just a towel around my waist to change into some new clothes.

I wonder if it's still just Rokko and Kamu waiting in front of Boil Manor?

Or else, I wonder if it's about time for someone else to have arrived?

I stop by Miduchi's room and after filling a bag with a towel and some random clothes returned to the front.

Miduchi had already arrived.

Her light purple skin was bright red from the blood rushing to her head and she was drenched in sweat as her hands were on her knees.

I poured a bit of lukewarm water over Miduchi and then put a large towel over her head.

"Good work. I brought a change of clothes for you. Go and take a shower."

Miduchi was still breathing heavily while leaning against me.

"Can..Cant move..B"

"B?"

"..Carr..Carry..on..back..holding.."

"Go on your own.."

She was faking as if she was about to throw up...

After giving her the bag with her change of clothes I lent her a shoulder to the shower room and threw her inside.

When I asked Kamu what her time was and it was 1 hour 10 minutes and 40 seconds.

After waiting a short while and Ralpa, Bel, and just a short while later Toris came running lined up like dango.

After they arrived at the goal the three of them fell over just like I was a short while ago.

It would be pleasant to be thrown up on by Ralpa so I decided to ignore her.

Don't look over here.

I just changed a moment ago.

Their time was 1 hour, 21 minutes, and 20 seconds. Toris was 10 seconds later.

A bit behind them was Zulu.

A bit behind that was Angela.

Finally Basutorial came along considerably late and completely exhausted at exactly 1 hour and 40 minutes.

Even like this it was a pace about 10 minutes faster than the usual.

He did a good job.

But there's nothing moving about it.

After all this guy, he came up saying something like "oe~" like he was throwing up in front of Cathy and is kindly being nursed by her

now.

I guess that means the average time is around 1 hour and 25 minutes

huh?

I guess Angela and Basutorial are below the average? Zulu was at a vague time.

Somehow I feel like Miduchi, Ralpha, Bel, Toris, Zulu, and Angela should all have an increase in Speed or Endurance pretty soon.

Basutorial will probably take a bit more time..I guess?

Whatever the case it everyone ran at amazing speeds. If it was on level ground while wearing sports shoes then these fellows as well...

Everyone took a shower and changed clothes then while catching their breath the observation members all started to return.

"The average time was 1 hour, 23 minutes, and 40 seconds. Of course it's without including me in the calculation. In order to gain the right to challenge a member of the {Slaughterers} running in under this time is the qualification. I'll have anyone who wishes to try changing parties run on the next break. Up until then decide whether you intend to do it or not. I'll accept applications until the day before. On the day we do it there's also the problem of helpers for observing things so pardon me on that."

It seems everyone understood.

Let's break things up.

"I saw everyone run from close by but you know, other than Al they weren't all that fast at all right."

"If it's just running then I think I'm even faster than Al."

"Maybe I'll try challenging it as well.."

"Oh? Kimu, since you use the spear how about teaming up with me?

And, if we challenge Maruso and Saji then.."

"..Nn, that might be good."

"Mi, Misu, umm, together with me..Please!"

"Hey, Ginger, how about we try it together."

"That's fine, but Misu. Jeru is sticking his hand out~"

He~ say all you like. I think it's pretty much impossible though.

.....

Year 7445, Month 10, Day 23

Today is the test day for earning the right to challenge.

Everyone from the {Butchers}. And from the {Exterminators} there's Ginger, Sanno, and Ruttsu who decided to try challenging it.

"Is it fine for you not to try the challenge?"

I tried asking Rodrick.

"Eh? If you think about the course and the times it's impossible right...Even if I'm like this I still received investiture as a true knight after all. I do feel like trying to challenge it even then but most likely I'll end up leaving a pathetic result that dirtyes the name of the Faruergaz Knight Group."

Rodrick replied with a bitter smile on his face.

"But you know, giving up before you've even tried, I wonder about that?"

Ralpa who was listening to the conversation butt in.

"Yeah. I already know it's uncool. But, right now it's impossible.

At least half a year..No, if I don't at least run for a year then

I'm sure I wouldn't be able to beat that time. Starting tomorrow I intend to start running with Denda and Karimu. Al-san, is it fine for us to run together as well?"

"Yeah, of co" That's fine but you know. If you get behind we'll leave you in the dust so with that intention."

This girl really...The lines she says while winking is that.

"Ha ha..That can't be helped at the start. But, I'll definitely catch up to you..Then I'll go to my post."

Give it your best. Rodrick waved with a cheerful face while trotting off to his post.

"..I'm going as well. I won't overlook any cheating."

No ones going to try something like that...Ralpa ran off as well.

"Al, isn't it about a good time? Ralpa and Rodrick are close to the end of the course right?"

Zenom called out to me.

Zenom has the role of watching over the goal together with me here.

Certainly it should be fine. I checked the time on the clock magic tool and it was 9:45:20 in the morning.

I guess we'll start at 9:50:00?

In front of Boil Manor excluding my slaves was the seven people from the {Butchers} as well as Ginger, Sanno, Ruttsu, also since she didn't run last time Gwine was going to run just for time reference, were all gathered and getting ready to run. In total there's 11 people.

..It's about time. Well, I guess it's fine even if I start a bit soon. I let them start at around 9:49:30.

.....

I'm bored.

Since Zenom brought some vodka from his room, I brought out some smoked octopus legs from mine as well.

The two of us were leaning against the fence next to the front gate of Boil Manor while chewing some octopus legs and drinking vodka. Delicious, this vodka. According to Zenom it's a premium item he bought in the capital.

"In around how much time do you think they'll return?"

"Hmn, even the faster ones will take around 1 hour and 30 minutes

I'm sure...Everyone hasn't been continuing to run for several years just for show after all.."

"{Running}, was it? Is it really something that has that much of an effect?"

"It's not something which is effective right away. But, if you continue it for a month even an idiot will start to feel the difference in their stamina."

Either way there's nothing to do so I decided to explain the simple theory and meanings behind training your body. Zenom listened seriously but just said, "I don't really get it." while shaking his head and said something like, "I still think it would be better to rest and gather your strength for the time when you really need it." I wonder if my explanation was bad. I abridged it quite a bit after all.

"It should be about time..and. Sorry but let's put the alcohol on break for a bit."

"Yeah, it's fine. I haven't even finished drinking one cup."

..I, finished two cups. The next time I'm in the capital let's search for some vodka.

After waiting a short while and the first one to return was unexpectedly Gwine. This time she ran as well to give a reference time. Her time was almost the same as Basutorial at 1 hour and 38 minutes. For the time being it seems she showed her dignity as a senior. Around 1 minute after that Ginger and Kimu returned.

After that they came back one after another. Everyone was making faces like they were about to die. In dead last was the dwarf Kevin who took 2 hours and 30 minutes.

"Everyone, it seems you ran as best you could but that's quite unfortunate. Honestly speaking if you're like this then I really don't think you're ready to enter the {Slaughterers} right now. The next one we'll do around six months later so up until then think about trying to build up some stamina."

There were those who had already gotten refreshed taking a shower and getting changed, and those who had only just reached the goal while breathing heavily. Everyone was making mortified faces. Yeah, all of the upper ranking members of the {Slaughterers} including myself are brats on top of girls being mixed into them so I understand those feelings. Even when it came to the slowest Basutorial only two of them were able to beat him. Not to mention their times were almost exactly the same with just about 1 minute difference.

But you know, if it's just at the level of the current Basutorial, if you properly run for six months you'll quickly catch up and overtake him.

Though it would be harsh for Kevin if he doesn't run properly for at least two years or so.

"I think there's people who know already but. I'll say it just in case. The members of the {Slaughterers} always run the course from just now every day they have time to do it. If they don't have the time to run together then they even run it alone. Through the accumulation of doing that the body gets used to it. Think about what that means. If you don't get it then try asking someone who seems like they would know...When Kevin finishes catching his breath let's all go and eat some lunch.

Ah, even if you don't have an appetite it's no good if you don't eat. Even that is related to building up your body after all."

Things should be peaceful for another six months. After we check things out on the 8th floor a bit more I'll try saying it's a test and have Kamu and Ginger act as the leaders and then during that time I guess we'll try challenging the 8th floor...

If they give up on joining the {Slaughterers} after things this time and say they want to be the leader then it's a bonus right.

As expected there's no one like that huh...

No, if the number of members being dispatched from the {Slaughterers} is reduced then the number of people who get a cut is reduced as well. It's possible for the leader to take that portion as their own after all. But if they can't at least reach the stage where they can make it to the 3rd floor while staying the night then my losses will still continue, so that's difficult to mention right~

In the first place I had intended to train them until around the end of the year, so I guess it's still fine.

If the {Slaughterers} has both Miduchi and I then even if we lose one person each to the {Exterminators} and {Butchers}, if the monsters of the 8th floor are just at that level I guess there's no problem...

Let's think about it again at the end of the year.

Status~ (TL: Whoops almost forgot to fix Miduchi's Blunt Trauma again, the damage from that trap lasted quite a while~)

Chapter 220: Shape of 8th Floor

Year 7445, Month 12, Day 21

In order to progress to the end of the year I decided to make from the 19th until the 27th, this 9 day period the last time we enter the dungeon this year, then from the 28th until January 6th of next year those 9 days would be the New Year holiday. And then, this time we entered the dungeon with the full members of the {Slaughterers} different from the past few months. I gave the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} a slightly early and long New Years holiday.

Of course, I said if they want to enter the dungeon during the holiday they're free to do so, I also said they have no need to pay a share to me for that time. However, I told them absolutely not to step foot past the 2nd floor and since they're entering the dungeon under my command they'll have to pay for the entry tax and food expenses on their own money. Also, it's only obvious but I don't intend to loan out my four combat slaves either. After saying that far and honestly speaking I don't think anyone will try to enter the dungeon during the holiday.

Though I say that, I thought someone would complain because their earnings were reduced and had thought up an excuse but no one said any complaints and rather raised cheers of joy. Since I found it a bit strange I tried asking Kamu about it and it seems including her everyone was a bit worn out.

Ever since the party changing test about two months ago, there's some members who have started running here and there so I was smiling over the delightful trend. However, not only does doing that consume quite a bit of stamina but there's also the consecutive battles on the 1st floor of the dungeon. They return to the surface completely exhausted, force the food down and are unable to drink any alcohol, then return to their inn to sleep like the dead. The next morning after waking up they do some running right away and then it's back to combat in the dungeon again. In regards to income while they aren't obtaining any expensive magic items or precious gems or ores but from the roughly three times a month they enter the dungeon, their income is about 800,000 - 900,000 Z so they didn't have any complaints. Rather it's increased since their time in {Sun.Ray}.

The number of days they're entering the dungeon itself has increased but for the time being it's all day trips and counting in terms of months it's around 20 days. During their time in {Sun.Ray} they entered roughly twice, for a total of around 18 days so it's only increased by just a bit. In regards to the safety of it while they're experiencing consecutive battles where they have almost no time to let their guards down, since there's the reliable leaders dispatched from the {Slaughterers} their feelings are able to relax a bit knowing that there's no worry even if they get a bit injured.

That's the reason and everyone was just thinking about enjoying their own holiday and dedicating it to get some rest. It seems they heard from the members of {Slaughterers} that were dispatched up until now that there's "always a long holiday at the end of the year" so they were secretly looking forward to it. Both running and entering the dungeon during breaks aren't an obligation or anything else so if they don't want to do them there's no reason to do it. Though if you were to ask me, doing it increases our overall combat forces so I'm happier if they do it but as long as they do a proper job on the days that were for entering the dungeon then after that it's fine for everyone to do whatever they please.

In the first place I'm sure there was people who dedicated their days off to training and people who never did. Since people naturally lean towards the more comfortable direction, anyone who won't do it unless forced I'll just treat like that, and that's all there is to it. For example Rokko already knows he sucks at arithmetic(it's not particularly unusual. However, it's unusual for an adventurer who has a lot of occasions they need to calculate money) but it seems he has no intention of studying and no intention of changing I'm sure. It's the same for Jeru as well who can't read or write.

In comparison, recently it seems Zulu, Angela, and Giberuti are being taught to read and write by Basutorial and it seems starting with Catherine, John, Terry, and even Zulu's woman join in as well.

I don't know who started it up but it's a good trend.

If it's necessary I taught Zulu and Angela numbers and some Kanji characters in Japanese as well as some Arabic numerals but that's it. I'm sure looking from their end they wanted to ask about more commonly used numbers and letters. I knew they were looking like they wanted to be taught but I guess they were showing restraint towards me, they never said anything so I didn't teach them either.

After learning that Okonneru and Garuhashu as well as Firenoto and Manzokki were being taught some basic addition and calculation as well. However, it seems that in addition to teaching them to read, write, and do arithmetic Basutorial is also teaching them some simple science and he was even teaching some basic agriculture as well. Since the four of them seemed to have some interest they'll probably join in as well eventually.

The start of the problem was that sometimes Zenom would join in there as well. Just it seems he was just joining in to listen (since Zenom was originally a commoner on top of the long period he was an adventurer it's only obvious Zenom can read, write, and do fundamental arithmetic) but he was having a hard struggle with division, fractions, and decimals.

And then, when he tried to confirm what he learned with Ralpa it was exposed that Ralpa can't sufficiently do fraction calculations either.

Hearing that Miduchi, Toris, Bel, Gwine, and I all laughed out loud but just in case we tried giving Gwine several problems as well and hers was faulty as well. Excluding Gwine the four of us exchanged glances as we turned pale and in a hurry we tried calling Rodrick to confirm everyone.

Up to algebra starting with myself, Miduchi, Toris, Bel, Basutorial, and Rodrick all had no problems but when it got to Trigonometry and Logarithms Miduchi, Bel, and Basutorial dropped out, and at differential and integral calculus Rodrick dropped out. When it got to complex numbers, vectors, and discrete numbers I was the only one remaining. Though I say that since mixing probabilities and prime numbers were a required subject for ciphers that was a bit unfair. In terms of the calculations themselves Toris was overwhelmingly faster than me after all.

I thought that the memories crammed in when you're young weren't so easy to forget but it's been long since Saturday was made into a day off as well. No, it's probably because the cramming method in my case was a bit unique as well. Since it was still barely within the Showa era when I entered Self-Defense university it seems I was made to learn in a unique way. Though I say that it's nothing particularly special. Under the policies of the battalion(in Self-Defense university they called each dorm a battalion) it was just a matter of those who had bad grades starting with sanctions of the fist were made to experience some extremely unreasonable corporal punishment pretty often.

The official stance for it was that since we're receiving a salary in the form of a student allowance paid through taxes studying is our occupation so we're not allowed to slack off even the slightest bit. In order to not cause trouble to the surroundings we had to spend our days desperately studying(putting it honestly and since each room definitely had an upper classmen you shared it with when you took the punishment it occurred as a unit with other people in your room so not only would there be the punishments from others but also from the upper classmen in your room as well). I remember studying together with my classmates in the same room countless times. Thanks to that even though a number of decades have passed I still remember quite a bit.

Putting aside complex numbers and vectors, fractions and decimals are necessary right. Since everyone agree we forced Ralph and Gwine into the Basutorial class, while it goes against my policy a bit we decided to force them to learn it. Incidentally the individuals themselves were saying, "I can do it! I can properly do it! I just forgot it for a bit!", "I just made a small mistake in the math! It's alright, I can properly do it!" but at the point they couldn't do division between fractions no one was willing to believe them. If I remember correctly you learn it in elementary school right?

Right now, we're in the teleport crystal room on the 7th floor of the dungeon but under teacher Basutorial my three slaves are being taught basic arithmetic at the first year elementary school level. When that ends he'll teach a bit higher arithmetic to Zenom, Ralph, and Gwine.

"It would have been good if I had you teach me sooner.."

Zenom said that. Ralph and Gwine were making displeased faces.

Since it's gotten a bit pitiful I won't say anything more.

"We're going a bit further into the 8th floor starting tomorrow, so don't try to overwork yourself too hard."

Miduchi is saying something to them. The day before yesterday and yesterday we cleared up through the 6th floor. Since the magic stones from the 8th floor aren't all that high in value we spent just today defeating ogres on the 7th floor and gathered 35 magic stones from them. Since it was about a good time we moved to the teleport crystal room on the 7th floor and decided to prepare for tomorrow. Starting tomorrow for one week we'll be aiming for further into the 8th floor.

Year 7445, Month 12, Day 27

One week has passed since we started exploring the 8th floor, today is the last day.

The information that George Rombert the First is said to have left behind (the one about only being able to think it's a number of places overlapping) was denied on the second day. At the same time it was identified that George Rombert the First most likely didn't have a Unique Ability like Gwine's {Mapping} or Ralpa's {Spatial Understanding}.

After we teleported into the 8th floor, it was the same moving through the cave-like passage until there was a split path.

However, most of the passages were dead ends and in those dead ends there's a new teleport crystal and pedestal enshrined.

On December 22nd (the first day) we decided not to touch those teleport crystals and just returned the way we came and the entire day ended in teleporting back and forth between the 7th and 8th floors. In the end we came to the conclusion that the 8th floor was a gathering of small areas and we decided to start investigating where the teleport crystals in the dead end passages teleport us.

On December 23rd (the second day), we gathered our resolve and tried grabbing the teleport crystal while chanting the incantation and proceeded to the next area. The place we teleported into was just another cave-like passage the same as the others. And then, ahead of that we discovered another teleport crystal but we weren't surprised. It's because we had already predicted it. Gwine's Unique Ability can only see one area at a time. When we tried teleporting using the same crystal it returned us to the original teleport crystal we came from. Of course the incantation wasn't the same.

However, while we were in the process of repeating teleport countless times Ralpa's Unique Ability leveled up. It's because every time we teleported she had to use {Spatial Understanding} to confirm the direction. When it first leveled up, Ralpa suddenly showed symptoms of confusion.

Previously, I thought Ralpa's Unique Ability would level up pretty soon but it got stupid trying to count it every time so I had left it alone. However, I don't know if her Unique Ability is unique but it seems she noticed the maximum level expanded ability right away.

It seems she even managed to perceive the equipment we were holding. It seems she suddenly felt a variety of mixed items floating in the space near her and her head got mixed up unable to keep up with the processing.

It wasn't after things entered from outside the effective range but the moment she used her ability she could feel everyone's equipment as if it was floating in the air and she ended up feeling sick.

The moment I heard that I realized her {Spatial Understanding} had leveled up and when I used {Identify} on Ralpa down to the sub-windows there was some new info added.

【...The MAX level expansion ability makes it possible for the user to be able to recognize all unnatural inanimate objects that exist within the effective range. It's possible to recognize them even when they already existed within the effective range before using the ability. Furthermore, even if the user leaves the effective range they'll still be able to perceive the objects within the effective range until the duration ends.】

Shortly after that, since Ralpa had to go to the bathroom she and the other women of the party teleported using the teleport crystal we had just used. While making a bitter smile as we watched the women disappear to go to the bathroom we started confirming the safety of our surroundings. We only just teleported here a moment ago so we were already able to guess it's not immediately dangerous. Before long when the women returned and joined us again Ralpa was extremely excited.

It seems while enduring her urge to go to the bathroom Ralpa left the other women to be cautious in the area of the teleport crystal as she moved about 20 meters away but on that occasion it seems she able to feel the fact that they left the range of her {Spatial Understanding}. However, even after she left the range of it she could still perceive the other men and I wandering around in the effective range even after that and near the far upper edge of the effective range she could also feel the boots of the women being cautious of the surroundings.

Thanks to that Ralpa was able to recognize that the origin point of the teleportation and the destination weren't all that far away in distance and furthermore in terms of position they were almost on top of each other. Hearing this the words, "almost like places that are overlapping" left from Rombert the First's life story made sense to everyone. Up until now we thought that the teleporting was just taking place in the 8th floor but we thought of the possibility that we teleporting across floors.

Of course, just like matching up puzzle pieces together, eventually we would have realized it by matching up the areas of the map that Gwine is producing. However, it's a godsend we were able to notice it on the second day. Since there was no difference in the monsters we encountered in the halls I could have sworn it was still the 8th floor(obviously it's hard to imagine that a distance of just 40-50 meters above or below is the difference between the 8th and 9th floors but you could say it's a big harvest we were able to think up the possibility).

Even more so since we didn't use a teleport crystal in the center of the dungeon so you could say it's only obvious.

Up until now unless you used the special teleport crystal in the center of the dungeon, there was no moving between floors. The only exception was the teleport pitfall trap that I fell into in the past.

Here the opinion that teleport traps on the 6th floor as well were in fact not actually traps came out as well but since they're fundamentally different from the teleport crystals which only teleport you if you actively chant the incantation, that opinion was rejected.

Also, it seems it's only obvious that the previous teleport crystals are at the very least over 50 meters apart from the teleport destination, so you could say it's only thanks to good luck that Ralpa noticed from one of the very few "short range teleportation" areas.

Starting from December 24th (the third day), in any case we started clearing through the caves, we started to focus only on arriving at new teleport crystals. During the two days up until then all of the areas on the 8th floor we teleported into had been ones Gwine already had mapped so we chose some new teleport crystals. However, when it came to that there were dead ends as well and times when we had no choice but to spend time going back down the passages we just came as well.

In order to avoid that, whenever we came across a new teleport crystal we would immediately start teleporting over and over. While in the process of that we discovered several routes that lead to teleport areas we had been to in the past. If we think about producing a perfect map then we'll have to properly walk all of the distance over again but it's certainly true the amount of distance we traveled increased by quite a bit.

And then today, December 27th (the sixth day) on the last day we were finally able to arrive close to something like a monster room. Tension ran through everyone. Slowly, very slowly, we moved closer to the room. I remembered back to the time we first stepped foot in the dungeon of Baldukk and approached the room with a {Scavenger Crawler} in it.

I hold back the bitter smile I had been making before noticing it and with the bayonet in my right hand and my left hand ready to use attack spells a any moment we approached the entrance of the room.

It appeared.

Things in regards to 【Dark Vision】 are fine. I can somehow guess.

I'm sure it can see right now almost as if it was during the day or something like that. However, 【Super.Regeneration Type III】, it says?

【Special Skill: Super.Regeneration Type III; All damage other than burns suffered will be recovered at a rate of 1 HP every 5 seconds. Body tissue that was lost during that process will be replaced as well. Furthermore, the functionality of internal organs that have suffered damage will recover as well. In the case that the lost portions aren't connected together but regeneration, it will take around 1 day to regenerate

1 liter of the volume of flesh.】

It's long hair is moving almost as if wet from the grease it's covered in.

It's skin is deep green and covered in bumps and warts almost as if it has a skin disease.

With long sharp and slightly dropping nose.

A large split mouth that almost reaches to it's ears.

There's two large deeply sunk in holes almost as if they look to be open, though whether or not it actually has eyeballs can't be seen for sure.

The wrinkles of it face give off an overall impression like that of an ill-tempered dead tree like old person.

It has thick and strong looking nails with a black luster on it's large hands and long arms that almost seem unbalanced for it's body size.

It's just a bit tall and thin and it's rib cage sticks out of it's body.

It's spine is sticking out almost as if it was a dorsal fin that degenerated.

The surface of it's skin is dirty the same as usual but the muscles on it's legs are tightened giving a good idea of it's strength.

The only thing it's wearing on it's body is something like a loincloth.

In my past life, it's a completely different existence from the heartwarming creature drawn in the books by Tove.Jansson that I was engrossed with in my childhood.

You could quite literally call it an atrocious monster beyond even that of an ogre.

Two of those were facing each other crouched down biting into the soft stomach of a Giant Mantis.
I heard the sound of somehow hold their breath behind me.

Chapter 221: Footprint

Year 7445, Month 12, Day 27

The sound of slurping an insects internal organs echoes around and a bad smell covers the area.

""Return""

An order from Miduchi's {Party-ization} was sent out. I guess she's saying we should all return back to a safe place before discussing things once again. Just as you can expect from an opponent that looks stronger than ogres, it's important to confirm the sequence and things. Let alone when it's against an opponent with a skill like {Super.Regeneration Type III} that makes no sense. It's also a monster that we're seeing for the first time so there's no loss in being careful here.

"Most likely, that's a Troll."

After returning about 200 meters to a passage with good visibility, we all gathered along the wall as teacher Miduchi's lecture time started.

"Troll.."

"Somehow, I feel like I've heard the name before."

"..The Troll I know of is a lot fatter.."

"So that's a, Troll huh.."

"Troll?"

Just now Toris and Zulu said things like they know about it.

"Zulu do you know about it? Probably, I think there's no mistake that it's a Troll or a related species. Even if you injure them they recover from it right away and they're a troublesome monster where even if you cut off their limbs, the limbs move and they continue to attack."

Miduchi glanced at my face for a moment while explaining it. Yeah.

That's the right answer. I told her with my eyes. Certainly it was a Troll. But she really does know anything. Incidentally Toris said something like he knew it as well but it seems it was a character that appears in a certain famous computer game. Even I've heard the name of it before.

Well, in my case if you were to say {Troll} the first image that comes to mind is a {Trawl}. Though I think the spelling is probably different. Because the body of the fish is easy to hurt, in exchange for the value of it depreciating rapidly, it catches bottom dwelling fish (it catches the type of living along the ocean bed. Obviously shrimp and crabs are included) and quite literally catches everything it can so it's huge on unloading.

"I've never seen one before. In the Southern parts of Devas of the Weshuppu region I've heard that a monster called the {Swamp.Troll} appears in the marshlands there. It seems it's extremely powerful on top of being brutal, it has enough stamina as if it doesn't ever get tired, and it moves at quick speeds which don't match up to it's large body so it's a frightening monster and just as Miduchi-sama just said even if you injure they recover right away, I've heard it has a very troublesome regeneration ability. However, that is.."

Something like that is in Devas! It's hard to tell while it's crouching down, but that, if it were stand up I feel like it'll be taller than an ogre.

"Th..That sort of enemy how are we supposed to fight it!?"

Gwine said with a slightly frightened expression. Yeah, it's not unreasonable to say something like that.

"There's several methods but the representative is to burn it's wounds with oil and fire or acid. Also, it's a method that takes force but you accumulate damage on it to where the regeneration can't keep up to defeat it and then set it on fire again to kill it."

In the end it's fire huh? It seems like acid works as well but as expected we aren't carrying it around with us and in order to kill something that large you'd probably need a bath full. Then, in that case the most realistic is using attack spells with fire magic as the base. If it was just using the fire elemental magic itself then it would be simple to bury that entire room in flames but if no continuation is added to it, it'll disappear in an instant and as expected just an instant will probably do almost no damage. Ah, there's no need to worry about running out of oxygen when using large scale fire. If you use fire magic to set something on fire it uses oxygen to burn whatever it does but any of the flames other than that seem fine. It seems that in the effective range it's making a mix of flammable gas in the air and lighting that and it disappears in an instant before it burns up the oxygen in the air. Though if you add continuation to it that isn't always the case. I don't really get it for sure but haven't I mentioned that among the elemental magics fire and wind were slightly different?

"In that case I guess {Flame Thrower} would be best?"

Ralph said with a belligerent expression. I think it's good.

"..Otherwise, we have Al-san freeze them in ice I guess. However, I've heard about them when I was younger as well but it seems that Trolls don't breathe...It might be impossible to suffocate them to death."

Bel said while making the thinker pose with her hand on her chin.

"Ah, that, I've heard about it as well."

Zulu agreed with what Bel said. Wha~? Really? That's really troublesome...I haven't read the species sub-window for them and I don't know if even that information is written there. It seems Miduchi's knowledge isn't complete and she made a surprised face as well.

"In order to do it safely I guess I'll have to do it with the resolve of at least freezing the entire room and make the ice go up to about their shoulders, then we can cut off their heads I guess?"

After I said that, Miduchi said, "That's right. Or else use a high level attack spell with fire magic..though I think just freezing them would probably use up less mana." while nodding. I felt a bit like, "Hmn, I wonder about that~"

Their HP is over 700. Putting aside the fact that they're weak to fire and regenerate, in order to blow them away with a single hit an attack spell beyond the {Heavy Catapult} class would be necessary. Even if I don't add missile to it the MP consumed is 10. It's nothing significant to me. In the case of freezing things it takes either level 7 double or shaving a bit off level 8. Even if we think in terms of using level 8 that's 16 for the fire and water magic, then things like transformation and control take another 10 or more MP. After that if you're thinking about cutting off it's head and burning the wound then wouldn't using attack spells consume less MP..I guess?

If missile is added to it then there's almost no chance of missing but it seems it's an opponent who blowing off their limbs doesn't have much meaning. Even missile since the user still has to actively guide it can't be called perfect, if you aim for the head and they use their arms to block it trying to slip through that block is nearly impossible. Furthermore when it comes to the high level huge missiles in the case that you need to make sudden or sharp movements, there's no choice but to lower the speed quite a bit and the force behind it drops.

Certainly if you abandon guiding it and shoot it a number of times it's inefficient. If you want to make it guided and guarantee hitting it in the body or head then while it depends on it's Speed at best it's {Arbalest} class. If you want more reliability then it's necessary to drop it down to the {Javelin} class. In the end that would still mean hitting it with countless shots.

In that case then freezing it which seals the opponents movements..there's no other choice than that. Umu, from here on out freezing is appropriate to be named an all-purpose weapon.

"Then, let's go. First off I'll freeze them. I'll make a portion of it easy to climb on top of so we'll quickly cut off their heads and use {Flame Thrower} to burn the cut. After erasing the ice we'll thoroughly burn the corpses as well."

After confirming everyone nodded, we started towards the troll room once again.

It seems there was no problem at all.

I guess that means, even if it's got a special skill like 【Super.Regeneration Type III】, there's no living creature that can survive having it's head cut off.

The moment the flames from the {Flame Thrower} hit the wound where we cut off their heads, an ear piercing scream was let out as they died, and we were able to finish off the Trolls.

【Troll Race's Head】

【Troll Race】

【Condition: Damaged】

【Manufacture Date: 27/12/7445】

【Value: 22】

【Durability: 72】

【The decapitated head of the Troll Race.】

【The wound was burnt after being detached so the tissue has died.】

Since the huge head was rolling around on top of the ice with an unpleasant~ look after Identifying for some reason it pissed me off so I was going to kick it away from the ice..but it looked heavy and I didn't want to hurt my ankle. While ignoring the head I got ready to use {Anti-Magic Field} to erase the ice and told everyone to get off the ice.

By the time we returned to the troll room, the stomach of the Giant Mantis was already eaten and the upper body of it was still dragging itself along as it tried to leave the room. I don't know why but for some reason it didn't show any interest in us so we we moved to the edge of the passage and a short while after seeing it pass by us, Bel shot it with {Flame Javelin} and completely killed it.

During that the Trolls were, I don't know if it's after meal exercise, but they were wandering around the room.

Before they noticed us I froze them and we quickly cut off their heads.

I used 18 MP(enough to erase 15 MP worth of spell) to make an {Anti-Magic Field} and then shaped it to cover the entire surface of the ice below my right foot. Then I pushed that towards the ice. When it comes erasing it all at once this method is the easiest. Though it takes the shape of just I the caster jumping down from a height of over 2 meters but if it's me then that level of height is no problem if I prepare myself before hand.

After the ice had disappeared Zulu and Angela took out some large knives and approached to start gathering the magic stones from the troll's corpses.

""Watch out!!""

I don't know if it's because they were packed in ice they had numbed with the cold but while their movements were extremely dull, the Troll's corpses without heads started moving! At the same time as several shouts were let out Miduchi, Bel, Ralpa, and Gwine all used flame type spells to hit the corpses of the trolls.

I hit it with {Flame Arbalest Missile} as well. Ah, I guess it didn't need the missile like this.

But what in the world..when I used Identify on it just now it clearly had the details of a non-living creature! Putting aside the giant crickets which originally had low HP, it's not as if some of the large insect monsters like the mantis or centipedes don't continue moving for a short while after losing their heads but that's all limited to just the bugs. The first time we saw it since it just wasn't seeming to die I think Ralph tried confirming it with {Detect.Life} was it. She said, "There's no reaction so it should be dead!" and things almost went into a panic. I was surprised as well. It was a strange situation where even though Identify said 【Condition: Death】, it still had MP remaining. Zenom calmly said, "It's probably something like an undead right" and cut it into pieces down to the body killing it. A short while after that we found out that they were against fire so we started setting them on fire and excluding a few had Basutoral, Zulu, and Angela take them on. In exchange for not being able to aim for their vitals and finish them off in one hit, they don't stop moving until you completely drive their HP into the minus so I thought they would be a good training opponent.

A short while after that I don't really know why but it was identified that the spell {Detect.Life} doesn't work at all against insect type monsters. Since the 8th floor(9th floor?) is mostly made up of insects before we noticed we had stopped using it. Regardless in my case I can see further with Identify.

Just in case I tried using {Detect.Life} again now but obviously neither the head nor the body of the trolls were detected by it.

After it finally stopped moving, I used Identify to check that the details had become that of an object then checked it's status in a way while showing it off to everyone else who was on guard to calm them down, then once again ordered Zulu and Angela to gather the magic stones.

The Identify value on the magic stones from them was roughly 150,000. I guess that means if we sell them they'll be around 1,000,000. When it comes to the counter sale price I guess that's over 1,300,000 huh...I wonder about that? If it's just this level of difference then I think the purchase will be fine though. In any case, let's proceed ahead. There's another cave further into the room.

Since then we cleared through seven rooms with trolls including the first room. It was a single route forward. The rooms slowly increased in size and as we advanced forward the number of trolls increased by one each. We were also able to confirm that after freezing them and cutting the head off if we burn both of the cuts with fire magic we can weaken them quite a bit. Around the fifth room I intentionally left just one troll alive so we could try fighting it head on.

Since it had been frozen, it's movements were considerably dull and we were able to defeat it by just cutting it normally with swords. If you burn the wounds before it regenerates then it dies just like that.

When we went to enter the eighth room and the route from the teleport crystal stretching up from the seventh room was the same cave-like passages up until now but just the room ahead of that was different. The width of it was around 80 meters and inside of that room with a depth probably double that there was the same kind of altar you can see on the 5th and 6th floors.

The difference was that there were no gargoyle statues and the construction of the altar was considerably extravagant.

And then, no matter how long we waited the boss of the room that should have been summoned wouldn't appear, not just that but when we tried approaching the altar it's something we noticed but the door of the shrine on top of the altar was a bit open from the start.

Additionally this room seemed to be a dead end.
"Even though it's been a while and since it's an extravagant version I had my hopes up.."

Ralpa whispered while keeping her guard up.
Really though. I had my hopes super high for it as well.
"..Nothing is coming out.."

Zenom said while on guard with his tomahawk.
"..Could it be..No.."

Toris was about to say something.
"What is it? Is there something you noticed?"

When I tried asking Toris and he covered it up with the words,
"Hmn, it might just be me overthinking it."

""Ah!""

Miduchi, Bel, and Gwine all raised their voices at once. Everyone jumped a bit startled and checked the surroundings but there was nothing different.

"I'm sorry. But, isn't this, one where what was inside of it has already been taken out?"

Miduchi acted as the representative of the three apologizing for startling everyone as she said.

"..I see now..And, what's your basis? I think in all of the altars we've seen up until now there weren't any with the door open from the start. After several days or so the door would shut again and then the boss is summoned, then if you defeat that the door opens wasn't that how it works? Though they're empty pretty often." Though I say that, I think Miduchi's theory is correct as well. I mean, the only one's who have to the 8th floor is just us after all. If it was after another party had come and taken it then it's not as if it wouldn't make sense within a few days of that but right now that's unlikely.

Then, in that case, wouldn't it mean that whatever was here was carried out around 500 years ago? and it's only obvious to think that. I think it's possible this is where the treasure that George Rombert the First is said to have obtained in the dungeon was enshrined. Not something like a magic tool or gold ore but maybe something with far more value? Though since whatever that may have been was never conveyed, we have no way of knowing.

A magic sword with something, or other name or an enormous raw gem with an earth-shattering value that when split was capable of producing over 1,000 gem, or a powerful magic item and it's still used by the King deep in the castle now, there's a lot of different things said but no one knows for sure. If you were to ask me I have some ideas on what it may or may not be but it's not particularly like I have any foundation for it nor do I have any confidence in it. It's limited to just what I can imagine and even in the off chance that my prediction is correct, after all I'm sure it would still be surprising.

In any case, it's been over 30 minutes since we arrived in this room but not a single thing different has happened.

What we obtained from the dungeon this time was some considerably valuable magic stones and other than that we established the fact that there were altars beyond the 8th floor as well. Additionally there's the fact that the 8th floor was a gathering of smaller areas and in order to make it into a map, there will be a lot of areas overlapping, so it's very possible we're going back and forth between the 9th floor as well.

In regards to that there's probably no other method than exploring the 8th floor a bit more and then after properly confirming it's safe, trying to check using Miduchi's {Party-ization}.
I guess we'll return with this much for this time.

After returning to the surface and entering Boil Manor there was a message waiting. The details were that the first knight group was going to be performing a parade for the New Year in the capital, so it was an invitation(order) from sister for Miduchi and I to come and watch.

It looks like we won't be able to go to teacher Mila's place this time...

I wonder if it would be best to bring along extra dried fish next time as an apology?

Chapter 222: Parade

Year 7445, Month 12, Day 28

Last night, the number of magic stones we sold was 35 each of both trolls and ogres, 84 crickets, 40 huge praying mantis, 53 huge centipedes, and 11 scavenger crawlers.

In total it came out to 78,000,000 Z (78 gold coins). It was our first huge earnings in a while. Excluding the slaves I paid everyone a bonus of 1,560,000 Z, and my net income was just over 67,000,000 Z. If we could manage this every time then I'd be able to pay everyone close to 5,000,000 in bonuses every month but...This time it was a bit longer than usual, so I guess that's unreasonable huh?

Also, Ralpa and Gwine seem like they would waste all their money on things that make no sense after all..Though that's fine. I handed them 1 gold coin, 2 gold Shu, and 6 silver coins while saying "Put some into savings." It seems that everyone is borrowing a shared locker at the temple together with Zenom as the representative.

I thought Miduchi would sponge off of my locker but it seems she's using the same locker as everyone else. Everyone put their gold coins into a small bag with their name on it and left it to him. I told her, "I don't particularly mind if you use mine as well you know." but she said that she's participating in order to help reduce the monthly management fee of 300,000 Z so that made sense. It seems just Toris and Zenom are paying a bit more.

I went straight to the temple to deposit the 67 gold coins and put the bag into my locker. There's 2 bags with 1,000(1,000,000,000 Z) gold coins each, 2 bags with 500(500,000,000 Z) each, 7 small bags with 100(100,000,000 Z) each. I have about 10 times the amount I did two years ago around the same period but it's still nowhere near enough. Since the lockers are considerably big so there's enough capacity for you to fit around 20 bags with 1,000 gold coins in each.

Thinking about various things and I want at least enough gold coins to fill this locker full. If I get greedy then at least two lockers full. The spear being used by Gwine, the sword being used by Bel, and there Water making bracelet.

I don't know what kind of money we'd make if we sell them but I don't think it would be bad to hope for amounts in the hundreds of millions for the weapons.

It's been three and a half years since we came to this Baldukk, though about half of it is profits from my business but a large portion of the remainder is earnings since we reached the 7th floor and if we continue at this rate then it shouldn't even take 10 years for me to accumulate 100,000,000,000 Z or so. However, around here all at once, I want some kind of big profit. I won't say something luxurious like several hundred billions. It's fine if it's just ten billion or so...I guess that's still luxurious huh?

Well, I'll hold my hopes high for the 8th floor.

Last night after that, I joined up with my four combat slaves I had left behind and we all went to eat dinner together. During the time we were exploring the dungeon, it seems my combat slaves were training and making sausages. After listening to their conversation and Catherine is giving her best. Today and tomorrow other than running it's almost entire days off, the day after tomorrow I intend to go to the capital together with Miduchi, Basutorial, and Catherine to look at several candidates for a factory. In any case let's get some good rest today and tomorrow. I ended up enjoying it slowly and laid back while taste testing sausages at lunchtime.

Year 7446, Month 1, Day 1

The capital of Rombertia in front of Greed Company, Miduchi and I are standing on Bell Street together with the employees waiting for the parade of the first knight group to pass by. Since it's in the middle of winter it's considerably cold but everyone was in a reasonably warm outfit and we bought some hot stew from a stall so our preparations against the cold are perfect. Every since we replenished our stock of products the other day, our customers have been returning to the company so today on New Years it's the first day off for everyone in a while.

In order to let Anna see well I'm letting her ride my shoulders.

Hanna is riding on the husband who married into Dianne's family Luke's shoulders, and Kanna is riding on Rozral's shoulders who he's attached to on the level of becoming a grandfather. I guess Anna was copying a line Leila uses when apologizing, "I'm sorry, president."

and she said that but something like a young Cat-person girl is completely light. Also, I can easily tell from their lively voices. Hanna and Kanna were both enjoying themselves as well.

""Oh!""

"Ah!""

The officials that are leading them sing a song in a loud voice as they approach.

The voices of the officials seem to already be getting a bit hoarse and it's completely unknown what they're singing.

The cheers of the citizens lined up along the road echo through the capital.

The parade should already be just past that corner.

The children that we three have on our shoulders are in high spirits.

Hey now, it's dangerous so don't move around that much.

Right behind the officials the first company commander Viscount Gendail is riding on horseback.

Shortly behind him the platoon commanders are following but among them the first prince his highness Prince Richard Rombert the Fourth was included because he's a platoon commander of the first company as well.

And then, after that commanders is the regular knights of the first company, then even further behind that are the squires holding up the national flag and flags for the knight group draping from long handle weapons as they walk. Behind the first company is the knight commander Baron Logan and the sub-commander sub-Baron Bittowaz, as well as some knights that seem to directly serve them are continuing along as they wave to the citizens on the roadside.

Following that as the commander of the second company Viscount Balkisas and then the commander of the third company Viscount Kendus, sister was included among the regular knights of the third company as well waving at the citizens cheering them on with a full face smile.

All of the true knights of the knight group drew their swords while still on horseback when the parade passed in front of Greed Company where we were watching from and then after lifting them as a greeting they returned them to their scabbards. It seems that in front of influential merchants they deal with they do those sorts of performances. Leila explained that they do these sorts of parades one every three years or so.

Anna, Hanna, and Kanna were all overjoyed and frolicking to the point where it seemed like they would pass out.

"However, it's quite something."

Rozural started talking to me. I understand well what you want to say.

"Yeah, really."

"That there's this many people who want to use the armor made by Bakuddo is.."

Luke said as if he was moved.

It's close to saying that all of the commanders of the first knight group are wearing the black rubber protectors, even among the regular knights the ratio of those wearing them is close to half.

Even among the squires there's a couple wearing black armor here and there so they stand out.

Sister might have wanted to show this to me.

Sister drew the long sword that I designed, lifted it into the air, and smiled cheerfully before putting it back in her scabbard as well, then continued along with the parade facing forward.

After that, with a slight space between them was the second knight group, third knight group, and fourth knight group, as all of the knight groups continued with the parade. Of course, there's also things like security and patrols so I'm sure only the first knight group has almost all of it's members participating. It seems they adjusted it so the number of people of all of the knight groups would be about the same as well.

It took over 10 minutes for the knight group parade to pass in front of Greed Company. In total there probably wasn't even 1,000 people but it's not like I actually counted them..at best maybe around 500 people?

Year 7446, Month 1, Day 2

After Miduchi and I returned to Boil Manor from the capital last night, before dawn at 5 in the morning we gathered in a corner of the entrance plaza of the dungeon of Baldukk together with my 7 slaves including the newcomers. Today and tomorrow we're going to clear through the 6th floor and then from the day after tomorrow, January 4th we'll spend almost entire day training these guys against ogres on the 7th floor. If you were to ask it's pretty tiresome but there's not many opponents so convenient for earning experience quickly as ogres. Also, I wanted them to feel the sensation and speed in clearing through to the 6th floor in two days with their bodies.

"With this I think there will be no problem for three days. Just in case I included a bit of extra but..Master, after all I as well.."

Giberuti said while handing enough food for 6 people to last over 3 days to each person to put into their bags.

"Yeah, it's fine. I just want them to know what our manner of doing things is like. There's no need for you to act as {porter} for it."

"However, master.."

Hearing my reply Zulu said anxiously. Come to think of it Zulu was the only one against us going to the 7th floor with these 6 to the end. He was loudly nagging that I should at least let him or Angela accompany us.

"Zulu, I'm grateful that you're worrying about us but you should have a bit more faith in this person and myself. Or else are you worried because I'm the one accompanying them?"

Miduchi said while poking Zulu's high up chest.

"No!! Madam! Of course that's not the case! I'm very sorry for saying something beyond my duties. Please forgive me."

It seems Zulu realized he was saying something too forward and lowered his head while embarrassed and apologetic.

"Sorry-Sorry. That was a slightly mean way of putting it. But, even Henry (Henry.Okonneru) and Mekku(Meisun.Garuhahu) were true knights of Devas right? Their skill is guaranteed right?"

It seems Miduchi doesn't mind it and she's indirectly showing some care for the newcomers as well. Henry and Mekku were both saying something like, "Please leave it to us! Zulu-sama." In some ways it's a weird picture where true knights are lowering their heads to Zulu who was just a soldier but Zulu is my head slave after all, it's only obvious. It's good that there's a proper order going.

"I don't have feel any unease at all. Rather than that, the fact that the two of you won't be able to get any decent rest..I'm worried about your bodies.."

Angela is saying it worried about us but we were able to rest plenty the past two days. Since we have bodies in our teens that's plenty.

"It's alright Maruso. We properly got some rest so there's nothing to worry about."

"Yeah, there's no problem...That's right, Giberuti. We'll be returning on the evening of the 4th so prepare some oysters with this. I want to eat a pot."

I laughed while saying to Angela there was no need to worry and putting 1 silver coin into Giberuti's hand. In reality I want to eat raw oysters but as expected food poisoning is scary. If the type that's eaten raw in Japan was in circulation then it would be one thing but I don't have the courage to eat the oysters of Orth raw. Eh? I'm not that much of an idiot.

"The four of you, make sure you learn well the methods from master and the madam. And also, no matter what you see you're not allowed to speak about it. You're not allowed to discuss it even to just us or among yourselves. Alright!"

It seems the instructions from the head slave have ended.

But that, I was thinking of acting cool while saying it...

Also I don't particularly mind talking about it in place with just my slaves or the {Slaughterers} though...

Well then, shall we go? It's necessary for them to learn the methods of the {Slaughterers}.

"Henry, Mekku. In regards to the 1st floor for today but you two are the {Assault Sweepers} of both flanks. Rubi(Rubano.Firenoto) and Jesu(Jesutasu.Manzokki) will protect the middle and are {Spear Interceptors}. This person and I are the {Advance Guard}."

"Well, what we're about to do after this is our normal method with the {Slaughterers}. The important points like monster rooms just Miduchi and I will take care of but we're going to be moving quickly. Don't fall behind."

After I said that we moved from a corner of the plaza to the entrance of the dungeon.

"Alright, let's take a 15 minute break. Anyone who wants to go to the bathroom say something now while you can. No monsters will approach the surroundings of this room so you can relax. Anyone who wants to drink something bring me your flask."

The current time is around 9:30 am. Our distance through the 1st floor today was around 9 km in all, that would mean we proceeded through the dungeon at a speed of about 2 km/hour. From a general view it's a considerably fast pace. But, there's no way to be satisfied over it. If it's the current {Slaughterers} we can do about 3 km/hour. Just a bit slower than the speed you walk along the road in the middle of town.

All four of them are making slightly tired expressions but it seems they can still go on for a while. Since Miduchi and I are cutting into combat with all of the monsters we encounter along the way, they're just surrounding the ones we miss and beating them to death so I guess they aren't all that tired.

"Even though there's six people our pace isn't all that different from usual huh..that's amazing."

Henry said.

"That's right. Master is an amazing person."

Rubi agreed.

"Mu..The {Exterminators} took a bit more time huh.."

Hearing Henry and Rubi's words Mekku said to Jesu.

"Is..that so? I thought it felt about that same.."

Jesu replied without confidence.

"We're moving a bit slow right."

"It can't be helped, since we're having Mekku use magic after all...I intend to raise our pace a bit more on the 2nd floor though, if things go like this then it'll take us until night to clear through the 3rd floor. Up until then I'm sure his spell level will increase as well..No, we'll raise it..raising it is more correct..There's tomorrow as well..after all and as expected I guess that's impossible huh?"

While they were talking to the side Miduchi and I were discussing in a whisper.

In order for Mekku to earn experience with magic, we held down a living goblin and had him use earth magic to create dirt on it's face suffocating to death. It was a last resort since his void magic level is low and he can't use any proper attack spells. In the past, we forced Ralpa to do it against her will as well. If you pour a single cup full of dirt into their mouth while adding a direction to it then something like a goblin will easily suffocate.

Even Miduchi started saying she couldn't watch.

Normally even I know that you should spend a reasonable amount of time aiming for level 3. It's better to spend a reasonable amount of time becoming familiar with spells when the level is 1-2. Since it seems the knack for controlling mana is different for each person you have to get used to your own feel for controlling it.

If your void magic level reaches 3 you can use the standard attack spells so after that you don't need help and you can just continue damaging yourself. Currently Mekku's mana amount MP is 10. If his void magic level increases then he'll have 11. Since earth magic will most likely increase as well 12 huh?

It should be fine if we have him use {Stone Javelin} once every 30 minutes and get used to using it for attacking. Though I say that, for it to be practical..it'll probably take a reasonable amount of time for him to be able to fire it within a few seconds so I think it's quite a ways ahead though. It's probably best to estimate it as taking at least half a year.

If it's up to the 5th floor or so unless a considerably powerful enemy appears the {Javelin} type attack spells have plenty of attack power to act as a trump card. If most monsters take a direct hit to a good spot from it then you can finish them off with just that. Even that {Frost Lizard} can only endure about three direct hits. Depending on how it goes even two hits could considerably weaken it. If it hits, that is.

""Ha~!!Ha~!!Ha~!!""

The four slaves are breathing heavily as they cling on to the spears in their hands or put their hands on their knees.

The current time is 9:00 pm. We cleared through the 1st floor in about four and a half hours but the 2nd floor took five hours, and when it came to the 3rd floor it took a whole six hours. We finished up lunch by biting into some hotdogs while moving. Our dinner for tonight has gotten a bit late but we boiled some baldoggie, cabbage, carrots, and potatoes together. It's not a stew like pot-au-feu so it's not very good but that can't be helped.

"I want to try and short the entirety by another five hours."

"I guess so..It's best to clear through the 3rd floor by 4 pm on the first day after all.."

This teleport crystal room on the 3rd floor gets packed pretty easily. There's always second-rate and half first-rate parties camping at any time and depending on the case there's sometimes top teams as well. Since we ended up arriving late today we weren't able to secure a spot along the wall. Somehow it feels like the best spots are the corners and next is along the walls. If you can arrive here at around 4 pm then while the corners might be impossible, in most cases you can find a spot along the walls.

Just because it's the New Years when it comes to adventurers there's not very many who take a break. It's normal to enter the dungeon along the schedule that was decided by the party. Since pretty much all the time they aren't in the dungeon is something like a holiday there's not many groups which adhere to the New Years break. Rather the restaurants are packed and other stores are often closed so there's quite a few groups that enter the dungeon during the New Year as well. The brats who work at the inn take breaks in order over the New Years so it's easy for them to run out of helpers. That equals the quality of service being easier to drop as well.

By the way, just as would be expected from taking quite a bit of time Mekku's magic gained quite a bit of experience. In just today it seems he was able to do around 400 in damage with magic and in order for his void magic to increase level I guess he needs to deal around another 2,200 or so damage with magic? If he were to just slowly and steadily use useless spells it would take over one year to earn this kind of experience so you could say it was worth it.

Tomorrow is..there's only undead on the 4th and 5th floors so there's no suffocating or anything about it...He can't make enough dirt to make the boars on the 6th floor or the ogres on the 7th floor suffocate either...Well, if we can find another chance in the near future then if we just have him gain experience the same as this time he should be able to level up in a reasonably fast speed.

However, looking at their current state I feel a bit uneasy leaving them to keep lookout. It's a huge service. It should be fine for just Miduchi and I to take shifts as lookout. While telling the four of them not to worry about it as they apologized I had Miduchi rest first.

Hmm..So their levels increased huh. Different from yesterday, since there's almost no way for suffocating them to death working, I shifted the direction of having the slaves gain experience. Certain kill technique, freeze their lower bodies. Thanks to that Rubi and Jesu were able to increase their levels on e each and became levels 7 and 6. As expected it was impossible for even Henry and Mekku. But, in the 7th floor we'll reach tomorrow if I freeze ogres leaving just their heads out, if they kill one alone they should earn about 1,500 each. If we were up for it, it's not a dream to even have all four of them earn 10,000 experience points each in just a single day.

I'm fine with doing it but there's not much meaning to it right. If their ability levels and Endurance increase then their HP will increase and that means the room for negative HP will increase as well making it harder for them to die though. The increased ability levels won't contribute much. Rather, while their ability levels are still low it would be better to have them continue running and analyze the relationship with their increases in ability levels.

It's not particularly like I have some definite basis for it but I feel like the increase in ability levels is a bit faster when they're lower and you don't depend on level ups to increase them. In the first place even this time is originally to have them understand that the {Slaughterers} have this sort of feel and leveling up isn't the objective. We can have them accumulate experience anytime time after all. Oh~ when we return maybe I should tell John and Terry to start running every morning from here on out as well. Whether they cry or scream and even if I'm cursed at by Ralpa as being an ogre, it's not like just running will kill someone after all. In the first place down to their last drop of blood John and Terry belong to me.

Henry is thinly cutting some pickled cucumber. Jesu has some water boiling on the stove and is cooking baldoggie in it. Rubi is cutting bread with a knife. Mekku is pulverizing some mustard leaves to make mustard. I'm barefoot and just dazing as I watch them do that with my feet in the foot bath.

Miduchi is taking her shower first.

In the afternoon we cleared through to the teleport room on the 5th floor, then when we finally arrived at the teleport room on the 6th floor with the slaves eyes going wide seeing the shower room, kitchen, and foot bath, I ordered them to prepare dinner.

"Ha~ I feel refreshed. Do you want me to add some hot water?"

After Miduchi finished taking her shower she called out to me.

"Hn? Yeah, please do."

It'll probably take a bit more time for the food to be done. They should be making some soup as well. Taking Miduchi's place I went to take a shower and dinner was finished being made. Oh my~ I wonder if I took my time too much?

Sorry for making you wait.

"He~ this is delicious."

Just for a glance, it looks like completely normal vegetable soup but the stock is done properly.

"I was taught by Larry."

Rubi made an embarrassed smile as he stretched his hand out. After handing him my empty cup I said, "Ah, I only want about half full" and had him fill it before taking it back and I also ate some bread in the form of a hotdog lookalike. The flavor of the karashi which passes through the nose is good. It wouldn't be this good for just {Mustard}. I don't know about Miduchi and their tastes but I like karashi more than {mustard}.

It seems Jesu has tears welling in his eyes from the karashi but he properly has an appetite. Henry and Mekku are eating plenty as well. Judging from their way of eating they don't seem to have any resistance to karashi. Miduchi is claiming to be "without wasabi" and hasn't added any karashi. So it was no good huh? In exchange she has some sauerkraut finely cut up on hers. Lactobacillus is necessary right.

"Ah, listen while you eat. Tomorrow is finally the 7th floor. We'll have you fight against ogres. Starting off Miduchi and I will show you an example without magic. After that show me you can take one down with just you four. We'll properly be adjusting the number so there's no need to worry."

"It's fine for you not to get that tense. If you do it with the four of you then there's no problem. However, Henry and Mekku should focus on defense. While the two of them are enduring the attacks of the ogre I think it should be fine for Rubi and Jesu to attack."

Fu~Fu~ Miduchi said while blowing on the hot soup to cool it down.

Henry and Mekku were exchanging glances while nodding. Rubi was slowly nodding to himself and Jesu gulped as he swallowed what he had in his mouth before nodding.

After explaining the attack methods of the ogres and how to get into an effective position we decided to rest. As expected I doubt we'll be able to get through it without everyone unharmed. I told them to relax because I'd definitely heal them even if they suffer serious injuries before leaving lookout to them and going to sleep. Well, I'm sure no one will come to the 6th floor so in the worst case even if they fall asleep while on lookout it should be fine.

Chapter 223: Strengthening

Today we plundered 10 ogre magic stones on the 7th floor so it's been a decent profit. I was able to return to the surface while feeling reasonably good and ate a pot of oysters. After all oysters are delicious right. If I just had some miso and ponzu then I'd have nothing more to say but things that I don't have can't be helped. Even boiling them together with cabbage and pork delicious things are delicious. If I could had some rice to cook it with to make oyster then it would be great though..I notice there's no meaning to continuing with things I don't have. But, it can't be helped thinking about it right.

However, after all I guess you could say, I had already predicted it ahead of time but Henry and Mekku who were acting as tanks at the front line{Vanguard} suffered quite a few injuries. My combat slaves managed to take down one ogre(of course, it was on top of us adjusting the numbers though) with their own abilities.

I had them a fight a total of three times but the first two times left pretty miserable results. The first time, at first Miduchi hit it with a throwing noddle smeared with paralysis poison. However, before the paralysis poison could take effect Mekku took a hit from a club and broke his right arm, additionally some of his ribs broke as well. Seeing Mekku defeated and send flying in a single blow, Rubi and Jesu's morale was on the verge of collapse. Miduchi was about to jump in right away but I held on to her arm to hold her back. It's because Henry who somehow was able to endure started reprimanding and encouraging them.

Although, when that Henry was stepped on with it's right foot and had his movements sealed, he ended up taking a blow, his shoulder of the arm he was holding his weapons suffered a pulverizing break and he wasn't able to move anymore. At that point I intervened and easily parried the attacks of the ogre who the paralysis poison had started taking effect on while Rubi and Jesu continued to attack and kill it. The two front line members who were injured and fallen we took our time healing after finishing off the ogre.

The second time we used the paralysis poison as well. However, before the paralysis poison could take effect Mekku's long sword was suddenly knocked out of his hand. Well, it was fine how he didn't adhere to the weapon that fell to the ground and immediately pulled out a knife(in order to gather magic stones I've given everyone a knife), but after that was bad. Mekku tried to attack with that small knife. I can recognize his guts but obviously even if you land a hit with it there's almost no meaning. If he was used to combat against ogres to where he could aim for the tendons in it's arms or legs then it wouldn't be as big of a problem but Mekku doesn't have that sort of experience.

The opponent was a brawny giant with a height of over 2.5 meters that easily swings around a massive club. Even if he's swinging around a knife with a blade of at most 15 cm the ogre wouldn't recognize Mekku as any sort of threat. It's like an elementary schooler wielding a box cutter to try and restrain a brainless adult swinging a metal bat around. If it was a member of the {Slaughterers} on the contrary they'd make use of it not paying attention to them and use someone else as a decoy while they cut the tendons in it's arms or legs. Even if they can't actually manage that just trying to do that would be enough to pull the ogres attention back to themselves.

Since Henry ended up essentially one on one against the ogre he tried to take an attack with all of it's strength using his shield and his posture crumbled, then took a kick to the flank during that time being sent flying 3 meters where he passed out in agony. Mekku wasn't able to pick up his own weapon and unable to decently keep it in check with the knife he wasn't used to as he was driven into full defense. Even then if he managed to make good use of his remaining shield to endure something could have been done but since he wasn't used to combat against ogres, it was just a matter of time before he couldn't endure anymore. Obviously hoping that the opponent would go off guard just by enduring is an empty dream. He wasn't able to create any openings for Rubi and Jesu to attack with the spears.

Miduchi intervened and after cutting the ogres right arm that was holding it's club off from the shoulder to earn some time, I picked up Mekku's long sword and handed it to him. As expected the ogre who had suffered serious injuries on top of having the paralysis poison circulate had it's movements dull so keeping an ogre without it's main arm in check wasn't a problem. Rubi and Jesu obstructed the ogre from trying to pick up it's club with it's remaining left arm and that made it possible for Mekku to parry it's attacks as well.

It took Rubi and Jesu close to 20 minutes to finish off the ogre but well that's fine. During that time I had plenty of leeway to use a healing spell on Henry.

The third time, the last time just the same the two front line members ended up suffering bruises to their left hands holding the shield but I guess they were getting used to it they were able to avoid any fatal blows during the rest of the combat. There was some spectacles that made me nervous watching as well but Henry and Mekku somehow managed to endure and create an opening, then hearing Mekku and Henry's command Rubi and Jesu attacked it precisely. It took four people over 20 minutes to finish off just a single one of them, and near the end both the ogre and the two tanks were basically in a mud slinging match with how worn out they were but in the end they were able to finish off an ogre without Miduchi or I intervening.

As expected the two of them were true knights, they were skillfully able to overcome their fear and their instructions to Rubi and Jesu were good as well. Well, I don't feel like I lost out buying them I guess.

Particularly the events that happened today, the combat on the 7th floor, the four of them were made to report it to Zulu and Angela.

And then they received a harsh rejection.

It's fine to do the report but you know, if you don't eat soon we're going to eat all of the oysters.

John and Terry are still growing after all.

Since they're delicious you should eat them before they cool down.

It's a waste of magic stones for the restaurants of Orth so they can't continue heating up the pot on the stove forever.

Look, you all stop preaching for so long.

When we're eating meals let's at least eat with a good feeling.

.....

Year 7446, Month 1, Day 29

Starting tomorrow we're entering the dungeon again. So today is the fun pay day. I paid 200,000 Z to each of the members of the {Slaughterers} and pay the slaves their wages as well. The three veterans got a salary raise of 10,000 Z each. Zulu gets 90,000 Z.

Angela gets 80,000 Z. Giberuti gets 50,000 Z. And then, the former knights Henry and Mekku get 60,000 Z each, Rubi and Jesu get 40,000

Z each. John and Terry don't get a salary raise this time so 6,000

Z each.

.....

Year 7446, Month 2, Day 14

Today is the 18 year old birthday for us reincarnated people. This time Toris was dispatched to the {Exterminators} and Miduchi to the {Butchers}. It's the third day since we entered the dungeon, a day we had planned to earn against ogres on the 7th floor but during breakfast Bel said, "It's our birthday after all, there might be something good." so we decided not to clear through to the 7th floor and decided to take a look in the altar rooms on the 6th floor. It takes around 1.5 hours round trip but if we just focus on clearing through it only takes about 3 hours for the 7th floor. I'm sure we won't be punished for playing around just a bit.

We beat down the 5 {Quad-handed Apes} that were summoned as well as the 4 gargoyles and then watched as the door to the shrine on top of the altar opened while praying.

There's something in it!

Oho!!

While everyone was cheering to the side, I quickly used 【Identify】.

{Cursed.Items} are no joke after all.

【Bracer.Of.Might】

【Black Ogre Leather】

【Condition: Normal】

【Manufacture Date: 14/2/7446】

【Value: 1】

【Durability: 9999】

【Ability: Through an increase in defensive capability to the equipped location damage to the applicable area is reduced by 1 point. Also, Strength is increased by 2 points.】

【Effect: Equipping this increases Strength by 2 points. Also, the proficiency level of Strength increases by 2 points as well.

Furthermore, there's no effect on HP.】

Just from a glance there doesn't seem to be any problem.

"Well then, Angela, I leave it to you."

Being ordered by me Angela took the bracer out from the shrine.

"Status Open"

【Bracer.Of.Might】

Just from looking at it, it seems to be made of black leather and has a feel like you wear it on your forearm. It has a width of around 10 cm and you could almost say it's a wide bracelet. There's nothing that seems like ornaments on it.

"Supposedly it's a Bracer.Of.Might. Also I feel mana from it."

I said while taking the bracer in my hand and looking at the status again.

"Oh~ a {Magic.Item}! Isn't that great!"

Ralpa raises her voice in delight.

"Pl..Please show it to me!"

Basutorial checked the status while excited and let out a voice like ho~ho~ in admiration but do you really get it?

"Judging from the name I guess it would increase the users power?"

Bel seemed happy as well. Correct!

"I guess it raises Strength to increase attack power?"

"Ah, I see."

Hearing my words Gwine chimed in.

"Then, in that case wouldn't it be most effective for Gwine or Saji who use the spear to have it?"

Zenom laughed while saying. Certainly that might be true.

"Then, since Gwine is already using the magic spear, Basutorial, you use it."

When I said that and Basutorial let out a surprised voice like, "Eh? Me.." That's right, you.

"Well, try putting it on. If you it makes your thrusts even sharper wouldn't it be a gain?"

Basutorial passed both of his hands through the bracers and started thrusting the spear a bit of distance away.

"Oh! Certainly! I feel like the spear has gotten a bit lighter!"

Basutorial happily raised his voice.

"Just a minute, Saji. Let me try using them as well."

It seems Ralpa is interested.

"..Somehow the sensation is just a bit.."

It seems she felt off with them. I'm sure that's the case. The tomahawk is a weapon that's different from the sword and spear where the damage doesn't largely differs depending on the angle you drive the blade in so it's difficult to handle. Well, even if the angle is a bit strange the destructive capability from it's weight can't be ignored. If you can properly drive it into the opponent at the ideal angle and speed then excluding the magic weapons it boasts even higher attack power than my bayonet. If she wants to use it Ralph is fine as well but I'm sure it would take some time to get used to it and since it's necessary for her to get out and move around actively at the front, it's better for her not to feel like something is off with her body. If you get it then be patient for now.

However..this is a good omen!

I wanted to quickly clear through the 7th floor as well but I couldn't give up on the earnings from the ogre mage room and the ogres we encountered either. It was just past noon when we arrived at the teleport crystal room on the 7th floor, around 1 pm. The increase to Basutoral's attack power wasn't something that could clearly be seen or felt but when I used Identify on the ogres he was up against, I certainly felt like the damage he was dealing increased by a bit. It's true that it's something better to have than not.

If we can make it to the altar rooms on the 8th floor with this momentum then let's go, is what we decided on. However, we can't fight with empty stomachs. We had Giberuti prepare some lunch and properly ate or meals.

Other than the extravagant version altar we found on the 8th floor one upon a time we've discovered four normal altar rooms. It's not like they have consecutive monster rooms just before them, they're just normal monster rooms with altars and 4 gargoyles in each that we've encountered up until now. Also, thanks to Miduchi's {Party-ization} we were able to confirm that partway through the 8th floor areas the floor changes as well. When the floor changes (it's unknown whether it's the 9th floor or not so I can't say anything though) it seems the monsters that come out in the passages change a bit as well.

How do I put it, the crickets don't have the name of {Giant Cave Cricket} but rather {Giant Color Cricket}, and then the color is things like {Red} or {Green}, that sort of feel. Also, another big difference is that something like a rhinoceros beetle started to appear. Since it's shell is hard the spears can only aim for the soft stomach parts of it. It's a large 70-80 cm or so drone beetle like {Beetle}. Though since they have scythes the praying mantis are scarier. Particularly the brown colored mantis have quick movements so they're reasonably powerful enemies.

Though I say that, Trolls which we haven't frozen are overwhelmingly stronger. Up until now the monsters summoned in the monster rooms of the 8th and 9th(?) floors always include trolls. Since we've already gotten quite a bit used to them we aren't freezing them every time.

Also, it's something we found out while up against trolls on the 8th floor but if you injure the trolls to the point where they can't move and forcefully tear their magic stone out before they can regenerate and they die without regenerating anymore. If you cut off their head and then burn the cut shut even without a head they'll still move around for a bit but even if you just leave them alone they'll die eventually. The regeneration speed of 1 HP per 5 seconds is considerably fast but if you normally accumulate damage on it and drive it's HP into the negative regions then even if it's HP regions to the normal zone it won't be able to properly move so during that time it's fine to take out their magic stone or fine to completely burn them to death with fire as well.

For about one hour we repeated teleporting into the 8th floor and managed to reach an area that leads to an altar room. If we have Gwine teleporting consecutively becomes quite a bit easier. If it's an area that's in her memory then she'll know right away after all. It's big that we can return within the 10 seconds or so that it takes for the incantation to appear when it's a destination other than our objective. We're able to reduce the time just by not having to search for the number every single time.

And then we came along to an altar room on the 8th floor. I buried the gargoyle statues up to the neck just leaving their heads out ahead of time. I blasted 1 of the 5 trolls that was summoned with an attack spell using fire magic as the base killing it instantly, then blow one more away just the same. While everyone else slowly finishes off the remaining three before I noticed it's become my job to cut off the heads of the gargoyles buried in dirt.

Now then~ the door of the shrine is opening!
It would be great if something is inside of it.

..Oh!

It seems that just as expected of today being our birthday, it's the greatest day.

That is..an axe huh!?

【Cold Axe.Of. Returning】

【Chill Iron】

【Condition: Normal】

【Manufacture Date: 14/2/7446】

【Value: 1】

【Durability: 32568】

【Ability: 60-250】

【Effect: A durable throwing axe made of Chill Iron that can also be used as a hand-axe. After throwing it, regardless of whether it hits, if the hand that threw it is stretched upwards while the user wishes for the return of the axe and opens their hand, it will always return in a way that the handle hits the palm of their hand. The user will naturally be able to understand the method of use.】

Ohho! Amazing~!

Both the lower and upper limits of it are above 50 and considerably higher than the current axes. I still don't really get the meaning in the number though. I wonder if the 【Greater Identify】 that George Rombert the First had could open all of the sub-windows related to that? I'm envious.

With a deep blue metallic axe head and a handle most likely made from the same material. The handle isn't straight but has a slight curve in two places and somehow gives off an impression that it's easy to use. The handle portion is covered in some durable looking leather that somehow gives off the feel of a high class item.

"Since it seems to be a throwing axe, I think Zenom should use this."

Ralpa occasionally throws her axe as well but Zenom is more skilled. When it comes to calculating the number of rotations of the axe for the distance and timing, the control of power used in the throwing it, Zenom should be able to make better use of it.

".."

Ralpa was making a strange face with her lower lip sticking out but it seems she doesn't have any complaints. It can't be helped right.

"If you want to use it then it's fine for you to use it?"

Zenom said with a troubled face.

"Judging from the name it seems that after you throw it, it'll return to you right? Then I think that Zenom-san who's good at throwing should use it."

Bel laughed while saying with a feel like, how unfortunate. Ralpa said, "Yeah, that's right. I know." and also "Father you use it." while looking at Zenom. I smiled while handing the axe to Zenom and saying, "Zenom should use this." Zenom made a bitter smile taking it.

"It'll come back after throwing it? I wonder how it feels?"

Zulu said with a feel of great interest. Oh~ about that. I'm interested too.

After Zenom took the axe from me it seems he checked the status but soon after changed his expression and threw the axe at the corpse of a troll laying around. The head of the axe stabbed into it to the point where it couldn't be seen anymore.

Zenom quickly lifted his right hand up and opened his palm.

Several seconds (I don't think it was even 5 seconds?) the axe automatically pulled itself out and with a hy~unto~ sound while spinning returned back to Zenom's hand. Of course, in a way where the handle was settled in the palm of his hand. It was almost as if a video was being played in reverse, that sort of surreal image.

I somehow expected it but everyone including myself had our mouths hanging open like idiots as we watched that. Zenom looked at the axe after it returned and then threw it at the troll's corpse once again. After confirming it splendidly hit just like last time and Zenom suddenly started running.

That's right, there's few instances where you'd always be standing in one place while in combat. You're always moving around. While Zenom was running with his right hand stretched out the axe went flying towards him. The trajectory was as if it was moving in arc matching with Zenom's movement. Without even looking at the axe flying towards him he tightly grabbed the handle of it. It returned to Zenom's hand almost as if there was some kind of invisible rubber string attached between the handle of the axe and the palm of Zenom's hand.

And then he tried throwing it while rolling to the side in a difficult stance. Without missing it's aim the axe hit the Troll's corpse for a third time. It seems Zenom ran behind the altar. The axe came out of the corpse and then showed some unnatural movements as it flew over the top of the altar and we could hear the sound of grabbing the handle from the other side.

Seeing that sight all of us had our mouths stretched so far our jaws might reach the ground with our eyes wide open.
Zenom returned in front of us as we were all making idiotic faces and after wiping the axe off with the hand towel on his waist said.

"This is a good axe."

That's splendid.

Chapter 224: Ticket

Year 7446, Month 2, Day 29

Last week when we left the dungeon a letter had arrived from my brother in Bakuddo. It seems the next time they'll come is near the end of next month. The confusion from dispatching last year has already calmed and it seems they're bringing another huge load again. Since he has various fine jobs he has to take care of as the lord, the one coming this time is sister-in-law Shani-san. It seems that mother can't take her hands off training Zetto and Becky with magic. Come to think of it Zetto and Becky should already be six years old? Seven years old? I want to see them.

Maybe when sister-in-law Shani-san returns I'll accompany her and return once as well. There's also the matter with Kuro and Mary. It seems they're still squires. Though I say that, they started off as Free People who didn't have any sort of combat training. Even if they're reincarnated people blessed with a high degree of growth, there's no way they'd make it as knights in just four years. Even the child of a commoner that's received combat training since they were young takes an average of four years. Doing it in less than that is impossible. Not to mention, they weren't enlisted after being properly recognized for their abilities.

Ah, putting that aside, as expected we weren't able to get our hands on any treasure in the dungeon this time. But, there is one thing that's bothering me. There's clearly some changes that can be seen in the teleport room on the 5th floor. One of the corners is the place where we {Slaughterers} have been using since the year before last but it was prepared with a reasonable level of kitchen, foot bath, and other facilities. Of course there's a shower room as well. The corner diagonally from that was where the facilities the former {Sun.Ray} used that was left just like that. Occasionally we're cleaning it as well.

When we first absorbed {Sun.Ray} we discussed moving these facilities to the teleport room on the 7th floor but since they were all worn-out and cheap everyone was against bringing those to the front line. Above all else Giberuti said, "If it's this then I can't make anything very delicious." which decided it. We thought that eventually a reasonable number of people might stay in the 5th floor so we decided to just leave it as it is.

The change that we noticed this time was that of the remaining corners left one of those was suddenly furnished with another cheap portable stove comparable to the one {Sun.Ray} had and there was also some boxes which we have no idea what's inside of them packed together. It's probably large pots, kettles, and stuff though.

Additionally there was around 10 peoples worth of blankets and bedding. The floor was dry and we couldn't see any traces that it was being used but inside of the shower room bucket there was a single magic stone from a boss on the 2nd floor, the Owlbear. They probably intended it as payment for using it. The Identify value was about 6,000 so if we sell it that'll come out to over 40,000

Z.

The {Verdure.Brotherhood} and {Black.Topaz} huh? Otherwise maybe {Gehenna.Flare}. At the very least some place has completely cleared the 5th floor and it's evidence that they're clearly aiming for the 6th floor as a hunting ground.

Eh? Zenom? He's super strong as usual. That magic axe can be used even if you don't throw it. It seems Ralpa borrowed it from Zenom and tried using it as well but said, "This is a waste for me to have." and accepted it.

Putting that aside, today is the first day of a three day break.

Currently we're in the middle of a rest break from doing cooperation training a bit outside of the outer crater, having tea time.

"Is it fine to talk for a bit?"

Kamu came over to where I was accompanied by Rokko.

"It's about the dungeon but I think it would be about a good time for us to go to the 2nd and 3rd floor as well though.."

Rokko said while chewing on the stem of a long piece of grass. What era delinquent are you from?

This guy, even though he's an elf and his build is completely different.

"..Why?"

From the 1st floor until the 3rd floor, excluding the room bosses fundamentally all of the monsters you encounter in the halls are the same.

As you go to the lower floors there's a tendency for the levels of monsters to vaguely get higher but from the 1st floor to the 3rd floor there's only an average of a 1 level difference. The 2nd floor is in the middle of that.

"No, I mean, putting it frankly the enemies on the 1st floor are an easy victory right?"

Don't lie. Even the {Slaughterers} would suffer some injuries if we spent an entire day running around the 1st floor fighting consecutively. Since we have a lot of members who can use magic I wonder if there's an impression of us not getting hurt very often? Even that has it's limits and as we get tired our movements get dull. It's only obvious eventually we'll end up taking some attacks.

Call it an easy victory when you can spend almost an entire day fighting it alone without getting hurt even once. She must have noticed my displeased face, Kamu started talking try to follow up for him.

"Nn..It's a bit difficult to say. That is, we were originally called one of the top teams right."

Yeah, and?

"And you know, since around August of last year, it's been about half a year..that we've always been on the 1st floor? After all you know, isn't it a bit embarrassing?"

I see now, the so-called pride of a former top team huh? Though if you were to weigh out pride and your lives I'd pick my life. Even if it's uncool I think it's better than dying. But, I have no intention of rejecting their pride itself either. It can become a big driving force after all. Also, while there's only a handful of them in a persons life but there's times when a person needs to remain obstinate with their pride on the line as well. Although, I don't think right now is that sort of time.

"That sort of thing huh? Got it. If you can clear through the 1st floor in 4 hours then that's fine. I'll keep an eye on things in the dungeon for a week starting tomorrow. I'll make the decision based on you all making it to the teleport room on the 1st floor a number of times. I guess departing at 8 am in the morning and returning at 5 pm in the afternoon? The condition is arriving at the teleport crystal two times every day. Ah, I'll also add the conditions for going past the 2nd floor as well. If you can reach the teleport room on the 2nd floor by 5 pm in a stable way after departing at 8 am then it's fine for you to go to the 3rd floor. The condition for going to the 4th floor is departing at 8 am in the morning and reaching the teleport room on the 3rd floor by 8 pm, if you can do that then I'll make going to the 4th floor okay as well I guess."

"4 hours huh..Alright, that'll be easy!"

"I thought you would say that. Well just watch."

"Yeah, I'm holding my hopes high. And then, from here on out just fundamentally think of the leaders we dispatch from the {Slaughterers} as an advisor for command during combat and achieving objectives. For example you can ask them a plan on what to do for reaching the 1st floor in 4 hours. If they think everyone's idea is correct then I'm sure they'll adopt it and if they don't think it is they probably won't make use of it. They'll only have the authority over things like the timing and duration for breaks and who keeps lookout then. I want everyone to start thinking about picking the course and the speed it takes for moving through the dungeon. I'll tell them to abide by your requests in regards to the course and speed as much as possible."

They should have already learned about the pace from the dispatch leader from the {Slaughterers} as well. Wouldn't this be just right? Putting aside clearing through the 3rd floor, if it's their current abilities then I'm sure it would also be best to raise the standard and I'm sure they can at least manage going to the 3rd floor.

Then, in that case, I'll need to prepare some proper bedding and blankets for Henry and Ruby as well. Also, it's not just the {Butchers}. I'm sure the {Exterminators} will also get fired up over the rivalry as well. Even they originally had gone as far as the 4th floor.

Year 7446, Month 3, Day 6

According to Bel who accompanied the {Butchers} and they were properly able to reach the teleport room on the 2nd floor twice every day.

"Then starting next week it's fine for you to go to the 2nd floor.

If you can precisely clear through the 2nd floor by evening then it's fine for you to go to the 3rd floor as well but prove it to me by showing you can continue it for at least one week."

I declared that to the members of the {Butchers} including Kamu and Rokko when I showed my face at their usual gathering place for dinner. They were all happy hearing that.

Well I had already expected it but the {Butchers} gained the ticket to the 3rd floor as well. You might think they were fast to clear through the 2nd floor but if you can clear through the 1st floor twice every day it's not strange at all.

Rather than that hearing that the {Butchers} could go to the 2nd floor the members of the {Exterminators} were roused as well and started giving it their best challenging for the ticket to the 2nd floor. However, for the last two days they weren't able to arrive there twice by 5 pm. The day before yesterday they ended up being 30 minutes or so over and yesterday it seems they were 40 minutes over.

This time, since Miduchi was dispatched to the {Exterminators} they must have thought it was their chance since they didn't need to worry about healing spells but..it seems they decided to challenge it a bit too soon. Although, it seems like their teleport luck wasn't very good and on the last two days they ended up with routes that took 9 km and 10 km. They say luck is a part of ability as well.

However, it's a good trend. I went to the trouble of dispatching a leader from the {Slaughterers} so they wouldn't get too impatient and trip up somewhere. I wanted them to get into the habit of properly setting goals, and building up their true abilities while aiming ahead for them while they can now.

Well, if it's like this then it's just a matter of time before the {Exterminators} get their hands on the ticket to the 2nd and 3rd floors I'm sure.

Year 7446, Month 3, Day 24

As expected even if they're the {Butchers}, their hands weren't able to reach the ticket for the 4th floor. According to Ralpa who was accompanying them, even then it seems like they're using their heads and the amount of time it took them to clear through the 1st floor was 3 hours. And then they took a slightly early lunch in the teleport room on the 1st floor before immediately wanting to step foot on the 2nd floor.

It seems they understand the importance of getting proper breaks and resting but Ralph evaluated them as being in a hurry.

Putting aside the {Butchers} who are in a hurry, the fact that Ralph is evaluating them that way means they probably want to proceed without taking much of a break at all. If I hadn't left Ralph with authority as the leader it might have been dangerous.

Also, the {Exterminators} were splendidly able to gain the ticket to the 2nd floor.

If you were to ask what the {Slaughterers} have been doing and we've filled in quite a bit of the map of the 8th floor. I guess around 50% of the entirety? However, when it comes to things across the floors and it's hard to tell. If it includes the 9th floor then it wouldn't even be 50%. In the off chance that the 10th floor is mixed in as well then it would be even less I'm sure. The room bosses are just trolls as usual. The only thing we could call a harvest is that we obtained just a single gold ore.

We still haven't found a monster room in the area we believe to be the 9th floor where the monsters in the passages change.

Starting from the 8th floor, to the 9th floor(convenience sake), returning back to the 8th floor, then if we have good luck(?) we'll find a monster room, that sort of feel. If we have bad luck(?) then it's just a matter of going back and forth between the 8th and 9th floors. Ah, also we found the teleport crystal that leads to the 9th floor as well. However, we haven't tried touching it. If you were to ask why, it's because it gives off a completely dangerous feel to it. Or at least the reason for that is because, while it's not to the extent of the 14th floor that I was forcefully teleported into in once upon the time, but based on the map it seems there's a strange and stupidly large 2 km diameter or so room in the center of the 8th floor.

The salvation is that just like the other parts of the dungeon, the floor still gives off light when moving.

Even then because it's too spacious our field of sight only goes about 50 meters or so as usual. Even when I tired looking around with Identify vision I wasn't able to find anything that seemed like a monster in the range of it but there were rocks laying around all over the place so it's not like things were clear enough for me to see even in the effective range of Identify.

The huge once were even as high as 5 meters or so. Of course, nothing got caught in the spell {Detect.Life}. either.

Miduchi commented on this situation as, "It feels like there's a {Guardian}." In other words, it seems it would be best to think that there's something like a gatekeeper guarding the teleport crystal that leads to the 9th floor. I wonder if it's something like {The.Gazer} we encountered on the 14th floor? Then, in that case it's only obvious in regards to the 14th floor, but if we think that there's one on the 13th floor as well, then that would mean they start to appear in the latter half of Baldukk dungeon. After all the 7th floor must have been the center and midway point of the dungeon.

"They were pretty common in games right. Something like a mid-boss standing in wait at the end of each floor. If you don't defeat that then you can proceed to the next floor. Though it's often the case that there's some kind of condition or a special key needed for a door, the one who usually has or manages that is the boss that protects the floor."

Everyone was nodding hearing what Miduchi was saying. Toris and Basutorial were saying something like, "I thought it was unnatural there was nothing like that up until now." Then say something about it.

However, if something like that is there then it'll be difficult.

Honestly speaking I don't ever want to encounter something like that again. What we obtained was huge but it was way too dangerous. Though I say that, it feels like if we can't do something about it then we can't get to the next floor either. It might not be bad to go with just Miduchi and I again but if it's not {The.Gazer} and a monster which is better to have a front line against we'll be in trouble.

I think it's unlikely but if something like 100 trolls were to appear if I freeze them all at once we can probably win but after that is the problem. It would take too much work to let them out of the ice on at a time and take them on with just the two of us, eventually we'd end up completely exhausted and worn out.

Well, regardless of what I'm saying it's still scary.

The ambiance of the center room of the 8th floor is really, in any case just gives off an ominous feel. It's to the point where I even start to suspect whether it might all be a trap that makes you hesitate to enter with a small number like one or two people.

Of course something like that, it's not as if there is something.

Putting that aside, around tomorrow or the day after that sister-in-law Shani-san should arrive.

I wonder what I should do about returning home to visit?

It's fine to go but if it comes to that then we won't be able to go to teacher Mila's place again and as expected it's a bit scary to pull out even Miduchi..but I can't just keep ignoring Kuro and Mary. If you say that I still have about one year of leeway left then that's true but I don't think it would hurt at least seeing their faces. Also, I want to see Zetto and Becky as well..

If I'm going then I'd like to show everyone Bakuddo as well.

However, right now is the ideal time to train the {Butchers} and {Exterminators}.

Above all, I want to see Myun's face.

Even if I had multiple bodies it wouldn't be enough.

Chapter 225: Scarface

Year 7446, Month 3, Day 25

Sister-in-law Shani-san arrived in the afternoon. Since the still was still early they said that after a short break they would go to the company in the capital and then make deliveries and take measurements for the knight group tomorrow. Also, in regards to my returning home but the I discussed it together with the {Slaughterers} the day before yesterday and yesterday and decided on it.

Since there's also the two reincarnated people, Kuro and Mary, in the end I decided to return to Bakuddo once. There's also the matter of greeting my parents so Miduchi is coming along as well. Also, Gwine is accompanying us.

The reason is simple. It's for producing the map along the way.

Gwine is a Free Person but we'll be accompanying as well and above all else she's also an employee of Greed Company so there's no problem with moving between different territories. I already knew that when it comes to the registered employees of Greed Company which has a Type-2 First Variety license I can easily get proof of passage issued for them.

After that is one more, I'm having Angela accompany us to take care of everyday tasks.

Putting aside Miduchi and Angela, when I said I would be returning along with Gwine, it's only obvious there's someone who butt into the conversation.

"Eh~ if you're bringing Gwine along then bring me as well."

"Just a moment Ral, think about it a bit."

"Eh~ I mean, isn't it unfair for just Gwine. Bel, don't you really want to go along too?"

"Eh? Th..That is, of course I want to go a bit as well but..I've never gone out to any place other than the capital after all.."

"What are you saying you idiot. It's not like we're going to play."

We are going to play though.

"I want to go too, I want to go, I~ want~~ to go~~!"

Chi..It can't be helped.

"Hey Ralpa, listen carefully to what I say."

I put my hands on both shoulders of the idiot and made an expression that I thought seemed pretty serious while properly staring into her eyes. Stop turning red..somehow it makes my ass itch.

"You already understand that I can't bring along everyone right?"

..Yeah, that's right.

Putting aside that I'm leaving behind my slaves, right now is the ideal time to train the {Butchers} and {Exterminators}. Isn't that something you said as well?

It's necessary for someone to properly look after them. Then when it comes to that you know, think about who's staying behind. Zenom is reliable but if his most beloved person isn't beside him..for a number of months don't you think he'll started to get worried.

Toris has recently started to use his head but if it's just Bel acting as advisor to him she's still got a ways to go. Someone needs to lend them their wisdom.

Bel is level-headed but she has a tendency to get too far ahead of herself. Toris still can't properly hold the reins on her. Don't you get that it's necessary for someone to hold things in check?

Basutoral is still a newlywed and Zulu is my head slave. There's no way for them to move.

You already get it right?

Listen well, you're the one who's been together with me for the longest. While I'm not around, out of everyone who in the world do you think it is that I can trust to leave things to the most? Are you going to make me say everything?"

"Eh...Yeah..If that's how it is then..me..I guess?

That's right isn't it. It's just as Al said.

A ha ha..I still wasn't thinking enough about it...

..Yeah. Alright! While you're not around, I'll properly keep an eye on things!"

And she's saying something like that.

I'm saved she's as easy as usual.

In the first place in regards to the {Slaughterers} I haven't left anything to you.

Everyone who heard it was looking at the lone idiot get roused up with lukewarm eyes.

Also it's only obvious but along with my returning home, exploring the 8th floor is put on hold. Everyone who remains will be looking after the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} but as long as they don't do anything unreasonable since a lot of them were originally veterans it should be fine. Rather than that, by the time I return they might have gained the ticket to go to an even lower floor.

Zenom said, "Leave it to us, also their abilities were originally high. By the time you return we'll show you can we can pull them up to the 5th floor." while smiling.

There shouldn't be any problem with leaving the {Slaughterers} to Toris and Zenom. If it's them then even without Miduchi and I they should be fine up to the 7th floor. If they leave some leeway and only go up to the 5th floor or so while I'm not around then there shouldn't be any real problem. As long as they remain completely careful of the powerful enemies that rarely appear and avoid them then they have Gwine's map so it should be like riding a big boat.

I gave out some detailed instructions but Toris said, "Leave things to me.", just in case I also gave 50,000,000 Z in cash to Zenom. And then, each of us got on our war horses to be included in the caravan that sister-in-law Shani-san was commanding. Because of problems with their physique, Gwine was riding with me and Angela was riding with Miduchi, also in part to act as horse riding training for each of us.

Putting aside Gwine who's gone to play in the capital and made up excuses to ride my horse under the guise of horse riding training all the time, Angela said, "For a mere slave to ride a horse.." and was showing restraint but I've heard that even the fourth knight group has combat slaves that ride horses and act as commanders. Even if combat is impossible at least become able to ride it while it walks.

We quickly finished up the deliveries in the capital and I told Rozural and the others that I would be gone for about 2.5 months returning to Bakuddo for a bit this time. I also told them that if any problems occur during that time to report it to Toris or Zenom, additionally since it's about that time I told them to start organizing their belongings.

It's almost been about two years since they came to the capital.

The next time there's deliveries another squire family should come to Rombertia to switch with them. Going off of the period it should probably be around summer. Since there's also the matter of teaching them their jobs, we should look at the change taking around 1-2 weeks in time.

There's also the amount of furniture that's increased in the capital so it's necessary for them to at least organize it so it can fit into two carts. Even when they go to return to Bakuddo I'm sure that they won't return with a completely empty load. They'll probably do business in Keel and Doritto, so they should normally be stocking up for the sake of that.

In order to thank the Saguretto Company of Doritto for coming to Bakuddo every month at a fixed time to sell us daily necessities we also bring back unusual goods(It's generally mirrors that don't reflect very well, small bottles with perfume, expensive accessories, or cloth dyed a beautiful color. Depending the case they carry magic stones for other companies as well) from the city and that's an important job. Of course it's not for a free.

The journey to Bakuddo was advancing smoothly. We followed along the coast from Baldukk towards the Southwest direction about 100 km over 3 days and arrived at a location that Gwine didn't know about. Starting from here the amount she was talking decreased and she was often looking restlessly around the surroundings. I guess a map of the areas along the road are properly being carved into her memory.

Along the way, since we didn't do anything like staying several days other than just lodging, in around two weeks we were able to make it to around the mountain road I met Zenom and Ralpa in the past. That time we were staying several days to play in a number of towns here and there along the way, so it took around three weeks from here to Baldukk. I was curious about everything I saw. I was a brat after all. Though I guess that's still the case now huh?

Just like that another week passed and we entered Viscount Penlaid's territory as we left the royal territory. We entered a random inn in Karumu the capital of the Viscount's territory and everyone ate dinner together. Since the restaurant the four of us entered was a bit packed we all ended up eating at a table a bit away from everyone from Bakuddo.

Angela was quietly eating her food without joining the conversation but since we're all brats, not to mention excluding me they're women, I guess she was being cautious someone might try to pick a fight with us as she scanned the surroundings. Even though it's fine for her not to be that highly strung..Even though she was given detailed instructions it's quite hoesnt of her. With that loyal dog on our side we were,

"Come to think of it, it wouldn't be strange for there to be a "reincarnated person" around here right."

"That is certainly true..but, there's no way of searching for them.."

"Right~ Mary-san, was it? If their house is a business like hers and it's going well there's not much need for them to move around after all..If that sort of thing hadn't happened then even I think I would be a peddler around now."

"Hmn, that's right isn't it. Even if they were born as a serf, normally they almost never have any chances to leave their village since they're born..Kuro and Basutoral are special cases I'm sure.."

"Thinking like that and Toris-san had things quite difficult right.."

"I can recall his troubles. I heard that he walked around quite a bit."

And, we were talking about things that there wasn't even any way of entering.

In our surroundings what seemed to be merchants from a different caravan were talking about how they were attacked by a group of orks last month. It seems they were attacked on a road barely along the border between Viscount Penlaid's territory and Viscount Yoraizu's territory in the Southeast. If I remember correctly I think Marquis Webdos's territory had a really small area of border connected to it as well.

In the south of Karumu there's the Pitosu mountain range with it's highest peak of Mount Pitosu at 1,500 meters towering just before Marquis Webdos's territory. We have no choice but to take a bit of a detour around towards the direction of Viscount Yoraizu's territory but there should still be a distance of several tens of km until the border so they shouldn't be any harm to us. Since it's not on our way I don't have much interest but in the East of Viscount Pendlaid and Viscount Yoraizu's territory is that Dirt Plains and there's a bunch of small territories. Though I say that, it doesn't have much relation the borders of Viscount Penlaid and Viscount Yoraizu's territories. It shouldn't have much relation to me in the future either I'm sure. When it comes to the Dirt Plains rather than something like orks I'm sure Devas Kingdom is scary.

Putting that aside, since it seems their caravan took a skilled ambush they suffered a decent amount of damage but they were splendidly able to repel them. As expected of a Type-3(probably) company wandering around in the remote areas. The skill of their escorts must have been good as well. However, it seems they weren't able to kill the orks that attacked them. Even though they were able to do a reasonable amount of damage, since the attacking side retreated before taking any damage they must have a considerably careful and intelligent leader. Different from Baldukk dungeon, I guess that means that the orks wandering the border of Viscount Yoraizu's territory are quite something.

It seems a bit of that conversation entered Gwine's ears as she lowered her eyes and bit her lip.

The only thing the three of us could do was offer Gwine some vodka.

We plan to depart early tomorrow morning so we decided to quickly go to sleep.

.....

Year 7446, Month 4, Day 22

We finally returned back to Keel. Now that we've come this far it's just another week in distance until Bakuddo. Sister-in-law and I both tried to stay at the nostalgic Binsu Manor but there was only one two-person room and three one-person rooms open. In regards to the one-person rooms on the top floor we left one to sister-in-law and one to the veteran squire Jimu, while on the lower floor Miduchi and I took the two-person room, and Gwine took the one-person room next to that. The remaining escort squires and Angela who there wasn't enough rooms for were able to secure a slightly cheaper inn without problem.

Following that sister-in-law and the squires stopped by Webdos Company, they went to sell wholesale the things they stocked up on in the capital. Also, it's only obvious but we aimed our horse's heads towards the headquarters of Webdos Knight Group. Kuro and Mary should be getting along energetically. Currently, I wonder to what level they've reached with using weapons? Putting aside investiture as a knight, I wonder if they've at least set it as their goal?

There were two gatekeeper-like soldiers standing at the gate to the knight group headquarters just like in the past. We were asked our identities but both Miduchi and I were wearing the rubber protectors from Bakuddo. Their voices were soft. I guess before I noticed the interactions for Bakuddo have changed to those with a direction relation. Come to think of it, other than the provision to squires of Bakuddo village the only ones we've sold this armor to is the first knight group. We are selling a small amount to the second knight group as well but we shouldn't have been selling them to the Webdos Knight Group.

I stepped forward and stretched out my hand to have them confirm my status while requesting to meet Kuro and Mary. However, unfortunately right now excluding the bare minimum number of people most of the knight group has been out since two weeks so our meeting was impossible right now. It seems they've gone out to subjugate a {Horned Bear} in Buraizu Village which is about 1.5 days walk to the Northeast from Keel.

This morning, they received contact that they were safely able to defeat it so at quickest they should be back tomorrow evening or at least the evening of the day after tomorrow. It seems that two squires were killed by the {Horned Bear} but supposedly the victims weren't Kuro or Mary. I feel a bit sorry for the two who passed away but I was bit a relieved after confirming that.

If they're not around then it can't be helped so I tried asking about Kuro and Mary. Whether or not they have any plans to receive investiture as knights, and if they do around when, or if that isn't the case their evaluation, I have a lot of things I'm interested in. However, as expected the gatekeepers were keeping their mouths shut about details of the members reputation inside of the group to outsiders like us and we were able to gain any information.

No matter how I tried asking they wouldn't respond to anything other than the fact that they were safe, so, I was just about to try yelling that my brother and his wife were members, and even that wife was the commander's daughter! borrowing the authority of relatives but since it seems shameful I stopped. It seems I'm still quite young as well.

In the first place since they saw my status they should already know I'm from the Greed household.

The fact that they weren't trying to suck up to me is proof that discipline is properly being maintained. Being devoted to your duties is a good thing and Marquis Webdos Territory with a knight group like that is a good territory. No, that's being a poor loser.

In the first place there's no benefit to them trying to earn points with me.

It can't be helped. It should be fine if we meet them on our way back from Bakuddo. I thought about showing my face in Mary's house at Binsil's restaurant but stopped. It's fine on our way back.

We returned to Binsu Manor and Miduchi handed me a knife with an expression like she had determined her resolve.

"Erase the scars on my forehead and cheek."

"Is that fine? The chances of it not healing are higher.."

The scar on Miduchi's face is one from quite a bit in the past, she suffered it when she was still a child. She said that the injury was serious and even {Cure All} couldn't completely heal it. That is~ I'm sure. If you don't use healing spells soon after you suffer injuries sometimes the scars remain. Even teacher Mila said the "scar itself has become the normal state" for the body already so even if you try gouging out the wound and using the spell {Regenerate} there's not much hope for it to cleanly heal back over. Even if the new wound heals right away, she said the old scar will end up being regenerated together with it.

If it won't be fixed then going to the trouble of suffering such pain will just end in a loss, in the first place it's not so easy to gather the courage to gouge out your face. Certainly scars on the face are a point that's said to be unattractive and it can be thought that it's become a complex for Miduchi. I can understand her feelings of wanting to heal them.

"Yeah..But, I feel like if I don't test it out now then I'll never be able to gather my courage for the rest of my life...As expected I can't gather the courage to gouge my face out on my own so I'd like you to do it for me."

In order to not get them dirty she took off the clothes on her upper body and sat down on a chair as I looked into Miduchi's eyes.

It seems her intention is strong.

"You...But, if that's what you want then I'll do it."

Just in case I thought and gouged out my left arm. Then quickly used the spell {Regenerate}..since I haven't practiced it very much it took close to 1 minute. No, even like this I practiced it around 50 times. Along with the activation of the spell the flesh from the wound on my left arm swelled up as we watched and returned to completely clean skin. Though it's dirty with blood.

Oh~ ouch. I immediately used {Cure All} on myself consecutively for the sake of stopping the pain.

Seeing my left arm Miduchi smiled just a bit and nodded.

Miduchi folded the towel in her hand and bit down on it.

I understand.

...

.....

.....

"It's impossible...The scar returned."

Miduchi is looking downward. I used healing spells plenty on it and there shouldn't be any pain remaining anymore.

"Idiot, don't cry."

".."

"Father, brother, sister-in-law, and even sister have all met you with that face right? What's there to be embarrassed about at this point.."

"..That isn't"

"..Though I get your feelings."

"But, I still haven't met mother-in-law, and there's everyone from the village as well.."

"No one will be bothered over it."

"I'm bothered over it.."

"I see..Sorry. That I was thoughtless.."

"Wun, it's fine. But if even you had these sorts of scars.."

"Certainly I know your face from the time when it had no scars."

"Then.."

"But, I think your current face is even more attractive."

The next morning, when we were having breakfast with Angela who was staying in the cheap inn, she said, "Your face is red. Have you caught a cold?" to Gwine who was staying the room next to ours. I guess the stimulation in the night was slightly strong for Gwine.

We're, still young after all.

.....

Year 7446, Month 4, Day 28

We've finally arrived at Bakuddo village.

However~ it's something I felt since around the time we passed the town of Denzulu but the roads leading to Bakuddo haven't been properly maintained. Particularly from Badeddo village to Badetto village, and then the road leading to Bakuddo village has all sorts of rugged rocks laying around, there's mud remaining here and there, the condition was considerably bad. If it's this certainly at best you could call it a remote region. Along with that our advancing speed dropped quite a bit as well. Once again I realized that the maintenance situation of the roads in the King's Direction Territory leading between the towns and villages centering around the capital Rombertia are extremely excellent.

Seeing Bakuddo village it's..truly been four years I guess? It's the nostalgic scenery of the village.

Was this road this narrow?

Were the tobacco fields spread out over there that small?

It seems that that area has become a field for rubber trees...

Why is there soba spread out in a place like this?

If you're going to scatter soba either way then on the other side of the river is...

The scenery of Bakuddo village dyed madder red on the verge of twilight wasn't particularly beautiful.

But, for some reason it hit my heart.

In terms of time it should be about when the serfs are finishing up their jobs for today and heading home.

There's still a considerable number of people in the fields and they're in the process of cleaning up.

"Al, is it nostalgic?"

While Angela was controlling my war horse with unfamiliar hands, sister-in-law Shani-san said as she approached us on her war horse.

"Yeah.."

Since we approached the village from the South everyone in the fields noticed us and are waving their hands. However, after noticing again that the number of horses increased and there's more people they came running over. I never got very familiar with any of the serfs from the village but it seems they remember the little brother of the lord. I was a bit surprised when everyone started saying things like, "Al-sama! Welcome home." or "Al-sama, it's been a while. I'm glad you're healthy."

"Surprised? Everyone is grateful to you. In regards to rubber, substitute fields, thresher, and the use of horses and cattle in farm work. The taxes haven't changed since you left but the income itself changed. It's just a bit but the amount of wages we can give to the serfs has increased as well...Of course, it's not like you made all of it but everyone knows that you prepared it and left the path for us. The former master talked about all of it after all."

I see..Father...

"Well, in the past I was surprised by you as well. Even though I heard about you from Farne. But, okay? It was certainly you who helped make this place this wealthy. I think that taking a look around once while you can now would be for your sake."

Sister-in-law...

By the way, it's only obvious but in regards to Miduchi, Gwine, and Angela, it seems they're being politely ignored.

However, there were a lot of people who made surprised faces seeing Miduchi with the rubber protectors on as well.

I guess it's because they aren't used to seeing dark elves. Miduchi has her face raised while wearing a helmet with the same design as mine. Yeah, that's fine.
Ah, what I can see over there is the house.
It seems that the water bucket I made in the past before leaving the house is still being used just like that.
It hasn't changed...
And, in that case, I wonder where the four of us will be staying?
Well, I'm sure Miduchi and I will be in the guest room
though.
Ah, come to think of it I never mentioned it.
Our village even has a bath.

Chapter 226: Bayonet

Year 7446, Month 4, Day 28

In front of the fence that surrounds the house there's a large stable and on the other side of there's plaza that also acts as the training place for the squires. Even further in on the other side of the plaza is three storehouses that have been there since before I was born. From a position where we can see the plaza on the left side of the stable is the main building of the house that hasn't changed at all. In the back of the main building there should be the small storage room that I lived in for a period connected to it. Beyond that in between the storehouses and storage room is a bit of a plaza and that acts as the training place for the squire children under 10 years old to swing their swords. How nostalgic.

"What the, if you're going to come home you should say something.

We haven't prepared anything."

Brother said that while smiling and welcoming me. It seems when he was patrolling around in the village he caught sight of us and came running back on his horse. He detoured around the gate of the house and waited for us.

"Sorry, brother. But, I wanted to return once now while I still could. There's something I want to talk to father and mother about as well."

I exchanged greetings with brother while putting my horse into the stables.

People came out of the house as well. It's father and mother. The two of them were smiling. I left Angela to take off the harness while I approached my parents with big steps accompanied by Miduchi and Gwine.

"I've heard from everyone. You're Chizumagurol-san right?"

Mother smiled seeing Miduchi.

It was the same that time with sister-in-law Shani-san, she shouldn't become an unpleasant mother-in-law.

"Yes. It's nice to meet you, my name is Midu~ritto.Chizumagurol.

Sorry for the rudeness of not changing."

her arm as she stretched her right hand out to mother, it seems she was able to properly talk without biting her tongue.

She's grown a bit as well I see.

"Has this child been causing any trouble for you?"

"No way! I've always been in his care. Also, the other day Shanleid-sama and Milhaia-sama even prepared armor for me.."

"It looks good on you..{Status Open}."

Mother took Miduchi's hand and smiled while checking her status.

I thought there wouldn't be any problems but this is a relief.

"Who's that?"

After greeting Miduchi, mother asked while looking at Gwine.

I guess it's no longer necessary, to introduce her.

"U..Umm, M..My name is Gullinel.Akdam. I'm always in the care of Al-san~"

..Why are you biting your tongue.

While we were exchanging harmonious greetings, an ear-splitting high voice echoed around ruining the atmosphere.

"Becky-sama!!!"

It's the voice of a boy.

"Uwaa~n!! Big brother hit me seriously again~! I'll tell father on you!!"

"It's training so it can't be helped right!! Here stand!!"

So Zetto and Becky were in the middle of training...

"Those kids~! Sorry, I'm going for a bit. Al, sorry but look after my horse!!"

After saying that brother pushes the reins of his horse over to me and ran off between the stables and the house.

I made a bitter smile while asking my parents, "Just now was that Zetto and Becky?"

"The first voice was Al. Those kids, no matter how many times we tell them they start doing make-believe practice matches all on their own. Unlike you kids they're hopeless prankster brats. No, I guess Mill was like that as well huh?"

Father said while shrugging his shoulders. Al? Al is..Ailad huh!

Come to think of it he was the same age as Zetto and Becky. Though I say that they should still be 6 years old. Have they already started training with the sword? Ah, No, in the past, since I said great-grandfather gave advice around when Mill was 5 years old, so I guess they're still continuing that...Isn't that my fault.

"Sister was intense but I think she properly obeyed the things she was told."

Remembering my respected older sister's pitiful chest I felt just a bit bad so I defended her.

"Father-in-law, mother-in-law, I'm truly very sorry.."

Sister-in-law Shani was making an apologetic expression while lowering her head deeply. She must be feeling responsibility. Come to think of it I remember hearing that when sister-in-law Shani was in the knight group she was quite arrogant as well. That, isn't it sister-in-law's genes?

I can hear the breathing from the horses that were pulling the carriage. We were forgetting about the congestion of the three carriages we left near gate. We keep the carriages parked in the area between the stable and the fence. The squires were making bitter smiles. After lowering her sister-in-law starting leading the horses and carriages. Since the carriages were almost completely empty, while we were standing around right near the entrance of the gate the squires were untying the carriages from the horses. A carriage that's close to empty can be pulled with just human power.

Asking the squires that started putting the horses in the stable, Angela who finished putting away the harnesses came forward and knelt in front of my parents to greet them.

"It has been a while, great master."

Father calmly nodded as Angela turned to mother to greet her as well.

"It's nice to meet you, great madam. I'm my master Alan Greed-sama's combat slave, Maruso. Angela. Pleased, to meet you."

"It's fine if you don't humble yourself that much in our household.

I'm Shirley. Shirley.Greed. Call me Shal."

However, Angela just said, "I understand." without changing her posture and then stood up as politely as possible before taking one step behind me while keeping her head lowered without making eye contact.

Umu, that's good, Angela. It's a greeting that shows you've properly been disciplined. Mother is saying something like that but it's not that sort of problem. As expected of her having spent several years by my side. Mother might just be a madam that lives in a remote region now but in the past she was in a position where she was the grandchild of Duke Sandak in the capital. She should be used to seeing slaves that were properly disciplined. Father is nodding to himself as well.

"..Nn? I guess it's just a bit big huh...Well, I guess that's just right for now.."

Father whispered while looking at me.

Excluding the fact that the new model of rubber protectors that sister-in-law Shani brought were just a bit big, they fit perfectly on my body. Just in case I also brought along my old suit as well. Since my old protectors were a just right match to the physique of Jesu (Jesutasu.Manzokki), I took his sizes intending to request some small adjustments.

"That's right! Thanks, father. This armor, I really like it."

I forgot to say thanks to father for treating me to the protectors I received. Even though it should have been the first thing I said.

"Nn..It looks good on you. By the way, what's going on today? Did something happen?"

"Ha ha, it's not like anything has happened but it was just stopping by for a bit when I came to fulfill a promise...Also, some boots, I thought I'd like to make some proper ones for all of my allies and slaves...That's right, it's about this though. Ah, Yeah, I'll convey the improvements for them and I'm sure it'll take a reasonable amount of labor but I think they could be sold for a high price as a new type of military boots. A shoe maker, you hired one right...Also, I saw Kerry's wife's armor last year but I thought that model might be good for adventurers as well. I thought if I used this Angela, since she's a Dog-person, she might be just right for making adjustments to the model."

..I can't trick them with this sort of excuse.

"..Right now, we're stepping foot on the 8th floor on the dungeon in Baldukk...And, we've got good prospects for making it to the 9th floor. However, whether or not we can make it, whether we can surpass his majesty George Rombert the First or not, I don't know. It feels like it's just~ a bit dangerous as well. I intend to take responsibility and protect my allies and slaves with all of my power. I won't let even a single person die. Of course, I have no intention of dying even more so. But..But, I just wanted to see everyone's faces once more now when I could."

Mother's hand twitched as if she was going to embrace me. But, she pulled it back right away.

Thank you, mother.

While we're staying in Bakuddo, Miduchi and I were staying in the guest room, while Gwine and Angela were lodging in the house of the Ryogu family. If I think about it for a bit the maid in our house Sonia, she's living in the Ryogu family house with her grandfather, and the other members of the family Rozural, Wendy, Dianne, and Luke are all in the capital so there's rooms leftover.

We changed in the guest room and when we sat down at the table for dinner Zetto and Becky were making strange faces seeing two unknown adults like Miduchi and I. They were two and a half years old when I left the house. It's not unreasonable that they don't remember me.

It was when brother introduced us saying, "Here, you two, greet them properly. It's Alan. My little brother and your uncle. And also this is Miduchi-san." Putting aside their uncle who suddenly appeared, they must have been creeped out by the woman with light purple skin and white hair.

The two of them were sitting on both sides of sister-in-law Shani but when they saw us enter the dining room, their eyes went wide as their attention was focused on not me but Miduchi. It can't be helped though.

"Hel..Good evening. I'm Zerulotto."

"Rebekkana..Hey~ why are you that strange color?"

This brat~! Don't say things like that to my woman, she'll get depressed!

Faster than I could reflexively glare at Becky sister-in-law who was in between the two kids slapped Becky. As expected of a Webdos Knight. That was beyond just having fast hands.

"Hey!! What kind of things are you saying this child!! Apologize to Miduchi-san!!"

"Buggyaaa~!! I..I'm schhai~ii~! I'mmsshowwry! U~uu...hikku"

"No..No way! It's fine! I don't mind it! It can't be helped..I'm sure you were surprised right? I'm sorry for surprising you, Rebekkana-chan."

Miduchi was the one who got a lot more flustered and she quickly ran over to Becky to wipe her tears as with a handkerchief as she cried in a loud voice. Father, mother, and brother all apologized to Miduchi as well. Even Sonia who prepared the food and was bringing it ended up doing her job with an apologetic face. Zetto was peeking out from behind sister-in-law Shani's back to get a better look as it was his first time seeing a dark elf. I couldn't do anything but make a bitter smile on my own but honestly speaking, I felt a bit sorry as well. After the uproar calmed down, we properly exchanged greetings and everyone sat down at the table. After all it seems that Zetto and Becky were curious about the dark elf as they were glancing at Miduch occasionally. Every time Miduchi noticed she would smile. Sorry about that. At the very least I'm sure it wasn't a good feeling.

While having dinner(obviously it wasn't anything luxurious but it seems the menu was improved quite a bit) we talked about various things. About sister, our adventures in the dungeon, and then baldoggie. It seems that the baldoggie father ate when he came last year was conveyed with quite a bit of exaggeration added to it. This time, we had sister-in-law eat it as well but she made just a slightly complicated face, even then she said it was good but I still felt something was a bit strange, so that's what it was.

It seems Zetto and Becky got used to Miduchi while we were having dinner and they started badgering her for stories about the dungeon and Baldukk. By the time we realized it the time had passed 6 pm. It seems that today is the day for women to enter the bath so sister-in-law Shani told the kids(In Bakuddo up until they formally started training with the sword or farm work at 7 years old, both boys and girls are put into the baths every day) to go and get ready to enter the baths and invited mother and Miduchi as well. Miduchi was looking forward to the baths as well so obviously there's no way she'd turn it down. Becky seemed to want to go to the baths while holding Miduchi's hand so Miduchi happily held her hand as they left.

Probably Gwine and Angela should be going to the baths about now as well. There's no way Gwine would miss her chance at the baths and I already told them that in Bakuddo even slaves enter the baths so Angela shouldn't hold back either.

After father, brother, and I took showers in order, we were drinking some alcohol.

"Are Zetto and Becky properly using magic?"

Close 1.5 years has passed since the two of them started magic training. Zetto's MP is 318 and Becky's MP is 330 with just a small difference but judging from the fact that they have a considerable amount I can already tell they're training properly. It seems Zetto can use earth and water while Becky can use fire, water, and wind. Their skill levels have already reached 3.

"Yeah, they're doing well. They have a high amount of mana after all. Their growth is fast as well."

Brother said that while nodding.

"It's good that the two of them seem to be blessed with talent.

We're properly having them train with the sword as well. If it's possible then we'd like for both of them enter the first knight group."

Father said that in a good mood while tilting his alcohol cup filled with premium vodka I bought in the capital.

If they're being worked hard by brother and sister-in-law then won't they be fine? If their skill with magic is good then just like sister they might pass from just that though.

"Father, stop with that. It's because you're always spoiling them like that they even tried to do a make-believe practice match today. It's still too soon for them."

"Farne, I've said it countless times but I already know that when Mill was around that age she was doing make-believe practice matches against you. Even if they end up getting hurt a bit that's good training for healing magic as well."

Eh..That's how it was!? I didn't know..I was only allowed to start training with the practice matches after I turned 10 years old you know...Even though I was only allowed to do swinging and practicing forms up until then...I still clearly remember the first time I was permitted to have a practice match. I'll never forget that shitty sister's face as if she was enjoying bullying the weak. Who knows how many times my ribs and arms were broken...

"Do you want me to heal you? Hey~ do you want me to heal you? I can't tell from that expression. Properly say please as you ask~"

Ah, shit. It pisses me off a bit remembering it. Back then if I suffered a heavy injury like broken bones I couldn't use magic. If it was a light injury like bruising then it was fine though. Back then, I even started to think sister was a demon. Even then seeing sister have practice matches against father and the adult squires, I knew she was going easy on me though.

After that when brother and sister-in-law returned from the knight group and she started being worked to the bone by them I remember grinning as I watched that thinking it served her right. I said the same lines myself.

"Do you think you can enter the first knight group crying just because it hurts? These sorts of times, what do they say again? Plea~gue"Stop being an idiot and hurry up and heal me. It's a waste of time."

I was hit by brother right away though. I thought it was pretty unfair.

By the way, when Miduchi returned from the baths she was quite excited as she talked about them. After it seems she was together with Gwine and Angela in the baths and they were excited over them as well. But, as expected it seems it was packed with people so they couldn't slowly take their time soaking and intend to enter once more later.

However, I was a bit surprised hearing more details. It seems there's still only one bath for pouring the water but they increased the number of baths by one and they're lined up by each other. It seems that's become the washing place for your body. At the same time it's supposedly reached the size where 40 people can take a bath at once.

If you cut off the bathing time at around 15 minutes then in 1.5 hours it should plenty for half of the citizens of Bakuddo to take baths. Although, around half of the people enter in order starting from noon so it seems they're able to take a bit longer in bathing time. Since it's the first bath in a while both Miduchi and Gwine wanted to soak until they were satisfied.

Since Bakuddo is made up of entirely farmers even at least during this season most people go to sleep by 7:30 pm. There's almost no one who stays up past 8 pm so I told them to take their time soaking. I think the pouring bath water should still be plenty warm and if it comes to it Miduchi can make plenty of hot water as well.

Year 7446, Month 4, Day 29

The next morning, when we woke up Sonia had already started work and breakfast was prepared. After finishing breakfast when I was going to go running with Miduchi and Gwine we were stopped. It seems brother is going as well so he told us to wait until he's ready. So he was still continuing with it huh? But, it seems that brother still can't use magic while running. It's something that took even me four years during my childhood to acquire. If it's brother who has far less mana than I do then even in the same four years I'm sure it's impossible.

Rather, if he was able to do that much in four years as well as expected I'd get depressed.

After Gwine and Angela finished breakfast it seems they came to the gate of the house right away and were waiting.

"A..Al-san, good morning."

"Good morning, master."

"Yeah, morning."

"That, bath! Ha~ I'm glad to be alive!"

"I was surprised as well. Since Gwine talked about how wonderful it was I was wondering what it would be like but..it felt a lot better than I thought."

The two of them were excited and talking on from the early morning just like Miduchi last night.

"Right! It felt really~ good.."

Again you too. I heard plenty of that, last night. Brother is laughing as well.

"That's right isn't it, I remembered that it's been countless years since I've entered a bath that pretty right!!"

"All of the fatigue up until now disappeared and it was heaven. So that's a bath huh..It's a waste for someone like me."

"Al, Akdam-san is a Free Person right? Has she entered a bath before?"

"Yeah, there's a public bath in the capital as well. Though the bathtub is smaller than the one we have and it has dirt floating in it. Unless you're the first one to enter it that day, it's dirty so it seems no one wants to soak in the bath."

I've gone to the bathhouse in the capital as well but after seeing people, who no matter how you look at it haven't entered the bath in several weeks enter without washing their bodies, I swore never to go again. There's no special bath service for any of the brothels either.

Including brother the five of us started running the footpaths between the fields. It seems the serfs have started heading towards the fields. Different from usual since I don't have my protectors on and I'm not carrying any weight it was nothing more than light exercise for me.

After returning from running Zetto and Becky were sleeping after exhausting their MP.

They'll probably wake up around lunch. We'll take showers in order..and when I was thinking that I was invited to the baths by brother.

Yesterday was the day for women but today is the day for men. There was an exclusive person in charge of managing the baths and it seems that it's setup so you can enter the bath from the early morning. That's amazing~ or at least just as I was thinking that it was my job to make the hot water. It seems that since I'm here they told the person in charge yesterday to open the baths starting this morning. Brother and I took our time soaking in the bath and I was able to enjoy it for the first time in a while. In the rubber work shed nearby everyone centering around the Donneoru family had already started their work. The work shed was renovated and had become about double the size. It's already no longer a shed. It's a factory.

"Then, I'm going out to do patrols. If there's something you want to request for the boots or armor just say something. Everyone has already gotten considerably skilled after all. I think they'll probably be able to move just as you please."

I joined back up with Miduchi and the others and showed my face in the rubber work shed. With Rassegu and his wife Mili as the heads there was about 20 people working. Taylor is still the center of the work as usual. Enbert and Myun are here as well.

"Al-sama! Oh my! Oh my! You've gotten so big!"

Myun noticed me right away and ran over.

I can see the top of Myun's head as she embraced me and kissed both of my cheeks.

"Tonight, as the usual place."

I whispered that to Myun in a quiet voice no one else could hear then embraced her and said "Myun! It's been a while."

"At the northern outskirts."

Myun replied to me in a whisper as well. Well, I guess we can take our time talking more on the outskirts of the village.

Soon after all the other artisans came over and surrounded me. It seems they've heard my reputation from brother and the other squires who came along as escorts and they all seemed to want to hear my stories. I'll tell some stories slowly later, it's difficult being a popular person.

I was finally released, so I asked for them to make a protector like the ones the Dokush family use in Angela's size. In regards to the boots it seems a shoe maker named Baru is making them so I'll have to go to him but since I've already passed it through brother there shouldn't be a problem.

Miduchi, Gwine, and Angela seemed interested in the manufacturing of rubber they were seeing for the first time but they were shocked by the smell of latex and sulfur which was incomparable to that of the workshop in the capital. However, they showed admiration over the fact that only all of the workers were making use of magic in their work. Among the people in the village who can use magic about half of them are gathered here. They were watching the process of stirring it in the buckets, then mixing in charcoal carbon powder which has had it's particles sorted with magic, as well as the adding of sulfur, heating, those sorts of processes.

"Al-san, how much is rubber armor?"

Gwine finally asked it.

"The employee price is 20,000,000 Z."

The employee discount is 33% less. Around that much should be good.

Though my profits are zero.
Rather it's basically the direct sale price so there's no need for it to pass through me. It should be fine if I pay the bill in advance to brother later.
"Is it fine on deferred payment?"
"Of course it is."
"Then, I'd like one suit as well."
"Do you want the general purpose model like the knight group, Miduchi, and I? Or else would you prefer the new model like what I'm having made for Angela?"
"Since monsters are the opponents, I guess the new model would be best?"

Yes~ thank you for your business. Move around to have your measurements taken together with Angela. During that time I took foot molds for everyone to shoe maker Baru's place and discussed the knit combat shoes with him.

After that in the afternoon we slowly killed time playing with Zetto, Becky, and Ailado.

Since he's the same age and the heir to the Tobas family, it seems Ailado was allowed to participate in the sword training from early on as well. It's only obvious but his MP was 2. Come to think of it, I gave Ailado a bayonet didn't I. It's the one with the rivet on the sword where you can take off the tip. I wonder why he isn't using it?

I wanted to know but couldn't ask. It could be she still hasn't given it to him. However, if he's going to use it in the future then I want to at least show him the forms. There's probably no one around who can properly teach him after all.

The bayonet is used in both the American and Russian armies but I've heard that now they fundamentally don't use the thrusting model. Even the length of the bayonet's blade seems to only be at the level of a knife. Or, rather, it might more correct to say they have fixtures which let them attach a knife to the bayonet. In the self-defense force of the Japanese army that originally had cultural roots with blades, putting aside the base of the bayonets made postwar, there were techniques for slashing, thrusting, and parrying as well. Of course, there's also the methods of attacking with the gun stock and magazine but it's still considered a gun "sword".

I used my bayonet which I brought along to show the forms. It seems it's the first time Zetto and Becky have seen the bayonet and they were looking at it curiously but Aildao was different. After all, it seems at the very least he's seen it before. He was closely watching my movements.

However, it's considerably difficult to call "Al". So we don't end up overlapping rather than calling him by the abbreviated version give him a nickname..Like Avu or Akkusu. Isn't that how it is in most cases.

Late that night, after waking Miduchi up the two of us quietly snuck out of the house. I pretended to be going to the toilet and intentionally called out to Miduchi while leaving saying, "I'm going to get some air." Miduchi made use of her stealth skills to sneak out from the window without making a sound. Miduchi was even holding both of our weapons and shoes. As expected she couldn't hold our protectors but there's no problem.

Just like that we put on our shoes and started towards the northern outskirts of town.
There's the things I wanted to talk about with Myun and that I wanted to introduce Miduchi to her as well but in the first place one of our objectives for sneaking out of the house is to go and hunt the monster called Shurika. The body of the Shurika is one of the necessary ingredients to make the medicine for Godu~guru-san.
I've hunted them together with Myun when I was still small.
We steadily passed through the rubber fields in the north and arrived close to the outskirts of the village.
It seems that Myun still hasn't arrived.
Just like that we waited for about 30 minutes.
Myun has come.
For some reason Ailado is together with her.
Even though he's still small he had the large bayonet with him.
Come to think of it, Ailado didn't inherit {Disguise} from Myun.
It's a special skill that's unnecessary for him.
If he had inherited it I'm sure there would have been an uproar when he was born.
Back then, I think Myun lightly said, "I thought it would probably be fine." was it.
It seems that it's almost always inherited from the males of the Sagal family.
However, for her to bring along Ailado...
I wonder if her husband Bosshu knows?
Since Myun's capable of moving stealthy like Miduchi I wonder if they were fine?

Chapter 227: ZONE

Year 7446, Month 4, Day 29

"Did we make you wait?"

Myun said a bit apologetically.

"No, since we didn't specify a time. We were the ones who came early just in case so don't worry about it."

I use the spell {Light} on the rock I had in my hand lighting up the area before taking another look at Myun.

It seems because of her age her physique has rounded out a bit but her charming features are the same as in the past, she was looking at me with a gentle expression.

"Myun, I'll introduce you once again. This is Miduchi.

Midu~ritto.Chizumagurol. She's my woman. Miduchi, she's Myun.

Myunelin.Tobas. My benefactor. I was taught various things..Oh that's right, she's the one who taught me how to use the throwing needles."

"Once again it's nice to meet you. I'm Myunelin.Tobas. I worked as a maid at their mansion when Al-sama was little. Al-sama is my benefactor. Please take good care of Al-sama. Please support him."

"Stop that, Myun. If you're going to say that then the number of times I've been saved is far greater."

Myun just smiled.

"It's nice to meet you again too. I'm Midu~ritto.Chizumagurol.

Please call me Miduchi. And also, I've heard quite a bit about you. This person..that is, thank you very much for taking good care of him."

After Miduchi offered greetings to Myun, she crouched down while smiling matching her eye level to Ailado's who was hiding behind Myun holding on to the end of her skirt. Though there is some light, being smiled at by a dark elf in the middle of the night is..I wonder about that? Ailado seems to be a bit afraid of Miduchi. This kid as well huh..Though it can't be helped, I'm sure Miduchi feels pretty depressed.

Miduchi's eyebrows raised to a frown as she got a bit depressed.

There's several elves in Bakuddo. However, it's only obvious but there's not a single dark elf. Most likely there's not even any in Marquis Webdos's territory either. Let alone, Miduchi's skin color isn't even similar to the average dark elf which is close to black.

Just as expected of an elf the features of her face itself are in the category of a beauty but her hair is dyed white, her light purple skin, her face which has a large scar across it that stands out, about the only place on her that seems to have blood flowing to it is her pink lips. I'm sure she's scary to children.

"Come now..Al! I'm very sorry. I'll harshly scold him later, so please forgive him."

Seeing that state Myun apologized to Miduchi and I with an amazing momentum. I predicted things would become like this the moment I saw Ailado here..it can't be helped. However, there wasn't anything when we met him this afternoon right...Particularly because I know Miduchi was a bit happy after that~

"Please don't worry about it. It's something that can't be helped."

Miduchi stood up and took a step back while saying with a slightly discouraged face. She's probably trying to hide behind me.

"..I'm sorry."

Myun apologized with a voice as quiet as a mosquito. Ailado has only just turned 6 years old. I think it really can't be helped.

"By the way, why Al?"

In order to change the topic and I tried asking the reason why she brought Ailado.

"Umm, this afternoon, it seems you showed this child how to use the short spear and...I'm truly very sorry. Since it was only vaguely remaining my memories, I could only teach him simple things to is so..Thank you very much...Here"

"I'm sorry for being afraid."

Myun thanked me as she pulled Ailado out from hiding behind her and he lowered his head apologizing to Miduchi.

"It's alright, don't worry about it."

Miduchi lowered her eye level to Ailado's again and said that while brushing his head. It seems Ailado accepted Miduchi without being afraid this time. After Ailado had his head brushed by Miduchi he looked at me while opening his mouth.

"U..Umm..Alan-sama. Thank you very much!!"

That's something I did all on my own, so it's fine. It's nothing to be thanked over. I personally am quite happy that you, Ailado, were properly watching it. I look at Ailado as he lowers his head to me still holding the bayonet and after crouching like Miduchi just was I put my hand on his head before opening my mouth.

"Al. That bayonet is something I used in the past. Using that I fought against {Horned Bear} countless times. That weapon you're holding right now is the one in Bakuddo that has cut through the most {Horned Bear}. It's even stabbed all the way in to the base of the blade. Thanks for taking good care of it. Next time I want you to use that and support Zetto and Becky."

"Yes!"

"That's a good answer."

I brushed Ailado's hair while standing up and looked at Myun.

Myun is smiling with both of her hands on Ailado's shoulders.

I can feel gratitude from her expression.

After that, we sat down on some appropriate rocks and discussed recent events for a short while, as we spent about 30 minutes.

Midway through, as I talked about the first knight group, the dungeon, and the monsters we've defeated there Ailado leaned forward as if he was greatly interested in it. Miduchi talked quite a bit as well so it seems Ailado has gotten considerably used to her. Furthermore, it seems that since Ailado turned 5 years old in the spring of last year Myun has secretly been teaching him the sword periodically in the night without telling her husband Bosshu.

It seems it's not the Fogen sword style commonly taught in Rombert Kingdom but the style Myun learned in the past. I guess it feels kind of like the swordsmanship Miduchi uses but an amazingly~ inferior version.

However, periodically huh? I wonder if it's not every night because of, the..{Yes/No} pillow problem?

"..Then, we're going to get some light exercise. If we're not doing anything our skills will dull after all."

Since it seemed to be at a good point we finished up saying that.

Ailado still seemed to want to hear more stories but it's the middle of the night, I'm sure it's about time for good children to go to sleep. Ailado who seemed reluctant to the end was clinging on to Miduchi when we split ways. He's completely gotten used to and opened his heart to her it seems and, that's great. But, that's mine. Stop burying your face.

During that time I was whispering in Myun's ear in a small voice.

The primary objective for why I took time tonight was this.

"In regards to that one matter but, soon after that I cut off any future distress. So you can relax. There's no problem. It took some time to convey it to you..I'm sure I left you feeling worried for quite a long time right? Sorry about that."

I said that and lightly lowered my head.

"Al-sama. I wasn't worried about anything at all."

When I raised my head Myun showed me the same smile she did once upon a time.

Yeah, I said to just act like you were riding a large boat right?

.....

After we split up with Myun and Ailado, Miduchi and I started heading West from the village. There's a cave in the mountains there where Shriekers live. The Shriekers in the vicinity of Bakuddo don't get very big and if you just stick a worn out cloth into your ears as ear plugs you can hunt them without much trouble. Even if you ignore them as long as you don't get near they aren't a big problem.

Come to think of it in the past, I pestered Myun and went to hunt them countless times. Shriekers are small mushroom like monsters with lots of small legs and the thing itself doesn't have much fighting power either, if they were intent on it even a non-reincarnated normal child could kill them I'm sure. However, when they feel the presence of the animal that is their prey in their surroundings a shrieking scream is let out from the several holes(though it's not a mouth so calling it a scream is strange) open in the back of it's head and that calls over nearby monsters.

If it was just that then it would be fine to quickly kill it, take the magic stone, and run but if you hear the scream from nearby, in the worst case you might even start to feel weak. In order to avoid that we're wearing ear plugs.

While Miduchi and I were heading towards the Shrieker's cave I started talking about stupid old stories like, "The first time I went to hunt shriekers, before that Myun ended up getting hurt to a different monster we encountered but I magnificently saved her. Not really though." or "The next time when we went I ignored Myun's warning and heard it's scream from close proximity and ended up being drained of my strength and pissing myself. It's true though."

Inside of the pitch black and eerie forest, as we we had to walk with just a {Light} on the level of a flashlight, I was trying to lighten up the mood a bit. However, Miduchi said, "It's fine if you don't try to mind me that much. I, can properly see after all.", hearing that I remembered, come to think of it Miduchi had the special skill {Infrared Vision}, and got a bit depressed.

According to Miduchi rather than the surrounding air the surface of the trees is just a bit lower temperature and she can see them without problem. Rather, I was told that while I'm nearby her the infrared rays being emitted from me are more of a hindrance. Then, what about the infrared rays coming off yourself, and I wanted to say that but remained silent. I'm sure the infrared rays she gives off herself show up in her sight as well but she's already used to them so there's no problem.

It's only obvious but our combat abilities are considerably high.

We naturally obtained the shrieker's body that was our original objective, but we also hunted a {Manta Ray}, a ray like monster which seems to fly through the air, that came lured by the scream, as well as some hobgoblins.

The only monster that could be considered a threat around here is the {Horned Bear}. Even that as long as it doesn't catch us of guard from a close distance, I'm sure it would be no problem for Miduchi and I. In another two hours or so it should be daybreak.

Furthermore, when we returned to the house brother was using {Light} to see as he did form practice.

"Oh? The two of you this late at night..I guess it's about daybreak huh? What time is it now? Did you go out? I didn't notice at all."

And looked up at the still pitch black sky while laughing and wiping the sweat with a hand towel.

"A..Ah, we're adventurers after all. Monsters are opponents, so we didn't want to let our skills get dull."

And I laughed while covering it up and handed him the magic stones we gathered.

"Ooh!!...This many..Isn't there over 10 of them!?!..That's amazing. Is it fine?"

"Of course it is. Just think of it as the fee for lodging and accept it."

"Hahhawwa. Don't worry so much about it, use up some money company president..And I guess you already ordered some armor didn't you."

I laughed at the boring joke but I was surprised. So brother was training at this sort of time in the middle of the night?

In the day he has to do patrols and look after the training of the squires after all..I guess he can only find time late at night like this.

.....

Year 7446, Month 4, Day 30

The next morning, soon after having breakfast mother threw Zetto and Becky into the lord's office room on the second floor in order to start magic training. It seems she wanted hear various stories from Miduchi and I but I said we can talk about that sort of stuff as much as she likes afterwards and had her do the magic training.

During that time we went out to do some running and when we returned we showed sister-in-law Shani the spells {Predict.Weather} and {Detect.Life}, and brother the spell {Divination}.

Sister-in-law Shani has aptitude with all elements of magic and her mana is just a bit higher than normal. Her skill levels including void magic were all level 4 and not very high(Since they're on the level of a full-fledged magician taking her age into consideration you could say they're decently high).

In regards to brother he has more mana than Miduchi. Even at longest if he practices for a few days he should be able to sue it.

However, I told him he should make this into a trump card.

Additionally I captured a random frog and showed off the spells {Flesh.To.Stone} and {Remove.Petrification} as well.

Incidentally, leaving brother and I who took showers to the side, Gwine and Angela came in the morning to invite Miduchi to the baths. In order to get off the sweat a shower is plenty but once you've entered a bath.

I can understand their feelings.

After we had lunch, we had training together with Miduchi, Gwine, and Angela at our training area.

Today the squires that work on manufacturing rubber products are participating as well. The commoners and slaves who don't have a role as squires continue manufacturing the rubber products...Huh? Was the training of Bakuddo's squires always this easy? In the past I had the image of it being insanely harsh but...

"It seems you're unsatisfied."

Brother made a bitter smile while talking to me.

"No, not particularly, that sort of thing is.."

"It's not just you. If I look at everyone's faces I can tell. Don't put us together with first-rate adventurers who are challenging the dungeon everyday."

Brother shrugged his shoulders and raised his voice putting some fighting spirit into the squires.

"Hey, Whitney! You're posture no good! Al is laughing! In the past, didn't you teach Al the sword!"

I'm not laughing...

Even Gwine and angela who were the weaker members of the {Slaughterers} almost always gained complete victory against the squires. Of course, in terms of technique in using the spear or sword it self the squires are better. However, when it comes to the sharpness of thrusts and the control of body weight when switching from sweeps into attacks Gwine's tactics seem to have increased. Angela was being Angela as well, if she just goes on the defensive she's absurdly strong. Also, she's skilled at cooperating with the partner she teams up with and can skillfully break the opponents posture making it easier for that partner to attack. It's because we've always just been beating defense and cooperation into her after all.

Well it's fine.

"Brother, let's fight."

The wooden bayonet I used in the past disappeared somewhere so I can't use the bayonet.

While holding a wooden sword on guard I called out to brother.

.....

After all brother was strong. Recently, even when in practice matches I rarely take any attacks. Very rarely it's at the level of being hit by Zenom's axe and even that's when there's more opponents and when the setting is that I'm alone protecting the rear. Even though that's the case, in this short period of time brother's wooden sword directly hit me. Even though it was one on one...Of course, almost all of mine, the attacks I made in which I was trying to hit landed but brother's level is only 11.

Furthermore, judging from the experience points he should have only just hit level 11 this year. Even though I have over 3 times his Speed and even Dexterity is 2.5 times higher...

When I was easily able to parry his trump card double thrust blow,

I was convinced that my skill had already exceeded brother but he passed through my side and I took a hit from my flank to my back and choked up on breathing for an instant. It seems the protectors protected my kidney so it wasn't seriously damages but rather than that the shock from taking a solid direct hit caused me to choke up. It was a thrust that came flying with the perfect timing. This is depressing. This, it's seriously depressing. I've definitely not been slacking off in my training. I've continued with my running as much as possible and I haven't neglected live combat either. Confessing it and one on one as long as the opponent isn't a monster, I even think I wouldn't take a direct hit so easily. Of course, I wasn't letting my guard down from self-conceit either. There's no way I could let my guard down with that brother as the opponent. As proof of that other than that one hit I was able to either evade or parry them. Of course, not just Miduchi who was observing on the side, but Gwine and Angela were surprised as well. Around three years ago, the only one who saw the practice match against the first knight group was Angela but it seems even she thought I wouldn't take any attacks from brother with my growth. Most likely, brother is making use of all of his ability levels. In addition to a natural talent with body balance and great effort that has never stopped he's making every bit of his bodies potential ability his own. Through training, I wonder if he's reached the realm of being able to freely remove the brains limiter on his power through willpower? No, Well, if you look at it objectively you still can't say anything but that it was overwhelmingly my victory.

However, at the same time I understood that I still have plenty of room to grow greatly as well. It's proof that starting with {Hyumu}'s the people of Orth, through talent, and depending on how they do it willpower and concentration, can pull out the potential of their bodies to their very limits.

Year 7446, Month 5, Day 1

In the morning the base of everyone's boots was completed. Just as expected of someone dragged out by brother, the shoe maker Baru was quite fast at doing his job, a skilled artisan. Gwine and Angela's protectors are almost completely already and just have several adjustments remaining. I'm sure we'll be able to depart the village tomorrow. When it comes to the rubber armor itself it's fine if we just wear it and the only real baggage we have is the boots. If we just hang a big bag from the saddlebag it should be fine. Even then if it gets difficult then it's just a matter of us taking turns getting off the horse and running. At the very least if we make it back to Doritto then the roads get quite a bit better after all.

I had predicted that we might be told to carry the goods that were already complete ahead of time but during the next delivery the Donneoru family will be coming to the capital and the Ryogu family will be returning to Bakuddo. Since there's also the carrying of their furniture, I was told there's no need to push ourselves to bring anything.

I decided to take him up on his words.

Today I enjoyed the baths a number of times as well.

.....

Year 7446, Month 5, Day 2

Just past noon, after splitting up on the two war horses we departed Bakuddo while on horseback. Miduchi and I are wearing the general model rubber protectors while Gwine and Angela are wearing the new model hunting purpose protectors.

In order for them to get used to the new combat shoes, Gwine and Angela are walking without riding the horses. Their protectors have the defensive capability focused around the vitals and limbs so the weight is a bit heavy as well. Since they've only ever worn leather armor up until now there's no choice than to be patient until they get used to it I'm sure. However, the places that beasts and monsters bite on to can be said to almost always be the limbs.

Only the outer parts of the fingertips are fortified like mittens and on top of a large {gauntlet} that goes from the fingertips to the elbows, on the general model there was a rubber or hardened rubber band, but up until the inner thighs they have ebonite plates allotted. Of course it properly takes into consideration mobility as well and is arranged in a way that it doesn't impede movement during combat. In comparison, it doesn't take attacks from projectile weapons to the body into consideration. The overall design has an increase in the number of curved surfaces, on top of abandoning the anti-bow and arrow gaps, it has a glossed sheen that almost seems wet.

Though I say that, according to what brother said even this could be said to have a bit better defensive power on the body than the third generation model that I used for many years. Supposedly they're always making improvements to the materials and design including the ebonite. Even in comparison to the armor I'm wearing now the thickness isn't all that much different from the ebonite plates on the surface but it seems on the back they put an engraving cooling fin in like an air cooling engine, they made use of the gaps from there to add hardened rubber along with the uneven parts, so it seems it's got a hybrid structure which is both light weight and maintains the defensive power. It seems this structure has even been used in the armor on Gwine and Angela's limbs. It feels even more reassuring than up until now. I'm sure we can relax and challenge the dungeon.

It was a bit regrettable parting ways with Zetto, Becky, and Al who had completely gotten attached to us but there's no meaning to laying around for too long.

Year 7446, Month 5, Day 6

In less than one week we arrived at Keel. For the time being after securing an inn the first place we'll go to is the headquarters of the knight group. Since the time right now is just past 2 pm, this time for sure we should be able to meet them. In order to appeal to the gatekeepers we went without taking our armor off. After informing the gatekeepers of our visit and that we want to meet them, the four of us were on standby.

Shortly after a girl the same age as us came out of the headquarters. She's wearing leather armor that doesn't seem to be very good in quality and has a long sword on her waist. Her black hair that almost looks wet has gotten shorten to keep it out of the way but I can recognize her facial features.

She must have noticed seeing the group equipped in high class rubber protectors from Bakuddo.

She approached us with a rhythmical pace.

Even though she didn't have even a splinter of an impression to her but..I guessing people can change.

Chapter 228: Kuro and Mary

Year 7446, Month 5, Day 6

Mary's face as she walked over here had completely lost it's softness and tightened up. It seems she's gotten a bit of a suntan as well. Oh~ all of us still had our helmets on. I lifted my chin up while untying the string on my helmet to take it off. I'm sure my hair that's been dyed bright red stands out.

Seeing my dyed hair, Mary made a slightly surprised face but even then she continued walking without breaking her pace.

"You seem healthy, Mary."

"Thanks to you. I've prepared a room. These people are?"

Mary smiled a bit and said while looking at Miduchi and the other two.

"They're all my party members. I'll introduce you later. Where's Kuro?"

"Right now is our break time between shifts so he went out shopping for a bit. He should return soon. Please come this way"

"Wait just a minute. Is it fine to tie up our horses to the stake here?"

"Yeah, that's no problem. It's fine for you to keep your weapons as well."

Hearing that Angela quickly fastened the horses.

We were let through into the room which I had an interview with commander Sendhel once upon a time. After entering the building we crossed paths with several people but Mary always retreated to the side of the halls and waited for the other party to pass by. It couldn't be helped so we copied her as well.

"I'm sorry. Since I'm a squire..In the knight group the visitors who stop by receive the same treatment."

Obviously~ I already knew that they wouldn't become something like a true knight in just four years. It can't be helped.

"Now then, shall we at least do introduction before Kuro returns?

Yeah. Everyone, she is Mary, Marissa.Binsil. She's supposedly still a squire so a Free Person I guess?"

"Yeah, that's right. It's nice to meet you. I'm Marissa.Binsil a squire of the Marquis Webdos Knight Group."

Mary stood up with a firm posture and introduced herself like a soldier.

"I said it before but she might look like this but formerly she was an old lady just a bit younger than I was. Don't forget your respect for the elderly."

I said it like a joke but Mary glared at me with terrifying expression.

"Something like our previous ages don't matter at all! Since I'm 18 years old now. Rather than that quickly introduce us."

"Yeah, looking from your left is Miduchi.

Midu~ritto.Chizumagurol."

"It's nice to meet you, Mary-san. I'm Midu~ritto.Chizumagurol. Just as you can see I'm a dark elf. I've dyed my hair but if I remove the dyes it's completely black. Since it seems this person has been in your care, thank you very much."

Miduchi said that while taking a step forward and stretching her right hand out to Mary. Mary grabbed that hand and shook it but it seems she was a bit overawed by Miduchi's skin color.

"..It..It's nice to meet you...I'm sorry. It's my first time meeting a dark elf and..That is...Also, this person?.."

"Yeah, there was a bit of a relation in the pa"I'm his wife."we still aren't married."

Hearing our words Mary made a slightly cheerful face saying, "You too.." and smiled while looking at Miduchi's face.

"After that the dwarf in the middle is Gwine.

Gullinel.Akdam."

"It's nice to meet you, Mary-san. I've heard stories about you from Al-san. I'm Gullinel.Akdam. I'm the same as Al-san and Mary-san as well."

"I thought that might be the case. That's a lovely beard."

Mary brought Gwine's beard into the topic. Since she's popular right now you shouldn't touch on that topic.
Japanese people are supposed to be attentive listeners you know?

"Ehe~ thank you very much. It takes quite a bit of work, this."

No one was asking about the work or anything. But, it seems she's already completely gotten over it.

"The one on the far right is the Dog-person and my combat slave, Maruso.Angela. Everyone normally calls her Maruso. Ah, she's the only one who isn't a Japanese person but she knows the circumstances somewhat so don't worry too much about it "I still haven't told her about the techniques that only we can use but if it's necessary there's no real problem with talking about them.""

"It's nice to meet you. I've heard various stories from master. My name is Maruso.Angela. From here on out, it's good to know you."

"It's nice to meet you too. Since it's just a bit nostalgic, I might reflexively say words that you don't know but please pardon me."

Now then, that's plenty for introductions. I need to ask what needs to be asked.

I sat down on the sofa and opened my mouth.

"Mary. Sorry about suddenly coming to ask for you. It's been four years since then. I wanted to hear your response. Since I also had some business returning to my parent's house, I stopped by on the occasion."

".."

Mary was just looking intently at me with her mouth shut.

"I said it before but no matter what the conclusion you've come to, I won't resent you."

I wonder if it's a reply that's difficult to say? and thinking that I made it easier for her to say. In the worst case, if she doesn't want to join us then it's unfortunate but can't be helped. I'll just have to think that our connection was weak and there's no choice but to give up "for now". Of course it's nothing to get angry over either.

"It seems you're said to be the number one adventurer in Baldukk right now. In just a mere four years, it's quite something."

After all is she going to turn it down? First off I guess I'll quietly listen huh?

"Until the other day we went to subjugate a {Horned Bear} in Buraizu. It happens about once a year right. These sorts of things. We went once last year as well but that time no one died. But, this time even two people died.."

It might just be my imagination but I felt like the tone of Mary's voice dropped a bit.

"I didn't see one of them but the other one died right in front of my eyes. Their head was sent flying from a single hit of the {Horned Bear}. It was a child that was still 17 years old."

Everyone was quietly listening to Mary's voice.

"People die so easily right. I'm sure you already know but last year we went to the war as well. Kuro and I were both sent around to guard the provisions so it's not like we directly crossed blades with the army of Devas, but even from our knight group there were a number of casualties. There were people who were saved even with serious injuries but three people died. I thought it was scary."

But, you didn't quit right? I remembered Mary's face when she said,

"I'll show you I can make use of this chance."

"In our knight group you know, it's turned into a legend."

Ah?

"Your older brother. Lord Farnestan.Greed. He entered at 14 years old and received investiture as a true knight at 16 years old then went to his first battle. There he made some great achievements. He's a hero who after that he threw away advancement and everything else to marry the commander's daughter as if he was kidnapping her and returned to his home town. The Black Eagle of Webdos. The commander brags about him all the time as well."

Hmm.

"Your older sister Milhaia.Greed joined the first knight group just before 15 years old. She became a true knight in a mere three years. Obviously even in our knight group she's an amazingly famous person. It seems her skill with the sword is quite something as well but what's frightening is her high skill level as a magician. The Black Witch. Even in the war just a while back it's to the point where she participated in the war deliberation as the young age of 21 years old. The commander was bragging about her as well."

What is it?

"And then you. Alan.Greed. In just four years you've become the number one adventurer of Baldukk. It seems there's no one who doesn't know you in that area. Simultaneously you're the founder and company president of Greed Company. It seems you're doing well getting along with Webdos Company without fighting them right."

Hearing Mary start listing out us siblings personal history in a quiet tone of voice, it was a way of speaking as if she was only pointing out the facts, but it was somewhat unamusing.

"You know. We gave it our best as well. When we entered the knight group, putting aside you, since everyone already knew about your brother and sister after all. Ah, I see. I thought that Al was the little brother of some amazing people. Even though I had actually seen your magic and sword right. I realized it once again."

Before I noticed it Mary was facing down sniffing.

"Putting aside Kuro, I didn't know a single thing about how to hold the spear. I was always getting hurt somewhere. But, Kuro and I encouraged each other. At first we were saying we'd become true knights in two years like that..Before we realized that became three years, and four years, and stretched out.."

It was then that we heard the sound of a knock on the door. Mary asked, "Kuro?" while asking the identity of the person at the door at the same time as it opened, and a man with shortly cut hair and darkened skin burnt from the sun entered the room. It's Kuro.

"Sorry about that. I was out for a bit. It's been a while."

"Yeah, it's been a while."

After finishing up introductions again Kuro sat down next to Mary.

"How far had you talked?"

Kuro asked. I changed the answer by just shrugging my shoulders.

"Mary you know. Is just a bit {nervous} right now. Have you heard about the incident last week?"

"Yeah, it seems that a squire passed away right in front of her eyes?"

"Nn..Just that huh? That squire who passed away right in front of her eyes, was a junior that she was taking good care of. And because of that she was a bit shocked.."

Hmn, so that's how it was?

"Please excuse me. I'll take over the discussion. Saying it simply.

It's saying something selfish, but another two, no, please wait one more year. We had intended to have given our best quite a bit but after all for the daughter of a restaurant and a failed adventurer that is..during the first year we were basically not able to do anything. It took two and a half years just to be able to have a proper practice match against the other squires. After all the types of people who entered the knight group were those who had trained since they were little..we were no match for them."

I'm not in a hurry so that's particularly fine but...

"Is it fine to take that as meaning you're going to join me as adventurers one year later?"

"Yeah that's right. I said I'd definitely return the favor right?"

Kuro smiled while saying that.

It seems like..he isn't saying anything unreasonable.

"There's no particular problem with waiting. It's strange saying this but right now our forces are reasonably fulfilled so there's no need to hurry either. Of course, the sooner you join up with is the better though. However, I want to hear your real intentions. If joining up is your intention then, you should have the option of quitting the knight group right away and joining us as well. You can already use weapons right?"

When I asked that Mary and Kuro exchanged glances for just a bit and Kuro opened his mouth.

"Yeah, about that. Sorry but there's a bit of a reason. At the very least I definitely want to receive investiture as a true knight.

Just as you taught us in the past, we didn't really have any problem with the academic part of it. It was just memorization after all. If you just understand the basics and foundations of tactics then after that it's memorization. When it comes to things like calculations and accounting we're basically the top in the knight group. But, after all in regards to combat abilities, particularly Mary was struggling with it quite a bit.."

"That, I'm sure it's your true intentions but..say everything."

"..Sorry. But it's true that it's a part of the reason. As a matter of fact, the old man of Binsil said that he wouldn't give Mary to me as a bride unless I became a true knight..If I can become a true knight then I'll become a commoner after all."

"Oh~!!"

The bearded woman started to get excited. This girl, she really loves these types of stories.

"If that's the case then just say it from the start. It's not like I'll get angry."

Well, it seems things have calmed down in a fitting place. After all that rubber bag I gave them as a parting gift when we split ways must have worked. I, did a good job right.

"Sorry."

"I said it's already fine. By the way, you went shopping right?

Could it be a ring? Hn?"

I said it while laughing to try and soften the atmosphere even further.

Kuro and Mary just turned a bit red.

What the, did he really go to buy a ring?

How amazing my reading~

"No, as expected a ring is..I just went out to buy something we needed."

"But it's suspicious how the two of you turned red~ look, look~"

Gwine was looking at his hand as well.

"No, that is, isn't it fine. It's something I received from Al in the past. There's quite a few stores that sell them in Keel after all."

So it was condoms. Gyafun.

.....

One year later, at the very least it seems that Kuro will be able to have his eyes set on becoming a true knight. According to Kuro and Mary's conversation and recently Mary has felt some growth as well, it might be difficult one year later but it seems if she can make some decent achievements subjugating monsters then it's not completely impossible. I heard from brother and the others but it seems they're giving it their best. It seems they intend to join us, so since I was able to confirm their current status there's no problem.

Rather than that, there's one more, thing that I need to take care of in Keel. I want to hear the recent state of affairs from the owner of Ritton, Haritaido-san. That toad-like man has an unbearable appearance but his intellect has promise. Since he was talking about making a second chain store, if he's still lacking in capital then I thought I might offer an investment.

I dragged along the three of them while walking to Ritton but as we approached my resolve gradually grew weaker. Putting aside Angela, entering a brothel together with Miduchi and Gwine is just a bit~ Let's stop. Rather than it's a matter that can be resolved if I just call him out to Dakkuruton. Along the way I went down a different road and started towards Dakkuruton.

My outfit is imposing but just in case I'm still at the end of the nobility as well. I was able to make reservations without problem. Additionally I asked the {boy} to send a messenger to the owner of Ritton that I'd like for him to come by at 6 pm. Obviously it requires adding a bonus fee in there but it's a necessary expense.

"I've got a business discussion. I want to talk with a customer that did some transactions of a reasonable value in the early days. Sorry but eat dinner without me for tonight."

And I said that while we were returning to Binsu Manor and changed into some tidy clothes that weren't very high quality.

It seems that Jaba-Haritaido came running at the invitation of the company president of Greed Company. It seems he remembered me as well. Right now brother is selling to him but the one who concluded the first business discussion was me after all. It seems that when he appeared while rubbing his palms together he thought it was a discussion about another new product. However, the proposal from me was about investment towards a second store. I thought he would be even more overjoyed, but it seems he's not that much of an idiot, and he showed a complete change as his expression turned quite wary.

This is how it needs to be. It's fine if he refuses it for now.

It's plenty as long as the fact that I have reasonable amount of funds and I'm seriously taking it into consideration is conveyed.

Ah, of course, something like a second chain store for a brothel in the middle of nowhere doesn't matter at all. If he wishes for it then loaning the funds for just that is no problem at all. The objective was to strongly leave an impression of my existence in his memory.

.....

Year 7446, Month 5, Day 7

"Then one year later, come to Baldukk. We'll be waiting for you."

"Umm, Al..Yesterday was..I'm sorry for suddenly saying something weird."

Mary said with an apologetic expression.

"I'm sure things like that happen right. But, death is an everyday occurrence for adventurers. It's something I'd like you get a bit used to. But you know, I'll declare it but I have no intention of letting my allies get killed. I still haven't let even a single person die after all. I'll say it on the occasion but after you become true knights even if you stay in the knight group I won't get angry. Just, I wanted you to know this much. If you come to Baldukk then I'll pay you several times the wages of a true knight."

After I said that Mary made a slightly surprised face but laughed.

"Then, Kuro you too stay well. Even if it's just you, you need to quickly receive investiture as a true knight~ right? It's a common saying, but give it your best."

"Yeah, Mary and I will both return our debt to you. Just wait for us."

I put my arms around Kuro and Mary's shoulders and after forming a circle whispered in a small voice.

"I want you to listen without getting angry. If Mary permits it then, I want you to level up Kuro's Unique Ability {Charm}. You might already know but if you just use it the necessary number of times the level will increase. If Mary says it's no good no matter what, then I won't say anything unreasonable. But, I think it's an ability that is suited for gathering information. I'll leave the decision up to you two."

That fellow Kuro, since then it seems he hasn't used {Charm} almost at all. The level was still just the same at 3. Even though Mary's ability {Resistance(Poison)} was already at the MAX level. After finishing up saying our farewells in front of the knight group headquarters in the early morning we departed from Keel.

.....

Year 7446, Month 5, Day 10

It's completely different when the road is good.

In no time at all we passed through Marquis Webdos's territory and entered Viscount Penlaido's territory. Gwine has perfectly remembered the terrain.

"I think it would be more efficient to remember a new route on the trip back. What should we do?"

Normally we'd take a detour on the route around the base of the Pitosu mountain range to the Southwest through Viscount Penlaido's territory. After that we'd go to the capital of the Viscount's territory Karumu, then it's fine if we just follow along the coast.

We have no carriage and we're light, if we don't play along the way we could arrive in Baldukk without even taking three weeks. In the past, when sister returned home once she did a round trip from the capital to Bakuddo in a month and a half. It's not like we have enough horses for the number of people we have so I'm sure we can't go that fast but we should be able to move at a speed where one-way takes one month with plenty of time remaining.

Hm~mm. It's not particularly like we're competing for every day's worth of time. I felt like it would be fine if we could just return sometime this month but if I think about things from here on out and even if it consumes a bit of time it's only obvious it would be better to make the map for it. The precise route from Karumu to Baldukk along the coast is already in Gwine's head after all and even the road is in her memory. There's no need to take the same route.

"Certainly that's true. Then shall we go this way?"

Not just the Pitosu mountain range but I guess we'll take a detour around Board mountain East of that and pass through Viscount Yoraizu's territory going North?

While having lunch we spread out the badly made map on the level of the warring states era of Japan while deciding the outline of the course. We should be able to arrive at the village in the East Biasso by today. We'll stay one night there. Then about 20 km ahead of that there should be the decently large town of Ramudokku with a population of a few thousand people. If we go that far then Viscount Yoarizu's territory is right in front of us. After eating lunch we mounted the horses and started moving.

Chapter 229: Rumors of a Saint

Year 7446, Month 5, Day 11

We arrived at the town of Ramudokku before the day ended. Northeast from the town of Ramudokku Mount Board towers over at an elevation of about 1,300 meters and acts as something like a gate into the Jindaru peninsula along with the Pitosu mountain range. We intend to take a detour even further to the East around this Board mountain and then go North towards the capital.

We entered a random inn and ate at a restaurant. We really wanted to gather some information on what kind of place Viscount Yoraizu's territory, that's just 10 km or so to the East right before our eyes is like, but we were only able to hear common things and unable to gather any useful information. The reason for this is largely because there were no caravans belonging to Type-2 companies. When they're around I'm sure they're around but I guess we had bad luck.

In any case it seems that along the 20 km road to the first village after we enter Viscount Yoraizu's territory, the roads will change to mountain roads. Since it acts as the boundary between territories there's a considerable distance opened up. Since tomorrow is going to be on a different level from 20 km through the plains it would be best to get some rest early today.

Year 7446, Month 5, Day 12

In the early morning we departed the town of Ramudokku. On the northern road a bit closer to Mount Board that's right along the border to Viscount Yoraizu's territory, we passed through the villages scattered along the Board mountains. On our journey to Bakuddo we had heard that orks appear on this road, since it would be troublesome to get ambushed, we decided to completely detour around Mount Board as we advanced down the road going North through the western part of Viscount Yoraizu's territory.

There are some highs and lows of the mountain road but the elevation isn't all that different. The saddlebags on our two war horses are stuffed full with everyone's boots, the leather armor Gwine and Angela were wearing on the journey out, as well as blankets and such. While swaying on horseback as Miduchi and I sit in the rear position we were holding the rucksacks with change of clothes and such in them. Just from a glance it's not as if we don't look like a small scale peddler but if they see four people wearing what appears to be metal armor and heavily armed, there's no way we would be attacked by thieves so easily.

We arrived at Winro village in the evening but other than seeing some goblins in the distance the same as usual along the way there wasn't any particular problem.

The population of the village is about 600 and it's like one size bigger than Bakuddo. Obviously there's no inn.

We put in a word with the lord and got permission to setup camp in the vacant lot near his house.

"It's not as if monsters don't appear in this area but if you're inside of the village then it's pretty much safe."

The son of the lord said that trying to give us peace of mind. Just in case we kept lookout in shifts, or rather it was just to make sure the campfire didn't go out. After we left this WInro village, there were several forks in the road but fundamentally if we follow along the left side (north side) while trying not to get too close to Mount Board then in 100 km or so we should leave Viscount Yoraizu's territory, and it'll supposedly take us to the center of the Kandeiru area where there's a group of small territories and royal territory in the south of Rombert Kingdom along the northern Dirt Plains.

.....

Year 7446, Month 5, Day 13

Inside of a deep forest, there's carved trees standing on the sides of the road that act as signs.

On the left side, "To Board Mountain, Massozu Village, 3 hours."

In the middle, "To Samisshu, Kaburokku Village, 7 hours."

On the right side, To Zarakkusu, Visshu Village, 5 hours."

The left side is rejected. What are we going to do going towards the border of Viscount Pendlaido's territory. The direction leading to Zarakkusu on the right is probably referring to the capital of Viscount Yoraizu's territory, Zarakkusu I'm sure. Ahead of that is close to the Zarakkusu mountain range which is at the edge of the Dirt Plains. Rejected. There's no choice but the direction towards Samisshu down the center but, seriously 7 hours...

The current time is roughly 1 pm. Since we're riding on horses we should be able to arrive a bit faster than the time written on the signboard but I'm absolutely sure the sun will set along the way. However, we do have the spell {Light} and I guess we should be arriving at Kaburokku Village around then? Or at least we should only be a short distance away from that village by then.

"I want to go straight ahead, but how about it?"

I just felt like saying it. Honestly speaking I was hoping for some objections but if there's some opinions that I can accept just continuing straight ahead like this is technically fine as well.

"Nn..Shouldn't it be fine? Both Al-san and Miduchi-san are here, so we shouldn't have any problem with light after all."

This beard-san is no good, she's not thinking about anything~

"We should do whatever master pleases."

Hearing the loyal hound completely throw it onto her master shows my own stupidity. There's no way this girl would object to it.

"Even if we don't push ourselves to walk at night..Even if you use {Light} it's difficult to see where you're stepping? Couldn't we go to Massozu Village and see if there's a road that joins up from there?"

According to the map there isn't one. No, there might be but it's not on the map.

"There isn't one right~ That is. It's fine going towards the North in hopes of there being a road that joins up but if there isn't one we'll end up having to come back again. Even then that's 3 hours and 7 hours so if we have all of tomorrow we could make it to Kaburokku Village. Should we do that?"

"I think that's the better option. If we keep going like this to Kaburokku Village it's certainly true we'll arrive one day faster but it would be pointless if in the darkness we make a mistake and go down the wrong road at a fork right? Even though Gwine and I have {Infrared Vision}, since the horses are here as well {Light} is indispensable and as expected I can't say we wouldn't overlook these sorts of signs."

"That's reasonable. It's not like we're in a hurry, I guess we'll do that."

We started walking down the road approaching Mount Board in the North.

We were able to arrived at Massozu Village with any major problems in particular. It properly took us 3 hours for the trip. Less than 1 hour after we started down the fork we were attacked by orks. We ended up losing time gathering those magic stones. According to Identify the value of the ork's magic stones was over 4,000, in other words if we sell them they're worth 30,000 Z after all.

There's no choice to ignore them.

The scale of Massozu Village we arrived at was about 50 households and a population of around 300-350. We immediately went to the lord of the village to ask for permission to camp in the village and were told, "If you're not peddlers then it's 1 large copper coin (1,000 Z) per person to provide a lodging place." Occasionally there's these as well. It seems like a poor village after all, this can't be helped. After obediently paying the money and the camp site was a vacant lot at the edge of the village on the side of the large river. Since we still had time to spare we took our time leisurely going there and started making preparations to camp. In the brush on the edge of the lot there were a never of stakes just left knocked into the ground. A caravan that comes to this village must have used it for tying up their horse or cows.

Also, it's only obvious but I asked the lord whether there was a shortcut to Kaburokku Village but unfortunately there wasn't something like that. Tomorrow we need to wake up early and follow the road 3 hours back the way we came.

Since it was close to evening, the villagers were finishing up their work for today as they passed by our camp. Either because they rarely have outsiders come to this village or otherwise because we were heavily armored and armed despite not having much belongings, there was almost no one who talked to us, and it was just 10 year old or so children. It doesn't seem like their parents were scolding them for that so it's not like we're being avoided. I gave Angela the job of buying some fire wood and straw for fodder while giving her several large copper coins just in case, and request Gwine to see if she can buy anything to eat.

During that time Miduchi and I were taking our belongings off the horses and tying them up to the stakes. Since the stakes were hammered in right near the flowing river, our two horses stuck their faces into the river and started drinking the water. Miduchi took the rock salt we stocked up on in the town of Ramudokku out of her saddlebag and started letting them lick it one at a time. I poured water over the backs of the horses and thoroughly scratched the areas around where the saddle was that seemed like it would have itched from us riding it all day.

While we were doing that Angela returned carrying fire wood.

"I'm very sorry, it ended up being a bit expensive."

She said that while lowering her head and handed me the change.

Unexpectedly it had decreased by two large copper coins. It seems she was able to buy another two trips of fire wood and about double that in fodder. Even then 2,000 Z, isn't that expensive? Going off the market price even 60% - 70% of that is a bit high. Well, it doesn't seem like a very wealthy village, it's poor looking village on a smaller scale than Bakuddo after all. It can't be helped for them to charge a bit extra. We're probably an important source of income for the people of this village. Of course I have Angela taking care of negotiations like this during this journey. Also, it's difficult to think that someone who was born a serf like her would be coaxed over.

"Nn..I'll leave that to you. We'll be looking after the horses and starting the fire."

"Yes, master."

Angela started walking towards what seems to be the house she made the negotiations again.

The firewood Angela was carrying gathered in the area we had prepared for it while Miduchi and I were focused on taking care of the horses. There, Gwine returned carrying what looked like considerably hard brown bread.

"Please look at this, this amount was 8 copper coins!"

Gwine raised her voice as if he she was discontent.

In terms of size there was plenty for four people eat their fill.

However, thinking about the portion for tomorrow morning and it's not quite enough.

"That's a considerable price..The firewood and fodder was 2,000 as well."

Miduchi made a bitter smile while giving Gwine the copper coins she paid in advance.

"By the way, can we talk for a bit? I heard something that bothered me a bit but"

Gwine lowered her voice as she started talking.

"It seems there was a Saint named Peggy-sama in this area. Somehow it seems she's able to heal diseases and injuries through the miracles of the God of the Ground, Nigiwa. I thought it was just healing magic anyways and tried asking that but supposedly it's different..it gives off light when she's healing it seems but it wasn't the blue spell light, but a white light."

"What.."

"Is that.."

Miduchi and I choked up on our words. It's dangerous to make a decision based on just this information but it's possible that Peggy or whatever is a reincarnated person.

"That's right isn't it. I thought that might be the case as well.

And, somehow I was able to find out that it seems she travels around in this Viscount Yoraizu's territory. It seems she came to this village about one year ago as well. Followers..it seems she has several allies as well. I couldn't find out about them but supposedly Peggy-sama's hair and eyes were both black."

"" ..""

"It seems that when she came to this village she was able to heal the lord's mother who had a cold and a young serf girl who had weakened shortly after giving birth just by touching them with her hand. Unfortunately they didn't know anything more than that and they don't know where she is now."

"" ..""

"Supposedly she explained herself as the reincarnation of the Divine Mother of the Land Nigiwana. Of course the lord and squires didn't believe her that far but since they actually saw her healing right in front of their eyes so they're half in doubt about it. It seems the serf people completely believe in it. They were saying something like Nanmaida~ in front of something like a cross."

""What in the world is that?""

Miduchi and I reacted at the same time.

"Well, I was able to notice because of that as well. It seems that they purchased the cross from Peggy-sama's attendant for 30,000 Z but when they were saying Nanmaida~ towards that I had trouble holding back from bursting into laughter, really."

Gwine said that while laughing. Miduchi and I exchanged glances but this is definitely Japanese person.

There's no culture for idol worship on Orth. The sole thing close to that is the temple, but even that is closer to the places local deities of Japan are said to be enshrined and customarily not something you pray to. Let alone, there's nothing like a small shrine in each household that you pray towards while speaking some chant or prayer either. In reality there might actually be something like that somewhere but I've never heard of anything like it even once up to now.

"That is~ certainly a Japanese person I'm sure...However, a cross and Nanmaida~ indeed. It's probably the words Namuamidabutu mispronounced though, I wish they would have came up with something a little bit better right. Putting that aside I'm going to go and listen to the story as well."

I wonder if that Peggy-sammy or Magaretto-sama or whatever is trying to make a religion? Through magic and Unique Abilities it's probably not difficult to show something like the miracles of God. Particularly when it comes to that shining hand or whatever if it's not the usual blue spell light then there might be a lot of people deceived by it. If someone actually had their disease or injury healed there then I think an overwhelming number of people might believe in it.

While think about things like that I picked a random, even then a decently constructed house that seems like that of a commoners and asked if the family would sell some kind of food to me. I was allowed on to the dirt floor so it seems that means wait there. I could hear a praying voice with a weird accent saying "Nanmaida~ Nanmaida~" from further in the house. I wonder if it's because it's dinnertime, it seems they're praying before meals as well. When the madam returned with some bread, I tried asking "What in the world was that voice?" and she easily replied, "It's a prayer of gratitude towards Peggy-sama."

I handed her the copper coins she requested while asking about Peggy-sama and she told me the same sort of things I heard from Gwine. "She was a very sacred being. She travels this land, a very grateful being who brings the miracles of God to the surface." is what she said. It seems they're doing a good job at tricking them.

I never even considered trying to become the founder or apostle or whatever for a religion. There's some pretty quick witted people in the world. Somehow I felt like I might be able to get along with them. In some cases religion exhibits immense power inciting the common people.

If it's really someone excellent then depending on negotiations it might even be good enclosing them in the future. If there's a doctrine or whatever then I can't say anything until I investigate that but if it's an advantage to the political side or seems like it can be changed to be an advantage then it might be worthwhile to adopt it as the state religion of my country.

Though I say that, it seems that Saint-sama appeared in the past few years and not to mention at the time there were suddenly some rumors going around but after that things calmed down. Around the time they were forgotten, it seems she came to the village stating she was the reincarnation of the Divine Mother of the Land Nigiwana and a Saint. And then gratefully distributed crosses purified by that Saint-sama herself for just the cost it seems. I said I would definitely love to see it and had her show it to me,

【Divine Mother of the Land, Nigiwana's Symbol】

【Oak Wood, Magic Stone】

【Condition: Normal】

【Manufacture Date: 4/12/7444】

【Value: 30】

【Endurance: 7】

【A model made with oak wood with a magic stone embedded in it.】

【Effect: None】

and that's what came out. I had expected, "I'm sure just the name of the materials will appear or at best it'll be displayed as a cross." but I was so surprised I thought I might fall over. It has a name attached to it!? That means it underwent the naming ceremony at a temple. In that case the price of 30,000 Z is too cheap though.

And, in other words I can think of several possibilities.

1. They really got it named at the temple and they're selling those cheap.

In that case they would be suffering some considerable losses on every one of them so no matter what the case this is unlikely.

Though I say that, there is the possibility that through some reason they have a price reduction on the naming ceremony at a temple. It's difficult to imagine though.

2. There's a different Japanese person among the attendants and that person used their Unique Ability to do naming or made it.

In terms of possibilities I think it's the highest one? Though I feel like it might be different from naming.

3. They know of a special way of making things with these sorts of status. They founded a religion in order to make effective use of that.

Well I can't deny it. A magic stone is used in it after all.

It's probably one of those. Or it might be a combination. For example there's the possibility it's a combination of 1 and 3 as well. If they already knew the special construction first then they can pay less for the naming ceremony charge or something, it's also possible they know something that I don't as well. Probably not though.

Whatever the case on this Orth where no religion-like religion exists, it's quite the intelligent method. I'm sure right now they aren't profiting much at all but if they continue to spread out their influence and even the lords of villages and towns join it, then they might even be able to expand their influence by taking in the Viscount Yoraizu family. If they can skillfully control them and make them into a puppet on the outside they could seem like a normal small country, and in essence, it "might" be possible to found a religious state.

Even if they can't make the Viscount into a puppet, with the brain of a former Japanese person they should be able to succeed at profiting a decent amount from it with a reasonably success rate if they take their time with it.

..However, it seems that right now they're planting the seeds. If I try searching for them it might stand out in a bad way and cause trouble for that Saint-sama. Even in my case while I have a reasonable amount of leeway in time on the journey this time, I don't have enough to spare wandering around Viscount Yoraizu's territory searching for someone who's whereabouts I have no idea on. If I at least had some definite information on their whereabouts then it wouldn't have been bad to and try to at least get a look at their face now while I can though...

I discussed it with Miduchi but just as I expected, she said that even if we meet now there probably wouldn't be much of a plus to it. If they've already continued these sorts of plain propagation for several years then the chances of them abandoning that to join us as adventurers are low and on the contrary it might give the other party the suggestion that they have a future rival as well.

We came to the conclusion that at the very least until I have my own territory to look after there isn't any harm in leaving them be.

If we're going to meet it would be best after I have a decent amount of authority. If it's possible then suddenly appearing in front of them after that and taking them in without giving them a choice would be best. If they intend to oppose us then we'll get to that when we get there.

Hmn, if that's the case then I'll need to be even more careful than ever with what territory I purchase~ On the Dirt Plains the areas that are adjacent to Devas has four territories lined up and they're all Royal Territories. There four Count's are stationed as governors and manage them. Excluding the one farthest to the East, the other three all seem to be obeying the King of Rombert. The one farthest to the East has their territory connected to the something or other Marquis or Duke, an influential noble in Devas, so it seems to be at a considerable disadvantage. As proof of that several years back they lost in quite the flashy way and it seems their area of influence has been reducing since.

I was told that as long as I pay the money any of the remaining three are fine, but of the three the one in the center is excluded from the candidates from the start. If we were looking from how fertile the land is then it's the two in the center and on the East but thanks to that there's a lot disputes. Assuming there's disputes 10 times, 5 of those will be concentrated on the center one it seems. As expected even if I make that sort of land a candidate it would be pretty harsh so the King didn't really recommend it either.

I'm sure from the King's standpoint he'd like me to give it my best for at least 10 years or so. Well, things around there I'll think about later~ and probably mention as well.

In any case, I should be satisfied with the fact that we were able to gain information on the reincarnated person named Peggy that is calling them self a Saint. Investigation is fine later on. I'm sure this Saint-sama will continue to grow after this after all. If I think about the money and labor requires for the investigation then the current information is just a bit better than nothing. Though if I have the chance to directly meet them and use Identify I'll aim for it. No~thing.

Year 7446, Month 6, Day 4

We quickly passed through Viscount Yoraizu's territory and started going North through the various small Royal Territories governed by emerging and high ranking nobles before arriving at Baldukk. It was a big harvest that we were able to gain information on what appears to be a reincarnated person and the biggest harvest was that we were to get precise mapping information on the roads.

I feel a renewed motivation as the outer crater enters my sight.

Chapter 235: Something Frightening

Year 7446, Month 6, Day 4

"Is it really something that frightening?"

While Miduchi was controlling the horse Angela asked her as she sat behind her.

"Yeah. Normally it's a powerful pain stopper, I guess? There's different strengths in the effects based on how it's purified but even if you just normally gather the sap, boil it down, and then dry it .."

"Stop already. It's not decided if that's the case yet. Everyone, I only intend to discuss this with Toris and Bel. Do not speak about it to anyone else. This is an order."

I cut off Miduchi's words while strongly ordering everyone.

Just before we left Viscount Yoraizu's territory, when we were attacked by a group of orks we easily repelled that and wiped them out. After that, in order to gather the magic stones from them we cut the band of the smelly leather armor they were wearing with a knife.

It's only obvious for unintelligent sub-human monsters to be carrying some kind of low quality pain relieving drug, no one has any interest in that sort of low quality drug which can't do anything more than just stop the pain. On Orth there's a lot better medicines that make use of magic stones in circulation. If you're going to end up using the space either way it's far more effective to carry those kinds instead. However, when Gwine was digging through the belongings one of the orks was carrying she found something unusual.

It was a pipe with a considerable length.

At first I thought it was a thick {blowgun} and just threw it on the ground nearby. However, after she stepped on it Miduchi showed a bit of interest and checked the status, before yelling "Ah!!?" as if she remembered. Soon after Miduchi said an appropriate excuse to cover up surprising everyone with her voice smoothing over the situation. However, soon after, she forcefully pulled me a bit of distance away and asked me to use Identify on the nokkusu.

"Just a minute, I want you to try using identify on this nokkusu but..If it's just as I'm thinking then.."

Nokkusu is the name of the pain relieving drug that the ork was holding. It's a brown colored powder. If you touch them and say status you can see the name of most goods after all. According to my Identify it's a pain reliever made from crushing the flower of a plant called Karesso, then boiling the liquid that comes out down.

The effects aren't very high. Obviously I told her just as I saw it.

And then,

"Nn..But I feel something is a bit off right..I thought it was opium but.."

And she said while putting her hand to her jaw while thinking. But, on the identify window not even the "na" in "narcotics" appeared.

Rather~ why suddenly something like opium...when I tried asking

Miduchi in the middle of the night when we changed lookout shifts after that and,

"I mean, it says it was made from the flower of a plant and it even says it's a pain reliever, an ork that wouldn't easily be able to get it's hands on tobacco was carrying a pipe right? If you mix them together isn't that already "opium" right?"

And that sort of reply came back. There's no way that's the case right, I honestly find your brain to be a menace for arriving at opium based on just that amount of information. When I said that sort of sarcasm,

"Eh? You've never tried looking up how to manufacture narcotics?"

And replied with a serious face. No. In the first place, I never had any interest in narcotics at all.

"I think there's a lot of people interested in those sorts of things during middle and high school. I didn't read those sorts of books in the classroom either but I read it at home."

That's the reason why you didn't have any friends right...That's dark after all. Other than studying brats should be playing outside. In the first place middle and high school students should be busy with club activities.

"Umm..I think I mentioned in the past~ but..I was the bookworm-type so.."

Was that the case? But you at least had friends to play with right?

Like shopping with other girls or things.

"..That's why I said, I didn't have many friends...Rather than playing outside with anyone I would read books, games..like SuFami, 32X Mega Drive with added Mega CD, SuperGrafx, Neo Geo, Towns Marty, LaserActive, PiPPiN, PCFX, Playstation, Saturn, ah, though it was the High Saturn that shows MPEGs but, 3D0, 64, DD, Gamecube, Dreamcast, X-box, 360, PS3, Wii, things around that area particularly after finding a job huh..In any case the only ones I didn't have when I was a student was the Virtual Boy and Playdia and we had the net, I got into the computer when I was in elementary school after all..even after entering college no one talked to me so I couldn't say I wanted to enter a circle..It's fine since I had friends on the other side of the screen! I was the indoor-type! All of the indoor-type kids were interested in these types of things at that age! Someone who was in the swimming club and went to self-defense university, or let alone mar..marri... married wouldn't know understand!! I hadn't even played with my PS4 for two years since I bought it!! Even though it was expensive!!"

Partway through she snapped and started going on about things that I couldn't understand almost like some kind of incantation. No, I have no clue what you're saying. I can somehow figure out that it's the name of games but..Eh? It's not games? Game consoles? Ah, is that so. Were you playing just games that much? Did you have that much free time?

"Ha~? There's no way I could buy all of the games right!? For each console at best about 2-4 games, at most 7-8 games!! Since there's no time to be playing shitty games!!"

I have no clue...

"Hmph. Even though you didn't even know about orks..I..I..I knew about all of the monsters we've encountered up until now! I know a bunch more other than that! That's why it's useful!"

..Yeah, I guess so. Rather~ it's only obvious both Gwine and Angela would wake up with how much noise she's making late at night.

In any case, according to Miduchi this pain reliever called nokkusu is a type of narcotic that's additive like opium or close to that.

Furthermore, while keeping an eye on things during combat I used Identify on the living orks but their Condition was Normal. There was no suspicious sort of display like Addict. "It didn't look like it was addicted though" and when I pointed that out,

"Ha..This is why amateurs are.."

And I was looked down on,

"Even if it's opium if they don't absorb a reasonable amount of a reasonable period they won't turn into something like an addiction.

There's pretty much no narcotic that would result in addiction in just a single try and in the first place we're not discussing humans from Earth, on Orth who knows..furthermore they're monsters after all. Also, mixing up addiction to drugs and the symptoms shown from withdrawal of an addiction is typical of an amateur."

And I was told that, I guess that is true. I mean, I am an amateur after all. After that we talked about ti when Angela and Gwine really weren't listening but my Identify might not be able to determine chronic addiction, is the conclusion we came to.

Certainly even if I use Identify on a person with an illness if the symptoms haven't appeared it doesn't show up.

In any case, since we were saying a number of dangerous terms like

"narcotics" and "opium" Gwine was persis~tently trying to ask about it, we decided to talk about it with these two. Well as expected if

I heard Gwine talking about those words I wouldn't just ignore it either.

That's the end of this discussion for now.

.....

Our horses ascended the outer crater's of Baldukk and climbed to a place where we can look down at the town. It's a time that's still before lunch.

"I wonder if we can eat Baldoggie for lunch?"

"If they're in the dungeon then I'm sure we can."

I replied to Gwine who was controlling the reins in the front while we started the descent to the town of Baldukk. In regards to the holiday over Golden Week I left it to Zenom and Toris so how long of a period they decided to take off or explore I don't know, whether today is a holiday or if they're in the dungeon is unknown.

It's something we could tell from above but nothing at all had changed with the town of Baldukk since before and after we departed, it's still the same town with a population exceeding 30,000 people.

Along the way, we let down Angela at Shuni and just as we arrived at Boil Manor we were able to catch Cathy as she was climbing the stairs with some Baldoggie that were finished being stuffed and boiled. It was as she was making round trips between their room and the rooftop to smoke them.

"Ah, Greed-san. Welcome back!!"

While Cathy was energetically greeting us I asked her, "Is everyone in the dungeon?" and her reply was that everyone would probably return tomorrow.

"Eh? They aren't coming back every day?"

And Gwine asked. I thought the same thing.

"Yeah, it seems that everyone is going down to the 4th floor now.

It sure is amazing right~"

And Cathy smiled while replying.

"So everyone was able to pass through the 3rd floor in a single day? Even the {Exterminators}?"

Miduchi and Gwine were surprised as they talked but if they're going to the 4th floor then that should be the case. Putting that aside, while going up the stairs to the second floor I asked Cathy about something different. This is something I need to confirm.

"Was there any changing of members between groups?"

"There was not. I heard that they had a test at the end of April but.."

He~

"Hn, I see, thanks. After changing we're going to get some lunch but how about it? You still haven't had any right?"

After asking Cathy and she said she still hadn't so we quickly got changed and during that time she, John, and Terry filled up the smoker with sausages. We waited for Angela to come after changing and then went to eat lunch with everyone.

It should be fine to put off the Baldoggies until dinner.

That evening, I don't know where they heard about it but the members of {Gehenna.Flare} came to the Boil Manor to invite Gwine out to drink. She was saying, "We just returned so together with everyone.." but her expression didn't seem discontent as she was getting shy in front of the dwarf named Garun or whatever from {Gehenna.Flare}. Yes-Yes~ I'm so jealous of your popularity among the bearded. Annoying~

"Don't mind us and go enjoy yourself."

We'll enjoy ourselves on our end as well. Cathy, John, and Terry are here and there's also the sausages just made today.

.....

Year 7446, Month 6, Day 5

In the morning I went to my company in the capital and was worked to death going over various fine details and meetings. It started to get troublesome for me having to go to every one of them so I narrowed the candidates down to two places and threw all of the details in regards to the sausage factory contract on to Miduchi and Luke.

In the evening when we returned to Baldukk no one from the {Slaughterers} had returned to the surface. We returned to the inn once thinking "It's still bright out so I guess it'll take a bit more time huh?", then when we returned to the entrance plaza it was just as the {Butchers} came out together with Zulu and were all biting into some Baldoggie sold at the stall. After looking closely Gwine and Angela was with them as well.

After being congratulated by Zulu and the other combat slaves for my safe return, I said "We returned with combat shoes for everyone so come and get them later" before biting into a Baldoggie as well.

While we were doing that the {Exterminators} and then {Slaughterers} returned to the surface as well.

We all exchanged greetings and listening to their stories, after all both teams were able to make it to the 4th floor now so they haven't been returning daily anymore. It seems that the {Butchers} have been since March and the {Exterminators} since May.

Hmm, with this I won't be in the red anymore. That's great.

Also, while it seems they underwent the test to change out members, there still wasn't anyone who passed the stamina test and gained the qualification to challenge someone. Well I'm sure it's impossible in just a few months, as expected.

After that, excluding Zulu who was with the {Butchers} and Toris who was with the {Exterminators}, they reported everything that happened while I was gone to me.

First off the {Exterminators}. It's fine that they've started to go to the 4th floor but after all they're having a hard time clearing through the 4th floor in time, so it seems that it will still a while longer before they can safely go to the 5th floor.

Next up is the {Butchers}. While they managed to clear through to the 4th floor in March, clearing through to the 5th floor in one day is expected to take some time after all.

This is also because of the problem of magic users. After undergoing combat, it's fine when there's not many injuries but if there's quite a few or there's some with serious injuries then they end up using a considerable amount of time recovering mana and depending on the case they may even have to take a break until the pain recedes. Well in some ways you could say it's something that can't be helped.

Finally the {Slaughterers}. While I wasn't around they properly held back on descending into the dungeon down to the 5th floor. I was a bit surprised at this. I could have sworn someone like the gold zombie Ralpa would propose going to the 7th floor.

"I mean..Neither Miduchi nor Al are around..Isn't that impossible if you calmly think about it. After all while you're not around, I have to properly worry about everyone. We can't do anything unreasonable."

And Ralpa said that. Why are you worrying about everyone. I left those sorts of things to Zenom and Toris so it would have been fine if you just lazed around. I thought that for a moment, but come to think of it, I said something random like that to hold back Ralpa who wanted to come along. So she thought I was being serious this entire time..Someone tell her. When I made eye contact with Zenom and Bel who were grinning, I said "Yeah, good work. It seems you've done a good job thinking about everyone." and her face turned to smiles.

After all she's easy. It's really a big help.

After that, Ralpa made a displeased face hearing that Gwine had some armor similar to Angela's made and that I was going to give my old armor to Jesu but after hearing the price she was peeking at Zenom's face. Zenom nodded with a bitter smile but after crossing her arms and thinking, after a short while she didn't say anything more as if she gave up on it.

"Next I'll check to see how much the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} have grown. After that, depending on the situation I might return the {Slaughterers} to our full members and start clearing the 8th floor this month. Everyone, be ready for that to be the case."

I concluded things that night by saying that.

Everyone was probably remembering back to that room on the 8th floor that gave off an eerie atmosphere, and gulp..

Ah, so they were eager. Most of them made expressions like a glare while lifting the sides of their lips. So I was the only one feeling frightened?

Chapter 244: Unexplored Territory 4

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 3

After arriving at the teleport room on the 6th floor in order to recover from the fatigue of today we immediately started making dinner preparations while taking showers in order, and spent time resting our exhausted bodies. And then, soon after we finished meal preparations and everyone had a slightly late dinner. After our meals the slaves who still hadn't taken showers took theirs in order while we relaxed and enjoyed some tea.

Tomorrow we'll clear through the 7th floor before noon and no matter how late we are we should defeat the Minotaur and arrive at the teleport room on the 8th floor by evening, then after we finish setting up the base we'll return to the surface once. I'll give out any necessary instructions and as soon as possible we'll return to the 8th floor again to start investigating the revival cycle of the Minotaur. On that occasion I intend to spend at least one week there.

After all around the 25th of this month the Donneoru family will appear to shift places with the Ryogu family from Bakuddo and I also want to get the sausage factory operating before that. I've already made arrangements for the slaves that will be working there but it seems it's difficult to gather ones that meet the conditions and Madam.Ronslail is having some trouble as well. Well, it's fine since there's no need to hurry in regards to the slaves though.

However, after getting the factory operating it's necessary for Basutorial and Cathy to stick to it for half a month or so. Since I want to make my plans early on I'm a bit unsatisfied over how difficult it's been to fill in the schedule.

"Now then, we have to get up early tomorrow so shall we get some rest soon?"

After someone says that we naturally decide to sleep. Although, tomorrow we only have the 7th and 8th floors so looking at it with a bit more leeway in our schedule than usual it'll take about 6.5 hours. The current time is about 11 pm so after all we should get to sleep soon.

Just in case the first lookout was Toris and Giberuti, then next is Zulu and Gwine, then after that is Ralpa and Angela, and finally was Bel and Giberuti one more time. Since we never know when {Verdure.Brotherhood} might arrive, we definitely have at least one member who can use magic awake. We're inside of the dungeon and it's not like I completely trust them after all. The reason I split up Ralpa and Gwine was my conscience.

Then~ good night.

.....

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 4

"..up. Master, please wake up."

I was shaken awake. It's Giberuti.

"Hn?"

"It's {Verdure.Brotherhood}. Right now Kalstalan-sama is dealing with them."

..Dealing?

What is it, really~

How troublesome~

I quietly crawl out of my blanket and just in case put my under armor on before looking at Toris standing in the center of the room while still barefoot.

It seems the two old men Viruhaima and Basu are talking to Toris about something. After putting my hand to the clock magic tool and confirming the time it was just before 1 am. It's just a short while before the first shift of lookouts ends. I told Giberuti, "Just in case wake up Zulu and Gwine." before standing up and went to the bench made of dirt before sitting down on it.

Obviously Toris noticed that I had woken up. If it's a discussion that requires me then he would have called for me I'm sure. I sat down on the bench picking my nose and resisting yawns while watching Toris's back.

But, soon after Toris returned after finishing his talk with Viruhaima and the others.

"It seems they're going to setup camp over there. After that they asked if they can borrow the shower so I gave them permission as long as we still have priority use on it."

Ah, I see. It's good it wasn't anything troublesome.

"Nn, I see. Got it. Then, it's fine if I go back to sleep once more right?"

While Zulu and Gwine were waking up and getting ready I fell back to sleep again.

And then, the next morning I woke up a bit late and heard that the {Verdure.Brotherhood} triumphantly departed for the 7th floor a short while prior, and felt a bit unpleasant that we were beaten to it. But, after getting back to things we departed for the 7th floor as well. And then, we encountered the {Verdure.Brotherhood} surrounded by the maximum number of 5 ogres in the passage, while none of them had died they were on the verge of collapse, and saved them from their crisis. After healing Viruhaima who had suffered some serious injuries, we brought them back to their teleport location without requesting anything major in return and having his heart moved, the old man even started shedding tears for up until..And I was woken up again by Giberuti. Like we'd so conveniently run into them that often~

"We're you seeing a dream? You were making a very happy looking face."

I felt a bit uncomfortable as Giberuti apologized to me with a very sorry face.

"Is that so? I can't remember what I was dreaming."

It was my limit to make a bitter smile while replying like that.

On my way to the shower room to get refreshed I looked at {Verdure.Brotherhood}'s camp and saw the old Wolf-person woman keeping lookout alone while everyone else seemed to be sleeping. It can't be helped worrying about the sounds of water so I just took a normal hot water shower and then switched over to cold water to relieve the tension and completely wake myself up, then put my equipment on.

I had an extra Baldoggie made for breakfast to have as a hotdog and after thinning out the wine in my wood cup with a bit of water I went to around the center of the room. I called over the Wolf-person who was keeping lookout while she was watching my movements.

"Thanks for your work. Kamushu-san. I don't know if it meets your taste but if you'd like please have this."

I smiled and handed the entire plate of food over to the Wolf-person who was looking suspiciously over here.

"Eh? Is it fine? Sorry about that. I can't resist these either~"

Kamushu narrowed her eyes while taking the hotdog and happily returned my smile.

"Is that so, then that's great. Ah, it's fine if you just return the plate and cup at anytime later."

"Thanks. I'm happy. After that it's fine if you call me Julie."

Julie said that while smiling and started stuffing her mouth with the delicious looking Baldoggie right away.

"Well then, Julie-san. We're going to head out pretty soon so please excuse me."

"Yeah, stay safe."

When I returned to the camp of the {Slaughterers} everyone was in the middle of breakfast. I quickly finished my breakfast and after everyone confirmed their equipment, we picked up our inflated rucksacks.

"Alright, no one is forgetting anything. Let's go, Mutoreoki!"

.....

We finally arrived at the final room on the 8th floor in front of the 2 km in diameter area in the center where the Anti-Skill Area spreads out.

We advanced forward thinking it was close and after reaching the point where Miduchi's {Party-ization} was released, we all took a short break in a circle so we could see what's going on behind each other.

"Giberuti, you wait on standby here. Look after all of our bags.

Just as I said before, a short while after we continue ahead from here and all around that area lightning will continue to fall. At the same time the room will get bright like the 7th floor. Just remain calm and wait without getting surprised. After the lightning disappeared we'll come and get you."

"Yes, I understand, master."

We all put down the rucksacks we were carrying and after gathering them in the shadow of the rock where Giberuti is waiting, we had a drink. We confirmed our equipment once more and after checking that there was no problem we took a rest for a further 10 minutes while simply going over the plan.

"We'll move with {Arrowhead.One} and until hostilities open we'll move with a basic 5 meter interval. The moment the Minotaur enters our sight the battle starts. Alright?"

I said that while looking around that everyone nodded and then continued.

"We've fought it before and if we all go at it there's no doubt about it, if we just keep focusing fire consecutively on it I think we can defeat it. There's no reason why we would struggle. The problem is.."

Gwine gulped and swallowed her saliva.

"In the case that there's more than one of them. In this case, I'll take on one alone. If there's two enemies then if everyone fights the remaining one I'm sure you can defeat it without any trouble at all. Backing me up will make it in plenty of time after that I'm sure and if the enemies power isn't any different from before then

I think I can defeat one alone."

Everyone was quietly listening to what I said.

"If there's three or four of them then I think we'll probably be fine. If the tanks {Shield.Holder}'s Zulu and Toris hold out. If it seems you can defeat them then I don't mind but it's fine if you just keep holding out as well."

Along with buying her new armor I told Angela that it's fine if she doesn't use the shield. In the first place she often forgets about the existence of her shield after all. Her current armor is one designed under the supervision of the Dokshu family of Bakuddo with the aim of fighting against animals and monsters so it doesn't take a shield into consideration. In exchange similar to my own it has a number of metal bars embedded into the gauntlets of the arms and the left fist is surrounded in rubber so you can punch with all your strength. Of course the surface is ebonite.

"If there's even more than that then we'll construct a front centering around me with Toris and Zulu, Ralpa and Angela standing at the front line. In this case, Zenom make skillful use of the axe. The front line should focus more on maintaining the front through defense than attack. In other words other than having Zenom move to the back it's roughly the same as usual."

"What about in the case that the opponent isn't a Minotaur?"

Miduchi interjected with a question. Hearing that Ralpa, Gwine, Zulu, and Angela all looked at her with admiration. I was just about to say it now as well.

"In that case it depends on the enemy. If it seems like we can defeat it then we'll go just like that, if it seems dangerous then I'll give out orders for changing the battle formation."

Certainly if it's an unknown monster then it'd be troublesome but if there isn't a large number of enemies then we'll probably be fine. In the worst case, while we're all enduring at the front Zenom can lead the rear and defeat them. In any case as long as that cage of lightning bolts is coming down, we can't retreat.

Now then, let's get into formation and depart.

We made the battle formation {Arrowhead.One} with my at the lead and started advancing.

Soon after Miduchi's {Party-ization} was released and everyone understood that we had entered the Anti-Skill Area.

"It's about time."

Gwine gave the signal.

In another 100 meters or so we'll arrive at the pillar.

I turned around once and after nodding as if to say "It's alright, we can definitely win." to everyone, I turned around again and started forward.

And then, somehow the moment the Minotaur(it was the same and just one of them. That's great) entered our sight the sound like the atmosphere was being torn happened as the cage of lightning bolts was made and the ceiling rapidly started giving off light.

"Let's go!!"

It's time for battle. Along with a battle cry I lowered my stance with the bayonet and then charged ahead at full speed.

Obviously the Minotaur has noticed us and is standing ready with it's {trident}.

"Buooo~!! Goo~daaa~!!"

Shut~up. Wouldn't a female one come out soon?

I knocked up the trident the Minotaur thrust towards me and after ducking under the handle I smashed the gun stock into the kneecap of it's right leg.

When it's stance collapsed thanks to that arrows shot my Bel and Miduchi stabbed into it.

The one that hit it in the face was probably Bel.

The other one stabbed into it's chest.

As the Minotaur fell even more off stance Zulu and Toris charged in a body slammed it with their shields.

Ah.

As the Minotaur fell backwards onto the ground Zenom's axe stabbed into it's groin.

"Gaoooo~!!!"

It's over.

The Minotaur let go of it's trident and started rolling around holding it's groin.

The axe has already returned to Zenom's hand.

Ralpha and Angela were both swinging their weapons and beating it to death.

The Minotaur quickly died and the cage of lightning bolts disappeared.

The value of the magic stone was the usual 30,000.

It's hard to call the trident a high quality item as well and was just normal.

..Somehow it seems they're gradually getting worse.

I quickly sent someone to get Giberuti before entering the teleport crystal room. Looking around inside it was still in the same condition as before. I guess there's no change here?

We went through quite a bit of labor to carry our bags inside and started making the kitchen area but there we were suddenly troubled. We use water for the cooking, cleaning, and showers but up until now we've either gone and thrown it away a bit of distance or the shower we've made use of inclinations to have it drain outside of the room.

"How about raising the floor of the room excluding 1 meter or so around the teleport crystal?"

And I decided to go with a variety of Miduchi's idea. It would be troublesome trying to do that entirely so I decided to make a raised-floor of about 50 cm over a 5 meter area in one of the inner corners to use as our living space. I decided on different corners for the kitchen and shower and made raised-floors there as well. The floor will get dirty but it's fine as long as we have a clean place. It's under the premise that we'll go outside to throw away just the drainage from cooking and cleaning. In regards to that we can just let it build up and after we finish off the Minotaur we can go out and throw it away. We need a lot more buckets. In regards to the toilet..this needs to go outside as well. I guess there's no choice but to have someone go with and guard you like when doing it in the dungeon halls huh? Well, if we can just get a grasp on the cycle of revival for the Minotaur then it shouldn't be much of a problem. Depending on the case it might be good to make the toilet and shower in the shadow of a rock around 100-200 meters away from the pillar this teleport room is as well. After everyone put out some ideas and we decided on the general outline, we decided to return to the surface once. There's also the report to the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} and the matter of the factory as well. I need to quickly finish up things in relation to that and then we'll come back carrying more materials again.

There's a mountain of things to do.

Chapter 245): Bulk Slave Purchase

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 4

After we returned to the surface in the evening we joined up with the other members of the {Slaughterers} and handed the other customers in Murowa some silver Shu to drive them(There was even 12 of them. That's 30,000 Z. Shit) and then after reserving the store we started talking about the 8th and 9th floors.

"And then, this is the magic stone we took from the first Minotaur."

I roll the considerably white magic stone on the table. It's a quality item that's several times more white than those of ogres so everyone raised their voices in surprise. Even I've only ever seen magic stones better than this from the earthworm and that eyeball bastard.

"Also, this is the battle axe that the first Minotaur was holding.

And, this is the {bardiche} that the one was was holding, and the {trident} from today."

Following that I put the high quality battle axe and other weapons on the table.

"Oh~ it's white."

"This battle axe is of an amazing quality."

"I've seen that degree of color before but it's so white that it's unbelievable it's from just a single monster."

"It's a surprising whiteness."

"{Status Open}..Amazing, a singular stone huh~"

"Let me see it for a bit..Ho~ certainly this is.."

""Ready~go, congratulations, master!""

"If it's something of this high of a quality isn't a waste to sell it?"

"Certainly..it's not like they're troubled for money after all~"

"I've never heard of a Minotaur before but is it strong?"

"Well it does have this much of a magic stone. It's probably absurdly strong, thinking with common sense."

"However, the 9th floor huh..It's difficult to believe but looking at this and.."

"~A double-edged battle axe? Is it..It's a wazamono indeed."

After watching everyone make a racket for a while I continued talking.

"I intend on showing his majesty that battle axe and magic stone on the occasion I report that we cleared through the 8th floor. Sorry but if he says to give it to him then I intend on presenting it to the royal family...Sorry about that, Kevin. That's why if you want to look at it then look all you can now. Though I say that, I'll be showing it to him when the caravan from Bakuddo arrives."

Since I started talking again everyone went silent.

"For the time being until then we the {Slaughterers} will be carrying materials in to the teleport room on the 8th floor to make it into a base. Sorry but hold out for a bit longer. Also, Basutoral, tomorrow you and Cathy come along with me to look at the slaves who will be working in the factory."

"Eh? But didn't they still not finish gathering the number.."

"Yeah, but we can't wait until they finish gathering them. Even if it's a bit few let's get things running by the end of this month.

There's no meaning letting them do nothing after all. And, starting the day after tomorrow I want you to start making preparations with the slaves to get the factory operating."

"I understand."

"Cathy you help him out as well."

"Yeah, of course. But, what should we do about John and Terry?"

Cathy has been taking good care of John and Terry so I'm sure she's worried about them.

"The day after tomorrow when you make preparations for the factory in the capital prepare rooms for them along with the other slaves."

"Yes."

Cathy who smiled while replying somehow was making a face like their mother.

Though thinking about her age I guess she'd be an older sister.

.....

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 5

The next morning, after finishing running and having breakfast, I went to "Slave Store, Ronslail" together with the Basutorial couple. After going through the basic greetings I asked what the progress was on the number of people they've gathered.

"I'm very sorry, Greed-sama. It's still only 5 boys and 6 girls.

There's others who meet the conditions to be candidates a total of 5 boys and 4 girls but those ones still haven't been properly disciplined so we can't hand them over yet."

11 people huh? It's still far from the 10 of each boys and girls that I was thinking but it can't be helped. Rather~ that's plenty.

"..Nn, well I still haven't decided to buy all of them. Basutorial, Cathy, go further inside and take a look at them. That's fine right?"

"Of course it is..Erenogu, let them through."

Madam.Ronslail ordered her head clerk and being lead by the head clerk Basutorial and Cathy disappeared into the back room. Ah, I need to say this.

"If you two think that they'll be easy to use then it's fine to decide based on that. If you talk to them and feel they don't match up in personality, then you don't need to push yourselves to buy them."

When I said that the Madam made a slightly difficult face but I guess she quickly regained confidence in her own companies training and judgement and nodded as if it was only obvious. Well, if they meet the conditions and they're fine then I have nothing more to say.

"How far has their training gone? Also, you've already confirmed the condition I gave at the start right?"

Just in case I said that but on my hand I have no doubts about the degree of training.

"All of the slaves we have prepared right now meet the conditions that Greed-sama mentioned. However..that is..I might be asking something a bit too personal but are you thinking about selling the children? If that is the case then it's fine even if you aren't that thorough."

I see now, selling the children indeed. So that's how it was taken?

Even I who has long since been dyed in the social ranking based society didn't think as far as raising a slaves child up to a certain age and then splitting them up to sell. I haven't fallen that far. It's a different reason from John and Terry who I bought as future candidates for managing the factories. However, if it's taken like that then that itself is convenient. I'm sure it'll be a good cover. There's also the reason that I might eventually take them to the foreign country that will be my territory in the future but even if I say something like that now it would be unpleasant being slandered as "someone in over their head". It's still better to be thought of as a brute.

"Now then, that far is..However, even if the price is a bit high I definitely won't yield on this condition."

"Well, that is fine because it doesn't cost much to investigate the family relationships of slaves but..It seems I said something too forward.."

"No, please don't mind it. Depending on the case I thought it would be good work just searching for slaves that meet the conditions, so I don't mind paying compensation that matches up with that."

"It was a bit of trouble but it's not as if it was that difficult at all. If you were to ask which because it was limited to a single race, it was just troubling on that point. It ended up being Hyumu race which were easy to gather though"

The madam replied while smiling a bit.

"Hahha. Even then for you to gather over 10 people in this short period of time, I lower my head to Ronlail Company's purchasing power."

Honestly speaking I was a bit surprised that she was able to gather a considerable number. I thought it would be at best 2-3 people. If we include the number that still hasn't finished their training then hasn't she already finished gathering the 10 each male and female that I request?

The conditions I gave her were:

1. Estranged from parents and siblings (The minimum condition was that they were separated during childhood and after that if they have lack of relation it's even better).
2. Unmarried and furthermore if they're female that they don't have any experience giving birth.
3. If they can just endure some light manual labor then it's fine if they have somewhat of an impairment.
4. The lower limit is 10 years old and the upper limit is 14 years old before adulthood.
5. It's fine if they're any race but all of them have to be of the same race.
6. That they were properly trained as slaves.

those six. However, it seems she was easily able to gather them through the slave merchant network.

I can place my faith in Madam.Ronslail based on the business deals up until now so at the very least I'm sure she wouldn't intentionally try to sell me slaves that don't meet the conditions.

Honestly speaking, my feelings of buying and selling people when dealing in slaves are pretty weak. I'm more or less just going about it as if I'm hiring employees with various settings and conditions to them. Though I say that, I still have the resolve to properly take full responsibility for their lives as well. Since they're still called slaves you could say they're my individual assets and if it's their fate to belong to me then it's an obligation of a master to prepare a decent happiness for them.

Fundamentally at least half of them(most likely more though) I intend to have accompany me to my territory in the future so it would be pitiful if they have relatives...It's too embarrassing, like I could say something like that. There's technically some other reasons as well but those are fine for now. Also, I don't think it's all that bad to provide a proper place of employment for slaves that are almost like orphans.

"Then, I'll take a look at them as well. Even if I'm having them live in the capital I want to at least get a look at their faces."

After being let through into the back Basutorial and Cathy were asking various questions with a serious face. They were mostly just stupid questions so the details didn't really matter. I already told them that in the future it's possible we could go to my territory and that's why I have no conditions so I'm sure there's a lot of things they wanted to confirm. Particularly Cathy since she was the one who was going to be interacting with them the most her expression was considerably serious. Basutorial was probably worrying about his wife as well. Though that's not the entire reason but one part of why we limited their age to children as well.

"How are they?"

"Ah, I think they're fine."

Basutorial said. Since this guy didn't reject anyone Cathy seems fine as well.

A total of 11 of both girls and boys. Just as I requested they're all Hyumu race ages 10 years old to 14 years old.

However, their nutrition condition was probably not very good. It seems like their meals were improved but everyone gives off a somehow thin feel.

There was even some that were making slightly frightened expressions seeing the trained builds of Basutorial and I.

"Ronslail-san. Please allow me to purchase all of them. What is the price?"

It seems there was some difference between all of them but they were around 1,200,000 to 1,500,000 each. For all 11 of them it was 14,200,000 Z. It seems she's properly taking profit this time.

After paying 14 gold coins and 1 gold Shu, I received silver coins in change along with the proof of sale and said that I would stop by tomorrow morning to pick them up before we left the store.

.....

After returning to Boil Manor no one was around so I guessed from the time that they were probably having lunch but it's a pain searching for everyone every time. Since John and Terry weren't waiting in front of the inn they probably were brought along as well. It couldn't be helped so we decided to go to a new restaurant for lunch with just the three of us. In the afternoon we have combined training just like that so Basutorial and I brought along our armor and practice weapons.

We entered a place with a strange name like The Chicken Tree. The appearance of the place was decent, on the better end of the scale, and the cooking wasn't bad either. It's a fault that it's a bit far from Boil Manor. I just had a random daily lunch set but it was considerably satisfying and it was quite the good service that you can even drink your fill in after-meal tea for free. If I get bored of the places nearby it might not be bad to walk this far, the three of us were talking about things like that.

"Hey, that, isn't it the {Slaughterers}.."

"Yeah, that's right. I've seen them before as well, it's Greed."

"I've seen that Cat-person before as well."

"He's a member."

"That woman, I feel like somewhere.."

"Idiot, it's way beyond that~ it seems they went to the 9th floor the other day. There's someone who heard them talking about it."

"9th floor? That's a lie right? Did they exceed the founding King?"

"If the 9th floor was true then that would be the case.

Amazing~"

Ohho~ So it's already become a rumor huh? Praise us some more, bow down before, and respect us. Uhi~hyo. However, the three of us just casually continued talking about the factory while eating lunch without showing any feelings like that, and after properly drinking down the tea we paid the bill and left the restaurant.

"It seems rumors about it are already spreading around."

Basutorial said while grinning a bit when we left the store. Cathy seemed a bit happy as well. I tried my best to smooth over my expression while saying, "That's right. It was this sort of feeling when we went to the 6th and 7th floors as well. It probably isn't mentioned every time but when we went to the 8th floor I'm sure the information about the troll's magic stones was revealed by the old man from the magic tool shop as well. There's no doubt it was said that we had gone to the 8th floor within two weeks from that." and said with a calm face.

Just because the 9th floor is even more of a sensational story than that I'm sure it'll spread around among the adventurers in no time at all. Though I say that, it seems those guys in the restaurant have considerably fast ears as well.

Just watch, eventually I'll find a valuable {Magic.Item} that everyone is envious of and become a high ranking noble(one with a self-governing territory) after all. And then, while keeping an eye on the period I'll go independent as soon as possible. When it comes to that, I'm sure the rumors will fly around filled with exaggeration again. My fame will rise and it will be even easier for people and goods to gather. The game will come after that.

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 6

After seeing off the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} into the dungeon, accompanied by the Basutorial couple I went to "Slave Store, Ronslail". After receiving the slaves along with the proof of sale, we went to the temple and had them perform the naming ceremony before heading to the capital.

Just in case we pushed the meat mincers that we had made into the cart we prepared for today and tomorrow and then the Basutorial couple sat in the coachman's seat. The slaves are walking being lead by Zulu, Angela, and Giberuti but this can't be helped. In reality it will take time to travel like this so I wanted to put them on the cart as well but including the first meat mincer we had in Basutorial's room there's a total of 5 of them and also a mountain of preservatives so it was impossible.

After arriving in the capital it's only obvious that there's preparations for getting the factory operating but I need to go with Cathy to greet the various companies that we'll be buying ingredients from and I need to show my face at the dark elf healer's place where we're buying the preservatives from as well. It's also necessary to secure an inn for the slaves.

"If possible I want to return tonight but it's also possible I won't be able to return. Just relax and wait without worrying too much."

After saying that to Zenom and Toris, Miduchi and I each got on our war horses. Basutorial is the one driving the cart. Cathy is next to Basutorial.

I told John and Terry, "You two are the greatest seniors right now. Make sure you do a proper job teaching them." when I introduced the new slaves I also made sure to tell them to properly listen to their seniors.

Along the way, a plenty number of Baldoggie that we had in our bento as well as the ones intended to be distributed as samples were prepared by Cathy, John, and Terry yesterday afternoon.

"Alright, let's go."

It's time to depart.

Chapter 246: Sausage Factory

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 6

A short while after we descended from the outer crater of Baldukk we took a break for lunch.

Around 10 minutes after putting Baldoggie into boiling water. After they've gotten plenty hot we put them on some rolled bread with a slice in the middle along with mayonnaise, mustard, and sauerkraut, before handing one to each person.

All of the newly purchased slaves ate as if they were devouring them.

"Hey, don't hurry and slowly eat it. There's still some left."

"If you're hungry then there's still seconds."

"Oh, was the mustard too strong? Sorry about that. I'll give you a new one."

"Your legs have started to hurt..here, it's gotten a bit better right?"

Zulu, Angela, Cathy, and Miduchi were heroically looking after the trouble of the children.

John and Terry have already built up enough stamina that this level of march is nothing and they're wearing rubber sandals so they were helping Giberuti make hotdogs and preparing the beans for tea.

We make a deep bean tea and then after floating a lot of ice inside of it the ice tea is made, it's the obvious choice for drinking in the summer.

I was discussing with Basutorial the arrangement of the meat mincers in the factory.

He must have given it his best to carefully draw it.

He was showing me a layout plan of the factory while saying "I thought cleaning would be troublesome if we were to place them here or here." and I was nodding while listening before just saying,

"That's fine".

We spent 5 hours crossing the roughly 10 km route with breaks in between and when we finally arrived at Greed Company in the capital it was past 3 pm.

We already guessed that moving would take some time that's why I was thinking of having everyone ride the passenger carriage but including Zulu all of my slaves said, "The start is crucial" so we did it this way.

I see, if you all are going to say that then it can't be helped, and making them walk was the mistake.

All of the brats are worn out.

Though John and Terry are fine.

I guess because it's hot out during this season, there was no one outside of the store.

We stopped our horses and tied them up before entering the always open door.

"Ah, president! Welcome!"

Anna cheerfully greeted us while Hanna called out as well.

Soon after Luke and Leila appeared to greet us.

Both of them were covered in sweat and their hands were dirty as well. They must have been counting the inventory.

It's about time for the move so I told them to properly grasp the amount of inventory and make of list of it.

"Luke, I prepared the slaves that will be working at the factory.

Have you already found a good inn?"

"Yeah, I've already discussed it with them. Just in case they're split up into two locations though.."

"Yeah, that's fine. Basutorial. Go together with Cathy and look at the inns. If there's no problem then I don't mind if you enter a contract just like that. It's fine for you to adequately decide which one will be used by the boys or how to split up the rooms and such."

After saying that far I looked around inside of the store a bit and looked for a place I could fit everyone inside.

The corners of the store are already filled with luggage and boxes ready for the move so I thought it would be troublesome if they couldn't fit.

That, it's probably winter clothes.

Rather than Bakuddo there's a lot more cheaper things in the capital after all.

Since the Ryogu's are paid quite a bit I'm sure they purchased a good amount of stuff.

Incidentally the wages are 500,000 Z a month for the head clerk Rozural, 300,000 Z a month for Wendy the sales clerk, and then 250,000 Z a month each for Dianne and her husband Luke. Honestly speaking for a single family this income(1,300,000 Z monthly income) is most likely the highest in Bakuddo excluding the family of hunters.

I don't think even our house dealt with this much money before we started the rubber business.

For reference the youngest daughter of the Ryogu family, Sonia makes 20,000 Z a month as the maid of our household.

It should have been about the same for Myun as well.

There's a large difference between farming villages and cities almost like Shanghai on Earth.

These wages are something decided with permission from brother.

It's something like a bonus for the squire family that goes to the capital every two years and limited to just a measure for a squire family from Bakuddo to be employed by Greed Company.

Things like letting them take days off and go on trips through the capital of surrounding areas, we're urging them somewhat forcefully to use the money but this is largely to increase the amount of knowledge the squires have as well.

With this it's almost like I'm buying a favor for them to transfer to the capital but it's extremely important for me to have someone

I can relax and trust from Bakuddo living in the capital.

Well, along with that there's the wages for the Yotlen family and some miscellaneous expenses like the Bell Street shop association fees which cost me 2,000,000 Z a month even if we do nothing at all though. That can't be helped.

If we can properly get the sausage factory operating and after removing the expenses 40% of the profits become my income then about half of the expenses listed above should be taken care of, if you were to ask me I'd like to just get the sausage factory on track right away.

I let the newly purchased slaves into the store and had them exchange greetings in order.

"Al-sama, aren't they just children...Is that fine?"

Luke was saying out of concern but adults are just a bit..After all the one managing them for the time being is just Cathy. You could say them being younger than her was an absolute condition. Putting aside Cathy that way Basutorial can relax as well.

"I see now..If you put it that way then, I guess so. Their master is no one other than Al-sama after all."

Luke said it made sense and nodded as well.

"For a short while, have someone eat meals together with the slaves. I don't mind if you take the cost of the meals out as an expense. But, it's not like they're going to be living together with me after all...It's necessary for them to learn how to use money...Starting tomorrow all the way until next week give each of them 500, no, 600 Z a day. The week after that make it 4,000 Z per week. If there's anyone who uses up all of it then it's fine to give them 1,000 Z but on the next week subtract 1,000 Z. Starting next month I guess it's fine to pay weekly as well..Well, I guess it is. I'm leaving it to you."

"Yes, please leave it to me. I'll hand it over to the Donneoru family when they come at the end of the month as well."

A 20,000 Z monthly salary huh? Honestly when it comes to living in Rombertia then including meals it's barely enough.

However, either way we'll be providing Baldoggie as the large portion of their lunch meals.

Even if I say that's no good I'm sure Cathy would pay out of her own pocket to feed them so I'm not going to forbid it.

If we just leave it alone then eventually I'm sure one of the sharper ones will cover up the amount of meat and make some all on their own to eat.

It would be boring if there wasn't at least someone who does that.

On the contrary it should be fine if I just tell Cathy to ignore it as long as it doesn't get too bad.

However, if they start to monopolize it or aren't sharing them among the group then I won't show any mercy. Also bullying, that's no mercy. I think just that I won't forgive. I need to mention it later.

While waiting for the return of the Basutoral couple, since it can't be helped wasting time Miduchi and I went to the healer managed by the dark elf Tukerin or whatever to offer greetings.

There was a considerable number of patients in the healer waiting for their treatment. This could take some time, I thought. However, Miduchi whispered something to the dark elf receptionists and was allowed through to the back right away.

But, just I was made to wait in the room outside for a short while.

Miduchi said, "Tukerin-san thinks it's something that has to do with the internal affairs of Lail Kingdom. I need to go and explain some appropriate reason for it so I think you'll be waiting for a short while. It's fine if you don't force yourself to say anything other than greetings. Though it's fine if you talk as well." so I just quietly waited outside.

During that time the dark elf that seemed like an employee was by my side and no matter what wasn't taking their eyes off me.

In a few minutes Miduchi called out from inside of the room so I lowered my head while entering and the middle-aged dark elf that was sitting in the chair was observing me from the top of my head to the tips of my toes while pointing to a chair with no expression so I said, "Excuse me." and took a seat next to Miduchi. Before I could say any greetings Miduchi said, "Previously, I think you've met before but he's sub-Noble Greed. He's someone who is absolutely necessary so.." and said that. What's that? and shortly after thinking that, "It's been a while since we last met..sub-Noble Greed was it? We're both his majesty's..alike, I won't hold back in my cooperation." said that to me. I have no idea what it's about but it would probably be best to match up with what he says here. Rather~ his majesty the King's whatever or other alike part I couldn't understand at all. "For me as well, it's been a while since we last met, Tukerin-san. I've heard many things about you from Chizumagurol. Last year we were greatly in your care. I'm grateful for your continued cooperation." And said while stretching out my right hand. We both shook hands while confirming our status. Level 14 huh? He's considerably high even though he's not an adventurer. After that we exchanged greetings on the surface and after explaining things about the factory ended the conversation at an appropriate time before returning.

When we returned to the store, soon after the Basutorial couple returned as well.

Right away, we decided to bring along the slaves to the factory.

In a hurry we setup the mincer just as Basutorial instructed. The factory already had desks, buckets, and a large smoker prepared.

After that all we need is the stove magic tool, magic stones, pork, spices and ingredients and we can start operations right away. I intend to go to the magic tool shop Splendor tomorrow to buy the stove magic tool.

I really wanted to go today but I didn't know what size would be needed so it was necessary to take measurements.

Zulu and Angela were a great help doing the work of trying to setup the heavy mincer in the sweltering heat. I'm really glad I brought them along. Basutorial and Giberuti were making difficult faces while looking at the layout of the factory and discussing something. Cathy was giving a simple explanation to the slaves of what they'll be doing. Miduchi and I were holding strings and tying knots to measure things under Basutorial and Giberuti's instructions.

While doing those sorts of things it started to get dark out. It's impossible if we don't turn on some lights soon but let alone lighting magic tools we still hadn't bought any lamps.

Incidentally this factory has two rooms that are about 4.5 tatami mats each attached to it and I intend to have John and Terry live there as night guards.

After throwing their change of clothes and few belongings into there, we all went out for dinner.

We entered a random restaurant and got some meals.

This time we chose a place that was close to the bottom matching up to the wages of the slaves.

The price was around 300 Z per person a decent amount.

We discussed the treatment of slaves under me while eating.

The compensation of 20,000 Z per month starting next month. However it's paid weekly. If they work seriously then they could get a raise at the start of the new year.

Tomorrow we'll go to buy daily necessities for them. Each person gets three changes of clothes. Underwear is one weeks worth of six pairs.

Other things like towels and bathing tools will be purchased for each person.

I discussed things like that and finally added one more comment at the end.

"Everyone, listen carefully to the things Cathy says and get along with each other. Also, it's fine if you get into fights but do it fairly one on one. I absolutely won't forgive just hiding and bullying behind someones back. Anyone who knows about it and remains quiet is equally guilty. If there's someone who gets bullied say something right away. If there's someone unpleasant than properly say what about them is unpleasant to the person. If they don't fix it from that then it's fine to come and mention it to Cathy or anyone else in the company so make sure I hear about it. Alright, don't misunderstand. First off properly say things to each other. Don't come and tell things to Cathy and I without saying anything to them. This is absolute. Alright."

I looked at each of their faces one after another while putting emphasis on it.

It seems they understood so after having some tea we crammed them into their inns.

We returned John and Terry to the factory but it's summer and they get private rooms, so I told them to endure with just a towel until we can buy beds tomorrow.

.....

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 7

Today is Tanabata.

But something like that is unrelated.

We're running around shopping since early in the morning.

The change of clothes and underwear, daily necessitates, I left to Miduchi and Cathy, I went to buy the remaining stove and after setting that up went to buy a huge pot.

After that we went to the companies that we had been negotiating with from before and stocked up on pork along with the pig's bowels.

We're going to be buying from a total of six dealers. The spices and such was plenty dealing with just one specialized dealer.

We're also negotiating to increase the amount of kazotto(analogue cheese) as well.

Since they didn't produce a large amount in the first place if they were to sell all the amount we've requested they won't have enough to provide to others.

It was necessary to lower our heads to get them to sell as much as they can.

After letting them eat a Baldoggie simple with Kazotto inside of it doubling the amount they were selling us was the limit.

If it's this stock amount then we probably can't make very much, I wonder if it will become a popular product with a premium feel?

Also we gained the prospect of stocking up on catgut from livestock while negotiating for the other stuff.

With this not just Frankfurt size but we might be able to make the easier to eat Vienna size as well.

Ah, I wonder if that means I'll have to make the mouthpiece for the catgut size...Seriously, that's a pain in the ass...

In a hurry we finished up with everything.

Everything that had a fixed price and could be paid like the inn fees I paid for three months ahead and already finished negotiations on the meat and other ingredients that will be paid for whenever they're delivered to the head office of the company.

In reality I wanted to return to Baldukk today but it was impossible.

Tomorrow we'll quickly return and then we need to buy the required materials for making the teleport room on the 8th floor into a base.

Also, I intend to leave the deliveries of the Baldoggie from the factory to the cart we have in the entrance plaza to Murowa so I still need to go over the fine details of that. In that case the dungeon won't be until the day after tomorrow huh?

However, with this everything troublesome for the time being is..there was the move and deliveries to the knight group at the end of the month...

At that time I need to report that we cleared the 8th floor and started advancing into the 9th floor as well.

However, something like that will end in a single day.

The really troublesome stuff is transferring over the company work and the initial operation of the sausage factory huh...

Just in case brother and the others intend to stay in the capital for about two weeks to help out with transferring over the positions and such but..there's a lot of stuff that is no good if

I'm not around after all~

Like reporting to the government office, I'm sure that will eat up some time waiting in line.

Though I say that once that stuff is over it's really the end of the troublesome stuff, I can see the hope.

Here is a time to hold out.

Chapter 247: Investigation Start

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 8

In the morning, when I was having breakfast together with the Ryogu family and Basutorial couple we discussed things for the time being. First off, after I finish eating I'm returning to Baldukk right away. Next up we're leaving Cathy towards the test operation of the factory next week. And then, at the end of this week we'll just send back Giberuti from the dungeon and have him act as advisor to Cathy.

"Starting tomorrow I'll be in the dungeon for at least 10 days.

Once I leave I'll come by once to check on things."

We'll enter the dungeon again starting tomorrow(if the remaining members paid attention and have already finished buying the materials then it'll be when we return today after taking a break around noon though) and it's necessary to finish up making the 8th floor into base.

"After that we'll be going back into the dungeon again right away though. And then, around the time we leave..Umm, around three weeks later brother should come as well. Then since there's a lot of things to do I think I'll be staying over here for about one week."

I told them my general plan. Furthermore, I gave out instructions to provide the slaves with rubber sandals and while discussing other fine details breakfast ended in no time at all. After that we returned to the store and after waiting for Zulu and the others who were eating with the slaves to come back we returned. When we went to depart and split ways Basutorial and Cathy kissed. How nice, being young. It feels bittersweet.

"What are..you doing?"

I said to Miduchi. Stop biting your finger. It's shameful.

The four other than Miduchi and I are riding the carriage we borrowed in Baldukk. With the Ryogu family and Cathy waving as they saw us off we left Rombertia.

.....

Quickly returning we arrived at Baldukk just before 10 am. After returning the carriage and going to Boil Manor it was just as Zenom and Toris came back carrying a lot of bags. Oh~ they sure are helpful.

"Welcome back, Al-san. We've already prepared all of the materials.

If we just purchase the food then it's all done. Bel and the others went to buy that stuff."

"Nn..I see. Then I'm heading off to Murowa to discuss the matter with the cart. After everyone has gathered prepare the equipment and wait at the entrance plaza...Ah that's right, Giberuti, take my armor from Miduchi and hand it to Zulu. Just have Zulu wait in the entrance plaza with it."

After leaving my horse in the stables I gave instructions to Giberuti for just Zulu to remain while they all go ahead.

"Everyone go ahead in the dungeon. There's no need to wait for me along the way. We'll meet at the teleport room on the 3rd floor."

Hearing that Zenom and Toris immediately went to their rooms and started preparing their equipment. I need to give all of my equipment to Giberuti as well. I went to my room.

"What are you..doing?"

After entering my room when I was about to start gathering my equipment Miduchi followed me inside.

"You're going together with everyone as well. Quickly start getting your armor and whatever ready and go. Today we have a lot of luggage to carry after all. We'll be starting late so it's going to be a forced march."

"..kiss~"

"Huh?"

"Have a good trip kiss~"

..Was she envious of Basutorial and Cathy?

How old are you...

18 right now huh.

.....

I finished up the discussion about the cart with the old man of Murowa and started on my way towards the entrance plaza. I wonder if I spent a bit too much time on idle talk? I didn't take into consideration wearing out Zulu by having him wait in the heat.

But, he has the stamina so I'm sure he'll be fine.

I arrived at the entrance plaza and Zulu was waiting in a cool place in the shade. I quickly put on my rubber armor and threw my rucksack stuffed with luggage over my shoulder. Huh? It's not very heavy? I guess they filled mine primarily with the light towels and change of clothes?

"Around when did everyone depart?"

"I guess around half an hour?"

"I see, how about food?"

"I've already eaten."

"Sorry, I still haven't eaten anything. Wait for just a bit, I'll go and buy some skewers."

I took my bayonet back while holding 5 skewers in my left hand and the two of us went through the entrance of the dungeon. The two of us teleported into the 1st floor and I had Zulu spread out the map I left to him as we got an idea of our current location. I chewed away at my skewers while confirming the number and looking at the map for our current location.

"Nn, it's already fine. Fold it up. I already know after all, it's over here."

I continue chewing on the salty pork roast while walking. Cheap meat is tough.

Through everything it took us about 3 hours to clear through the 1st floor. When I confirmed the time on the clock magic tool inside of a pocket of Zulu's rucksack it was just past 3 pm.

"Let's hurry a bit."

I called out to Zulu and we decided to go to the 2nd floor with just a bathroom break.

We need to quickly get to the 8th floor and start investigating the revival cycle of the Minotaur and such.

.....

After teleporting into the 2nd we spent 1 hour moving at a fast pace. We passed through four monster rooms along the way but there was only a boss in the first two. In the remaining two there was the corpses of an {Owlbear} and a {Gnoll.Silverhead} laying around. It must have been after someone had passed through. Judging from the wounds it wasn't likely that the {Slaughterers} was ahead of us.

However, it's true that it's easy. We can gradually cover the remaining distance at a fast walking speed so it's something that should be welcome. If it's like this then we should be able to clear through the 2nd floor in about 2 hours as Zulu and I continued leisurely walking down the halls of the dungeon. However, in about 20 minutes our pace slowed down.

The sounds of combat.

We can hear the screams and shouts of people as well as the shrieks of what is most likely monsters.

That shriek is probably an {Owlbear}.

"What should we do?"

Zulu asked but the answer is only obvious.

"Nn..Let's go. If they have concluded things then we'll wait and see."

Around one minute after the two of started walking. We arrived at the monster room.

During that time the sounds of combat were still continuing.

It must be a third-rate party that's lacking in a winning move to use in combat against an {Owlbear}.

"How about it..Do you know them?"

"No, I've never seen them before."

There was one {Owlbear} and a six-man party of men and women frantically fighting with their asses facing us. Judging from their expensive looking armor like {Banded-mail} and {Chain-mail} they're a group that neither Zulu nor I know about. Their ages are..it seems they're all wearing uniform helmets with face guards so I can't tell. I guess all of them are Hyumu? Also they have leather boots..Isn't that the rubber soles that our company deals in..They're already wearing them and I can't properly identify them so I can't tell their levels.

The only one I was able to identify was the one who was commanding from the back who's blonde hair is barely coming out from the helmet, she's a level 8 Hyumu that's one year older than me and from a Baron family that I've never heard of. It seems she can use two types of elemental magic but the levels were the same as her void magic at level 2 and low.

If they're a party capable of making it to the 2nd floor and I don't know their faces then I guess they're the type with true ability that's recently come to Baldukk? Rarely there's times when people from some places knight group like Rodrick and the others come along so I guess it's a bit rude to have called them third-rate.

The {Owlbear} was considerably wounded and already at the stage where unless something quite unexpected happens the adventurer side wouldn't lose. However, they aren't letting their guards down at all and still have the line of battle properly going as they cooperate to defeat it. He~ they can do pretty well?

Of course, comparing them to anyone in the {Slaughterers} they make a lot of pointless movements that stand out but the leader and commander is giving out orders to the woman holding a spear that seems to be a magician in the rear as they skillfully cover for each others weaknesses. Though she hasn't use magic at all. Zulu and I took the corks off our flasks and wet our throats while watching them make sport of the {Owlbear}.

The woman who seemed to be the leader finished off the {Owlbear}.

It was only near the end but just from what I can see there doesn't seem to be any injuries and you could say they were boasting quite the magnificent cooperation. Wouldn't they be able to manage on even the 3rd floor?

In any case, we didn't interfere with their combat so they're unrelated to us. Let's quickly pass through and aim to group up with everyone. After everyone finished the combat they were raising their face guards to catch their breath but I don't particularly have any interest anymore so I decided to pass through just like that.

"Nn, let's go."

"Yes."

I called out to Zulu before stepping foot into the room. Of course, we aren't doing something like taking the shortest route straight through the middle that could unnecessarily provoke them. We slowly started walking along the wall. Obviously it seems they noticed us as well and they've been paying attention to us since we entered the room. I guess they did it out of caution but several of them lowered their face guards again. Ya~ please excuse us~

We have no intention of being any sort of intrusion so just let us pass on the edge.

The two from their party that were fighting on the flanks of the front line were just starting to stab their swords in to gather the magic stone from the {Owlbear}.

"I can't watch."

Zulu whispered. It's probably about how they're gathering the magic stone. It's the usual disassembling form for a beginner filled with excessive movements and I noticed it as well. If Zulu hadn't mentioned it I might have said the same thing, it's a method of gathering that shows off they're beginners. While they have some pretty decent combat skills they're still too inexperienced as adventurers. After all I guess they're members of some places knight group huh?

"That's right.."

I replied to Zulu while taking the detour following around the wall towards the hall that we were aiming. In order to keep from showing any hostility I don't have my weapon in hand. My bayonet is on my shoulder and Zulu's sword is in it's scabbard. And, it was just then that I finally noticed. In the corner of the room where we were heading there was a rucksack thrown down. It must be the belongings of one of them. After stopping my feet and looking around the room a number of rucksacks matching up to their number was laying around.

Chi..This is why beginners are..It's only obvious there's a boss in the rooms. Unless they were caught off guard there's no reason for their belongings to be thrown all over the place. It seems their rucksacks are all uniform so there's no mistake that this is their belongings as well.

"Ah, please excuse me. We'll be passing through."

It would be unpleasant to be thought of as walking away with their bags so I should at least say something.

"Please excuse me!! I..I'll move it right awayyy"

And then, one woman from the group of adventurers walked forward while calling out to us. It's a different person from the leader. They have an infantry-use short-sword hanging from their waist.

It's one of the attackers who uses a spear as their main arm.

"Ah, No..Sorry about that."

I replied with my feet stopped. She picked up her rucksack and returned to the center around the corpse of the {Owlbear}. It seems that the chain-mail she was wearing was reasonably worn out but at the very least what I could see of the slightly worn-out blue surcoat with what's probably her family's emblem sewn on it is properly maintained and there's no rust on it.

It was after watching her carry off her rucksack just when we were about to advance again. A different man called out to us. It was one of the tanks {Shield.Holders} from the center of the front line.

"Hey~ sorry but could I ask you something for a bit? No, of course I intend to thank you for it."

This guy seems pretty young as well and his age is probably about the same or just a bit above me.

"What is it?"

I stopped my feet and faced the man wearing splint-mail who was approaching us.

"That is..It looks like you're wearing similar plate-mail to the type the members of the first knight group use but is that the case?"

Ho~? Are they customers? Though I say that, I still don't intend to sell to anyone outside of the kingdom's knight groups.

"To be precise they aren't the same though..The maker is the same."

If they already know then there's probably no meaning in trying to cover it up.

"Oh! Well then, is that armor circulating quite a bit around Baldukk?"

"No, I'm sure you can't purchase it in Baldukk."

"Mumumu. Then in that case, from Greed Company huh...Would you mind telling me how you managed to deal with Greed Company? I've gone and lowered my head countless times but they absolutely won't sell it so I've been a bit troubled..Even if it's just one suit, I definitely want one."

Deal..I'm the president of that Greed Company though. And I guess there's no way he'd know huh?

However, all of them are completely unlike adventurers, they're using expensive equipment so it's not like they'd need any different ones at this point right? Rather~ with this it's become clear. Even after clearly seeing my face they haven't realized that I'm the leader of the {Slaughterers}, Alan.Greed. Along with that unfamiliar method of gathering magic stones, after all these guys are newbies.

However, that still leaves questions remaining.

The fact that the first knight group has started using what appears to be plate-mail dyed black(rubber armor) is something that most people with an interest in knights in the capital would know. If you investigate then you can figure out pretty quickly that the supplier is Greed Company as well. I thought that some upstart rich knight from a different territory retired and started business as an adventurer..but it seems a bit different. The fact that they're interested in the rubber armor means that they already somewhat know about how excellent it is. It seems it's not someone from a regional territory that's come to Baldukk.

However, if a group of people from the elite knight group of the kingdom retired and started as adventurers there's no way that wouldn't enter sister's ears. Even if sister is harsh on me, if she were to find out about that she should at least give me their information. Who in the world..are they?

Jemikku.Nokufyuri level 8, 20 years old, Elf, commoner huh...Eh?

Duke Rombert Knight!? Come to think of it, that leader woman I just identified, what was her info again? I forget. I'll identify her once more..and before I realized it she lowered the face guard of her helmet again. Not to mention she's facing over here so I can't identify her hair either.

"They turned it down right? I think it's probably impossible."

"Certainly, I was turned down. However, weren't you able to get your hands on it. I'll thank you for it. Just like this, wouldn't you introduce me to Greed Company?"

Nokkufyuri lowered his head to me while asking. However, from a tactical management standpoint, it's impossible. If I make one exception then I'll end up having to make exceptions all over the place.

"If it's someone from the first knight group then you can purchase it. Ah, also while it's very few right now they're also selling it to the second knight group."

"..Don't say anything impossible. I already know at least that much. However, it seems it's difficult even for the second knight group. Let alone the first knight group..I'm lowering my head asking because that can't be done."

I already get that but you know.

"James, isn't it already fine? There's no need to worry about me.

Also it seems he's a bit troubled. In the first place something like armor is unnecessary if you don't take any attacks."

The leader woman joined the conversation. As expected of her being able to command that well. It seems she can make proper judgements.

Though that matter about not taking any attacks is underestimating the dungeon, no, monsters too much.

"However, young mistress..it's a long-awaited chance."

Come to think of it she was from some Baron family was it? This young mistress or whatever.

"It's fine. Also, if it's absolutely necessary then one day I'll directly request it from Alan-sama. Ah~ right about now that person must be heroically on the lower floors.."

I can't deal with this shit.

Since around last year this, these sorts of idiots have occasionally appeared.

"Is it already fine~? Let's go."

I nodded to the bitterly smiling sir Nokkufyuri who was called

James and called out to Zulu before quickly heading towards the hall and jumping inside.

Of course, I quickly took the short route of passing straight through the middle of the room.

Chapter 248: Beating the Bridge

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 8

Zulu and I, the two of us continue walking down the halls of the 2nd floor.

"Recently, there's been an increase in people like that right."

"Yeah, ever since we went to the 8th floor..Right~"

"They probably just want to get close to master for the fame but there's no need to deal with them all so politely."

"Hn..Well, I guess that's true."

"In the first place, that group from back there were just pretending to show interest in the armor like that.."

"Yeah, they were saying "young mistress" or whatever."

"Since their equipment was considerably good, I'm sure they have plenty of money. They were completely transparent."

Though that can be said, even though that sir Nokkufyuri received investiture as a true knight of one of the kingdom's knight groups, he was talking considerably politely towards someone with unknown background(it didn't seem like he realized I was the president of Greed Company Alan.Greed after all) like myself.

In some meanings it's only obvious for a noble child who was properly raised from infancy, received plenty of education, and is aware of common sense but it felt a bit unusual for what could be considered a commoner that managed to win their rank. Judging from identify and the conversation it seems he received investiture from either the third or fourth knight groups. He was too young for the first knight group and it's unlikely that he wouldn't know about me. He said something like even the second knight group would be difficult so it must have been either the third or fourth knight groups.

Since he's at the level where he's come to the dungeon he might be from the fourth knight group which has a large scale infantry and combat engineer squad. If it's there then it's not very strange for there to be a knight that retires at the age of 20. Ah, No, there are a lot of knights who originated as commoners in the fourth knight group but there's also a lot that originated as slaves as well. It might have actually been the third knight group which is almost like a territory's knight group made even larger scale, a lot of their duties involve in security and patrolling around in territories like police.

Whatever the case, he was a Duke Rombert's Knight. That title is something that only the knights in a knight group of a territory directly ruled by the King, Duke Rombert can receive. In other words, only the first to fourth knight groups with headquarters in the capital Rombertia or the knight group of Baldukk. Obviously the only knights of the Baldukk knight group (there's at most around 100 true knights) that don't know me would be newcomers so this is fine to exclude from the start.

The Royal territories are largely divided into the territory of Duke Rombert which surrounds the Capital, the territory of Duke Ronbarudo in the North, the territory of Duke Baguweru in the Southeast, the territory of Duke Rondoru in the Southwest, and then there's several other small ones. In essence the King owns of all of those noble Duke titles and while acting as the King just "loans" those titles of Duke to his children or close relatives of the royal family. Well, something like governors. He leaves the governing to those governors to govern(it's a weird way of putting it though).

And in each of the high ranking noble territories it's only obvious but they have their own knight group. Obviously, since they're only being "loaned" the territory and peerage so those knight groups belong to the King as well. The regional knight groups of Duke Rombert's territory are close to a portion of the third and fourth knight groups as well as close to the knight group of Baldukk and the remaining knight groups are closer to a formal permanent army. Putting it simply the territory knight groups are like the National Reserve of the American Army and the four armies of Land, Sea, and Air as well as marines(excluding coastal defense units) are basically the first, second, third, and fourth knight groups.

Though there's nothing but a land army.

The following is digressing a bit but other than the Royalty there's about 5 Duke titles that exist. However, only 2 of those are "true Dukes" with a proper territory of their own and the rest are just nobles who have th qualifications and peerage but not territory, the so-called political nobles. My mother was a part of the branch family, the fourth daughter of the third son of Duke Sandak one of those political nobles.

Just even if I say they "don't have a territory" it's normal for them to at least have one village or town. The representatives of the Northeastern area of the Royal territory are the territories of Marquis Goruttsu and Marquis Berittsu (obviously these two Marquis rankings are both owned by the King as well and just the same he has various Count and Viscount territories all over the place as well) but around half of the villages and towns under their affiliation are said to have been loaned to political nobles and the political nobles send a governor out to manage their own small territory. They live on the salary paid based on their duties or an annuity from the King as well as the taxes they gain as income from these territories they rule.

There's even people among them who spend their entire lives without stepping foot even once in the territory they rule.

I guess I got a bit off track? Well, putting that aside, we quickly cleared through the 2nd floor and arrived at the teleport room on the 2nd floor.

I tried asking a party I was familiar with there if they had seen Miduchi and the others and it seems they just teleported into the 3rd floor a few minutes prior. According to them they weren't barely even taking any break before proceeding either. We've caught up quite a bit.

We took another bathroom break before Zulu and I had just a simple dinner then we teleported into the 3rd floor.

Since I'm normally such a good person it's only obvious but I have good teleport lucky so we were able to clear through the 3rd floor without taking much time. I'm sure we've already overtaken Miduchi and the others. We couldn't find them among the other adventurers camping in the teleport room on the 3rd floor.

The time is just past 9 pm and there's several parties resting. The {Butchers} and {Exterminators} were included among them. It seems they setup camp together and have occupied a corner of the room.

However, it's not the best corner spot of the room but just a spot along the wall they've secured.

"Oh my, that's an amazing amount of luggage."

Kamu pointed to the stuffed rucksack's Zulu and I are carrying.

"Nn, I intend to finish up making the 8th floor into a base this time after all. After that including the investigation we plan to stay on the 8th floor for a short while so there's various things we needed."

I replied in a whisper so no one else in the surroundings could hear while having some soup Rubi handed to me and took a break. Well, even if I say it's a cramped room there's about 30 meters to each side so our conversation wouldn't be overheard that easily. Particularly because it's a place with a large number of people the various sounds of living are a good curtain.

The soup Rubi handed me was on the verge of getting cold but Zulu and I had already consumed the only sandwiches we had other than our emergency use preserved food so we were grateful for it. While we were sipping at the soup Miduchi and the other {Slaughterers} entered the teleport room of the 3rd floor.

"Ah, they're already here. We lost again huh~"

"Al-san, as expected. You're quick."

"Around what time did you enter?"

And they all started saying while coming over here.

"I think it was just past 12:00 pm."

Hearing Zulu's reply everyone said, "Oh what. Then it wasn't even one hour different from us." while putting down their bags.

Including my own the clearing speed of the {Slaughterers} is already completely known among adventurers over a certain level.

Knowing that the members of the {Butchers}, {Exterminators}, and other veteran parties of Baldukk couldn't do anything but make a bitter smile but of the other parties with camps setup right near us there's one party called {Golden.Etowaru} that's recently entered the ranks of second-rate who all opened their eyes in surprise hearing it.

"Ah~ I'm hungry~ Larry, make something that can be eaten right away."

Gwine patted her small stomach while ordering Giberuti around on her whim.

"Yeah, wait just a moment..Rubi, I'll borrow this stove."

Giberuti quickly took the ingredients out from the ice(inside of a large box used for carrying by porters) he was carrying and started preparing the food. It seems to be a meat and vegetable stir-fry.

"Faruergaz-sama, Gekudo-sama. Should I make enough for everyone else as well?"

Giberuti was asking but this is more of just a courtesy. It's obvious that they've already eaten from the soup that was almost gone in the pot on their portable stove.

"Ah, we've already eaten dinner so all that's left is to just sleep."

"That's right. We're fine."

And they were saying that while watching Giberuti skillfully cook up some food. It's not unusual to take along an exclusive cook or a combat slave that takes care of the cooking in the party but the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} don't have an exclusive cook after all.

Of course Rodricks and my combat slaves take care of the cooking but it's not like they're all that skilled at cooking either. On the days they aren't entering the dungeon it seems they're learning from Giberuti but they still aren't all that skilled.

After finishing up our meals it seems the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} had already decided on the lookouts so we left it to them and all went to sleep right away.

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 10

Yesterday we cleared from the 4th floor to the 6th floor, this morning was the 7th floor, and then right now, we've just finished beating down the Minotaur on the 8th floor with everyone. The value of the magic stone was the same 30,000 as usual and with this it should be fine to think that the value of the magic stone from the Minotaur here won't have any greater value than this. The weapon was just a normal battle axe. This one wasn't worth anything much either. It's close to brand new so I'm sure we can sell it for a decent price but they've completely dropped from the wazamono at the start.

Putting that aside, after putting quite a bit of working carrying the materials this far, I wonder if it's fine to say we've almost completed making the 8th floor into a base? We've installed a kitchen equipped with a stove and have prepared quite a few more buckets than the other floors. Of course, we've already made the benches and foot bath and just in case we decided on a place with beds for up to 14 people as well.

However, in regards to the toilet and shower room we're still currently using the simple versions. It's not a mistake to think in terms making it as comfortable as possible for a living space but thinking about the drainage and bad smell it's only obvious that it's better to have outside of the room.

Now then, from here on out it's a bit of a drawn out battle. Today is already close to 4 pm and we have some amount of fatigue remaining from clearing through the 7th and 8th floors. We should quickly take our showers and eat before properly setting up sentries and then go to sleep.

Ah, the loincloth I gave to Zulu has already been washed but there was still quite a bit of smell remaining to it so it was forcefully confiscated and is in the process of being pickled in a bucket of soap before being washed and dried in the sun right now. While we're here I intend to have it washed everyday. Once we return to the surface I'll buy some perfume or something so just bear with it for now.

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 13

I had Basutorial return to the surface a bit ahead of us. We had plenty of time to discuss things about the factory so we exchanged ideas and in the end after giving him several orders I had him go to his beloved wife's side. I already told him that once we finish this investigation, I'll be going to Rombertia as well.

"I'll make preparations so we can definitely have some delicious "sausage" ready to be eaten by the time Al-san comes."

Basutorial cheerfully said that before teleporting out towards the surface.

Including the first one and the one we defeated just past noon today we've defeated a total of 5 Minotaur. After all the quality of equipment the Minotaur are using is gradually falling and has reached the point where it's not much different from the standard sold in stores. Also, the fact that all of those are weapons with a long handle hasn't changed either.

.....

I've started to understand most of it. The signs of revival will appear roughly 17 hours after we defeat the Minotaur. And then, for several minutes up to around 10 minutes the signs of revival that is the whirlpool of fog will continue.

And then, while we're inside of the teleport room as long as we don't take any concrete actions towards attacking it doesn't notice us. It's fine no matter how loud of a noise we make. Just, if we throw a bucket of water on it or throw rocks at it then it obviously notices. However, it still doesn't seem like it can see the passage into the teleport room from it's side or it just looks like a normal dirt wall, so even after it notices it ends up giving up and facing it's back to us again eventually.

If we all charge at it we can definitely manage a surprise attack on it from it's back. I've already reached almost full confidence of these things.

It's reasonable tough but since it was already not a big problem defeating it when fighting head on so there's almost no struggle when we can just ambush it. In the first place if soon after revives while it's still crouching down like the terminator you take a battle axe to it's neck with all your strength I'm sure even Giberuti could kill it.

Though I say that, it's necessary to spend another couple of days here and confirm if this hypothesis is really correct.

Unfortunately in regards to exploring the 9th floor I've put it off until we can confirm that this area is really safe.

Well, we should be able to reach that stage during this month though.

Ah, No, there's all that trouble with the factory and transferring duties with the company so I wonder if this month is impossible?

Chapter 249: 9th Floor

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 17

We killed the 9th Minotaur in total at almost the exact time we predicted of 9:00 in the morning. After all it was correct that they revive on an average cycle of 17 hours. To be more correct I think it's just a bit longer than 17 hours. Ever since I returned Basutorial to the surface on the 13th about half of our spare time has been spent doing running around this room while also exploring it but we never encountered anything suspicious or any monsters. Just once shortly after defeating the Minotaur we teleported into the 9th floor and hunted some Red Battle Crabs but after that just in case we've always been keeping an eye on things as much as possible.

Also, up until this day we discovered what could be called a place for the second shower room. In a place about 200 meters away from the pillar there was a rock that was nicely shaped like the character for ko and the center of that was close to flat so we were able to confirm that it could be used as a shower room right away after opening a hole there and bringing a bucket. Though it's the second one, since the ventilation of the teleport room is bad, we'll probably be using this one as our main shower.

The reason we didn't completely relocate was nothing more than a result of our experiments. If we move the pillars for the shower around 100 meters away from the teleport room then within one night the ropes we used to tie it start to loosen and come undone all on their own before collapsing. However, strangely enough for some reason the binding on the buckets doesn't come off. Those will probably come off over a longer period of time. Also, it feels like when it comes to weapons or things with a lot of metal the amount of time until they break feels longer. They probably wouldn't break for at least a few decades up to several hundred years.

Through grasping those sorts of characteristics of the dungeon it could be said that the areas surrounding the pillar of the teleport room on the 8th floor are the ideal place for experimentation. Up until now we've always just relied on our intuition and it's possible we could have assumed things based on the wrong impression. In testing we just tried making a simple rope with a knot it in and leaving outside and in just one night it had loosened quite a bit after all. The Durability of the rope itself through Identify hadn't decreased. I guess that's only obvious huh?

Well, if we just close our eyes to the slight inconvenience of it we can have a shower in a bright and open place so it can't be helped worrying too much about it. It's that sort of thing and I'm sure there's no choice but to accept it. Although, things like that we had established through observations since quite a while back so it was nothing more than reconfirming the results of those observations. However, we can't just keep observing things in the dangerous halls so you could say it's nothing more than being able to more accurately measure the time and change relationship over here.

In any case, it was a big harvest just that we were able to get an almost perfect grasp on the revival cycle of the Minotaur and our base in the teleport room of the 8th floor has turned into something reasonably satisfying. Now then, first we'll return Giberuti ahead of us and then after earning some from hunting ogres on the 7th floor shall we return as well?

We'll get dull from just running and doing the radio exercises that we could only vaguely remember. Training is necessary.

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 18

Now then, we've purchased a large amount of food so for the next week from here on out we'll explore centering around the 9th floor.

We didn't earn much of anything last week (though even then we still made around 30,000,000 Z from the ogre magic stones), and we didn't do much work at all so even if we go without days off this time it was welcome with arms in the air. However just Basutoral won't be accompanying us this time and when we returned last night I had Giberuti follow after him towards the factory in the capital.

We arrived at the 8th floor at our usual pace. We rested for one night and had breakfast, then went for a good two hour run with everyone. In regards to showering we used the second shower room outside of the teleport room as well. And then for raising morale we beat down the Minotaur that revived at around 9:00 in the morning before grabbing the teleport crystal into the 9th floor.

Now then, we're going to start walking around the same as usual after this aiming to clear through the 9th floor!

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 22

We arrived at our first altar room since we started exploring the 9th floor. Of course, we've found several normal monster rooms without altars. The bosses of the monster rooms were centered around the trolls from the 8th floor with just a slight increase in the number but there were also things like {Cave Troll} and {Troll.Kin} that appeared. Well it's fine if we just burn them all to death. Even if we don't burn them to death if we accumulate damage on them and burn them all together after false-killing them it's fine as well. Ah, I guess in the end it's still burning them to death? It doesn't matter either way.

And in regards to that altar room on the 9th floor but we're all holding our hopes high. That's only obvious. The number of gargoyles was the usual four but their levels had increased by 1-2. Also the monsters that were summoned were a bit unpleasant. One of them was called {Green Poison Lizard} and it's something like a relative of the {Frost Lizard}. That wasn't all. Of all things, a large number of {Kobolds} were summoned together with it. And, those {Kobolds} but all of them had this sort of feel.

Right? Doesn't that give an unpleasant feeling?

Up until now the only enemy that has used any proper magic was the ogre mages on the 7th floor but only a small fixed number appear ahead of time in the monster rooms on the 7th floor. Even when there's a lot of them it's at most five. Also, while there's generally some variance in their magic special skill levels at highest they were level 4 and fundamentally they only use attack spells sending some element of bullet flying at us.

However, these guys were completely different.

The first they they were summoned it was 15 of them at once on top of every single one of them being able to use all elemental magics and their magic special skill levels were all the same. And then making it even more annoying it's only obvious they use attack spells but among them there's ones that use {Anti-Magic Field} and {Quagmire} at the same time. Furthermore there's even some that use basic healing spells like {Cure}.

In other words, my overwhelming and powerful certain kill trump card's burying and freezing are almost meaningless. Since there were so many of them before I even tried identifying them I just froze them all but in just a few short seconds when they opened a huge hole in the ice I was so surprised I almost fell over. It was to the point where I only realized they could use all elemental magic after I used Identify on their corpses. It's effective range isn't very wide but {Quagmire} is an unpleasant attack in a simple way. When your feet get stuck in the bog and you can't move around to evade the poison breath from the {Green Poison Lizard} comes flying.

If you inhale this poison it starts bringing a pain like the inside of your chest is inflamed and breathing becomes difficult. Since your breathing gets difficult accompanied by that you fall into a low oxygen state and obviously your physical abilities fall as well. It's not like you end up with some kind of poisoning state under Condition so it helps that you can recover from it using Cure type healing spells but after all the pain still remains and in order to fully heal it all at once it requires pouring a considerable amount of mana into it.

Well, if you fire off something like a {Stone Bolt Missile} with over 5 bullets that exceeds the amount of MP the Kobold's have then it will tear through the {Anti-Magic Field} and even just one remaining bullet will instantly kill it but the only one who can practically use a spell like that is me. It was to the point where I thought of just hitting them with a considerable {Fire Ball}. Though thinking about it afterwards I realized that was the correct answer.

It's fine if I just hit them with a {Fire Ball} using about 200 MP or so forcing the Kobolds to all use {Anti-Magic Field} at once and annihilating them with the explosion(the one that it directly hits will try to use {Anti-Magic Field} but obviously it'll break through that and completely cook it and then the rocks that fly around in the explosion will tear through the {Anti-Magic Fields} of the other Kobolds exhausting their mana). After that if you just remain careful of the pitiful arrow type attack spells and the {Quagmire} then there's no problem with calmly dealing with them.

However, the first time I couldn't think that far so after the ice was erased I'll just blow them away with consecutive attack spells one after another! and the blood went to my head like that. While cleaning up the Kobolds with my spells and Miduchi and Bel's arrows, Zulu and Gwine were sticking their tongues out and gasping for air from the reduction in oxygen and pain, and that was just as the remaining Zenom, Ralpa, Toris, and Angela all swarmed the {Green Poison Lizard} to kill it off.

In any case after repeating healing spells on Zulu and the others to treat them and cutting off the heads of the gargoyles that I buried alive, the shrine door finally opened and was empty as usual so we had no choice but to keep advancing that day after learning a valuable lesson.

Miduchi had previously said, "It wouldn't be strange for there to be individuals among Goblins and Kobolds that can use magic as well" but at the same time said, "It requires a considerable amount of concentrate and mental training to so it so I don't think they'll be common and even if they do exist their abilities would probably be limited." so including myself we all completely forgot about it. After all, up until now we've never heard of anything like that other than from Miduchi and something like, "a kobold that can use magic" is something never mentioned by any adventurer in Baldukk other than her.

Honestly even I didn't even dream that Kobolds would be using magic. I guess even among Kobolds there's ones with the willpower to do magic training..I guess it's different huh?

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 23

We arrived at a different altar room than the one from the other day. The same as usual we buried the gargoyles leaving just their heads outside and this time for sure carefully proceeded into the center of the room before the altar. The magic circle was deployed on the floor and the monsters were summoned. This time it was close to 20 goblins but the result of Identifying them showed they weren't much different from the Kobolds. And then, in front of the altar, right in front of us, what appeared to be a goblin with pitch black skin was summoned.

Miduchi tensed up my side as she was surprised and tried hitting it with a {Stone Javelin} equally fast but that black goblin dodged the spell that came flying and started floating in mid-air. It had wings almost like a bat growing from it's back. As a bonus it even had a long and thin tail hanging from it's ass with a sharpened end like an arrowhead.

"It's a demon!"

By the time Miduchi had called out warning us it was just before my {Fire Ball} with added missile was about to hit the imp. The face of the imp distorted since it couldn't completely dodge it and deployed an {Anti-Magic Field} but it soon changed to surprise I guess seeing it eat through that mana as the {Fire Ball} hit the imp and was engulfed in the explosion as burning stones went flying. Of course it also engulfed the surrounding goblins as their bodies were torn apart. However Miduchi, how did you know? When I tried asking afterwards I was casually told, "If it has wings like a bat and arrow-shaped tail then there's nothing other than a demon right?" I didn't really get it but I guess it's that sort of thing?

All of the remaining goblins would have started using arrow type spells (probably) but before they could finish concentrating Zenom, Ralpa, Toris, Zulu, and Angela jumped into their group and started rampaging around while Gwine stabbed them to death with the spear, and Bel sniped the further ones with the bow so only a single one of them actually managed to use a spell. That {Stone Arrow} ended up being deflected by Toris's shield and Miduchi threw a knife stabbing into it's neck killing it.

After that we finished off the gargoyles and when the shrine opened up there was a single sword stored inside of it.

While making sure not to touch the handle, Angela picked up just the scabbard part as she respectfully presented the sword to me.

The length of the handle was about 15 cm and it had a flashy hand-guard with delicate ornaments carved into it, the length of the white scabbard that had similar ornaments to the guard was about 80 cm I guess? It's the size of a long sword.

Uhyo~

Following that I used the {Cantrip} {Magical Detection}.

There's a reaction.

Hmm.

Just in case I'll use the void magic {Detect Magic}.

There's a lively reaction.

Hmmhmm.

Finally it's only obvious but I used 【Identify】 on it.

【Effect: Through generating flames from the blade of the sword it can deal up to a maximum of {Quadruple.Damage} to targets weak to fire. Also, the brightness of the flame is equal to that of the average {Light} spell.】

Hohou. After reading the sub-window and it seems that if the wielder chants the incantation command word carved into the surface of the blade while holding the handle for just 30 seconds the blade of the sword will generate a magical flame and it's added as extra damage to the normal! It's possible for this flame to be generated a number of times but it will always disappear 30 seconds after it's generated or if it's put back into the scabbard. It makes sense that it's made of Titanium Steel which is strong to high temperatures.

While holding the scabbard in my left hand I grabbed the handle with my right as I pulled it out and was surprised. The blade of the sword has gentle waves to it. On the pitch black ricasso of the sword blade the command word "Emeron" was carved into it.

"Amazing."

"Ah..magic a {Magical}.."

"It's a {Magical.Weapon}."

"It's giving off an amazing mana right."

"Ho~ A flamberge huh? It's unusual for it to be one-handed."

""Congratulations! Master!""

"It's black just like Miduchi-san's sword."

"It had a name right?"

Miduchi said the last part with confidence while looking at my face.

"Yeah, it's amazing. It's supposedly called Sword of Flames 【Flame.Tongue】. Is it this? Emeron!"

The moment I spoke the incantation command word a small amount of flames burst out from the undulating blades lighting up the area. After that even when I tried waving it around randomly the flames didn't weaken at all and continued to coil around the blade of the sword. The shining flames of the blade left an afterimage beautifully lighting up the area as if putting emphasis on itself.

..For a short while, I just gazed at the flames coming from the blade of the sword.

I think around 30 seconds must have passed, the flames quickly withdrew as if they were drawn back into the blade.

After I returned the sword into its scabbard I handed it to Toris and said, "Toris, you use it. Just like Bel's sword if you chant the command word while holding on to the handle of the blade it seems that for a short period flames come out." before taking my bayonet off my shoulder and holding it in my hand.

"Eh!? Shouldn't Al-san use this sort of powerful {Magical.Weapon}?"

While taking the sword Toris said unexpectedly.

Idiot, you, because the ornaments on the guard are in the way it won't fit into my bayonet.

Also even if it did fit if the flames were to come out I wouldn't be able to use it right?

"It's fine. You can't use fire magic right Toris, then it's just right. Later on test out how much you can use the flames. Then let's gather the magic stones."

I said that before stabbing my bayonet into the chest of the goblins myself. Just as expected from the Kobolds that were able to use magic the values of their magic stones were on the same level as a room boss from the 1st floor. I'm sure even these are something similar. It's a waste to ignore them.

A flaming sword is pretty cool right. Honestly I wanted to try using it, but well it's fine. In the first place with emphasis on close combat my techniques are based around bayonet fighting from the SDF and in regards to a {Magical.Weapon} my abundance of mana makes up for it.

However, it's nothing more than a guess of mine but that 【Flame.Tongue】, wouldn't it be a certain kill weapon against Trolls? Also, it should be considerably strong against the insects and crabs as well.

When I tried asking Miduchi she said, "I think that's probably the case. Also, it should be quite effective against undead and such as well." That's great isn't it, Toris.

Chapter 250: Evidence

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 24

After we discovered {Flame.Tongue} we also found {Big.Freezer} and large-size chandelier(it wasn't very luxurious but it was considerably efficient as a lightning tool) magic tools. Putting aside the chandelier I hesitated a bit on what to do with the freezer.

"But you know~ If we encounter another group of {Roze} again couldn't we freeze the meat and store it."

The glutton of the {Slaughterers} said that but "Did you forget how much the previous freezer sold for?"

And that was said by her adoptive father.

That's right. It wasn't even a large size one, just a normal 100 liter or so freezer sold for 200,000,000 Z. Even after paying the taxes and everyone's bonuses it still left 130,000,000 Z remaining in my hands. It's not like we have anything that we need to preserve for long periods in the months and we already have a large ice storage room in the sausage factory so we don't particularly need it right. It's only obvious we're selling it. You can even buy ice in the tons for about 5,000 Z from any ice dealer after all.

Tomorrow when brother and the others come it would probably be best to take advantage of that opportunity and carry it to the capital and take it into the mainstream company Duke Sandak manages to get rid of it.

That evening we returned from the dungeon and after selling our magic stones I gave Gwine a two week holiday. The other members pulled lots on who would accompany the {Butchers} and {Exterminators}. Miduchi and Ralpa pulled the winning lots. The other members besides them get a holiday along with Gwine. The combat slaves are coming along with me to the capital around tomorrow when brother's caravan should arrive. Ralpa was complaining about not getting a holiday but it was the fair result of pulling lots and in the first place it's not like the combat slaves or I get a holiday either. After Toris and Bel pointed that out and Zenom smacked her in the head she finally was quiet about it.

.....

Just as planned brother arrived with three carriages along with Rasseg and the people of the Donneoru family. The current members of the Donneoru family are primarily Rasseg as the head, along with his wife Mili, and their 12 year old son Harris. Along with them the former head of the family, old man Rafitto, the four of them were moving here. Below Harris he had two siblings but his little brother died as a baby several days after birth and his little sister Sara is still 7 years old and young so they left her in care of Rasseg's little brother Bosshu and Myun. That would mean she's living together with her older cousin, their son Ailado. From my impression Sara was a considerably quiet and well-mannered child so while it's just for two years it hurts my heart a bit splitting her apart from her parents.

They arrived in Baldukk just around noon so we had some lunch together and then went to the capital just like that. If they had any space in the carriages I had intended to load various things on it but there was no space so I ended up having to borrow another carriage. It seems Zenom and Gwine intend to ride the carriage together with us to do some shopping in the capital.

After arriving at the capital the Ryogu family were already well prepared and had made reservations at an inn for brother, the Donneoru family, and the others from Bakuddo. We took a short break and after confirming that the Donneoru family had started lowering their furniture I brought along my combat slaves as we went to sell the magic tool we found in the dungeon this time and then on our way back we stopped by the castle and I told a person of the first knight group that we would be making deliveries tomorrow and that I would report the fact that we cleared the 8th floor on that occasion.

I'm sure the King doesn't have that much free time so I doubt he would come out every time for something like this but if he has time to take a walk for a change of pace and I run into him it wouldn't be bad to directly tell him about it. Well, I think he probably already knows though. Personally I just want to avoid the possibility of being questioned later on "Why didn't you say anything".

After that I also came along to show my face and see how things were going with the sausage factory. Since I let Basutorial and Giberuti return from the dungeon early they should be about finished with trial operations. The sensitivity the slaves have towards the work and what kind of reputation it has from just the trial run and what amount of stock we need up until next month, it's important for Basutorial and Cathy to meet and discuss the details like that. It's also necessary to talk to Rasseg and the others of the Donneoru family about what kind of troubles can be predicted in relation to the factory and the capital that might be necessary for that.

We need to cover everything from getting their faces known, greetings, and handing over work duties in two weeks. I'm sure it'll be a busy two weeks.

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 26

In addition to brother and the escort squires, the Ryogu family, Rasseg, and Mili accompanied us on deliveries to the castle. It was to undergo greetings with the familiar official of the first knight we deal with as well as informing them of the transfer.

Unexpectedly the people of the first knight group gave the Ryogu family a small dresser as a parting gift. I thought they were strangely prepared but it seems that they had already heard about their return to Bakuddo village from sister. I have the feeling this dresser is going to end up becoming a standard gift for the squire families when they return to Bakuddo village from the capital.

It seems the Ryogu family was familiar with them because they often repair the rubber armor so they were sorry to be saying farewell as well. Personally I was pretty satisfied that Greed Company was becoming a considerably important merchant to the knight groups.

Also, the Ryogu family was praised by the knight leader Baron Logan over their character and careful work, that caused the people of Bakuddo Village to be overcome with emotion. Even I'm proud of it.

Though, it's not really my achievement.

Now then, they've started taking body measurements for the orders next time so I have some spare time. Since I had the chance I requested an audience with one of their highness the Queens in order to deliver the "Saya Condoms". Around the time the body measurements were going to end a messenger finally came so I pulled out the box packed with "Saya" and the magic stone we took from the Minotaur before proceeding towards the designated place in the second citadel. I also requested that they bring the battle axe(this is a weapon so in order to bring it in ahead of time I firmly wrapped it in cloth and sealed it) I left in the care of the guards at the entrance of the castle up to here.

Sure enough the ones waiting for me in the second citadel were the King and the first Queen Morin, the two of them. Though it's informal it's been a while since the King showed his face for just me. Since then he's only pretended to be nearby by chance when I'm talking with the commander of his guards or the time when he was just a bit conscious of me when I was talking together with the dark elf Tukerin. I guess as expected when it comes to my declaration of exceeding the achievement of the founding King he can't afford to ignore me?

"Hey! The 9th floor!? You've cleared the 8th floor!?"

The King said in a bit of a hurry while leaning forward. I'm still taking the greeting of a retainer with my head lowered as I nodded affirming it. Right after meeting this huh?

"Dear, please be quiet for a bit. Greed came to make a delivery.

First off look, those "Saya'.."

Her highness Molail held back the King from leaning forward while calling out to me.

"Ha..Right here. This time in addition to the normal model I've brought the new model. It's over here."

With my head still facing down I put the box with "Saya" I was holding on my left side on to the red velvet floor and slid it towards the Queen. After a person from the third knight group took it and opened the lid once they brought it to her highness the Queen's side.

"Oh~ certainly. Thanks for your work, Greed. It's a great help to us."

I'm sure it is. The delivery this time included one box of 100 packs of the normal model and one box of 100 packs of the studded model for a total of 2,000 condoms. About half of those will end up as prizes for the dog race and it seems about 80% of the remaining ones will end up as rewards to nobles or something. They're probably using about 10% of the whole. Obviously excluding brothel companies they're the largest individual customer. With just this it comes out to 3,000,000 Z, a price tag of 3 gold coins.

"You're finished right? Now then, let's hear your report."

The moment he saw us finish the delivery of "Saya" the King called out once again. U~he~e. Look and be surprised.

"Ha..This is the magic stone we obtained from defeating the half-cow, half-man monster called a Minotaur that was standing deep in the 8th floor protecting the teleport crystal to the 9th floor."

After saying that I took off the small velvet bag that was hanging at my waist and placed it in the hand of the third knight group person who came to it, before continuing "Also, we retrieved the weapon that "Minotaur" was using as well."

And saying that with my head lowered as I sent the sign to the person who was holding the battle axe wrapped in cloth. That person respectfully moved forward while taking the cloth off and while holding the contents up in offering carried it to the King.

"{Status Open}"

The voices of the King checking the status of the magic stone and Queen Morin checking the status of the battle axe echoed through the room in the second citadel. It seemed like the breathing of the two of them was a bit disturbed. Hahhawwa. It's not to the level of the giant earthworm of that eyeball bastard but it's still considerably amazing for an individual magic stone.

"{Status Open}"

This time they must have each exchanged items before checking the status. I'm still taking the retainer's bow with my head down so I can't tell for sure but probably.

"...."

The two of them started whispering about something. Their voices are too low so I can't hear.

"You all, everyone take your leave from the room."

Suddenly the King ordered in a strict voice. This, isn't including me right? It's to the knights in the room as guards right? I wonder what I should do? Rather~ why?

"Ha..No, we are" "It's fine, take your leave. Greed doesn't have any weapons."

The King cut off the words of the guard commander from the third knight group who was about to say something and ordered him once again. Certainly I don't have any weapons but I can use magic you know?

"Ah, that's right. Order Richard to take over as my bodyguard. Call him right away. Hurry."

The King said that to the hesitating commander and chased all of the bodyguard soldiers out of the room. It's not strange that Prince Ronbarudo, Richard.Rombert the Fourth the eldest son of the King and member of the first knight group would be ordered as a bodyguard but..he's the first platoon leader of the first company after all.

After the bodyguard knights left the King threw both of his feet down from the chair and changed to a comfortable posture while sipping some tea from the table on his side then stretched his hand out without even looking at the Queen. The Queen took a cigar out from a small box on the side table before using magic to light it and put it into the King's hand.

"We have a bit of time until he comes. Greed. Give me an honest reply."

"Ha..Ha!!"

What is it?

"You obtained a {Magic.Item} along with it right?"

The King said while exhaling some tobacco smoke.

Eh~!!? Why? Why does he know!?

No matter what the case was we didn't mention that loincloth to the {Butchers} or {Exterminators}. Let alone I'm definitely sure none of the members of the {Slaughterers} would talk about it..Is it about the {Big.Freezer} or large size chandelier? Those are things we loudly announced when we returned to the surface the other day. They're not a size that can be hidden after all. Nevertheless I feel like it's too fast for him to have that information though.

While my body went stiff honestly hesitating how I should reply for a moment he quickly continued his words.

"I don't intend to say to hand it over. It's nothing more than a confirmation."

Ah, is that so? Though if it's something like that smelly loincloth I'd be willing to hand it over anytime if you give me a decent amount of money. Though Zulu would be just a bit pitiful with how delighted he was over it.

"Ha, that is..Yes. We obtained a {Magic.Item} called the {Loincloth.Of.Daring} at the same time. However, the "Minotaur" directly had it attached to it's body and it was extremely dirty so.."

I didn't bring it along. I was about to say that but was cut off by the King again.

"It's fine. I thought it was something like that...How does it look?"

The last statement must have been towards the Queen.

"Judging from what I confirmed this morning it's certainly something equal to the {Mirror Shield} and {Iron Gauntlet}.."

"Hmm. It's not as if I couldn't think so as well. It's certainly a wazamono but if you didn't know there's no reason you would go to the trouble of naming it..Also.."

What? What are they talking about?

Certainly that battle axe is a considerable wazamono but it's not like it's a {Magical.Weapon} or anything. If you just pile up enough money then there's a high probability could get something equal or close made by a blacksmith. Hn? Naming?

"sub-Noble Greed. Raise your face."

Queen Morin called out to my in a slightly soft voice.

Relying on her words I gently lifted my face.

The King and Queen were making slightly difficult faces different from the tone of their voices.

"This magic stone. It's quite something for an individual one. The shade of the color is considerably first-class as well."

"Ha"

That's only obvious. After all if you sell it then just that one would be worth around 4,000,000 Z. Though in terms of simple value since that battle axe is still a wazamono it would be probably be worth more in value. When it comes to just individual magic stones there's no way to make them after all. As proof of that the magic stone from the giant earthworm sold for more than it's normal value as well.

"Hmph, it seems you don't get it. I'll tell you. This emblem that's carved into the handle is something that all of the floor guardians in the dungeon of Baldukk have in common carved into their equipment. Our Royal Family has handed down two items from the 6th and 7th floor guardians called the {Mirror Shield} and {Iron Gauntlet}. Both of them are items his majesty Rombert the First obtained by defeating the floor guardians in the dungeon of Baldukk. Even in regards to the magic stones while the sizes are different the color gives off a similar feel."

Huh eh? Is that so? In other words something like that will be on the 9th floor as well? Eh? But there was nothing like a floor guardian on the 6th or 7th floors? Even the guardian on the 8th floor, we've defeated it a total of 12 times?

"Please wait just a moment."

Seeing me make a confused face Queen Morin smiled and after opening a large chest behind the simple throne, she took the contents out.

A round shield, gauntlet, and magic stones.

"Try confirming the names of these."

She said that while handing them to me. I took those and said {Status Open} while using Identify and the value of each was 456789 and 345678 while the names of them were {Magic Stone(Small Cow-People Race)} and {Magic Stone(Low Cow-People Race)}. The sizes were both one size and two sizes smaller than the one I brought in this time but the color was almost exactly the same and a surprising shade of whiteness.

The shield and gauntlets both had the names of {Mirror Shield} and {Iron Gauntlet} and gave off a feel of extremely high class items but the Durability had decreased quite a bit so as expected they also felt a bit worn-out. They must need repairs.

"The magic stone from the Low Cow-People Race, {Lesser Minotaur.Sentinel} and the {Iron Gauntlet} came from the 6th floor and the magic stone from the Small Cow-People Race, {Minor Minotaur.Sentinel} and the {Mirror Shield} supposedly came from the guardian of the 7th floor."

Queen Morin explained for me.

"It seems that in the process of defeating the guardians of the 6th and 7th floors countless times before they realized it they stopped appearing. It's also said that every time they defeated it after the second it didn't leave behind magic stones or items of that quality. And then, it's also said that both of the first guardians were holding {Magic.Items} as well."

The King added on to it.

This time he's blowing smoke out of his nose.

The refined and expensive smelling scent of the cigar is even reaching me.

..So that's how it was huh? On the occasion that Rombert the First cleared the 6th and 7th floors he must have defeated a monster on the same level as that Minotaur on the 8th floor countless times.

Come to think of it the magic stone of the first Minotaur I defeated had a value of 567890 as well. If things continue like that then the value of the 9th floor guardian's magic stone would be 678901 and the value of the 10th floor guardian's would be 789012 I guess, rather~ then is that the case I guess? After all was that eyeball bastard from the 14th floor(?) a guardian?

He~ in that case I wonder if they'll buy it from me at a high price?

You're gathering the magic stones and equipment from guardians right? Hn?

"Well, it seems it's true that you defeated the guardian of the 8th floor. I'll recognize that it's an achievement that has exceeded the exploits of the founder his majesty George. It's quite something."

"Ha..It's an honor to receive your praise."

I can hear the sound of someone running down the hall.

There's no change in her highness Queen Molail who was properly sitting in a chair with good posture but the King fixed his posture.

"..You've been saving up your money right?"

For some reason the King reluctantly pushed his cigar down into the ash tray on the side table and asked while looking at me with strict eyes.

"Ha..Of course I am."

It was then that a single knight wearing full plate armor entered the room. He advanced up to where I was and took the retainer's bow before the King while declaring, "Just as ordered please allow me to take over as bodyguard of your majesty and your highness." and after standing up went over to their side. His breathing is considerably rough so he must have come running in quite the hurry.

It's the first platoon leader of the first company of the first knight group Prince Ronbarudo, Richard.Rombert the Fourth. His armor has been well maintained and shining showing off it's high quality. Excluding the fact that it's reasonably heavy I'm sure the defensive ability of it is higher than the rubbery protectors we deal in and even the look of it is good. But he already said that about three years later he wants to replace it and made reservations with us quite a while back. What a waste.

"Hmph, ..ya..ko..ten..ka.."

It seems the King whispered something just in his mouth before turning around just a bit and calling out, "Hey, Richard"

"Ha"

After being called out by the King you could hear the sound of the eldest son's teeth grinding as he advanced to the side of the King and fell to one knee while waiting for the continuation.

"You know about this person right?"

"Huh? Yes. Obviously I know about him. It should be clear since I just talked to him the other day though..."

"Ah, come to think of it that was the case...Incidentally you're properly continuing with your training right?"

"Ha, of course I am."

"That's only obvious! Richard was able to become a platoon leader younger than you!?"

"I don't mean that...Hn, then I guess it's fine."

What is he saying?

"Well then, Richard, see this fellow out. I'm sure the original bodyguards are still waiting outside right? It's fine if you switch places with them."

After saying that the King handed the battle axe and magic stone from the Minotaur over to his highness Richard without any sort of attachment.

Huh..

So you won't buy them from me...

Well it's fine though.

I guess that most likely means they're just carefully keeping the ones from the 6th and 7th floor guardians as goods that are related to the founding King.

Author's Note: Floor Guardian Magic Stones: (TL Note: remember magic stones sell to stone shops for 70-80% of listed price and when it comes to high value individual stones they're often auctioned for more, below is just the rough listed value.)

1st Floor 78901 (789,010 Z)

2nd Floor 89012

3rd Floor 90123

4th Floor 123456

5th Floor 234567

6th Floor 345678

7th Floor 456789

8th Floor 567890 (5,678,900 Z)

9th Floor 678901

10th Floor 789012

11th Floor 890123

12th Floor 901234

13th Floor 1234567

14th Floor 12345678 (1,234,567,800 Z)

Is how they are in the settings. It was decided because if the 1st floors wasn't at least over 500,000 Z it wouldn't be a reward. The 14th floor is special (in a punishment game sort of way) so it's set high. Normally you'd die after all.

Chapter 251: Feeling Rejected

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 26

Accompanied by his highness the Prince of Ronbarudo, Richard I returned to the room in the third citadel that was being used as a ground for taking body measurements but the inside of my head was busily working. The information I obtained from the King and Queen this time was considerably valuable. First off, that there's(was) a guardian on each floor on the dungeon has been confirmed it seems. Next is the fact that after defeating the guardians a number of times they eventually stop reappearing. Is it with a feel like running out of stock? And then finally, all of the guardians have some sort of {Magic.Item}.

However, this isn't definite. It would be more correct to say that at least from the 6th to 8th floors the guardians had them. It seems that the 1st to 5th floors were defeated in the era before the founding King so that information is unknown and I can't say anything about it.

After that, it seems that the so-called wazamono equipment from the first guardian you defeat..is even named. In the case that it's not a living thing, in regards to the temples naming of inorganic objects, first off you have to request an estimate on the cost from the priest or minister or whatever. After that if you accept it then you leave it with the temple for one night and the next day they'll tell you the formal cost of naming it. It seems when it's cheap it only costs several tens of thousands of Z but when it comes to expensive things they even end up charging tens of millions or several hundreds of millions as well. It seems that the closer the naming of the item gets to only in self-interest the more expensive it gets.

Incidentally, the thresher I made when I was child had the name {Thresher} from the moment it was completed and when I tested out putting in a request for an estimate on the meat mincer which was coming up as {Brass.Craft} in Identify and Status Open to be named to {Mince.Maker} they requested 700,000 Z. I didn't pay the money so it wasn't named. Even if they don't do anything just to get them to return the mincer cost a 5% handling charge of 35,000 Z. During the first stages of the estimation when I stated that I wanted it to be named to {Mince.Maker}, the priest looked at the status with a difficult face while spinning the handle and gave me an estimate of, "I don't think it will cost more than 1,000,000 Z."

Thinking it was worth testing when I tried having them do an estimate for having my handmade(though it's not mine but Arnold's I guess?) sword named to {Greed's Sword}, without even looking at the status they said, "Almost without a doubt I can say it will easily be in the hundreds of millions and depending on the case it wouldn't be strange for it to go over one or two billion." so I just ended up excusing myself with a cold sweat after just listening to the estimate I got for free.

Incidentally when it comes to living creatures there's no difference from the case when getting married and when it comes to the normal naming ceremony, they're fixed at 150,000 Z. It's a decently large amount of money so that's also a hotbed for nameless people. Occasionally wealthy people name their horses and cattle as well. I did too though. If a time ever comes when I talk about the name of my horse I'll tell you. Ah, Miduchi calls her horse Ball Dragon but she hasn't had it named. Incidentally the horses the King's ride are traditionally named based on their hereditary disposition like, "Segaifa", "Black.Kotezan", and "Ashuri". Putting aside the latter two, isn't the first one mispronounced?

Furthermore, if you steal someones horse or livestock as long as it's not within one year it seems you can get it named without a problem. If it's within one year? Then it's the lightning.

The battle axe we obtained from the Mino was displayed as {Double-Edge Battle Axe} on the status. It didn't have any proper nouns in the name like the {Blade.Cusinart} that said to be made by the legendary master blacksmith Cusinart so including myself we all ended up overlooking it. Among the things that the so-called master craftsman produce it seems there's rarely items that take on the name of the artisan.

Also, there's times when the name would be attached it before anyone realizes it. For example, if there's a {Granite} rock used as a landmark in some region that's called the "pointed rock" it seems that one day it would suddenly be named {Pointed.Rock}.

Really though thanks for your trouble.

"It seems you cleared the 8th floor right. Congratulations, Greed-kun."

His highness Richard who was lined up beside me made a light smile while congratulating me. Come to think of it they were saying something like I was brought up as a topic between him and the King.

"Thank you very much. However, it's because I was blessed with good luck and had the help of my allies that I was able to do it."

I'll keep my replies admirable.

"Don't be modest. It's something extraordinarily splendid. I think it's an achievement you can be proud of."

Mu, come to think of it I surpassed the achievement of his ancestor. If I say something admirable or show too much modesty then it might be taken as if the achievements of the founding King weren't anything big.

"..Certainly. We struggled a considerable amount and were obstructed by countless powerful monsters. I feel quite proud of it as well. Most likely among the adventurers currently in Baldukk it's impossible for anyone other than us."

"Umu. It's an achievement you should be proud of like that.

Wouldn't Lord Greed be delighted as if it was her own as well? I guess if it's that genius witch then this younger brother is also possible."

..I was the one who raised Al, and I can..t see her boasting like that. My sister wouldn't say something like that. Just in regards to me. In the first place she didn't raise me.

"I would be happy if that's the case. But, I still can't raise my head to my sister."

"Hahhahaha..She's quite the hard worker after all..Though it seems it'll still be quite a while before she gets married."

Eh? Was there something about her getting married!? Her appearance it somewhat good but she has no chest? Seeing my make a surprised face I guess, his highness said, "It can't be, you didn't know? I thought it was pretty famous though". Yeah, I didn't hear anything about it!

"Nn, since you're family I thought you knew about it as well though. I think it was around the end of last month..Or was it at the start of this month? It seems she proposed to a knight from the knight group."

Yeah, unless it's sister who's the one proposing then..And,

Eeeh~!!?

"To..To who..."

My voice was breaking up from how unexpected it was.

"It was Lord Gulohoretz. I don't know the reason but it seems he turned her down."

Pu..Kyahahahaha, you were rejected! She was rejected, that older sister! Take that...Shit..

If it's Lord Gulohoretz then I know him.

He's a knight from the same third company as sister.

If I remember correctly he's a person who received investiture as a knight the year or two years after sister received investiture.

We sold him armor as well..or not, father gave it to him when he came along as an escort when sister received investiture as a knight.

As a knight he's sister's junior but in terms of age he should have been 7 or 8 years older.

I guess he's just before 30 now?

My impression of him was pretty weak but I can remember his face.

Chi..Is your face one that can be picky with women!

What~an extravagant thing he's done!

He's got a slender face like a horse and messy short brown hair.

He also had a thick beard right.

It seemed like he was clumsy at shaving and there was some cuts below his jaw.

Even that sort of frightening face..I guess if they're a party of the ultra super elite first knight group then they can pick and choose as they please huh?

But, shit...

Come to think of it today while doing deliveries sister seemed to be avoiding showing her face to me and just talked with the Rasseg and Ryogu families...

I think she didn't even talk much with brother.

What is it, this feeling.

It's irritating.

That bastard, he rejected my sister!?

She's beautiful, strong, and her skills with spells are certain that sort of sister.

Even her age is still 22. She's still well within the marriageable age on Orth.

What in the world is there to complain..Even I wouldn't want her,
that woman.

There's too many problems with her personality.

Particularly the countless times she's treated her little brother badly..Though I guess it hasn't gotten bad huh?

This is bad, this is the type of matter where we should be lowering our heads begging him.

If he'll marry sister before she misses the marriageable age then we should even pay some consolation money..Though I guess that's fine since sister has a considerable amount.

"..ey..Hey, what is it?"

This is bad, I stopped walking. Additionally it seems the time inside of me stopped as well. It feels like I reflexively turned a bit red.

"Ah, please excuse me. I was just a bit surprised and.."

"Fufu. So you have a cute side to you as well."

"Huh?"

"No, don't mind it."

His highness Richard said that before starting to walk again. The expression he was making was like one facing a young child.

Ah, shit. How uncool~

.....

Taking the body measurements ended and it was just as the people from Bakuddo and the knight group were exchanging bidding each other farewell. Sister is here as well but she's standing in a place a bit of distance away.

"How about going to her side?"

His highness Richard said that being careful for me. I guess I'll depend on his words here. I lightly bowed to his highness before going to sister.

"What is it?"

Don't push yourself. Everyone has times when they want to cry. It's shameful so I won't lend you my chest but I'll at least accompany you for a drink. It's even fine to borrow a private room.

"What, you're creeping me out."

Several days after I was rejected by my girlfriend in high school Yuumi I suddenly burst into tears. There's no problem~ after drinking for just a bit I'll leave my seat. I won't mind at all even if you become dynamite.

"What is up with that look of pity..Ah.."

Don't tense up so much.

Yeah, that's right. I've found out. I ended up finding out.

But you know, I won't tease you or anything.

In this world we're the only two of a kind, older sister and younger brother.

If there's anything I can do I'll do it for you.

If it's something like making use of my strength to threaten Lord Gulohoretz or on the contrary falling prostrate and begging him then something like that is no problem but I'm sure sister doesn't want for that either.

In the first place if I were to do something like that it would just make sister even more pitiful.

The only thing I can do is indirectly hint that I "know" and prepare a situation where she can be alone.

Sister is still living in the lodging for the knight group and I haven't heard of her having a private room.

Since she's received investiture as a knight I wonder if she already has a private room?

Well, it's fine either way.

"Hey, Mill, Al, what are you doing? Come over here and thank his excellency the knight commander with me."

I can hear the voice of brother calling out to us.

Sister must not want brother to know about it either.

"Shall we go, we're being called."

I let out an unexpectedly gentle voice. And the moment I thought that sister looked at me with a slightly suspicious face. Idiot, even I've grown up..I've been a good adult that can differentiate sweet and sour since the moment I was born~

"Yeah.."

Though I say that, she nodded surprisingly obediently and followed behind me.

After greeting Baron Logan who was grandly laughing as he shook brother's hand, we thanked him for the orders next time and sister lowered her head beside me while the baron kept hitting me on the back. I couldn't see any particular difference in Baron Logan's attitude. He seems just the same as usual. There's several other women than sister in the first knight group so I'm sure it's not like this is the first time for these sorts of love affairs. Also, it seems it's already a story from a month or so ago and it's nothing for the knight commander to be concerned over.

That night we gathered together for a huge banquet with brother and the others, the Ryogu family, the Donneoru family, in addition to my slaves(Of course it's the combat slaves Zulu and Angela.

Including the children, the Basutorial couple, and Giberuti weren't with us). Sister said she had work for the knight group so she isn't participating.

The topic of discussion was obviously me clearing through the 8th floor. Being praised by everyone, while feeling pretty good for a while I ate and drank myself full. It was unusual that even brother was so pleased he got considerably drunk. I was greatly satisfied that just brother was this pleased. I guess it was worth it. Come to think of it I still haven't been congratulated by sister.

There's also the matter of showing the faces of Rasseg and the others so we still need to appear in the station of the first knight group at the castle for a while longer, after tomorrow, if I run into her somewhere I'll ask her out to dinner on her day off.

.....

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 27

It took quite a bit of time going to the government office in the morning to finish up registering the employees for my company. In any world government offices are difficult to deal with. It's not like they're even slacking off but the common people all just make complaints about insignificant things. Though I say that, that's something that can't be helped either. It's difficult.

In reality there's not much of a problem even if I don't register them every time but there's also a good portion of things that I can relax over if they are properly registered in the off chance that it's ever pointed out in a strange place. It's troublesome but I guess this is one of the so-called obligations of society.

It was an uneventful day together with the Rasseg, Rafitto, Mili, and Harris, the five of us sipped tea at the tea house next to the government office while I spent it picking my nose. We spent the day taking shifts with one person waiting in the lobby of the government not knowing when we'd be called and if you mention that there's a long waiting time it's already hard to put into words.

Well, I guess it was good for relaxing?

After we finished our business at the government office, I brought them to show our faces in the factory. I need to introduce them to the slaves and because I want them both to at least remember each others faces and names.

They setup a cart on the side of the factory facing the street and there was a group of several people there. In addition to Cathy calling out, John's energetic voice was echoing around. It seems there's another two people there but it's not Terry. They must be having a different slave child gain experience as a sales clerk.

So they're getting to it right away? I'm relieved that it seems to be having a good start. I've been properly getting reports from them but actually seeing it with my own eyes brings a real sense of feeling it after all. However, I'm amazed they've managed to gather customers even though it's in that bad location unsuitable for a cart.

I was keeping an eye on things from a bit of distance away but I said, "Anything is fine so go and buy something and try eating it." before handing Harris 1 large copper coin(1,000 Z) and sending him off. Rasseg and Mili were lowering their heads for the trouble from start to finish but this is a learning experience for Harris as well. Harris should have never done something like shopping.

Now then, I wonder what will happen?

During breakfast and lunch today I paid for it.

If he watches properly then he should be able to do it right.

Either because he was ordered by me or from the excitement of shopping for the first time Harris ran off but his footsteps slowed down soon after. It seems he's observing from the side of the crowd. You tell the sales clerk what you want and hand over money in exchange for it. If there's any change then you take that right away. And then you put mustard to your taste on the Baldoggie you buy before biting into it. It's simple but it should be good for learning how to use money. It's not particularly anything difficult.

Harris said something to the slave that was acting as sales clerk.

The slave child said something to John who was cooking a Baldoggie on the frying pan.

John said, "Sure thing" energetically before picking out a cooked Baldoggie from the frying pan and handing it to the sales clerk.

The sales clerk said something to Harris and he properly handed over the coin in his right hand while taking the skewer with the Baldoggie in his left hand then put mustard on it from the bottle with a spoon.

And bit into it.

He's overflowing with smiles.

When the sales clerk handed back the change to Harris and he made a slightly surprised face as he took it.

He forgot about it, that.

I almost burst into laughter.

Rasseg and the others must have noticed as well they started lowering their heads apologetically again.

It's fine.

With this I'm sure he'll never forget about the change again.

After taking the change it seems Harris couldn't stop his mouth as he returned back to where we were while biting into it.

He was a bit embarrassed.

The change Harris handed back to me was 5 copper coins (500 Z).

Huh? Isn't that too few?

The Baldoggie Harris was biting into was the Kazotto(cheese) type.

It should have left a change of 650 Z though...

I wonder why?

Even if Harris doesn't know how to use money I can't imagine that they would deceive him on the change.

Then in that case is it a calculation mistake?

It's only been about a month since I bought that sales clerk slave so I guess these sorts of things happen?

After Harris returned I was thinking it was strange while waiting for him to finish eating the Baldoggie then we all walked to the factory. I identified the reason when we approached the cart. The price tag on the Kazotto(Cheese) type was 500 Z. Isn't that more expensive than ones with chili? I'm amazed they can sell with this price.

When I approached them together with everyone it seems Cathy noticed right away. Following that John.

And then the sales clerk as well.

""Welcome, master.""

The two sales clerks other than John and Cathy greeted me in a hurry. Hearing their voices the customers who were lined up noticed me as well. It's the appearance of the owner after all.

"Nn."

I just lightly nodded to smooth over the situation. While still casually calling out to the customers Cathy and John both made a bit of an expression like, "I screwed up." Wahan~ they forgot that while dealing with customers even if it's me they don't have to greet me. Well, I guess it's fine, since it seems like they noticed

it.

After entering the factory and Basutorial, Giberuti, and Terry were carefully teaching how to use the mincer. Zulu and Angela were sitting in chairs in the corner looking bored. Seeing my face all of the slaves said "Good morning, master" in chorus. Basutorial was making a proud expression. So the one who taught them that Good morning was you? Furthermore, when I tried asking Basutorial about the price of the ones with Kazotto in them and "Yeah, since we weren't able to obtain much of a stock of kazotto. We've labeled them as a high class premium version with a slightly higher price but they're properly selling." said that. This guy, he's good.

Chapter 252: Continuation

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 3

"And, why were you rejected?"

I've repeated the same question to sister a number of times while she's drunk and more likely to talk.

"..I'm grateful for your feelings and I have good feelings towards you as well but I've already decided that Kurea is my only wife, or said something like that..I already know..that sort of thing.."

And then sister answered with the same reply again as well. At first she praised me for clearing the 8th floor like "As expected of someone I trained" but I'm already tired of hearing it. I held a consolation party for sister after I was finally able to invite her to dinner on a day off.

We entered this reasonably high rank restaurant called Maruhasu at about 3 pm. Right now it should already be past 8 pm. Brother is together with Rozural, Wendy, and Dianne supervising the transfer of duties for the various times of rubber products and repairs at the workshop and around now should be finishing up dinner together with everyone.

It's already been over 5 hours since sister and I took up our spots at a table in the back of the restaurant. Before I realized it there's a huge bottle(about 1.8 liters) of wheat vodka emptied out. Though I drank about 80% of it. It seems sister is weak to alcohol. While remembering the Chuhai from my past life I split the wheat vodka by about 1/10th with juice to make it easier to drink but in no time at all she was drunk. I'll tell Miduchi about it later. If it's alcohol then she can't definitely win against sister.

"Ah, use {Neutralize.Poison} one more time! This is delicious!"

"Yeah~Yeah"

I use the spell {Neutralize.Poison} on sister(since sister is drunk she can't concentrate to use any spells) for who knows how many times it's been while sighing to myself. I ordered some more juice from oranges and honey and additionally had them refill the ice pale with ice as well. Of course I can do it myself as well but it's a restaurant so I should properly order and pay for it. Rather since I'm essentially returning someone to normal every time they get drunk and letting them drink even more alcohol the restaurant should be thanking me.

"Ngu..Ngu!! You sure know a good way to drink it. I give you my praise!"

"Yeah, thank you my lord."

I return a half-assed reply while poking at my sazae cooked in the shell with just salt and no soy sauce. They use fire to take the body from the shell and serve it on the plate where you cut it with a knife and fork but there's no refinement or anything else to it. Since I have the chance I'd like to eat it with chopsticks~ It's unfortunate I forgot to bring along my chopsticks.

"Ah! I want to eat that! Baldoggie!"

"Yeah~yeah. Hey, Zulu."

I turn around and called out to Zulu who was eating and drinking together with Angela and Giberuti at the next table.

"Yes, I'll go and get some and come back."

Sorry about that. But, you don't drink alcohol. Angela and Giberuti seem to be somewhat drunk and having a good time so the only one left that could even be considered a decent bodyguard is Zulu. Even if he goes to the sausage factory right now excluding John and Terry who sleep over there no one else should be remaining. If there's none remaining in stock then I guess John and Terry will be slapped awake by Zulu in the first stages of sleep before being made to make sausages in the middle of the night..Maybe I'll buy them some candy next time I go.

"And you know~ That Yuri you know~ even though he looks like that he's gentle right...Aaa~"

There's no Aaa~ to it. The one who wants to sigh is me. Why did things turn out like this?

In the several days since then we dragged the Donneoru family around to our frequent customers like the brothels and shoemakers, had them remember the faces of my slaves once again, and did a simple introduction of how the sausages are made as time passed by quickly, even when it was just teaching them the necessary office work that needs to be processed and the way to mark the sales in the ledger this many days passed by.

It was on that sort of occasion where I received contact that sister was finally able to have this day off so I adjusted my schedule and invited her out for a meal, then after getting her drunk and having her forget everything to let her feelings out, the result was this. Putting it simply it was sister's illicit love towards lord Yuri.Gurohoretz.

However, obviously the first knight group of Rombert King is the super elite course. By the point they're enlisting almost everyone is already a true knight from some knight group and has a good reputation in their birthplace, so of course~ it's only obvious someone would have already attached their strings to him. It's not unusual for people in it to already be married at all.

He was already married by the time he entered the first knight group as a squire and by the time sister received investiture as a true knight it was around the time he even had children. Obviously that would mean that sister was aiming for the spot of Lord Gurohoretz's second wife.

Honestly speaking, from an Orth way of looking at it when it comes to marrying a person from the first group whether it's the first or second there's nothing to complain about at all. Even sister herself is a knight from the first knight group as well and let alone enough to not be troubled over money for the rest of her life, she's basically already been promised more money than the average income for a Lord of a village in a remote region on Orth. In the off chance that she actually makes some sort of large achievement and gets promoted up to company commander then it would even open her path to becoming a formal Viscount.

There's plenty to cheer about it.

"About Lord Gurohoretz, that just means that he loves his first wife that much right. Doesn't that mean he's not the type of person who would marry a second wife so easily just because she's young right. He's a good person."

"That's right..He entered the first knight group one year before me and he's an amazingly excellent person, has a lot of experience, and he's reliable as well. He was always paying attention to those around him and he's gentle..Even though I didn't know my right from left he said I was intelligent and cute.."

Yeah~yeah. I wonder how many times we've had this conversation now...Since sister came from a remote village with almost no life experience before she realized it she opened her heart to lord Gurohoretz who was older and reliable. Thanks to her superior magic skills she managed to overtake him in terms of career in the first knight group but I'm sure that sort of thing didn't matter to sister at all. Though if you say that's just like sister then that's also true.

If you were to ask me I'd push the person called Robert.Busshu who had just entered the first knight group around two years ago and in the middle of struggling at the bottom as a squire. In terms of age he's 23, one year older than sister and just the same as sister he's the third son of some Viscount family so I'm sure he has a hungry spirit to him as well. His face was considerably good looking with a wild sort of feel to it and just from what I saw he didn't seem like he had a bad personality either. I don't know as far as his abilities but in the first place there's no one who can enter the first knight group with no real skill.

However, it's not something to talk about right now so for today I'll accompany her until she's satisfied.

.....

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 6

We've almost completely finished transferring over all of the duties and the day for brother and the Ryogu family to return to Bakuddo has arrived. It's regrettable that I have to part ways with the squire family that's supported me through light and dark over these past two years but Rasseg and the others are taking over that role.

"Al-sama, please take good care of yourself."

"We've been in your care. Please give everyone our regards."

The Ryogu family all said their farewells as the older Rozural and Wendy sat together in the coachman's seat and the younger Luke and Dianne fortified the carriage as escorts with the other squires.

"I'm the one who's been your care. You all stay healthy as well.

See you again."

After we saw them off early in the morning a bit of time passed as we slightly shifted the positions of the Donneoru family's furniture and the Yotlen family lectured them on the store. In regards to the sausage factory it's proceeding a lot more smoothly than I thought and if it's like this then she should be able to receive the support of Rasseg and the others so it's probably fine to just leave it to Cathy already. Accompanied by Basutorial and my combat slaves we decided to return to Baldukk after lunch today as well.

"Then Cathy. Just as originally planned we'll be returning from the dungeon on the 12th so come to Baldukk on the evening of that day.

It's fine for you to close the factory until the 15th while you're gone."

I stopped Basutorial and said that when he was proposing having

Cathy work on the production for another month because of how crucial things are after first starting. That's no good. She and the others have already been working without break(learning the job) since last month when we started doing test operations for the factory.

Certainly that sort of thing is necessary for the start but I had already intended to make a day to close things down for a holiday. It would be better to make it known among the merchants that we deal with in Rombertia early on to avoid trouble later. It's fine to setup a rotation shift for holidays and keep things operating everyday once everyone has gotten more used to the job. It's not like I'm giving the slaves a day off out of kindness.

People you know, if they're forced to keep working without breaks I think the efficiency of their work falls. Though you can't take breaks from something like farm work. I intend to pay the bare minimum wages so they can eat and go on living and I'm sure it would be boring if their only use for that money in their lifetime was just the next days meal. I have no intention of saying something like a mere slave should find a hobby but I'm sure everyone needs time to relax.

Eventually when the slaves working at the sausage factory show that they're very loyal and have the necessary qualities then in order I intend to have them take on different jobs so there is the face that I want them to get used to my way of doing things quickly.

Rather~ my real aim is that I want John and Terry who have already learned simple reading, writing, and math from Basutorial on their days off to act as teachers and teach them as well.

If it comes to that then the next generation after them will be able to learn to read at an even younger age I'm sure. The meaning in preparing half of each boys and girls of the same age and race should start appear around 10 or 20 years later. It's a method I decided on using Lail Kingdom as an example from what I heard from Miduchi but I'm sure it's effective.

Centering around the roughly 30 members of the {Slaughterers} right now and around 100 young slaves. It's really the bare minimum number of subordinates I'll need when I eventually get my own territory. Of course it's always better to have even more slaves who won't betray me no matter what happens though. Well, it will cost a reasonable amount of money and it's a matter for a bit further into the future so in that regard~

I left driving the carriage we borrowed to Basutorial as I sat down in the coachman's seat next to him and talked until we arrived at Baldukk. I handed Giberuti the money for renting the carriage and the food expense for when we enter the dungeon and sent him to return it before I went back to the inn but no one was around.

Everyone must have gone to play somewhere. I already had conveyed to them that I would return to Baldukk today so the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} matched their schedules up to return to the surface today as well~ but while thinking that, for the time being I sent Zulu and Angela to Kamu and Ginger's inn.

It's necessary to have a meeting them them as well so I wanted to reserve a random restaurant tonight and discuss our plan from here on out. Shortly after Zulu and Angela came back but both of them had nothing. Since it couldn't be helped I told them to return to their inn once and leave their belongings before coming back while Basutorial and I killed time taking showers.

However, while we were taking our showers everyone who has a room in Boil Manor ended up returning. When I tried asking Miduchi where they went it seems all of the {Slaughterers} went to the outer areas of the outer crater this morning for training. Hmm.

In any case just as planned it's possible to talk to Kamu and Ginger tonight. I felt a bit bad for Zulu and Angela but after they returned I sent them off towards Kamu and Ginger's inn again with a message that I want them to come to Murowa after they take a short break and if Zulu and Angela don't have any plans afterwards I asked them to go to Murowa first and reserve the place.

I laid face down on my bed in Boil Manor for the first time in two weeks while organizing things in my head for a bit. The details were about the organization of all three teams of the {Slaughterers} for the time being. Thanks to rushing into the 9th floor this time I've surpassed the achievement of the founding King and am quickly becoming the person of the moment.

Honestly speaking, something like what floor I've made it to in the dungeon of Baldukk on this corner of the Ollad Continent doesn't matter to me at all. If I could just surpass the achievement of the founding King then it would add a gold lining to my actions but there's almost nothing other than that. Though I say that, as expected things like a gold lining and prestige you can't buy with money so as much as possible I intend to make practical use of it.

Well, in the first place I came to enter the dungeon seeking treasure just the same as all of the many other adventurers who've gathered, so something like clearing through the floors is nothing more than a bonus. Since it just means that the number of rivals decreases, relative to that our portion should increase, or at least it was my true intention to aim for the lower floors with those sorts of expectations.

I had high hopes when the door opened of the first altar shrine we found on the 9th floor but since it was empty you could say it was greatly beneficial just that we can now predict things aren't as simple as that.

I'm sure not all of the shrines in the altar rooms have something in them from the start.

It's something that was often said in Baldukk, "Since the founding King made the Kingdom of Rombert using treasure he obtained on the 8th floor, even if it's not all of the altar shrines that exist on the 8th floor he should have been able to monopolize a considerable amount of them." and I didn't have any material to deny that either. Or rather I wanted to believe in it. It's because I wanted to believe that if we go to a new floor we'd be able to take all the treasure from the altar rooms there as we please and if that was the case it would have been more convenient for me as well.

However, putting aside the ores you can find digging up the floor or walls(It's great that the pickax we bought in the past didn't end up completely pointless), we confirmed that just the same as in the past the altar rooms are occasionally empty so there was no choice other than to revise my plan.

It's certainly true that when we entered the 9th floor I was thinking something like, "If we remain adequately careful then just by randomly exploring the 9th floor we can obtain lots of treasure no one has touched. Even in the worst case that we can't obtain enough valuable treasure for me to buy a territory then matching it together with the treasure from the 10th floor beyond that then there's no way we wouldn't find treasure with a high enough overall value to do it, with this we can say goodbye to this moldy dungeon."

It was really counting the chickens before they've hatched but I wanted to say goodbye to the dungeon at the latest in the middle of next year(of course in terms of appearances we'd still continue as adventurers challenging the dungeon) while Miduchi and I spend about half a year searching for the ingredients necessary for the medicine and if we can find them that's great. Even if we can't completely find them we should be able to gather quite a few. Simultaneously in order for Gwine to produce a map of the Dirt Plains I'll have Zenom and Ralpa who are used to traveling act as her escorts along with a couple of my combat slaves join them on exploring. While looking for a good time I'll select one of the treasures with a reasonable value to it and present it to the King..or at least I was dreaming of that.

However, I'm sure things won't go so easily~ and I already thought this would be the case somewhere in my mind. It seems that this time that way of thinking was correct. Unless we have considerably good luck I'm sure it'll still be necessary to continue exploring the dungeon for a while longer. Miduchi was saying something that sounded pretty random like "Normally the chances of finding treasure should increase on the lower floors and the value of items should be higher as well" but it seems the basis for it is games from our previous life so I can't put any faith in it at all. Just like everyone said even if Miduchi's opinion is correct (Though I do think it's probably correct~), regardless of whether the probability of finding them is higher and the value of the treasures we find increase if you compare it to definitely obtaining treasure from every altar then in the end it's no different from what we've been doing up until now. Just because they've increased the number of winners and prize money for 1st to 3rd place lottery tickets sold by Mizuho Bank, if you were to ask me it's hard to say something like "That's great." about it. Of course it's not something that's bad. Still, it's not as if I've forgotten about the huge specially made altar with no summoned monsters and the door of the shrine open from the start that we saw the first time we entered the 8th floor. Now then, I guess it's about time go. Before I announce things to everyone I need to make the necessary preparations under the guise of a meeting with Kamu and Ginger.

Chapter 253: Respective Approach

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 8

Since there's also the convenience of the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} days off, with one day in between that starting this morning we {Slaughterers} have stepped foot into the dungeon again. This time when entering the dungeon we've sent Zenom to the {Butchers} and Zulu to the {Exterminators}. Including myself the remaining 9 of us are the unit exploring the 9th floor but up until now I've just had the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} continue training in the dungeon and not let them do anything like exploration.

Starting this time other than the time spent clearing the floors

I've also given them a different mission. Explaining starting with the {Exterminators} that has the simpler one and I have them delivering consumables centered around dried meat to the 4th floor. I have them piston transporting the supplies over the one and a half day one-way trip to the teleport crystal on the 4th floor. The only parties that have arrived at the teleport room on the 4th floor and setup camp there excluding us {Slaughterers} is currently just those that have gone past the 5th floor, {Verdure.Brotherhood}, {Black.Topaz}, {Gehenna.Flare}, just those three.

They leave one person there to watch over it and then after the remaining 9 of them lower the supplies they teleport back to the surface right away and then enter the dungeon after preparing more supplies once more.

Next up is the {Butchers}. I have them primarily doing the job of {porters}. They end up transporting the supplies that have gathered in the teleport room on the 4th floor once more to the teleport room on the 6th floor. What you need to be careful of here is that I changed the organization of members in the {Butchers} and {Exterminators}. I moved Ginger and Hisu out from the {Exterminators} to the {Butchers} and in exchange for them I moved my combat slaves Henry and Rubi from the {Butchers} to the {Exterminators}.

Since the {Butchers} ended up organized with almost completely the members of the former {Sun.Ray} I left things there in the care of Zenom who everyone including them look up to. Even from their end Zenom is a leader they can relax with and they don't have any doubts at all about his abilities. As bait I also said, "Zenom will keep an eye on things during the journey down and if he gives his okay then it's fine if you beat down some ogres on the 7th floor to a reasonable extent."

Thanks to that this time the morale of the {Butchers} is strangely high. The members who it took the shape of being left behind in the {Exterminators} were upset but they know the best that their abilities are low from the combined training we do. If I were to speak my real feelings I'd have preferred if even just Rodrick moved over to the {Butchers} since it would be easier for him to earn experience points.

In regards to this I discussed it with Kamu and Ginger the night of the day before yesterday and for the time being they accepted it as well. Above all else the fact that he can use magic is big. Putting aside healing spells, attack spells are indispensable in combat further in the dungeon.

Particularly Kamu who's previously experienced combat on the 7th floor. Since it's almost right to say attack spells are a requirement to taking on ogres she was actually progressively pushing for it. If Zenom is accompanying them then there's also the expectation that Zenom will almost definitely take down one ogre himself so there was no point in even taking into consideration the death of a member including Rodrick. Even I don't think there would be any problem with taking on the few in number ogres that appear in the areas where you first teleport into the 7th floor as long as they have Zenom.

In addition to that there's also the reason that Rodrick is the eldest son of Count Faruergaz who has both political and financial power. It would result in a gold lining for Rodrick and hearing of his efforts the Faruergaz family might send combat slaves or some kind of aid it seems. If that's true then it's certainly something good and I've also heard of similar stories before so it would be a happy occasion if we could put into practice. If the number of combat slaves increases then it would be possible to rotate the members out as well.

The amount of experience each individual gains would decrease but it would raise the average for the lower level people. It's not like everyone has to reach the realm of a first-rate adventurer after all. Even if they don't make full use of their increased ability values, if they can just level up and the time is right there's also the benefit of an increase to HP after all.

In any case after I managed to get the two of them to agree I called out Rodrick and tried sounding it out with him but he turned it down. The primary reason was, "Moving itself is appealing but I have combat slaves that I need to take responsibility looking after." Hearing that Kamu and Ginger were enraged.

"If you're going to say that then what about Al who has combat slaves in both the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} and depending on the case even sends over Zulu and Angela? Are you saying that Al isn't taking responsibility for his combat slaves?" was their viewpoint on it. Hearing that while I thought it made sense, I fully intend to be taking responsibility for their lives but I felt like it was a bit different from what Rodrick wanted to say so I approved of his wishes.

And just a bit I empathized with Rodrick's way of thinking. Somewhere I still haven't completely accepted the concept of slaves. I have the feeling as if I'm employing cheap labor. I was born and raised in Bakuddo village which wasn't very wealthy and somewhat carefree so a big part of it is that I was able to grow up without touching the tragic side of slavery almost at all. Adding to that almost all of the slaves I was in contact with were serfs and they were focused around manual labor.

After starting the rubber business there was another source of labor needed centering around the squires and their family. However, just the same as before agriculture was still the largest key industry. We can't treat the laborers who support that agriculture unreasonably. The slaves who work from morning to night for low wages without any real holidays are important assets but there was never any pitiful situation where we had to tear apart families going against their individual will. Rather, in some meanings my parents used slaves in more of a systematic way. They didn't just give duties out based on what the individual was suited towards but I think they put in work so they wouldn't lose their important assets that easily.

There's various ways of thinking about this but at the very least I think both my father Hegard and mother Shal interacted with the slaves under the thinking that, "Slaves aren't just an important source of labor but they're the important citizens who make up the majority of our population. As the Lord we need to take responsibility for the lives of our citizens." Since I was raised seeing that I think I was also somehow imprinted with the "ideal way of interacting with slaves" based on their impression. Slaves to my parents are "People who they should take full responsibility themselves in protecting." Probably. As a matter of fact it's a bit of a complex of mine that I don't think I can justify it to myself that far.

Of course, it's not like I don't like that either but it's difficult.

In comparison to me in those conditions, while Rodrick wasn't the eldest child of the wealthy Count Faruergaz, he was born as the eldest son. Supposedly ever since his infancy other than serfs there was a lot of different slaves in his house. He even said that there were useless slaves. Slaves like that were easily sold off.

Supposedly excluding a few excellent slaves all the ones that worked at his house would end up being sold off in at longest a few years.

Rodrick always thought they were pitiful in that sort of situation.

It left him with the way of thinking that the first combat slaves he owned individually Denda and Karimu were important and he wanted to take good care of them over many years. If you were to ask I think he ended up naturally being raised with a way of thinking closer to my parents. Though the only differing part is "Always remaining on the side of their master watching over them" or "Wanting them to be able to live their own lives even without their master" and it's not really the type of case of which one is better or correct.

If you were to ask which one was closer to the current Orth then it's the former. They say, "Blessed with a fine master, devote with loyalty, and have a fine life." it's a phrase that's like the ideals of slaves on Orth. Rodrick is probably thinking of becoming the embodiment for that. That itself is something that should be recognized as proper. Even I want to be the embodiment of that phrase in my own way. I just thought that while we're using different methods I'm aiming for the same place as Rodrick as well.

I thought, just as expected from someone raised in the family of a high ranking noble. It's the same for me as well but Toris and Bel were both born in noble families but our way of thinking hasn't adapted to the "Orth way" like Rodrick. I can't remember when it was but a short while after we met, when I was having dinner together with the three of us including Hirosukol there's something that he said.

"I don't think slavery is something that should be allowed. But, since the system of society is already based around it, it's just futile trying to struggle against it. These past few months I've learned several important things."

When Rodrick said that as he was starting to get drunk Hirosukol said.

"Ho? What kind of things?"

"If I were to purchase a slave from here on out then it means that at least I want to let that slave live a life I think is good."

Hearing that I thought "He~". After all I didn't think it was the type of line someone who found Basutoral's origins pitiful and forcefully saved him from the slave ranking would say. At the same time I thought that he was thinking about a lot of things in his own way as well. It was that sort of him that I gave the advice to try buying some combat slaves. I heard that Rodrick bought two combat slaves several days after that.

After that he's always taken good care of Denda and Karimu the two of them. He's probably not thinking of entering a different party without them. It was to the point where he declared he would change parties together with the three of them after all. In order for all three of them to switch to the {Slaughterers} together they're always continuing their running whenever they have the time. I guess the results of that are showing because the other day he happily said to me, "All three of us are only 15 minutes away from reaching the goal."

In any case, while everything didn't go exactly as I hoped from the start, the new formation was decided.

Now we just need to keep exploring the 9th floor and I want some kind of results.

.....

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 12

It's the second day since we started exploring the 9th floor this time.

Along the way the room we ran into after teleporting twice had an altar we were already used to seeing. Before charging into the room I created enough dirt in the center of the room to cover 50 meters in every direction burying the gargoyles up their neck.

"Ralpha, Toris, Angela. You three are the {Advance.Guard}. Aim for the powerful one that gets summoned."

The three of them silently nod. Ralpha is licking her lips.

"Gwine and Basutorial are the {Spear.Interceptors}. Don't let the Kobold or Goblins or whatever approach us."

Gwine caresses her beard while holding the {Spear.Of.Piercing} on her side while Basutorial made a tense face as he maintained the stance to charge with both hands properly on his spear.

"It doesn't matter if it's bow or magic but Miduchi and Bel hit the Kobolds and such with that to confuse them."

The two of them probably predicted I would say that. They were already confirming the bowstrings with their left hand and pulling an arrow from the quiver on their back.

"I'll start off by hitting the small fries with a {Fire Ball}.

After that, I'll keep an eye on the state of things and if it's necessary I'll support appropriate with spells. If I have the leeway then I'll finish off the gargoyles. Alright, let's go!"

The boss that was summoned this time was a {Green Gargantuan Spider}. It's a frightening monster with deadly poison.

However, just the same as when we came up to here, Toris was freely swinging around {Flame.Tongue} in all of it's fury and in no time at all the eerie green hairs tightly packed across the surface of the spider's body were lit on fire slowing the movements of the Gargantuan Spider. Even the strings coming from it's butt (something like a natural {Web} spell) are no threat at all to Toris swinging {Flame.Tongue}.

Simultaneously I sent a {Fire Ball} aimed towards the center of the Kobolds that were summoned and in no time at all after it more than half of them died instantly, then while stunned before they could use spells they were finished off by Gwine and Basutorial's spears and Miduchi and Bel's arrows. The gargoyles were skilled without being able to do anything either.

When the movements of the Giant Spider are slowed from the flames covering it's entire body Angela and Ralpa use their weapons to gradually reduce the number of legs it has.

Finally after being smashed in the head with the tomahawk the spider stopped moving.

At the same time the shrine on the altar opened.

It's just these times that everyone is focused on the shrine.

While basking in eight looks filled with expectation the door of the shrine opened.

The same as usual Angela stuck her hands into the shrine and grabbed the thing that was enshrined inside of it. It seems it's difficult to grab this time so she put in not just her left hand but right hand as well.

Hohou. I wonder what will come out...Everyone gulps with their throat as they look at the item Angela pulled out of the shrine.

Sure enough what came out was a metal ore just a bit bigger than the size of a softball. Judging from the color I guess it's silver? Since it isn't dark it should be high quality. It's easily over 1,000,000 Z but it's still boring.

"Silver huh...It's extravagant but if it were gold."

"We've gotten quite extravagant as well right..But silver is it.."

Ralpa and Bel both sighed at the same time.

"This, somehow it's extremely heavy.."

Angela said that while holding out the silver ore for me. She's holding it in both hands.

"{Status Open}"

{Tungsten Ore}

"What?!?"

Seeing the status I was so surprised I let out a loud voice and Angela almost dropped the ore. Everyone who was watching as if it was uninteresting was a bit surprised wondering what in the world it was.

On Earth it's not particularly a precious metal or anything like that but it's reasonably rare. Though I say that the price isn't anything great. It's several thousand yen per 1 kg or so and cheaper than silver. Since it's weight is close to platinum and gold it's famous for being used in plating fraud and shouldn't be really well known by the average person.

However, something even more characteristic of it is that it's melting point is over 3,000 degrees and it's not easy to melt. If I use the spell {Transmute.Rock.To.Mud} to make a pot and mixing rod then even someone who doesn't know the spell can make any alloy they please as long as they have the mana. That is if they know the mixing ratio for it. Even Platinum and Osmium can be melted with fire magic and around 30 MP.

Even after using Identify it seems to be the tungsten that I know as well. If I just improvise a bit with the grip of the mixing rod and pot then it should be possible to create a considerably large crucible with this amount.

We've found something good.

"Hey, what is that? Isn't it silver?"

"Yeah, listen and be surprised. It's tungsten!"

Hearing that Miduchi's eyes opened wide. And then she started muttering things like, "If we make a sword with that.." She sure is knowledgeable. Tungsten is a metal with a considerable hardness to it as well.

But it's heavy so wouldn't it be impossible as a handheld weapon?

"Tangu..What's that?"

"It's Tungsten, Ral."

"Gwine, you..Know about it?"

"I feel like I've heard the name before.."

"I don't know about it. Is it more valuable than silver?"

"Ah, the one used in industrial use tools.."

"Toris you know about it?"

"Hmn, I only know about that much."

After everyone started talking Miduchi triumphantly stuck out her noise as she started explaining.

"It's hard so it's used in drills for the purpose of manufacturing metal on top of that it's heavy so just like "depleted uranium" it's used as the core material in "APFSDS" and "High-Velocity Armor Piercing" rounds for "tanks". Since it doesn't let "radiation" pass through it's also used in the armor for "tanks" as well."

Putting aside the drill, I'm amazed she knows such specialized information like the tanks high-velocity armor piercing rounds or the depleted uranium. It's a bit admirable. When I tried praising her and, "Eh? This is common knowledge in my field?" said that with a strange face.

Didn't you work in the same foodstuff industry as me? Are you really that quiet Shiina? In the first place why do you know something like that? There's probably not a single other person in that company that knows and could casually say that stuff. Rather~ even someone who normally knows about tungsten would probably mention the fraud stuff or the fact that they're used for the filaments in light bulbs first right. I can't understand how she didn't touch on those at all either. Wouldn't she have been better off if she studied other things rather than accumulating all that strange information...

Putting that aside, currently her information has been considerably useful. Also, I don't have enough free time to question her on it that much.

However, I really got my hands on something good. Putting aside the shell case it should be useful in making the bullet and various other things.

Chapter 236: Center of 8th Floor

Year 7446, Month 6, Day 4

This time I'm accompany the {Exterminators}. We entered the dungeon on June 9th and left today but they precisely showed me they could clear the 3rd floor on the first day. Just as I had heard starting from the next day there were some struggles that could be seen on the 4th floor but I think there's largely no problem. Just as was reported excluding Ginger and Hisu since a lot of their members don't have much experience in the dungeon I guess, they were indifferent to the traps in the good meaning and that's believed to have lead to a speed up on their end.

Though in exchange for that, they were considerably careful and cautious with the combat. The reason for that is believed to be that there were no magic users other than Rodrick and Mekku excluding the leader. In other words, the number times they can use healing spells is low, is what it means. Well, when I first split up the teams, I already talked a lot about this point with Kamu. Since it leads to a stronger tendency for the combat to drag out, as a result of that the number of people with injuries increases, so you could say that it's easier for them to spend more time healing is a problem. However it's believed that they've built up a bit more strength than the second-rates of Baldukk and at about the same level as half first-rate.

Even though almost all of the members haven't spent much time in the dungeon, you could say that these results are considerably ahead. As proof of that when I'm standing at the front leading, this time since the number of injuries in combat was decreased we were able to clear through the 4th floor in four hours and it was one day but we were able to step foot on the 5th floor as well. However, after all individual strength is a big problem. The experienced Ginger and Hisu have few chances to stand at the front bearing the full brunt of the monsters. They have no choice but to center things around Rodrick, Sanno, and Mekku who use shields but because they're lacking in strength there were many close calls with the stronger monsters on the 5th floor. Especially when it comes to the monster rooms, even on the 4th floor if there isn't a leader from the {Slaughterers} it's probably too frightening to just watch. Yeah, for the time being they should accumulate experience on the 4th floor.

This time it's the {Butchers}. Different from the {Exterminators} last time, I guess since excluding my combat slaves they have comparably more veterans, they have a strong tendency to fear traps. However, in regards to combat I can watch it with some peace of mind. The number of magicians itself is only two people and the same but their experience is different. Even when it comes to magic rather than focusing entirely on healing, they properly get in some attack spells when they see good chances to attack. It's big that Misu can use spells from the rear and above all else the skills of Rokko the tank {Shield.Holder} are extremely high, you could say that the characteristic of this party is that they're reliable. He's using a shield but in terms of overall defensive techniques it might be better to say he's on the same level as Zenom. That he's not running is his own freedom so it doesn't matter at all but I thought in some meanings this guy might be a prodigy. Though I say that, it might not be all that strange for guys like this to be all over the place in the top teams. If Rodrick or Sanno are able to reach this level then I think I could relax and watch the {Exterminators} a bit more though.

Well, overall between the balance of caution and daring it would be good if it tilted a bit more towards daring. If the whoever comes from the {Slaughterers} isn't Zulu or Angela then I'm sure they can even take on the {Frost Lizard} if they prepare to take some injuries. Probably unless they get considerably full of themselves I doubt it would reach the point of casualties. I want to think that the countless months of experience they've earned on the 1st floor would be useful here. A number of people leveled up as well.

If it's the {Butchers} then at a time in the not so distant future..if they properly gain experience for another year or so then the 6th floor might be good as well. If you were to ask which the objective of this is more for my combat slaves to gain experience. You could say they're weighing them down after all. Though I say that even they're still useful at the front line and as an attacker so at this point in time I have no intention of switching them out with Ginger and Hisu using holding them back as a reason. If they were to switch place I'm sure they could manage on the 6th floor as well but as expected I can't permit the number of strings I have attached to them to be reduced in number. Even now I'm sure they could make it to the teleport crystal on the 5th floor. As expected clearing through both the 4th and 5th floors in one day is unreasonable but it's plenty possible for them to carry supplies to the 5th floor.

I was able to confirm them and I've already declared it as well.

Now then, shall we start clearing the 8th floor.

.....

Year 7446, Month 6, Day 26

"In regards to entering the dungeon tomorrow but this time we aren't dispatching anyone from the {Slaughterers}. Consequently the number of people in the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} will be decreased. I would like for you to explore without overdoing it this time."

The time for formation training ended and I started giving out directions in front of everyone.

"Yeah, this time, the {Slaughterers} will clear the 8th floor. In that case since we don't know what will happen as expected I want our full members. It'll cause trouble for everyone for one week but please pardon us on that."

I guess the fact that I said we'd clear the 8th floor is working?

Other than the {Slaughterers}, particularly the veteran members of the former {Sun.Ray}'s expressions changed. They all probably think that it's a chance to find treasure on a new floor I'm sure. I think their eyes are giving off a sharp glare. No, before you all can go to the 9th floor you need to build up a bit more strength.

As expected if you're as you are now even the 6th and 7th floors are overdoing it.

After that I took a variety of questions but fundamentally all of the details of the 8th floor I've reported on every time we go. I can't discuss anything new. Since it's believed that there's a powerful monsters making it's nest in what seems to be a large room in the center of the floor, I just said that I wanted the {Slaughterers} to go with full members so we don't lose any fighting power.

Furthermore, even in their case it seems that they do have some complaints they aren't included in the members currently but since we've already offered them the test it seems they were able to endure it. Yeah, if they can really past that test and furthermore gain plenty of results against ogres then I wouldn't mind switching them out. In that case, it would be difficult to continue hiding my massive amount of mana. That's why as preparation for that, recently I've been saying my magic special skill levels have been going up again and using mana in considerably large amounts. But, as expected it seems to be pushing it a bit right.

Well, I can't imagine that they would use that a reason to say something to me though. It's not like any casualties have ever come out as a result of hiding the amount of mana I have after all. In the first place in order to use spells you have to concentrate to the point of barely being able to remain conscious of anything else. That trend is particularly strong for advanced spells. This is something that every adventurer knows. Unless something of significant importance happens, idiots who carelessly use spells won't survive. That's why there's no one who would criticize me over something like that.

I think it'll be fine for the time being but when it comes to Ginger, Misu, and Jeru who have the most motivation and the highest possibility of changing out I'll follow up with them somehow, and depending on the case I think it might be fine to explain things about being reincarnated to them the same as Zenom and Zulu. It's not like there's any sort of harm in that information being exposed. Even if they say we reincarnated from a world with an advanced civilization if there's no proof of making something like that then they'll just be called liars.

Right now about the only thing is the mincer I guess? Even that if you just look at the inside the structure isn't all that complex. A skilled blacksmith or goldsmith can make something similar. The precision is high but from just a glance there's no way of telling that far after all. Even if you check it's status it just says, Brass Industrial Art Object {Brass.Craft}. Normally it would just end with saying, "Yeah, that's amazing, I'm amazed you thought of it. You're intelligent."

In order for the structure to not be leaked so easily we split up the parts and ordered them separately through various blacksmiths and goldsmiths in the capital and Baldukk. In the worst case, even if interference comes from the royal family or some other place I can't imagine it's at the level where it's no problem to cover it up. Rather, something like the structure of a mincer it's fine if the secret can just be protected for a couple of years. During that time it's important to create the brand image and put some distance between the copies made afterwards. The reason why Sha*essen still sells well at a comparatively high price even among similar products is largely because of the brand image it made being the first.

After that we quickly dispersed and went to purchase the food we were going to consume in the dungeon as well as producing sausages, then ate dinner. Furthermore, Bel and Toris kneaded some wheat flour to make some appropriate dough and made shuumai and gyoza. It's regrettable that it can't be preserved and we don't have any soy sauce. Also, there's a large room for improvements left that can made to the dough used for wrapping.

Ralpha, Gwine, and Miduchi were all making various things like "Meat Manju!" or "Hamburger!!" as well. They made some minced cutlets as well but just the same as the hamburger, if you don't use beef it's not very good. Ah, come to think of it there were some things close to pork cutlets and chicken cutlets since the past.

Year 7446, Month 6, Day 30

Three days ago, I finished my running the same as usual and then we rushed into the dungeon right away. On just the first day I joined the {Exterminators} and Miduchi the {Butchers} as we all gathered together in the teleport room on the 3rd room, then starting from the second day I did the usual party with just Zulu as we cleared past the 6th floor. On the third day, yesterday we took our time gathering magic stones while killing ogres and escorted Giberuti through the 7th floor, then finally today, we stepped foot on the 8th floor. As a good sign, we were able to teleport to a location connected to the center room, so we spent four hours making an effort to get there.

We're taking a short break before entering the room.

The circumference of the room is believed to be roughly 6.3 km with a diameter of about 2km. This is something we confirmed by doing a lap around it once together with Gwine, so we can say there's almost no mistake that it's a circle. Miduchi, you'll take the lead about 50 meters ahead and scout things out. If you find anything then stop. If there's any sort of problem then come back right away. In any case we'll know from {Party-ization} after all."

After confirming everyone nodded I continue.

"If there's nothing in particular then we'll take up the formation {Double Trail} in the rear behind Miduchi. I'll take the lead alone. Next up will be Zenom and Ralpa. Third will be Zulu and Angela, Gwine and Basutorial will be after that. Toris and Bel will be at the very rear. Alright? If hostilities are started then I'll dash to the front as we switch over to {Arrowhead.One}. On that occasion we'll take Miduchi into the formation. Whether I'll remain at the front or switch to the rear depends on the opponent. It's fine to take as much time as we need. Let's move carefully."

I think it was when we slowly advanced ahead for about 30 minutes at a speed of less than 1 km/hour?

Suddenly the sensation of {Party-ization} vanished. I can see Miduchi's back showing signs of bewilderment about 50 meters ahead of us with my Identify vision.

"Shit!!"

""Eh..""

""Madam!""

The sensation of {Party-ization} vanished and several voices were raised in a panic. At the same time Zulu, Angela, and I left the formation as we ran off. There's no doubt that she cut off the {Party-ization} because of some abnormality.

"Miduchi!!"

In response to my shout, I can tell Miduchi was looking around restlessly in doubt as she turned around. Just from a glance there doesn't seem to be any problem. Even if I use Identify on her like that there's no problem. I can tell that everyone is following after us from their presence.

What in the world happened? is what Miduchi asked us when she came over to us as we came running up.

"Ah, what is it!?"

"Huh..suddenly {Party-ization} was cut off. That's strange...Sorry.

I'll try using it once more."

What the, really..And huh? That's strange.

"It isn't a monster?"

Zenom said as he caught up.

"Nn, I'm sorry. It seems different. I'll use {Party-ization} once mo.."

Huh?"
It was when Miduchi had said that and was about to touch Zenom to start. After confirming Miduchi was safe as Angela moved a bit ahead in order to confirm the surroundings and raised her voice in doubt. She's sniffing with her nose. Her expression was a bit off for the mood but everyone spread out with their weapons in hand.

We thought something was picked up by Angela's {Super Sense of Smell}.

"Huh? It's strange..My nose doesn't work."

Yes?

"It isn't a monster right?"

Bel confirmed with Angela.

"Yeah, it feels like I can't use my {Super Sense of Smell}."

I reflexively Identified Angela.

There's nothing abnormal.

"Nn, there's no problem. I was properly able to use {Party-ization} on Zenom-san."

"Hmm. It seems things are fine."

It seems Miduchi and Zenom used {Party-ization} once more.

Just as I saw from Identify there doesn't seem to be any problem with Miduchi. However, it somehow doesn't make sense. Miduchi's {Party-ization} isn't released that easily. Whether she's in the middle of combat or sleeping if the user Miduchi doesn't will to turn it from On to Off or will for the unit to be disbanded then it's no good. That was released? Angela said she wasn't able to use her {Super Sense of Smell} anymore either..Something is strange.

"It can't be..Gwine, come over here for a bit."

I pulled Gwine's arm and moved her to stand next to Angela.

However, along the way Gwine raised her voice.

"Huh.."

It seems Gwine's {Mapping} was cut off as well. I wonder if from around there over to here is a location where you can no longer use

Special Skills or Unique Abilities? To test it I tried using Identify but just as I thought I couldn't use it. I told Gwine to try using {Infrared Vision} as well but obviously she couldn't use that either.

"Let's go back a bit."

I urged everyone as we went back out of the area a bit. After returning it seems I was able to use Identify once again.

"Just now, I understood from pulling Gwine. It seems that around that area you can't use Skills anymore."

"Eh..Please wait just a moment. Then magic as well!?"

Toris said with a surprised face.

That's right. Magic should be a type of Special Skill as well. I guess I'll try it.

I returned back into again and tried to use the spell {Light}.

Obviously it was no good. I can't control my mana.

While everyone was looking in a daze with worried expressions and I just shrugged my shoulders and shook my head.

This is, bad. It's way beyond our fighting power just being halved.

..Hn? Just now I used Identify on Angela even though she couldn't use {Super Sense of Smell}.

For argument's sake. If everything in the interior past that area is an {Anti-Skill Area}, I guess that means that magic or other things used from outside of there are fine?

I returned to the side of everyone looking anxiously and fired off the spell {Flame Bullet} so they could easily see it.

..No problem..or at least that's how it appears.

I picked up a rock from near my feet and used {Light} on it before throwing that.

It clearly flew further than the area where Angela just was, and it's still shining.

"Change of plans. Let's stop with heading towards the center just like this with everyone."

I said that while looking around at everyone.

Chapter 254: Results

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 12

Originally we had intended to spend another day for a total of one week in the dungeon but I told Cathy to return to Baldukk this evening. The {Exterminators} should have carried the supplies to the 4th floor twice and since the {Butchers} have Zenom with them they should have carried all of that to the 6th floor as well. And I guess we'll know on our way back.

When we teleported back to the 6th floor the {Butchers} were all chatting around Zenom in the teleport room. It seems they were waiting and intended on returning with us.

"Greed-kun! Zenom-san is amazing!"

"Yeah! The skill with which he cleaned up that ogre in no time at all, that was~ magnificent!"

Kevin and Jeru were both talking on and on in their excitement. Eh?

Zenom cleaned things up in no time at all?

"Firefreed-san, after all he's reliable."

"That's right, thanks to that we were able to concentrate on the remaining ogre with all of us.."

"It was easy to use magic as well."

It seems Misu, Kamu, and Binsu were helped quite a bit.

"Yeah, he's on a different level~"

"Yeah, as expected.."

"After all, when it comes to the sharpness, accuracy, power, and timing of his attacks they're all splendid!"

Ginger, Kimu, and Hisu commented in admiration as well. Including myself all of the members of the {Slaughterers} were making faces like it's only obvious but Ralpha was grinning. It feels just a bit charming.

Up until now Zenom has taken lead over over the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} a number of times. However, he's never fought a opponent on the level of an ogre together with them. They've only seen just a small fraction of the time when I was rampaging. It's not like it's anything to hide but I guess he made perfect use of that axe? Thinking that I tried asking but it doesn't seem like he completely showed off the ability of his magic axe either. Well, even if you just normally use that {Cold Axe.Of.Returning} it's abilities were considerably high though.

Hn? Come to think of it Rokko is quiet and just hanging his head down.

Judging from the state of things it seems they took down a number of ogres so shouldn't he have profited big time? He's the one who it usually feels like is making the most noise...

"Rokko. The only one who was injured was you. Isn't it that you're lacking in training? How about you running as well?"

Misu started preaching to Rokko with his head down. He was injured?

"Just stop already, Misu. Rokko did his best. The timing of his first step in had all of his strength behind it and was better than everyone including myself. Certainly he ended up taking a hit in passing but if it hadn't been an ogre then Rokko would have been able to endure it just fine. It's true that ogres are idiots but their skill with using the club is that of a first-rate veteran. They're extremely strong as well. Rokko was quite something just being able to take that head on and only suffer a broken armor from the shield he was holding."

Zenom quietly stopped that Misu and lifted up Rokko. I see, Rokko must have messed up somewhere and in order to cover for that Zenom probably had to instantly kill off an ogre. Zenom normally would never push himself and doesn't fight in a flashy way but if the party falls into a crisis he completely changes going super offensive with his blows.

According to Zenom they defeated groups of two ogres twice. Rokko ended up being seriously injured near the latter part of that combat. It seems it was just a bit more than two hours ago. On the basis that we should be teleporting through pretty soon Zenom ordered Misu and Binsu to use the spell {Cure} once each pouring their low remaining mana into it taking them lower than the amount required for recovering it naturally.

This is something that I normally say. In the worst case even if it's the spell {Cure} which only uses 4 MP, in most cases, even if a magician who's acting normal can't naturally recover their MP after that they should have enough leeway use it one more time. There's a lot of food here and in the worst case there's even a rope for tying people up in the survival kit on Zenom's waist.

Fortunately it seems that both of them were fine without exhausting their mana. Also, Zenom said it was precisely because of Rokko stepping in with such good momentum that they were able to stop the charging ogres in the wasteland with good footing as well. It seems that if Rokko was just a bit later they would have ended up having to fight in the bushes where the footing was a bit bad.

Just, Zenom said, "Even if the footing is a bit bad if it's just that level of situation there's anything that can be done. I don't really get him." and laughed. Even if he has the power to make decisions, he doesn't have the power to make judgements..I guess? I use the spell {Cure All} on Rokko and just in case had Miduchi use {Cure All} as well before whispering, "Actions are things someone is always watching." into Rokko's ear and leaving it at that.

There was over 70 kg in supplies gathered in the teleport room on this 6th floor focused around soap, extra arrows, wheat and soba flour, hen's eggs, olives, and other preserved foods and consumables that last for a while, and it'll largely come in handy on the next time we explore the dungeon I'm sure.

We returned to the surface and after heading towards the Baldoggie cart that Murowa took over from us, the {Exterminators} were already there biting into Baldoggie. Zulu was pleasantly talking with the Laios sis that was acting as the sales clerk about something in a corner of the plaza. Well, it's fine though.

I bit into one of the spicy gems that is the type with chili in it as I contributed to Murowa's sales. Different from the {Slaughterers} cart which only had children Murowa's cart was serving beer as well. After all you've gotta have some beer with sausage right. Though it's not chilled. It might just be my imagination but I feel like the Murowa cart has a lot of customers. Ah, I guess it's because there's 30 of us?

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 16

After taking a three day break, we're entering the dungeon once again.

Since we have the support of an abundance of supplies this time and we can get a replenishment of fresh food if we just return to the 6th floor so we've planned to stay inside for two and a half weeks(half a month). We won't come out until the end of the month.

It means we'll be spending two consecutive weeks on the 9th floor.

Furthermore, on just the final day August 30th, we'll finish things up in the morning and during the break after that I've already said that Miduchi and I would be going to the company in the capital.

Miduchi reluctantly accompanied the {Butchers} while Angela obediently accompanied the {Exterminators} as they support the exploration of the {Slaughterers}.

I told Cathy to properly take a three day break one week later(Of course she doesn't need to go to the trouble of returning to Baldukk), and tore her and Basutorial apart who were clinging all over each other to the end.

"Then, everyone, let's go."

.....

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 17

We've arrived at the teleport room on the 6th floor.

I was just a bit worried about it but all of our precious supplies were fine without any abnormalities.

Tomorrow we'll go up to the teleport crystal on the 8th floor and after beating the Mino and leaving our bags we'll return back to here again.

And then after carrying some more bags again it's necessary to take them to the 8th floor.

If possible I'd like to catch the Mino off guard so we need to return within 17 hours.

For that sake, we'll move under the assumption that we're going to arrive deep in the 8th floor before tomorrow evening and return right away.

And then, without resting we'll clear through the 7th floor in the middle of the night and then get some rest in the teleport room on the 7th floor.

If it's possible then I ideally intend on moving to the teleport room on the 8th floor without resting and then taking a slow break after that.

Even if we end up losing some time in the worst case I don't even mind if we waste one day though.

.....

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 18

We departed for the 7th floor at 5 in the morning.

Because we had good teleport luck, we managed to arrive at the teleport room on the 7th floor at 8 in the morning.

After taking a one hour break we proceeded onward to the 8th floor.

It was just past 1 pm or so when we arrived in the teleport room on the 8th floor and defeated the Mino in good time.

17 hours later is 6 am tomorrow morning.

While taking a break I discussed it with everyone but we ended up deciding to push ourselves a bit today and do one more round trip.

...

In one day we did both the 7th and 8th floors twice.

I guess if you try it can be done.

Just before the date was about to change I wrapped myself up in the blankets on my bed in the teleport room of the 8th floor and relaxed thinking, "Even thinking about the change of shifts everyone can sleep for four and a half hours."

It's fine if I just stick Zulu and Giberuti who can't use magic into the middle.

Zenom and I both sleep for six hours.

I was tired so I quickly dozed off.

.....

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 19

Now then, it's the 9th floor.

Starting today for the two weeks until the end of the month, we'll have to return to the 6th floor once midway through to get some more provisions, but we can explore the 9th floor in full.

I raised my fighting spirit while taking the magic stone from the Mino and dragging it's corpse into the distance.

The only harvest for today was filling in some blanks on the map.

We didn't run into altar rooms either.

We ate a bento for lunch but in the evening we brought back a crab

Gwine finished off and had crab shabu.

If Toris kills the crabs using {Flame.Tongue} somehow they don't feel like they're fresh.

Though I'm sure it's just my imagination that the ones Gwine finishes off with a single blow destroying their brain with the {Spear.Of.Piercing} are the freshest.

We end up finishing off a considerable number of them so the ones that are as cleanly killed as possible are best right.

If you keep eating them consecutively for every meal it ends up feeling complicated but if you just keep it at crab cooking about once a week then it feels tremendously delicious.
Though the trash stinks so we end up having to take it quite a bit of distance to throw away.

.....

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 20

The exploration is proceeding with a good feel to it.
We didn't run into an altar room today either but there was a gold ore sticking out from the wall in a room with a boss.
I'm glad we brought the pickax along with us.
It was a splendid gold ore that was close to 100 kg.
As expected we couldn't carry it around so I ended up having a nosebleed again as I took the time to change it into gold bars.
8 of them at the 10 kg size.
It's of a considerably higher purity than the gold ores we've previously obtained on the 6th floor.
I was getting full of myself as I even carved the characters "K24" in English and Arabic numerals but Toris and Bel retorted on it so I returned it to normal.
They sure are fellows who can't take a joke.
Even though the idiot Ralph said, "It's pure gold!" and was greatly pleased.
We split them up and returned to the 8th floor once carrying them.
After piling up the sparkling and shining gold bars in a corner of the room, everyone ate a bento before we returned to the 9th floor again.

Spellbound,

"It's a radiance I want to look at forever."

as Gwine said that we struggled to tear her apart from them.

The afternoon ended with just exploring.

.....

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 21

We obtained another tungsten ore.

It was from an altar again this time. The size seems to be just a bit bigger than last time.

It was just one so we continued exploring.

...

Hmn.

This area is probably that.

Just like the center of the 8th floor it's probably the center of the 9th floor.

We came out into an awfully spacious place.

We tried moving along the wall for a short while but we didn't run any the crabs that are usually wandering around in the halls at all.

I wonder if there's a boss?

After all there probably is one~

It's fine to fight it but either way I feel like we'll end up not being able to use our skills again.

I'm not so optimistic that I would bet on being able to use them.

In that case it would be best to do it at a time when Miduchi is together with us.

It's still just past 10 am.

We should explore a different passage from here.

We started moving down a different passage connected to the room.

Along the way it was connected to a point we previously stopped short at after running out of time exploring.

I see.

.....

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 22

We returned to the teleport room on the 6th floor.

There's some new food that's been left there.

It's meat.

And vegetables.

Oh~ isn't there even some dried meineiji!

Angela sure is thoughtful.

As expected of my slave.

..Hn?

Huh?

Chi..So even {Black.Topaz} has cleared through the 6th floor and started showing their face here huh?

There was a new set of camping tools installed in one of the open corners.

Inside of the shower bucket there was money just like with {Verdure.Brotherhood}.

Also, there was a small new bucket inside of the shower room which had "Let's get along" written in charcoal or something.

I made a bitter smile.

We took our time on the 7th floor finishing off about 40

ogres.

We didn't encounter {Black.Topaz}.

Of course, we didn't encounter {Verdure.Brotherhood} either.

.....

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 23

Exploring the 9th floor is proceeding smoothly.

It's a good feeling.

Toris's {Flame.Tongue} is thirsty for the blood of trolls once again tonight~

We didn't run into an altar room but we've explored quite a bit.

I suppressed everyone's opinion that pot cooking would be good and decided on dried meineiji.

No matter when I eat dried fish it's delicious.

.....

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 24

We obtained a {Magical.Weapon}.

It's an arrow.

There's a total of two dozen, 24 of them.

【Arrow.Of.Blindness】

According to my 【Identify】 any living creature that this arrow stabs into regardless of the size or where the wound is located, if the entire arrowhead stabs in deep enough to be hidden then it seems the target will fall into a completely blind state for at least 5 minutes.

However, once the effects have been used once the arrow loses the potency of the magic and changes to no different from normal arrow.

A consumable huh?

Shall we use them?

No, when it comes to swords, axes, and other {Magic.Items} I think it's fine even if we sell them.

But, I feel like these are no good.

"Judging from the name it seems like they crush the eyes of the target they hit."

"It's hard to imagine them having any other ability than that right."

Basutorial and Bel were talking.

It would be a surprise if they had any other ability than that with this sort of name.

"Hmn, depending on how you think about it they seem pretty good against opponents that use magic like ogre mages."

"Oh, I see. That's a good idea."

Certainly Ralpa's viewpoint was good.

If your eyes can't see you can't use most magic after all.

Particularly attack spells which almost all of them require setting a target.

It's not like it's completely impossible if you touch something and fire it off at almost zero distance from that but opposite to that when you try to send an attack spell bullet flying from a close distance unless you have a considerably strong image it won't manifest.

If they have a skill level like mine and don't do anything else at all(not even breathing) while concentrating even then wouldn't it take several seconds to several tens of seconds?

Though when it comes to {Cure} and {Light} even if you can't see with your eyes(even if you don't have visibility of the target) as long as you're touching them you can use it just like status open.

I'll hand these over to Bel. Since there's a lot of them including the spares it should be plenty if she mixes two of them in.

But, it's going to be troublesome trying to explain how they lose their effect after being used once.

.....

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 25

Through another different course we discovered a path that leads to what seems to be the center plaza of the 9th floor.

There was an altar room but it was empty.

How boring.

It's boring but we're still properly filling in the map so it's fine.

.....

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 26

Once again today we ran into an altar room and it was empty as well.

Hmm, bad luck!

.....

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 27

Nothing at all.

Hey~?

Aren't you getting bored of it pretty soon as well?

Eh?

Is that so?

Then that's fine though.

.....

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 28

We went to the 6th floor in order to replenish our food.

There was no one in the teleport room but there's clearly some signs that the camp of {Black.Topaz} is evolving.

It's even developed up to the same level as {Verdure.Brotherhoods}.

Of course, it's not to the same level as ours but even then they've carried in plenty of equipment.

In the evening we returned to the teleport room of the 8th floor and proceeded to explore the 9th floor.

.....

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 29

Ah.

This is.

Is this that!?

Is it the extravagant version of the altar room!?

And just as I thought that it was different.

It was just two monster rooms stuck together consecutively.

Shit.

That's misleading.

Not to mention there wasn't even a normal altar in them.

Since we haven't found anything since obtaining the 【Arrow.Of.Blindness】 it seems I'm a bit irritated.

Calmly thinking about it and you could say we've already gotten actual results above the amount of time we've spent exploring this time.

Two ores and the {Magical.Weapon} 【Arrow.Of.Blindness】.

We've never found this much treasure in such a short period of time up until now.

Though I say that, the only thing we can sell is just the gold bars.

Even those have that much quantity.

It's a total of 80 kg.

Previously when we refined it just 20 kg or so ended up being sold at a price of over 30,000,000 Z.

This time it's four times that amount.

It'll easily exceed 100,000,000!

We've made plenty of actual results.

Though I say that, according to Ralpha this is still insufficient for the gold zombie that I am.

And just as we were saying things like that we found a {Magic.Item} from a new altar.

【Refrigerator】

【Beech Wood.Iron】

【Condition: Normal】

【Manufacture Date: 29/8/7446】

【Value: 13500000】

【Durability: 678】

【Ability: Internal temperature 4 degrees;1490 value/1 day】

【Effect: Capable of refrigeration of goods stored inside. No function for adjusting the humidity.】

Since the Durability is a bit higher than the previous one we found it's value is a bit higher.

It's a huge burden so I guess we'll return right away huh?

Uhihi~

.....

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 30

Now then, today is the final day.

We're finishing up in the morning.

Mu.

We started off by teleporting into a place we've been to previously.

That's a bad omen.

We teleported back in once more.

This time it was a place we haven't been to before.

Let's get into the mood and go!

It's {Let's go}.

Ralpa and Gwine didn't react at all but I was told "That's old" by Basutorial.

Is..Is that so?

Soon after the area we teleported into there was a forked path.

For the time being I guess left?

Though there's no basis for it.

Mu.

There's a teleport crystal.

I guess this was the right answer?

...

.....

Again soon after there was a teleport crystal.

...

.....

Ho.

A room with an altar.

Shall we end things here for today?

We made the {Green Poison Lizard} that was summoned into namasu, burnt away the Kobolds, and then cut off the heads of the gargoyles.

Well now then, it's the last try.

I wonder what will come out?

Or maybe nothing will?

"Ah!!"

Since we don't have Angela like usual this time I have Zulu searching the shrine but it seems something was there.

"Master! Congratulations! It seems to be a ring!"

""Oh~!""

I spontaneously let my voice out as well.

Magical rings are famous after all.

If it's that much then even I know about it.

Rather~ I'm getting flashbacks of the time I was bullied by teacher Mila.

After descending from the altar Zulu held out the ring in the palms of both of his hands to me.

Seeing a tall Laios hunch over while preciousy holding a small ring was a bit humorous.

Hohou.

Just from a glance it looks to have a width of 5 mm and is a dull gold ring covered in scratches.

It has a gem embedded in it.

It's not standing off but embedded directly into it.

On the opposite side of where the gem is embedded it's small but there's a gap opened up in it.

I see, I guess it's free size?

It's a ring after all, just in case.

I use the void magic {Detect.Magic}.

There's a reaction.

I take off the glove on my right hand pick it up with two fingers.

Zulu already touched it without his gloves on so it should be fine.

"{Status Open}"

【Ring.Of.Protection】

"Ooh!!"

I spontaneously let out my voice again.

This is a name with a good feel to it.

"What?"

"What is it?"

"What kind of name did it have?"

Everyone seems to be greatly interested.

Though that's only obvious.

Wait just a moment.

【Ring.Of.Protection】

【Gold.Sapphire】

【Condition: Normal】

【Manufacture Date: 30/8/7446】

【Value: 1】

【Durability: 50】

【Ability: Damage Reducing;1 HP】 something where they receive damage to their HP, through the mana in the ring it will reduce the damage taken by just 1 HP. The amount of damage it's possible to reduce is up to 1 HP per day.】

That's pretty dull.

"The name is amazing. It's supposedly the 【Ring.Of.Protection】."

""Ho~!""

Bel was nearby so I dropped the ring onto the palm of her hand.

Everyone is looking at the name of it while saying Kya~kya~

Isn't this the ideal thing to try selling?

Chapter 255: Fairy Village A While

Year 7446, Month 8, Day 30

A bit sooner than planned, we were climbing the stairs to the surface just before 11:00 am. Zulu is the one with the most bulk and furthermore he's carrying the refrigerator so I'm sure it's difficult but we can't let an important {Magic.Item} be carried by just a simple {porter} and cook like Giberuti right. It might be possible it's the most valuable item we found this time after all. Well, there's also 5 gold bars in the bag Giberuti is carrying though.

Though it's late summer since it's close to midday we can feel the heated air from the strong sunlight and a different kind of sweat starts to gather on our foreheads from up until now. It's always that feeling you get when you come up the stairs from the cool underground dungeon to the hot entrance plaza. In this shitty heat it's only obvious but we cut through the quiet entrance plaza and quickly moved into the magic tool shop managed by the usual dwarf old man to finish selling off our magic stones.

And then the same as usual we went to the cart run by Murowa with just a few customers to buy some Baldoggie and beer for lunch. Maybe we should throw a magic stone into the refrigerator to chill them?

Zulu was going to the shade together with the sales clerk sister who was unloading bags near the cart. How about just getting married already?

It's fine to let her work at the sausage factory like Cathy.

If that'll raise your morale then it's fine.

While we were doing that the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} came back. It gives an impression like the number of people suddenly increased.

"How was it?"

Miduchi asked about the results of battle but there's no way of hiding the refrigerator so she's smiling.

"Yeah, we made quite a bit."

I smile from feeling pretty good as well.

"We found a gold ore on the 6th floor as well!"

Ho! That's good news.

""It's an ore with a good feel to it.""

"Won't it cost about half a month to refine?"

"It won't take that long right."

The members of the {Butchers} are making a racket as they boast about it. I guess it's in that bag Jeru is carrying? Judging from the size it's probably not much different from the one we previously found on the 6th floor. It looks considerably big. If the purity is about the same then after refining it should come out to around 20 kg. It seems the young Kimu and Hisu split up Jeru's belongings to carry.

"What about on the {Slaughterers} end..{Status Open}..a refrigerator! That's amazing. Isn't it a high class magic tool!"

Kevin got excited seeing the name of the refrigerator.

"We've seen one once when we were in {Sun.Ray} right."

Kamu said enviously. Well, it's worth more than that gold ore after all. But, because they found a gold ore Kamu's face was satisfied.

"Master, I've returned just now."

The {Exterminators} came out of the dungeon just a bit later before Angela approached and knelt down before me. Henry, Mekku, Rubi, and Jesu the four of them all knelt behind her.

"Yeah, good work. How were things for you? Did anyone get injured?"

"No. There wasn't any particularly large problems..However, that is..We didn't find anything significant.."

Oh my, just because the {Slaughterers} and {Butchers} found treasure doesn't mean you have to shrink back that far. It's normal not to find anything. Rather it's luck after all.

"Hn, I see. Then, you go and eat together with everyone. After a short rest help carry the bags together with Zulu and everyone else."

I ordered not just Angela but all of the kneeling slaves behind her. The ground is hot after all.

""Yes, master.""

.....

While I was slowly drinking some beer and talking to everyone, the {Butchers} finished eating their Baldoggie in no time at all. I was talking together with Miduchi, Rodrick, and the reincarnated people but it seems they're waiting for Miduchi.

Ah, I see. They want to take the gold ore to the goldsmith right away. Also, they probably have to cash in the magic stones and such as well. Starting this month since it was the former {Sun.Ray} + someone, the portion for my combat slave not being included increases the amount the {Butchers} get.

However, while it was only a few they defeated ogres on the 7th floor and have their magic stones so as a matter of fact their income has increased and even I'm earning a bit more. I said to Miduchi, "Everyone's waiting. Go ahead." and send off to the {Butchers} before throwing the last bit of Baldoggie I had remaining into my mouth and washing it down with beer. "Then, it's about time for me to start getting ready as well. Ah, Zulu..is really still in the middle of talking...Angela, or notm Henry sorry but go and borrow a carriage and have it sent around to Boil Manor. Here."

I said that before handing Henry 2 Gold Shu a bit more than the fee for renting the carriage(The market price for renting a carriage with two horses is 200,000 Z for one night. This time it will be for two nights so it costs about 400,000 Z). Angela who I almost called on by mistake has to go and cash in the magic stones with the {Exterminators} after this.

After all the amount of magic stones the three parties of us {Slaughterers} carry in is quite high so it takes a bit of time to cash them in. Putting aside the {Slaughterers}, the remaining two parties almost never combine their magic stones into one after all. They have a bulk of small magic stones from the 1st to the 5th floors.

It's really hard for me to understand but it seems that's the adventurer way of doing it. They aren't all that heavy but they end up bulky so I think it's just a waste though. Supposedly it's cool to pass through the entrance plaza displaying a bag full of magic stones. Most likely those sorts of values were adopted because everyone was against the MP consumed with void magic in order to combine magic stones into one. When we first came to Baldukk I was too afraid to waste any mana on doing that as well. In about 20 minutes Henry borrowed the carriage. The change I said to use for meals for the combat slaves until I return and the remainder is for "Use it to add to tonight's dinner. I'm sure you're all going to have a feast right?" and pushed it on to Toris who was holding back. The {Butchers} still haven't come out of the magic stone shop. We packed the refrigerator into the load of the carriage and while we were at it took the gold bars out from the bag Giberuti was carrying and loaded them on as well. Of course the other stuff that didn't fit in his bags and we were carrying has already been loaded as well.

"Master, what's this?"

Angela asked strangely while helping out loading the carriage with our bags.

"Nn, these are some of the goods we found this time" Ehheeee, it's heavy right?"

When I tried to reply Ralpa interrupted me as she bragged with heavy breathing.

"Hn? Yeah, it's a bit heavy even though it's not very big."

"Well, Ralpa you can take your time bragging all you want later. I need to go to the capital right away today. I can't sell these if it's not the capital either."

After saying that I got on to the coachman's seat. Ah, I need to say it before I forget.

"In regards to that ore. Sorry but put it in the temple. Later on we'll move it over to my locker. Also in regards to that ring I'll discuss it with Miduchi before deciding whether to get rid of it or not. I think we'll return just as planned on the day after tomorrow."

And I whispered to Zenom. Zenom replied with, "Nn, as expected I'm tired so I'm not going to the capital this time but I'm relying on you." He requested from smoked Neisun(a fish that resembles the Pacific herring). It's not as if you can't buy it in Baldukk but Zenom prefers ones hand-made by a famous smoker in the capital. I've participated in eating some of it a number of times as well but it's certainly delicious. It's quality goods.

While we were doing that the {Butchers} came out of the magic stone shop. Jeru is still carrying the gold ore as usual. Just like that they entered the goldsmith three buildings down. Even from here I can tell everyone's quite excited.

Angela said, "Faruergaz-sama. Well then, shall we go to cash in as well?" and called out to Rodrick before leaving my other combat slaves and going with the {Exterminators} into the magic stone shop. Even they had Ginger and Hisu switch out of the party so their profits have increased from the number of heads.

The {Butchers} came out of the goldsmith shop in several minutes.

The value is unknown until it's refined after all. Miduchi said farewell to everyone in front of the shop and after splitting ways came over to the carriage.

"Sorry for the wait."

"Ah~ it seems you made quite a bit. Everyone looked pretty pleased right?"

After I replied the corners of Miduchi's mouth raised a bit as she stretched out her hand.

I was handed 1 gold coin and over 10 silver coins from her.

Amazing~!

"We killed a total of 8 ogres after all. Last week it was 7 of them. It's a huge profit. I've already taken the expenses out for the two times."

Even then it's this amount! That's quite~ something. Including my share even with 11 people getting a cut it's a considerable amount of money. Obviously they were defeating monsters other than the ogres as well so even subtracting the 300,000 Z expense from these two and a half weeks I made a profit of over 1,000,000 Z.

"Eh? That much!? Things must have been difficult for Miduchi-san right?"

Back when the {Butchers} were still {Sun.Ray}, Gwine participated with them just once so she joined the conversation.

"N~ I don't think it was to the point of being called difficult?

It's been one year since then right? I think everyone's levels have probably gone up after all. Since Zenom was the one who brought them out before me it seems they got a bit used to it."

Hmm. It seems it was worth sending over Zenom and Miduch one after another.

"..I can't be slacking off either.."

I heard Basutorial whisper to himself. Come to think of it this guy was watching how they fight along with Gwine at the time as well.

That's right, give it your best.

Miduchi and I the two of us went to the capital right away and planned on bringing the {Refrigerator}, gold bars, and {Ring.Of.Protection} into the company connected to Duke Sandak, Sandak Company.

On the trip to the capital when I discussed things in regards to the ring with Miduchi, after thinking about it for just a bit she said "We should sell it." Even though it's only a mere 1 HP, once per day, she evaluated the ability of damage reduction as being "something important" though...
"Certainly that might end up being the line between life and death.

Even then we should try selling it this time."
And said decisively. The reason was, "The only one who accurately knows it's abilities is just your right? Honestly speaking, it's not a {Magic.Item} that you could say is very powerful, so it's not all that regrettable right. Rather than that, I think it would be better to learn how they investigate the abilities and what kind of price tag it might be given." was what she said.

Certainly it's just as Miduchi said. I was a bit relieved because it was the same as my thoughts on it. If it ends up with a price that's far too low then it's just a matter of not selling it after all. At that time since they still haven't been given a {Magic.Item} as a charm I'll give it to either Ralph or Angela..or not. I guess it's fine if I just give it to either Henry or Mekku. Of course it's fine if Miduchi or I use it as well but neither of us takes damage very often after all~

After confirming the quality of the gold bars we brought into Sandak Company(most likely they'll end up melting them down at a goldsmith) I had them pay the money to Greed Company. I asked them to contact me when the {Refrigerator} sells and if a potential buyer makes an offer on the {Ring.Of.Protection}.
However, I included that "after" selling it at a price I've accepted they tell me how they investigated what kind of abilities it has as a condition. Of course even if the degree of the ability is uncertain as long as I accept it I'll sell it. According to Miduchi it seems there's collectors with unique taste out there. Collectors indeed..Of course the world is a big place so I'm sure there are though. I wonder about that?

Furthermore, in regards to the {Big.Freezer} and large chandelier we brought in previously but it seems some buyers are still competing over the {Freezer} at over 300,000,000 Z. I wanted to try asking for the information of the buyers but it would be unpleasant if Sandak Company thought I was going to invade their field of business so I endured it. Unexpectedly it seems the head house of Duke Sandak is buying the large chandelier. It's just huge and bright with no ornaments to it so when they offered 40,000,000 Z for a chandelier in just name I was ready to raise my arms and cheer as I sold it.

After showing my face in my company and glancing over the account books for a moment, we quickly went to the smoker and obtained the smoked Neisun Zenom requested while also buying as much dried fish as Miduchi and I could carry from this shop.

After that we took a bit of a detour around to the East side of Baldukk and after entering the town got a room at a random inn before leaving all of our bags. I paid an extra amount of money to put a tag on the smoked gift and store it together in the refrigerator of the inn. It's together with other stuff but the ones managing it are the inn employees so there's almost no need to worry about it being stolen.

After that Miduchi and I, the two of us wore hooded robes that hide down to our feet and separately entered the dungeon through the entrance plaza in the heat. We grouped up again in the teleport room on the 1st floor. I arrived at the teleport room on the 1st floor in about two and a half hours and when I was drinking water while waiting Miduchi arrived soon after.

The two of us teleported into the 2nd floor. As expected I guess we can't make it that one place..Since it couldn't be helped we decided to return from the 3rd floor as usual. After clearing through the 2nd floor we lowered our hoods again before entering the teleport room where second-rate parties are likely to be camping. After quickly teleporting into the 3rd floor the two of us raised our hoods and after checking if the incantation appeared in the teleport crystal again we held on to it while singing the "Japanese Anthem".

It's the same as usual.

And then right now we've just stepped foot into the Fairy Village.

Now then, putting aside teacher Mila, I wonder if Karl still remembered us?

Well, I'm sure he'll remember.

After all he can remember things about George.Rombert from over 500 years ago.

Look, the fairies all remember us.

They're saying pirupiru while staying on top of Miduchi and my heads and shoulders and pulling open our nostrils.

Among them there's also some pleasantly trying to smell the scent of the dried fish as they fly around.

Even though they completely ignored me the first time.

Miduchi's walking with a fairy that's still a small child on top of her palm with a smile.

Now then, we've arrived.

"Karl, it's me! Al!"

Chapter 256: Request 1

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 1

"Oh? Al~ I thought you died together with Miduchi."

When I called out for Karl under the large tree in the center of the island the one who reacted was Karl's older sister, teacher Mila.

"Ah, if it isn't teacher Mila. I'm very sorry we weren't able to come for one year."

It's unusual for teacher Mila to come out first.

"We brought along a lot of dried fish again today."

Miduchi threw was showing courtesy towards teacher Mila as well.

"Ooh, that's~ quite appreciated. We can't resist fish from the ocean after all~"

Teacher Mila replied as her expression softened.

I pulled out the stove magic tool that was put away in a hole in the tree and then put one of the magic stones was picked up on the way inside before trying to turn on the flame. The stove magic tool spit out a blue flame without a problem. After turning off the flame I took the dried fish out of my rucksack and the fairies flying around started cheering, there was even fairies that started somersaulting in the air from how pleased they were.

Alright, wait just a minute. I'll quickly grill them up for you.

I took out a dried Meineiji and after setting the grill on top of the stove first heated the grill up.

After it was plenty hot I placed the the dried fish on top. By doing this it's more difficult for the body or skin of the dried fish to stick to the grill.

The self-interested fairies are all sitting around the grill or staying on Miduchi and My head and shoulders as usual. Teacher Mila was standing in front of the stove with her hands on her hips not taking her eyes off the dried fish being grilled from the flames either.

"By the way teacher, where's Karl?"

"Ah? Karl? I think that it's about time for Karl to wake up though.

Since just the other day Karl's been saying he's tired all the time."

He~ Come to think of it the I think the first time I came here teacher sister was asleep was it?

Piru! Piru! Pirurururu!!

Teacher Mila looked up to the top of the tree while shouting something. She must be shouting towards Karl.

"Fufun. It seems he jumped up in surprise. He'll be out soon, just wait."

What is it, did Karl oversleep? Rather~ did Karl reply to that?

There's fairies saying pirupiru all around us so I couldn't tell.

"And then teacher Mila, this time" After we eat some fish."

"..Yes."

Is she angry that we ended up not coming for a whole year..though that doesn't seem to be the case. Thinking back on it every time we come here I feel like we always treat them to the fish first. A thin smoke started rising from the Meineiji and the good scent of dried fish spread around the surroundings.

As the scent spread around the fairies gradually got quiet and just silently stared at the dried fish grilling on top of the stove.

And, one fairy came flying towards from on top of the tree. I'm sure it's Karl.

Yeah, after all it's Karl.

Uwa, this guy, isn't he soaking wet?

I wonder if got into a bath or something.

"Ya~ Al. It's been a while right. It's great that both you and Miduchi are still alive."

Hmm. I guess he was able to remember us.

"Ya~ Karl. You seem well yourself."

"It's been a while, Karl. I'm glad to you're well."

After hearing our greetings Karl sent the water on him flying by shaking like a dog and then stopped on Miduchi's shoulder. In order not to fall he grabbed on to her hair and made a face like he was going to say something to me but soon after closed his eyes and started sniffing the scent.

"Ah~ It's a good smell. You said it was Meineiji right. This fish?"

"Yeah, it's Meineiji."

He's as self-interested as usual. I made a bitter smile while flipping over the dried fish. There's some light burns on the skin and eyes which look appetizing. However..Hmm. Karl is actually holding a proper conversation. Growth sure is important right.

After a short while the dried fish were finished grilling and after taking out another dried fish I held up the one that was grilled.

"Alright, it's grilled. Now take it as you please."

As fast as I could say it starting with teacher Mila all of the fairies raised another cheer of pirupiru voices and swarmed the dried fish I was holding. In the blink of an eye the dried fish turned into just bones. The still small fairy sitting on top of Miduchi's lap took a portion of meat from the dried fish from a bigger fairy before biting into it with a smiling face.

Well, it's great that the fairies are all pleased. It was a bit heart-warming as I watched the fairies eat. I guess Miduchi feels the same as me, she's lightly smiling.

"Waha!! It sure looks delicious right!"

Karl who was still stopping on Miduchi's shoulder like usual seems to have finally swallowed down the dried fish and laughed while saying that to me with his mouth covered in grease. Chi..don't grab Miduchi's hair with your hands covered in grease from fish, this winged insect. Rather~ what's that about it sure looks delicious. Didn't you just finish eating your own portion. It was delicious, right. Stop looking at someones dried fish so enviously. Karl was looking at the next dried fish being grilled on the stove fully intending to eat some more.

.....

"Now then, I've made you wait. Were you just about to say something before?"

After the third fish turned to nothing but bones teacher Mila finally focused her attention on us.

"Yeah. This time before you teach us spells, if it's something you know I'd like for you to teach us some things about this dungeon."

Hearing my words teacher Mila made a slightly strange face before opening her mouth.

"Hn? What do you mean?"

"Right now we're challenging the 9th floor of this dungeon. As matter of fact when we went to the center area of the 8th floor there was a Minotaur guard blocking the way so.."

"Ah.."

Teacher Mila made a strange expression..like she knew or didn't know.

"Well, in regards to that one it seems that after defeating it a number of times it will stop coming out so it's fine though.."

"He~"

Karl joined the conversation but judging on the look of things I'm sure he doesn't know.

"Do you know anything about the guard on the 9th or 10th floors or that's believed to be beyond that as well?"

As if taking over my words Miduchi tried asking teacher Mila as well.

"I knew that there was a guardian. But, I don't know much of anything about it."

Hn? She said there "was" a guardian huh? Not a guard but a guardian. Though they mean the same thing I wonder if it's just a different in the way of phrasing it. Come to think of it the King and Queen both called it a guardian as well. Something like the way it's called doesn't matter at all so I completely forgot.

"Is that so..Would you mind telling us just up to whatever you know about it?"

Since I wanted even just a bit more information I couldn't do anything but lower my head.

Chapter 257: Request 2

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 1

"There's no whatever or anything else, I really don't know much of anything at all."

Teacher Mila made a troubled face as she said it. It seems it's not like she's trying to hide it but she really doesn't know much of anything about it.

"..It's not like I'm hiding anything though. What I know is..I guess..Only about the origins of how the dungeon was made."

Wh..What was that!?

"Oh! Would you please tell me about that!?"

Origins huh? That's something I'd absolutely like to hear about.

"And, even if I say that. The one who made this dungeon was the Demi-God Besshu-sama. But, I don't know what the reason for making it was, though I don't have any interest in that either so it doesn't matter at all."

I see Besshu-sama...Demi-God huh? It seems there's the influence of a considerable number of Gods on Orth. However, things like Gods I don't really have much interest in for right now. Miki, no Lilus, if her name came out then it would be different though.

"I see. So, a Demi-God was the one who made it. Come to think of it, previously you said there was a condition to come to this area from the 3rd floor right. Right now, when we use the teleport crystal on the 3rd floor we aren't chanting the incantation that floats on the surface of it. We're teleporting using the method we heard from Lilus but what was the method that teacher mentioned at that time?"

"That time..Ah, the second or third time you two came here..What kind of method did you hear about from Lilus-sama? Well, it's probably the same though."

Teacher Mila already knows about Unique Abilities. I guess it's already fine. It seems there's nothing good that will come from hiding it from the fairies. I explained that we got here by singing song from the world Miduchi and I previously lived in and were born to this one from and that phrases in it were the key to the teleport from the 3rd floor.

Since I felt it was necessary to explain it at the same time, I gave a simple explanation that most likely George.Rombert the First may have been from a different time period, he was a "human" from the same country, and then, also said that Lilus was born in the same world as well.

Additionally I was about to say that Lilus was my wife as well but before I could say that, hearing everything up to there teacher Mila wasn't surprised at all as she casually replied.

"Yeah, I thought it something along those lines. I've heard that originally we lived on the surface in a land called Gwirumu. We were supposedly in a corner of wetlands that was at the side of a lake far bigger than the one here. But you know, just as you can see, we're too weak to live on the surface. Putting aside Miduchi, since Al has Identify I'm sure you can imagine. During the time we lived on the surface even those who lived the longest was at greatest several decades. A lot of our allies passed away being eaten by something."

"No way.."

Miduchi was shocked.

"If we can live for hundreds of years then both our mana and our magic special skill levels increase so it's more difficult to die though. However, our grandparents from that time couldn't stay alive that long so easily."

Ho!? It seems it's turning into quite the story...

"Quietly and as if hiding, though I say that it was in a world that's so wide it's not even worth comparing to here we tried to live leisurely. But, at one point, a rumor started to spread around that the scales from fairy wings are a miracle cure for any disease. A lot of human races came along and tore off our wings. Fairies are weak after all. If our wings are torn off we die in a few days. Ah, I'll just say this but that it's a miracle cure is a lie. That's not the case."

For just a moment I thought about requesting sharing a bit of those scales for the sake of Miduchi's older brother. I wonder what Miduchi was thinking. I was about to look to my side but stopped.

"Lilus-sama found out about us on her travels and must have pitied us. She said that she would prepare a place we can live peacefully. Ah, at that time it was still before she had become a Demi-God. After that countless tens and hundreds of years passed, around the time our numbers cut 100, Lilus-sama appeared at Gwirumu once more and guided our few remaining grandparents that had survived to this land."

"Your majesty.."

Lilus traveled from the East to the West. It's a story from when she was still just a simple Elf {Immortal} before she had become a {Demi-God} and obviously a Dark Elf.

It might be possible it's a story from 1,000 years ago.

"She taught it to us at that time. If we ever have to go outside for some kind of task so we can always return back to here."

Hm~n.

"Back then, it seems this dungeon was still only just made. I've heard that there was a guardian on the 1st floor as well. Also, it's said that when Lilus-sama teleported through the floors she was able to teleport along with all of the remaining survivors."

Yeah, the hands of the fairies are small after all. If Lilus grabs on to that crystal rod, I'm sure all of the small palms of their hands could fit on the remaining portion. The fairies which are almost like small winged insects swarming to the crystal rod, I'm sure it was a chilling sight.

"Although, no~one is willing to go outside~ though. We have berries here and there's fish in the pond as well. There's honeybees in that corner too. It's rare for anyone to ever make it here and the first time someone came here was before we were born but it seems they were well-mannered and apologized for intruding and didn't hurt anyone. Of course there's occasionally those who harbor ill intentions towards us as well but we kill all of those. It's a comfortable place for us. I guess we've come to truly feel that, now we don't really increase our numbers much at all. It's more fun to play than increase after all. If there's few deaths then there's no reason to hurry and give birth to children."

After that, I heard several stories but it was fundamentally just information that isn't very useful to me. I guess since we got engrossed in our conversation, before I realized it the fairies had left because there was nothing more to eat and they were having fun flying around the waterside. Among them there was also some that seemed to be doing something like magic training as well but I guess originally they get bored easily like Karl, they seem to get invited by their allies and go off to play right away.

"Now then, I'm sure once again this time, it's that right? You came to have me to teach you some spells you don't know right?"

"Wa ha..That's right."

"It's written on your face."

I guess it was obvious.

"Well that's fine. You brought along a lot of fish for us after all. Just, I wonder what's good? I think I've already taught you quite a few though"

Mu, anything is fine as long as it's a spell I don't know, or at least that's what I'd like to say but if it's possible then..I guess so. After all, the number one thing would some kind of spell that would be useful in helping explore the dungeon for the time being. The runner-up would be something that might not be useful for the dungeon but still convenient to know.

"Is there any kind of spell that lets you talk with a target that you can't see?"

Miduchi said that, but a spell like that, it's one of the first things I asked when I came here, and that, didn't you say it before as well?

"I don't know of any."

See.

"Ah, I'm sorry. It's fine even if you don't talk. It's fine if you can just convey ideas or something to a person that's far away though.."

I've tried asking that as well. I was wondering if it wasn't possible to do something like {Facsimile}. The reply was obviously "I don't know of any."

"I said it last time but the "communication" type are impossible. Since it's become possible for me to make small parts using {Transmute.Rock.To.Mud} as long as we can secure a stable "power source" then eventually I think we'll somehow be able to do something about "wireless telegraphy" but I'm sure it's no good for a while longer. I think it would be best to give up on things in that area."

As a matter of fact the real reason why I learned {Transmute.Rock.To.Mud} was so that I could efficiently extract and process Germanium as well. I found tungsten(I don't know if it exists in the natural world but it probably does), so if I can just find germanium then there's no reason I wouldn't be able to make a point-contact type diode.

I don't know if high purity ores themselves of things like Chrome, Nickel, and Molybdenum can be discovered(not mined) in the dungeon but I've confirmed their existence and used a couple of them as well. I'm sure there's not that just Germanium doesn't exist.

In regards to the power source and a storage battery {condenser} as well something like a Leiden jar I can make with the ingredients bought from any general store in Baldukk. After that it's just a matter of accumulating electricity from {Shocking.Grasp} or {Lightning Bolt} after all. If I made a tiny Leiden jar into a {condenser} then I can make an {amplifier} as well and I don't think there's any harm in hoping for something on the same level of ability as a small vacuum tube at the size of a little finger either.

I'm sure the abilities would be tremendously low compared to those on Earth and even if I could make the device itself it would be questionable if even Zulu could carry it around but even then I've already got the prospects for making a wireless transceiver device. If it's on flatland and we make use of rods standing up antennas then it should be possible transmit around 10 km. If we made a relay station at the top of a high mountain then it should be just a bit better. Even that is more than plenty to bring about a revolution I'm sure.

After all there's a high chance that we can't make dispatch orders on the battlefield. No matter how much they surpass us in strategy if we can just secure a wireless communication network then I'm sure we can win against a force with similar numbers. Even Morse if you get used to it you can send several characters if you have 5 seconds and if it's things like advance, withdraw, right, or left then I'm sure even an idiot can understand it.

Even when it comes to clashing head on in a wide plain the merits of being able to quickly give out orders to each unit are immeasurable after all.

Eh? If it ends up being stolen? Isn't it fine to just use a code at that time? If it's established for sure that there's no reincarnated people among the enemy then even Japanese is fine and if there is then we could just make a simple list of orders and change it periodically. It's fine even as just open up number X order document as well.

Regardless of the case if it's in a range that we can clearly see then I'm sure a huge antenna would be unnecessary and even in the worst case there's the possibility of communication by wire as well. After all right now if it's just at the level of making wire, I can do it in a few hours of bleeding from my nose. If I really felt like it then I could take the ingredients of copper ores and rubber and make them both into mud together and create a rubber coating around the copper line even making an electric cable..a nosebleed dripping down without eating or drinking for half a day? I don't want to do that~

I need to get even more used to it.

"The last time you taught us about the resist type spells, so once again this time could you teach us some kind of spell for protecting our bodies?"

After I said that teacher Mila said, "You said you know about {Bark Skin} right. Do you know about {Stone Skin} and {Iron Skin}?"

Miduchi and I exchanged glasses before we had her start teaching us those two spells..though I'm sure the duration will just disappear right away. Judging from the name it seems to be the same type of spell as {Bark Skin} after all...

"That, I can somehow understand that it's more powerful in comparison to {Bark Skin} but is the duration of the effect the same as well?"

"Hn? I guess so. The duration of it is the same I'm sure. The only difference is the defensive power."

Hmn, I wonder about that. Only about 30 seconds for even me huh? It seems difficult to find a place to use it but I'm sure it's useful.

Miduchi was taught {Stone Skin} and I was taught {Iron Skin}.

In the first place if both of us take the time casting it it's not as if we can't use the spell {Bark Skin}, or at least at that level, and I guess the trick to it was different we struggled a bit to learn it.

If I can deploy a defensive field in one or two seconds then it might be useful one day.

With just that as hope we started engaging in practice to learn the spells.

Also, as a bonus Miduchi was taught the spell {Flame Strike} and I was taught the spell {Water Breathing}.

{Flame Strike} is a spell that sends three small {Fire Balls} radiating outwards and while each of the individual {Fire Balls} don't reach the level of the spell {Fire Ball} and obviously it's impossible to control them individual, it's a spell that makes it possible to burn away a somewhat wide range of area. Obviously if you pour more mana into it then it's possible to increase the number of fire balls as well.

The spell {Water Breathing} is just as the name sounds it makes it possible for you to breathe underwater. However, it was unexpectedly difficult to get a grasp on the trick for it, I ended up struggling quite a bit. I mean you know, you have to let water enter your lungs and then take the oxygen from there. At the very least that's how I understood it as working. In other words, it's necessary to drown. Of course, if the spell displays it's effects then you won't drown but the moment water enters your trachea you can't help but instinctively refuse it.

As expected even I was at my limits with this. In the end I was able to learn the spell itself but it end up taking quite a bit of time up until then and since Miduchi got interested in it she just kept struggling with learning it as well and because of the problem with her mana amount she wasn't able to learn it during the time we were in the Fairy Village.

Well, putting that aside, it's big that we were able to learn some defense type spells that seem reasonably useful. {Bark Skin} isn't anything great for the effects it offers and it's a spell that's pretty well-known as well. However, what could be called the advanced versions of that {Stone Skin} and {Iron Skin}, Miduchi and I had never even heard of them before.

There's also the problem of magic special level and MP needed in order to use them but if we can just make use of these then I think it would also be reassuring as well. Particularly Ralpha who stands at the front line. After all it differs from {Bark Skin} in that it doesn't require water magic.

"{Stone SKin}" Alteration

(Earth Magic Lv 4, Void Magic Lv 6, Consumed MP 18 Earth Magic Double Void Magic Combination)

Raises the defensive power of the targets skin to be like stone.

It's not as if it actually becomes stone so it doesn't obstruct the movements of the target. Either until the duration of the effect wears off or the {Stone Skin} receives damage of over double the level of the caster in HP the effect will continue. The duration of the effect is a number of seconds equal to the level of the caster.

"{Iron SKin}" Alteration

(Earth Magic Lv 6, Void Magic Lv 7, Consumed MP 29 Earth Magic Triple Void Magic Combination)

Raises the defensive power of the targets skin to be like iron.

It's not as if it actually becomes iron so it doesn't obstruct the movements of the target. Either until the duration of the effect wears off or the {Iron Skin} receives damage of over four times the level of the caster in HP the effect will continue. The duration of the effect is a number of seconds equal to the level of the caster.

"{Flame Strike}" Evocation

(All Elements Lv 2, Void Magic Lv 7, Consumed MP 29)

Fire off three small fire balls radiating outwards. Only the one in the center is possible to guide. For that reason, the greater the distance is to the target the greater distance the fire balls will continue to spread out. The angle of the radiation spreads out roughly 10 degrees apart using the center as 0 degrees. Increasing the number of fire balls fired off starts from in front of the center, then the next one after that would be left back from the center, then after that would be to the right as they increase in that order filling the gaps between.

"{Water Breathing}" Alteration.Reverse

(Water Magic Lv 2, Fire Magic Lv 1, Wind Magic Lv 3, Void Magic Lv 6, Consumes MP 12)

Makes it possible to breathe under water. The duration of the effect is the level of the caster multiplied by 5 minutes.

Chapter 258: Troublesome Matter 1

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 1

Around the time we returned to the surface it was just before the date was about to change. Both of us were exhausted(Though in degrees of exhaustion I was beyond Miduchi) from trying to learn {Water Breathing}, and from the overwhelming fatigue I just wanted to fall over into bed a moment sooner.

However, I also felt a strong hunger at the same time so for the time being we decided to eat something and then sleep. Though I say that there's almost no restaurants open at this time. It's not as if there's none at all but they're all taverns and if we just casually showed our faces and by chance we encounter someone from the {Slaughterers} I'm sure they would let us go for a while. It couldn't be helped so we returned to the inn we left the carriage as Miduchi and I ended up eating the emergency use preserved foods which aren't tasty at all. Of course, I could have told the guy standing at the front reception to take out the smoked Neisun that's a gift for Zenom from the refrigerator but as expected I would feel bad doing that.

We put the dried meat into hot water soaking it and then at the same time put the biscuit or cookie-like hard baked crackers into the hot water to soak before slowly biting into them along with the water. Thinking it was better than nothing I had everyone hold on to some but it's really just barely better than nothing and you can't even compliment it as being okay or easy to eat. Since it's a waste I'm having it consumed once every two months before they go back but because I don't want to eat it I've always forced it on to the combat slaves to eat. But, obviously it's reputation isn't very good.

Since it couldn't be helped, it's still better than throwing it away so I started selling it to a restaurant in the back slum areas for a price that's close to free. That restaurant sells dried meat and biscuits boiled in water along with the husks of oats {oatmeal}, as {Premium.Porridge} for a cheap price to those with a low income.

"So Cal*rie.Mate really was good tasting.."

"Wait, it's still too soon to eat right.."

"I'm in the hard noddle eating faction, you know that right?"

"It's not ramen."

"I mean, because I'm hungry~"

"Ah, really, I'll eat it too!"

".."

".."

"Hard..."

"Ha~ I feel like my teeth are going to break."

"Yeah, it's no good if we don't soak it for longer."

"It was too soon."

"Right."

".."

".."

"..Ah, the meat is already almost.."

"Oh, it works!"

"Yeah, it's good. It's properly become soup."

"Yeah, if it's just this much then you can bite through it."

"Though it's a bit hard I'm sure this is about right."

"After all it's meat right, meat. Meat and fish. Proteins from animals are important."

"You actually feel like you're eating right."

".."

".."

"I ate~ I ate~"

"We ate quite a bit right.."

In the end in just this one meal we ate over one full day of preserved food. Well, preserved food is limited to just being non-daily use and one meals worth of amount of preserved food is really only the bare minimum amount of calories so putting that aside(Even that isn't anything great. It's not like it's highly nutritious food. It's just that it fills your stomach well in comparisons to it's volume and since it's hard and you have to slowly eat it you feel like you've eaten a reasonable amount), the amount itself for 4 meals worth is only about 1.5 normal meals I'm sure.

Ah~ eating something like this I remember the past.

What you say? Hard biscuits, candy, orange spread, and sausage cans. When doing practice exercises for the JGSDF* it's one of the menus we eat combat provision type I. The fundamentals that are the hard biscuits and candy haven't changed since the Meiji era and are historically correct with the menu number I. Compared to these biscuits that aren't good at all and feel like your teeth are going to crack it was almost as delicious as a full course French meal. Particularly the orange spread and canned sausage that were added since it became the SDF are superb and even the hard biscuits and candy weren't bad to eat while outside.

Among the veteran members there were even some who liked the hard biscuits more than canned meals because you can eat them while moving or during short breaks and they're not just easy to eat but taste good, there was even some who ate them out of interest and said they never get tired of them. The main ingredient for the hard biscuits was wheat flour and then after that is salt, sugar, and sesame seeds and the rest is the same as bread, the candy could be replaced with rock candy as well.

Also..Mu. Canned sausage huh?

That, the water from the sausages though, if you open up the can and heat it up before eating it was considerably good. We have no cans but there's already sausage. Though when it comes to just the orange spread since we don't have rice, I don't know the method to make starch syrup and even if I substitute it with malt sugar I'm sure it would lead to that flavor. It's disappointing from the bottom of my heart but well~ I guess it's fine. It's plenty with jam.

Umu. Because I remembered the hard biscuits in an unexpected place the menu(a portion) that I'll be feeding to my future army for meals was decided. We should make hard biscuits into a standard right. I'll have Giberuti make them later.

"Fu~ After eating a lot of I'm starting to get tired."

"Nn..Yeah~"

Certainly I've started to get tired after eating.

"It's fine to sleep but let's review one last time..Alright. Shall we try performing {Water Breathing}?"

I put the face washing tub on top of the table and filled it with water before moving Miduchi in front of it.

"Eeeh~ Nn..Well..I guess it can't be helped. Well then..Hmph!!"

I use Identify on Miduchi as she's started controlling her mana for the sake of using the spell {Water Breathing}.

Her MP is 24. It takes 30 minutes or so for her to control the mana so three times would be difficult but I'm sure she can manage it twice. I guess I'll start getting used to {Iron Skin}.

".."

".."

..I did it. My body is surrounded in a faint blue spell light. It succeeded. Well, I've already succeeded a number of times so you could say it's only obvious though.

"Vohe!! Goho!! Gehwo! Wwa~!! Wwa~!! Wa~ha~"

I guess Miduchi failed huh? Her MP decreased by 12 but she's recovered 6 so it's currently at 18. She can still do it.

"Now, one more time."

"..Eh...Yeah, got it..Hmph!!"

Now then, I'll start once more as well...

".."

".."

"Go~he!! Gehwo! Wwa~!! Wa~ha~"

Miduchi failed again huh? But it seems she's gotten quite a bit used to it. Her MP decreased by 12 but increased by 6 and it's now at 12. She can still do it. By the way, opposite to my will there's one part in the center of my body that still hasn't gotten tired.

It's a healthy 18 year old body after all. It's the so-called sleep demon something or other. The reason I went to the trouble of saying something that sounded appropriate to have Miduchi use her MP is also this though.

"Now, one more time."

"Eh? Pretty soon.."

"One more time."

"Yeah..Hmph!!"

Alright. With this Miduchi's MP has hit 0. Whether this spell succeeds or fails I'm sure the symptoms of mana exhaustion will show up soon. Right now she's just somehow managing because she's in a state of extreme concentration.

Now then, I will once more as well...

".."

I guess I've reasonably started to get used to the spell {Iron

Skill} as well, I've started to be able to activate it in just 25 minutes of concentration. Miduchi has both of her hands on the washing tub and is looking at the surface of the water without moving an inch. Even when it comes to concentrating for using a spell, the fact that she's able to continue it for this long of a period even excluding how familiar she is with spells can't be done with an ordinary mental strength.

Back when we first met on the 14th floor of the dungeon we were both still 16 but even then we had a considerable amount of resistance towards mana exhaustion. The reason she got disheveled like an idiot was because she identified that I was the one there and because her memories has returned.

I guess I'll start making preparations while I can now.

Using my mana to pretty close to the limit pouring it into an {Anti-Magic Field}..takes a bit of time so I start using the usual 700 MP or so version several times to reduce my MP. Miduchi's already sweating quite a bit from how hard she's concentrating. Though it's the same for me. Something like a shower is fine later.

I touch the clock magic tool and the date changed long ago as it's about 2 am now.

I take off my shirt and take a rubber pack out from my wallet before preparations are complete. After Identifying and my MP has cut past 50 as well. Just in case I check that the hinge is set on the door and then take off my pants and underwear.

I bit open the edge of the rubber pack and take one out, before equipping it right away...

"..Gobo..."

Huh? Did she, succeed? Hurry~hurry~ I need to use up my MP as well.

Identify Identify.

"..Gobo...Nn, I did it."

It seems she succeeded at using the spell {Water Breathing}. With this now as long as she has time she can use it anytime. But, it's great she succeeded at the very end.

"..What's with that appearance.."

Because she succeeded with the spell {Water Breathing}, Miduchi said with an amazed tone of voice as water was coming out of her nose but she quickly noticed her own abnormality and licked her lips with a smile that gave me shivers. Her forked tongue lewdly crawls along her lips.

He~ what do you mean Condition: Normal.

Exactly what about this is Normal.

Though I'm Normal as well..I already can't Identify anymore.

Almost simultaneously one of the primal desires rises from the depths of my body and goes through the center of my head. I'm still tired but even more than that my brain is ruled by a thick and burning desire.

Ku..

Kufu..

Even the woman in front of me Miduchi has already started to impatiently take off her shirt without trying to resist her desires.

Uhheee.

I'll help you out.

"Nn..Really..Ah.."

Ah, I forgot to take off my socks. Somehow..it's uncool.

.....

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 2

We slept until close to noon.

Before going to eat lunch we returned the carriage and after taking back the smokes we left with them we left the inn. By the time we returned to Boil Manor it was just barely before they were about to go to lunch and since we had the chance I had them wait for a bit so we could all go and eat together.

Since we're entering the dungeon again starting the day after tomorrow, in order to order Giberuti to purchase the necessary consumables I left without drinking tea and went to the restaurant

Giberuti is often eating lunch.

He wasn't there.

Chi..Even though he's just a slave, not being around when I need him is a subject for point reduction. And while I was imagining completely unreasonable things, my imagination itself started to seem idiotic so I decided to go and buy it myself since it couldn't be helped.

It's been a while since I last went shopping for the food and such we use in the dungeon. Around the time we started going to the 2nd floor we had meals in the dungeon so I ended up going to buy it. I still didn't trust Zulu or Angela completely at that time. I couldn't bring myself to do something like leaving money in the hands of slaves. Come to think of it, I left money to Giberuti right from the start...

Somehow he has a face that makes it easy to trust him, that guy.

It was when I was thinking that and walking down the street with shops that deal in food.

"It's fine if you just convey it to Greed-sama."

"That's right, it's simple right? We just want to request that he have a meal together with the mistress matching up with his schedule. Why are refusing it to that extent?"

"I'm very sorry, I'm not a person who understands social standing so.."

"I've said it countless times right. We're squires that serve Baron Refaisu's family. It's fine if you confirm our status."

"That's not the problem. I've been firmly instructed by Greed not to convey things like that so.."

"Isn't that why we're here lowering our heads asking right. Can't you do something there!"

When I was passing by a certain store, I heard the voices of several people arguing from inside. It's a store we often use but since it seemed crowded I was going to put it off and pass by to go to a different store. One of the voices from inside was Giberuti. I feel like I've heard the other voices somewhere as well...

"Hey~ you. I'm certain you said the words {Slaughterers} right?"

You're someone closely related to them right? Could it be you're adventuring together with the {Slaughterers}? Though that doesn't seem to be the case with that body."

"Well, if we can just get Greed-dono to meet our mistress then.."

"That's right. It's not like we have any intention of harming Greed-dono. We just want to become acquaintances."

"I'm truly very sorry."

Ah, I remembered. Two months or so ago, it's the group Zulu and I passed by when we were clearing through the dungeon. If I remember correctly, it was Sir Nokkufyuri, right. I can remember that voice as well. The remaining three people are honestly not in my memory. It seems that mistress or whatever isn't around either and I feel like they're missing one more woman as well.

"Hmm, Ran, hold him down. {Status Open}."

"Ah..What are you doing!"

"Hey, stop!"

"..I thought something was strange and after all aren't you one of the slaves owned by Viscount Greed's family. Just a mere slave shouldn't be talking back to us. It's the wish of our mistress."

"He's a slave? You scum, our mistress is a sub-Noble you know? Even though you're just a slave do you intend on opposing Baron Refaisu's family!?"

"Certainly I'm a slave. Putting aside if that noble mistress or whatever were to directly order me.."

Ku..These bastards, they forcefully looked at Giberuti's status huh?

I can't believe them.

Well, whatever.

If I feel it's necessary I use Identify after all.

Come to think of it the voice the woman called Ran matches up with the idiot woman who was wearing chain-mail.

"Umm, did my slave make any kind of mistake?"

"Ah..Master!"

While standing in the doorway of the food store I called out and right after noticing me Giberuti knelt down.

"Did he do some kind of wrongdoing that required forcefully looking at his status? How about it? Giberuti."

"No, I haven't done anything."

I said it with strong tone of voice that wouldn't allow excuses.

"The person them self is saying this but...If my slave has made any kind of mistake then I'll apologize for it."

"Are you sub-Noble Greed-dono? Hn?"

It seems that Sir Nokkufyuri remembered my face but didn't have any confidence in it. He's looking at me somewhat suspiciously.

"Yeah, I'm Alan.Greed. And, what in the world is this?"

I said while looking head on at the face of Sir Nokkufyuri who seems to be the highest rank and leader of their group. It's considerably bad manners to forcefully look at someone's status even though they weren't doing anything wrong at all. Though I say that this Sir Nokkufyuri tried to stop it but. Since he wasn't able to stop it he's equally guilty. No, it's not a crime though.

"Ah, finally..However, I feel like somewhere..Ah!"

If I'm certain this Elf is 20 years old right. This brat. Answer my question.

""Ah!""

It seems the other members recognized me as well. Some of them even went from a face of realization to a bitter expression like they had eaten a bug.

"I'll ask once more. Did my slave do something wrong?"

"..!! That is, I'm very sorry for our rudeness. Your excellency's slave did nothing wrong at all."

"James!"

"Your excellency sub-Noble Greed! We are.."

"Please meet with our mistress!"

On the side of Sir Nokkufyuri who apologized and politely lowered his head, the remaining three were all about to say something. Sir

Nokkufyuri raised his right hand a bit cutting them all off partway with his head still lowered though.

"Is that so? I understand. If there's no problem then we'll take our leave here. Giberuti, stand. We're going."

"Yes."

I said that before trying to turned around and leave.

It's not like eating a meal with that mistress or whatever is anything much at all, but I'm sure, it's that right? Sell us some armor or that sort of thing right? I won't sell it. It's no good.

If you want it then wait in line after you've made it into the first or second knight groups. Well~ the entire first knight group should be complete pretty soon. It's not like all of them are buying it after all.

"Please wait just a moment, your excellency! Please listen to what we have to say."

If it's listening, didn't I already do it the last time right? It can't be helped, it seems they won't back off if I don't properly listen once more and then turn them down.

"What is it?"

"I'm a knight of the Kingdom's third knight group, Jemikku.Nokkufyuri. At the same time I'm also a retainer that serves Baron Refaisu's family as well. Just a moment ago our retainers were very rude to you. Please forgive us."

Sir Nokkufyuri politely lowered his head once again. Ah, a retainer is vassal that serves some noble and they're the so-called "Daimyo's retainer" is the meaning of the word but it also has the same meaning as a apprentice knight{squire} in the knight group as well. Since both of them had the exact same "Esuto" pronunciation in the Ragudarios Language{Common.Language} so it's complicating. Ah, putting aside the pronunciation, you already know the meanings are overlapping right?

"Yes, I've already received an apology for that matter so it's fine."

"Umm, that is, tonight or tomorrow night, if it's convenient for your schedule, would you please have a meal with, Yorire-sama, the eldest daughter of our master Baron Refaisu's family? Yorire-sama is a member of the third knight group as well although she's still just a squire but.."

Ah, really~ Well, I guess it's fine to properly turn things down there huh?

"Is it fine if I inquire as to the business?"

"Umm, that is..How do I put this..I can't say it myself."

Sir Nokkufyuri acted like it was extremely difficulty to say, also, he apologized with a vague reply. Of course he did just request to sell him armor the other day and I turned it down after all. If I remember correctly the mistress Yorire from that time said something about directly requesting it from me. Yes~yes. I'll directly listen to it and properly turn it down.

"..When and where should I go?"

I was told the time and place. I thought the place would be a restaurant but it was different. It seems they're going to have catering in a room at the Elm Tree Manor they're staying. I guess they're considerably rich.

Chapter 259: Troublesome Matter 2

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 2

On the evening and time designated I showed up at the Elm Tree Manor. With plenty of sarcasm I had Giberuti accompany me. It's only obvious right? Even I'm considerably angry. Even though they aren't a noble they forcefully held down Giberuti and checked his status.

If it's a noble then Giberuti has the obligation to obey them so even without holding him down if they were to just say the words "Confirm his status" then he can't refuse it and it's one of the natural rights of a noble so I wouldn't think anything of it at all either but even if it's someone related to a knight group just a mere commoner forcefully looked at Giberuti's status. No matter how you look at it my slave that looks harmless to man and beast alike was treated like a suspect for a crime.

Unforgivable.

I won't feel any better until that owner something or other lady of theirs apologizes. Certainly I'm from a remote region but even I have pride as a noble and my self-confidence from leading the {Slaughterers} the top adventurers in Baldukk. Like I'd accept being underestimated by a mere sub-Noble from a Baron family from some place. Let alone when they're supposedly still a squire in the knight group. Putting aside if they were in the first knight group, it's the same for the third knight group. The third and fourth knight groups are no different from any regional knight group just on a bigger scale and if it's someone from a Baron family then if they just trained normally anyone can get into them. That's right. I'm angry over it. It's certainly irritating in regards to things relating to Giberuti's status as well but this time the other party called out to Giberuti with their aims set on me. Knowing that I was behind Giberuti they still forcefully looked at his status. In other words, it's the same as if they were picking a fight with me.

There were plenty of things I wanted to like training the magic I just learned or lecturing the reincarnated people that I often do. However, I canceled all of it and the reason I complied with this sudden and impolite invitation is because I want an apology for them underestimating me. After all there was what seemed like an active third knight group knight there and there was also those who seemed like his followers as well. If I don't resolve this right away then you never know what kind of rumors they might start spreading around about me in the knight groups of the capital. It would be troublesome if they start calling me someone with no pride as a noble.

It's on a completely different scale from last year when I intentionally showed off that I was lacking in the ability to manage my members as preparation to absorb {Sun.Ray}. That time there was countless ways I could make up for it after(in actual fact, we found out about the suspicious fraud like behavior of the {Sun.Ray}'s leadership and started making movements to trap them, so the fact that we completely took in a large force as our own was a good rumor for adventurers), and it wasn't related to the nobility at all.

Certainly Sir Nokkufyuri apologized right away but while he's a true knight there's almost no value to a commoner lowering their head. In terms of Japan it'd be like a police officer(though it might be closer to calling it a police officer from a foreign country) that holds the position of responsibility but is in a completely different jurisdiction or the leadership of some places SDF.

In this top unless it's an adventurer with a considerable reputation(there's a lot of the so-called hoodlums and it's only obvious that they're rude but in the first place this town is one that profits from the treasures adventurers come to find so they're often looked at in a lenient light in that regard), or a Baldukk Knight who is investigating a crime then it would be a different matter but of course that's not the case either. Something like an underling is worthless. Bring out someone higher up.

I wore my highest class clothes with my sword still worn on my waist and so I wouldn't be looked down on, they're pre-made but I had Giberuti wearing decent looking clothes as well, and I slapped both of my cheeks putting some spirit into it before coming along to Elm Tree Manor. Of course, it depends on the actions of the other party but while I was invited I don't want to be treated(depending on the case I intend on throwing gold coins at them to embarrass them) so I didn't forget to bring along my wallet with gold coins in it.

Sure enough starting with Sir Nokkufyuri the others were waiting for my arrival in front of the Elm Tree Manor.

"Your excellency sub-Noble Greed, even though today was a sudden invitation, thank you very much for coming."

The first thing he said was that and he had everyone from this afternoon apologize. I've already received an apology from you all long ago, it's not like I want you to lower your heads countless times.

I just lightly nodded and waited for them to lead me inside.

For a short while the silence continued.

"That is..It's very difficult to say but Yorire-sama wishes to have a one-on-one meeting with your excellency and..a slave, that is.."

The man from this afternoon said that.

It's my first time hearing, something like that.

"Is that so? Well then please excuse me. I thought I would be receiving an apology from that lady or whatever of Baryon Refaisu in regards to the incident this afternoon but..How disappointing. Well then, I'll take my leave here."

I said that and accompanied by Giberuti started to return back down to the street North.

Obviously they tried to keep me from going in a panic as one of them ran into the inn.

They went to ask the lady of theirs or whatever about it.

Hurry up and go, slow-ass.

It seems they finally noticed that I'm considerably angry from my expression and appearance, they lowered their head again. However, something like that doesn't matter at all.

The one who went into the inn isn't coming back out for a while, so getting impatient I started talking about suspending the meeting.

Of course I'm not serious though.

"It seems that Baron Refaisu's family doesn't think anything of forcefully checking the status of slave that hasn't commit a crime or anything else. Normally I think it would be proper for your side to come to me to make the apology but it seems that our values differ on that end. If it's like then even if were to discuss things"Your excellency! Please wait! That is..the fault is all with us, the lady is.."

And said something like that.

Are you an idiot? The mistakes of a dog are the responsibility of it's owner.

While we were doing that the one who ran into the inn came back out.

It seems they approved of the slave accompanying me.

Being guided by that person Giberuti and I walked through the door of the Elm Tree Manor.

And, almost as if switching places with us as we went into a person I didn't want to meet came out. The leader of {Verdure.Brotherhood}, the old man elf with a pointless cool voice, Viruheima.

"Yo~ well~well, if it isn't the man of the moment, sub-Noble Greed over there is it?"

Shut~up. I tried to just lightly nod and pass him by and he started saying that sarcastically.

"Oh my~ that sure is lonely. I guess his excellency the sub-Noble who's at the top and overtook the records of the founding King doesn't have any time to spare for a commoner like myself."

Chi..This old man is annoying.

"Do you have some business with me? I'm very sorry but I have a meeting so.."

"Meeting..With who?"

"Sub-Noble her excellency Refaisu."

Nobles are meeting each other. So don't interfere right now.

"Hmph...Hey, just the other day we went to the 7th floor as well.

Just watch. We'll overtake you soon."

After acting like he has no interest Viruhaima declared that he was going to overtake us. I know. It seems like {Black.Topaz} has made it to the 7th floor as well after all.

"Please give it your best."

I just said that and passed by him. Old man Virhuaima seemed like he still wanted to say something but it seems he was originally going outside for dinner or something. His face just twisted a bit as he disappeared out the door.

"Umm, I'm very sorry but your weapon is.."

In front of the room that seems to be our destination the woman named Ran who was guiding us started saying apologetically, with a voice like it was about to disappear she demanded the sword I had on my waist.

"Huh? Why? She's a sub-Noble of the same rank, why would just I have to hand over my sword?"

I glared at her while asking.

"Ah, that is..No..However.."

What is it, she isn't responding clearly. It's because you're like this that you throw your rucksack down in the middle of a room. I guess that's unrelated huh?

"You know. I don't really want to have to say this every time but you're the ones who called me out without telling me anything on what this was about. Furthermore you forcefully checked the status of my slave right? I have no intention of letting go of my sword for the sake of caution."

"Ha..However.."

She sure is indecisive. I'll leave. Seriously.

"Ran. It's fine. Let him through."

The voice of that Lady Yorire or whatever woman came from inside of the room.

.....

Now then, after being let into that lady Yorire or whatever's room we exchanged greetings without checking each other status and just as was offered I sat down on the sofa across from her. I thought about reclining back into it in a haughty way but that will be after I see how the other side acts.

"First off it seems that I need to apologize. It seems that those who servant our Baron Refaisu family were very rude to you and I humbly offer you my apology. I'm very for that."

The carefully brushed long blue hair hid her face. She lowered her appropriate young and healthy looking face for her age as she politely apologized.

I watched her silently.

"I need to apologize to you as well. I'm sure it must have been unpleasant. I'm very sorry."

She said that while lowering her head to Giberuti who was behind me as well. Hmm.

"..I understand. If you apologize that courteously then I can't always remain angry either. I'll accept your apology."

I said that and then she made an openly relieved expression as she thanked me for accepting her apology.

"And then, Greed-sama. I'm very sorry but I'd like to speak to your privately. If possible I'd like to talk with just the two of us but.."

The woman named Ran who guided us up to this room isn't here anymore. It's just the three of us. Remembering back on it carefully and unusually for a noble there's no slaves around either. Although, in the Kingdom's knight group if you're not a true knight then regardless of whether you're a noble or commoner you can't bring along slaves so that's why there's never any squires going around with slaves either. I could have sworn she would be using a slave of the knight Sir Nokkufyuri or something though.

"He's a loyal slave of mine though.."

"I'm very sorry."

Hmph.

"Excuse me. It's something that's difficult to say in a very loud voice."

Well, I guess it's fine huh? Just in case I'll try identify her. I feel like I did it before as well but I've already forgotten
it.

After all she still hasn't received investiture as a knight and she's nothing worth mentioning. Considering the fact that she's a member of the knight group her level is low for her age. Obviously her magic special skill levels are low as well so I shouldn't need the Giberuti shield.

"Giberuti, wait outside."

"I understand, master."

"Thank you very much. Greed-sama. After all, you're a kind person indeed."

Huh?

"... said you're that sort of person. Very proud and you act kindly towards those below you."

Yes? Who in this world is this Saint she's speaking of?

"I'm the grandchild of Baron Refaisu Vizonsu. My mother went to the Royal Palace when she was young and received his majesty's affection. The one who was born from receiving his majesty's seed was me. Do you know things up to here?"

I have no clue. Something like that. However, judging from her age then I guess she was conceived 20 years ago or so huh? That would be from when his majesty the King was 32 years old. If I remember correctly before he bought the water bed he had 8 official children and 6 illegitimate children.

"About two years ago, I received orders from his majesty and was permitted to enter the third knight group of the Kingdom. In the third knight group other than myself, my two sisters entered at the same time."

Sisters indeed~ Aren't those girls illegitimate children as well?

"However..It's the same for me but all three of us struggled learning to use the weapons we weren't familiar with."

Ha~ Well, I'm sure that's only obvious.

"But, fortunately our Refaisu family had the squire James who was already in the third knight group. I was instructed directly by him and my abilities increased quite a bit. A few years ago, he received the honor of investiture as a knight."

"That is..great I guess. Congratulations."

I was finally able to say something.

"No..It's all for the sake of Greed-sama after all."

"Huh?"

"This spring, I was permitted to have an audience with his majesty for the first time."

Well, just because they're parent and child, for the time being they've already become people from different families so I'm sure they can't meet directly that easily. However, this story, I wonder where it will jump to?

"I met his majesty together with my three sisters all at once.

There we heard about Greed-sama from his majesty."

Ah, is that so. And? However, it can't be right?

"That night, the three of us sisters talked about it. Exactly what kind of person is the Greed-sama his majesty was talking about.."

Ah, so he didn't say something like get married to me or something like that? Someone attached by strings to that King would suck~ and I was thinking that but it seems to be different I guess?

"Older sister didn't seem to have much interest in Greed-sama who is an adventurer but I'm sure that was just her pretending otherwise. On the contrary my little sister was interested just the same as myself."

I see~ It sure is difficult being a popular guy.

"After that I investigated as much as I could about Greed-sama. In just the two years since appearing in Baldukk you've risen up to the top of the adventurers and furthermore you've made great success running the company that deals in rubber. There's also various rumors as well but highly skilled for such a young age, a young man with courage, resourcefulness, and vast future prospects. And it's also said you're highly ambitious. It could also be said you're a superior personality who can make decisions objective while looking at things calmly."

He~ Everything isn't exactly as she says but it doesn't feel bad being praised.

"And then the other day, I heard the rumors that you surpassed the achievements of his majesty the founding King George.Rombert the First. We all doubted our ears. I mean, we couldn't even imagine there was a person like that."

Well, I'm sure that's normally the case.

"No, I appreciate your praise but it's not something that I could have managed all on my own.."

For the time being I'll act humbly. But putting aside the combat, if Zenom wasn't around there would have been a lot I panicked over. Ralpha and Gwine are indispensable for making the map. If Bel wasn't around the first time I was called out by the King I might have been stunned and made some kind of major mistake as well. If Toris wasn't around then in the first place even if I had thought about increasing my forces I probably would have taken a different method. If it wasn't for Miduchi's knowledge then I think we would have probably been troubled with the trolls and might have easily died on the 14th floor as well. Basutoral..I might not have ever been able to eat sausages. Rodrick..whatever.

Well, at the very least it isn't a lie. Rather it's closer to my real feelings. If it was just me alone then I might have been able to do something up to the 9th or 10th floors but I'm sure it would have taken a much much longer amount of time and there's a high chance I would have died along the way.

"How modest of you..Your older sister is ultimate sorcerer that the first knight group has great hopes for, the Black Witch. Your older brother is a knight who had such high abilities and talent that even on his first campaign he was called the Black Eagle of Webdos."

Is she just a fan?

"No matter what I wanted to meet with you talk once. It was worth saying something unreasonable and taking the days off. However, with the matter this time I'm confident about it. Greed-sama is.."

"Umm, I'm honored to be seen so highly though. Would you mind getting to the point.."

"My objective was just to directly meet and talk to you so.."

Huh? It wasn't a discussion about selling armor? And just meeting and talking directly was the purpose, what in the world is that?

"Just to have you remember me for today and retain it in your heart was the purpose. I won't hand it over to anyone else."

"Eh?"

"How many heirs would you like?"

Ah, this woman, she's that. Probably, she was told by the King at the start.

"What kind of strange things are you saying..If you've investigated me then you should already know right? I already have" You mustn't say anymore than that. Isn't that one Dark Elf fine as a second wife? In the end she's just a different race that can't give birth to an heir. She's no rival for me. If you marry me then in the future when you're granted a territory, it will be an advantage you know?"

I don't hate these sorts of values. But, you, just now said my woman is a different race that can't give birth to an heir right?

That itself is the same as just a mere adventurer. She herself is a noble that has the blood of the King on top of the fact that Miduchi is still young so it might be obvious for her to be seen as below. However, think about the person you're talking to. You just made a fool of me for choosing that sort of woman.

If you wanted to get along with me, with us, then you wouldn't pick that sort of wording to say it.

I reclined back into the sofa and crossed my legs.

Chapter 260: Troublesome Matter 3

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 2

This bastard(she's a woman though), I'm amazed she can say that so shamelessly...

【Refaisu Family: Baron of Rombert Kingdom. Investiture date was Year 7314, Month 5, Day 24.】

【Rise to power: William.Rombert the Third went independent and founded it.】

【The current head of the family is Vizonsu.Refaisu, the sixth generation.】

Hmph.

I'm not rejecting the aspect of nobles forming relationships through marriage itself. It's somewhat effective after all.

However, just those who are related to the King of Rombert are no good. If it comes to that then it will really just end up as a vassal Kingdom and if things go badly based on the blood relationship background it can be thought they might try to take control of politics or the internal details of my Kingdom.

No, it's not particularly like I'm against being a vassal Kingdom.

Of course I don't want that to be the case though. But, starting a country that can maintain its independence in this state of affairs is putting it frankly impossible.

If I can make a portion of the Dirt Plains into my territory then in regards to food(just the staples wheat and meat though) I think we'll be fine with self-sufficiency. That's if we can cultivate a bit of it though. In regards to an army I have confidence I can do something about it as well. If I'm there, and I make things like guns or gunpowder then putting aside a foreign campaign, I think there will most likely be no problem with defense. If I just have enough time to make several tens of guns, anti-personnel mines, and pseudo claymores(though it's just planned but I plan to have a certain amount ready before hand) then even if an army of several thousand lead by the first knight group with sister included were to attack five or ten times, I think it'll be possible to deal hard blows to them every time and still drive them into retreat. Though I'm sure the cleanup would be difficult.

The problem is if in secret something like a commando unit of a small number of super elites invade and perform combat sporadically almost like a guerilla warfare and perform things like terrorism towards non-combatants but whether it's Rombert Kingdom or Guranan Empire , I'm sure any place would be troubled by that so it's the same.

Rather than the problem is the various types of manufactured goods other than food and an army. Even if it's not perfect if we can at least produce all of it inside of my territory then we should be able to manage anything. Whether it's the founder of the Nosebleed Arts or whatever else it's fine if I just make the machines for producing it. However, the problem is in regards to mineral and plant resources. No matter what it's necessary to import them.

There's few mountains in the area around the Dirt Plains so I'm sure it'll be necessary to rely on imports for most of those sorts of things. Certainly there's also territories that have mountains included in them as well but those areas have few forests along the border of Devas Kingdom and there's a lot of combat. There's merits and demerits right.

It's because of reasons like that in regards to a vassal Kingdom, particularly for the first assistance period where it's necessary I think it can't be helped. However, I personally am hoping to form those sorts of relationships through marriage with a noble that has a territory in the surrounding areas. If it's possible then ideally a territory that's right next to mine in contact with it. Even when it comes to receiving aid, going back and forth to the next territory over is easy. Additionally if it ever comes down to it, it makes it easier to conquer as well. No, I don't think I will though. Yeah. Probably.

In any case, I want to form blood relatives with some place which won't make any sort of unreasonable demands. In this case, the demands towards my country wouldn't be the delivery of money or resources but I can guess it would be offering military strength. Even if you just look at me individually it would be a large force and in regards to guns even if we desperately try to hide them the moment they're used in live combat of a reasonable scale once there's no way left to hide them anymore. It's necessary to find a different route than offering them military strength until then. If we can skillfully cultivate the land in the Dirt Plains and defend it then it's possible that eventually we could deliver food in exchange. This would be better.

It can also be thought that something might be demanded using sister as a hostage but as long as sister is in the first knight group of the Kingdom, that's something we already knew could happen. Since my brother and parents are citizens of Marquis Webdos's territory as long as I don't let my relationship with Marquis Webdos deteriorate then even if it's the King he shouldn't be able to do anything unreasonable. To be more precise it's possible for him to request things of the Marquis but I can't imagine that the Marquis would accept it.

In those sorts of meanings Miduchi's Lail Kingdom has considerably good conditions. It's a moderate distance away and a small country that's maintained complete independence. It seems they perform some foreign trade but their population is extremely small and they rely on imports for a considerable portion of their daily necessities.

The primary things they export are drugs and the various types of mushrooms that are the ingredients for those and secondary they also sell magic stones. After that is..they have something that can't even be called a military but is quite literally a commando unit of a very small number of assassins.

Though it's thanks to Miduchi as well but just in case I have the pipe with the healer Baidu~nsu.Tukerin in the capital and I'm also making use of it to purchase some industrial waste from their country. In between operation time of the sausage factory I have two of each flavor being deliveries to his healing office everyday. Baldoggie are a favorite of his and he's supposedly extremely pleased over them. I think it might be good to sell Baldoggie and wheat to Lail Kingdom through him as well.

Adding to that as well and if I just return Miduchi to Lail Kingdom once, the fact that it seems we can simply form an alliance is the greatest. Although, in this case there's not very many short-term merits other than preventing me from becoming the target of assassination and making obtaining the various types of drugs easier.

However, in the future on the occasion I start trying to increase my territory it's possible I could have some powerful reinforcements. After all I can make a unit of close to 100 all with mana on the level of Miduchi and depending on the case I might even be able to get my hands on their systematic education and upbringing method as well.

Putting aside Lail Kingdom, this lady Yorire is almost definitely a forerunner pawn for that middle-aged King. I don't know if he intentionally ordered this, guided her into doing it, or convinced her into believing this was her own thinking though. In that case there's only one way of dealing with it that matches up with my goals. The objective is of course, making sure even just she doesn't keep dragging this on any longer. It can't be helped if someone else is sent in instead. After that, it's also let him understand the message, "I've noticed, don't underestimate me so much."

Of course, if he doesn't do things like underestimate me and hopes for a relation of an equal alliance then I'll raise my hands in the air and welcome it. I'm sure something like that is impossible though.

"I see. So you have the intention of coming to my place? Just now, you said that if I marry you then I'll have an advantage in the future but..What are you saying is the collateral for that to be the case?"

It's quite something that she didn't even bat an eyelid seeing my attitude suddenly change to arrogance.

"I stated it just now right? I was born from the seed of his majesty the King."

"Well then, if a blood relation with his majesty is important then you yourself have no value other than giving birth to an heir? Ah, you were still just a squire was it. One from the third knight group even."

I made a face as if I was completely looking down on her as I said it. Someone like you other than your blood relation, whether it be as a soldier or as the commander of a unit(at the very least for now) are useless, also, I tried saying it as if she was at best a tool for giving birth to children.

"What other value do you wish for than that?"

Oh, she's got quite a bit..of resolve behind it I see. I guess it's proof that she knows her own position?

"If you don't know that then you're lacking to become my partner."

"Of course I know that much. In place of your excellency, it's to provide relief for places your excellency's hands don't reach in the territory."

She sure says it easily. Certainly if she could do that then it's a high point as a partner. However, for her to answer with this sort of reply means she isn't an idiot. But, this reply is still no good. If she's going to highlight the blood relation then she should lay out all of the merits of it thoroughly. That's right, regardless of what I tell her. On the contrary if she said something like she would get all of my wishes to pass with Rombert Kingdom using her blood relation as a shield then even if it was boasting I'd have give her a second look.

Although, she's not an official child so I'm sure something like that is impossible. She should be showing guts. If it's just this degree of reply then it lacks in tangibility and it just feels like she's trying to cleverly match it up to me. There's no different from saying "I'll give my best".

"How are you going to prove that?"

"I can't prove it until things from here on out."

Of course that's the case. Since you have no achievements after all. Well, since nothing concrete came out here, I'm sure it's impossible. If she doesn't at least say something like, "Since your excellency sub-Noble Greed is an adventurer from a remote area I'm sure taxes, human resources, and law are a weak point so I'll support you there" or "I have connections to a good candidate for tax collection official or governor". You, for what reason are you in the third knight group? Doesn't the knight group raise those sorts of talents?

"Even though you don't have any achievements at all just blood relation isn't enough of a reason to accept you. I think I have some considerably talented people in my place after all."

Additionally I guess I'll say this as well.

"By the way, why is the color of your hair different from last time?"

It's a beautiful blue color but it's hard to say it suits her very well. It's in bad taste.

"Oh my? Isn't it the color you prefer? I heard that you preferred blue or green so I dyed it though.."

Eh? Something like that...

The only ones I thought things like they're beautiful or cute the moment I saw them, based on just appearances were Bel and sister-in-law Shani-san. Of course, the elf Miduchi is beautiful and even Ralpa has reasonably cute facial features. However, since Miduchi has the blood of an elf it's just that she's beautiful in comparison to humans but looking in the framework of elves there's many more beautiful people. Ralpa is in the cute category looking from a Japanese person standpoint, but somehow she smells of piss*. Looking in the case of a dwarf Gwine is an overwhelming beauty but she's far off from my preference.

If I were to observe my own glances towards women then I might notice that the way I looked at Bel's hair dyed deep blue and sister-in-law Shani's light green hair is different. Of course I have no self-awareness of doing it.

However, things like red, black, blonde, and depending on the case light red, white, were all hair colors on Earth. Blue, green, and pink are hair colors that weren't on Earth so at first I was considerably surprised over them. I guess that means they realize, no, realized that? I'm sure it's just overthinking it though.

"It seems that wasn't the case."

She must have noticed that I had raised my eyebrows and was making a doubtful expression. She continued with a slightly disappointed voice.

"..I don't know if it was dyed or not but your previous hair color suited you better."

"..I'll take that to heart."

"Well, putting aside the matter of hair, I intend on choosing my partner myself. Things like ability and appearance are important but if things like sensitivity and values can't be shared then I'm sure it would be painful for both of us through a long life."

It's something extremely ordinary but it's also important as well.

I'm sure this Yorire isn't the only daughter or relative of the King and other nobles trying to make blood relations and in that case even I want to choose.

"Also, it's strange saying this but your excellency sub-Noble Refaisu is still a squire right? You should have important duties in the knight group."

"If Greed-sama would be willing to take me as a wife I would resign even tomorrow."

I'm sure that's the case but you know. Well, I guess when it comes to something like squires of the third knight group there's about 1,000 or so of them so even if she quits there's plenty of replacements. However, putting aside a full-fledged knight, doing something like that at the stage when she's still a half-assed squire is something I don't like~ I actually was left with a pretty good impression from Kuro and Mary.

It was then that there was a knock on the door of the room. Lady Yorire waited for me to troublesomely fix my posture before giving permission and the one who appeared in the room was Ran. It seems the catering has arrived. I guess because of that trouble before I entered the room, they had already finished preparations and they were just waiting for good timing. It still hasn't even been 10 minutes since I sat down on the sofa.

"Now then, I guess we'll end things here for today. Ran, please call James."

She told that to Ran and at the same time declared an end to the fishy discussion. I asked for Giberuti to be let into the room as well. Of course as someone to wipe my face for me. After that I ate reasonably first-class catering while(Ah, I wiped my mouth myself. Giberuti is just enduring as he stands behind me. Sorry about that), I was asked freely about my activities as an adventurer.

We finished up the meal and after drinking tea, I said before standing from my seat.

"It was an honor being invited by you today. Also, it was a very delicious meal. I apologize for being unable to give you a favorable reply but just this has various circumstances involved with it. Please give up thinking it was something not meant to be."

On our way back I let Giberuti eat at a slightly good restaurant.

"..Is how things went."

I invited Miduchi, Zenom, Ralpa, Bel, Toris, Gwine, Basutoral, also Rodrick into my room and reported things from today. They were considerably surprised from the details no one had predicted.

"In other words~ there's strings attached, to that. Not to mention it was just a mere illegitimate child. It didn't seem like I could pull any money out of it, even if I accept something like that unless they're considerably superior there's not much really..Additionally you know her face was, "Bata-kusai~". She was reasonably beautiful but didn't match my preference~"

I said that while drinking some tea.

"..So you turned her down."

Miduchi said somehow relieved but she's already accepted the fact that eventually somewhere down the line there's a high chance of needing to form a blood relation through marriage with someone with strings attached. Well, if it's someone around the area of Marquis Webdos then it seems they have some leeway financially so I'd have nothing to say but a daughter of the direct bloodline has already married my brother. I'm sure it would be difficult. But if it's after the Marquis's eldest son, the knight commander Baron Sendohel.Webdos becomes the Marquis and I'm the Lord of my own territory then he might think about sending one of his daughters over as a bride to me. Of course I'm sure there's things like timing and whatnot though. That would mean a sister of sister-in-law Shani-san.

It's fine even if it's Duke Berutasu who rules a vast territory Royal Territory in the Northeast. Or if we were to follow along the connection from Rodrick there's the possibility of Count Faruergaz as well. Duke Zamu who has a territory to the East of the Royal Territory and North of Count Faruergaz's territory is fine as well. If it's not the King and they're a moderate distance away then there's no other choice than for them to be rich. In reverse if their territory is in contact with mine or really close-by then even a place that's just a bit poor would be fine. Like Viscount Yoraizu or something. If things go well then the possibility remains where I could get them to listen to what I say as well.

"However, just listening to the words and you know, Al is quite the brute right."

Ralpa said that finding it amusing. Again with that?

"Why?"

Zenom replied to that.

"I mean you know, just thinking about the marriage partner in terms of money and such, somehow that's a bit."

"Do you intend to say that it's not the same for us? Al says he's going to raise a country. What is there more important than loss and gain? If you were going to get married then I think it would be best for the other party to be rich. Nothing good will come from getting married to some poor person."

"Eh~ what about feelings? What will you do about Miduchi?"

"Something like feelings are secondary. Also even Al is thinking about Miduchi right. Of course Miduchi as well. It's nothing for you to worry about. In the first place you're the only one to inherit the Firefreed family. There's a high probability that by the time you get married you'll be in a position where you can't get a divorce anymore. Think carefully about that. A husband who just lets the money flow back to their family isn't worth shit right."

When the details of what doesn't sound like a conversation between parent and child progressed that far, Bel interrupted them.

"I think what Ral says is fine in the case of a normal person that's not a noble. But, you can't afford to keep saying such childish things as that right?"

I wonder what it is. This separating of things is just like Bel if you put it that way though.

"I understand the feelings and what Ral wants to say though. I'm the same. But if you don't form a blood relationship through marriage then the collateral for assistance ends up having an enormous amount of interest I'm sure."

Gwine commented on it.

"That's right. Even if you have a blood relationship through marriage it's not like they'll provide support without interest or compensation. For example, my family was still arguing with Marquis Rodairu over a loan problem from far in the past up until just recently. It seems that we gave a loan of over 10,000,000,000 Z so they could start a mining operation at a mine but they just wouldn't return it. In the end we resolved it through handing over a portion of the rights to the mines and cession of some of their territory though."

Rodrick nodded with his arms crossed while saying that. Ah, I've heard about that before. The one who adjusted the estimation of the territory and the mining rights was the King right? It seems it was considerably difficult to make adjustments because the value of Z{Zeni} was different back then.

"Of course this is an example of it failing. There's also a lot of cases where it succeeded. For example Viscount Bison or Count Suroiaru, they were grateful that the financing circulated around well for them and we ended up profiting as well. We have blood relations with all of them. If there's no blood relation then after all the interest ends up a bit high. But, Al-san. In reverse I think that might be better even if you have to pay a bit more interest. If you just properly pay back the amount you've borrowed then there's everything after that is unrelated after all."

Right. That's the ideal though you know. If we were going to accept support then I'm sure it would be a considerable amount and how high the interest gets wouldn't be something you could make light of. If you can get a reduction of 10% or 20% in interest from just taking on one bride or an adopted child then you could say that's a cheap price to pay as well. I'm sure that even just the interest moves in the hundreds of millions.

Incidentally, previously I discussed with Rodrick what would happen if I discussed financing with his family. However, Rodrick said, "I can't suggest that unless Al-san is at a point where he absolutely needs a lot of money all at once and has no other options. Since it seems that our ancestor is the one who invited compound interest." and also said, "We're rich but we don't have a very good reputation." with a complicated face.

Well I can't ignore the possibility that we would run out of money for a period of time but we're always discussing industries which could make some reasonable profits with everyone so as a matter of fact I'm not all that worried about money.

Rather than that the part that's been bothering me is the portion, "If you marry me then in the future when you're granted a territory it will be an advantage." Of course, I think there's a high possibility of it being lip service and the chances of it being something other than that are minuscule though.

It might be possible that Yorire is a super favorite illegitimate child of the King right?

It requires investigating.

Though I'm sure I'll find out right away.

Chapter 237: With This Blow

Year 7446, Month 6, Day 30

First off is investigation. The range of this {Anti-Skill Area} and whether it be magic or Unique Abilities the conditions for it's activation and effects. The result of that, we were able to identify the below points.

1. It has a range of around 500 meters from the center of this room (Probably. We just wandered around about 100 meters in the surroundings).
2. Only when you're inside of it do your Unique Abilities including Skills not activate(cannot).
3. It works shooting spells inside from outside.
4. Spells with an effect duration are okay until the time runs out as well(Tested with Light).
5. However, {Summon.Insect} and the various missiles or other spells that require maintaining concentration were no good.
6. It seems the effects of {Magic.Items} work fine(Bel's {Bark Skin} was effective and Zenom's axe returned as well. Of course we tried throwing it all three ways from inside to inside, inside to outside, and outside to inside).
7. {Status Open} was possible but it was painted out with ■■■■■ characters.

Now then, next is?

Obviously, it's reconnaissance.

Since it's said that there's a possibility of some kind of monster being there, if possible I want to avoid reconnaissance with force.

And, in that case it will be scouting reconnaissance. It's crucial that we can scout things and observe the enemy without being detected.

Going from how she carries her body Miduchi is ideal. However, we don't know what kind of enemy will be there. The job of a scout is to make it back alive to the main group with the information. Even if they take independent action if they can't make it back alive it's no good. Here is the all powerful my turn since I have over 200 HP.

"Wai..Wait, why are you suddenly getting naked!"

Since I suddenly started taking my armor off starting with Ralpa, everyone was flustered.

Is it because I'm amazing when naked? Hn?

I guess not.

"Shut up~ idiot. Listen quietly."

I yelled at Ralpa and said while taking off my protectors.

"I'm going to scout things out. Depending on the case I might come back pulling monsters. I want everyone to setup a battle formation around 40~50 meters from that boundary and wait."

"Master, if it's scouting then please order myself or Maruso."

Zulu proposed but that's rejected.

"That's no good. It will take a lot of time to take off and put on Zulu's {Banded-mail} and putting it frankly Angela might die in a single hit. There would be no meaning in scouting like that. I'm going."

In no time at all I was down to just my under armor and boots.

If it was other armor then I'm sure it wouldn't have been this easy.

"Thinking about overall abilities then I'm the best choice. Also, it's not decided that there's going to be a monster. In the first place, the one who can run the fastest here is me. Momentarily then Zulu might be faster but depending on the case you could end up having to run several hundred meters. There's also the chance that it would turn into combat after that. You're no good."

I took off my boots and socks as well. I put my socks into my boots and handed them to Miduchi. Ah, after all they stink? But, don't make such an unpleasant face.

I took off my under armor and was left in just my underwear. After handing my under armor to Miduchi I said, "Leave it around there" while pointing at an appropriate rock.

I turned around to everyone and gave instructions for everyone hide in different positions. Since there's rocks laying around all over the place, there's no lack in places to hide.

"Remain hidden until I return. In the worst case if I come back pulling a monster don't carelessly jump out. If you come out further than that boundary you can't use magic after all. Well, if it comes to that then I'll say something in a loud voice so I'm depending on you..Then, I'm off~"

There's no instructions in the case I don't come back. Anything that comes after that I don't care..Not really though, I have no intention of dying at all.

I put my bayonet over my shoulder and took several rocks in my hand. I used up 9x the MP to cast the spell {Light} on each of them. With this they'll give off light for 15 minutes. I handed them to Toris.

Finally I consumed 100x the MP to extend the effect duration by 10x and used the spell {Invisibility} on myself. It ate up close to 2,400 MP but this is a necessary expense. My body suddenly turned transparent and then invisible. In mid-air there's just the bayonet over my shoulder, also, my underwear floating there. Other than Miduchi who knew about it, seeing everyone's surprised faces gave me just a bit of satisfaction. Ah, I haven't used it for peeking.

"I intend to return within 500 seconds. See ya~"

I said that while taking off my boxer-like underwear and after putting them on top of my under armor that Miduchi was holding, I took one of the rocks back out of Toris's hand.

I run off.

I can't worry about the thing dangling between my legs.

I ran about 200 meters as quietly as I could run.

I placed two of the rocks on the ground and stabbed my bayonet into the ground between them standing it upright.

After running for another short while I placed the last rock on the ground.

There's no change in the surroundings at all. It's just the same wasteland like ground with rocks all over the place.

I advance forward while trying not to make as much sound as possible. I've already used up around 90 seconds. Another 210 seconds remaining. If I think about the time it takes to get back then I guess about 3 minutes.

I continue advancing forward while hiding behind the rocks.

The same as usual I barely have 50 meters or so of sight.

After continuing for about 100 meters, I looked back once and in the distance, about 100 meters back there's an area with some light. A bit beyond that I can see a bit more light as well. It should be both of the areas I left the rocks. It's vague whether that light would be noticed. It's pitch black and while there's only around 40~50 meters of vision, the ground being stepped on gives off light. This interferes and makes it difficult to notice light in the distance.

Hn?

The distance between the rocks laying around is increasing.

Huh?

After advancing further the rocks completely disappeared.

Having nothing to hide behind, causes a bit of anxiety.

Though I'm invisible, I'm completely naked on top of unarmed.

Thanks to that it's somehow cold.

I guess it's good that I won't break a sweat?

I can't see so I can't tell but I'm sure it's shrunken.

Well, putting that aside let's quickly finish the job up.

Since I came to for reconnaissance I need to obtain some kind of information.

If there's no monsters then it's not problem that there aren't any.

I walk with bare feet making sure not to give off any sound.

It would probably be best not to run anymore.

I slowly walk ahead.

This, is it a wall?

I'm getting a bad feeling.

A wall appeared in front of me. No, a pillar?

It's thinner than the pillow I saw on the 14th floor in the past.

Additionally, somehow it seems a bit rectangular.

Each side seems to be about 50 meters or so, I guess?

Looking from the direction I was approaching from there's an entrance on the left.

And then, there's a monster standing in front of that like a statue.

That is a monster right?

Yeah, it's a monster.

It's looking over here.

The distance between us is about 50 meters.

Normally it's a distance which can barely be seen from.

Normally that is.

Right, normally.

If you're asking why I'm repeating it and it's because the moment I entered the sight of the monster a light suddenly appeared from the ceiling shining down on us.

It feels almost like it went from midnight to midday during a high speed film.

Simultaneously I heard a loud banging sound like the atmosphere was being torn from a considerable distance.

Obviously I had stopped moving and put my hands over my eyes because of the brightness.

However, it's a bit sad, I guess because I was invisible even if I put my hands over my face the light that comes through just got even brighter and it didn't block it out at all.

It felt tremendously bright at first but it seems it was at most the same level as the 7th floor and my eyes adjusted to it right away.

I started observing the monster once again.

Of course I still can't use Identify as usual.

It feels like the monster can somehow feel my presence and it's looking restlessly over in this direction.

Though it doesn't seem it has completely discovered me yet.

However, the current situation is bad. I've already confirmed the monster, I guess I'll return?

I'll return and join up with everyone, then I thought it would be best to attack it again with everyone.

But, I quickly noticed something important.

I'm surrounded.

Not by monsters.

I think it's probably around several hundred meters from the pillar but there's a 20 meter or so wall made of {Lightning Bolt}-like lightning connecting the floor and ceiling.

So the sound from just now was this?

No matter what I do if I don't have a weapon then.

If it's around there then I should be able to pick up my bayonet.

I was relieved from the bottom of my heart.

At the same time I was glad I didn't send Miduchi to do reconnaissance.

Though I feel that if it's Miduchi with that sword even completely naked she might be able to manage.

I quietly turned around while making sure not to make any sound from my footsteps and returned the direction I came.

After returning a couple tens of meters, when I hid behind a rock,

I quietly picked up a rock from the ground.

There's some distance and I should be hidden so as expected I don't think it can tell.

Eh? I won't throw it right now.

I was just preparing a rock to throw in the worst case.

I'll quietly return without being noticed.

...

.....

.....

Huh? Wasn't my bayonet around he..There it is.

Thank goodness.

That I would feel just having a weapon is this reassuring.

They must have felt something was wrong.

I could see everyone about 100 meters ahead on the other side of the {Lightning Bolt} wall like cage.

After looking closely rather than a wall it's more like a cage of {Lightning Bolts} and in the gaps between that there's a transparent purple colored wall.

This, looks like an Anti-Magic Field.

..Seriously?

I wonder if they can at least pass my underwear through this gap?

I'm sure it's impossible.

The gaps, are narrow.

Probably only an arrow or so would pass through. Even whether that would pass through the space in this electricity is up for question.

Zenom's axe is probably no good either.

I have the feeling that metal-based items wouldn't be any good against this electricity.

There's no basis for it though.

If it's a magic weapon then it might be fine but it would suck if it breaks.

What about the rubber protectors?

Would it work?

However, it seems they left behind my rubber protectors when they came over.

What a useless dark elf.

I think there's not much meaning to it but I lowered my posture and returned back again from a different direction.

The effect duration of the spell {Invisibility} will probably end pretty soon.

It would be best to get in one blow as a surprise attack before it ends.

If I can decide the match with that then it's fine if I slowly think about things after.

Faster.

Faster.

I returned back to the side of the pillar just now.

The monster is still looking around the area restlessly.

It seems it's not moving from protecting the entrance to the pillar.

I wonder how many more seconds the {Invisibility} will last?

It's a waste of time just thinking.

I threw the rock I still had in my hand. In order to avert the attention of the monster.

In that chance I charged at it with my bayonet.

Let's go.

The monster is one even I knew about.

It's a giant Minotaur.

It's holding a double-edged {Battle axe} in it's hands.

It's upper body is naked and it has a loincloth made of some kind of beast's leather, and is barefoot.

The color of it's skin is deep brown and it's got thick body hair.

It's chest hair is extremely thick and going down it's stomach it's even connected inside of it's loincloth.

Happy trail.

I endured letting out a war cry while charging at it and just ran as fast as I could.

Of course I'm not mortified at all or anything.

Author's Note:

"Invisibility" {Illusion}.{Phantasm}

(Earth magic Lv.6, Water magic Lv.4, Fire magic Lv.6, Wind magic Lv.7, Void magic Lv.7, Consumed MP 30)

Turn a single living creature that's being touched invisible for 50 seconds. It's possible to use it on yourself as well. Unable to use it on non-living objects. The target can still see the same as normal and it's possible for them to take actions. It's also possible to talk and eat something. In the case of eating if the mouth is closed then the food will no longer be seen. However, if the moment the target attempts to use a spell during the duration of the effect the effect will be released. Also, if they take any sort of action towards attacking that moment the effect will be cut off as well. Such actions are swinging a weapon, pulling bow strings, the immediate action before attacking and approaching the target from behind while holding the handle of a sword is fine (obviously unless the sword is a magic item just it will be visible).

Chapter 238: Full Monty

Year 7446, Month 6, Day 30

With my right hand still on the grip, trying not to make as much sound as possible, even then maintaining a reasonable speed I was sneaking up to the Minotaur. First off I should try to get into a position where it wouldn't be able to see me and I'm an advantage but there's already nowhere left to hide in this plaza that's as bright as day.

In terms of positions there's the dirt walls of the 50 meter or so pillar and at the entrance to what is most likely the center teleport crystal, then what is probably a Minotaur monster should have it's back to that entrance guarding it from about 3 meters away.

I looked for a chance when it was looking around holding it's battle axe and faced the other direction to throw the rock as far away from the entrance as possible. Hearing something hit the ground a bit of distance away the mino quickly turned back to the front and took a few steps that direction.

As expected it was impossible to get it's back completely facing over here but I can sneak up from it's left back side.

It's stature is easily a head above 2 meters and it's physique resembles the Hollywood action star from years back, Arnold.Schwarzenegger, with it's bulging and brawny muscles that show off it's strength. If it's head was the same as Schwarzenegger like this, then it would be a double of his successful work, King of Barbarians.

Still, even I can boast a reasonable body right now. Though in terms of height I'm barely at 180 cm.

However, normally I think it's intended to be surrounded with an entire party and beaten but unfortunately right now I've been split up from my party so I have to do something about this alone.

My spell {Invisibility} already shouldn't last that much longer.

Right now about the only advantage I have is that up until just before I attack my body can't be seen. In order to make the best use of that I'd like to ambush it from behind.

I hurry as fast as I can using stealthy footsteps.

If possible I'd like to get directly behind it and deal one stab through it's heart(since it's a humanoid I'm assuming it's around the left chest but goblins and hobgoblins have hearts in the right side of their chest you know).

Even if that's not where it's heart is I should be able to seriously injure it.

If getting directly behind it is impossible then it's fine as long as the first attack hits a blood vessel.

Especially one that's as thick as possible. It'd be ideal if I could slit it's neck, groin, or sides but that's a bit unreasonable.

Another 10 meters.

The mino is still observing the area where the rock fell.

That's good.

Just like that don't move.

I'll stab you in the left flank and gouge it out.

If I have good luck it'll be the kidney.

Another 5 meters.

The mino that was holding it's battle axe on guard with both hands, let go with it's left hand and stood straight up.

So it intends to return to it's original position?
This is bad.
If you're going to turn around and return then face the direction with your back to me!
But there's another 3 meters.
I line up the bayonet on my waist and enter the stance for a thrust before taking the last step forward.
With a snap my body returned to normal from the invisibility.
My hand that was holding the bayonet and feet that I couldn't see until now entered my sight.
Ei! To hell with it!
Eat this!!
Unfortunately the mino seems to be turning this direction to return to it's original position.
It ended up taking the shape of me charging into it from the front.
However, the blade of my bayonet is already right in front of the mino's stomach.
I stabbed the blade into the base, twisted and gouged it before pulling it out.
The mino's eyes went wide at the sudden and unexpected attack.
But, it's face quickly twisted in rage as it let out a battle cry like "Vumooo~!!!" and lifted the battle axe with one hand before compactly swinging it.
I jumped back with all of my power and avoided that attack.
If I was even a moment late the axe probably would have wedged into my body straight through my left arm.
My left arm would have been detached from the upper arm and my heart would have been destroyed I'm sure.

I can feel a cold sweat run down my back.
Alright, it's time to run.
I'll run and throw rocks at it when I see openings.
At the very least I got in a large first blow using the blade of the bayonet.
It should have suffered a serious injury.
It should be bleeding and suffering from some intense pain.
If I maintain the distance and continue hitting it with rocks then eventually it should run out of stamina and stop moving.
Something like close combat isn't too late even after that.
Rather~ I don't want to injure this body I received from my parents.
Though I say that, I can't show it my back either.
I'll do it with a feel like glaring at the Mino while slowly retreating.
The mino itself was giving off a feel like "Voge?" as if it was cursing at and trying to provoke me but on this occasion time is my ally.
It's hunched over with it's right hand on it's battle axe and the left hand is holding the wound to it's stomach.
If you don't intend to charge at me just like that then that's better for me.
"Ba~dee~!!!"
Ah, after all it won't go that easily huh?
The mino grabbed the battle axe with both of it's hands again and suddenly came charging at me.
Uo!!?
Th..That was dangerous...
It can still step in with that much speed?
It was way beyond my expectation, it was a rush at an extreme speed.

But, ouch.

In order to avoid the charge just now I dodged by rolling to the left but rolling on the ground naked isn't a good idea.

I'm covered in scrapes.

Father, mother, I'm sorry.

Even though just running on the ground barefoot isn't easy..my feet have completely gotten weak from wearing boots for a number of years and if I were to step on a sharp rock it would be pretty bad.

But, I saw it.

The place where I stabbed it on the side of it's navel with my bayonet did some serious damage.

Even while I'm doing this the bleeding is continuing and it's not just dying it's loincloth red but it's even started to drip down it's left leg.

It might just be my imagination but the mino's breathing seems to be getting rougher as well.

If it's not a mistake in my judgement that is.

I swing the bayonet while standing up and after breaking the stance of the mino that had turned back around here once more, I started taking my distance again.

The mino quickly fixed it's stance and seemed to be looking for another chance to charge at me again.

Scary~

Don't stare at me so much.

I'll get embarrassed.

Hmph, if I still have the leeway to think things like that then I can still remain calm.

That's only obvious.

The other day I just hit level 28 but thanks to the increase in age my Speed is at 54.

Though in reality I don't know what it's really around.

Even if I look at it as $1/2$ then that's 27 and $1/3$ rd is 18.

As long as I don't let my guard down there's no way I'd take the opponent's attacks that easily~

But, if I were to take even a single hit from that battle axe I'd probably be able to see death.

It seems the mino is going to charge at me again.

I remain cautious while slowly putting some distance between us and observe the mino.

It's eyes are bloodshot, it's breathing is rough, and it's color is white.

It even has some drool oozing down.

It's definitely getting weaker.

However, if I even take one hit then it's clear I'll be in a similar condition or even worse state.

I've put about 3 meters in distance between us but something like this, I'm sure the mino can cover it in an instant.

I lowered my stance a bit and lifted my foot, taking up a stance with my bayonet so I can deal with any movement.

The next time it charges at me I'll magnificently evade that and make use of that momentum to run away at my fastest speed.

The moment I thought that, it came charging at me!

Chi..it's holding it's battle axe with just it's right hand again and swinging it from the left side from my point of view.

I wanted to dodge to the right and run in the direction I originally came from though.

Judging from that compact form it'll probably thrust it afterwards.

It seems there's a spear tip at the end between the two blades of the axe after all.

Since it couldn't be helped I lowered my body and jumped evading to the left.

On my left side is the surface of the pillar and the original direction I came from is on the other side of it's body.

This is troublesome.

After the mino made a mortifying expression and then it started grinning like it thought of something.

Thinking about it again but it seems it doesn't just have emotions but it's capable of thinking somewhat as well.

That's precisely why it's getting impatient I'm sure.

You're afraid of the blood that's gushing out right?

You're afraid of the source of life that is gradually decreasing, right?

You want to quickly treat it right?

I get it~

And then it charged at me again.

Heee.

It's using the same form as just now so it must think that I can't escape to the left anymore.

Things won't go that easily for you.

I use my bayonet for defense for the first time.

Of course, there's no way it could take on that sort of battle axe.

I just knocked it up a bit and slightly shifted the vector.

It seems the mino intended to body slam me, pinning me to the wall if I had evaded to the left(the right looking from it's end).

If I had gone to the right then it probably thought it could thrust with the end of it's battle axe or it could attack me again.

In reality, just before I was afraid of that and ran to the left after all.

However, I jumped back largely to the life side again.

Beyond that is the wall of the pillar.

I can definitely do it!

"Nuoo~!!!"

I spontaneously let out a shout to get into the spirit.

I kicked off the wall with my left leg and brought my right leg down into the nape of it's neck that it was trying to close the gap to the wall with.

I thrust the gun stock of my bayonet into the wall to avoid crashing into it.

Just like that I landed behind the Mino and then dashed off at full speed.

The moment the wall of the pillar towering on my left side disappeared I shifted the direction I was going to hide in the shadow of the wall.

I was taking into consideration that it might throw it's axe at my back or something but it seems it wasn't that much of an idiot.

Well, it's stance should have largely crumbled when I used it as a stepladder so even if it were to try throwing it's axe it would have been after I hid in the shadow of the pillar.

Calling it an idiot was rude.

While still hiding in the shadow of the pillar I jumped behind the rock closest to where I was standing.

The presence of the mino running after me still hasn't stopped.

It probably saw me as I hid behind this rock.

I quickly rolled along the ground and after grabbing a rock the same of a child's fist and I threw it at the mino that jumped out from the other side of the rock.

The distance is around 10 meters or so.
Even after it saw me about to throw a rock the mino didn't stop charging at me.
I threw it aimed straight at the center of it's chest.
Obviously it splendidly hit it.
Like it could evade a rock thrown by me at this distance.
It would be impossible for even me.
It raises it's voice with a "Vumooo~!!" in agony.
Really it's head would have been the best but the head can be shaken so it's possible to evade it.
After it gets even weaker.
I quickly jumped into the shadow of a different rock and picked up a rock before throwing it.
I can do this all day.
It's a game of tag for any number of hours until the mino's spirit breaks.
Just like that I think close to 10 minutes or so passed?
I was able to lead the mino to around the area everyone else was.
"Al!!"
"Al-san!!"
"Master!!"
Seeing the mino and I racing each other everyone raises their voices in delight over the fact that I was safe and also worried about the Minotaur chasing me.
On the ground of this side, there's burnt rocks and arrows that seem like charcoal on the side of the {Lightning Bolt} cage.
Shit, so backup is hopeless huh?
"Nahhahha! Look at that look!"
I heard a voice breaking out into laughter.
You bastard, I'll kill you after this.

I pick up a rock and throw it.

"Miduchi brought Toris and the others along as they started looking for a place to get inside! Using magic is no good the same as usual!!"

I heard Zenom's voice. Over there is Bel, Zulu, and just the idiot huh?

"Even the bow can't pass through!"

Bel shouts as well.

"Master!!"

Zulu came running over but stopped just a few meters before the {Lightning Bolt}.

I guess that means any closer than that is dangerous.

"I'm alright!!"

Aaa~ I thought of having Bel shoot it to death but I guess it's no good.

I guess I need to brace myself and start the game of tag again.

"Which direction is Miduchi and the others~"

If I can't hope for support from the outside then it's best go in the opposite direction.

Just from a glance it doesn't feel like there would be any gaps in the {Lightning Bolt} where you could get inside after all.

"That way!!"

I move to the opposite side from where Zulu was pointing and pull the mino while throwing rocks.

"Everyone wait over there!! I'll finish up soon!"

Though I say that, Mino, even though it's taken dozens of rocks hitting various parts of it's body injuring it, it's quite tough~

It seems it's movements have gotten quite dull but even then it's still properly moving.

It seems it will still take some time.
"Al! Stop throwing something like rocks at it and just finish it off all at once!"
Shut up~ idiot.
It's scary since I'm naked!!
I didn't intend on fighting it in the first place.
I intended to put my armor back on again after scouting things out.
I thought it would be fine to fight after that.
"Ralpha, you need to shut your mouth for a bit!"
"Aouch!!"
I can hear the voice of Zenom scolding Ralpha.
It seems he dropped his fist on her head.
Take that~ "I mean, if it's Al then he'll be fine right! There's no way he would lose against something like that!"
Mu, I'll pardon killing you.
I hear the voice of Ralpha talking back to Zenom from behind me as I run and when I see appropriate rocks I quickly pick those up and throw them while turning around.
I aim at it's forehead, it splendidly hits!
How's that!
"Buhi~hya! It's swinging! It went Pita~n!"
After all I'll kill her.
"Stop that already!!"
"Stop it."
She was told off by both Bel and Zulu as well.
Take that~
Another 10 minutes later, noticing it's movements finally starting to weaken, I start throwing even more rocks.
And then, it seems it finally started to feel it's limit, the mino stopped chasing after me.

It didn't just stop chasing me but turned around to the right and started trying to run away.
Like I'll let you escape~
Ora~!!
I magnificently hit in the back of the head with a rock.
"Gyu~!!"
It raises a pitiful voice but even then it's trying to get away from me.
Hmm.
Shall I try to aim at the back of it's knees with a slightly larger one?
The pitcher goes for a wide throw~~the 100th(random)~ and throws
it!
"Ttorayi!!"
The rock hit the back of it's right knee.
"Goo~doo~!!"
It's face is swollen all over and including it's limbs there's bruises and cuts all over it's body as the Mino let out a scream and finally fell to it's knees.
What the, don't you still seem to have quite a bit of vitality remaining?
It's still dangerous to get close.
Here.
Here~here.
You sure are solid.
Even then after hitting it with another couple dozen rocks I finally stabbed it in the head and neck with my bayonet.
This bastard, this bastard.
..Making me work so hard.
It wasn't cool at all and while unrefined a victory is a victory.

It's plenty to win in a cool way just when I have my equipment on.

When I noticed the cage of {Lightning Bolts} had disappeared and I could hear the voices of everyone looking for me.

The light coming from the ceiling was just the same.

"{Status Open}"

【Corpse (Minotaur)】

Oh my~ it seems I went too far before taking the magic stone.

Before I realized I was drenched in sweat as well.

It feels disgusting but I can't use magic right...

Wait!! I was only able to confirm just this one but there's no guarantee there aren't more!

I went on guard with my bayonet again and raised my voice.

"I'm over here!! Don't let your guard down!!"

I yelled as loud as I could with the voice coming from my stomach.

I need to go in the direction I can hear Miduchi's voice

first.

She'll at least bring along my underwear right?

Chapter 239: The Battle Has Ended

Year 7446, Month 6, Day 30

Even when completely naked I was acting cool as I warned everyone but the reply that came back was unexpected.

"He was over here! Madam, over here!"

I heard Angela's voice from behind me.

No~

I reflexively crouched down.

"I'm already!! Rather than that don't let your guard down!!"

Don't come over here.

While thinking that I cautiously scanned the surroundings. This area is a reasonable distance away from the pillar in the center and there's a considerable number of rocks around so it's difficult to see very far but even then since plenty of light is shining down you can see several tens of meters.

After remaining on guard for a short while checking the surroundings I couldn't feel the presence of any new monsters. When I turned just my head around Angela was a bit of distance away checking the surroundings.

"Angela, where's Miduchi?"

"Over here. Madam, master is calling for you."

"Is everything fine!?"

Urged on by Angela, Miduchi came running over.

"! Pe..Person..is it?"

"It's not a person, I think it's a Minotaur. It says it's a Calf-Person Race. Rather than, do you have my underwear?"

"Eh? You were able to check it's status?"

The head of the Mino's corpse at my feet has been completely messed up so from just a glance it's not as if it can't be seen as just a large person. Though the color of it's skin is brown, it's not that it can't be seen as a well tanned light brown.

However, after being told it I noticed. Come to think of it status, I was able to see it right. I tried using Identify while putting on the underwear Miduchi handed me. It's fine.

"It seems we can use our Unique Abilities...Magic as well."

Hearing that Miduchi shouted in a loud voice to everyone that we can use magic again. Since there was no contact for now that anyone encountered a new monster we hit the ceiling a bit of distance away with a {Fire Ball} and used that as a sign to gather everyone here.

After all no one had seen any monsters.

"Look, he didn't even suffer any major injuries."

"That's not the problem!"

Ralpa came along while being scolded by Zenom. Since I was so desperate I forgot about it. This bastard, she was laughing seeing me fight naked with no armor or anything else.

"Hey, Ralpa, you, just now laughed right?"

"Look, isn't Al-san angry! Apologize!"

"That's right, in the first place laughing seeing master fight, what in the world were you thinking!"

After I glared at Ralpa while saying some complaints and Bel and Zulu started hitting Ralpa in the back of the head along with Zenom. Zulu brought along my boots, under armor, and rubber protectors. I took those and started putting on my under armor while waiting to hear how Ralpa was planning to reply.

"I mean, it's because he was completely naked and that place was dangling all over..In the first place, that sort of Minotaur which is just big~ there's no way Al would lose right. Everyone worries too much."

Putting aside the second half, are you really saying that? You're saying that in front of everyone? Even Gwine is acting like she couldn't hear it while facing the other way. Toris and Bausotral have started looking at me with a strange expression.

"Hey!!"

"We were telling you to apologize right!"

Zenom and Bel poked the back of Ralpa's head again. Zulu who was lining up my protectors so they're easy to wear almost turned around as well. It seems a bit difficult for those who didn't actually see the fight to participate in the conversation.

"I'm sorry for laughing."

Ralpa gave in to the attacks from all sides and lowered her head while apologizing with a surprisingly honest feel. I'm putting my socks on. After putting my socks on, I started talking while putting my boots on my feet.

"In the first place you thought since I wouldn't be done in by this sort of thing there was no need to worry right? It was funny because I was completely naked so you couldn't help but laugh right?"

My voice came out with an unexpectedly gentle voice.

"Eh? Yeah, right. There's no way you could be done in by this sort of thing. Also, it's because everyone was so worried while waiting so.."

Ralpa said with her head still lowered.

I finished tying the laces on my boots before standing up and approached Ralpa while smiling.

"So you had faith in me I see."

Hearing me gently talk to her Ralpa raised her lowered head.

And then, seeing my face Ralpa's face stiffened up.

"Like hell I could accept that you idiot?! Let me hit you once as well!"

I dropped my fist on her head and then put on the rest of the parts of my protectors that Zulu was holding.

Everyone was watching as if it was only obvious.

"Putting that aside, Maruso, please go and get the magic stone."

Miduchi requested for Angela to gather the magic stone but somehow her voice is stiff. It feels like she's pushing herself not to touch on the topic Ralpa brought up. While Angela was cutting open the Mino's chest in order to get the magic stone, I equipped my protectors but soon after some cheers were raised. Bel and Miduchi were saying, "It's a {Magic Item}!". Everyone who didn't have anything to do in the surroundings gathered at the corpse of the Mino. I even heard Ralpa's voice. There's some enjoyable laughs as well.

"Oh~ come to think of it that Mino, it had a battle axe didn't it.

That, so it was a {Magical.Weapon}!

"Congratulations, master!"

Zulu seemed happy as well as he handed me each part of the protectors one after another. I could tell I was happy enough that my face was grinning as well. I struggled quite a bit when I first stabbed it with my bayonet but after that I just ran around while throwing rocks so it wasn't all that difficult at all. No, I really hit it with close to 100 rocks so you could say it was somewhat difficult though.

I tightened the string on my helmet while approaching and said,

"Here, that axe, show it to me".

Huh? The axe is still laying on the side of the Mino and no one is even glancing at it. Why?

"The {Magic Item} is this, it says it's the 【Loincloth.Of.Daring】!"

Miduchi made an amused smile as she turned around.

What in the world is that?

After approaching Angela already had her hand stuck into it's chest and was struggling to tear out the magic stone and Bel was looking away with a red face while Zenom, Toris, and Basutorial were happily laughing.

Ralph was grinning while moving her hand to flip up the underwear the Mino's corpse had on.

Gwine was saying "Stop that~" while still not looking away.

That leather loincloth was the {Magic Item}!?

I stop the idiot's unrefined behavior before she can put her hands on it while tearing off the loincloth from the Mino's waist.

Also, through the benefit of a magic-based defense, the user will have their sense of fear dulled and no longer fall into panic. Furthermore, there is no effect on HP.】

Hn?

St..Stinksss~!

It's certainly true that it's amazing but like we could use something like this!

It's soaked with the sweat from the Minotaur.

"{Status Open}..It stinks!"

I was holding it with the tips of my fingers but since I felt a bad odor I moved my face near it to confirm and quickly threw it away.

"Judging from the name it seems like a relative of the 【Bracer.Of.Might】I'm sure but this, is there anyone who wants to use it?"

Toris and Basutorial were both checking the status of the loincloth

I threw away but it seems they were wincing from the smell the same as me.

"If we properly wash it and let it dry in the sun a number of times then I think most of the smell will fade though..I was already lent this a while back after all. I'll hold back this time."

Zenom was saying admirably while putting his hand on the axe but you too, just don't want to put on something like a monster's underwear right?

"Come to think of it Toris, what about you?"

Zenom casually said.

"Eh?"

"No!!"

Toris raised his voice in surprise and at the same time Bel rejected it. Right~

Toris was looking unpleasantly at the loincloth as well.

"I feel it's a bit off from my interests?"

While somehow showing a bit of discretion for Bel, Toris said that.

It's completely unrelated to interests right. It's just simply unpleasant right. I'm the same though. Although, while the upper limit of Speed and Dexterity fall, since the proficiency level is most like how much of your ability values you can make use of, so I think overall it wouldn't actually lead to something like a decrease in abilities I think? Rather, I think as a result it would only lead to an increase in abilities. Other than that, there were some plain but effective things as well. However, the Mino was using it, simply put it's underwear. Basutorial is making a frown after smelling it and the women are just looking from a distance not even thinking of touching it.

"Zulu, do you want to use it? Of course, it's no good until we wash and clean it first though."

Just in case I tried asking Zulu. Up until now he's just been saying words of delight and congratulations and not really participated in the conversation, he didn't even try to touch the loincloth. If even he's against it then we'll quickly wash and sell it. Wouldn't it go for a considerable price? But as expected selling it right now is..Oh~ how about I try getting Rodrick to use it?

"No way..It's a {Magic Item}!? I've already been given splendid equipment to use after all.."

After all it seems he doesn't like it either. Even if it's a precious {Magic Item}...

"How about master using it? Up until now master has always loaned out the {Magic Items} to other people to use and isn't using any of them yourself right?"

Eh? He's telling me to use this? Is he saying it seriously?

I couldn't believe it hearing that Zulu who was totally loyal to me say something that borders on harassment, so I reflexively went into a daze with my mouth wide open.

"No, you, I don't want to.."

"However, it's a {Magic Item} you know!? Doesn't it sound amazing from the name we heard just now! Something like Daring, isn't it perfect for master!"

Huh? This guy, is he saying that seriously?

"That's right. It certainly stinks but isn't it fine to just wash it? Then.."

Zenom said strangely as well.

Ah, the concepts of hygiene are different between them and us reincarnated people. The fact that I couldn't completely become an Orth person was a complex of mine as well but it makes sense now they weren't even the slightest bit disappointed or depressed about it.

"In the first place, it's a waste for a slave like myself to use a {Magic Item}. This is something that master should use."

I timidly looked at Miduchi's face but she was looking pretty disgusted as well. Right.

I pushed Zulu on the back and said, "You use it. Become the number one daring man in the {Slaughterers}. I'm fine. It still hasn't even been a couple months since I got my new armor after all." and while pushing the effective but unpleasant thing on him.

"No way! It's something that's too great for me! I've never heard of something like letting a slave use a {Magic Item}!"

And he said something like that trying to show restraint. It can't be helped.

"What are you saying. Even though you're a slave you're a splendid part of our fighting power. Also, you're my head slave right? Something like a {Magic Item} you should boldly use it. In the first place think carefully about it. I'm sure this is too big for me. If it's you then wouldn't it be just a bit big? I'm sure fixing the size of a {Magic Item} is impossible right. If we carelessly try modifying it and break it then that would be a waste."

As expected hearing me say the same thing a number of times he wouldn't refuse it anymore. Zulu grabbed the smelly loincloth and was about to put it on while looking so moved he might shed tears at any moment. Seeing that in a hurry I said "Do it after washing it" and got him to give up on wearing it on the spot.

Zulu folded it up like it was the raiment of a heavenly nymph and put it into his rucksack.

After that, I took the magic stone Angela had pulled out and we all decided to investigate the room.

The magic stone was 【Magic Stone(Calf-Person Race)】 and the value with identify was easily over 500,000.

If we sell it then it's just 4,000,000 Z huh? Yeah, let's hold on to this without selling it. I think it would be best to sell it as a set together with the loincloth someday. There's no basis for it though.

After that, the battle axe the Mino used was in good condition as well and it was of a considerably high quality. I guess you could call it the so-called wazamono. Obviously we retrieved it as well. It should be fine to let Kevin or Karimu use it. Judging from the size having the Laios Karimu use it would probably match better. Though I say that it's not like it's a {Magical.Weapon} so it might be fine to sell as well. It's fine either way.

We spent a considerable amount of time searching around in hopes of finding the device that created the {Lightning Bolt} and Anti-Magic Field. I thought there might be a hole opened in the ground or ceiling but there wasn't a single like that like and we weren't able to find a single clue.

Just as expected the teleport crystal was enshrined in the room in the center of the pillar and the inside of it wasn't as bright as day but the same type of room as usual in the dungeon. We weren't able to find anything different from a normal teleport crystal room. For the time being we decided to take a break in a corner further in the room.

Chapter 240: Special?

Year 7446, Month 6, Day 30

"I guess that the Minotaur was the guard that protects the teleport crystal room for the 8th floor. It seems that normally it would have been best to charge in and defeat it with everyone but...After defeating the guard the cage disappeared and the effect of the Anti-Skill Area was released I guess?"

And Miduchi said, so I thought, I see now. Incidentally, right now we're in the teleport crystal room and excluding the fact that there's only one entrance it's no different from the other floors. From a glance it's a room of about 30 meters and in the center is the pedestal with the teleport crystal.

"But will that Minotaur? Was it? but there's no guarantee it won't revive and a different monster might revive as well right?"

Bel said nervously but Miduchi gently denied it.

"We were able to use magic and Special Skills after defeating the Minotaur and the places other than here are still bright. Also, no monsters will approach the area of about 100 meters around the teleport crystal right? Probably but I think that the Minotaur is a special monster and after all I think it's natural to think it was a mid boss. There's no basis for it but it probably won't revive I think?"

No one Could clearly object to Miduchi's opinion. However, in that case wouldn't that fellow from the 14th floor not revive either? I don't really get it. I never want to go back again to check.

"Even if it were to revive, the problem is whether or not it will enter into this teleport crystal room right."

Toris said. Certainly that's true.

"Right. If it were to come into this room then it would be difficult to make it into a base."

Basutoral said as well. I'm of the same opinion.

In the past, I saw a {Scavenger Crawler} revive right in front of me in a room on the 1st floor. That time if I remember correctly something like a white fog appeared after about 10 hours and started whirling, then after giving off a single small flash of light it appeared. It might not be bad to spend half a day or so here keeping an eye on things to confirm whether or not it revives.

Conveniently it's still before noon right now.

"It can't be helped. Shall we wait on standby here for almost the whole day and confirm whether it revives..Let's patrol around outside until lunch."

While taking a break in the teleport crystal room we decided on the plan for today.

.....

We patrolled around this circular room together with everyone but as expected of it having a diameter of 2 km, we were only able to look around at just a bit of it until lunch. We returned to the teleport crystal room once and had lunch, then started looking around the room again in the afternoon. The time changed to evening and even by 7 pm the room was still as bright as the 7th floor. We didn't encounter any monsters either.

"I guess we've seen most of it right...Gwine, how was it?"

"..I saw almost all of it. Another seven areas, there's spots I wasn't able to see though..from here it would take a bit of walking but what should we do?"

After spending a bit of time searching her brain Gwine replied.

"Hn~ I'll think while eating. Shall we return?"

Just in case but before the 10 hours passed since I defeated the Minotaur I wanted us to return to the teleport crystal room. It should have been just past 10 am when I defeated it. I want to return by 8 pm or so.

We returned to the teleport room and ate the bento that Giberuti made for us this morning as dinner. We decided to do the remaining exploration tomorrow morning before we take a look in the 9th floor. This morning, when we went to leave the teleport room on the 7th floor I told Giberuti, "I intend to clear past the 8th floor so depending on the case we might not return for 2 days or so but don't worry too much." but the bento we received from him at that time was only enough until tomorrow morning. We intended on pulling through with preserved food after that.

I said that because it would be a pain to come here again but if that Minotaur revives again then in regards to the supplies from here on out, I'll need to think even more seriously about them.

Everyone's worries were focused on that point. Also, if the Minotaur revives then whether or not that Anti-Skill Area revives is also a problem.

If the Anti-Skill Area doesn't revive as well then it's not much of a problem. Putting aside Unique Abilities, if we can use magic then as long as we don't let our guards down considerably then it's safe to say there's no problem. However, it could be thought that the Minotaur might use magic as well so there's a good and a bad to it.

Let alone, if a different type of monster were revive then letting it use some kind of Special Skill might be even more troublesome. Even when it comes to that {Gazer}, if it couldn't use Special Skills then it wouldn't be able to float or fire off beams as it rolls around on the ground, so all we'd have to do is surround and beat it to death that sort of easy win.

After eating our bentos and even when the time passed 8 pm there was no sign of a monster reviving and the outside was still bright. After all it seems it's just as Miduchi said and that Minotaur might be the type that doesn't revive.

I was just a bit relieved. No, we still can't let our guards down.

Ah, come to think of it since we couldn't use Abilities I guess that means my 【Gift of Natural Talent】 was no good either huh? It seems my experience points have increased but it's probably not three times more, I'm sure. I felt like it was just a bit of a waste but normally there's nothing like the amount of experience points gained increasing. Quite literally unless you have something like my 【Gift of Natural Talent】 or Miduchi's 【Party-ization】 then the chance of gaining increased experience points wouldn't happen so I guess it's hard to call it a waste or anything else.

This day after deciding on the order for keeping lookout we decided to rest as far from the entrance as possible. Among the lookout team I told them to always have at least one person looking around inside of the room. Normally I'd like to have it two person per team and have them patrol around outside of the pillar but in the worst case on the occasion the monster revives I want to observe the point on whether it will enter the room so this time I just had them keeping watch of the entrance. Also, even for those resting I have us still wearing our armor and our weapons in an easy to grab location, a stance of vigilance unseen recently.

Around 2 am I was woken up by Miduchi to switch out keeping lookout. Since I was just laying on a bed of dirt made with magic with my armor still on, honestly speaking I don't feel rested at all. This sort of thing can't even be considered a proper rest. It seems going too far in for long periods might be difficult. I wonder if around the 9th floor will be the limit?

Toris, Bel, Gwine, and Zulu were sitting in a circle a bit of distance from the entrance. It looks like no one was able to get much rest and are making rough faces not much different than myself. In order to wake from the sleep I created some hot water and made tea, then sipped it while making a sullen face with them.

I think it was a bit over the full 2 hours since we switched lookouts? The light shining in from the entrance rapidly faded.

In a hurry I called out to everyone and tried using Identify at the same time.

I can't use it!

"Gwine! Wake everyone up! Zulu and Toris watch the entrance! Bel prepare your bow!"

Ordered by me Zulu immediately took his sword and shield and fortified the entrance together with Toris on both sides. Gwine was yelling "Wake up!!" in a loud voice as she tried to shake them awake, Bel retreated back to around the teleport crystal and pulled out an arrow from her quiver.

"Magic..It's no good!"

"I can't either."

It seems Toris and Bel tried to use it right away. I went on guard with my bayonet as well while standing a bit away from the front passage leading to the entrance. The passage which has a height and width of about 2 meters and length of 10 meters to the room has already gotten quite dark. I noticed after approaching it but I could tell that whirlpool of fog that appears when monsters revive was there. The fog which appeared in an area centered about 4-5 meters from the entrance was slowly whirling.

Miduchi, Zenom, Ralpa, Basutoral, and Angela all ran over in full equipment after being woken up by Gwine.

"Miduchi. Unfortunately it seems your prediction was off. That fog is the sign of a monster reviving...And also we can't use skills or magic again."

I explained to Miduchi while also explaining to everyone else on guard and raised the level of caution.

"What should we do? Should we all charge at it the moment it revives? In that case while we still can now we should all go outside.."

Ralpa commented.

"Nn..That might not be bad either but I want to check the state of things. Until either it makes a move towards us or I say something no one move. Also Angela you keep an eye on things in the room. I can't imagine a monster appearing in this room but being careful just in case."

Previously, when we fell down to the 14th floor, it's regrettable that we returned right away. It would have been good if I paid a little bit more attention to what was outside of the rooms..and regretting it now is too late. That time, we had just escaped a huge crisis, riding on the momentum I made Miduchi my own, and we even talked to Lilus, so by the way I split ways with Miduchi and returned to being alone I didn't have enough leeway to think about things like that. That was just two years and a bit ago huh...

I lick my lips and try to relieve even just a bit of the tension.

Toris was licking his lips with his longer forked tongue as well.

It seems the whirl of fog is gradually increasing in force but it's still not very big. However, I feel like the time with the {Scavenger Crawler} it increased in force in a slightly shorter amount of time. That time if I remember correctly, after I defeated a different monster what revive was the {Scavenger Crawler}. I wonder what will happen this time?

Just like Miduchi said it's not like I don't feel like the room outside of here is different from a normal monster room.

If I think about how it appears this close to the teleport crystal right from the start then it's probably true that it's special.

Also, in the case that the Minotaur really does revive again it might be possible that we'll get hands on another {Magic.Item} as well.

If that's really the case then who would seriously explore something like the 9th floor? I'd just check it out and after obtaining the magic stone from an unusual monster it's good-bye.

Not yet huh...

There's tension in everyone's faces.

Still not yet, not yet huh?

Gulp. Someone swallowed their saliva.

I guess it's about time?

Now!

Along with a short flash of light the fog dispersed. And then, almost like the {Terminator} that time slipped from the future, I can see a back rising up from the ground. The deep brown-bronze skin of what you could call it a big man. What's different from the {Terminator} is only the point that it's wearing a crude loincloth.

Seeing that Zulu and Toris both flinched and reacted but I guess they quickly remembered my order and started carefully observing things.

On both of my sides I could tell Miduchi and Ralpa stiffened up recognizing the monster.

Zenom fixed his grip on his magic axe.

Just like that several tens of seconds passed.

The man with a crude loincloth on slowly stood up with his back to us. I can't see anything but the back of it's head but it's got shaggy hair and I can confirm two cow horns growing from above it's head. In it's right hand it's holding a one-handed axe with a long handle, a {bardiche} huh?

It's a Minotaur.

After the Minotaur stood up it stopped moving with it's back still facing us almost like a statue.

I guess he couldn't endure the tension, I could feel the presence of Basutoral shifting positions behind me.

"Don't move yet."

I said it in a whisper.

I guess around a few minutes passed?

No one moved or talked and there was no change in the Minotaur that could be seen.

Ah, come to think of it there's no sign of the {Lightning Bolt} cage appearing either.

I quietly turned around to Bel and gave her a sign with my eyes.

Following that I moved my left hand around to the front pointing to my right shoulder.

And then pointed at the Minotaur.

After nodding Bel fixed an arrow on her bow, pulled back the strings, and fired it.

The fired arrow splendidly stabbed into the collar bone of the Minotaur's right shoulder a bit closer to the spine.

"Gwidy!!"

The Minotaur let out a dull scream as it jumped in surprise and turned around here.

However, it quickly started restlessly looking around the area.

It still has it's posture lowered and axe at the ready.

It feels almost like it can't see into the passage that continues into the teleport crystal room.

Just like that we waited for a short while and after watching the Minotaur struggle to pull the arrow out, I gave the sign to Bel again.

"Vioo~!!"

Once again the Minotaur screamed in agony from the pain and quickly turned around over here with it's axe ready.

There was a strange light in it's eyes as it slowly took it's left hand from it's axe and stretched it out towards the entrance.

"Hick! Ah.."

It seems Gwine hiccuped from the tension but the only ones who reacted to that was just us.

The Minotaur was just trying to stroke the space around the entrance and didn't show any sort of reaction.

Hmm.

I guess it can't see over here from there?

"Everyone, don't move..WA!!"

I shouted in a slightly loud voice to check but it didn't react at all.

"..It seems like it can't hear us."

Toris turned around towards me and said.

"Also, it seems like it can't tell the entrance right."

Miduchi narrowed her eyes and observed the Minotaur while saying.

"That thing, is it an idiot?"

You are too. Though I say that, it's certainly true that the Minotaur that looks like it's just touching an invisible wall investigating doesn't look like anything but an idiot.

"What should we do? Shall we all charge in at once?"

Basutorial said in a tense voice.

"Somehow, I feel like I could just shoot it to death like this.

Should I crush it's eyes?"

It's eyes aren't as huge as the {Ice Monster}? Can you do it?

Bel.

"Wait just a moment. Let's test things out a bit more. Zulu, stick your leg just one step out from the passage."

Miduchi said that to Zulu and he took one step out from the passage.

There's no change in the Minotaur.

It should be fine already.

"Return."

I called Zulu back in.

"Somehow it seems it can't come inside. Also, it seems it's fine even taking one step or so out from the passage. It seems like our voices aren't reaching it either.."

Toris said after keeping an eye on things.

"Then, it seems there's merit in making this place into a base."

"That's true.."

I replied to Gwine while thinking for a bit. Most likely it's probably not all that difficult to defeat that Minotaur. If Bel just keeps shooting it with arrows I'm sure it'll die eventually and if that's a waste of arrows then we could just have her crush it's eyes then after standing Zulu and Toris at the front have Gwine and Basutorial stab it with their spears all at once just that would probably put it on the verge of death.

"Bel, crush it's eyes. After that Zulu and Toris make a wall with your shields while charging it. Gwine and Basutorial use your spears to stab it to death. However don't go too far. I want to see it's status after all."

"I'll start from it's right eye."

The moment I finished saying it Bel immediately fired off an arrow.

Along with a dull thud the arrow stabbed into the Minotaur's right eye.

"Gimo~o~~!!!"

The Minotaur let out a scream in surprise and unable to endure the pain dropped it's axe holding both of it's hands to it's face.

In that moment Zulu and Toris lined up with their shields and ran off, after that Gwine and Basutorial followed behind them with their spears ready.

Soon after we could hear the muttering voice of the Minotaur and the scene of Toris and Zulu cutting down the Minotaur as it crouched over entered our sight.

And just as I thought that the two of them went on guard with their shields as they put distance between it.

Gwine and Basutorial aren't attacking anymore either.

Did it die?

【Identify】...I guess it's still no good.

I go on guard with my bayonet while approaching but I'm sure it's already on the verge of death.

Ah, I need to try this as well.

I carefully passed by the side of the Minotaur on it's last breath and went outside of the pillar.

And then, I heard the loud sound of the air being torn in the distance again.

The {Lightning Bolt} cage was created surrounding the pillar at a radius of around 200-300 meters.

I see now.

I quietly crouched down to the side of the Minotaur and checked it's status.

Chapter 241: Unexplored Territory 1

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 1

I look down at the corpse of the Minotaur with my arms crossed while thinking. The moment I walked outside at the same time as the cage of {Lightning Bolt}s revived the light appeared from the ceiling again. Obviously the moment the Minotaur was believed to have died with the same timing the cage of {Lightning Bolts} disappeared as well. Certainly this could be called a {Sentinel}.

Oh~ guess I should have them gather the magic stone?

"Zulu, take out the magic stone."

After ordering Zulu to gather the magic stone, I immersed myself in thinking even more.

It's necessary to properly investigate things in regarding to the revival of the Minotaur. I'm thinking of leaving the dungeon once, then coming back after making proper preparations to do that including making this room on the 8th floor into a base.

If we can't eat proper meals and get some good rest then it can't be called a base and if we're going to call it a base then we need an environment where we can relax and get some proper rest. Should I station someone here in shifts? No, no matter what the case that is..I guess it can be done. But, even if I were to pull some random members out from the {Butchers} even they're still adventurers. There's no guarantee they wouldn't get charmed and try to explore the 8th or 9th floors outside of this teleport room.

Even on the 8th floor there's still a considerable number of areas that you could say we haven't explored yet. I'm sure there will definitely be members who want to go and explore. Even if a dispatch leader from the {Slaughterers} holds them back, they should end up accumulating dissatisfaction. However, hm..since they'd be able to kill the Minotaur everyday if I think about the income from magic stones it should be profitable so I guess it's fine?

If we stay here for 5 days then you can obtain over 5 magic stones worth 4,000,000 Z each, depending on how things go it's possible you could even get 6 or 7. Even assessing it on the low end that's income of 20,000,000 Z. 2,000,000 Z per person. No, since I already said my combat slaves don't need to be counted I guess it's even more? If they stay here three times a month then they could earn 6,000,000 Z a month.

Whether or not there's someone who would even give up on that situation just to do something like dangerous exploration...

There isn't right~ There's no way there would be.

In that case I guess I should leave it to them huh? Even if I think about the expenses it should be a plus for me.

If the moment it appears, they all run out and beat it to death while it's still crouching over then I'm sure even a newbie or third-rate adventurer could kill it. Probably. In that case I guess even my four combat slaves would be plenty? Or I could buy a couple more for shift members...That might be good as well.

"Master, here's the magic stone..But.."

Hn? The magic stone Zulu handed me had a considerably bad color.

And it's a bit light. Using Identify to check and the value was 30,000. This is way beyond just 1/10th the value!?

Seeing my face surprised looking at the magic stone, Zulu gravely nodded and said, "It seems to be low in value.." with a very disappointed tone of voice. Uwa~ this, there's no way to make much. Ah, No, there's still the {bardiche}. Since it doesn't look to be used if we return with it then it should be possible to sell it for around 500,000 or so. It's huge that we can sell the weapons. Since it pretty much hasn't been used at all it could become a huge source of income. It's to the point where it's the first time I've seen a weapon in this good of a condition in the dungeon. This time we obtained two of those. Making 1,000,000 from just this is big.

I guess I'll try asking for opinions a bit?

"If this Minotaur were to revive again, what would happen if we fight head on from outside?"

"Putting aside the case of one on one like Al the first time, if we all do it together then wouldn't it be fine?"

Ralpa who had come outside before I noticed said. Yeah. I think that's the case as well but you know.

"If we were to do it with everyone here, Bel and Miduchi use the bow and {Blast.Back}..It might be good to include Zenom as well...And then there's Toris and Zulu as the tanks {Shield.Holder}..Yeah. There's probably no problem I'm sure."

Alright, shall we return once? It's necessary to gather materials and whatnot for making it into a proper base. However, before that,

"Then everyone, leave behind any unnecessary belongings in the room. We're going to look into the 9th floor. After looking in just a bit, we'll return once. After that I think we'll spend the time being carrying stuff in to make this into a base though.

Alright?"

And after saying that confirmed that everyone nodded. Things like the battle axes of the Minotaur that aren't necessary for checking the state of the 9th floor we put together in a corner of the teleport room. Of course, I ordered Angela and Zulu to throw the corpses of the Minotaur away in the distance. They're in the way just sitting in front of the entrance after all.

.....

Thanks to the unexpected Minotaur we ended up not being able to rush into the 9th floor during June but it's just a short couple of hours, if we had wanted to we could have stepped foot into the 9th floor yesterday after that, so I think it's plenty to consider this fine.

"Alright, let's go. Bonukorin"

We teleported into the end of a passage and immediately scattered while going on guard for attacks from monsters. After I confirmed that there were no monsters nearby I started using Identify vision to look down the passage but at around 70-80 meters it seems to loosely bend to the right so I wasn't able to see any further than that. However, it's a relief that there weren't any monsters in the range I could see. I lower my weapon and after everyone who scattered gathers back near the teleport crystal we relaxed a bit from preparing for an ambush.

Now then, in regards to the 9th floor, but we had already predicted it. That most likely it wouldn't be all that different from the 8th floor. However, in terms of just the appearance it looks so similar that we really can't determine whether it's the 8th floor or the 9th floor.

"Just from looking it feels the same as the 8th floor right."

"..I guess so. Ah, I wonder if the monsters are the same?"

"If they're the same then we already know, so it would be quite easy. By the way master, congratulations on arriving at an unexplored floor."

"Master, congratulations. Let's say that master is the number one hero in the Kingdom!"

"Al-san, it's fine as #1 right?"

"Yeah, Bel, go with that."

"..It seems that the field of vision isn't any different so there's no problem with remembering the terrain."

"In other words I wonder if that means there's another Minotaur as the guard?"

"Yeah, I see. Saji, that's a good warning. Father what do you think?"

"There is, it would be best to think that's the case. Also we still don't know anything about the monsters on this floor. There's no guarantee that the monsters are the same as the 8th floor. Don't let your guard down until we confirm the status of a corpse."

"..!! Everyone, please be careful! I can smell something!"

Everyone went quiet hearing Angela's warning. Bel's ears stood on end and started twitching as she closed her eyes trying to concentrate on even the smallest sound.

Including myself we all continued looking down the passage while trying not to interfere with that, fixing our grips on our weapons.

"..What? Insect? No..I can't really tell but..Something is approaching us!"

After Bel said that Toris picked up a rock at his feet and after using the spell {Light} on it, threw it down the passage. The rock flew about 30 meters before rolling on the ground. We can vaguely tell that the passage curves further down.

"We'll attack it head on. Miduchi, Bel, shoot arrows the moment you can see the monster. We'll check it out for a bit and if it seems dangerous we'll retreat once and come back again. If there's a large number of enemies then Toris, Ralpa, Gwine, and Basutorial all look for the timing to use magic and attack keeping them in check. Since it's possible we might retreat, Zenom don't throw your axe."

And while I was saying that the monster appeared further down the passage.

"Cr..Crab?"

Ralpa let out a carefree voice but everyone quickly held their breath. Several giant crabs which just the width of their shells is over 2 meters appeared and they are coming our direction while walking to the side. Judging from just the shape of their shells the crabs look to be watarigani. However, they don't have webbed 9th and 10th legs and including their 1st and 2nd legs having pincers attached to them their legs are almost like the isogani that are on banks.

Miduchi and Bel start shooting arrows at the crabs. The arrows are stabbing into the joints between their legs and bodies but it's not doing much damage. Even in regards to magic depending on the angle it hits the shell some of it seems to be getting deflected. The only effective magic that hit it was the {Flame Bolt Missile} I was using.

There's no helping it if it can't be controlled~

"The bow and arrow are no good. Limit the magic to {Fire Wall} or {Flame Thrower}. Miduchi you aim for the stomach or eyes using missile together with me!"

And I while I was saying that they already approached quite a bit.

They move at a considerable speed.

It seems Bel and Ralpa used {Fire Wall} but at Ralpa's skill level she can only make a small wall. Gwine is using {Flame Thrower} to cover for her there. The Red Battle Crabs that make it through the gaps of those walls were shot through by Miduchi and my {Stone Arbalest Missile}. If possible I'd like to aim for the base joints of their legs and do damage while also breaking them. Toris and Zulu will stop the advance of the weakened crabs while Angela acts as a decoy moving around, then while they're caught up with that Zenom and Basutorial will damage them, that sort of strategy.

Zenom closed in on them and used his magic axe to smash open the shells while breaking their legs. Of course the crabs were using their huge pincers to attack but since Angela is acting as a decoy they aren't approaching a close enough distance to get caught in the pincers. They're just luring them. Zenom made skilled use of controlling his axe, knocking down all of the attacks, and accurately smashing the shells splitting them. Basutoral is making good use of his long reach as she stabs the stomachs of them like crazy.

If we calm down and it then they're nothing at all. If we use attack spells normally then if it's just this number we can crush them from head on.

In the end there was a total of 8 Red Battle Crabs.

"This, I wonder if it can be eaten?"

And, the gluttonous one lifted up one of the huge claws hanging from her axe while saying but her adoptive father said, "If you think that you should try it first. I don't really care for crab or shrimp."

The appetizing scent of shellfish types being cooked spread around the surroundings and even if I tried using Identify to check it, it just said 【Red Battle Crab's First Leg】, since it doesn't seem like there's any poison in abandon I took it along with the axe and tried cracking open the shell of the claw.

Since it's raw meat it feels like there's a bit of thickness to it.

I need to properly pass it over fire.

I carefully approached the flame of {Flame Thrower} to it and after the half-transparent meat turned white I erased the flame and used a knife to cut off some of the white portion before putting it in my mouth.

The reincarnated people around me were watching over me closely.

In the worst case if I end up hurting my stomach it should be fine if I just use the spell {Neutralize.Poison}. Ah, I guess I should use it on it first. After using the spell {Neutralize.Poison} on the crab meat in my hand just in case I carried it to my mouth once again.

Ah, it works. This.

After just one bite I thought. I want some Kanisu.

"Want some?"

I said that and took another bite. All of the reincarnated people surrounding me nodded. It seems it's fine so there's probably no problem. After holding the claw of the crab and exposing it to the base I used magic to cook the meat again before holding it out to everyone.

"Try eating it. I think it's probably fine."

Several of them stretched out their hands so I handed over the claw to someone and then watched over for a short while. It seems that no one is showing any strange reaction so there's probably no "allergies". Though Baldukk and Rombertia are close to the ocean and there's already various crab dishes so I wasn't that worried about it. Hmm, it seems Miduchi is skillfully using {Flame Thrower} as well. That's a delicious smelling scent.

I went to where Zenom and my two loyal servants were standing on guard at the end of the passage. Along the way I picked up one of the legs. I had Zulu hold up the leg so it doesn't fall over and used a knife to quickly cut through to the meat. I cut it down into three places from the base of the shell. This, doing it while it's still raw takes quite a bit of getting used to it. I'm glad my body still remembers it.

I ordered Angela to bring over one of the huge shells and took the sword out of my bayonet before cutting the remaining legs off at the base. Following that I stuck my sword into the center and caught from the stomach to back tearing off the shell all at once. After pouring some water into the shell and cleaning it out, I filled it with boiling water and used it like a container. After taking the leg meat from Zulu I immersed the meat into the boiling water. The leg meat quickly swelled up almost like a blooming flower. I then handed that to Zenom who's eyes went wide seeing that.

"There's no seasonings but well try eating it. It's fine to put some salt on it though. If this isn't delicious then crab really might not suit your tastes."

"It seems it hasn't been cooked very much but it's fine right?"

"I think that eating them like this is the most delicious way. Personally though."

"..Nn..Oh! It's delicious."

"It's one of the best things you can have together with alcohol.

Here, you two pick up a leg and eat as well. I'll take over keeping watch."

It seems Zulu and Angela couldn't skillfully take off the shell and were struggling with it. Seeing that when I helped them they smiled. Here, make sure you immerse it before the water cools down.

The Red Battle Crab's were different from the boars on the 6th floor in that they have the special skill Super Sense of Smell. I wonder how it compares to the skill with the same name that Angela has? I think it might be the same as hers and increase in detection range based on body level. In that case since their body levels are low that would mean their detection range is that much more limited.

If we cook these things here creating the scent and then look for a good chance to use wind magic and send the scent circulate down the hall it should reach quite a bit into the distance. After all, the ones that were closest by these fellows are already rolling around right here now.

Next maybe I'll try using a Cloud or Web-type spell to defeat them.

After doing it a number of times and we establish the most efficient method to defeat them then I guess we can advance a bit further inside.

Chapter 242: Unexplored Territory 2

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 1

Lured by the scent of their allies corpses being cooked around 30

Red Battle Crabs in total appeared. After using various spells to overcome the three wave attacks we all let out sighs in front of the mountain of stupidly huge crabs piled on top of each other.

"We can't bring them all back with us right.."

Ralpa said as if she was disappointed from the bottom of her heart.

Honestly speaking, I feel completely the same. It's my first time eating a crab so huge that even one claw or leg was beyond what just one person could handle. It's not so often that you can enjoy the luxury of eating your stomach full of genuine crab meat.

Incidentally, the spell that was the most efficient at clearing through them was {Acid Cloud} but since the meat corrodes along with the shell our long awaited pray ends up becoming inedible so we rejected using it. The other Cloud type spells weren't very effective and in the end didn't even work for slowing them down.

And then, even freezing them wasn't very effective. It's big that we can stop their movements but even if they're completely frozen they stay alive for a considerably long time afterwards. Aren't they not even barely breathing? Since it seemed like it would just take time we gave up on it. Even when we just froze their legs they started cutting off their legs partway through. Thinking it was fine I tried approaching one and was surprised when it suddenly cut it's own legs and started moving. It's dangerous right.

The spell that showed it's power among those was {Web}. After being caught up in a highly adhesive string when their movements dull Gwine and Basutorial would stab with their spears destroying their brains. In my past life, I made good use of my experience fishing for black porgy using small shore crabs like tank crabs or aburakani. The position of their brains was almost the same. The sole problem that could be called a problem is that the same as Cloud types the only ones who can currently use it are Miduchi and I but eventually Toris should be able to use it.

The Red Battle Crabs we defeated using {Web} weren't cooked or had their shells cracked or damages, so other than the hole in between their eyes where the spear stabs in they're clean. If we carefully disassemble them then we should be able to get about three buckets worth of kani miso and everything in the world is great. If we cut off the claws or legs from the body and tie them all together then one person should be able to carry about one crabs worth of them. The body is too big so there's no way to bring it along just like that. We decided to boil the kani miso before carefully taking out the contents and filling it into the shell of a claw that we took the insides out of before bringing it back with us. If we put some salt on it later and heat it up then we can deliciously eat it. It might be good to boil it a bit and reduce the water content by half before putting it into a bottle as well. If we leave it be for a few days then it'll be ready to eat. It's kani miso shiokara. I want some squid to go with it.

Toris who was blinded by the kani miso forcefully took everyone's flasks and packed those full of kani miso as well. I just wanted that while rolling the magic stones from the crabs in my hands while combining them into just one. After all, the value isn't anything great.

They're only around 3,000 each. It's still better than Gnolls or Goblin Zombies but it's less than Orks or Hobgoblins.

Now then, Toris should already be satisfied.

"Alright, then let's head back. Be careful since we have a lot of baggage."

When I said that calling out to everyone, unusually Gwine raised her voice with an opposite opinion.

"Since we've gone through the trouble of coming to the 9th floor, how about returning after taking a quick look inside of a monster room.."

Oh? This beard-san sure is proactive today. In regards to our bags for the time being we could leave them in the surroundings of the teleport crystal and grab them when we return so there's no problem on that end though.

"Yeah, it wouldn't hurt to just do that much right!"

Ralpa jumped on that idea. With this I've made my decision. Let's go back.

"No, that's no good. First off we need to properly make the teleport room on the 8th floor into a base. We'll make that into an easy to relax place. It's also necessary to carefully investigate the Minotaur as well. Seriously exploring the 9th floor will come after that."

"I already get that but you know, let's at least take a look at the boss of the monster room. Since we lured over that many crabs there might not even be any monsters up to a monster room."

"Since there were crabs there might be a prawn!"

..So that's what it was. No, prawns are a favorite food of mine as well. If there was something like a meter class prawn then I might quite literally jump up in delight. However, hearing that it's even more of a reason not to go. Prawn hunting (temporary name) is something we should do after we can properly rest our bodies on the 8th floor. Rather~ there's no guarantee that there's prawns right. Also, there's a considerable number of crabs that can live in places with almost no water but I've never heard of prawn like that.

Even if there was then I'm sure it'd be a monster so I feel like they'd have huge claws again. If it comes to that then it's already no longer a prawn. It's a Crayfish-Lobster right. In terms of prawns I'm in the faction that believes tiger prawns are the greatest. Tiger prawns are delicious no matter how you eat them whether it be boiling, baking, frying, steaming, or in sashimi. There's not many variations on how you can eat prawns other than tiger prawns. Even when it comes to Ise-ebi if you heat them up they're a great delicacy but in sashimi they just have a consistency when being chewed and the flavor isn't all that great. In reverse the botan prawns and budou prawns are extremely delicious as sashimi but other than that they're not the greatest, and it's just about those three in all.

"No~pe. We're going back."

I didn't say as far as that there's a high probability there aren't any prawns. It's because I've already tasted enough of the fact that you never know what will happen in the dungeon that I'm sick of it. I have the responsibility of making some earnings for the {Butchers}, {Exterminators}, and {Slaughterers} in this dungeon without permitting any casualties and paying everyone a reasonable amount in compensation. It's not a matter of whether I can do it or not. At the very least since I'm having them accompany me on my dream, whether or not they agree with that, at the bare minimum just I have the obligation to think like that I'm sure.

Something like going deep into a new floor before we've made proper preparations is absurd. Particularly the 9th floor and beyond which are said to be unexplored territory, leaving it to the momentum and charging ahead is something we must not do. Recently we haven't seen them at all so they're easy to forget but including pitfalls we need to properly use spells to investigate the traps that are in the passageways.

This time we should just be satisfied with taking a look in the 9th floor.

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 1

We returned to the 8th floor and were barely able to move holding all of the bags we needed, it was that level of overloaded bags.

Each of our bags ended up getting in the way of each other so we started teleporting back to the 7th floor in order.

Since we didn't return last night, it seems Giberuti was worried but when going to a new floor it was common for us to return later than expected and since I hinted that we might be late this time, he waited while preparing some food that can be preserved reasonably well and required slowly cooking over time.

There we returned carrying a large amount of crab legs and claws so it seems he was surprised by that appearance.

We discussed the circumstances lightly and after saying we'd be returning to make the teleport room on the 8th floor into a base in a few days he requested a large amount of ice. Even if it can't be helped that the ice will eventually melt, it seems he wanted to freeze store the soup that he went to the trouble of preparing for a bit longer.

Of course, there's no way to turn that offer down. I made as much ice as Giberuti wanted and additionally shaped it so it was convenient for him and then we all left the dungeon together. Just tonight we'll get some good rest in the inn but after preparing the necessary materials we'll be building the base again starting tomorrow.

Ah, that's right. For the time being I guess it's fine not to sell the battle axe. If Kevin and Karimu say they want to use the battle axe and bardiche from the Mino then it might be fine to give or lend it to them for cheap..Maybe? It's also possible to sell it as a set with the magic stone..Chi..I wonder if it won't look good if I don't throw the old man some bait occasionally? Though I say that there's no need to hurry either. It should be fine to do additionally when I go to make deliveries this month. If I think that the 3,500,000 Z is regrettable that's true but it might be best to think of it as a necessary expense.

However, we're selling the crab magic stones. I left just one of them without combining it to keep. Since the Red Battle Crab is the magic stone of a monster I've never heard of before, if we use that as evidence of reaching the 9th floor then our reputation will increase again I'm sure. Additionally we can pull apart from {Verdure.Brotherhood} and {Black.Topaz}.

Uhihi~ I can already see old man Viruhaima's mortified face now. If sis Anderson were to just abandon that old man already and come serve under me then I wouldn't treat her badly.

"Alright, today let's go to Murowa and eat ourselves full on crab.

Zulu, Angela. For the time being it doesn't matter where so go and borrow a large two-wheeled wagon by tomorrow with this. It can't be helped if it's a bit heavy."

I gave the two slaves money and had them prepare a two-wheeled wagon. During that time we gathered the crab legs and claws together in several pairs each and froze them. Eh? On this occasion we should at least go to Dorureon? That place isn't bad either but it's a bit too high class so even if we bring in these huge crabs it'll just be a bother. It doesn't take much work to peel the shells either so the more casual Murowa is fine. Zulu's woman is there as well. In the first place John and Terry are still young so unless it's a year-end party as expected Dorureon is..Right?

We gathered quite a bit of attention seeing the {Slaughterers} leave the dungeon carrying giant crab legs the likes of never seen before. We can't leave our bags alone until the wagon comes so just Toris, Zenom, and I went to cash in the magic stones. While doing that some time passed and by the time we returned Catherine brought along John and Terry to start setting up the Baldoggie cart.

Everyone else was helping that out as well but it was obvious their aim wasn't Baldoggie.

"Hey, we can't eat the crab here. After Zulu and Angela finish up negotiations and come we're leaving right away. After returning to the inn and changing there's also buying materials and such as well so there's no time to be snacking in between. Leave this place to Cathy. Also Cathy. Tonight as at Murowa. John and Terry you two look forward to it too. You can eat to your heart's content of something delicious."

Around the time I said that Zulu and Angela returned with a two-wheeled wagon. We split up and started loading the frozen crab on to it before returning to Boil Manor.

After that just as planned we split up and bought a stove, blankets, cooking utensils and had a party at Murowa. I was worried about the fact that we didn't have any seaweed or bonito flakes but Miduchi brought out some dried shiitake to make the stock and we enjoyed some shabu-shabu as well as some grilled it until everyone ate their fill. Ah, of course we put plenty of kani miso in it to eat with it. It seems Zenom acknowledged it's affinity with vodka as well. A good~ trend.

The next day, carrying along a lot of bags we {Slaughterers} stepped foot into the dungeon again. If there's no problem then tonight the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} were scheduled to return from the dungeon but right now turning the 8th floor into a base and investigating the Minotaur is urgent business. I'll have them take their three day break starting tomorrow just as planned. On the second day of the break, the night of the day after tomorrow we'll return so I left a message for them not to worry about us. That day, I intend to report that we cleared the 8th floor and entered the 9th floor.

Now then, on the evening of the day after tomorrow we should defeat the Minotaur again and have finished carrying the bare minimum materials into the teleport room on the 8th floor. Since this time the objective is carrying materials, we left behind Basutorial and his wife along with the message to the other members of the {Slaughterers} and he isn't accompanying us. That's why we don't have to split up the party either. If things go as planned then after that we'll immediately return once and after reporting things to everyone, depending on the case we'll prepare for a long-term battle and head back to the 8th floor again. We plan to continue staying in the dungeon at that time until we can get some kind of proof on the cycles of how the Minotaur revives.

"Alright, let's go, Rorufamu!"

.....

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 3

Just as planned yesterday we cleared through the 3rd floor and on the second day, today we plan to clear through to the 6th floor.

That morning, at 5 am we all finished up breakfast and put on our equipment before teleporting into the 4th floor.

Just past noon we cleared through the 5th floor and arrived at the teleport room on the 5th floor at around 1 pm. We had a simple lunch and decided to take our first long rest break for today. Since we need to take a shower and get rid of the scent here after all.

In a corner of the room, whether it be {Verdure.Brotherhood} or {Black.Topaz} is unknown, but that the camp preparations there showed signs of being used gave us peace of mind. It's because judging from the state of things it's obvious that they're struggling quite a bit with the 6th floor. If they intend on aiming for the 7th floor then I'm sure camping in the teleport room on the 6th floor would be the main after all.

Since there's a considerable amount of raw vegetables and quickly prepared ingredients left here then that means this 5th floor is still their main camp.

"Those guys, it seems they're struggling quite a bit."

"That's true. It did take us a considerable amount of time on the 6th floor even when we had Gwine after all.."

"Wouldn't it be fine for another one or two years?"

"I'm sure it'll take about that long."

Zenom, Toris, Bel, and Zulu were amusing themselves discussing recent events while taking off their armor. Miduchi was enjoying the convenience of how easy it is take off the rubber protectors as she was about to take a light shower while Gwine, Angela, and I were explaining things about the new model of protectors to Ralpha. Buy a suit. After cleaning up things from dinner Giberuti went around the camp confirming the stock of supplies and such here and there just in case.

"Master, there's nothing out of place."

"I see, thanks for your work."

I didn't think that old man Viruhaima or sis Anderson would do something stingy like messing with our supplies or belongings so my reply ended up carefree but I'm sure even for Giberuti it was just confirming things just in case.

"I'm done."

It seems Miduchi finished her shower. Gwine who had already finished taking off her protectors jumped into the shower room.

"Mu~ after all that's nice~ Just a moment Maruso, take off the band in back."

"I'll take it off from the right."

"Yeah."

Leather armor is one of the easier types of armor to equip and remove but since it's still got various leather bands and strings tied up here and there it's reasonably troublesome. Also, in the case that you're equipping or removing it alone it takes quite a bit of time. It's no comparison for the rubber bands which you can adjust the length of on top of expanding and contracting.

And then across our 2 hour or so rest break we all finished taking our showers.

"Alright, let's go. Zarihamu!"

.....

After advancing for a bit relying on the map in Gwine's head of the 6th floor we discovered an abnormality.

Along the way in the passage there were corpses of two {Cave Boars} laying around. The magic stones had already been removed.

"Traces of those guys huh? I wonder if we can have it easy for a short while?"

Zenom said while investigating the wounds on the {Cave Boar}.

"There's no traces of magic..I can't tell what it was but as expected of them."

I said while looking at the wounds on the {Cave Boar} as well.

"Well even we can take on the {Cave Boars} without magic as well but.."

"Though that's the case, excluding Al-san, Zenom-san, Miduchi, and Ral, we would need a {Magical.Weapon} right."

Oh? On my side Miduchi was acting a bit embarrassed. Recently Bel stopped calling Miduchi's name using san. Occasionally she ends up using it but that's just because she still hasn't stopped the habit. (Compared to Miduchi) it seems that being called out intimately by her nickname from the young Bel makes her happy feeling like she's really the same age...I wonder if it's that sort of thing?

Putting that aside, Bel is quite harsh as well. If that's how it is then doesn't Toris who isn't holding a {Magical.Weapon} come off as quite pitiful? The next time something appears let's hand it to Toris.

After that we walked for quite a bit but I guess because the monsters were already cleaned up for us things proceeded quite smoothly. Since then, while we didn't actually run into any corpses of monsters along the way but there were corpses laying around in the boss rooms. Though as expected the traces of magic attacks stood on these ones.

And then I think it was after we advanced for around four hours or so?

It seems we caught up to them.

..That voice is, {Verdure.Brotherhood} huh?

Old man Viruhaima's pointlessly cool sounding voice was echoing around.

Chapter 243: Unexplored Territory 3

Year 7446, Month 7, Day 3

Next to me Bel's ears stood on end.

"Uwa!!"

"Roo~kku!"

"It's a monster!!"

It seems that the {Verdure.Brotherhood} is in the middle of combat.

Judging from the echoing of their voices they're probably around 100 meters or so ahead? Since the ceiling of the 6th floor is considerably high if you don't yell with quite a loud voice it wouldn't reach 100 meters or so away. In reality the voice from just now felt pretty fragmented.

"Gwine, there's still quite a bit of distance to the monster room ahead of here right?"

"Yeah..Probably..It's about 500 meters or so ahead.."

Gwine replied quickly. That's right isn't it, just a short while ago Gwine said we had just cut past 1 km left. And, in that case then that combat isn't a monster room but a hallway huh? Most likely a boar teleported in and they were ambushed or something.

"..There's two boars..or maybe three?"

Bel said while straining her ears.

"There weren't any traps right?"

I asked Gwine who was still facing ahead.

"Yes."

Alright.

"..Hmn. We're doing a formation change. Ralpa, Zulu. You two watch the rear as the {Tail Watchdogs}. It's unsightly being caught from behind after all. It's fine to take it slowly so follow along while remaining careful. In front of them is Miduchi and Bel. Adapt to the situation using projectile weapons. In the center is Gwine and Giberuti. Gwine don't separate from Giberuti's side. Everyone else will face the front with me."

After lowering my bayonet from my shoulder I briskly started walking. Behind me on the left is Angela and to my right Toris lined up, behind him on the right is Zenom.

"Shitttt~!!"

"Renba! Do it now!!"

"Oooooo~!!"

It seems they're quite busy.

After glancing behind the only one making an impatient expression was Gwine. Opposite from that everyone else was making severely calm expressions as they walk. Even then their speed has increased. Judging from the volume of that voice, most likely we'll arrive at the place in another ten seconds or so. I guess around 20 meters beyond that right curve?

"Benno, to the right!!"

"Ah!"

"Shit, let's go with 4433! Front line hold out for 5 seconds!!"

"Attack with spells!"

Oh~ we can't miss that!

I hurry up and run while deploying an {Anti-Magic Field} just in case.

It would suck if a spell attack comes flying the moment we turn that corner after all.

I guess it's because I suddenly started running. I could feel the presence of everyone else start running after me in a hurry.

After turning the corner and it was just perfect timing.

"As expected!"

"Now's the chance!"

"Basu, endure for just a bit longer!!"

"Oraaa~!!"

Partway through a passage with a width of about 10 meters, looking from my left the {Verdure.Brotherhood} had their backs to the wall as they were frantically fighting against 3 {Cave Boars}. And then, I was conveniently able to see the moment the leader Viruhaima fired off an attack spell towards the boar that had it's ass facing me.

The spell Viruhaima used with his left hand facing a boar that was around the center of the party was {Flame Arbalest}. Since he was at a distance close enough that it could be called close combat, the Arbalest splendidly hit and the boar suffered heavy injuries. The boar let out a cry of pugyu~ but it was still alive and moving around. The front line tank {shield.holder} woman hit it with her shield.

Following that the female dwarf magician {Impact.Guard} used the spell {Flame Arbalest} as well and seemed to have aimed for the {Cave Boar} in the center but unfortunately she missed. The spell attack hit the wall on the right and dispersed. Furthermore the female Wolf-person magician {Impact.Guard} sent a {Stone Arbalest} flying and while that hit the wild boar, this one was shallow and didn't do much damage. The boar still seems to have plenty of energy and won't fall over. The male tank at the front line {Shield.Holder} was skillfully using his shield and long sword to parry the tusks that were being waved around.

After being hit with a {Flame Javelin} from the Bunny-people man who acts as {Spear.Interceptor} the center boar finally fell over. Without a delay the Bunny-person went to support the {Shield.Holder} and thrust with his spear from its blind spot stabbing into the boar's head.

With this there's just one boar remaining. Judging from the corpses laying around along the way it already shouldn't be a threat for {Verdure.Brotherhood}. That one was taken care of by the combination of the sub-leader and elf Basu and the dwarf Renbaru.

It should already be safe from spell attacks coming flying over here. I stop maintaining the {Anti-Magic Field} that ended up pointless and decided to watch but the boar was just one-sidedly killed without anything particularly interesting happening.

"Chi..So it was you?"

That's quite a greeting. I wonder if he thought that {Black.Topaz} has running up or something?

"Well hello there.."

I replied like that while observing the state of {Verdure.Brotherhood}.

The one fallen at Viruhaima's feet is mostly like the bow using elf man who was hit in the initial ambush, if I remember correctly his name was Rokkuweru.Marosutaron? He's a magician that survived when the half first-rate party {Blazers} was destroyed 2-3 years ago. It seems he's seriously injured. What are you going to do?

Viruhaima-san~

Including Viruhaima there's 5 magician in the {Verdure.Brotherhood}. Among those only two of them can use all elemental magics including Viruhaima but they shouldn't all have reached level 5. {Cure All} is impossible right? Well, even if they use regular {Cure} at least twice then he shouldn't die but as expected if it's just that. I wonder if they'll use their precious medicine that uses magic stones as ingredients? Well, even if they're expensive since one of top teams has plenty of assets there's no worry on that end, I'm sure it's something that's meant to be used at times like these. It can't be helped hesitating to use them.

"Hey~ Greed-kun. It's some kind of fate that we met each other in this sort of place. If you have any spare {healing potions} could you sell them to us? The number we have on hand has gotten a bit lonely.."

Viruhaima made an unpleasant face as if his moment of weakness was seen while the sub-leader elf warrior Basu put his hand on his shoulder pulling him back and then called out to me like that.

"Ya~ if it isn't Basu-san...If you're fine with the sale price of Misshizu then we can sell a couple of them to you. But, that is, do you have that much cash on hand?"

Misshizu is the name of a company that deals exclusively in medicine and along with the similar businesses of Bari and Rubenno they're the mainstream companies in Baldukk dealing with adventurers. Of course, there's plenty of non-adventurers who are in their care as well. Like the nobles and rich people of the capital..and the army.

And, {healing potions} can display effects around the midway point between {Cure} and {Cure Light}, just one potion will cost you around 250,000 Z at market price and they're considerably expensive. Of course, excluding the army the one buying the most of them is me. Normal adventurers will usually at most buy numbing potions or monster-based antidotes and paralysis removal potions for around several thousand to several tens of thousands of Z. Not to mention in most cases it's normal for them to be sold by the weight of the contents. It's said if they're properly sealed then the effects won't fall even over several years.

The {potion bottle} is a bottle almost like a test tube with a small ork the size of an adult's little finger and you can properly stop it up with the cork. Even just these shock-proof bottles are around 5,000 Z each.

Whether it be an external wound or bone fracture if you don't drink it the effects won't work. It is a magical medicine after all. It's said that the recipe is forbidden from ever being taken outside and it seems they mix magic stone powder, leaves, and such with a secret ratio. By the way the flavor is kind of like the hangover medicine sold in drug stores of Japan, Somarukku and putting it frankly it's disgusting.

Ever since two years ago, reflecting on when I fell down to the 14th floor I've made sure all of the members of the {Slaughterers} are always carrying at least four of these in the so-called survival kit pouch we're all carrying on the back of our waists. Obviously, I told them that if they end up separated from a member who can use magic and get injured to use those without hesitation.

Also, I always have a certain amount in stock at the foremost base.

While buying that one paralysis poison for use against ogres I've been buying them here and there and that added up to a decent amount of stock.

Including myself other than the initial training when I first introduced the potions no one has been in the care of them though.

It's a waste after all.

"Idiot~ don't mistake me. Do you have four of them?"

Basu said that while grinning and handed over some gold coins. He~ four of them is quite the spirit. I took out the four {healing potions} from the survival kit on my waist and handed them over while talking.

"If you're going to use them right away then please do. Please return the bottles."

"Chi..You're as steady as usual."

Basu made a bitter smile while even then making a happy expression as he took the healing potions from me and returned to his allies.

It seems he's using them right away. I can hear him take the cork off and use {Status Open} to confirm the contents.

"Since you're taking money, I won't offer any thanks."

Viruhaima was saying with a sullen expression but there was a somewhat soft feel to his tone of voice.

"I did take the money after all. There's no reason to thank me."

Though I say that, as a matter of fact I am profiting just a bit.

Since we're often bringing in materials like the {Scavenger Crawler} feelers and purchasing paralysis poison and expensive healing potions, we're honored customers of Misshizu. They sell to us just a bit cheaper than normal.

After letting Rokku drink the medicine, Basu returned the bottle to me while saying, "We're saved. Thanks. We want to keep our mana as much as possible just in case we really need to use it after all."

"Hey, Greed. Just watch. After this time if we find one more new route then next up is the 7th floor. With this we'll get our hands on the treasure of the 7th floor as well and quickly overtake you. If you get full of yourself just defeating ogres and trolls then we'll surpass you before you even notice us."

And Viruhaima was saying things like a poor loser before walking off right away. I waved my hand as well while saying, "Well, please give it your best. I was just feeling there was no competition like this after all.."

"Ah, that's right, I forgot to mention it. There's still a considerable distance from here to the teleport crystal."

Now then, I wonder how he'll respond?

"Hmph, I'm sure there is. Since we're making a map as well after all. We've already gone this way several times. We'll arrive by this evening."

"Pu"

Ralpa couldn't hold back anymore hearing Viruhaima's boast and suddenly burst into laughter.

As a matter of fact I was about to as well.

After all we had planned to arrive in another hour and a half.

"Ho!? What time did you enter the 6th floor?"

Following up for Ralpa's outbreak I raised my voice loudly as if I was surprised.

"Fu..I think it was just past 10 am."

Today we stepped foot on this floor at around 3 pm I think it was?

A 5 hour difference huh?

Thinking about {Sun.Ray}'s speed and it's quite, no it's a tremendously fast pace I'm sure. There's enough reason just for him to boast about it. As expected even I was a bit surprised. My eyebrows must have moved.

"That is quite..As expected of trying to reserve your mana for healing.."

While they're considerably slower than us, they must have had combat and such, so I'm honestly surprised.

"What is it? Does it surprise you?"

That's an irritating face.

..Ah. I guess that's what it is?

"Well~ of course..I was surprised."

Well, it's fine. Seeing the faces of Basu and the other members I already figured out that 10 am was a lie.

"Fu~ when did the {Slaughterers} enter? I'm sure it was after us but we did clean things up quite a bit along the way. It was easy right?"

Annoying~ Certainly all four of the monster rooms we passed through were filled with corpses. However, there were only boar corpses in two passages along the way for a total of 3 of them. Also, from looking at the members of the {Verdure.Brotherhood}, I'm sure they departed considerably early in the morning. Their expressions are those with a reasonable amount of fatigue built up.

"Yeah. Thanks to you. I'm grateful for that. Well then"

I replied while walking off, this time I waved over my shoulder.

Ahead of here, there's a three-forked passage but I decided to go out of our way to choose the slightly roundabout course. Well~ if it's us I'm sure even just taking the roundabout route will only add about 30 minutes. It's not a big problem at all.

Putting that aside, I'm sure it's about time for {Verdure.Brotherhood} to have established multiple routes through the 6th floor. In regards to that it's quite admirable. As expected of them being greater veterans. In that regard we're still completely amateurs.

Even this time the reason they bought healing potions from us was probably proof of their caution. They never know when monsters might teleport in right besides them on the 6th floor so they shouldn't be able to let their guards down at all. I'm sure they can't even let their guards down on breaks so they must want to reserve their mana for as long as possible. If when they really need they can't use attack spells because they're lacking in mana then a desperate fight is guaranteed and if they're careless it might lead to a number of serious injuries.

However, fortunately I was able to see something good. With this I was roughly able to get a grasp on the intervals between attack spells of {Verdure.Brotherhood}'s magicians. In the worst case..I guess that won't happen huh?

Chapter 261: Plans are Undecided

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 4

Now then, various things happened during the days off but let's get back into the spirit starting today we're entering the dungeon again. Let's switch and go.

However, thanks to that young lady we were given a good amount to think about yesterday as well. But in the end we weren't able to settle on anything. We ended up largely splitting into two plans for the near future.

Plan 1 was in any case for everyone to work together and reach the farthest depths of the 13th floor(probably) and bring an end to things in regards to the dungeon of Baldukk.

In comparison plan 2 was that there's no doubt reaching the 9th floor we're at now is an unprecedented achievement so we'll hurry and finish up the map of the 9th floor and after that earn time. After the 9th floor map is somewhat completed Gwine, along with a noble like Toris or Rodrick and if necessary Ralpa and the {Butchers} or {Exterminators}, otherwise I would buy new combat slaves to act as guards, and have them go to start producing a map of the neighboring areas around the Dirt Plains. Depending on the case it's fine to have Miduchi go as well.

Plan 1 itself is simple. If we give it our best to reach the depths of the dungeon then the plan is that we'll naturally gather treasure as well and in the end make the capital needed by selling those off. Honestly it's not any different from up until now.

The merit is the point that it's simple and clear so anyone can understand it. Also if we can obtain something that acts as proof of reaching the depths of the 13th floor then it will add a certain amount of gold lining to my actions. This is something worth taking into consideration because there's a high probability of obtaining it regardless of the treasure which has a strong luck factor. Also, it can't be overlooked that it makes it possible from start to finish for all of us to continue to act together. And then, the thing that needs to be taken into consideration the most but through engaging in combat against monsters in the dungeon we can hope for physically leveling up of all of the {Slaughterers} as well.

The demerit is that reaching the 13th floor is the same as challenging an unknown danger and depending on the case it's possible we could have some casualties. And then we can't even imagine how much time it will take but just in regards to this point it's at most two or three years, no matter how long it's expected not take more than four years.

The reason is because we were able to clear through the 8th floor and step foot on the 9th floor in the four years since I came to Baldukk. From here on out, it's fine to take into consideration an increase in the difficulty of clearing as well but we think even at best it would take about double the amount of time.

Well, even if it takes four years the age of us reincarnated people would be 22 years old. We're still plenty young. If you ask me I was originally thinking that I wanted to find a means to earn the capital before I turned 30 so it's true that our current pace is largely exceeding that. If we continue like this then it might not necessarily be a bad choice.

And then plan 2. You could say that this is in some meanings a change of plans. Rather than a change of plans though it's more of just accelerating a portion of the actions I had planned. It's not like I didn't have the plans at all up until now.

This time, we weren't able to accurately identify if the objective was a political maneuver but an illegitimate child of the King came to my place asking me to marry them. It's an plan that surfaced thinking about people like that young lady increasing from here on out.

Putting aside an illegitimate child who to the end just came to meet me on their own will, if a formal princess or some noble's daughter(whether they're illegitimate or otherwise) comes seeking a meeting properly through their parents then it's not so easy to turn down. Even when it comes to dragging out the meeting and earning time it probably wouldn't even last half a month.

In other words, on the spot in the meeting, whether it be strange conditions including asking me about what area of the Dirt Plains would be good as a future territory, (the chances are low though) but if they're seeking an immediate reply then it's the difference between Heaven and Earth if I've already gathered information ahead of time or not. This isn't a matter of letting my hopes pass or not but the important point is, "Whether or not I can respond with the optimum answer in that situation".

I'm sure there's a large meaning in going around the border and directly seeing the conditions of the conflict with your own eyes as well. Rodrick has actually entered in live combat before so he knew the situation to some extent but it seems he was in an excited state during his first campaign as well so it was lacking in accuracy and he could only remember the things right in front of his eyes.

I had intended on getting a grasp of the general outline through the details I've heard from sister as well but in the end, "If it's you then I'm sure you can manage anything.", she settled it with that sort of reply that makes no sense at all. I can't shake off the possibility she was intentionally hiding it as well.

In regards to that it's something that can't be helped. Even if I were to have touched on defense secrets when I was in the SDF I wouldn't have talked about them even if it was my parents or siblings. Though I never touched any significant secrets. Though there were a considerably number of small secrets that can't be called secrets like the management of weapons and ammunition and such. Things like the effective range or the shooting intervals of close range guns in the same company are things you can't mention even if your mouth is split. It seems that those who work on military vessels in the ocean aren't even allowed to talk about where they went on duty, among them when it comes to those with duty on submarines putting aside the primary abilities, arrangement of crew, or the conditions of the duty which are only obvious but they're not even informed of the planned departure and return dates.

Putting aside the digression, there's a large merit to gathering information on the territory candidates and their surroundings in the early stages.

However, we would only be able to make an accurate map of the dungeon partway though. This demerit is also something big enough that we can't ignore it. Though I say that, if we change the viewpoint then if we stop advancing any deeper, then it's also possible just explore focusing on the altar rooms of the 9th floor which we have a good grasp on.

While using an almost perfect map of the 9th floor, it's fine if we just keep fighting the monsters we can somewhat safely win against. Of course I'm sure there's still monsters we haven't found yet on the 9th floor as well but even then I think it's far safer than the chances of encountering more on a new floor.

Also, as a further demerit it contradicts Miduchi's theory that "The value of treasures increases the deeper inside you go." Though I say that, the price on the treasure we've found on the 9th floor is pretty high either way.

Looking at things overall you could say plan 2 pushes forward certain parts of plan 1. It would mean taking action separately for a somewhat long period(one year or so I guess?) of time but there's a high possibility that we'll obtain something worth that time. However at the same time that we'll end up needing more time to earn money which makes the information a bit stale as well. I'm sure there wouldn't be any major changes to the population, industries, and area of arable land in each town and village that exceeds our expectations but it's very possible to think that there would be changes in the borderlines and is a problem that needs to be taken into consideration.

In either case it's not something we need to worry about right away. Even if we went with plan 2 it would take at least half a year for some level of information to make it's way back to me. Taking into consideration the risk that letters could be lost on the way then we would need an exclusive contact agent included as Gwine's escort as well. It's easy to guess that it would take a considerable amount of time to prepare.

In any case, I'll decide things in regards to that by the time we finish up exploring the dungeon this time. Plan 2 is certainly the one that would expand my ability to deal with things but it's difficult to give up on continuing like this with plan 1 as well. Something like tungsten we've only found for the first time since going to the 9th floor. If Miduchi's theory is correct then if we explore even deeper even Orichalcum...Also we might end up obtaining even more valuable {Magic.Items} as well.

I was thinking about these things while briskly proceeding towards the 3rd floor with jsut Angela and I.

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 5

We arrived at the teleport crystal room on the 6th floor. And then, it was just as {Black.Topaz} started setting up a camp as well. They're giving off an atmosphere like they've already spent several days here. Since we ended up spending yesterday night in the same room with other parties on the 3rd floor, we thought today we could finally relax with no one else around so it was a bit disappointing but just this can't be helped.

Also, there was signs of a new camp in the teleport room on the 5th floor as well.

I guess that's probably {Gehenna.Flare}.

"We appreciate you letting us use the shower."

Sis Anderson came over to where we were preparing to camp to thank us.

I just finished taking my shower so I was in the comfortable appearance of just by under armor.

My under armor has black dirt stains all over the place from chafing of the rubber belts so it's not very good looking.

Up until now I had used a white kilt but starting next time let's go with a darker color.

"Please feel free to use it without restraint. It's fine as long as you don't break it and recognize that we have priority to it."

"Of course. By the way, is the 7th floor always bright like that? Does it not turn into like a cave at some point? Roberto(Roberto.Viruhaima) was saying there's no cave areas though."

".."

Just the end is a cave.

Anderson looked at me with just a bit of an unpleasant face but sighed after that and continued her words.

"Really~ isn't it fine to at least tell me that much."

Well, I guess it's fine huh? She did warn us about the {Ice Monster} after all.

"Just the last part ends up as a cave but it's only a small portion."

"What about monster rooms?"

"They exist. Probably, if you find one you'll recognize it right away."

Though there's only four. Also they're way too huge to be called rooms.

"Is that so, thanks."

"You're welcome."

It's the same for us but {Black.Topaz} pays a reasonable amount of attention to their meals as well. I can hear the sound of vegetables being cooked.

.....

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 6

It seems that {Black.Topaz} is working more vigorously than us. When I woke up at 5:00 in the morning it was after they had all already finished breakfast and teleported into the 7th floor.

"Now then, once again today is a round trip between the 7th and 8th floors. Everyone, make sure you eat properly."

With parched eggs and a meat and vegetable stir-fry as a side dish, we put grilled bacon on white bread smeared with mayonnaise and filled our stomachs with soup.

And then after confirming our equipment we teleported into the 7th floor before 6:00 leaving behind Giberuti as well.

Again this time we were smoothly able to cut through the 7th and 8th floors. We even ended up obtaining a bonus when we found a refined wristwatch magic tool in the last altar monster room on the 8th floor.

【Clock】

【Gold.Silver.Sapphire.Ruby.Emerald】

【Condition: Normal】

【Manufacture Date: 6/9/7446】

【Value: 1100000】

【Durability: 45】

【Ability: No measurement error;0.1 value/1 day;1 value/use】

【Effect: A clock that runs on a minimum size magic stone, even if the mana runs out of the magic stone if you replace it with a new magic stone that has mana it will show the correct time again. Also, it's necessary for over one day to have passed after putting in a magic stone to use it.】

Excluding the value and design the things written down are same as a completely common clock magic tool. It's one of the more popular items you can find inside of the dungeon. Of course there's nothing like a character grid and it's extremely valuable as an accessory so nobles all swarm to purchase them. They still can't produce magic tools of this small a size at the clock workshop. The best they can do is something just a bit larger than alarm clock.

Yeah of course, it's certainly magnificent as an accessory but looking from my viewpoint it's still unrefined. A while in the past, it's half the size of the cellphones from the 90s. Something of that size is just attached to an adequate belt and you put that on your arm. It might be possible it's not even intended to be used as a wristwatch. Maybe it's something like a brooch or pocket watch?

Also I just mentioned the clock workshop but their techniques are forbidden from leaving the workshop. But, it's not particularly anything difficult. The main body of it is a magic stone and some metal parts that surround that and just some circuit-like design you carve into there and if you just have the materials anyone can make it. Just, it seems that the know-how is that based on the properties of the metal parts and the way the circuit is carved into it decides the overall size and the magic stone consumption rate.

Incidentally, the alarm clock size clock that we use consumes 4 magic stone value a day and every individual use consumes 30 value. That's 40 times the running and 30 times the usage cost. This value is the Identify value so if you convert that into Z then it ends up pretty high. There's a huge difference between it and the magic tool mentioned above in terms of consumption rates. That consumption rate is on the same level as the wall clock size we had back at my family's house. Assuming you check the time 4-5 times per day then that would mean 6-7 goblin magic stones(the value is roughly 1,000) combined into one minimum size magic stone could be used for about half a year at that rate.

We ended up earning some unexpected pocket money so we returned to the 6th floor again with pleased faces. We can't always keep going easy on Basutorial so this time I decided to let Zenom have a nice break. The meal ends up as a bento but take your time and relax.

We returned to the 6th floor and after having a lunch of sandwiches prepared by Giberuti we stepped foot on the 7th floor again.

"N~ we're here."

Gwine quickly pointed to a spot on the map. It's a location that leads to the monster room on the North side.

"Oh, it's a considerably good spot right. It's just right since this morning was the South side."

"I guess so. Wouldn't it not even take three hours to clear through from here?"

Seeing that Bel and Toris both cheerfully said. We can suppress the group of ogre mages on the North side and make some good earnings on the way, so that's exactly right.

"Then, let's hurry up and get going!"

Ralpha said energetically. Alright.

"Then let's go. {Wedge.Two} We'll shift every 30 minutes. First off Miduchi is at the lead."

We all went to our positions leaving just Giberuti at the center of the umbrella.

.....

"Shit. Is it {Black.Topaz}?"

"I'm sure it is.."

"Hmm.. It seems they aren't used to taking the magic stones out yet."

Toris who was walking at the lead discovered the corpse of one ogre.

Miduchi nodded while pulling out a broken arrow that was stabbed into it and observing it.

It seems if you ask Zulu the way the magic stone was taken out was rough.

"This place isn't even 1 km from the monster room, here."

Gwine said while tilting her head slightly.

"The ogre mage monster room huh~ I wonder if they'll be alright?"

Ralpa said while grinning but like I know.

"It's said that {Black.Topaz} is more powerful than {Sun.Ray} after all.."

Bel said that but even then I'm sure seeing ogre mages for the first time is quite something.

"Well, other people are other people and we have our own way of doing things. Let's keep proceeding while remaining cautious as usual. If {Black.Topaz} is ahead of here then I'm sure they're cleaning up the ogres for us so we might catch up to them."

I said that urging everyone and then we started walking again.

.....

And then about 20 minutes or so.

Excluding the first ogre, we've caught sight of about two ogre's corpses twice now.

Thanks to that we were able to proceed without taking any time.

And then we encountered {Black.Topaz} resting in front of the monster room on the northern side.

After seeing us approach they could be seen confirming their equipment in a hurry.

Well, the first one in the monster room is the winner after all.

They probably don't want to let us who came afterwards go ahead of them.

If they just let one person from their party take one step into the room then they can claim the right to it.

"Sorry about that. We're about to go in from here now."

Anderson said that but it's their obvious right.

"Of course, please do. During that time we'll be taking a short break here."

Baru(Baruteinesu.Zomu) the Laios battle axe user of {Black.Topaz} was looking over here with a slightly nervous face as he was the first one to step foot in the room ahead of them.

I won't have someone enter and say we're going ahead or anything like that. Like I'd do something as petty as that.

"Be careful."

"Thanks."

Let's hand it over to them with a good feel here.

After seeing off the backs of {Black.Topaz} as they go into the room and I started making bean tea.

"The forest is in the way so we can't watch right."

"I wanted to watch a bit."

Gwine and Ralpha started leisurely talking after sitting on some rocks.

"Previously..Was it the 5th floor? We saw them fighting against the {Frost Lizard} but after all their abilities were high."

"That's right, that Laios who's the same as Zulu-sama, Baru I think it was. He was doing quite the good work as well."

Zulu and Angela were discussing something as well. If I remember right then Giberuti was with us at that time too. But it seems Giberuti doesn't know much about combat so he's just quietly sitting. Well he's carrying a huge amount of luggage so I'm sure he's reasonably tired.

"I've never seen it before so I wanted to watch."

"Ah, Miduchi-san. It's the same for me as well. I wanted to see it~"

Miduchi and Basutorial weren't around was it?

"After all their coordination and such was good."

"Anderson-san's skill with the crossbow was pretty good as well."

The monster room of the 7th floor has a diameter of 500 meters and is wide. Since it's their first time they should end up spending a considerable amount of time being cautious until hostilities open.

I also feel like I'd like to see the {Black.Topaz}'s combat versus spells as well but I guess we'll take a good rest here huh?

Chapter 262: Black Topaz 2

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 6

All of us who had started taking a break in the rocky area just before the room the ogre mages nest on the 7th floor continued to watch the backs of {Black.Topaz} as they disappeared into the forest.

At longest I guess it was about 15 minutes or so?

What was? Of course before {Black.Topaz} entered combat.

The presence detection abilities of ogre mages reach 100 meters even in a dense forest with bad visibility. The diameter of the room is roughly 500 meters so if anyone from the outside intrudes into the room they'll notice from the center where the ogre mage group usually is when they reach about 150 meters inside.

The speed of advancing in this sort of forest for the first time I guess would be around 10 meters per minute or so.

They'll advance just a bit while hiding themselves behind bushes to check if it's safe in the surroundings. Obviously, I doubt they'll aim straight towards the center from the start. It seems they scattered soon after entering the room as well. That's why they're heading towards the center at a speed of 10 meters/minute.

That's about it.

For those progressing deep into the dungeon of Baldukk this ogre mage room is certainly a large wall. But recently even we've been able to claim victory with some leeway without even using paralysis poison or freezing them so if they can make it to the 7th floor on their own abilities then I'm sure they won't be wiped out. Or maybe they will?

If things get severe or if Anderson thinks things will get severe then I'm absolutely sure she'd call out to us. In that area, I think she's the type who would always choose her allies over her own pride in the end. However, just like an adventurer she also knows full well when to show some backbone as well. Previously, like the combat we saw between them with the {Frost Lizard} on the 5th floor, that was completely her showing her backbone. Well it seemed like they knew the general outline of the {Frost Lizard}'s abilities so in the end I'm sure she guessed they could have won though.

I think it would have been different for old man Viruhaima. That old man, he's amazing at seeing through the places where he can push things and where he can't after all. All their members are completely veterans and just like that one time we encountered them on the 6th floor in the end they would manage without backup. The reason why they bought healing potions from me was nothing more than insurance.

That old man if it was a situation like this, I guarantee he'd urge us go ahead first. After that, he'd investigate the corpses of the monsters we defeated. I think he might even investigate the footprints on the ground and the directions they're facing. First he would check what kind of formation they're in the room, whether the intervals between steps are the same as the ogres you encounter in the halls, what things are different with the corpses, and whether anyone notices anything, he'd thoroughly investigate it.

And then, after returning to the surface he'd make assumptions as much as he can on the various variations of attacks and start training to deal with those. I used to steal glances at the training of {Verdure.Brotherhood} a number of times in the past but those details were definitely this. From a glance it just looks pointless so the first time I saw it I didn't notice.

However, after realizing it a considerable portion of it was good reference so I incorporated a lot of it into the {Slaughterers} training as well.

Honestly, my only basis is the sight of them training but for some reason I'm confident on it.

.....

It's almost been about 10 minutes.

I wonder if {Black.Topaz} has progressed about 100 meters yet?

I tried using the spell {Detect.Life} to confirm it.

Yeah, after all it's about that.

The group of ogre mages that are believed to be in the center are too far so I can't detect them.

It seems that {Black.Topaz} is moving in the formation {Double.Echelon}.

Everyone's long since finished drinking their tea.

They're all glancing at the forest here and there and are somewhat fidgety.

Putting aside Miduchi, they're about to leave the range that Ralpa and Bel can detect with {Detect.Life}. after all.

Well, it's certainly true that sis Anderson has some part of her that makes her liked by people.

She looks after people well after all.

Also, whether it's Basu of {Verdure.Brotherhood} or Kaku of this {Black.Topaz}, their sub-leaders all feel like worldly-wise men so I can't come to hate them.

It can't be helped~

"Hey, start getting ready for combat."

I said that while confirming the condition of my bayonet.

Giberuti quickly picked up the bags and then went towards the usual rock shadow a bit of distance away.

Zulu and Angela stood up expressionlessly and took out their swords.

Toris and Bel start making preparations as they stand up and just the same Ralpa stood up and is swinging her axe around in circles.

Basutorial and Gwine have the ends of their spears to the ground almost like walking sticks.

And then Miduchi stood up and smiled at me.

Everyone is paying attention to me.

Stop expecting it. We aren't going yet.

"{Half.Siege.Two}. On Miduchi's sign we switch to {Weapons.All.Free}.

Miduchi, Bel, Toris, Ralpa, Gwine, Basutorial. If you see an ogre then it's fine not to ask questions so use the bow or magic or whatever you want to blow them away. Ah, {Fire Ball} is dangerous so it's no good. Make it so you only hit one of them at a time. Zulu and Angela will come with me around to the right flank. {Spread}."

Miduchi dived into the forest at an amazing speed without making a single sound.

With that as the start Ralpa, Toris, and Bel went to the left from the entrance.

Gwine and Basutorial held their spears low as they followed after Miducho to the front.

Zulu and Angela are following me to the right from the entrance.

The ogre mage room on the northern side is the same as the room on the southern side and is covered in a deep forest but in exchange for having almost no bushes or shrubs there's undergrowth from the trees that's about 50 cm ~ 1 meter or so growing everywhere.

It's just right for hiding yourself and even if you climb over it the sound you make is less than that of shrubs or bushes.

Zulu and Angela accompany me from behind and we ran about 100 meters along the wall of the room as quietly as possible.

If I just focus my awareness on it a bit then in my head the information of everyone's location flows through from Miduchi's {Party-ization}.

Angela is wearing rubber protectors as well so she's following about 20 meters behind not making much sound just like me.

Zulu is much further and should be approaching close to 40 meters behind around now.

He's wearing banded-mail after all.

It seems like everyone else has spread out as well.

Miduchi is the farthest one out but even then she's about 60 meters from the wall.

I wonder what was with that first momentum?

On both sides about 20 meters behind her is Gwine and Basutorial.

Ralpha, Toris, and Bel are all scattering along the walls at different speeds.

They're still moving.

I guess they intend on moving along the wall until there's a sign from Miduchi.

It's more convenient for us to be as spread out as possible for the siege after all.

.....

After a short while I could tell everyone had spread out.

""Advance forward.""

An order appeared in my head from Miduchi.

It's not anything like ""Charge forward"" so I'm sure she means to just close the distance.

It seems everyone else understands as well and I can tell they've started slowly moving towards the center.

There's no guarantee that {Black.Topaz} will be brought to the verge of annihilation.

If they don't particularly seem to be fighting in a dangerous way then there's no need to help out.

If we can watch their combat versus magic then that's fine.

I hold my bayonet at the ready as I slowly advance forward.

That undergrowth looks pretty deep.

It would be boring to make a sound so I guess we should detour around.

It's about time and we can proceed as everyone was about 100 meters from the wall.

It should be about time for {Black.Topaz} to get caught in the ogre mage's network of vigilance pretty soon.

We slow down our moving pace.

I try peeking through the trees and for a moment it felt like I saw the back of an ogre or ogre mage as I stopped my movements and slowly lowered my body.

It seems that the trees and overgrowth are in the way so neither {Black.Topaz} nor the other {Slaughterers} can see them.

They're slowly approaching the center.

Ralpa's already 120 meters away from the wall.

No, I don't know if there's measurement error in {Party-ization} though.

What about {Black.Topaz}?

It was just when I thought that.

"Gebyo!! Gugyabo!!"

I can hear the faint voice of what seemed to be an ogre mage sending out warning.

It's going to start.

"..!"

It seems {Black.Topaz} is saying something as well but the distance is too far so I can't hear the details.

They must have noticed they were noticed.

For the time being I wanted to casually watch from safety but the location is bad.

I can't see anything from here.

I quietly approached.

.....

Suddenly I noticed that I could see Angela a bit of distance away.

Her distance from me is about 30 meters or so.

It seems she has visibility of me as well as our eyes meet.

I nodded to her once and we were about to advance forward again.

""Charge forward.""

Ho~ it seems there was some kind of movement.

Furthermore something that requires us helping out.

I'm aware of the fact that I'm grinning as I dash off at full speed.

Simultaneously I try using the spell {Detect.Life}.

One, two, three..A total of 12 ogres huh?

That's a large serving.

It would be best to think that at least 5 of them are ogre mages mixed in as well.

Depending on the case it wouldn't be strange for there to be 7 of them.

"Shittt~~!!"

"Revenge for Rotto~!!"

Oh my~ so there's already someone who's died?

That sure was fast.

I can see them.

They're about 40-50 meters ahead.

I run while sticking out my left hand and send a {Flame Arbalest Missile} flying.

The target was what seems to be an ogre mage in the back of the group concentrating to use magic.

My {Flame Arbalest} smashes into the side of it's head and it magnificently killed it instantly.

Almost simultaneously {Flame Arrows}, {Javelins}, {Stone Bolts}, and such came flying from every direction hitting the ogre mages in the rear breaking their concentration.

Everyone's properly doing their job.

However, if we can either kill or break the concentration of all 6 that seemed like ogre mages then it's a fact that the front line ogres won't be able to do anything at all.

And then, before our attack spells arrived at the ogre mages they ended up firing off several spell bullets.

This can't be helped.

The ogre mages fired off a total of 4 spell bullets.

Of those two of them were deflected by Kaku(Kaku.Dankel)'s shield and flew off in a different direction.

Everyone, I'm sure they're on guard but don't get by a stray bullet.

One more attack penetrated through the shield Vikkusu(Vikkensu.Barukemi) was holding but it didn't go all the way through so it's just stabbed into his shield.

It'll probably disappear soon. It seemed like an {Ice Bolt} after all.

The last one seemed to be aimed at the head of Gary(Gary.Bagumaia) who was holding a spear but he tilted his head just before and managed to avoid it.

Even though they're in combat with the front line ogres they aren't half bad~

It's not unexpected or anything else but {Black.Topaz} was putting up a good fight.

They're covering for what seems to be the fallen Rotto(Rosutoru.Mirusutoron) as they put up a reasonable resistance against the 6 front line ogres.

It seems they've wounded them a good bit.

There's two ogres with crossbow bolts stabbed into their faces.

Two of them that seem to have been stabbed in the legs with a spear by one of the spear attackers.

And then one that seems to have suffered serious injuries from an axe but none of the ogres have reached the point of falling.

Kaku and Vikkusu have their shields ready as they spread out with some distance to the sides in front and they're focused on defense as {Shield.Holders}.

The battle axe user Baru(Baruteinesu.Zomu) is bracing himself in the center of that as he swings around a huge battle axe.

Behind them Roru(Roreiru.Naruzomerin), Gary, and Marin(Marin.Rukkima) the spear using attackers have formed a wall of spears and are covering the front line while maintaining an intense check looking for gaps to attack the ogres.

The leader Reddo.Anderson has thrown her crossbow she probably already fired to her feat as she aimed a {Flame.Javelin} towards the face of an ogre and landed the hit. She's got some good skills.

It's correct to say they're above {Sun.Ray}.

"We're going to step on Rotto!! Move more to the left! Marin and Roru attack with magic in order! From the right!"

She gives out orders to the members of {Black.Topaz} while I'm sure she's noticed our support, Anderson glances around the surroundings while shouting "I'm grateful!!", before starting to concentrate to use an attack spell again.

Now then..

Oh.

"Urya~!!"

In a position close to the opposite side from me Ralpa let out a battle cry while swinging her tomahawk and charged into the group of ogre mages that are wounded and in agony.

That's soon, too soon.

It couldn't be helped so I fired off one more shot of {Flame Arbalest Missile} towards one of the ones that seemed to have some vitality to finish it off. There's 4 ogre mages remaining.

Angela ran of.

The large silhouette on the other side is Zulu I guess?

They're both running towards the ogre mages.

An arrow came flying and stabbed into the face of one of the ogres {Black.Topaz} was against.

Again a {Stone Javelin} came flying and hit the shoulder of the ogre next to that.

The ogre that faltered from that was stabbed through the chest by Gary's spear as he was waiting in Kaku's shadow.

Marin fired off a {Flame Bolt} and hit a different one, and I guess after confirming that, Roru sliced the neck of a different ogre with {Wind Cutter}.

There's 4 remaining front line ogres huh?

There something like a swaying white ball went flying from behind Anderson and passed over even the ogres reaching and hitting one of the ogre mage group. Suddenly the white ball ruptured and covered the entire body of the ogre mage restricting it. It seems it dragged in the one next to it as well.

This is a chance.

I use the spell {Grow Spike} around the area where the two ogre mages restricted by spider web fell over.

Having their bodies pierced by 10 cm in diameter 1 meter high stone spikes that suddenly grew from the ground the two ogre mages died in no time at all. There's 2 ogre mages remaining.

Gwine and Basutorial ran past Anderson's both sides and joined in keeping the ogres in check.

Ralpha, Zulu, and Angela all arrived at the group of wounded ogre mages as they start finishing things off there.

It should already be fine.

Now then, I wonder what I should say?

Chapter 263: Flames

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 6

The remaining monsters were wounded so they were already no opponent for us.

Half of the monsters the 6 ogre mages were all defeated by the hands of the {Slaughterers} and of the remaining half of 6 ogres, just the same half of those 3 of them we {Slaughterers} helped to defeat. In terms of battle results we did 75%. 3/4th. Well, of the ogres a considerable number of them were wounded by {Black.Topaz} so I don't intend to brag about it being 3/4th.

It was just a mere 3 of them that {Black.Topaz} was able to defeat with there own power.

And then, there's one casualty. Of course, it's not from the {Slaughterers}.

It's the {Shield.Holder} from {Black.Topaz} Rotto(Rosutoru.Mirusutoron). It seems he died instantly after taking a blow from an ogres club to his head crushing his helmet along with his head inside of it.

"{Status Open}..Shit!!"

""Rotto..""

""This many ogres are..""

Everyone from the {Slaughterers} is wiping off their weapons while keep an eye on the state of {Black.Topaz} checking Rotto's status. I'm the only one who didn't use my weapon.

"Ah..That's right..The support, we're grateful for it..Thank you. We were saved."

Anderson recovered ahead of the rest before saying that and politely lower her head to us.

I guess they were dragged back to reality from their leader thanking us but the other members of {Black.Topaz} started thanking us as well.

"You're welcome. We'll be taking the magic stones of the ogres we finished off. Zulu, Angela. Gather up our portion. Gwine and Basutorial for the ones around there, put a mark on this area. Ah, I don't mind if you gather it from them either. Miduchi, sorry but go and call over Giberuti."

I intentionally said it in a business-like way and then looked at Anderson. You have no complaints right?

Obviously there were no complaints.

It seems there's members of {Black.Topaz} who suffered light injuries but it seems they still have mana so it's, wipe your~ ass yourself~ right.

As expected I'm sure losing a member who was both from the front line and could use magic is a hard blow to them as well. It seems they're giving up exploring anymore than this and heading back.

"Should we go with you back to your original teleport crystal location?"

I suggested it trying not to sound very disagreeable. However, it was refused with, "It's just returning back down the route we came so it's alright. Sorry for the trouble."

Honestly speaking if it's from here the teleport crystal to the 8th floor in the center of the floor isn't all that far away so that's better for us. We've also left Zenom waiting on the 8th floor as well. Even with 6 ogres rampaging in front of them {Black.Topaz} has the ability to finish off 3 of them. The maximum number of ogres you can encounter in the halls is 5. Unless they have considerably bad luck they should be fine.

It seems Baru is going to carry Rotto's corpse. The splint-mail he was wearing was split up and is being carried by all of them.

"We ended up in your debt again...I'll definitely thank you for this.."

Anderson said that before leading {Black.Topaz} on their way back.

However, it's that right.

I thought at least one of them would complain about stealing their game but I wonder if they realized there's a large gap seeing our strength? Honestly speaking, even looking from my own viewpoint our skill in killing the ogres off was splendid.

There was even some of them that were making faces of both admiration and shock.

Just as expected of them being called a top team.

Things that should be recognized should be honestly recognized and there's no point in making a meaningless bluff.

Though as a matter of fact it's just that we're used to it and there's not really all that big of a gap between our abilities.

Although, getting used to something also has a frightening face to is that invites negligence, if you get into a pattern and can do it almost like a machine, there's a large advantage above all else to continuing to take the initiative no matter what move the opponent makes. If you just don't do anything foolish like getting negligent then it will definitely let you display strength beyond your own abilities.

If you were to ask me, I think {Black.Topaz} is the one who got too "used to the dungeon" and let their guard down. Something like entering a room just a few weeks after going to a new floor, there's limits to even recklessness. I'm sure they must have cleared through the 6th floor as a considerable speed as well. I'm sure it's because they were able to boast of such high abilities that they could take on the ogres of the 7th floor with a good pace. I'm sure they made up to here without a single injury.

That's precisely why they got into a hurry I'm sure. They probably thought, "That we were always afraid of just these level of monsters and didn't come to the 7th floor" or "If we just calmly fight then even if it's ogres there's a small number of them, so they're no opponent for us", or even more so this is just my imagination but (but I think it's probably correct) "It was big that we were able to share maps of the 6th and 7th floors with {Verdure.Brotherhood}. Thanks to that we made it to the 7th floor in an unexpectedly short period of time" is what they might have been thinking.

I'm sure there must have been a fight for the right to leadership below the surface between {Black.Topaz} and {Verdure.Brotherhood}. Whichever can bring back even more information or which ones information is more useful, and then, whichever can surpass the 7th floor faster.

In the first place it can't be helped that they were overtaken by some brats(us) who are supposedly outrageously skilled. However, even {Sun.Ray} got full of themselves and went to the 6th floor. It was without a doubt by their own abilities. It's unknown if they thought of them as an obstruction or not but the brats skillfully ended up playing with {Sun.Ray} and didn't just make them into a stepping stone but managed to insert them into their own forces.

They thought the brats ended up being slowed down for quite a bit on the 7th floor from making a huge profit on ogre magic stones but through absorbing {Sun.Ray} they once again stepped foot on even lower floors. So that's it, they just felt a limit on an individual party. Since the brats felt like a threat we somehow or other got closer to {Verdure.Brotherhood} but we should use this opportunity to formally cooperate with each other.

Thanks that we were smoothly able to go through the 6th and 7th floors. We still haven't arrived at a monster room on the 7th floor but according to what the brats say we'll know it when we see it so it's got that sort of construction. Waha~n, so this is a monster room on the 7th floor huh? The {Verdure.Brotherhood} says they still haven't arrived at a room so the ones who are ahead are us.

She's a good teacher to reflect on for me. Impatience. Negligence. Both of them powerful enemies.

.....

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 8

It's the second day since we started exploring the 9th floor.

In one monster room we ended up facing off against an unexpected monster.

Just the same as usual when we had gotten into formation and started heading towards the monster room, suddenly Miduchi shouted.

"Everyone use {Flame Thrower} with maximum power!"

There was still a good 20 meters between Miduchi who was standing at the lead and the entrance of the monster room.

There's no fools in my group that would ask the reason why at a time like this.

Zulu and Angela who were behind Miduchi on both sides immediately retreated as Toris and Zenom moved close to the walls of the hall.

Bel and I ran ahead from the very rear but before that Miduchi along with Ralpa and Gwine on both her sides held their hands up towards the room and started concentrating. Basutorial's void magic level still hasn't reached 4 so he can't use {Flame Thrower}. I hesitated for a bit but after that held my hand up just the same.

A grand flame started spewing out from Miduchi's hand stretching towards the room.

Bel and I lined up with them, raised our hands up, and started using the spell {Flame Thrower} as well.

The flame coming from my hand stretches out and combines with the one coming from Miduchi's hand..!

What the!?

Something black and sharp pierced through Miduchi's flame and came flying over here..No, is it stretching over!?

It was just scorched by my flame as the sharp thing burnt and felt but it's still gradually increasing in number.

After about one minute Bel and after that Ralpa, Gwine, and Basutorial started spewing flames from the palms of their hands completely burying the hall in front of us in flames. Ah, it seems Basutorial since hasn't done anything since he needs to see the target.

In the first place, since I use the strong image of a portable torch when I use the spell {Flame Thrower} I often converge the flames together with using it out habit but everyone else seems to have the wrong impression that flame thrower's flames spread out like a funnel so their flames end up spreading out in a flashy way. I tried imitating them and spreading it out like a funnel as well.

After confirming that Miduchi stopped using the spell {Flame Thrower} and started giving out instructions.

She touched my back and said, "You keep moving forward like that. Don't weaken the force of the flames and if possible make it stronger."

Is that so.

That's an easy order.

After I started walking and this time

"Stop. Everyone behind me! Zulu and Toris prepare your shields. Magic is~!"

It was then, an ice arrow pierced through my {Flame Thrower} that was spread out and came flying!

That, it's not an {Ice Bolt} or {Ice Javelin}!

At the very least it's an {Arbalest}!

The bullet has just gradually gotten smaller from piercing through my flames.

"Yo!!"

I think Toris probably deflected it with his shield.

"Saji! If you can see then fire!"

I guess Toris covered Basutorial?

And shortly after I thought that a {Flame Javelin} was fired from my side.

I've already started to understand as well. I can see a portion from the sides of the flames. They're illuminated after all.

It's a tree.

Not to mention it moves.

It has hands.

It hand legs.

It's height is probably to the point you'd have to look up while standing beside it.

It's most likely around 5-6 meters.

The hands have a feel like thick branches have transformed.

The portions that would be it's fingers are stretching out with a tremendous force and being burnt by me.

New fingers are stretching out from the burnt ends.

The legs seem to be a thick trunk split into two and while it doesn't seem to be able to move very fast it's still splendidly moving.

It's speed is probably about as fast as an adult can walk I guess.

I guess because Basutorial's {Flame Javelin} hit it?

It seems to be preparing to flee as if it hates flames but even then it's not retreating to the back but trying to move to the sides to avoid my flames.

And then, about 4 meters from the ground there's the unsightly distorted face like that of an old person.

It's either distorted because of the agony or out of hatred because we've come to lay waste to this place.

Above it's face there's branches spreading out almost like broccoli or cauliflower and it even has leaves on them.

Just from a glance it seems to be a broad-leaf tree.

Though I have no clue.

"It's coming!!"

I already get it.

This thing uses magic.

However, not any different from usual when it uses spells it still seems to need to concentrate and during that time it's movements completely stop.

It doesn't stretch out it's fingers nor does it swing it's arms.

However, what's frightening is that the amount of time it needs to concentrate to use magic is surprisingly short.

Whether it even takes 1 second or so.

The only person I knew that could use {Arbalest} level attack spells at this speed was about myself but after all the world is a big place.

"Mun!!"

It seems Zulu deflected it this time. It would be good if it was thanks to my warning.

"It's fine if it's {Flame} type or {Fire} type or whatever so focus on it! After I fire off the next {Fire Ball} use that as the sign to shoot it all at once! Toris, Zulu. Stand further in the front! Protect everyone until we're finished concentrating!"

Several seconds after that Miduchi fired off a {Fire Ball}.

Following that was a {Fire Ball} that was probably from Bel and then two {Flame Javelins} that probably belonged to Ralpa and Gwine.

Basutorial added another {Flame Javelin} about two attacks later than them.

Being hit with flame attack spells consecutively clearly dulled the monsters movements and it seems it's weakened.

"Don't let your guard down! People who can shoot it do it one more time!"
Miduchi's shout echoes around.

It's quite the frightening opponent.

I understood it from checking it's racial sub-window but it's weak to changes in the temperature so if it wasn't particularly weak to flames which do triple the damage I'm sure it would have taken us a lot longer to defeat it. Also, it wasn't very related to this time but it seems that if it takes slashing attacks from heavy weapons like halberds then it deals double damage. Additionally it had this completely absurd special skill that even if you attack it with spells that are below level 3 and there's elements other than fire magic mixed into them then it will invalidate them.

Additionally it uses attack spells.

If I hadn't continued using {Flame Thrower} then there would have been no choice but to use {Anti-Magic Field} to block them(as expected if a shield tries to deflect {Abralest} level attack spells it will break and about the only one who could endure it is barely Zulu, I'd say. Probably even I couldn't do it) but if I were to do that then it would be impossible to restrain those branch-like arms and fingers.

I see now.

Miduchi, she sure knows everything.

Showing admiration I tried to praise her and it seems she didn't know it could invalidate magic. But, she did know it was extremely weak to fire like Trolls.

"Trees burn from fire that's why they're weak."

And said something like that but even I can imagine that much.

Ev..Even I, when I thought it's a tree, I thought for sure it's weakness was fire..Though that wasn't the case.

"Why didn't you have Zenom throw his axe?"

"Eh? I mean, the handle of Zenom-san's axe isn't all metal as well right. It might be fine even inside of the flames but wouldn't it be hot when it returns?"

I see. Though I already knew.

However, it's not an altar or anything else just a normal monster room huh?

Even though we defeated powerful enemy something like no reward, that's boring~

Chapter 264: Black Topaz 3

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 8

Hn?

Zulu and Angela seem to be having trouble with the fallen Mad Treant.

It's only obvious. It's a tree after all. That's right isn't it?

That was thoughtless of me.

It's impossible to cut through it with a knife or sword I'm sure.

"Zenom, Ralpa. Would you help them with taking out the magic stone?"

"Hn? Ah, I guess so."

"Got it."

During that time Miduchi-sensei's lecture continued.

"It's mentioned in a variety of games but Treant are largely split into three categories. The ones that were originally just simple spirits or something close to that. Like the spirit of the tree, speaking in terms of Japan it would be something like Kodama or Tsukumogami and they're often beings that have a good feeling as they try to help you. Next is the type that comes out in Tolkien's famous books and it's a race called the Ent and obviously they're divided based on gender as well. It might have been created based on legends from around the world about the tree spirits I just mentioned. The next one is fine to say it's the same but for some reason that ended up becoming ferocious and in most cases whether it be games or otherwise they come out as opponents and monsters like this."

Ho~ho~ Toris, Bel, Gwine, and Basutorial were all nodding to themselves as they listened.

"This time was the worst third type of them. It was in an underground labyrinth, a dungeon after all. It should be fine to conclude that. But, it's considerably lucky. The lumber material you can get from Treants often have magical properties and if you produce bows or shields from them and..we ended up burning it quite a bit.."

Ah..Do..Don't look at me with those eyes.

I didn't know about it.

Look, everyone other you is making faces like it couldn't be helped right?

In the first place putting aside the equipment of a monster, you wouldn't normally think of making a part of their body into materials right?

If it was fur or a huge fang then it's not as if I wouldn't understand though.

Eh? You've mentioned it before?

Did I hear about something like that?

Ah, I heard about the ingredients and such for the medicine.

Ah, but you know, don't things taste better when burnt?

That's unrelated?

Ah, I see.

Sorry.

Suddenly when we noticed Zenom and the others were all whispering about something in a low voice by the side of the fallen Treant. It seems they noticed we've finished up our discussion.

"Umm..Madam, where in the world is this monster's magic stone..."

"Miduchi, around where is this things magic stone?"

Zulu and Zenom asked Miduchi.

Miduchi made a difficult face after being asked. I'm sure she doesn't know.

I guess that's only obvious.

It's a tree after all.

In the end we tried smashing the axe into the area seemed like the chest.

Since it was hard and the blade wasn't passing through so easily everyone wanted a saw.

As a test I had Zenom cut off the branches right arm(?) with his axe and checked the status and it came up as Treant Wood and after all just as Miduchi said with Identify it was coming up as something considerably valuable.

Since it couldn't be helped we decided to cut off and threw the thin branches that were largely grown from it's head and didn't seem like we could use before carrying the entire corpse that is the lumber together with us to the teleport room on the 8th floor and then we'd slowly take the magic stone out from it there. However, carrying this ended up being extremely difficult.

After tying a rope around it and dragging it along as we returned the way we originally came back to the teleport crystal the time (we most likely dragged it a distance of around 6-7 km) was already past midnight and regardless of the fact that we took some breaks while moving, we were all exhausted.

However, it was a huge help when Toris said, "Please tie the rope around this area. It's center of gravity is here." and instructed us on the various places to tie the rope. It seems that the Treant wood has different density based on the place so it was a completely different spot from the center of gravity everyone had guessed.

In the first place even if I say it's lumber it's in the tree stage before it's properly been processed so it's not a clean geometric shape. Even if the density wasn't all that different I don't think it would have been much different with how unreliable we are at measuring by eye.

It's plainly useful, 【Scale】. It was when I was thinking that and wondering if it could be used in any other words as I tried Identifying Toris's Scale once more and,

【Unique Ability: Scale; After using this ability, for the level of the ability multiplied by one minute....the division can be maintained perpetually so long as concentration is maintained and no other intrusions enter the operation. The MAX level expansion ability is that it becomes possible to use the ability on living things but bear in mind that clothes and equipment are processed as different targets.】

And it's there.

I wonder since when it was added to the display?

Rather than something like that, this is, if you use it on a person or monster wouldn't you be able to figure out the center of their gravity?

I guess that means he can see the center of Bel's gravity huh?

If they're using heavy metal armor then the center of gravity might be off but if it's leather armor then I'm sure it wouldn't be all that different.

If I have do something like Judo or Aikido I have no idea if he could do something like the air throw?

Maybe I'll have him try doing some hand-to-hand fighting the next time we're training?

Incidentally, while Zulu, Bel, Gwine, and I were dragging it along the way, Ralpa got tired and tried to sit down on the tree triggering Zenom's fury as he kicked her ass off. Take that~

.....

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 9

The Kafu(A stew-like cooking using pork and vegetables like potage. Of course it has Baldoggie in it) Giberuti made had just the right amount of salt as it tasted delicious to our exhausted bodies and since we're young we ended up unintentionally eating a large portion of it. I'm sure we'll just end up spending all of today trying to take out that huge Treant's magic stone without returning to the surface after all. We had him cook seconds of bacon and eggs and we cleanly devoured that as well.

It was troublesome so I just wanted to ignore the Minotaur but after all I'd like to take care of the toilet outside.

I also wanted to have a shower in a bright and liberating place.

Miduchi and Bel fired off arrows into the back of it's head until it was like a bee's nest and finished it up in no time at all.

Recently the Minotaur has only appeared with nothing but it's loincloth.

It's gradually deteriorated since the magnificent axe it had the first time and since around the 10th one the axes have been crude almost like it was from the stone age.

Somehow it's not as if it hasn't started to feel a bit pitiful.

Zulu and Angela take the magic stone out from the Minotaur's corpse without a word of complaint before dragging it off to the corpse pile in the back of the pillar. I don't know if it's because the atmospheric temperature feels like 15 degree C or so but in about five days the flesh started to rot and in less than one month it will turn to just bones. It seems that once it turns to bones it remains for a matter of years. Behind the pillar there's already over 30 Minotaur corpses and skeletons laying around.

I quickly took a shower and then fell asleep soon after.

I wanted to take things a bit easy the next morning but even then we all woke up around 7:00 am and gathered around the Treant we left in a corner of the room.

While Giberuti was making a sad face I used the spell {Transmute.Rock.To.Mud} on his favorite iron pot to change it into a mud form inside of a container I made from ice and started bleeding from my nose while making a saw. I was able to make a saw(I just hammered out some cast iron that was adequately molded and made blades on it) that's considerably more efficient than those circulating around Orth but looking at Giberuti's face and I somehow it feels a bit complicated.

Since there's a handle attached to it as iron material crushing Zulu's bastard sword would have had a higher purity on top of being high quality so we should have been able to get more materials from it and maybe even been able to make a chisel and hammer. It would have been fine to do that as well but swords are expensive. I couldn't bring myself to crush an item worth over 1,000,000 Z just to make a saw.

While I made the saw because it would be bad to damage the magic stone we couldn't bring ourselves to use it with a lot of momentum behind it. We couldn't do anything but use Zenom's axe to get to the inner layers and then carefully disassemble it.

It was already past noon when we finally somehow managed to get the magic stone out.

Ah, in the end it was behind the forehead of the face.

Thanks to that a considerable amount of the wood ended up becoming nothing more than valuable trash.

The value of the magic stone was 2,500,000 and actually felt a bit lacking. If we sell it for a proper price then it would be around 17,000,000 Z or so but I don't think we would be punished for hoping for a bit higher of estimate. The size is one size bigger than an ogres but the color is different. It's considerably close to white.

We were exhausted so we decided to deal with the lumber again next time and returned to the surface.

While climbing the stairs towards the surface I took out the magic stone we obtained from the Treant and held it in my hand. I don't know if he's there or not but I was thinking of bragging to Church-san.

Unfortunately Church-san wasn't there but I endured by bragging through reporting our battle results to a young man from the Baldukk Knight Group. Seeing the magnificent magic stone the eyes of the knight group member went wide in envy but he politely congratulated us and gave me information.

"This morning when {Gehenna.Flare} returned they were carrying a splendid magic stone as well. It was smaller than that but it was a color that didn't fall behind it. Supposedly they obtained from defeating a monster called the {Flesh Golem} in a room on the 3rd floor. It seems there was a member who was seriously injured as well but whether it's the {Slaughterers} or {Gehenna.Flare}, as expected of the top teams."

Oh! So those guys encountered the {Flesh Golem} as well!?

Well, they have a number of veterans with them so I'm sure they were able to win.

How much did it end up going for when we got it again?

I think it was around 4,000,000 ~ 5,000,000 or so.

Since I cashed it in after I was beaten down to the 14th floor my impression of it was pretty weak.

"Ah, come to think of it, it seems there's a party that still hasn't returned yet as well."

He~ But something like that happens every month so it's not really unusual. Well, just in case I guess I'll try asking who it was huh? Thinking that it was just when I was about to ask what fools ended up screwing up.

There was a single silhouette that approached us. It's the dwarf from {Verdure.Brotherhood}, Renbaru(Renbaru.Flameshaft).

"Do you know about {Black.Topaz}?"

There's no way I wouldn't know about them right.

..I can tell he didn't mean in that way just from looking at his face.

"What is it? The day before yesterday? Ah, I guess it would be three days ago or so we met them on the 7th floor but.."

Hearing that Renbaru squinted his eyes as if glaring at me and, "They still haven't returned from the dungeon. According to schedule they should have returned at latest yesterday. I can't believe it's the case but.." started saying something like that.

Those guys, they still haven't returned? On top of one dying there were some injured as well, if they were making the map while confirming things as they moved then I'm sure their movements would be slow. If they encounter any ogres and take breaks then wouldn't it take a considerable amount of time? It's common for the top teams to not return for 2-3 days and such. It seems that other teams even camp inside of the dungeon after all.

"Please don't say such bad jokes that could hurt someone's reputation. We just went to their aid when they fell into a dilemma and saved them you know?"

I said with a slightly angry tone of voice. It's only obvious right.

"Ah, is that so..Sorry. I was feeling a bit on the edge..Sorry about that. However, I see. If you don't know then that's fine. I apologize for intruding when you're exhausted."

Renbaru said that before turning and heading away from us walking towards a corner of the entrance plaza. There's a chair in the shade where he was going and it seems that's where he's waiting. After he mentioned something to Zofi, the slave of Viruhaima's that I saw once upon a time she quickly ran off somewhere. I guess her destination is Elm Tree Manor?

After quickly cashing in our magic stones other than the big game one from the Treant we returned to our inn and after relaxing for a short while a messenger came from {Verdure.Brotherhood}. I thought that would probably be the case so I didn't go outside.

"Greed-kun. I'm sorry but our leader Roberuto wants to talk to you. If you have time tonight would you come to Dorureon? We don't mind however many others come along as well. Also, if it's troublesome for you to go there then if you just designate a time and place we'll go there."

Oh Basu-san~(Basuraito.Kerutein) it seems you have it hard as usual.

The food of Dorureon is extremely appealing but I'm a bit tired so pardon me from anything heavy.

I'd really like to eat some Somen right around now.

It's hot after all.

"Is 6:00 pm at Murowa fine?"

"Got it. I think it will be myself and two others from our side that go."

"I understand."

While watching Basu's back as he left I thought for a moment. It's fine that {Verdure.Brotherhood} and {Black.Topaz} are in a cooperative relationship. It probably also has the meaning of rivaling us included in it as well. However, what about that level of concern?

I can't imagine that {Black.Topaz} would end up the prey of some monsters just like that. Of course ogres are strong but even they ended up spending some amount of days I don't know after teleporting into the 7th floor reaching that monster room without suffering any real damage at all. I don't think they would be done in so easily.

Let alone, if it was right after they had just lost one of their members. Wouldn't they just be more cautious than ever as they carefully proceed? If you calmly think about it then hasn't {Black.Topaz} only gone to the 7th floor two or three times right? I don't know if the reason they charged into the monster room was because they were letting their guards down or out of a sense of rivalry or whatever but I think they're just trying to return to their initial resolution as they slowly move ahead.

If it's sis Anderson then I'm sure she can do it and if she can't do it then I think she would have been by a monster long in the past and become excretions leaving just her magic stone.

Honestly speaking I think that after all they have plenty high enough of a skill level for them to reign over the town of Baldukk as a top party. Don't be making such an uproar over a party like that just returning from the dungeon 2~3 days late. If I use some extreme logic then even this time if the {Slaughterers} didn't have enough rope from the survival kits I have everyone carrying then when we defeated the Treant I would have ended up having to change Zulu's bastard sword into a saw on the spot for us to disassemble it there.

Even though you could say we don't have to worry about it for a short while after defeating the boss of a monster room, we would have ended up needing to select members to remain cautious of the surroundings and such, and we should have been considerably late in returning. If the day we had defeated the Treant was today then after all I think our schedule would have taken an extra 2~3 days.

We would have had to disassemble the Treant down to lumber that could be carried by one person and then slowly made several round trips carrying the heavy load back and forth to the teleport crystal.

In the evening the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} came back from the dungeon as well. It was just right so I instructed them to eat at Murowa today as well and sent Rodrick's combat slave Denda off to the restaurant to reserve it.

Eee~ old man Viruhaima.

I'll surround you with close to 30 people tonight.

I'll have you confess everything you know.

Well, I'm sure it's nothing significant though.

Occasionally I just want to enjoy old man Viruhaima's frightened face as the snack to go with my alcohol.

Chapter 265: Black Topaz 4

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 9

"And, what kind of business do you have?"

I completely reserved Murowa. I took a bit of a nap so my head feels refreshed as well.

There's several tables in the restaurant but we placed a four-person table in the center and had Viruhaima and Basu sit there, while Kamu(Kamain.Mishausu) and I sit across from them. Surrounding all of the members of the {Slaughterers} have assembled including the combat slaves.

Obviously I want everyone to put some psychological pressure on them but I harshly told them not to speak badly or move around a lot. Since I'm a noble who doesn't prefer unrefined behavior I didn't forget to tell everyone to give them a good glare on either Kamu or my sign.

Disrupting that chance partway through would be absurd.

In the first place these two would even quiet a crying child just seeing them, they're {Verdure.Brotherhoods} leader and sub-leader. Just like cheap threats don't have any effect on me it won't have any effect on them either. I'm sure what would be most effective is just completely ignoring them. Particularly, since they're aiming to catch up and overtake us {Slaughterers} if we just act like "we don't particularly care" and remain uninterested.

That's why I said to everyone, "Talk about some random stupid stories at a volume that we can just barely hear. It's no problem even if you laugh just a bit. However, don't take an attitude like you're openly making fun of them. Don't focus your interest over here. Just think we're air." Also, just in case I have Miduchi sitting in the corner while trying not to stand out as I asked her to use {Detect.Lie}. Her surroundings are fortified with Angela and the two former knight slaves.

"Gwine, why are you drinking tea? Eh? Hisu too?"

"Nn~ somehow or other. Ral why don't you stick with tea as well? Miduchisan, please put in some ice."

"Ice tea with ice in it is delicious too right."

"Denda, Karimu. You did a good job once again this time. It's fine if you eat something with Chire in it."

""Thank you very much. Master.""

"..It's about {Black.Topaz}."

Viruhaima said.

"Could you please tell us the date and situation of the last time you met them?"

Basu supplemented him.

It's not like it's anything to hide so I honestly explained it without covering up anything. In the afternoon three days ago, that we encountered them in front of a monster room on the 7th floor. And then, soon after the combat started, because Rotto(Rosutoru.Mirusutoron) suddenly collapsed they fell into a crisis so we decided to go to their aid as we were keeping an eye on things, and I carefully explained that.

"And, what is that {Mad Treant}..What in the world is that. It even was using magic?"

"If Al-san didn't continue restraining it with {Flame Thrower} then I think it would have been difficult."

"I, hit it with a {Flame Javelin}."

"The northern monster room on the 7th floor huh..Shit, if we can't clear the 7th floor once and then go back from reverse then..Shit!!"

"So Rotto had died.."

Basu made a sad expression as he said it. Viruhaima started cursing while making a bitter expression. By the way aren't you going to eat anything?

And then, I talked about how they turned down our offer to accompany them to the teleport crystal they used to get into the 7th floor. That's right, if they had just let us accompany them then I could have taken the express guide fee right. 7th floor*7 people*100,000Z(Guide fee)*5(Express charge). Roughly 25,000,000 Z is the bare minimum line. It's equivalent to 1~2 days of our earnings on the 7th floor. It's not particularly expensive. I'm sure they can afford it.

Mu, thinking about it like this and I feel like that fee setting is considerably balanced for things around the 7th floor as well.

"Jeru, do you want to go to Rukuso later?"

"No, I'd rather not..Also, a cheap place liek Rukuso, it's almost like going to get a disease."

"Ah, after all that's the case? Last month I requested a long sword from Fuggusu Sword Merchant so I'm a bit low on funds."

"Then honestly just don't go..Ah, Misu, after this, want to go drinking for a bit?"

"Was there anyone else injured?"

Basu made a concerned expression again.

"Kaku-san and Baru-san had some light injuries, Roru-san(Roreiru.Naruzomerin) seemed to have some light bruises. It wasn't anything significant."

While I was talking, Kamu was biting into a Baldoggie with an unconcerned face and washing it down with some bean tea. I bit into a Kazotto with lots of msutard on it and drank some bean tea as well. Delicious.

"Come to think of it where did Ruttsu go?"

"Isn't it to the toilet?"

"He sure has to piss a lot right. Even today on the 4th floor~"

"Really, stop with that during a meal."

"What about Rotto's corpse? N..Nn!!!..Did they just take out the magic stone?"

Viruhaima said. It seems he's a bit irritated. He started obviously coughing out loud as well.

"No, Baru-san was carrying the corpse. It seems they split up his equipment and were carrying it."

"Hey, what are you doing tomorrow?"

"Hmn, I feel a bit bad for Cathy but I want to show my face in the factory for a bit right. After hearing Miduchi-san's opinion we thought up something new together with Larry."

"Something delicious!?"

"Of course it is."

"Eh? What? A new menu? Larry, have you already eaten it?"

"No, the two of us are still in the stage of thinking about it, Ginger-san."

"Leader, wouldn't it be best to just honestly proceed with things here?"

Basu whispered into Viruhaima's ear with a slightly worried face. Since the surroundings have gotten a bit noisy it seems he raised the volume of his voice a bit. I can somehow hear what they're saying.

"Oh, haven't you already gotten pretty good at using the fork and knife?"

"Fu..I can't embarrass master as the head slave, Koloil-sama."

"..Sh..Shit, to this guy..I can't accept this.."

"But leader."

"I know.."

Ihihi~ I don't really get it but watching as Viruhaima makes that mortified face and I feel pretty happy.

Well, I guess I'll leave the amusement at around here huh? Kamu was making a face as if to say not to corner them too much as well.

I used my left hand to scratch my left cheek and (the sign to be quiet) and slowly opened my mouth.

"Please relax. I haven't had any alcohol to drink, the maintenance of my equipment is perfect as well."

My voice seemed to echo strangely loud inside of Murowa that had suddenly gone deadly silent.

This time, since I thought it was necessary I forbid a few people from drinking alcohol. The ones who I felt were absolutely necessary were Miduchi and Gwine, Zulu, Giberuti, also Kamu. It doesn't even need to be mentioned for Miduchi on the end of combat strength and mana. Gwine is necessary to getting a grasp on our location in the dungeon. Zulu is my head slave after all and he has power as well. In the first place he doesn't drink. Giberuti is just a complement to Zulu taking into consideration the chance we need more manual labor so it's just better to have him though. Kamu was the leader of the former {Sun.Ray} and while it's temporary when there's no members of the {Slaughterers} joining them she acts as the leader of the {Butchers}. Also, she acts as proof that the {Slaughterers} have completely absorbed the former {Sun.Ray} and have them under our control.

"Nu..kuku, this guy..How far..Ah~ really! That's right, I'm requesting for you to save {Black.Topaz}!"

Viruhaima's face twisted as he spit out with a mortified expression.

"..Ho? Why are you requesting that from me? Is the {Verdure.Brotherhood} not planning to move? You're in a cooperative relationship with {Black.Topaz} right?"

I had predicted that it would be a request to rescue {Black.Topaz} at about a 50/50 probability but it's simply that I'm interested and I wanted to hear what kind of reason they had behind it. It's mean but the {Slaughterers} are above the {Verdure.Brotherhood} so I also felt like I wanted to have him say it as well.

"Of course we intend to move as well. Greed-kun. Our preparations have already been finished. The last person who's whereabouts we didn't know Renba(Renbaru.Korumain), we just received contact that he was found in a private room at Honey Collection. After this is over we're going to the dungeon as well."

After he looked at Viruhaima who was sitting next to him with a disappointed looking face, Basu shrugged his shoulders and said. Incidentally Honey Collection is the name of a brothel that contends for the number one or two spot in Baldukk. He continued, "We've been entering the dungeon in shifts with {Black.Topaz}. After one of us returns we always set a time to spend one day getting together to exchange information. Of course, it was accepted if there's a bit of leeway before or after the scheduled day but as expected three days is..the limit. If we were to go running now then it would end up taking another three days to reach the 7th floor. If it's you then you can do it a bit faster right?"

And said before looking at Viruhaima's face once more.

..Rescue huh...

That time {Black.Topaz} should have merged on that route. It should limit the search range quite a bit. There's roughly 200 locations you can teleport into from the 6th to the 7th floors. Among those over half of them don't lead to a monster room. There's only about 20 that lead to the northern monster room.

The location we started our route from ended up merging along the way as well so taking into consideration the time they haven't returned it should have been a location with a reasonable amount of distance. If we use our precise map then we can narrow down the teleport crystal they used to a number that can be counted one on hand and still have fingers remaining.

Certainly it's just as Basu says, if it's us then even at our normal pace we can rush into the 7th floor on the evening of the second day. If I shave off our resting periods to the limit then assuming we depart tomorrow morning I think it's possible for us to rush into the 7th floor sometime in the middle of the night. If it's just me then it would be much faster.

If we rush to clear the 7th floor(if possible then it would be more efficient to teleport into a location connected ot the northern monster room), then if we follow after the route {Black.Topaz} used from the 6th floor to clear up to the northern monster room then...

"Don't you have something to say?"

I already know the fact that you and {Black.Topaz} are allies. Though there's some words you need to say right. It's "{Please}". Also, the guide fee. We'll be moving our members as well so we won't move for free.

"Leader, it seems that Greed-kun has already seen through it. If you remain quiet for too long it'll leave a bad impression."

"Chi...If you already know about it then there's no point in hiding it any longer than this. That's right. I'm the one who sold your information to his majesty the King. Together with Reddo(Reddo.Anderson) that is."

Wh..What?!? I thought it was a bit admirable how fast that old man King picked up on information so quickly but he was even sucking the information out of the top teams, these guys! The members of the {Slaughterers} almost "unintentionally" ended up saying something.

It required a tremendous amount of willpower for me to keep my expression from moving as well. Thanks to that things in regards to the {Please} and money went flying off somewhere.

Putting that aside, I haven't done anything I would be particularly troubled by having it leaked to the King. I haven't thought about becoming enemies with him or discussed any strategies or anything with them either. It's at best what floor we've gone to or that we're earning quite a bit, or our combat strength is considerably high, it shouldn't be anymore information that. It's nothing to get angry over but it's certainly not amusing.

Kamu put her elbows on the table and stuck one of her feet out from under the table. Starting with the members who noticed that the {Slaughterers} all started glaring at Viruhaima.

Being glared at all at once Viruhaima flinched just a bit but soon after collected himself.

"Anymore than this I can't discuss until you clear out the people, it's something that can't be helped talking about it now. We'll pay 30,000,000 Z as compensation for rescuing {Black.Topaz}. However, the survival of the leader Reddo is an absolute condition and if you can't achieve that it's a reduction."

Ah, that's right. The money. Money. Well, a reduction can't be helped. The express guide fee is done under the principle that you can bring the target out of the dungeon alive after all. Viruhaima said, "This is the advance payment if you'll accept" and placed 15 gold coins in a pile on the table. How hearty.

However, I thought the distance between these two teams was close since long ago but..they were doing the same sort of things huh? Recently they've putting appeal on the fact that they're cooperating and such but in reality weren't they allies since quite a while back? Even then I feel it's a bit strange that he would suddenly throw down a large sum of money, but well I guess it's fine.

"That's fine. Miduchi, Gwine, Zulu, Giberuti, Kamu..Hmn, it seems you haven't had any alcohol so Ginger, Misu, Jeru, Rodrick. Return to your inn right away and start making preparations to enter the dungeon. I'll pay 5% of the compensation for the rescue. Gather at the entrance in one hour. Ah, Miduchi you remain together with me just like this. Sorry but Angela, Henry, Mekku, you go with Gwine to Boil Manor and pick up Miduchi and my equipment. Go ahead"

Giberuti's started scrutinizing the meal placed on his plate. There's about one days portion of food left remaining in Giberuti's room so he must be intending on bringing it along. If that wasn't the case then we'd end up having to make use of the non-daily use food in our survival kits. I still haven't made the hard biscuits.

Bel is together with Toris as they've started negotiations with the old man of Murowa to take over their remaining stock of Baldoggie.

Everyone who's name I called out other than Giberuti has long since ran off outside.

"Well then, shall we hear what you have to say? It's fine even at Elm Tree Manor."

Leaving behind the remaining members who had been drinking alcohol with slightly mortified faces we left Murowa.

.....

After being let through into Vurihaima's room in the Elm Tree Manor, Miduchi and I heard a bit of an unexpected story.

"It's not known by very many but Reddo is an illegitimate child of the King. When the King was even younger than you are now..or around the same age I guess, she's the first child he ended up making while he was still a squire in the knight group. Since it was before he was married it would look bad for their reputation so it was never made public."

"Even though it's an illegitimate child that wasn't made public, just as expected from her being his first daughter at the same time as she became an adult it seems she was allowed to enter the second knight group but supposedly she didn't know about it until she was one step away from receiving investiture as a true knight."

"She was young at the time and I'm sure she had a rebellious spirit as well. She must have felt like she was given preferential treatment from the influence of her parents. Thanks to that she retired from the knight group right before receiving investiture and brought along the children of squires who used to serve her family since the past as they became adventurers. Such a waste~"

"For a period of time she was entering the dungeon together with me as well. During the time until she called out the squires she was familiar with she was a member of the {Verdure.Brotherhood}. Though it was only for about one year or so."

"I can't really say anything too great though because it's thanks to that the great I was able to joyously be remembered by the King and ended up becoming his dog."

"It's not particularly like we got into a fight. She just wanted to get independent all on her own."

"After she retired from the knight group it seems she was on bad terms with both the King and her family for a short while but they must have reconciled. It seems they've had a connection again since several years back."

"No matter what don't reveal this conversation. Only a small number of people know about it. I'm sure even you don't want to buy the displeasure of the King right? I don't want to end up buying his displeasure just leaving her to die either. I somehow want to save her. For that sake I'll do anything. I can lower my head as much as it's needed. I'm begging you. Please save her. It's fine even if you can't make it in time just retrieve the magic stone."

After just listening to what we could, since we're lacking in time we ended up leaving soon after. It seems that they're going to the dungeon as well. I confirmed with Miduchi afterwards that it doesn't seem to have been a lie. Furthermore, in regards to my information it seems there was a request from the King two years or so ago and he was reporting on it every time I made some sort of movement but just as expected the details weren't anything significant.

Together with Miduchi, the two of us spent a bit of time talking on the way towards the entrance plaza from Elm Tree Manor.

"Hey~ why do you like that fellow?"

"Eh? It looks like I like her?"

"Yeah. Three days ago when {Black.Topaz} entered the monster room you seemed really happy to go to their aid didn't you?"

"..Well, it's true I don't hate her."

I think there's a distance between Heaven and Earth between, "don't hate" and "pleased with" or "like" though.

That time, weren't you smiling?

"I just felt like she seemed a bit like myself in the past..She's past 30 and single after all."

What's that? The so-called sharing each other's misery? I seem to have been making a slightly strange expression. It seems Miduchi saw her overlapped with herself in the past. However, there's a mountain of people among nobles that are single past their 30s. It's because if they don't start up their own household as a new noble and remain as a sub-Noble then they can live a comfortable life without having to pay any taxes. Though it looks bad for their reputation.

Even if I were to marry someone other than the head of some noble family(otherwise a person who was given an unofficial promise to be the head in the future) right now then I would end up as a member of the commoner social standing(If I end up the head then it would just normally be Head of the Greed Family in name and if the other person is the head then it would be the equivalent standing) and other than the luxury tax I would end up having to pay another 10% in taxes as well. Even sister now that she's failed to get married should be aiming to become a company command of the first knight group. Since the point that she became a true knight she's a vassal of the Head of the Duke Rombert Family that is the King in both name and essence so she's guaranteed to be a commoner but if she could become a company commander then she could become a Viscount after all.

"Hey, don't make fun of her too much. It's fine if you think whatever you want if you want to pity her all on your own though."

"No way! I haven't done something like make fun of her."

"Then that's fine though."

"Princess Knight Reddo huh..She's a bit past that age though I guess..Fuhi"

"Huh? What is it? Are you envious?"

Did she admire being a princess? Though she's already at a good age, right now she's young after all~ I guess that might be the case for women.

"Hmph..I see a princess. Do you admire her? A princess is impossible but something a bit better than that is.."

"No..No that's wrong! I don't particularly admire her!"

What the, turning so red.

Wanting to be a princess, isn't that a bit cute.

It wasn't just the {Slaughterers} in the entrance plaza but the {Verdure.Brotherhood} as well. Miduchi and I started putting on our rubber protectors again since this afternoon.

"Listen well, we're doing a forced march. We'll repeat teleporting until we reach a location that's less than 10 km. Also, we aren't walking. Fundamentally you can leave all of the monsters that appear to Miduchi, Zulu, and I. Everyone else focus on protecting Giberuti and yourselves. After that, including the room bosses we won't be gathering magic stones. It's a waste of time after all. It depends on the teleport luck but we're aiming to clear each floor in one hour. We'll have a 30 minute break in the teleport room on each floor. We're making it to the 7th floor by tomorrow morning!"

Everyone other than Miduchi and Zulu was speechless. Gwine and Giberuti as well.

"Hey, what's with those faces? For what reason are you running? We said the courses on each floor are at longest 10 km right? When we doing running aren't you going a whole 20 km."

I put my hand on my hip while looking around. Putting aside Gwine, I'm sure it'll be hard for Giberuti.

"Alright, let's go!"

""""Yes!!!""""

That's a good reply.

The 3rd floor, No, I'll drag you down to the 4th floor.

When we get to around there I guess I'll reconsider it huh?

Leaving Miduchi as Zulu and I carry Gwine along ahead is also one hand we can play.

.....

"Alright, 51 minutes. Take a 30 minute break."

There were parties taking a break in the teleport crystal room of the 1st floor but knowing full well it's shameful everyone fell over in a corner breathing heavily. The distance we covered was roughly 8 km and the current time is 9:20 pm or so.

We quite literally either completely ignored or blew away all the monsters as we forcefully broke through coming here. The moment I discovered any monsters further down the hall with Identify vision, Miduchi and I would dash(Of course, in the case when there's no traps between) to finish them off. Even if I don't use something like ice we can manage through the 1st and 2nd floors.

Around the 3rd floor putting aside the monsters in the halls, in order to deal with the room bosses I need to freeze them as well..I guess we can somehow manage with attack spells huh?

.....

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 10

The time is 12:30 am. The date has already changed.

Everyone doesn't seem like they can hide their excitement over clearing through to the teleport room on the 3rd floor in about four hours.

Furthermore, Giberuti ended up going down so Zulu and I took turns carrying him. Thanks to that Giberuti seems to have recovered quite a bit.

However...

"Misu, can you keep going? If it's impossible then here" I can keep going! I'm alright."

I see.

Then, I guess we'll go after a break.

I guess seeing her condition, Jeru and Rodrick gathered up their energy as well.

...

.....

And then 5:30 am after daybreak.

We arrived at the teleport room on the 5th floor.

As expected when it comes to the 4th and 5th floors it's gotten difficult to run through.

We ran through the places where zombies and such are behind the hidden doors all at once but normally it's at most walking quickly.

"That ice, it's outrageous right."

Kamu said while sighing.

"What in the world was that! It's amaz~ing!"

Jeru seemed to be tired as well but he can't hide his excitement. That's not unreasonable. In one of the altar rooms in order to confine the 8 {Silvan Wolves} that were the summoned monster I ended up creating two times the amount of ice on a level equivalent to 5.

"If you can use {Cure All} then that level.."

I made a bitter smile while saying it. As expected I've started to get pretty tired as well. There's no need to act like I've used a tremendous amount of mana.

"You should start being careful with your mana pretty soon. Isn't it getting sever already?"

Misu looks to be having a difficult time. Without even taking off her leather armor she said it while falling over into the bed.

However, one more push, those sorts of feelings are showing on her face.

"Fu..Just that much, didn't I say it was easy? It's fine."

I took off my helmet and said while removing my protectors.

Next is the 6th floor so we took turns taking showers and then had a rest for about three hours.

First we had Gwine who was severely fatigued take a shower and then had her sleep as long as she could.

Next was Jeru, Kamu, Zulu, Miduchi, me, Ginger, Giberuti, Rodrick, and Misu in that order.

"However..he's quite something.."

"Yeah, for him to have to this extent..We were almost completely useless."

"Me too..In the end I could count the number of times I used my spear.."

"The battle is already over by the time we catch up after all.."

Ginger and Kamu are grumbling.

If you ask what Rodrick is up to and I guess because of the fatigue he's been silent from start to end and up until a moment ago he was gulping down water and now he's snoring.

That's right, the {Slaughterers} first party is still impossible if you can't keep up.

Give it your best.

Author's note: (TL: Long background on Anderson not half-assed translation)

Viscount Anderson Family is a not very wealthy small territory in the North of the Kingdom but the Lord is an Elf.

Reddo.Anderson's mother was a member of the supply unit of the first knight group in those days.

The King managed to convince her into doing it by saying they wouldn't have a child because their races are different.

The mother as well thought, well whatever, and just decided to play with fire.

They were both young.

However, of all things!

Whether it be a twist of fate, or the love(desire) of the two it bore fruit!

Since she ended up inheriting the blood of her father the King she was born as a human.

She even properly inherited the shape of the ears(?) so it was impossible to talk out of it.

However, it's not permitted for the next King of Rombert Kingdom to marry a woman of a different race which is hard to give birth.

Anything can be done if it was the second or third wife but at the time he was still just a squire of the first knight group and before he had received investiture so it was said to be too soon.

It's not like the King himself did it out of love either.

It's the same for the mother.

There they solved all of their problems with money.

Her family Viscount Anderson's Family was greatly pleased with this as well.

Every year they were given a considerable amount of child support.

For the time being the child that was born was named as the child of the head of the family then.

She ended up as a sisters with her mother.

Obviously, it's not very comfortable in the household.

Though that's the case, she inherited the blood of the prince(at the time) so she was given a reasonable education and thrown into the second knight group.

Of course, to the King she's his original eldest child.

By that point he had already inherited the throne so he made use of the power of the state.

He probably felt bad for treating her too badly.

After that Reddo gave it her best to reach close to a true knight.

Entering itself was something like backdoor entrance but after that was done with her own abilities.

But, before receiving investiture the King himself said, "No~ as expected of my daughter".

And with that sort of feel after asking even further...Uwa~n so it wasn't my own abilities(though it really was)! Even though my family are elves only I was a Hyumu! I thought it was strange! I heard I was adopted but I wasn't even adopted! The one I thought was just a much older sister was actually my mother(the mother ended up marrying some random Baron family's XXth son and is living carefree)! Whatever happened to the story about my parents being greatly loyal squires who passed away in the war(what her family told her)!

I'll quit! Yeah, I'll quit!! It's worst being show favoritism by that irresponsible old man!

I'll rebel and become an adventurer!

Chapter 266: Black Topaz 5

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 10

However you know, all said and done we were able to make it to here at favorable pace.

I think it's quite the good pace considering Giberuti ended up going down along the way and we had to carry him while moving.

It's big that Zulu is wearing the leather armor he used to use in the past as well.

As expected if it was the banded-mail we took from {Bright.Blade} this speed would have been impossible.

And then, just before 9:00 am we arrived at the 6th floor.

This time we managed to teleport into a location that's roughly 7 km from the teleport crystal.

It's considerably good luck to pull this spot on the first try.

If it's here then it's very possible for us to enter the 7th floor this morning.

Zenom and Miduch lead the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} as they just cleared through this 6th floor a number of times the other day. I thought they would already have been over some of their aversion to the teleport traps but it seems the previously psychological burden isn't going to disappear so easily. Certainly if I were to see my allies disappear right in front of my eyes to some unknown location then I might end up with a trauma similar to them as well.

Teleport traps are frightening but if you were to ask me I'm more afraid of the monsters that make use of those suddenly attack almost like an ambush. We have no choice but to remain on guard. Consequently on this floor rather than "running through" we just proceeded by speed walking.

Though Miduchi said, "It's certainly a bit slow but we're still clearing through at a considerably high speed."... I can't even remember when it was anymore when we would pass through slowly one at a time and spend a total of several minutes just to get by. I'll accept that we've make tremendous progress compared to them though.

Normally we move slower as they nervously stick to the wall and follow behind but this time we weren't lowering our speed for that Ginger, Jeru, and the others at all. Gwine just acts like she's looking at the map for a bit and says, "The part sticking out of the wall over there has a teleport trap about 3 meters ahead of it" and then we all walk casually past it along the wall without lowering our pace.

For the sake of caution I wanted to turn around but (Particularly on the side of a trap in the worst case a boar appears there and someone gets knocked into the trap it would be difficult) I even endured that. If I don't do this then they'll eternally maintain the trauma and every time they have to pass a teleport trap they'll turn pale while barely unable to advance.

I thought if they could conquer it here then it might have some influence on the other members with the same type of trauma.

While Ginger and Jeru are probably pale and barely advancing, without even turning around I faced forward with my pace the same while saying, "Anyone who's slow will be left behind. If it's impossible then return. If it's from here then you can quickly return back to the 5th floor and there's no monsters. If you run it won't even take 5 minutes." before walking off. Kamu, Misu, and Rodrick were trying to say something but I didn't pay it any mind.

And then, the Ginger and Jeru they were worried about followed after us just a bit late. We're walking as well and they know that if you walk along the edge of the hall you can pass by without getting caught in the trap so it's only obvious though. However, compared to the time when I had entered {Sun.Ray} it's tremendous progress. It's quite something.

Well that's great.

Starting next time I can properly remain cautious after all.

However, we were only able to advance smoothly for the first 30 minutes or so and after that along the way we suddenly were attacked by {Cave Boars}. The first time the {Cave Boar} appeared from the front so Zulu and I finished it off with Miduchi's magic as support. However, the second time was from the rear. That time the ones who were in the back was Jeru and Misu but it seems they had just a bit of good luck as well. The moment the {Cave Boar} appeared it was just as Giberuti had turned around to hand them some Baldoggie as a snack.

He was surprised but thanks to Giberuti calmly sticking the wall while shouting "Behind!!" and Jeru dealing with the charge of the boar covering for Misu we were able to make it this far without anyone suffering any injuries.

Without any large trouble, and the power enemy {Quad-handed Apes} never appearing as the boss of a room, we arrived at the teleport crystal in the center room at about 11:00 am. The {Cave Great Boar} in the room along the way Miduchi and I used {Detect.Life} to figure out the number and their location before using attack spells the moment we had visibility to injure their legs and deal with them all.

It seems Kamu and the others think that Miduchi and I have frighteningly sharp intuition.

Adding to that, it seems the fact that were overlooking boss class magic stones(they can be sold for roughly 150,000~250,00 Z each) from the 6th floor is a regret as well. Obviously I regrets over it as well. I want to gather them all. They would all add up to over 1,000,000 Z I'm sure...

"Take a 30 minute break. It's the last break so properly rest. Giberuti prepare just the Baldoggie. Ah, it's fine to just line them up in the frying pan."

Everyone's quietly resting their bodies. Giberuti's taking his wooden rack that he left to Zulu back and started adjusting the belt on it as well. This time we're expecting several injured people so he's coming along to the 7th floor as well. Though it's not limited to just injured people that we'll have to carry.

Of course I guess you could say, the camp site of {Black.Topaz} was left in the same condition as that morning.

It seems we haven't just missed them.

.....

"It's here. We're finally in the correct location."

On our 17th time teleporting in we finally managed to get to a location that leads to the northern monster room.

There's roughly 6 km to the northern monster room.

In order to get to the place where we came from the other day we have to clear through the northern monster room once but it's possible to pass through the ogre mage room without fighting by just moving along the wall.

It took another 30 minutes to get up to here. It hurts that we ended up wasting some time but if the teleport luck is bad we would have had to clear through one of the other monster rooms and then pass through the 7th floor teleport room before going back over to the monster room on the northern side. As a result it's certainly the fastest method but I feel like we would be hurrying a bit too much.

"Alright, with me at the lead, Zulu is behind on the right, Rodrick on the left, behind Zulu on the right is Jeru, behind Rodrick is Ginger, behind me is Gwine and then behind her is Giberuti. Behind Giberuti is Kamu and Misu. Miduchi follow after at the very rear. The interval is 5 meters. We'll use this as the base. Let's go."

Several minutes after I started running.

There's something I suddenly thought of.

If a bit after we pass through the northern monster room what would happen if I make a large noise using the spell {Audible Clamor}?

I feel like the ogres in the halls would approach wondering what the noise is. If {Black.Topaz} is camping somewhere or injured and unable to move as they standby somewhere then they might notice the reinforcements. Even if that isn't the case I think it's worthwhile just by pulling the attention of the ogres away from {Black.Topaz}.

In order to not surprise everyone from suddenly using it, I stopped moving for a moment and after conveying that, Jeru and Misu were against it. They were saying not to use my mana for something like that. They were hoping for me to reserve it for the combat with ogres. In reverse Kamu, Ginger, and Rodrick supported it.

"Jeru, Misu. Well just watch. If Greed-kun is saying it himself then I'm sure it's fine."

"Look at everyone else from the {Slaughterers}. They're making calm faces."

"..."

Ginger and Kamu both said that while Rodrick isn't saying anything in particular.

"You all, what were you listening to in our meetings up until now? If you heard the reports from the {Slaughterers} then it should have been plenty for you to realize it?"

"That's right. Didn't Ral say it as well? That even she's never seen Greed-kun being serious."

Wha!? Huh? Don't screw with me, what in the world has she been watching up until now, that shitty brat!

Did I look like I was slacking and not serious!?

I've fought seriously countless times. Even that time when I was in {Sun.Ray} I was seriously when I fought against those last ogre mages. That time there were people injured in the {Slaughterers} so I couldn't afford to be acting composed. I've always been serious and greatly diligent.

Does she seriously think that firing off powerful spells no one has ever seen before in rapid succession or recklessly charging into things is being serious, that idiot? Don't be mistaking seriousness with desperation. If you have that sort of brats way of thinking you won't have any success. If you think that being serious is giving all have as if your life depends on it and fighting with complete devotion then you'll end up a soldier for the rest of your life.

Of course even I've gotten desperate when fighting before. The time when I changed the {Vampire} into dust I was as desperate as desperate can be, I was giving it all I had as if my life depended on it, the amount of mana I used in the spell was way beyond a lavish feast. If you don't call that desperation without thinking anything about what comes next, then what would you?

Though I say that, it's probably just talk again...

I'm sure Ralpa is that much of an idiot.

Or maybe she's mixing up seriousness and using up all of one's strength.

After all it seems she's from "Hatsudai Academy High School"~ Not that I know about it though.

In order to not have to get desperate and use all of your strength fighting as if your life depends upon it that's the reason why you have a brain right. The {Horned Bear} when I was a brat and then the {Vampire} and {The.Gazer} since coming to Baldukk. I never want to have to enter that sort of combat to the limit again...Even if I say that as long as we continue exploring this dungeon I'm sure it's possible we'll fall into similar circumstances after this as well.

I'm sure there's plenty of situations where a party gets ambushed by monsters in the dungeon and falls into an unfavorable situation. That itself I'm sure would be a situation like being attacked by an unpredictably strong monster or an attack by a huge swarm. Whether it's Jeru or Miduchi if someone from my party falls into a crisis that's the time for me to get frantic and get it my all once more, I'm sure I'll fight mustering all of my strength.

"What is it?"

I guess I must have been making a strange expression. Miduchi called out to me.

"No, it's nothing.."

"In any case, Jeru and Misu I won't forgive any objections. Obey the leader."

I don't know whether or not she noticed my face(I think it's probably unrelated) but Kamu said that to Jeru and Misu. Yeah, I overlooked it because we're not in combat but normally this place is the middle of the 7th floor where it wouldn't be strange no matter how tense we get.

"On the 7th floor here it's bright so we have good visibility, if we properly maintain vigilant then I'm sure we won't be ambushed so easily. Miduchi don't let your guard down from any direction. Let's go."

And I just said that to them before hurrying ahead.

.....

We passed through the northern monster room by following along the outer wall and arrived at the entrance we previously encountered {Black.Topaz}.

Just from what I can tell nothing has changed.

With the exception of when we passed through the monster room, since we hurried up to here the time was just a bit past noon.

"We'll have lunch later. Let's go."

We advanced down the wilderness like hall from the monster room and about 100 meters ahead entered the forest.

The forest should last for about 150 meters.

There's probably an ogre somewhere in this forest.

If it gets caught in my {Detect.Life} then there's no way for it to run.

The moment I detect it I'll dash towards the ogre at full speed and before anyone other than Zulu can catch up finish it off instantly just like up until now.

If there's more than three of them then I'll use magic but if it's two then I can finish them off with my bayonet.

After passing through the forest some shrubs continue for about 100 meters.

Ahead of that is a forest again.

I targeted the top of a tree as far as I could see and used the spell {Audible Clamor}.

Even though the halls of the 7th floor are considerably wide and the ceiling is high, in the end it's shaped like a tunnel.

Wouldn't the magic sound reach pretty far?

A large rupturing sound echoes through the hall on the 7th floor.

It should be plenty if we use {Audible Clamor} every 500 meters to 1 km apart.

Though it's just my intuition.

In less than another 1 km we should reach the fork-path that {Black.Topaz} came down from the teleport location they started on the 7th floor.

In about 10 minutes we arrived at the forked-path.

There was nothing particularly different up to here.

We beat down all of the ogres we encountered.

As expected since they're ogre magic stones the amount is what it is so it's a waste but it's fine if we take our time returning to gather them after saving {Black.Topaz}.

Most likely but after {Black.Topaz} split up with us they were carrying their allies corpse so along with being careful of monsters they were probably advancing a lot slower than normally.

Wouldn't it take about 2 hours from the monster room up to here I guess?

I called out to Gwine and she confirmed that there's a high possibility that this connects to the teleport crystal {Black.Topaz} used to get to here.

That time, on our way the corpses of the ogres that seemed to have been defeated by {Black.Topaz} were discovered a bit closer to the monster room.

There's three places where we've confirmed teleport crystals ahead of this forked-path.

{Black.Topaz} should have teleported in using one of those and they should have been progressing towards that teleport crystal.

.....

When we proceeded about 2 km from the starting fork we discovered traces of a camp.

It was in a location along the wall of the hall where some rocks were.

They must have spent the night here that day.

If their numbers were decreased and carrying a corpse as they remained on guard I guess this is about it.

There was several traces of combat on the way up to here but the magic stones were taken out of the ogre's corpses so it's definitely not a conflict between ogres.

No, it's not like I've seen ogres fighting among themselves before so I don't know though.

I've only ever seen them beating up on goblins.

Whether it's traces of {Black.Topaz}'s combat on the outward journey and trip back isn't clear though.

After that roughly 1 km.

About 2 km ahead of here is the forked-path to the closest teleport crystal to the monster room what we {Slaughterers} call the super lucky "win".

As expected it was too close so we thought, "it's most likely not here" but if {Black.Topaz} was wiped out on their way back then it's possible.

We need to confirm it.

We carefully investigated up to where the teleport crystal should be(it's not like we used that one this time so we can't see or touch it) but it ended with just killing off an ogre and goblins.

Ahead of this there's only a few places with dead ends.

We ran back to the forked-path from just now and then started down a different path.

Along the way there's several forked-paths but they're all dead ends.

In the middle of despair while carrying a corpse to the surface it's unlikely to think they would try to do mapping of all the split paths.

We ignored all of those forked-paths and then ran another 2 km or so.

Of course I'm still periodically using {Audible Clamor} and having Miduchi and Gwine use it as well.

We're using the time they spend concentrating for the spells as a rest break.

And then we're coming up on another forked-path leading to a teleport crystal.

That teleport crystal is about 1.5 km from here.

This one is close to a "win" as well.

We couldn't find anything out of place on the way down from the forked-path.

After returning and advancing about 100 meters ahead we found traces of a camp again.

Unexpectedly there was also traces of someone spitting up blood.

I thought they hadn't progressed very far but I guess someone else was injured.

I guess they were injured in combat with one of the ogres that respawned?

I don't know who it is but it seems to be a serious injury that even Anderson, Kaku, Roru, or Marin can't heal with spells.

If they fought then they must have been using attack spells and it should take some time to recover as well.

If they're still carrying them then I'm sure like this their pace would have gotten considerably slow.

In the traces of combat along the way there were newer corpses of ogres that started appearing.

It seems they're giving it their best.

And then after advancing another 3 km we found traces of a camp.

With this it's become definite that they were still alive in the night of the day before yesterday.

I guess they somehow managed to make up to here while remaining on guard and carrying the heavy burden of Rotto's corpse.

They might have been taking a break to recover mana every time after they finished combat.

We decided to have sobagaki and Baldoggies for a bit late lunch here.

They were moving a lot slower than I had imagined.

They didn't just struggle with the monster room but it seems struggling with all the ogres that started respawning on their way back raised their caution quite a bit.

According to Gwine there's another 7 km to the last teleport crystal candidate we have.

They departed for the 7th floor before 5:00 am that day.

We passed through the 7th and 8th floors and ended up encountering them in the evening on our second trip through.

If they smoothly entered combat on their way in and didn't get caught up in investigating the forked-paths on the way to the monster room then after all their teleport crystal would be the last candidate.

Their movement speed is slow so they might need another night.

"If it's like this then they're probably worn-out but alive."

"If that isn't the case then we'll be troubled. The request fee is depending on it."

Misu and Jeru were saying something like that but they aren't letting their guard down as they scan the surroundings with a serious expression.

"Really..Putting aside the money, isn't it only obvious it's better for them to be alive?"

Rodrick retorted with an amazed tone of voice but it seems he thinks it's a joke.

"Why are you saying such softhearted things. They have the skills to make it to the 7th floor. It's more beneficial for us for them to be dead..But if that's the case then the reduction in request fee.."

Ginger grumbled with a troubled voice.

"Stop pointlessly chattering. Now then, a bit more. Let's go."

Miduchi reprimanded everyone like that.

After advancing another 4 km we discovered traces of a camp again.

With this it means they were definitely alive until last night.

On the way up to here there was traces of combat several times and just the blood was dry but the decay of the corpses hadn't started.

"It should be in another 3 km or so. Let's hurry."

After hearing Gwine's words we all started running.

And then along the way around the time we were going to pass through the forest I got a reaction for something with {Detect.Life}.

The number is 2.

I poured MP into distance and(even then it's less than normally though) extended it to about double so it was about 200 meters ahead.

After using it consecutively once more and it seems they're moving over here.

Different than {Party-ization} it's not very user-friendly right.

I guess they're ogres?

After all that's the case.

They came running out from the dense forest.

At almost the same time I ran out into the area with waist-high grass like a field.

I can see the 2 ogres running towards me with their heavy footsteps.

I finish off one with {Stone Arbalest Missile}.

One more shot, and just when I thought that a {Stone Arbalest} came flying from my side.

When the ogre tried to evade it I felt like the trajectory shifted just a bit.

It's the same {Stone Arbalest Missile} as my own.

It's Miduchi.

The moment I thought I turned around one and shouted "Hurry!" before running at full speed.

That ogre is most likely a scout.

It must have come to check after noticing the {Audible Clamor}.

This is bad.

The fact that there's an ogre between us and {Black.Topaz} means...

Even in the best situation...

No, I'll stop thinking for now.

We need to hurry even just a second faster.

I run past the side of the fallen ogres.

Hurry.

I run through the field and entered the forest ahead of that.

I quickly used {Detect.Life}.

Just as expected there was a reaction.

The number is 11.

The distance is about 100 meters ahead.

Since Rotto should be dead the number of survivors in {Black.Topaz} should be 7 people.

Can I still make it in time!?

"We've come to save you!!"

I raised my voice from the bottom of my stomach.

It would be good if they heard it though.

""..o!!""

".. ..!!"

"..lp us!!"

Alright.

Chapter 267: Black Topaz 6

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 10

I couldn't clearly hear sis Anderson's voice but I felt like I heard the voice of a female so a smile naturally appeared on my face.

"I'm coming right now!!"

After shouting that I adjusted my direction a bit while running towards the area I detected life force just a moment ago.

The trees from the forest are flying by as I go.

I jumped over a small rock the size of my chest and started running again the moment I landed.

In the gaps of the trees, about 70~80 meters or so ahead I guess?

I felt like I saw a glance of the back of a monster that seemed like an ogre.

The overgrowth of the trees is still dense so I can't get a grasp on the location of the group yet.

Faster.

No matter how favorable of a light I think about it {Black.Topaz} is on the losing side.

Faster!

Normally it's bad to even trip over a small rock in the undergrowth so I should lower my speed a bit.

However, right now I should leave my luck to the heavens and recklessly run ahead as if there's no undergrowth or rocks!

"Aaaa!?"

I can hear a woman screaming.

"Guge~!!!"

Almost simultaneously the voice that seems to be from an ogre.

It sounds somewhat triumphant.

Faster, faster!

Shit!!

Sweat entered my eyes!

I've been constantly moving since last night so I'm covered in quite a bit of sweat.

I guess I replenished too much water?

I wipe the running sweat with my left hand and run without lowering my speed.

Faster, faster, faster!!!

"Gyappu! Goazo!"

"Goge!! Guggugbutto!"

If it's not then I'm sure you can see me when I'm desperate.

I can see them!!

About 20 meters ahead, there's a place which the trees are somewhat open.

The undergrowth is there not much different from everywhere else.

One of the ogres is kneeling over with it's back at me seeming to jeer at something.

This one is the closest.

Just next to that one is another that is just the same showing it's back to me as it sits down.

About 5 meters from that is the backs of 2 ogres that are holding the clubs in their hands and making movements as if they're ridiculing someone.

And then ahead of that is the silhouette of what seems to be a member of {Black.Topaz}.

I can only see the upper bodies of three people through the standing undergrowth.

Further inside there's another 2 ogres teasing {Black.Topaz} just the same.

The number doesn't match up, is what I was thinking but right now it's a waste of time even to confirm.

It seems the ogres still haven't noticed me but the moment I start taking action it will be a fight for time.

I hid my body behind the trunk of a tree about 10 meters behinds and spent a short moment thinking which to start off with.

I wanted to use {Chain Lightning} with extra MP in it but the positioning is bad.

I used {Stone Catapult} to blow a hole through the center of the one on the left with it's back to me killing it instantly.

Immediately after I used the spell {Fumble} on the one to the right.

Ignoring the ogre that was sitting and in a hurry to turn around I used {Fire Wall} with an extended duration in front of the ogres further back to keep them in check.

It's a 20 meter wide and 3 meter high wall of flames going from one wall of the hall to the next.

I overlapped it five times after all.

The depth of the flames should be about 1 meter.

With this things should be fine for a short while.

The ogres in the back, the ogres in the front, and then {Black.Topaz} they all raised their voices in surprise.

With this I should have separated {Black.Topaz} from the ogres in the back.

"Shi!!"

The one that was closest to me on one knee, while it's attention was on the wall of flames, I stabbed my bayonet into the gap on the side of it's neck.

The bayonet didn't miss it's mark as it stabbed in with a tough recoil.

The ogre flinched taking my bayonet so suddenly from behind.

Even then I put more strength into my left hand on the fore grip and pierced through in one breath.

I'm sure the end of my bayonet pierced through into the ogres mouth.

I should have been able to destroy the medulla.

The ogre shook just a bit and then all the strength in it's body seemed to disappear.

I quickly pulled out my bayonet and charged towards the other one that noticed me and was about to stand up.

"Oraaa!!"

"Gigo~!!!"

I smashed the gun-stock into the end of it's nose and ran past charging towards the one I used the spell {Fumble} on just a moment ago.

It seems the undergrowth in the areas of this one is low at around 20~30 cm.

It's looking over here with a surprised face.

In a hurry it held it's club but it's unsteady.

"Nu..E~~i!!"

I stabbed my bayonet into it's right flank and after quickly pulling it lowered my posture while turning to the right then turned in a way so my bayonet stabbed into the back of it's right knee.

When the ogre's posture collapsed and it dropped it's club I kicked it in the back of the head with all of my strength, then immediately put my left hand to it's back before bracing my legs and firing {Air Blades}, once, twice, three times. Thanks to that my glove is covered in ogre blood.

I quickly turned around and after jumping into the 1 meter high grass once more, faced off against the ogre who's nose I broke.

The ogre was sitting down and it started swinging it's right hand holding the club with a surprising speed for it's broken nose.

As expected I can't carelessly approach a club swinging horizontally.

After all, it's swinging almost as if the grass doesn't exist.

Doba~to and it was almost as if the grass was involved in a small explosion as the areas in front of the ogre opened up.

The ogre was arrogantly not even standing as it remained in a posture with its club while still on one knee.

As expected of it excelling at close combat.

If it had continued the movement to stand up just like that then it would have taken my attack to the leg or abdomen.

Up against one like that and I need to remain cautious.

Seeing me keep an eye on things the ogre licked its bloody nose before grinning with a sneer.

Since my height is low compared to the ogre it must think I'm an easy to beat midget the same as {Black.Topaz}.

""Greed!!""

I can hear delighted voices from the direction of {Black.Topaz}.

Just shut up and watch!! My power as the one who leads the true top team!!

The edges of my lips raise up.

I'll decide it with the next move!

I glare at the ogre from below the visor of my helmet and after slightly lowering my posture prepared to charge at it once again.

The match begins the next time it tries to stand up.

The wall of flames will still last for easily over 1 minute.

The ogre wants to stand up seeing an opening of mine.

I want to intentionally show an opening and aim for when it stands up.

Though that's the case, if it's too obvious then it will see through the fact that it's a trap.

While we were both mixing in feints I started moving in a circle around the ogre.

The ogre showed movements as if trying to keep that in check.

It seems {Black.Topaz} is calling out to their injured allies but I can feel the presence of several approaching my side.

They're probably trying to back me up.

Then I guess I'll make use of them huh?

Now!

Watching the timing I went to switch to charge at it.

"Gooogaaaa~!!!"

It was that moment, along with a roar a Laios came charging in like a hurricane and cut through the ogres head from the side with his sword.

The large sword embedded halfway into it's skull as the ogre died.

Zulu kicked the ogre while pulling out his sword and looked at my for orders.

He took my scene.

He must have been ordered by Miduchi.

"There's 2 of them inside of the flames. Get into formation!"

I make a bitter smile while ordering Zulu and I ignore the members who came to back me up while standing between the wall of flames and {Black.Topaz}.

And then the members of the {Slaughterers} gradually gathered on the battlefield.

The 2 remaining ogres are already nothing more than extras.

Everyone's used quite a bit of stamina and worn out but as expected they've been training on a normal basis.

Even if you can tell they're exhausted from their expressions they're moving briskly.

I'm sure there's no problem leaving it to them.

.....

"Gu...Thanks. You saved us again."

"Thanks for coming."

"uu...I thought we were goners.."

"Thank you."

"Eh? We're saved..."

When the survivors of {Black.Topaz} understood the danger had gone they each started thanking me.

However, other than Rotto there were two other casualties.

Gary(Gary.Bagumaia) and Marin(Marin.Rukkima).

The surviving five of them were all half-dead half-alive with serious injuries but including the sub-leader Kaku(Kaku.Dankel) there wasn't a single one unharmed.

The leader Anderson has an open bone fracture in her left arm and Roru(Roreiru.Naruzomerin) has a broken right leg as well.

The one who looks to have the minor injuries Baru has a pale face and seems to have four broken ribs and Vikkusu(Vikkensu.Barukemi) some considerably severe bruises as well.

I left the treatment to Miduchi, Gwine, Misu, and Rodrick as I listened to Anderson's story.

Supposedly shortly after they split ways with us on the first day they spent it without a problem.

The problem was the next day.

Ever since they came to the 7th floor, {Black.Topaz} encountered their first group of 3 or more ogres excluding the monster room and while they somehow defeated them, Marin ended up suffering serious injuries here.

They ended up having to spend quite a bit of time and mana for her treatment.

Of course, there were other people injured besides just her as well.

They needed to leave some reserve power for the sake of combat with ogres so it was difficult to use mana just on healing.

Even then they managed to keep Marin from dying and they earned quite a bit on the 7th floor so the mood was still cheerful.

That night, Marin coughed up a large amount of blood and it was determined that her organs still hadn't recovered.

On Anderson's decision they decided to put priority on using healing spells on Marin.

Thanks to that she managed to return back to a lull state.

At this point the magicians excluding Marin still didn't have any major injuries as well.

Furthermore Anderson suggested taking the magic stone out of Rotto's corpse to move even just a bit faster but she gave up on it when all of her party members objected to it.

The Viscount Anderson family isn't all that wealthy and the territory isn't very large either.

Just as old man Viruhaima said, excluding Marin, everyone in {Black.Topaz} was born in the same village and many of them have been friends since they were children quite literally 20 or 30 years.

Not just their parents and siblings were acquaintances but they were a group where the older members even changed the younger members diapers when they were younger.

Anderson must have made the statement after quite a bit of resolve but she said she was relieved that they were against it at that time.

Kaku and Baru took turns carrying Rotto's remains while Gary and Vikkusu took turns carrying Marin.

Obviously their movement speed was considerably slow.

The number of eyes keeping lookout decreased as well.

They somehow managed to clear through the next day as well but as expected the number of injured increased and they started putting healing priority on the magicians.

If a magician remains injured then they can't use magic and their mana just ends pointless.

Marin still hadn't recovered enough to use spells.

And then the next day(yesterday).

They struggled a bit this day as well but somehow managed to make it through.

If they continued proceeding carefully they would reach the teleport crystal in another one or two days.

Though there were some injuries, they're first-rate adventurers.

If it's just 2 ogres then they can somehow manage.

Even if it's against 3 of them there shouldn't be any casualties.

Around this time thanks to having healing spells used on her a number of times while Marin couldn't use magic she had recovered enough to walk on her own using a spear as a walking stick.

However, after all let alone fully recovered she could barely walk and in the situation with other injured people combat against ogres was difficult.

The number of injured increased again.

Though Marin can use magic, if another person suffers serious injuries the mana needs to be used for healing them.

Another night passed into today.

{Black.Topaz} ended up being attacked by 5 ogres in this forest and driven into a defensive battle.

They managed to hold out for quite a long time but before they realized it the number of ogres had increased by another 3.

The reliable front line sub-leader Kaku was rendered powerless and Gary took a club to the head and died.

Marin who gathered her strength to form a line of spears but because of her fatigue she lost her balance and took an attack dying as well.

Everyone ended up wounded and it reached the point where the ogres were playing tormenting {Black.Topaz}.

The ogres were intentionally holding back enough not to kill {Black.Topaz} and were playing with them after they had lost most of their power to resist.

That continued for 30 minutes and around the time they were falling into despair they could hear a sound like something was rupturing in the distance.

The ogres must have ordered them to go and take a look because 2 of them left the group and went.

However, among them, Anderson and Roru realized it was the sound of {Audible Clamor}.

The ones coming here are either the {Slaughterers} or {Verdure.Brotherhood}.

It was natural to think it was the {Verdure.Brotherhood} who got tired of waiting for them to return but they had no method of conveying their location.

However, they didn't give up on hope.

They tried to hang on even just a bit longer and bet on the small possibility.

When they were desperately resisting I appeared.

I looked like the Savior right?

Chapter 268: Black Topaz 7

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 10

In any case, you can say we've succeeded with our objective this time of rescuing the leader of {Black.Topaz}, Reddo.Anderson.

They've recovered quite a bit thanks to the healing spells of the {Slaughterers} as well. Of course it's close the bare minimum and there's probably still quite a bit of pain remaining.

However, if you exclude that then you could say it's reached the level where there's no obstructions to their ability to walk.

"Now then..First, I offer my condolences for the members who passed away. I'm sorry we didn't arrive in time for their rescue. It's really unfortunate for everyone. But, please don't let it get you down."

Certainly I think it was unfortunate. It's not like they were people I didn't know at all after all. But, in the end they're just people from another party. Even more so when they're employees of a different place that are jeopardizing the business region we pioneered. Even then social courtesies are necessary.

"However, whatever the case I'm relieved that you were still alive, Anderson-san. By the way we'll be taking the ogre magic stones from here."

"Of course. It's the results of your battle."

I replied by shrugging my shoulders and grinning and ordered everyone gather the magic stones.

Miduchi and Kamu were on standby on both of my sides. Kamu seemed like she wanted to say something, but what she wants to say, I already understand those feelings. I lightly raised my left hand stopped Kamu. No matter what I won't accept that.

We entered the dungeon this time after taking a job from the {Verdure.Brotherhood} but it's only obvious that it's not a job where you can precisely promise it's been accomplished. 15,000,000 advance payment, and 30,000,000 when we've met the condition for accomplishing it, that's all there is to it. It's a considerable fee but even when you get lost in the mountains of Japan and people go looking for you you'll end up being charged a considerable amount from the Hunting Friends Association or the local group of young men.

It's possible that {Black.Topaz} themselves will offer a new job to "please save us" but this is something we shouldn't accept. Something like "if you don't want to die pay up" is something you shouldn't say if you really don't intend to kill them. It'll end up as double-charging after all.

Even in regards to Kamu and the others, I promised them 5% of the fee as compensation this time, it's only obvious to put in effort to increase the amount but the only ones who bend the truth to do that are trash adventurers and yakuza. Although, honestly speaking it's not amusing having the 7th floor invaded either. In regards to earning money there's no floor greater than this after all. Though there's no altars so you can't find any treasure. Oh~ it might just be that I don't know and I can't deny the possibility you can find some huh? We've never tried mining or anything after all.

She must have known that it's not something that can really be praised even from the common sense on Orth. Kamu obediently gave up as well.

"Could I ask you to remain on standby for a bit until we finish collecting the magic stones? Also, is anyone hungry? It's just a bit but we have preserved food. Ah, of course, I'll be charging for it. Just one ogre magic stone is fine. How about it?"

After all it seems their food conditions must have deteriorated quite a bit. I could hear the sound of the throats gulping from {Black.Topaz} members behind Anderson. I'm sure~ unless you were quite literally at the very limit you wouldn't want to eat the flesh of a humanoid monster or your allies.

I'm sorry for saying it a number of times but I don't want you to misunderstand there's no culture on Orth for cannibalism or eating humanoids. Rather it's avoided. They would at least tan the hides but never eat them. Even if they were a culture that eats them, no matter how used to Orth I get as long as there's other food I would never eat ogres, orks, or goblins, those sorts of humanoid monsters and completely reject them.

In the first place when farmers of the world grow things based around grains such as wheat I can't help but think someone who would think a monkey or humanoid monster is crazy. Putting aside an emergency situation, it would be quite the reversion back to the hunters of the primeval ages.

I took out that shitty disgusting preserved food from Miduchi, Kamu, and my survival kits. Additionally, I filled a flask with boiling water before putting dried meat in and making soup.

"I think you can already imagine but we came to save you all after directly receiving a job from the {Verdure.Brotherhood}."

"I thought that might be the case...Please bring us to the teleport crystal to the 6th floor. Also, this"

Anderson sighed before taking out one magic stone from the bag on her hip. I check the status to confirm it's one from an ogre. Since I'm receiving money I'll properly do my job.

"I understand. Please leave it to us."

I handed them the preserved food and soup while saying. Starting with Kamu who was next to me, Ginger, Misu, and Jeru the members of the {Butchers} who had been watching over things as they gather magic stones seemed satisfied as well. Selling 9 meals of preserved food for an 800,000 Z ogre magic stone is a huge profit after all. The same sort of reason why Mt Fuji's cola is expensive.

A normal face is only up to the third time. That one time on the 5th floor. Removing the curse. The ogre mage room the other day. It's plenty to have done them great favors three times already. Ah, I guess I did have them help when I was taking in {Sun.Ray} huh? Also, in the past, I talked to her for a bit when we were in the teleport room on the 1st floor. Even then I'm in excess in number of favors and I doubt I'll be punished for them to pay at least this much.

After devouring down the food and drinks I guess they can finally catch their breath, Anderson's facial color had returned a bit as she started talking to me.

"There's no mistake that the teleport crystal everyone used was around 2 km ahead of here right?"

"That's right."

Anderson replied while biting into a hard baked biscuit.

"We'll escort you up to there. We've prepared Baldoggie in the teleport room on the 6th floor. It's fine if you eat them right away or it's also fine if you just return to the surface like that. However.."

"I know. The {Verdure.Brotherhood} has come as well right?"

"That's what I've heard."

Probably, even if they're proceeding considerably smoothly, they're only around the 4th floor right about now though. It's just my prediction but I think they're still on the 3rd floor.

"When did they enter?"

"The {Verdure.Brotherhood} should have entered last night."

"I see. You all..No, never mind. I'll just get depressed hearing I'm sure...Then I'll leave somebody behind in the teleport crystal room on the 5th floor."

.....

We've already finished gathering the magic stones and {Black.Topaz} said they'd pay 1,000,000 Z per person for helping carry the corpses as well. In regards to Gary and Marin's corpses I had Zulu and Giberuti carry theirs. In regards to Rotto who's started to decay just a bit Baru who had recovered quite a bit so he decided to carry his.

In order from those who's hands were open we finished up a light meal of preserved food and soup. Also acting as somewhat of a large break, we spent about 5 hours resting in this place because I determined that we probably wouldn't hold out much longer without it.

Another 2 km. For us who have a lot of members used to it then unless it's a place like the large grass growing in the surroundings we can walk quite easily so even if there's combat along the way we should arrive at the teleport crystal in about 1 hour. There's also the option of advancing without resting. However, for the time being we've accomplished our goal of securing {Black.Topaz} so I'm just taking into consideration the possibility that we let our guards down.

"I'll keep lookout first. I'm sure you're tired, you get some rest."

There was a grateful proposal from Miduchi but I want to play lookouts in at least two places. In other words, myself, and you who has enough composure remaining to suggest that. Endure it.

I sat down on a tree branch a bit of distance away and when I was holding one knee so I could be ready at any moment while scanning the surroundings, Kamu quietly approached me.

"Thanks for letting us profit."

You're welcome.

"We need to take what we can when we can right. Rather than that you should rest right now while you can though.."

"Nn"

Kamu half replied while leaning on the trunk of the tree I had my back against.

"Hey, Greed-kun."

"Yeah?"

This time, I thought it once again, but everyone from the {Slaughterers}, exactly how much stamina do they have?"

I wonder how I should reply to Kamu as she said that amazed. A second master of the general section company that is seriously training or so. As expected let alone the winter battle maniacs CWCT's "Unit R {Ranger}" I'm sure it wouldn't even reach the normal "R {Ranger} though. I haven't made them do advances while crawling or high port* running after all.

"It was my limit just keeping up...I ended up holding you back."

If you understand then there was plenty of meaning to it. If it was just us, No, just me then I'm sure it would have been much faster after all.

"This is simply my opinion but.."

I said that as the preface while looking down at the whorl in Kamu's hair.

"You know adventurers, it would be best if they can do various things all on their own. But, I think that fundamentally it's running. For as long as possible, continuing to make intense movements. How long they can continue ahead with very few breaks. Whether you can use the sword or spear, whether you're familiar with traps, or whether you can use spells somewhat if you were to compare it to those then it's not a significant problem."

"I've heard about that before.."

Since I've said it before after all. Whether they think it's loud or annoying I'll say it any number of times though.

"It's the same for magic as well. Of course~ it's important to have the technique to land hits with attack spells. But, how short you can make the time before it activates..no matter how skilled you are hitting the opponent if you can't fire it off when you need then there's no meaning. Even if you can't hit it's fine if you can just use it as a threat. Of course it's all the better to land the hit that time. Even Kamu it's not like you're always thinking about hitting with arrows right?"

"..I always shoot intending to land a hit.."

Ah, is that so...Though I think that's correct as a mindset.

"I just wanted to say it's important to be able to quickly get into the posture to shoot. There's no guarantee you'll always have the leeway to shoot from an advantageous position. I just think it's more important to be able to move quickly and quickly get ready."

"I see..I'll get a bit of rest as well."

After saying that Kamu returned to where everyone else was. Well, the details I was speaking of were more oriented towards soldiers than adventurers after all.

After that we entered combat with ogres twice up to the teleport crystal and we're able to see off {Black.Topaz} as they safely teleported to the 6th floor. We returned back down the path we originally came while gathering magic stones from the ogres corpses and taking periodic breaks, then used the teleport crystal in the center to return to the 6th floor. Of course we avoided combat by walking around the outer wall of the ogre mage room. It's not particularly that I didn't want to show Kamu and the others our combat but I was really tired and just didn't want to concentrate anymore than that to use spells.

The Baldoggie we had prepared on the 6th floor had properly disappeared. They said they would leave behind one person on the 5th floor and would wait for the {Verdure.Brotherhood} to arrive. We wanted to sleep on a proper bed rather than the dirt bed of this dungeon as well.

We can return to the surface without even taking 10 minutes so we decided to return without a break.

On the 5th floor Baru had run out of energy and was rolled up sleeping in a corner so we quietly chanted the teleport incantation so as to not wake him up. There were several uneaten Baldoggie by his side so it was just a bit amusing.

.....

When we returned to the surface it wasn't just past midnight but a time when the sky was starting to get bright. We tried asking the Baldukk knight group person acting as guard of the tax official for the dungeon whether or not {Black.Topaz} safely returned and,

"It seems that everyone saved them. No, that's quite something."

And said that so realizing that we were able to safely accomplish our job everyone was able to smile.

It's because by this point it was decided that everyone other than the slaves would get 5% of 30,000,000 Z, 1,500,000 as special compensation. We ended up exhausted but 1,500,000 for less than one day is good right.

Also, in regards to the magic stones the total sale price should be close to 20,000,000 Z as well(it's long past the open hours of the "Magic Tool Shop Danhiru" that we always use). These end up being treated the same as the {Slaughterers} at 2% so it's around 400,000 Z. In total that means they were able to earn close to 2,000,000 Z in one night. In my case I'm pleased to have earned over 35,000,000 in one night as well.

In a corner of the entrance plaza starting with Angela, the combat slaves were waiting for our return. After running over right away they congratulated us on accomplishing the job. Eh? What? You all were waiting since yesterday night? I see. Good work. But you know, Angela. You, I'm sure you just were acting like a senior and forced everyone through the night right? Aren't all four of them exhausted and looking tired? Though they're in front of me so they aren't showing displeased faces.

"I'm grateful for your feelings but from here on you don't need to worry and wait for us that long. Though it's different if I order you."

And I said that before inviting them to eat with us. The youngest of the slaves Jesu ran off to notify everyone about our return.

Without even changing we went to Murowa just like that and had plenty to eat and drink before leaving without spending too much time. It's because the fatigue is really at it's limits and we're tired. After returning to Boil Manor without doing anything else I tried to go o sleep but for some reason Miduchi started bothering me. Sleep already, really. I'm tired too.

"..It's good it was different from expected..but.."

An?

"Hey, let's do it."

It's already close to dawn. Just leave me be.

"Quietly, right?"

Eeeh?

.....

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 11

After retrying from the morning running(unexpectedly all of the members from last night participated in the running) and Kaku from {Black.Topaz} came to our inn as a messenger. He said that Anderson wants to meet me. It seems she wants to have dinner together.

The one who should be responsible for our compensation is the {Verdure.Brotherhood}. And I'm sure they haven't returned yet. We were thanked we saved them so there's nothing that needs to be returned anymore. I already have no business with {Black.Topaz}. They shouldn't either. Thinking it was strange I tried asking and it was, "Even then she wants to properly thank you."

If they're saying that far then I can't turn it down. However, for that sis Anderson to be this well-mannered. Of course, even she's from a noble family and seems to have been educated by the knight group so I'm sure it's possible for her to act as well-mannered as she wants though. I guess that means she's just that grateful.

I've made all today completely off and there's no plans until the {Verdure.Brotherhood} returns from the dungeon and pays the compensation, so I have the time. I decided to have dinner together with her.

After finally being able to rest my exhausted body and taking a slightly late lunch, I invited Miduchi and Rodrick before we entered the dungeon again and while practicing spells did a simple consultation over things from here on out. Miduchi and Rodrick's ages were comparatively older before reincarnating so the things they think are often considerably normal and there's no particular ulterior motive.

As a matter of fact previously, I was considering organizing a different unit centered around Gwine to advance the investigation of the areas around the Dirt Plains. After that under the simple thought, "There's no loss in gathering information" I was just about to actually organize that separate unit.

However, I've reconsidered my thinking after the matter with {Black.Topaz} this time. Even {Black.Topaz} which was that powerful couldn't stand a chance against the ogres on the 7th floor. Of course, we have an abundance of experience and it's difficult to imagine us falling behind ogres or ogre mages at this point as well. But, it's certainly true that if you just let your guard down a bit when you die it just takes one hit.

Digressing from the point a bit.

It's something that I was able to take into consideration thanks to the tremendously powerful magic sword Miduchi uses. Through the fact that the limbs or head are completely sliced off, occasionally when I have the chance to pay attention to those chopped off limbs I noticed it through using Identify. In the case of humanoid monsters, if we call the HP of the entire body 100% then if the head or limbs take roughly 10~20% damage they end up becoming unusable.

They end up worn-out and you can't move them and quite literally if you were to completely cut it off, it seems to deal roughly 10~20% damage for each limb. In regards to this it seems there's some differences even between the same race for individuals with different builds.

The trunk of the body ends up becoming unusable after roughly 40~50% damage. In other words, if you think you'll die there's almost no mistake. These things in regards to damage are nothing more than the result of my observations and just my guess. There's a lot of exceptions so I can't say anything. For example if you pierce someones heart in a single breath then in most cases their HP will reach minus the portion of their Endurance and they die.

In the case that you aren't aiming for that sort of weak point, it seems you can expect damage based on the ability of the weapon but that isn't fixed either. Rarely you can deal damage beyond the abilities of the weapon and there's often times where you deal damage nowhere close to the ability as well. Even if you think you've landed a clean hit sometimes it only deals a small amount of damage so I don't really get it. Somehow it feels like the larger the body they have the more difficult it is to deal damage as well but I also feel like it might just be my imagination. Also, if they're wearing armor then the abilities of that seems to be related as well.

Even if you change the arms and legs to HP, if you add in the body no matter how I think about it they often exceed the total amount of HP. Though just when I think that whether it's the crickets or the grasshoppers they have exactly the amount of HP for their entire body and even when it comes to humanoids there's things like zombies and ghouls where it's suspicious if their limbs even have HP in the first place.

In any case, if you can hit a vital point then it's very possible to instant kill things as well. I can't think of any counter measure to it other than increasing the overall amount of HP in the body. I've discussed it with Miduchi as well but even if it was humanoid if there was a monster like a giant and it's HP is in the four or five digits then even if my sword directly hits it's neck we couldn't guess anything more than that it wouldn't die instantly. Even that if I use something like a {Cannon} type attack spell to properly pierce it's heart then I think it would be possible to kill it instantly.

Returning to the discussion.

I'm by no means satisfied with our forces as they are now. Ah, it's plenty as adventurers. Of course there's no problem with increasing by another one or two people but if possible I'd like for reincarnated people to take that position. I'm sure it's impossible excluding Kuro and Mary though.

Also, even when it comes to investigating the Dirt Plains I think it's fine to put off dispatching Gwine to make an accurate map. Certainly if you're asking I want a map but rather than that things like the condition of the territory, what kind of governor is there, and what kind of local power families(nobles) other than the governor live there, the condition of the various industries and their future prospects that sort of stuff is far more important and useful. In regards to these I was thinking of leaving a letter with the caravan to Bakuddo telling Kuro and Mary to take a bit of detour on their way over here to investigate those.

During that time, whether it be that one illegitimate child or the children of other nobles I decided to adequately ward them off even if there's contact. It's troublesome but it can't be exchanged with everyone's lives. If I say it like this then it might seem I'm taking Kuro and Mary's lives lightly but I'm sure the dungeon is more dangerous and I didn't want to split up our forces on this side.

Furthermore, the reason Anderson call me out was really just to thank me and I never touched on her origins either.

After the {Verdure.Brotherhood} returns and we've finished taking the compensation we'll be entering the dungeon again but I was thinking of returning the organization of the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} back to normal and just having them support the {Slaughterers} within reasonable means and no overdoing it.

For the time being we'll focus on leveling up and producing a map of the 9th floor. Though I say that, in 2~3 months, and no matter how late we should be able to clear the 9th floor within half a year.

Chapter 269: Funeral

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 12

It seems the {Verdure.Brotherhood} returned late last night. Even then they were about half a day slower than the {Slaughterers} normal speed so it seems they were pushing themselves to clear through the dungeon quite a bit. I guess they're living up to their dignity as the former number one. After finishing up breakfast, when we were about to go out to the other side of the outer crater for combined training I was told a messenger had come for the {Verdure.Brotherhood}.

It seems Viruhaima that old man was feeling quite impatient.

Well, I found out the information that she's the first child of the King who he pays some attention to so it's not unreasonable. The information that Anderson is a illegitimate child or whatever is pretty meaningless at this point so it doesn't matter at all to me. At best it's only worth knowing about as a seed for a fight to start between the King and his wives in the future(though it's really late at this point so if it would even lead to that is suspicious). Also, I don't know what kind of conversations the King and Viruhaima have and there's no direct relation so I'm not interested. If I just get our compensation then they're strangers after all.

In any case, in orders to get the remaining compensation and cash in the magic stones I went to the Elm Tree Manor.

"Here's the rest of the payment. Check the amount."

Basu said that before placing 15 gold coins on the table. Of course I properly confirmed the status of each one after taking them. However, these sure are old and dirty gold coins. If you're paying someone money pay in clean coins. You're upbringing will be found out. And I guess that's just my prejudice huh?

"Certainly. Also, in regards to that one matter I haven't mentioned it to Anderson-san so please don't worry about it."

Of course, that one matter is the fact that she's the first child of the King.

"I wouldn't worry about something like that over every little thing. I'm sure you aren't an idiot after all. Rather than that, what in the world kind of magic trick did you use?"

Viruhaima said with his arms crossed while glaring at me.

It sure does have some intensity behind it with that deep voice of his.

"Eh?"

Magic trick? What's he saying?

Look, even the Basu next to you..And you too? Both of you stop looking at me with such a scary expression.

"one night..No, it's unbelievable that you made it to the 7th floor in less than one day. I'm sure you have a good map of the 7th floor but even thinking about the time it took you to find {Black.Topaz}..If you had considerably good luck..No even in that case it's way too fast right...Do you have some kind of method for moving to the lower floors other than the teleport crystal in the center of the floor?"

Viruhaima stared at my eyes while saying.

Basu was focused on me as if he wasn't going to overlook any lies as well.

Is there something like that? If there was I'd long since have been using it.

There's bags under their eyes and it might just be my imagination but their cheeks look a bit thin as well. Yesterday after we returned from the dungeon we were making similar faces so thinking about how this old man was frantically hurrying through the dungeon just like us and I felt a bit of familiarity swell up.

However, it's not like there's any particular trick or method or anything to it..Hmph.

"Well then, I can't say anything there. However, if there really was a magic like that then no matter how much money it costs I'd like you to tell me about it."

Even the hundreds of millions wouldn't be too much for it right.

"Hey! Can you really move through the floors without using the teleport crystals! Do you know of a way!?"

Basu leaned over on top of the table and yelled.

You're loud~ really. I know of one. At the very least one that let's you go from the 3rd floor to what's probably the 14th floor in less than one minute. If I were to teach them they'd probably gladly jump right in. Shall I let them go for a dive? Though it'll be a one-way trip.

"Ha~ ..There's no way I would know right? If I did know then I'd like you to tell me."

I shrugged my shoulders in an exaggerated way and said while sighing. Additionally I made a face like "What is he saying, this guy" as if I was making fun of them.

"Chi..Making such an irritating face over every little thing.."

Viruhaima looked like he had just swallowed several bugs while making a grim face and cursing and, "In that case..mumble~mumble..even if he knew..mumblemumble.." and whispered something in a low voice. But, I wonder about that? This time I figured it out thanks to the matter with {Black.Topaz} but after revealing information I could just wait for reckless adventurers to self-destruction all on their own, that sort of hand exists as well. However...

"..Even if I knew I'm sure I wouldn't say it. If I did then it would just increase the meaningless deaths."

"Shut it. Stop acting cool and saying things that sound natural. In what world is there that sort of good-natured person?"

"Isn't it better to sell the information and let the idiots go to die right."

Oh~ I guess we all think the same things huh?

"However, well since you're not saying I guess there really isn't that sort of method huh?"

"I'm sure that's the case. If it were us we'd happily sell it to other people after all."

Aaa~ Adventurers who have weak origins and a bad upbringing sure are bloodthirsty and unpleasant~

Though weak origins is a way of putting it almost like the country in the North of Japan.

It's a world that isn't suitable for a refined noble-sama like myself.

At this point, whether it be the 7th floor or others I can't imagine it being laid waste even if low level adventurers start appearing there.

Even {Black.Topaz} was driven to the very brink of annihilation after all.

Rather than that, {Verdure.Brotherhood} I just don't want you all to have it easy.

That itself makes it possible for things to be invaded after all.

I'm sure you wouldn't go to the 8th or 9th floors right?

"Hey, what's with that face? Stop acting cool all on your own."

"It can't be, did you say that seriously?"

I stood up from my seat leaving behind the two speechless over the words meaningless deaths will appear. I've already taken what I can get, there's no more business here.

After taking the money, I returned to Boil Manor once and put the small change into my wallet before equipping my rubber armor and hurrying to the outer crater where everyone was training. I'm completely late. Immediately after arriving, I told the members from yesterday other than my slaves to come with me to cash in the magic stones at the magic tool shop after the training fishes so I can hand them their payment.

Incidentally, I intended to try and check them off guard if they were slacking on their training and talking about things yesterday and got excited as I hid my presence and approached but I ended up getting caught by Kimu, Sanno, and Basutorial who were acting as sentries. So you were doing it seriously. Sorry for doubting you.

After that we continued training until the afternoon and confirmed our coordination then after eating our bento we split ways in the afternoon.

After cashing in the magic stones at the magic tool shop, we returned to the inn and I took off my protectors before putting just my sword on my waist and went to invite Miduchi to the dungeon. However, I ended up being invited by Miduchi to take a nap by the side of the lake once in a while. I guess it is stressful to go and do magic training every time we have free time on days off. I guess it's fine once in a while huh?

It was when Miduchi and I were walking along the riverside.

We came across a campfire on the riverside, or rather, there was a group having a funeral. The population of Baldukk is over 30,000 so someone dies only everyday and funerals aren't anything unusual. But, just when we were about to have an open-hearted date for the first time in a while we saw something depressing~ and just as I was about to turn away from them they were people we knew. Either yesterday or even today, do that sort of thing in the morning...

"That, it's {Black.Topaz} right?"

"Right...A funeral for those who died I guess."

It was easy to guess the reason they went through the trouble of carrying their remains to the surface without taking out the magic stones was to perform a funeral. As expected just taking out the magic stone is a final means.

In order to make it easier to burn there's something called a wooden "funeral pedestal", you surround that with firewood, and place the remains on top of there surrounded by plants that are easy to burn as well as Sotomu oil and then light it on fire.

The "funeral pedestal" is made of a combination of a thin nonburnable tree called Rarukku. Even though it's called nonburnable it's still normal wood so it's just a bit more difficult to set on fire. It never gets very big so it's not used as normal lumber. It's not as if it's sturdy either and it only ever reached a diameter of 5 cm or so.

If you just keep adding firewood as fuel then normally in the 2 hours it takes for the funeral pedestal to burn also thanks to the Sotomu oil, the remains will turn to just the bones and magic stone. Of course, it's not like an incinerator in Japan so the force of flames aren't all that strong and while the bones might crack a bit even if they're from an elderly person they'll still remain their shape.

It seems that their funeral was already almost over.

There was almost just bones remaining of the three people's remains.

It can't be helped what we've already seen.

Since it seems like there's a good chance they noticed us as well(The riverside is at best~ 3~5 meters wide and the road is right besides it after all) so we just tried to nod and pass by them.

"You went to the trouble of coming?"

The Laios battle axe user Baru called out to us with a facial color like a zombie. It's a coincidence...Who in the world would choose to come~

"Greed-kun.."

Anderson lowered her head with an apologetic expression.

""I give you my condolences.""

Miduchi and I both spontaneously said that and lowered our heads. It's ordinary but there's nothing else to say about it.

"Thank you for going to the trouble."

Kaku started talking to us as well.

"Rotto was almost like a little brother to me. I've been friends with Gary since we were brats. Thanks."

Vikkusu lowered his head as he thanked us as well.

"Even if Marin was like they she had become quite reliable..I'm glad you came."

Roru blinked with her eyes red from crying as she said said.

...

.....

Somehow the mood has gotten strange. I already want to go but it feels like I can't as well.

This is uncomfortable...

In the end we missed out on our afternoon nap.

Miduchi and I returned to the inn disheartened and split to our own rooms before sleeping in bed until dinner.

.....

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 13

Tomorrow we're going to the dungeon so fundamentally we have one day off. Just, we're still young and recover our stamina quickly so after running today we entered the 1st floor of the dungeon to train spells.

Excluding the Basutorial couple who seem to be working on a new menu and Giberuti who's busy shopping for our consumables starting tomorrow all of the {Slaughterers} joined us. Also Rodrick and his combat slaves, Binsu, Misu, and for some reason even Jeru. We ended up reaching a total of 19 people. Since it couldn't be helped I had Zenom and Jeru who can't use magic take along my 5 combat slaves excluding Mekku and Rodrick's 2 combat slaves to look after them as they perform combat training and earn some small change.

The members on my end ended up as Miduchi, Ralpa, Bel, Toris, Gwine, Mekku, Binsu, Misu, and Rodrick these 10 who can use magic.

"I want to be able to use the Cloud type attack spells but I can't even use {Wind Cutter} after all..Is it no good if I don't practice using {Air Bash} and {Air Hammer}? I haven't practiced using wind magic attack spells almost at all.."

"Hey, Greed-kun. If we're using {Javelin} would it be better to practice using Ice as the spell bullet?"

You all are too noisy~ going on and on.

Either way they don't have much mana so even if they try to recover from it they'll quickly get mentally exhausted and last at longest 1 hour or so thought.

But for Binsu, Misu, and Rodrick to participate, I wonder what brought about this?

That night we were told by Bastutorial and the others to come to Murowa so it's not any different from usual but we decided to eat dinner at Murowa. I wonder if it's a new flavor of Baldoggie? and everyone was expecting it but that wasn't the case.

It was rolled cabbage. The ingredients were just pork seasoned with salt and pepper and onions, is what I thought, but what is it? I feel like there's a slightly nostalgic taste.

Ah, is this shiitake?

They must have wrangled it out of Miduchi. There's bacon wrapped around the surface of the rolled cabbage and it's been cooked in a consomme soup, the cabbage was simmering. It's good but as expected compared to the ones served in restaurants of our past life it's hard to call it superb. Well, it can't be helped though.

"I'm amazed there was cabbage in this sort of season."

When I was showing a bit of admiration and they said that while they're a bit expensive, the capital imports crops that are shifted from their normal season so purchasing them itself is possible. Come to think of it, they do say that if you just have the money there's nothing you can't buy in the capital after all. It seems they went to the trouble of having Cathy bring some when she was returning from the factory.

"This, it's shiitake {Rosurujji}. You're using dried shiitake {Rosurujji} as well right. I'm amazed you got your hands on it."

Huh? For Miduchi to say something like this means the origin of these shiitake wasn't Miduchi? Come to think of it I think it was about last month, she said she ran out of shiitake so she wanted to go to Tokerin's place in the capital.

"Yeah, as thanks for the Baldoggie Tokerin-san shared some of it with us."

Hee~ though we were just giving them to him thinking of it as thanks for previously and the preservatives. It might not be a bad idea to start seriously using him as a point of contact to do business with Lail Kingdom. Come to think of it he was addressed as "Leader of Foreign Business" by the King. Miduchi said he was the point of contact for the assassination business or something like that but isn't that all there is to it?

Ah..It might be good to request for Lail Kingdom to take care of the investigations as well. According to Miduchi, Lail's caravans don't just deal with Rombert but they also go peddling with mushrooms and drugs in Devas as well so, what did she say the guard was again? It seems that warrior class or whatever go along as well so if they just send along a few extra members then it could be possible for them to investigate along the way.

Thinking I had come up with a good idea when I tried consulting with Miduchi that night I was told, "our internal conditions would become known to them." However, there's nothing that can be done worrying about something like that. Also, there's no internal conditions that we'd be troubled for them to know about. In the first place aren't there a lot of out foreign spies around? There's also the example of Myun. I'm sure there's no one who wouldn't investigate the opponents territory when they've been in conflict with them for a long time, it could be that outsiders like Lail Kingdom or a different country have already sent in spies to investigate.

It's not like I particularly want to hide the fact that I'm investigating it. I'm just simply lacking in people to do it. Rather that way we just might be able to get by without a long investigation and I can continue training everyone where I can watch over things. I tried asking in the case that I have someone of Miduchi's skill level go to investigate, how much would it cost and I was told, "It's different from assassination so I don't know. But, in the case of assassination it sometimes costs in the hundreds of millions."

As expected the level of difficulty is different so it's difficult to think it would be that expensive. However, they might decide the price based on cutting out their superior forces for a fixed period of time. Though I say that, it's different from assassination, and the degree of danger is different as well so I'm sure it'll definitely be a good bit cheaper.

If along with that I have Kuro and Mary investigate things then make comparisons between the results then I can get an idea on Lail Kingdom's investigation ability as well. Additionally, I can make the pipe between us thicker, depending on the details it could be good material to help decide whether they're friendly to us, there's a fear of opposite, or neutral.

I'm sure the estimate is free and it's nothing to hurry over so the next time I go to the capital I'll stop by once to discuss it over tea I guess.

Chapter 270: Magic Item

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 14

This time when we enter the dungeon Angela is accompanying the {Butchers} and Toris is going with the {Exterminators}. Excluding them the remaining 9 of us in the {Slaughterers} will be exploring the 9th floor. Midway through next month we'll be performing a test for switching out members for those who want to try it and if it seems like a member will be able to change then after that we'll bring them into the dungeon once then if there's no problem on the next time we enter the dungeon we'll try to clear the 9th floor. If there's no members who get switched out then shortly after the member change battle when we enter the dungeon again just the same we'll head towards the center area of the 9th floor and try to clear it.

Hearing this everyone's motivation seems to have gone up but just as expected of the former {Sun.Ray} members, there was no one among the veterans getting restless. However, Sanno and Ruttsu who hope to enter the {Slaughterers}, and also, Rodrick's combat slaves Denda and Karimu who want to get promoted along with their master, the four of them seem to be quite motivated to the point there's a bit too sharp of a gleam in their eyes.

Sanno and Ruttsu are just the individuals so putting them aside, why in the world are Denda and Karimu is what I was thinking but it seems, "A slaves earnings are the masters earnings. If the amount the master is earning increases then naturally our earnings will increase as well" was the reason. I see, I thought there was various ways of thinking about it.

Rodrick has the role of calming them down. Of course, Rodrick himself wants to enter the {Slaughterers} as well but among the tension he seems to be moderately relaxed. Just as expected from someone who's received investiture as a knight of the Faruergaz Knight Group he's calm. After all those who properly trained here and there seem to have some composure. They might understand that this composure will reduce the chances of a mistake.

After returning to the surface I heard a slightly unexpected story. It seems that all of the remaining survivors of {Black.Topaz} cleared out of their inn and returned to their home town. Since I was a bit interested I tried gathering the rumors but it wasn't anything at all though. It was just that they were returning to return the magic stones of the members who passed away to their families.

Supposedly Viscount Anderson's territory is in the Northern Royal Territories so it will take them a considerable amount of time to go and return so they just cleared out of their inn for the time being. Although, my relationship with them is nothing more than friends so it doesn't particularly matter even if they don't come back just like that. It seems the reason they didn't go back right away after that was because they were looking for a caravan escort job that's going towards their home town.

It seems that as expected they didn't have enough horses for everyone.

What's important is that the other top team that was cooperating with the {Verdure.Brotherhood} is going to be gone for the time being(?). It's the perfect chance to open the gap even wider. Particularly if we could carry back treasure from the 9th or 10th floors and lead them into getting impatient then there's nothing more to say but as expected I'm sure that's impossible. Thanks to the incident this time with {Black.Topaz} both them and the {Verdure.Brotherhood} managed to recover their original caution and tension.

In any case, {Black.Topaz} won't be returning for another couple of months. Hearing this there were some fellows whose bindings started to loosen as they said, "How about if you quickly go to the 10th floor? If it's Greed-kun then can't you make it?" or something like that as well. Certainly it's not as if you can't call it good news to us but that doesn't mean that the level of danger in the dungeon gets any lower.

I'm not changing our plans so we'll keep exploring at our current pace, and I said that ending the discussion.

Also, it seems that the price of the {Refrigerator} I carried into Sandak Company in the capital a while back settled down and sold at 160,000,000 Z.

However, there's still no news in regards to the {Ring.Of.Protection}. I was just about to go to the capital during the break this day time. However, regardless of the fact that Toris and Angela are gone on our time entering the dungeon this time, it was clear that everyone was only just as cautious as usual so I need to properly train them.

In terms of items we {Slaughterers} ended up with zero results this time other than the map but the {Butchers} found an ore on the 5th floor, though it was silver, and the {Exterminators} discovered a party that was wiped out on the 3rd floor so they wrangled away their equipment. It's no ones responsibility that we weren't able to obtain any treasure but isn't this a bit lonely.

Year 7446, Month 9, Day 28

We've returned from the dungeon once again. Last time our only gain was an expansion of the map but this time was properly obtained some treasure. After blowing away 4 {Cave Trolls} that were summoned on the 9th floor it's something we obtained from the shrine on the altar.

【Earth.Amulet】

【Gold.Silver.Topaz】

【Condition: Normal】

【Manufacture Date: 28/9/7446】

【Value: 1】

【Durability: 30】

【Ability: Invalidates {Evocation} type spells made up of a combination of Earth magic and Void Magic at a fixed probability.】

【Effect: Invalidates {Evocation} type spells that are combination of only the Earth and Void Magic types that target the wearer at a fixed probability. Also, it can invalidate single type elemental magic of Earth at the same probability.】

It's in the shape of either the top of a small pendant or brooch.

I think it'll end up selling at a considerable price.

This, I think it will easily go for several billions.

Judging from the name it seems easy to verify after all.

Even just the information I can understand from my 【Identify】 is quite something but it's not something that's lethal to me so I've already decided to sell it sooner or later. If you were to ask if it's comparable to a wand that let's anyone use {Fire Ball} then it's doubtful but I feel like it could put up a pretty good fight.

Also, in regards to the {Ring.Of.Protection}, a potential buyer appeared. The price the other party offered was 140,000,000 Z. According to the letter from Sandak Company and the basis for the price was that the buyer is already in possession of a ring with the same name and it seems they already have knowledge about the ability itself, was the reason.

"I wonder what should be done?"

I decided to discuss it with Toris, Miduchi, and Zenom in my room of Boil Manor. Furthermore, Rodrick is unrelated to the ring this time so I didn't call him.

Though my mind is already made up.

"140,000,000 is once again a considerable amount."

Zenom was sipping on some tea Miduchi made while saying. For sure.

"Certainly, wasn't it a condition of the sale that they teach us what kind of ability is has and how they figured that out?"

Toris said with his arms crossed but it's a bit different. The condition was, "After selling it for an amount that I can accept" they teach me that. If that wasn't the case then I could end up just hearing the ability and how they verified that and then decide not to sell it so I wanted to avoid anyone thinking that would be the case. However, even that seems difficult in the case this time. They're already in possession of a {Magic.Item} with the same name, but whether it's a legend from their ancestors or anything else, if the person thinks, "It has an ability" then even if they say "It's said that it has this sort of ability" then there's no problem with that reply itself.

Even on the point of how they verified then and, "It has the same name so we didn't see a need to verify it" or, "We already knew the ability ahead of time so we put the ring on and tried suffering a minor injury" if they say anything like that then I can't respond with anything.

In any case I wasn't predicting a case like this. I couldn't think of the possibility that there was already someone with an item of the same name and that they would want another one of it.

Miduchi explained the fine details of the condition being after the sale to Toris.

"However, this is quite troubling. If it's come to this then we can only decide based on the amount.."

Toris said while hitting his right thumb against his left elbow with his arms crossed.

"It seems they're willing to tell us the ability so if it's over 100,000,000 I think that's fine though..."

Miduchi said it simply like that but even if it doesn't have any significant ability, it's a magic ring you know? The only ones who know it doesn't have any significant ability is myself and you, so we need to convince everyone else..Zenom was surprised at how high the amount was hearing it, is that fine? But you know..somehow I feel like it's a waste as well. Nevertheless, 140,000,000 Z is a huge amount of money. Other than that there's also another reason that qualifies for why we would need to sell it in a hurry right now. Alright, won't someone quickly realize it?

"Toris what do you think? Certainly 140,000,000 Z is quite something. However, we won't know anything but the ability. Even that's, "it's got the same name so I'm sure it's the same ability" just the ability the buyer believes it is. It's unknown if they'll tell us in regards to the method used to verify that as well.."

I said with a somewhat sullen face as if I hadn't made my decision yet to Toris.

"Isn't it fine to sell it? Precisely because it's something where the method of confirming it is unknown, even if we use it wouldn't it be nothing more than a charm right? After all it's 140,000,000. Even in regards to the amount if it's a company managed by Duke Sandak then it's difficult to think they'd have bargained for the price to be too low as well right? They're your relatives right?"

While Toris was spending a bit of time thinking about it, Zenom replied in his stead. It sounds like Zenom isn't thinking too much about it before replying but the things he's saying make sense. However, a charm huh...If it's said like that then that's certainly true.

"Normally if you mention a {Ring.Of.Protection} then it would slightly recover {HP Hit.Points} or rather, life force by just a bit, or increase defensive power, that sort of item. Even assuming that ring has an ability similar to that unless it's considerably strong it's certainly an ability that isn't very disappointing without. Also.."

After saying that Miduchi looked at Toris to her side as he uncrossed his arms and hit his knee while continuing after her.

"Al-san! I forgot something important! It's already been determined that there's a magic ring with the same name. Let's think in the case that one other ring with the same name comes out again. Would the price at that time be the same? Right, Miduchi-san you thought the same thing!?"

That's right. Things that happen twice will happen a third time. Just as Miduchi said, putting aside if it was something considerably strong, if it's just that level of ability then it's no..big..deal?

"Certainly that's true. Toris, you noticed a good point. It seems that Zenom doesn't mind either so we're selling the ring."

I said that finishing the conversation.

Well, one or two, even if a new one comes out I don't think there would be a large difference in the price though, just in case, right.

.....

Year 7446, Month 10, Day 5

"This is..!"

After climbing the altar, when Angela looked into the opened door of the shrine she whispered something.

"Armor..It's chain mail!"

Hohou. A moment of gratitude to the monsters we killed just now, {Black Killer Mantis}, {Ferocious Mole}, and {Carnivorous Ivy Tree}. It was worth how powerful of enemies they were.

The chain mail Angela pulled out of the shrine had a radiance almost as if it were brand new. If Ralpa was here(Together with Zenom they're separate from the {Slaughterers} this week) I'm sure she'd be making noise about now.

""That is..!!""

Miduchi and Toris were looking at it with a serious expression to the point that it's scary.

Thinking that was suspicious I guess Bel tried asking, "What is it?" but there was no reply from either of them.

Almost as if, they were trying to see through the identify of the chain mail Angela was holding they were just staring seriously at it.

"What is it?"

There's no sign of changes in any of the other members besides them. Angela is happily carrying the chain mail down towards me from the altar but there's no particular change in her either. There's a reaction to the {Cantrip} {Magical.Detection} so I'm sure it's a {Magic.Item} though...I touched the chain mail after receiving it from Angela and immediately looked at the name.

【Elven.Chainmail】

Hmn.

Does it have a curse or something in regards to elves?

【Elven.Chainmail】

【Mithril Steel Chains.Sphinx Leather Band】

【Condition: Normal】

【Manufacture Date: 5/10/7446】

【Value: 1】

【Durability: 150000】

【Ability: Body Restriction Rate: 5%】

【Ability: Average Penetration Rate: -26%】

【Ability: Armored Protection Area Average Damage Reduction Rate: 18%】

【Effect: Half-Damage.From.Slicer】

【Effect: Half-Damage.From.Fire Breath】

【Effect: Weight.Alleviation】

【Effect: Noise.Reduction】

【Effect: Raise.Hiding.In.Shadow.Rate】

【Effect: Auto.Mending】

There's no curse factor anywhere to it.

Let alone that isn't it a splendid {Magic.Item}!

Other than the extraordinarily high Durability and the Effects it isn't all that different from normal chain mail or maybe just a bit better, just that level, but the way it has six special effects bulked together like that is amazing. It properly has an added face guard coif(something like a hood) as a set with it as well. Of course that has the same abilities, or rather it seems they're considered a set.

When it comes to the Half-Damage types or the Raise.Hiding.In.Shadow.Rate even if we take attacks matching up with the type or try hiding it's not very easy to tell the difference I'm sure but other than that we should be able to notice them in just a few days of using it. Nevertheless this, even if it increases the rate someone can hide themselves with how much it's sparkling as if it was newly polished I think you would notice them right away. Ah, if you wear a surcoat or something above it then along with {Noise.Reduction} I guess it would be more difficult to notice?

""This..""

The two elves were about to say something again. They exchanged glances and then tried to urge the other into speaking first.

"It seems it's called {Elven.Chainmail}. Do you feel something?"

I don't feel anything in particular.

"{Elven.Chain}!?"

Almost reflexively, Miduchi's voice came out of her mouth.

What is it?

"That explains it..Ah, it's a considerably high quality {Magic.Item}, this."

That's only obvious right.

By the way, what about it explains it?

"Somehow I can feel it's existence. I don't know how to explain it.."

"That's right, it's just as Miduchi-san said. Though I don't know how to put it into words.."

It seems that Miduchi and Toris feel some sort of aura or something being given off by this armor. Judging from the name it is called the {Elven.Chainmail} after all...

"And, this, if it's something considerably good then..Toris, you wear it. Since Miduchi already received the rubber protectors that's fine right?"

"Eh? Is that okay!?"

"Yeah.."

I don't really get it but judging from the name wouldn't it be best for an Elf to use it? Though I don't think it particularly matters even if it's not an elf that wears it but, somehow or other, right. It's not as if I can see all of the effects sub-windows so it would be unpleasant if the effects don't work if it's not an elf.

Furthermore, Miduchi didn't show any particular sentiments towards it.

I was just a bit relieved. After all that's rubber protectors given to her by sister and the others. Use it together with me until it's completely worn-out. Putting aside the Body Restriction Rate, it's considerably higher than the chain mail in regards to Average Penetration Rate and Damage Reduction Rate and such, and even is close to that of plate mail.

Now then, we'll be returning to the surface tomorrow but I wonder what happened with the ring?

Chapter 271: One Day In Capital

Year 7446, Month 10, Day 6

We returned from the dungeon.

Miduchi is wearing the {Elven.Chainmail} and Giberuti is carrying the rubber armor she was wearing up until now in one of his open bags. There's several reasons she's wearing it. The first is because it stands out too much.

The {Elven.Chainmail} is a strange {Magic.Item} and if an elf or anyone else is fine but if they equip it then changes into what appears to be slightly worn-out normal chainmail. Of course, if they take it off again it changes back to having a radiance as if it was brand new chainmail.

However, if the user isn't an elf, when they enter the sight of other elves and they can instantly recognize that it's a very powerful and familiar {Magic.Item}. At the same time they'll feel a strong sense that something is about the one equipping or holding the {Elven.Chainmail}. However, in the case the one equipping it is an elf(or dark elf) then there's nothing like that.

It's the same in the case that no one is equipping it but in Miduchi's words, the moment she recognizes that the one in possession of it is Toris and those sort of off feelings weakened(it seems they don't completely disappear). Also, as long as it doesn't enter their sight..for example, if it's put into a bag or something so it can't be seen..then there's no problem.

Then we should just put it into a bag, and some might think it would be fine if we throw it into one of Giberuti's bags, but with that a different problem came to light. It's no problem at first but if you try to carry or hold it like that and it feels like weight gradually increases. In the case you aren't wearing it, it normally has a weight of just about 15 kg but after carrying it for about 1 hour the weight will feel double that to the one carrying it.

In that case it would be better for Toris or Miduchi to wear it. If Toris wears it then we'd have to take apart his bandedmail and carry that so in that case Miduchi's rubber protectors were overwhelmingly lighter so they're easy to carry. For those sorts of reasons we have Miduchi wearing it to carry it for the time being.

Also, in regards to the size but since it's a size so even a person with a large build can wear it, whether Toris or Miduchi put it on it's still baggy, so it's necessary to fix the size. As a matter of fact fixing the size of chainmail isn't all that difficult. If they just have some guts then it's possible even for an amateur. This is just a matter of it not taking any special technique to fix the size.

If you just have a dedicated tool like radio pliers and patiently do the labor then it's possible for anyone to do it. When I was still little I saw while maintenance was being done on chainmail belonging to the squires of Bakuddo a number of times and when the head of household is handed over I saw them change the size for the new head a number of times as well. Slaves were made to do the work but putting aside the maintenance it took 2~3 weeks to change the size. When the rubber armor was first introduced they were released from that sort of labor and more useful in a different more productive labor.

By the way, in regards to this size changing as well, when Miduchi and Toris wear it themselves, it seems they understand where the line of chains needs to be taken off to fit them as well. Everyone else including myself had no clue. That's why rather than just leaving it to slaves, it's probably more efficient to have Toris the user join in on the work as well. Of course the majority of the work will still be done by slaves though.

I'll try showing my face in Ronslail's store later on. The delivery of the 20 slaves for the sausage factory is already finished but it should be fine even if it increases by another couple of people right. Zulu and Angela have training as well and resting their bodies is a part of their job. Giberuti has jobs like developing new menu items with Basutorial and recently I've been sending him on errands to my company in the capital when he goes to inspect the cleaning job of the factory so he doesn't have that sort of time.

We ended up returning just a bit early so the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} don't seem to have returned yet. We decided to go ahead in cashing in the magic stones and return to our inn, then come back to the entrance plaza after that.

After we finished dinner, when Ralpa returned we discussed the new {Magic.Item} and just as expected, she wanted to look at it. In regards to the armor she understood that it stands out too much in a bad way if someone other than elf wears it so she didn't want to use it. Great. However, in regards to the {Earth.Amulet} while she didn't say anything about it, it seems she felt reluctant to let it go. It's got considerably delicate and beautiful carvings made in it so if you wear it then it does look like a considerably refined accessory after all~

After all she's a woman in that sort of way.

Come to think of it I still haven't left a {Magic.Item} in Ralpa's care yet. Particularly Toris, it's the second one I've left him in a short period of time, so I thought, "I screwed up here" but it's too late now. However, this {Earth.Amulet} is no good. I want to sell it, No, I want to try selling it. The next time one that seems useful and you can use appears I'll pass it around to you with priority so..Ah, that's right.

"Ralpa, I'll hand this over to you. If you have the chance then make good use of it."

I said that before taking the {Bracelet.Of.Dead Body.To.Water} out of a box in the room and handing it over to her and she was considerably pleased. Eas..She's an honest and good fellow. Look over there, stop looking at her like she's a pitiful child. I'm talking to you, Gwine. Isn't everyone else making a face like, that's great?

Furthermore, this time neither the {Butchers} or {Exterminators} brought back any sort of treasure that stood out.

First thing tomorrow morning I'll order another addition 2 child slaves at Ronslail's store and then just like that head towards the capital.

Also, there's something that had to be done tonight as well.

I was a bit sorry on a night we returned from the dungeon when they were tired but I had Toris, Bel, and Miduchi the three of them accompany me until considerably late. Late in the night Gwine and Ralpa came back joined in partway through but they were drunk and useless. Additionally the moment I took my eyes off them they fell over asleep on the table while still sitting in a chair in my room. It's still better just that it wasn't my bed but Miduchi and Bel were annoyed as they carried them to their rooms. While listening to their voices as they knock on the door waking up Zenom, Toris and I exchanged glances and shrugged our shoulders.

Year 7446, Month 10, Day 7

I showed my face in my company in the capital and after glancing over the account books for a bit I abducted John who was laying down in the night watch room of the factory and went to Sandak Company as well. Terry had a promise to play with a different slave or something and was out. It's better for kids to have time to play as well right. In exchange for John who I brought out, I had Rasseg's son Harris keep an eye on the factory.

It's in regards to the ring and amulet.

I accepted selling the {Ring.Of.Protection} for 140,000,000 Z and finished the discussion by having the buyer report the ability and method used to verify it by the end of the year. And then, I entrusted the new {Magic.Item} we obtained that is the {Earth.Amulet} to them and requested that they sell it.

"{Status Open}. Hmm.....(Long~).....It certainly seems to be a {Magic.Item} but, even then..Umwu..No..Mwu.."

Even though I say it's long it seems he activated {Detect.Magic} in about 5 seconds.

Just as expected he's making an "unbelievable" expression while grumbling over it.

There was never a {Magic.Item} like this up until now I'm sure.

Or even if there was he didn't know about it.

Foreseeing this I abducted John before coming.

In order to perform a demonstration, I called for John I left at the entrance of the company and had him stand in a corner of the back yard with the {Earth.Amulet} around his neck. It would be bad if he gets afraid so I have him facing backwards.

"No matter what don't move. Well~ I'm sure it won't hurt. No, it might hurt just a bit but I won't do anything that seriously injures you so just endure it."

Of course, I already tested it last night.

It's not like I'm testing it in the real thing.

I've already confirmed that the power of the {Earth.Amulet} activated at about a 50% probability.

Though I only tested attack spells about 20 times.

I tested elemental magic over 100 times.

The company president that is the grandchild of my great-grandfather's cousin on my mother's side(a stranger at this point huh?) was watching over things a bit nervously.

Of course, I've already had him clear the place of people.

"Well then, I'll start. Starting with {Stone Gravel}..!!"

"Mu!!"

The pebble that was fired from my left palm towards John's left hand disappeared the moment it hit John.

Oh~ it's good luck for it to work on the first shot.

John probably hasn't noticed anything at all.

"Next is elemental magic. John, when I get the sign take a deep breath and face downwards. Cover your nose and ears with both of your hands. Alright? Then, here I go."

After saying that I walked to the side of John and used just a level 3, about one bucket full of dirt and poured over top of John.

Arya~ I guess it was no good this time?

John shouted in surprise, "Uwa~!!" but quickly remembered what I ordered him and was covered in dirt just like that.

One more time.

No good huh? I let John catch his breath.

One more time.

Uo, it's still no good. This time I'm not in luck.

John's already buried from just above his knees to about his thighs.

It might just be my imagine but the company president's glare seems to have gotten sharper(doubtful?) as well.

One more time again.

This time it seems it safely activated.

The last bit of dirt I poured down over John's head disappeared all at once at the point it was touching or about to touch him.

Of course, there's no influence to the dirt that I had made up until then. It remains just like that and John is still buried in his surroundings.

"Well, something like this. It can roughly eliminate earth magic about one in every two times. However, if you mix in a different element with the earth and void magic then it can't erase it. I'm sure things around there would require more verification but putting aside {Web} and {Sleep Cloud}, as expected testing {Fire Ball} and {Lightning Bolt} is dangerous I'm sure."

I said to the company president while blowing the dirt off of John's head and shoulders.

"If you're still in doubt about it then this time I'll use it myself. Then it's fine for you to have someone else use earth magic against me."

"..No, that far is fine. This is..I'm sure it will settle with a considerable price. Depending on the case we might open up an auction as well..Are you in a hurry?"

The company president replied while flipping over the {Earth.Amulet} I handed him and looking at it here and there.

"I'm not in that much of a hurry but around how much time will it take for a price to be put on it?"

"..It's this level of an item. I'm sure it'll take time to announce it so I'd like for you to give it at least half a year. At least that is."

Ah, just that long huh? So I guess it's fine if I think of it as a year or so?

"At least half a year huh..I understand. That's fine. I'm leaving it in your care."

Expensive items from Rombert Kingdom that are put up for auction aren't open to the public in a place like a market for bidding but they take the form of private bidding. Though it's the same that it's sold to the person who offers the highest amount for it. According to the company president it's possible the value of this {Earth.Amulet} will be tremendously high(several billion or so). Of course~ I'm sure that's the case.

The company president kindly let us use their well so I had John wash off and then dried him all at once before we left Sandak Company. I bought a bag of candy for John.

While seeing John back to the factory, I showed my face in Greed Company once and after that went to Tokerin's healing clinic. Of course I have a souvenir as well. The factory is on break while Cathy is away in Baldukk so it's jelly beans. It was the last in stock we had at the head office(currently we aren't transporting yokan {yomo} pre-made from Bakkudo. Just the balloons. We're filling those with the yokan {yomo} at the head office and making the completed product. Yokan is a specialty cooking of Rasseg's wife Mili as well) so I bought it up.

Yokan as a souvenir.

Somehow I remember Obon and presents to neighbors from my past life.

Mizu yokan, I want to eat it for the first time in a while~

"..Which is why we'll have completed the tests using the Sorurisu(name of the preservatives) that your provided us by the end of the year to the start of next year and have the prospect of selling a product with a certain level of quality guaranteed over a long period of time to average person."

"Oh! Baldoggie to Erurehei..How magnificent~!"

I'm pleased as well that he'd be the happy over it. We used the mountain of preservatives he provided us with to continue making prototype products and finally managed to reach some level of completion. We leave a Baldoggie with preservatives added into it on the side of the street and setup a simple trap. If we wait just 1 hour then rats will rush at it. Occasionally stray dogs do too. Just like that we've created priceless sacrifices as we adjusted the amount to the level where the rats won't die and come up with the ratio.

I originally had guessed it was something like sodium nitrite or sodium sorbate but even if I use Identify the name that comes up in the status is "Sorurisu", and it only has written that it's waste produced in the process of purifying the poison sorira from a mushroom called Soruhoggu. That's why at first we tried both 1ppm(0.0001%) or so, even if it's sodium nitrite which has some toxicity, the bare minimum amount that wouldn't even show much effect as a preservative and about 2 grams for every 100 grams which was the single lethal dosage for an adult.

Normally around 60~70 ppm or so is the appropriate amount.

However, different from Miduchi and my thinking, even if we mixed in 2% the dog didn't die. If it's something with a smaller body than a person absorbing 2 grams all at once should have killed it. After gathering my resolve since I can use the spells {Neutralize.Poison} and {Remove.Poison}, I tried eating it as well and was fine. On the contrary if we try to mix in anymore than this it would have been bad because the texture and flavor would start to change.

Now we've established that if we mix in roughly 2,000 ppm(0.2%) then it's plenty to show the effects. In the reasonably dry and low temperature environment of the dungeon it was fine left out in the open for about 2 months, if it's the surface then it should be fine for 3 weeks(18 days) or so. If you pack it in a linen bag or something and seal that in an airtight rubber bag then we already know you can deliciously eat that over 2 months even on the surface. Right now we're slowly increasing the amount a bit at a time as we make things and testing how long it can be preserved.

I requested for Tokerin to inquire with their country by the end of the year in what period of time and how much of an amount they would want. So as to not to take too much profit, I offered it at 30% the retail. I'm sure it'll just end up a transaction once in every few months and each individual transaction will involve a considerably quantity all at once, not to mention they're selling the preservatives to us at a price close to nothing, and I'm sure Miduchi wants to show a good face to her country as well. In the first place as Greed Company we want to sell favors to Lail Kingdom as well.

Although, it's necessary to pay the government office of Rombertia a tariff of 30% of the purchase price so the amount they're paying Rombert Kingdom will end up about 40% of the retail price though.

Whatever the case there's almost no manufactured meat products other than those preserved in heavy salt that last for a long period of time transported into Lail Kingdom so he was greatly pleased.

Now then, tomorrow is some light adjustments and magic training in the dungeon and the the day after that is combined training.

I need to return quickly.

Chapter 272: Challenge Right 1

Year 7446, Month 10, Day 13

On the 9th floor of the dungeon, I was hoping that the halls we were walking down lead to the large space in the center of the floor while using the teleport crystal in the dead end of the halls a number of times. This time Miduchi and Angela are away from the {Slaughterers}.

"Hey~Hey~, the next a troll or something big appears in a room I'm going to use the bracelet. I can use it once every day so let me use it for today's portion."

Ever since the first day we entered the dungeon Ralpa has been wanting to use the {Bracelet.Of.Dead Body.To.Water}. There's no helping it so I'm enduring but honestly speaking seeing a corpse turn to water in an instant and I certainly can't ignore how useful it can be.

Ah~ certainly this is useful~

If I have Miduchi use it in the future then it's ideal for assassinating an enemy.

In the first place Miduchi's received plenty of training as an assassin and if we choose the target then I'm sure the success rate is high as well.

And then without even leaving the greatest evidence that is the corpse, it's possible to dispose of it without taking any time.

It's because I think like this that I didn't want to bring it.

However, depending on how I think about it, leaving it with Ralpa might have been the correct answer.

If it's her she's stingy so once she's gotten her hands on something once even if I tell her return it I don't think she'll let go of it so easily. Additionally she's an idiot so it wouldn't be strange for her to think it's something she received from me. Though I say that, the way she asks me every single time she wants to use the bracelet's ability means she might be aware of the fact that I was just lending it to her.

"I guess so. Then the next time a big one comes out you can use it."

After I said that giving her permission and her nostrils started flaring as she was breathing heavily.

.....

"Here~ I go~! Nurehiki!"

Ralpa was touching the 4 {Cave Beetle} corpses pile on top of each other after we took the magic stones out and chanting the command word.

The troll corpse that was together with them on the side changed to water in an instant and with a bash~n splashed all around.

"Ho!! Awawaha!!"

I wonder what in the world is that fun? The instant it changes to water she jumps back as far as she can in order to not get wet, and in the end still gets wet taking water all over her lower body. I'm sure no water gets inside of her combat boots but her pants are soaked.

"Sorry."

Zenom said that apologetically but Ralpa is already at a good age, so there's no need for the parent to feel that much responsibility. I think it's a problem with the individual. Yeah.

"It's fine. Hey Ralpa. I'll dry you off."

While laughing to herself as Ralpa approached I touched her wet pants while using the spell {Dry} and dried them off. Ah, is she asking for permission for me to use the spell {Dry} on her?

"It's fine to enjoy yourself but do you get it? When we return there's member change matches you know?"

I don't think there's any meaning but I just wanted her to get a bit more tense.

"Nn~ it would be good if there's a person willing to challenge me."

I'm sure there isn't anyone~ Certainly.

Since there's not much meaning in overwriting the first measurement stamina test we did at 1 hour, 23 minutes, and 40 seconds so the {Slaughterers} already aren't running anymore. But, if she's letting her guard down she might be challenged and get overtaken. The most likely contender to be challenged is Basutorial and then next is Angela, followed by Zulu. I've heard that everyone is making all sorts of strategies on their own. There's some doing it on their own and others planning to challenge in groups of two or three as well.

This time other than Rokko and Kevin everyone's declared that they're participating in the challenge for the replacement match. Though I say that, it seems that the two of them haven't given up either. On my way back returning from the capital the other day, I saw the two of them running above the outer crater. They just simply don't have the confidence they can clear the stamina test yet I'm sure.

Year 7446, Month 10, Day 17

The next day after returning from the dungeon that is yesterday was a day off. And then today is the greatly anticipated day of replacement matches. It's not strange to express it as something people have been waiting for. Furthermore, Basutorial appears pretty nervous and doesn't seem to have slept much yesterday.

I think several challengers will appear. However, challenging Basutorial, I wonder if they can fight and win against ogres? Up until now Basutorial has experienced a considerable amount of combat against ogres and is used to it so even one on one he can defeat them considerably fast.

"Alright, is everyone ready? Here I go..Ready...Start!"

Excluding Rokko, Kevin, and my combat slaves the 12 of them all started running at once.

I'm sure the members observing the early areas of the course have already long since been at their posts. The ones for the latter half are departing for their posts in order as well. The only ones remaining here are Zenom and I.

"How do you see things going?"

After Zenom saw everyone off with his arms crossed he started talking to me.

"Since Kamu and Ginger ended up not participating as a team after all..I guess the same for Kimu as well. If they were to team up it would have been pretty interesting."

I'm definitely sure Kamu, Ginger, and Kimu, the three of them will clear it. After that is..the only one I can say for sure is Jeru I guess. Among them only Kamu and Kimu are supposedly challenging as a two-person team so it's speculated that their team will definitely obtain the challenge right.

Ginger is challenging as a group of three with Jeru and Misu while Sanno and Ruttsu are doing it as a two-person group. Binsu and Hisu are each doing it alone and it seems Rodrick is challenging together with his combat slaves Denda and Karimu. It's said that among those the only one with a chance of acquiring the challenge right is Ginger's group depending on how much effort Misu puts into it.

"Hmm. After all Kamu and Kimu are strongest contenders right."

"I think so too."

"However, I'm sure it will be difficult for Kamu and Kimu.."

He~ After all Zenom thinks so too huh? Kamu's skill with the bow is first-rate. It's not at the level of Bel but I'm sure that's a special case. She also has courage and I think her instructions to her allies are precise as well. However, the problem is having Kimu handle the ogres at the front line. The spear she uses is considerably long and if she uses it skillfully she can keep the ogre from approaching as Kamu turns it into an arrow pin-cushion I'm sure. However, she'll probably end up having her hands full just restraining the ogre and it'll be difficult for her to find an opening to do any major damage with the spear. In other words, we can assume it'll take them a considerable amount of time to deal with the ogres.

Other than those two there's the three person group lead by Ginger but just the same they're leaning a bit too much towards attacking though it's possible for Ginger or Jeru to grab the ogres attention while the other attacks and Misu uses magic from the rear. Especially Ginger's skill with the spear is extremely high and it's believed she can take on an ogre alone with it. You could say that their ability to wipe out the enemy is overwhelmingly higher. Rokko and Kevin both have the same level or even greater skill at the front line but I'm sure they won't meet the minimum line for the test.

Though I say that, since the ones being challenged have the same number of people I think there's merits and demerits to it. Particularly Kamu is just the two of them, it seems like it would take some time for them to defeat it but there would be two people from the {Slaughterers} being challenged just the same. If they designate Angela and Basutorial who are said to have relatively low abilities then they must think they have a sufficient chance of winning.

However, both Angela and Basutorial can already defeat ogres one on one and they can even deal with a situation where they have to fight one versus multiple. Which is why I can't help but think it'll be difficult. In that case the ones who have the highest power to wipe things out should speak the loudest, so Ginger and the others are believed to have the higher chances at in any case just overcoming them in the amount of time it takes to defeat the ogres.

I think the reason she isn't challenging it alone is because her only experience against ogres is the little bit she got during the rescue job for {Black.Topaz} the other day. Even that the only time she actually took on an ogre was the last time when we were beating them all to death so I think she just doesn't have any confidence in it.

"I think the same..If Ginger was teaming up with Kamu then, otherwise if she was alone then I think the possibility would have been high."

"I guess so..By the way Al, how far do you think everyone else will hold out?"

"I'm sure it's still difficult for everyone else.."

I haven't properly measured their time but just guessing based on their condition while running in the morning. I think Jeru is barely alone the minimum line but I can't imagine everyone else can make it to the minimum.

"Out of Kamu and Ginger which do you think will return first?"

Hmn, that's a difficult question.

"Kamu I guess?"

I remember the whorl of Kamu's head when I talked to her for just a bit under the tree I was keeping lookout on the 7th floor the other day.

"Ho? I've heard that Ginger is faster?"

"Certainly that's true. But I think Kamu will put quite a bit of effort into it this time. I think it's possible she'll cut 1 hour and 20 minutes."

"Hmn, bet..Don't make that sort of face. Sorry about that."

That's right. I don't like using people giving it their best as the subjects of a gamble.

Including making fun of them during the middle of that as well.

If it's during training or after the results of the main thing come out then laughing or being laughed at can't be helped.

Right now, they're seriously giving their best effort not on the daily training but on the main thing.

Sure enough, the one who first returned was Ginger just as expected. Her time more than exceeded the minimum line at 1 hour, 17 minutes, and 30 seconds. Kamu and Kimu came back cutting just before 1 hour and 20 minutes. And then, a bit unexpectedly even Jeru returned in 1 hour, 22 minutes, and 30 seconds, surpassing the minimum time by over 1 minute. That comes out to Ginger and Jeru earning over 7 minutes in time. With this if Misu can surpass 1 hour and 31 minutes then their three-person group will have obtained the challenge right.

Furthermore, Basutoral can't exceed the minimum time either but even then he should be able to cut 1 hour and 30 minutes now. There was a complicate expression on his face. Cathy doesn't seem to get it very well but it seems she can understand her husband is nervous.

About 6 minutes late for the minimum time Rodrick came back with an expression as if he may die at any moment. The Misu of attention still can't be seen. Ginger and Jeru were staring at the road nervously. In comparison Kamu and Kimu went into the Boil Manor to borrow the shower and wash away the sweat.

The next one to return was Binsu.

His time was 1 hour, 32 minutes, and 10 seconds.

So Misu was no good huh?

This time was unfortunate.

And then, Misu, Sanno, and Denda came back shaped like a sweet dumpling.

Their time was 1 hour, 33 minutes, and 30 seconds.

Ginger and Jeru went to comfort Misu who broke down in tears.

Following that Ruttsu and Karimu returned and finally Hisu came back and fell over barely able to to breath.

Hisu's time wasn't all that bad. She cut off below 1 hour and 50 minutes after all.

It's a surprisingly level of progress compared to one year ago.

For the sake of their muscles, after a short break, I had them do some simple stretches.

"Now then, the ones who obtained the challenge right were Kamu and Kimu. Who are the two you want to challenge?"

I asked the two when they returned from their shower.

Although, it seems the two had long since decided already.

"We'll challenge Saji and Maurso."

Kamu replied.

"Kimu are you fine with that?"

Kimu hides her overflowing fighting spirit as she nods.

"Alright, got it. The day after tomorrow we'll enter the dungeon. The members are Kamu and Kimu. Basutorial and Angela. Also, Miduchi, Gwine, Zenom, Toris, Giberuti, and I. Everyone else get some rest until we return. I think we'll be in the dungeon for 4~5 days."

We split up there.

.....

Year 7446, Month 10, Day 18

The day of our overall combined training.

It goes without saying in regards to Kamu and Kimu but Basutorial and Angela were putting some fierce spirit into it as well. During the break time these four were each in their own groups as they whispered discussing things.

Just from the area I can clearly hear Basutorial and Angela seem to be going with the orthodox method where Angela acts as the front and while she's dealing with things Basutorial looks for openings with his spear or uses magic.

"First off I'll hit them in the face with an arrow. Then I'll quickly throw aside my bow and cut in. You make use of that opening with the spear and.."

"If it goes well then we might be able to earn time but that's dangerous, sister. We can't afford any mistakes. Here I'd like to you have faith in my spear."

"But, that's lacking in decisive power."

"Wasn't that something we already were prepared for right. We need to fight three consecutive matches with ogres right?"

"..I guess. It's no good getting impatient."

"Yeah. Let's do what we're both used to without making any mistakes. Maruso is quite something but after all I think the neck of their side is Saji."

"Certainly..if it's a one one one practice match then he can't win against Ginger after all."

"Against me either."

"That's right."

"I've dealt with 2 ogres before as well so I won't lose to Saji."

"I'm depending on you."

"Yeah, I'll show you I can precisely deal with them. That's why sister you also properly hit with the bow."

"Yeah, leave it to me."

They were talking about that. Additionally just like I did once upon with the Rindobel couple in the former {Sun.Ray} on the 7th floor, they were discussing things using rocks on the ground to plan things out.

When I suddenly noticed it even Basutorial and Angela were writing something on the ground with serious faces as they discussed it. Their strengths are the accumulated combat experience against ogres and Basutral's magic. In comparison Kamu and Kimu have shallow combat experience against ogres but they've got an incomparable level of experience as adventurers in the dungeon and it's possible for them to reasonably deal with any opponent. And then, they have a larger means of long range attacks than Basutorial.

All of the other members were taking a break a bit of distance away so as to not get in the way of their strategy making.

However, obviously the topic of discussion is whether or not the Kimu and Kamu group can overcome the Basutorial and Angela group. Furthermore, Zenom, Miduchi, Toris, Bel, and I were all collectively looking over both groups. I mean, I'm sure they're making bets over it after all. I don't want to hear it.

Zenom was making an uncomfortable face while trying to call out to Ralpa but I stopped him.

Just look at those lively and overjoyed expressions Ralpa and Gwine have on their faces, I'm sure they're already beyond recovery.

If it's done in a place where I can't hear about then I'll just ignore their enjoyment. It's because I can feel progress in the fact that they're able to cope with just that much, it's fine.

Chapter 273: Challenge Right 2

Year 7446, Month 10, Day 19

The teleport room of the 3rd floor. Among several parties that were camping out, there was luckily one spot open along the walls. There's a reasonable number of people so you can hear voices coming from here and there. It's been quite a while since the majority of the people had already become acquaintances.

"How is it? Are you tired?"

Gwine hands the tea Miduchi made over to Kamu and Kimu while asking them.

"Thanks. Hn~ not that much I guess? The pace isn't all that different from the {Butchers} after all."

Kimu smiled while saying.

Well, I'm sure. Now not just the {Butchers} but even the {Exterminators} are clearing through to this teleport room on the 3rd floor on the first day and camping out here after all. It's just the pace that differs a bit and it shouldn't be all that different. Ah, I haven't dispatched Gwine before so they might not be able to get a feel for it~ They might just be making comparisons to how slow other parties than the {Slaughterers} clear through the dungeon.

Other than that, Zenom and others were resting their tired bodies while talking and waiting impatiently for the dinner Giberuti was making.

However, Basutorial and Angela weren't participating in that, they're still enthusiastically whispering about things along the edge of the wall.

Somehow, the challengers Kamu and Kimu seem to have more composure. The side that should be taking them on isn't holding back at all in making preparations almost like the challenger, and thinking that it was a bit amusing. It's fine, if you just calm down and do it the same as usual you won't lose so easily. On the contrary if you get impatient and try to implement some strange strategy you don't usually do, it's more frightening when that falls through.

Well, it's nothing for me to comment on right now. Do whatever you please.

.....

Year 7446, Month 10, Day 20

We smoothly cleared through the 4th and 5th floors and arrived at the teleport room on the 5th floor so we're taking a short break.

The campsite that {Black.Topaz} used is covered in dust but it's been expanded quite a bit. The amount of bags in the spot the {Verdure.Brotherhood} uses has increased quite a bit as well. And then, it's not a corner of the room but there's a considerable amount of bags in the spot {Gehenna.Flare} uses as they seem to be smoothly developing it as well.

On our route through the 5th floor this time we didn't end up with a course that passes through any altar rooms. Our pace at clearing through the 5th floor is obviously faster than the {Butchers}. Or rather, you could say it just doesn't differ much from our pace yesterday though.

I guess since Kamu already experienced a faster pace during the incident with {Black.Topaz} the other day, she wasn't having any problems in particular. But, as expected she isn't used to this pace either so her expression was a bit more serious. On the end of Kimu she hasn't moved at this pace past the 4th floor so the amount of talking she was doing had clearly decreased and her expression was dark. I'm sure it's not exhaustion from lack of stamina for the two of them but mental fatigue. It's good to see that they've properly increased their abilities. After that is just experience.

Once again today Basutorial and Angela were discussing things every time we took a break and there wasn't any particular change.

Just like that, I was watching as Kamu explained things about the traps on the 6th floor to Kimu so they don't have any problems tomorrow.

"In regards to those teleport traps. The {Slaughterers} have already made an almost perfect map from walking around the 6th floor. If we pass through the edge of the hall in order then it's easy to get by them. That's why it seems fine if you don't think about it so carefully."

"..I've heard that a number of times already. But.."

"It's alright. I thought the same until the other day. But, it's already fine. It's not like it's the first time for you either, you've already passed through them a number of times right?"

"That's right but..Even if you tell me the range where you'll fall into the trap...No one knows if it's the same for all of the traps on the 5th floor after all..When I think that I might disappear.."

"If we enter the {Slaughterers} then I don't think that will be allowed. We can't always be taking our time around there forever after all."

"If sister says so then.."

If sister says so huh? It seems there's still not enough trust, in me as well. Though it can't be helped since the length of time they've been together is no comparison though.

After finishing our break, we teleported into the 6th floor.

After teleporting into the 6th floor, we're approaching the third monster room soon.

While I'm standing at the lead of the party I use Identify vision to look into the room from further down the hall.

..It doesn't seem to be dangerous but this is..troublesome. I told everyone "it seems to be fine" and then we walked ahead without lowering our pace. It seems like the other side has noticed us as well. I lightly wave my hand and gesture that we're not monsters.

"Ooh~ Gwine~!"

After entering the monster room and Garuban.Disukorudo or Garun who was keeping lookout for {Gehenna.Flare} while they take a break sharply noticed Gwine and approached while calling out to her. The one who I waved to just now was this guy.

With no difference from usual the orange flames on their armor that's been dyed black stands out.

"Ah, Garun-san. How are you doing?"

"Just listen to this, because of that shitty leader" If it isn't Gwine-han!!"

Pushing aside Garun the leader Heggusu. Whiteflame ran over and took Gwine's hand.

The other members all stood up from the places they were sitting and gathered to approach Gwine and Zenom as well.

"Ah, Firefreed-san, it's been a while."

"It's been a while~!" while~"while~""

"Yeah, I haven't seen you all in a while.."

Obviously they weren't paying the slightest interest in any of us other than Gwine and Zenom. They didn't even greet us. Treating us as if we're air or something that isn't even there.

"Please have some tea."

"If you're fine with something simple we have tea cakes as well~"

"Ah, please let me hear the continuation of that discussion from the other day, the one from when Firefreed-san was younger."

"That sounds great!"

"I want to hear about it as well!"

Zenom sure is popular. We just smile bitterly as we're left behind.

"Hey, shitty leader! Go and suggest a break to them."

"Sh..Shitty..Th..That's so mean.."

Ah, for the time being it seems our existence has been recognized. During the time we were wandering around the 4th and 5th floors unless I took action first, we were really just ignored though...For some reason I feel just a bit happy.

"Can't you at least manage something like that, how useless!"

"..Really~ you're all too loud.. Ah~ Greed-han. We'll at least offer some tea so you all should take a break around here as well. Around that area over there is fine."

The dwarf speaking with a Guranan accent said while pointing to a random corner of the room. It won't even take 2 hours to arrive at the teleport crystal from here. It can't be helped. Shall we take a break? I turned around to everyone with an expression like it can't be helped. Everyone was making vague expressions.

Somehow you know~ Though, somehow I kind of like this man called Heggusu. Though it might be pity from being oppressed by his members. I turn around again in order to reply.

He's gone.

Huh? After one-sidedly declaring to me Gwine has already been abducted!?

Was that just an afterimage!?

"Here you go~ Firefreed-san can have this one.."

"Hey, Mima. We had some Reida leaves right? That.."

"Eh~ to them as well?"

"Idiot, for Firefreed-san and Gwine-chan."

"That's right, there's the leaves from the tea we were just drinking right? The leftovers of that is plenty."

"Ehi~ Gwine-ha~n, sit down over here~"

"Ah, hey! Gwine-chan over here!"

"Ow, it hurts! Don't pull me!"

"Leader! Let her go! You're hurting Gwine-chan!"

"Really, please stop fighting. Then starting from next to Heggusu-san."

"No..No way~"

"Oh~hyu~, ah, we have some bisubanana, eat up, here eat all you want."

"Eh? Is that fine? I'm happy~!"

"Muhyohyo, Gwine-han's smile is so nice~"

"Hey, Garun, Vigo, Bobu, return to keeping lookout, it's you guys turn right?"

"Something like lookout those guys can do""That's right!""

"Really~ well I'm sure they won't miss any monsters""That's right!""

No way you pieces of shit. But, we can't slack off on keeping lookout. Now that it's become like this I already know from experience that {Gehenna.Flare} absolutely won't do something like keeping lookout. However, bisubanana he said? Those are super expensive fruits that cost over 50,000 Z each!? I've only eaten it once during a course meal in a restaurant in the capital...

"{Gehenna.Flare} sure is troublesome right."

"Those guys have always been like that since a while back. Though just Kevin didn't seem to have any complaints."

Kamu and Kimu were talking about it while making faces like it can't be helped.

I'm sure they were like that to {Sun.Ray} as well.

"Angela, Basutorial. Keep lookout together with me. I'll keep an eye on those two halls over there. Angela you watch those two, and Basutorial watch that one over there. After 10 minutes we'll switch with Miduchi, Toris, and Kimu."

.....

"Zenom, Gwine. We're leaving soon."

20 minutes later, I called out to the two of them who were sitting in a circle with {Gehenna.Flare}.

"Since I was called please excuse me."

"Eeeh~ already?"

"Gr..Greed-san, just a bit longer! Gwine-chan still hasn't come to sit by me yet!"

"Nmo~! I'll sit by you next time Bobu. Hey, let go of me."

"Gwine-cha~n!"

"Sorry about that, Bobu. We're already going. Let go of Gwine."

"Ssu! Firefreed-san, please let me hear more stories again next time~ssu!"

"Thanksu!" "Thank!" "Tha~!"

"Greed-han, sorry about stopping you up. Well, we're in your care from here on out as well~"

In regards to what?

"No..Well then, please excuse us."

What do you please to request of us next time?

I'm already sick of it...

However, these guys, they sure do have quite the composure for being on the 6th floor.

I'm sure they've already come a number of times and are somewhat used to it but in some meanings as expected of them.

.....

Year 7446, Month 10, Day 21

After eating the breakfast Giberuti prepared for everyone, we had a meeting before teleporting into the 7th floor.

A confirmation of the regulations.

"It's fine to start with the challengers, Kamu and Kimu's group right?"

"I don't mind."

"That's fine."

"Alright, then let's go over things one last time. Kamu and Kimu are challenging Basutorial and Angela. The winning group joins the {Slaughterers}."

I already discussed it countless times already but I repeat once more.

"The victory and defeat is decided by taking on 1 ogre and the amount of time it takes to defeat it. We'll repeat combat with ogres three times and the group with a shorter total time wins. I'll take time with this clock magic tool. The time starts when I say "begin". Since there's also the matter of the distance and position from the ogre but I'll make sure there's no unfairness on that end."

The four of them nod.

"It's fine for you to do combat in any way. Whether it's cutting with a sword, stabbing with a spear, shooting with a bow, or using magic it's your choice."

I look at the four of them in order as they nod at everything I say.

"Alright, the signal for completion is when you've taken the magic stone out and hold it up. Don't forget."

First off it's necessary to search for just the right ogre for the test. It's not like we're aiming for the 8th floor or a monster room so it's easy that the teleport destination doesn't matter.

"We're already prepared, so bring it on anytime!~"

Kimu said enthusiastically.

"Ffu. Then let's go. Jukuda!"

In a moment we were teleported and we went from the dim 6th floor teleport room to the 7th floor which was bright like midday. It seems there's no ogres or goblins around us.

After confirming our location on the map, it seems like we'd run into an ogre if we just wander around randomly so without any real basis I faced towards the right side. If we're lucky then there should be an ogre in the forest spread out about 100 meters ahead.

"We'll go with {Wedge.One} in that direction. If I discover an ogre then I'll raise my closed left hand."

I've already more or less explained our formations. The dispatched leaders to the {Butchers} have more or less explained things to them so it's plenty to just go over the fine details.

On our way towards the forest I use the spell {Detect.Life} to search for enemies. In my case since my void magic level is high even if I extend the range it can be done with less MP than usual.

There's nothing~

I guess we'll need to wander around a bit.

On our way through the forest, I use {Detect.Life} again.

There's one. It's barely on the edge of the range I can detect, around 200 meters ahead.

Conveniently it seems to be just 1 as well.

It should be in a wasteland or plains ahead of this forest.

An ogre or goblin. Since there's just 1 it's probably an ogre though.

For a short while we continued just like that and the monster entered our sight.

After all it was an ogre.

It's sitting in the center of the plains after the forest opened up and is just dazing off almost like it's bathing in the sun.

I gave the sign of discovering it and lowered my posture.

We approach carefully so it won't notice us no matter what.

In another 15~20 meters from passing through the forest I can see a convenient place covered by bushes.

The size is plenty so it's probably ideal for watching.

I hide behind the bushes and after everyone had gathered over I quietly said.

"There's an ogre over there...You can see it right? It seems to be just 1 so we'll start with it. Kamu, Kimu. Are you ready?"

"We're ready but let us go over things for a moment."

"Yeah, I don't mind."

The two of them started going over things in a whisper.

It seems they're done in less than a minute.

"Is it fine already?"

The two of them nod. Seeing that I nod back.

And then Zenom took out the clock magic tool so they could tell.

It's the usual alarm clock sized one we always use in the dungeon.

"If you want backup say something without hesitation. If things seem dangerous then even if you don't say anything we'll move at our own convenience but don't think badly of it."

Kamu and Kimu were making faces like they already knew that and nodded.

Alright.

"Begin"

While lowering her body Kimu went straight ahead holding the long spear and Kamu went a bit around to the right while holding her bow.

I think there's around 20~30 meters from here to the 1 ogre in the plains?

It depends on their movement speed but it shouldn't even be a minute before the battle starts.

Everyone was watching as Kamu and Kimu approach the ogre from the shadow of the bushes but soon after the two of them were hidden in the grass of the plains.

"6:22"

Zenom said while still holding the clock magic tool.

"About 30 seconds."

Hearing that Miduchi said it almost as if she was responding but I guess she means that it's now 6:22:30, 30 seconds after the test started.

Basutorial and Angela are watching the surroundings of the ogre.

I took the glove off my left hand and tensed up so I could provide back with magic at any time. Since I don't want to lose Kamu and Kimu in this sort of place after all.

Chapter 274: Challenge Right 3

Year 7446, Month 10, Day 21

Just as expected from veteran adventurers Kamu and Kimu made almost no sound.

They're approaching the ogre with the sound hidden as the still strange sound of the wind inside dungeon rustles against the grass.

If it's from here then there's no way to accurately determine their location as they approach while crouched down.

"Hmn, after all putting aside Kimu-san, as expected of sis Kamu.."

Miduchi whispered.

You can tell!?

She sure is amazing~

"Right now around where are the two of them?"

He must have heard Miduchi's whisper. Basutoral whispered as he asked Miduchi.

"Kimu-san is about 30..27~28 meters from the ogre on this side. Sis Kamu is on the right side..about 20 meters away I guess..It's easier to tell Kimu-san."

Are you serious.

Zenom looked at Toris's face while still holding the clock magic tool but Toris just shook his head.

Right~

Well, whatever.

...

Oh.

I see now. If it's mentioned while looking then even I can somehow tell.

Over there and there.

Kimu is just about 15 meters from the ogre.

Kamu is just a bit closer to Kimu on the right side about 15 meters away.

It seems everyone else has noticed as well as they aren't making a sound just focused on them.

They're letting their guards down in watching the surroundings but the only thing ahead is the ogre and them and we just passed through the rear.

There's probably not much meaning in using {Detect.Life} or keeping watch with our eyes for a short while longer.

Kamu stood up and just as only her head appeared for a moment and a bow came up soon after as well.

And then an arrow was fired.

Since it was from a bit to the rear-side of the ogre it didn't notice until it hit the back of it's head.

"Giooo~!!"

The moment the arrow stabbed into it the ogre jumped up as if it was hit and stood up while turning around at the same time.

However, after removing the irritating arrow it crouched down again.

It's probably picking up it's weapon.

Kimu wasn't so slow as to miss that opening.

While still keeping her body held low she charged at it almost like a short-distance Olympic runner.

The only difference is that she's holding a long spear.

Also, she has a long round tail which is the same gold and black stripe color as her hair.

Kimu charged at it without making a sound going in a straight line with her spear.

The moment the crouching ogre noticed Kimu I think there was already almost no distance.

The ogre raised it's body in a hurry just as Kimu's long spear stabbed deep into it's right chest.

"Goo!!? Gaaaa~!!"

As the ogre screams in surprise and pain it seems to have already forgotten that it was just hit by an arrow a moment ago.

It grabs on to the spear stabbed into it's chest with both hands in order to pull it out.

Kamu is running through the grass after throwing down her bow, it doesn't seem to have realized that she's approached aiming for the back of it's knee.

Kamu is making use of her short height as a gnome as her head isn't showing out of the grass.

Most likely the ogre's lung was injured as blood is coming from it's mouth as it fights with Kimu to try and pull the spear out.

Normally the spear should be immediately pulled out.

Putting aside it being grabbed, if it were to be broken then it's all over and ogres have plenty of power to manage that.

Particularly when there's multiple enemies the chances of the ogre breaking it are high.

However, no matter how stupid ogres are, it seems it's not stupid enough to break the spear while it's still stabbed into it's chest(although, I don't think this is related to intelligence. Not just limited to ogres, I think anyone would first reflexively try to pull it out) so just limited to this situation where there's only one enemy, Kimu's method is correct.

It also can act as a cover to keep the ogre from noticing Kamu's approach, or rather that's probably the aim.

"Aaaaaah~!!"

Kimu puts some fighting spirit into it as she yells.

The ogre is backing up as it tries to pull the spear out while Kimu takes another firm one or two steps forward as if to stab it in even further.

It's easy to tell the muscle of the arms holding the spear is swelling as strength is being put into it.

"Guga!!?"

Kamu cut the back knee of the ogre with her short sword.

The short sword she uses isn't quite at the level of the type-64 bayonet I made in the past(though it was mostly father and Arnold that made most of it) but even then it's quite high quality and a sharp blade.

While the ogre showed an opening as it fell to one knee Kimu pulled the spear out and it seems this time she's just trying to keep it in check.

It seems that Kamu cut the back of it's left knee.

Even as blood was coming from it's left knee, the ogre is showing some decent movements as it picks up it's club and twists it's face as if laughing.

It looks as if it's saying that it can do anything as long as it has it's weapon.

However, by that point Kamu had already turned back around in the grass and returned to pick up her bow before shooting more arrows.

Kimu is skillfully holding the ogre back so it can't approach Kamu.

Hm~mm...

Other than how Kamu approached the ogre at the start I guess they're fighting quite carefully.

Both Kimu and Kamu are calling out to each other as they fight with an emphasis on safety.

However, the ogre won't be finished off with just that.

Look.

It's dangerous.

Aaa~

Just from stabbing your spear into the left upper arm of the ogre you thought it did some good damage right?

But, that's a big mistake you know.

Probably, that ogre intentionally was aiming for that.

As proof of that it tensed up the muscle in it's left arm so the spear can't be pulled back out.

And then soon after it swings the club in it's right arm.

However, Kamu managed to shoot an arrow into the ogre's face at just the right timing.

At the moment it flinched from that Kimu seems to have pulled her spear out.

In just a moment longer it was about to destroy the spear.

After Kimu had first stabbed the spear into it the {Strength} she used had long since ended.

Right now, she's not fighting with power but speed and timing.

Kamu is skillfully following up with that.

Things still seem dangerous one on one but if it's like this then it's plenty possible to take on ogres.

And then as they injured the ogre, weakened, and defeated it.

"6:27:20"

Zenom said.

I think he said the start was at 6:21:30 so roughly 6 minutes up to here huh?

Since they used over 1 minute to approach the ogre, I guess that means they were actually fighting for about 4 minutes and 30 seconds?

That's long.

They were too careful.

Well it still depends on how much time it takes for them to take out the magic stone.

It took almost just 15 minutes for them to take out the magic stone.

That's a total of 21 minutes and 10 seconds.

It's incomparably fast compared to the first time entered the 7th floor and gathered magic stones from the ogres.

It might even be as fast as Zulu and Angela now.

I guess they're not losing any face as veteran adventurers.

Now then, next up is Basutorial and Angela's turn. Shall we return once and then teleport back into the 7th floor once more?

Shouldn't they be able to win?

This time once again we conveniently were able to encounter just 1 lone ogre.

Even more conveniently it was in the middle of some plains surrounded by tall grass again.

Just like Kamu and Kimu, Basutorial and Angela said they wanted a bit of time to go over things so I let them.

After having a simple discussion of some things they soon told me they were ready.

Alright.

Zenom lightly tapped on me from the side.

"Begin"

"7:26"

At almost the same time as I declared that Zenom said the current time.

Reflecting on just before, Zenom looked for a good chance while holding the clock and then gave me the signal at a good time.

Hearing my statement, different from Kamu and Kimu, Basutorial and Angela ran off without hiding themselves.

Obviously the ogre noticed them right away.

I can tell that at the same time it started running towards Basutorial holding it's club.

"I guess they intend to earn even just a bit more time..It means fighting it head on but I guess that's a method as well."

Toris whispered.

"I'm sure it's possible for them right now after all."

Zenom said after hearing that but hearing his words Kamu and Kimu made a shocked expression before asking Miduchi.

"Really?"

"Fighting that ogre..head on.."

"Nn~ they have quite a bit of experience fighting against ogres after all..I've seen Maruso and Saji fighting one on one against ogres a number of times as well."

Miduchi replied without taking her eyes off the backs of Basutorial and Angela.

Basutorial ran to the left while holding his spear on guard and Angela is running while holding up her broadsword as well.

Soon after the two of them were within range of the ogre.

I thought that Basutorial would make use of the momentum from his charge to stab it with the spear but it seems he's being a bit cautious.

He's started restraining the ogre with his spear.

Angela is moving to circle around behind the ogre.

The ogre doesn't want that so it's trying to stop her with it's club but Basutorial is efficiently holding it down.

Their movements show they've completely read the actions of the ogre.

Angela is keenly circling around the ogre and creating openings.

Basutorial is making good use of those openings to land thrusts with his spear.

After taking two clean hits from Basutorial when the movements of the ogre dulled a bit Angela quickly went in to cut the nape of it's neck.

"7:28:20"

Zenom said.

It took them 2 minutes to take down the ogre.

While it might look like that they ended up acting quite cautiously.

Is it because it's the first match?

"7:45:30"

A total of 19 minutes and 30 seconds huh?

Angela is used to taking out the magic stones of ogres so Basutorial was just acting as an assistant and following her commands.

Even then they were slower than Kamu and Kimu.

"Hmm.."

"..Mu~"

Kamu and Kimu were making sullen faces.

.....

During the second round Kamu and Kimu said they want Basutorial and Angela to go first so I changed the order.

Basutorial and Angela's time was a bit slower than the first round at 19 minutes and 40 seconds.

In comparison Kamu and Kimu's time shortened quite a bit and even managed to cut 19 minutes.

It was 18 minutes and 10 seconds.

They managed to shorten it by just a bit by gathering the magic stone even faster.

One more round remaining.

Kamu borrowed the magic scimitar from Miduchi and Kimu also borrowed the magic spear from Gwine.

It's thanks to that they managed to achieve that result.

They can fight the second and third rounds using these weapons after all.

Since I already said that they can fight however they want this isn't against the rules or anything else.

If I were to say it's not then I'd have to make them use the exact same equipment and if it comes to that then it would be basically impossible for the members who's position overlaps with Zenom, Miduchi, and I.

Just, Basutorial and Angela were a bit displeased.

Don't make faces like that.

Particularly Basutorial.

Even you've been using the {Bracers.of.Might} since the start right.

And then we started the third round after lunch.

The order returned to the start with Kamu and Kimu first.

If you're wondering why there was this much time in between it's because I wanted them to fight against a lone ogre for the first and second rounds, so it took us some time to search for just the right opponent.

This time, the ogre is in the same plains area but the grass is at highest 10 cm.

Though in exchange for that there's waist-high rocks all over the place but they're not really ones you can hide behind.

However, this time there's 2 ogres from the start.

I announced that I would finish off 1 of them with magic and that would be the signal to start this time.

Everyone else would keep an eye on things from the forest just the same as until now.

There's no bushes this time but undergrowth from trees that's over 1 meter high we can hide behind and watch.

"It seems impossible to approach while hiding..It feels quite difficult."

Toris and Gwine were whispering to each other.

"I guess so."

Gwine replied with a complicated face.

"Hey, if it were you Gwine-chan what would you do?"

Kimu seems to be asking Gwine but if you don't have any projectile weapons there's no choice other than to charge at it.

There's somewhat of a distance between the rocks so it should be possible to sneak up to the ogres from here to the first rock about 20 meters away from them.

However, I'm sure only one person could manage to stay hidden.

"I would attack with magic."

".."

Kimu fell silent.

I'm sure Kimu wanted to ask a method that doesn't involve using magic.

However, they already knew very well that Gwine can use magic.

After all Kimu had the arm that was broken by an ogre healed by her.

And then, they know Basutorial can use magic as well.

But, they've never fought together so they shouldn't know how well they can use it.

In the past when we met on the 7th floor, Basutorial didn't use any magic after all.

Around the time Basutorial was just learning magic I remember him talking about his various elemental magic levels going up but soon after he stopped mentioning it.

Judging from Kamu and Kimu's manner of speech it seems they must be thinking his magic is "nothing significant".

Well, in reality his magic isn't all that significant though.

Even then, since he trained to progressively deal damage with it, he's earned experienced in a tremendously efficient way.

All of his elemental magics are level 2 and his fire magic is level 3.

His void magic reached level 4 around three months ago.

He's not completely at the level of a full-fledged magician but he can already use {Flame Javelin}.

"Are you ready?"

When I asked Kamu and she nodded.

Kimu as well.

"Zenom, since there's also the timing this time it'll be impossible to get an even time. Match it up with us."

"Yeah, got it."

I launched a {Fire Arbalest Missile} into the back of the head of 1 of the 2 ogres that was showing an opening faced away from us and finished it off.

Kamu and Kimu ran off at the same moment the ogre fell over.

Thanks to the magic weapons they were using this time they put up a hard fight and managed the good time of 18 minutes and 30 seconds.

That's a total time of 57 minutes and 50 seconds.

In order to exceed that Basutorial and Angela will need to hurry quite a bit this time.

It's probably no good if they can't finish the combat in less than 2 minutes.

Chapter 275: Challenge Right 4

Year 7446, Month 10, Day 21

We managed to discover just the right ogres.

There was 2 ogres messing around with each other in the middle of some plains with 50 cm or so grass.

They're a distance of about 100 meters from the forest we're hiding.

"Basutorial, Angela. Have you finished your discussion?"

The two of them have already been talking over things for close to 5 minutes.

How about at least replying to me.

Look, just now, even though that was the perfect timing...

And hey!

What are you doing!?

The two of them were tying something long and thin to the end of Basutorial's spear.

Ah..Yeah..that is...

【Arrow.of.Blindness】

【Sawtooth Oak.Iron】

【Condition: Normal】

【Manufacture Date: 24/8/7446】

【Value: 20000】

【Durability: 40】

【Ability: The ability of the launching device plus 15-65】

【Effect: The living creature which this arrow stabs into regardless of the size of the wound or where it is located, as long as the arrowhead pierces through to the point of being completely hidden the target will fall into a state of completely blindness. In the case that it takes effect, the duration of the effect will continue for at least 5 minutes. However, once the blindness has gone into effect once even if the arrow is recovered afterwards and used once again, the blindness effect will have been lost. On that occasion it will just be a high performance magic arrow.】

Are you serious...

I can't say it's not allowed at this point...

But.

"I see now.."

"So that's what they had planned."

Zenom and Toris watched their work with a bit of admiration.

"What are they doing?"

"An arrow?"

Kamu and Kimu tried asking Gwine who was nearby, Gwine said, "It seems to be an arrow..Ah...Nfufu. Just watch and you'll see." while grinning.

"..Isn't it surprising? I had heard about it. When Bel discussed it with me I said that it's fine for Bel to do whatever she wants with them. I was wondering when they were going to use it. I was starting to worry if maybe Bel didn't give it to them."

..Fufu.

I can't help but smiling.

Basutorial and Angela both must have been desperate.

Miduchi knows as well that you can only use that arrow once.

According to Miduchi she already said to Bel, "Most magic arrows lose their effects after being used once".

Even then Bel gave it to them.

Whether it's just one or a bunch of them I don't know but in any case she handed one over.

It might be possible she said to endure it until the last moment or something along those lines.

Well~ something like that doesn't matter at all.

Isn't it fine I guess, using it here.

Including how they're used, I've left all of the arrows in the care of Bel.

And she decided to let them use it.

In that case there's no place for me to comment on it.

I wanted them to be the single arrow that flips over a desperate situation but that's nothing more than my wish.

If you were to ask whether this situation is a crisis for the party then I don't even need to tilt my head and I can deny it but depending on how you think about it, you could say it's a crisis for Angela and Basutorial.

How and why Bel decided to give them the arrow is something insignificant.

There's no way I could understand what she's thinking.

Well it's fine.

It should be a good chance to determine the degree of effect of the arrows.

It's seems they're about ready.

They firmly fixed the arrowhead of the arrow around 10 cm off the end of the spear.

"We're finished with preparations."

"Master, sorry for the wait."

"Yeah, wait just a moment.."

I watch the ogres that are still messing around again while looking for the right timing.

They seem to be messing around almost like baby gorillas or something.

Though they're not that cute.

"..I'll finish off the left one. After I hit it that's the signal. Alright?"

If it's fire that seems like it would stand out a bit too much.

I wonder if I should go with {Stone Arbalest Missile} this time?

Well, I guess it's fine the same as before.

A large flaming arrow was fired from my right hand.

The ogre on the left took the flaming arrow through the side of it's head and died in one hit.

The ogre on the right was confused from the sudden happening.

Zenom has started taking time.

"Iyaaaa~!!!"

Angela let out a loud voice as she was charging ahead.

"!!"

At the same time as that Basutorial ran off as fast as he could while holding the end of his spear ahead.

Angela has a tail with long and tufty hair.

Basutorial's hair is short his tail isn't quite as thick as that of the Tiger-people race.

Those tails weren't waving almost at all as they stood on end.

The two of them should reach the ogre right away.

Obviously the ogre noticed the two of them charging at it and picked up it's club to take them on.

The reason she let out a loud voice to stand out should have been to reduce the amount of time before the battle starts by even just a bit more.

Oh~ it's not the time to just be watching.

I need to be ready in the worst case as well.

Although, if it's them then there shouldn't be anything dangerous about fighting two versus one.

I guess I'll watch while controlling my mana.

The ogre was shouting "Ngooo~!!" while running at them with heavy thuds.

Angela ran off while holding her broadsword ready to swing, Basutorial isn't losing to that as he advances with his spear ready.

Since she doesn't have as much bulk as a spear, Angela's speed is above.

The ogre went for a wide swing with its club to try and crush Angela's head.

Angela lowered her posture in order to evade that as she tried to circle around to the left of the ogre.

Trying to swing a weapon in the right hand to the right would throw off the stance after all.

And then, Basutorial was keeping up with Angela behind her on the right along the way but he stopped around 10 meters to the side of the ogre.

Magic huh?

However, the attack spell that Basutorial is the most used to is {Flame Arrow} and even that takes over 2 seconds to activate.

Hey now what are you doing, and I started to feel irritated.

After all it's long since passed the 2 seconds needed to activate {Flame Arrow}.

Does he intend to slowly take his time using his greatest attack spell {Flame Javelin} or something?

Depending on where it hits it's not as if it can't defeat it.

Just as I was thinking that it was different.

Basutorial was using magic on the end of his spear.

Even though over 5 seconds have passed his spell still doesn't seem to have activated.

I wonder what he is trying to use?

How dangerous.

Should I back them up?

But, both Angela and Basutorial can defeat ogres one on one as long as they have the time.

I guess I'll keep an eye on things for a bit longer.

The spell still hasn't activated after all.

During that time Angela was still holding the attention of the ogre herself.

While circling around to the left she thrust forward with her broadsword.

It seems while rolling to the right she's trying to use attacks which swipe towards its legs.

Though overall she's still moving around towards the left.

However, while it's just a bit, she's gradually being pulled towards Basutorial as he concentrates.

After all ogres can't be underestimated.

Just as expected from a monster that's considerably strong in close combat.

As proof that it's not being dragged along with Angela as she tries to circle around it further to the right.

Hmm, that's dangerous.

I wonder what they're going to do.

I can tell everyone around me is tense as well.

There's already no more than 5 meters between Basutorial who's concentrating and the ogre.

If he ends up taking that club while he's concentrating then...

And then finally, it took close to 10 seconds but Basutorial's spell finally activated.

The spell he used was the reverse magic of {Light}, {Darkness}.

If you normally use the spell {Light} then it lasts 5 minutes, continuing to give off light for 300 seconds or so.

The reverse magic of that {Darkness} only has a duration of 1/100th of that at 3 seconds, but it manifests the pitch darkness almost as if it's absorbing all the surrounding visible light on that one point which is the target of the spell.

It seems that what it absorbs is just the visible light and obviously if {Infrared Vision} gets used there's not much meaning to it.

In most cases, the temperature of a weapon is slightly higher than the surrounding air after all.

In the past, when I tried asking the elf squire in Bakuddo, Mikkensu about it and when using {Infrared Vision} metal-based weapons and such appear bluish black.

However, ogres don't have {Infrared Vision}.

It might be effective in hiding the reach of a weapon against ogres.

Though along with how short the duration of the effect is it's a spell that doesn't have very many uses.

Normally no matter how much you practice it takes several split seconds to activate so unless it's a person who can use spells in combat there's not much reason to practice with it.

In other words, myself though.

..That guy, since he can activate in this amount of time, he must have practiced it several tens of times.

The surrounding light started to get absorbed by the center point that is the target of the spell the end of the spear as darkness starts to light up(though that's a weird way of expressing it) and a pitch black orb spreads out.

The diameter of the orb should be around 3 meters I guess?

The closer it gets to the center of the orb the greater the degree of darkness.

Though it's diameter is close to 3 meters, the only part that you really can't see anything but darkness is around 1 meter in the center so the portion that can be called true darkness isn't all that wide.

After Basutoral held the spear of darkness at the ready once again he let out a war cry of "Let's gooo~!!" while charging the 5 meter distance to the ogre.

Noticing the abnormality in Basutoral's weapon the ogre let out a shout of surprise like "Go?!!?"

It seems that while parrying off Angela's annoying attacks with the club in it's right hand it was properly paying attention to Basutorial as well.

However, the moment Basutorial let out a yell while switching to charge at it with the spear of darkness, Angela went for a risky attack!

..!!

Good!

When Angela went to go for a risky attack, the ogre was prepared to receive it with a powerful attack of it's own.

However, it seems Angela had already read that attack.

She lowered her body even lower, almost as if she was crawling along the ground, and avoided it at the last moment in a considerably unreasonable posture, then after evading the ogre's attack jumped towards it.

There Basutorial's thrust also attacked.

Since ogres are skilled with close combat skills it tried to avoid Basutorial's thrust by rolling itself but it ended up mistaking the distance.

"Geo?!!"

It raises a shout in surprise.

And then, it started rolling around while recklessly swinging the club around it.

Basutorial quickly pulled back his spear.

After Angela stood up from rolling her broadsword was covered in blood.

And then, it didn't take much time at all for them to defeat the blinded ogre.

Probably, the amount of time they spent in combat wasn't even 1 minute.

.....

Basutorial and Angela's time was 17 minutes and 20 seconds.

A total time of 56 minutes and 30 seconds.

It was over 1 minute faster than Kamu and Kimu's time.

So we won't be switching them out huh?

I'm looking forward to next time.

"Aaa..So it was no good huh?"

"Even though the plan we had was good.."

On top of switching to good results from the second round, they used their heads for the combat other than just borrowing magic weapons from Miduchi and Gwine. It seems that they had already asked Gwine and Miduchi about it ahead of time. Yeah. I'm relieved that they weren't just thinking about simply fighting it. We aren't doing something like fair sports after all.

How you can gain the greatest advantage, including negotiations I want them to be able to use their heads.

In that sort of meaning Basutorial and Angela properly negotiated with Bel to use the magic arrow and that {Darkness} spell I can't remember using in a number of years so they most likely requested Miduchi to teach it to him.

"Th..The time is..."

"How was it!?"

Basutorial and Angela came back while holding the magic stone.

"Congratulations. It's your win."

Zenom told them while smiling.

Hearing that the two of them made relieved expressions and sat down on the spot letting out a sigh of relief.

"We lost this time but we won't lose next time."

Kamu is claiming victory next time.

"Congratulations, the two of you. But it's just as sis Kamu said, next time we'll win."

Kimu held out her hands to Basutorial and Angela.

And then, while making an expression like oh?, she looked at Angela's head.

Angela made a shocked expression before taking off her helmet and inspecting the surface of it.

Is it scratched or something?

Incidentally, the design of Angela's helmet is the same as Miduchi, Gwine, and mine. It's similar to the JSDF ones with a helmet neck guard in the back fundamentally made from rubber protectors.

It's almost like the type of helmets from the sengoku era other than the fact that it doesn't have anything like the horns or ornaments out of the top of it.

Though that's only obvious since I made it as an imitation of those.

However, the one exclusively for the dog-people race that was made for the wolf-people Dokushu family of Bakuddo has some protuberances for the ears on the top as well as using three large plates rather than the five layered ones in the back.

I don't know the reason.

There was a scratch along the surface of the helmet.

The ogre's club must have grazed it.

Hey, stop making such a pitiful face.

If it's just that degree of a scratch then you can fix it right away taking it to Rassgu's place.

"Good work the two of you. We'll go to Dorureon today with everyone. It's my treat."

After I said that everyone cheered.

I was able to see the efforts of the four of them.

Well it's fine.

Eh? Even Cathy as well?

Ah, might as well, let's just call everyone.

I'm sure there's a number of members who are bored on their day off.

Chapter 276: Towards 10th Floor 1

Year 7446, Month 10, Day 21

I talked about current matters while eating and drinking at Dorureon.

"This time, it was unfortunate for Kamu and Kimu, but I think they really gave it their best to the limit. Basutorial, Angela, you two might be in danger next time."

It seems they've had a bit of alcohol but it's still not a time to get drunk yet.

"I'm still fine for the time being. I don't intend to hand it over that easily."

It seems that today Basutorial gained a bit of confidence.

"It's the same for me as well. No matter who the opponent is I won't lose when it comes to defeating ogres."

Angela raised her spirit in good condition as well.

"I have something I need to discuss in that regard. It's about {Magic.Items} like the sword and spear. Starting the next time I intend to ban the usage of all {Magic.Items}. Since it seems that if I leave it be it would become the standard after all."

Everyone nodded hearing this. Yeah. Since Miduchi's scimitar and Gwine's spear showed actual results this time I'm sure they would be the first ones targeted. There's also Toris's {Flame.Tongue} and depending on the case Zenom's {Cold Axe.Of.Returning} as well, at the very least they're known within the {Slaughterers} so I think they're easy to target.

Since it's not just about clearing through the exam, but after that they'll need to fight against not only ogres without {Magical.Weapons} like that but trolls and such as well.

"What will be prohibited is poisons as well as {Magic.Items}. After that it's fine no matter what you do."

Hearing that there were those making disappointed faces and those with relieved faces, a variety of different reactions. It can't be helped right. It's a slightly strange way of putting it but it's almost like cramming at the last-minute for an exam and it's hard to consider it as the user's real ability. It might end up in simple fights and negotiations with the owners(borrowers) over the order they can borrow them. It's not good manners, yeah.

After everyone seems to understand on to the next topic.

"Tomorrow morning we're having comprehensive training. There's no training in the morning the day after tomorrow or the day after that but the day after tomorrow there's individual training for each of the teams as well."

Everyone stopped talking while listening to what I say.

"On the next day after that. I mentioned it before but when we {Slaughterers} enter the dungeon starting the 25th we'll be aiming for the 10th floor. This time just like when we cleared the 8th floor we won't be dispatching anyone from the {Slaughterers}. It's a bit of trouble for everyone for another week but I hope you won't overdo things during that time. Kamu you lead the {Butchers} and Ginger you lead the {Exterminators}."

It's a reconfirmation just in case. It took the shape of me designating the leaders but even if I just leave them to pick I'm sure it would have ended up like this, so it should be fine.

"We'll arrive at the teleport crystal of the 8th floor on the 27th. On the 28th, the next day when we teleport into the 9th floor we'll choose our destination to some extent. If we can teleport into a place that leads to that central plaza like area before the afternoon then we'll aim to clear through just like that."

Hmm. I had already predicted it but not a single person seems to be worried.

"If we can smoothly clear it then after that we'll keep an eye on things. If there aren't any problems in particular then we'll return to the teleport crystal on the 8th floor again and then bring Giberuti along to the teleport crystal on the 9th floor. We'll take a look into the 10th floor after that."

Since there weren't any questions in particular everyone started enjoying the food and alcohol again.

Year 7446, Month 10, Day 28

We repeated teleporting into the 9th floor around 20 times. Our map of the 9th floor is at about a 50% completion rate after all. I'm sure it's good luck that we can teleport into a decent location within 20 times. There's a period of several tens of seconds where the teleport crystal can't be used immediately after and there's the trouble of having to confirm the location we teleported into as well(Though the trouble of that is quite a bit lighter for us since we have Gwine). Though it's just 20 times you could say it's a painful loss of over one hour in time.

After that it took us around five hours to arrive at the location of what we believe to be the center of the floor. We had to pass through five monster rooms in order to get up to here. Of those, one of them was an altar room but it was empty.

The current time is just about noon.

"Since it's a good time, shall we have some lunch?"

There was also the opinion that either way we'll be returning to the 8th floor after we clear it so the lunch Giberuti makes is better. However, with the time it takes teleporting, moving, and gathering magic stones it's easy to imagine it would be long past lunch so in the end we decided to bring along bentos.

In an appropriate area just before entering the plaza we took a break while also having our sobagaki bento for lunch. There's a variety of ways to eat sobagaki. The standard way is to pour olive oil over before eating it. Also, mixing some minced chicken coated with salt and spices into it and deliciously eating them together. It's also good to throw some thin slices of ham on top of it as well.

This time it was a bit expensive but we a version of warm sobagaki with spices as well as things like wild lemon juice squeezed over top. It's quite refreshing like this and delicious as well.

We had some rest for a period of time and everyone finished up going to the bathroom.

"Alright. Let's go."

Everyone stood up and started checking their equipment and whether or not they've forgotten anything.

.....

It was a dreary location like the center of the 8th floor with just rough rocks laying around here and there. Everyone is about to start advancing in the {Wedge.Two} formation with Miduchi at the lead using {Party-ization}.

We aren't going to make the same mistake again this time.

We'll beat down the gatekeeper-like Mino together with everyone. All 10 of us. There's Bel and Miduchi who use the bow. Other than me, there's Toris and Zulu who are using the shield, and the reliable Zenom as well. Ralph and Angela should do some good work too. And then, Gwine and Basutorial can dish out some big damage.

Even if it's a Minotaur that swings around a giant weapon, there's no way it can win against this lineup right.

Mm.

The sensation of Miduchi's {Party-ization} disappeared.

Here we decided to have one more meeting for the sake of reconfirming things.

After all, let alone {Identify} not even magic can be used.

"It's just as expected. I said it before but the floors of this dungeon are protected by a Minotaur. I think without a doubt there will be one here as well. There's no difference from the information I heard from the King and the 8th floor after all."

"But, the first guardian has amazing equipment right?"

Gwine said a bit anxiously.

"Yeah, that seems to be the case. But if there's only one Minotaur then I'm sure we can deal with it in any way we want."

There's no guarantee that there will be just one but I don't want to lower everyone's morale here. I said it lightly on purpose.

"Listen well. Probably but the moment we enter the sight of the opponent the surroundings should get bright all at once. If it's possible then keep one eye closed. We'll go with {Wedge.One} from here. We'll use three meter intervals."

I said that before passing by Miduchi and taking the lead.

"We'll be advancing slowly but the moment things get bright assume that it's the start of combat. It's fine to think that we've been discovered at that point so you can switch to free usage of your weapons. However, don't forget the possibility that there could be multiple opponents. Though it's probably just one."

Though I don't want to lower the morale, just in case I need to give a warning. So if the worst case scenario happens no one goes into a panic.

"In the case that there's multiple opponents, "in the case you discover new enemies, shout out and warn everyone of the location"."

Ralpa said what I was going to say before I could.

Can this girl not keep her mouth shut?

Though it can't be helped since I've repeatedly said this over to the point of wondering how many times it been but even then.

Even in the practice maneuvers in the past it was these sorts of fellows that were the first to be judged as killed in action.

Well, there's not much use in saying anything at this point.

"It's fine as long as you understand. Everyone, don't get careless in keeping watch in the direction you're in charge of."

After that one more thing.

It's something we definitely need to confirm.

Though I've already predicted it, just in the case.

"Toris"

"Yes."

Toris moved a bit of distance from everyone towards a large rock.

Everyone's watching him.

"{Status Open}..Alright. Emeron"

Oooh..

Just fitting for the name {Flame.Tongue}, the blade was surrounded by flames.

Everyone smiled seeing it.

Toris quickly returned the sword to it's scabbard.

Well, I don't mind even if we're noticed because of this.

Either way things will get brighter.

.....

Things aren't getting brighter.

Hm~m.

"Miduchi, Bel. Just as originally planned I'll decide whether or not to use them but..in the case there's only one Minotaur, use it immediately if it's far too strong. If there's multiple opponents or the opponent isn't a Minotaur, then make sure you properly select your targets. You brought three of them this time right? Miduchi use one and Bel use the remaining two."

"Yeah."

"I understand."

Alright, let's go.

.....

We start advancing towards the teleport crystal of the 9th floor.

Just around the time we could vaguely see the outline of the central pillar, the 30 meter high ceiling suddenly lit up and that usual banging sound as if the air was being torn apart spread through the plaza.

Ahead of our sight under the sun-like light from the ceiling, there was a Minotaur just like we had expected as well.

The number of them far exceeded my expectations at 9.

I thought at most there would be 3~4 of them.

No, it's not like I had any basis for it.

Those 9 Minotaur all yelled in unison with a "Vumooo~!!!" as if they were showing their anger or hatred towards us intruders before charging forward.

There's 1 with a slightly larger body that's close to 2.5 meters tall wielding a halberd.

There's 1 similar to the one we often sneak attack from behind on the 8th floor that's over 2 meters tall wielding a battle axe.

There's 1 that's just barely over 2 meters wielding a bardiche.

The other 6 of them are all just around 2 meters but they're all brawny and muscular showing their splendid physique.

Each of them are wielding a trident, cross-spear, voulge, glaive, partisan, and hand axe.

"Uge!! There's a lot of them!"

"Ralpha, don't break the formation! We'll receive them using {Echelon.One}! Everyone can freely use their weapons, {weapons.all.free}.!! Miduchi, Bel, start with the huge ones!!"

The moment I gave out those orders, first off two arrows went flying towards the Minotaur that were charging over here, and then soon after one more arrow went flying.

The arrows splendidly rendered the 3 largest ones powerless.

With the effect from the arrow attacks the 3 large ones started yelling, "Bega!!!", "Gudai!!!", "Godoyadwo!!!" as they turned into nothing more than large targets swinging their weapons causing unrest among the other Minotaur.

"They're coming!!"

Right now is the chance while the opponent has faltered as their formation fell apart in the middle of their charge.

With me in the center, Zenom on my left, Toris on his left, Angela on the farthest left, Ralph on my right, and Zulu to her right, then right behind us Gwine and Basutorial are ready with their spears.

Miduchi and Bel are a bit further behind that firing off arrows at point blank distance.

Since we have to take on the Minotaur that use long range weapons, matching up with the opponents we have close to a 5 meter interval between each of us as well.

Luckily the Minotaur that was holding the hand axe which seemed to be the easiest target came charging towards the center swinging it around.

Time to kill.

I'll quickly finish up this weak looking one to reduce the numbers.

"Gwine you back up Angela, Basutorial you back up Zulu!! Start finishing them off from the outer edges!"

I had everyone fortify their defenses and sent Zulu and Angela to back up to comparatively fragile edges.

With the 3 that were blinded and turned into nothing more than electric fans to the side, the number that our vanguard is facing off against is 6.

If I can quickly finish off the one in front of me and become free then we'll soon gain the advantage.

However, the Minotaur that was wielding the hand axe was unexpectedly skilled and let alone finishing it off, I ended up having to pour all of my nerves into just being able to evade, block, and parry its attacks.

I think it's an opponent that would have been dangerous for anyone else to take on besides me.

There's a major problem in this one's skills being unexpectedly high but even then I think we were lucky that I was the one who ended up dealing with it.

Probably, its skills are above mine.

This sort of opponent, it's the first time.

Since I'm using my specialty bayonet I'm barely managing to hold out but let alone my skill with close combat techniques, it's probably even better than that Baron Logan from the first knight group.

Since I can't focus on anything but fighting, I've already lost my sense of time.

But, even then I've already been fighting at my full for over 5 minutes.

I'm making use of my speed and moving around to evade the attacks but I'll probably only last another few minutes.

I have confidence in my stamina but eventually I'll definitely run out of breath.

In comparison the Minotaur doesn't seem tired at all.

Rather it even feels like the speed and power of its swings with the axe are gradually increasing.

Then, by the time I noticed the number of Minotaur had been reduced by 4.

And, I really don't have the leeway to be paying attention to my surroundings though.

"Zenom-san, Ral, Toris, start by finishing off the large ones in the back!! Zulu and Saji back up Maruso, the others back up Al!!"

Miduchi rapidly gave out orders.

It's damned pathetic but this is my level of skill, there's no helping it.

Hurry up and save me!

Chapter 277: Towards 10th Floor 2

Year 7446, Month 10, Day 28

The Minotaur in front of me raises its hand axe up, then just as I think it's about to swing down it hides behind the small buckler on its left arm and changes the trajectory midway to mow me down.

Since I was learning from all of the combat up until now I was barely able to succeed in avoiding the axe.

However, thanks to that my stance collapsed and I ended up taking a kick from the Minotaur to my side.

It wasn't a kick with any momentum behind it so I was somehow able to endure it.

I haven't taken any attacks from its weapon yet but I've been hit by that small buckler twice and this is the second time I've taken a kick.

My body is creaking warning me of the danger.

However, at the same time as I took the kick from the Minotaur I succeeded in stabbing a throwing needle into its thigh.

Just now was the third throwing needle I've been able to stab into the mino.

Of course, my throwing needles have the numbing poison smeared on them.

Different from the cheap product used for ogres, it's the highest quality poison made at the high-end adventurer medicine shop Misshizu.

It's an extremely powerful poison which if I were to get hit by it my entire body would be paralyzed in less than 30 seconds.

However, even then the movements of the mino aren't getting any weaker.

Up until now I've been able to land four attacks on the mino.

One thrust to the right flank with my bayonet, just the same a slash with my bayonet to its right forearm.

And then the two stabs from throwing needles I've thrown at it.

This time is the third stab.

With this it's the fifth hit.

All of the attacks other than that were blocked or parried by its small buckler or evaded.

However, it's my first time facing off against an opponent that was completely composed even after taking a total of five attacks.

It's only obvious for the Minotaur that protects the 8th floor but whether it's ogres, trolls, or even the horned bear, if I landed a good hit on them their movements weakened a bit.

If I were to land two clean hits then it was normal for their movements to visibly weaken from the pain.

This fellow is completely miraculous.

It's frightening to even imagine exactly how much HP it has.

This time, I had all of the members of the {Slaughterers} smear high-quality numbing poison on their weapons before we charged into combat.

Just from what I was able to observe even when I'm shitty busy, other than this Minotaur that it's in front of me, the numbing poison doesn't seem to be having any effect on the one wielding a trident that Angela and Gwine are up against as well.

Putting aside the large 3 that we blinded at the start, it seems to be reasonably effective against the rest.

The mino is swinging down its axe again.

This time before it could make any sort of cheap tricks, it was only several tens of centimeters but I was able to put some distance between us and it's completely hit air.

Making use of that opening I tried I thrust at it with the tip of my bayonet but was blocked by the small buckler.

I had already read that.

I predicted that it would block me with it's small buckler.

This time, I had my left hand just before the magazine area of the bayonet around the trigger(if it were the normal model, then it would be around the hand guard curve or top part of that), but at the same time as I thrust it I moved it along the curve of the magazine.

It's faster to push it forward from the trigger than to pull it back from the hand guard and easier to put in more strength.

The moment I was blocked by it's small shield, in the form of pushing up from the magazine area I twisted the bayonet vertically and at the same time body slammed into the buckler with my left shoulder.

Then I twisted my left hand around to hold the left side of the fore grip of my bayonet while holding it up.

I let go of the grip with my right hand and grabbed on to the guard of the sword coming out from the barrel while holding it up as well.

After taking my body slam it's the same as if the mino's left arm with the buckler fixed to it is restricted.

And then, all at once using the momentum of ducking my body down with the bayonet facing the sky I aim the gun stock towards the left cap slamming it down.

I'll break the plate of your kneecap!

However, the mino managed to evade it with quick movements that exceeded my expectations.

Since it forcefully evaded my attack there was some excess in the movements of the mino.

In that instant I was somehow able to put some distance between us and recover my stance, it's time to start over from the beginning again.

This fellow is amazing.

"Vumoffu, bo~ge~!!"

You're loud~ Mino.

This time I'll make the first move.

Rather than using bayonet fighting, I made use of movements with the bayonet to thrust directly at it twice and close the distance.

Both of the thrusts were parried by the small shield.

And then the third time.

You thought it was a direct thrust again right?

Sorry about that, it was a low roundhouse kick!

My roundhouse kick cleanly hit the mino's right knee.

When it's stance was thrown off I went for a stab with the end of my bayonet.

However, this was parried by the mino's hand axe.

Immediately after, the mino's buckler comes for a strike.

I lower my back and it's swing goes over me.

At the same time I take a throwing needle out from my right gauntlet with my left hand and throw it at close distance with a side toss(naming: Myun).

"Goo!!?"

It stabs into the loincloth of the mino, it magnificently hit it in the crotch.

Even supposing that loincloth is a {Magic.Item} on the same level as the one Zulu has it would only reduce the damage by a bit.

Some blood started flowing down from inside of the loincloth.

The mino's face twisted unable to endure the pain for the first time.

With that expression that's probably the case.

And, almost simultaneously arrows came flying from two directions, one of which was blocked by the buckler, but the other one nicely stabbed into the mino's right shoulder.

That's a big help!

It seems Miduchi and Bel have started to back me up.

Fuhahahahaha, with this we have the strength of 100.

It's one versus three.

Furthermore there's Bel's bow at point blank distance.

With this there's no chance of losing.

Since the two of them started to back me up I finally was able to gain some leeway to think.

I was able to confirm the state of the battle once again as well.

Gwine and Angela are still fighting against the mino wielding the trident and in good health.

Although, Basutral and Zulu ran up there so there's two people standing in front of it holding it in check and two people keeping it in check with the spear(it seems that they really don't have any leeway to attack, so just keeping it in check is their limit) but as expected things have gotten easier on their end.

Incidentally, Angela's suffered a considerable number of injuries and was told to fall back by Miduchi who is continuing to back me up.

In regards to the 3 large ones, before the two archers {Blast.Back} came to back me up they shot a number of arrows at them and since they couldn't see both the one using the battle axe and the one using the bardiche were defeated by Ralpha and Toris.

The largest one of them all that was wielding a halberd is facing off against Zenom but unexpectedly it's already escaped the state of blindness.

Thinking they should back him up it was just as Toris and Ralpha are both letting out battle cries as they charge from different directions.

With this all of the fights are one versus many(though just Angela and Gwine's were that way from the start).

I can relax a bit with this.

After this I just need to carefully cook it up.

Thinking that I adjusted my grip on my bayonet and glared at the mino.

Miduchi and Bel are still continuing to shoot arrows.

I start making attacks matched up with their arrows.

My thrust was blocked by the buckler again but their arrows hit.

In the opening it flinched a bit from that, I grabbed the inside of it's right hand with my left hand obstructing it's movements and at the same time put in a kick with all my strength.

I felt the sensation of smashing something with the top of my right foot.

"Goo!! o.."

The mino stiffened up.

Hmph, it didn't just bend over but it reflexively brought it's left hand down to it's crotch.

That brought down it's buckler in just the right position to hide itself.

What an obscene fellow.

That pose isn't a good one to show to young women.

I thrust towards it's chest with the bayonet I was holding in my right hand.

It cleanly hit.

The mino lowered both of it's hands.

One more hit.

This time I properly held on with both of my hands as I thrust it into the center of it's stomach and then sliced downwards.

Along with a splat the intestines of the mino start spilling out of it's stomach.

I met eyes with the mino.

It's face was twisted in pain and it's drooling like a cow.

It's expression is just a bit pitiful.

Arrows shot into both of those eyes.

I twisted around to it's side stabbing into it's neck for the finishing blow and then kicked it down.

Immediately after I ran to the right to back up Zulu and the others.

"Miduchi and Bel you take care of the big one!"

Just as I shouted that and was about to run off Basutoral's spear stabbed into the chest and Gwine's spear deeply into it's stomach.

If it has two spears tabbed into it from different directions then it should already be fine.

When it comes to that then even if it's an ogre they'll be fixed in position and unable to move.

I'm sure Zulu will finish it off.

"Angela, you alright!!?"

It seems her injuries weren't fatal.

While she was crouched down on her knees I saw a victory smile from below her helmet.

Wait just a bit longer.

After finishing off that huge one I'll quickly heal you up.

"Vumooo~!! Gizabada~!!!"

The huge one was raging about as it violently swings it's halberd.

It's face seems to be twisted in anger after seeing the situation of the surroundings.

Right now Ralpa and Toris are bearing the brunt of it's gale-like halberd as Zenom stands a bit of distance away looking for an opening to throw his axe.

And then, it was just as Ralpa managed to twist the end of the halberd with her tomahawk obstructing it's movements.

Nice!

There's no way Zenom would miss that opening.

"Ssei!!"

With a spirited yell Zenom threw his axe.

After it left his hand the magic axe spun around while flying and with a thud stabbed deeply into the right shoulder of the huge one.

It let go of it's halberd with it's left hand to try and pull out the axe when all of a sudden another two thuds sound out as arrows stab into it.

An even bigger opening appeared in the huge one.

"Emeron!"

There Toris went for the deciding blow with his sword surrounded in flames.

The sword of flames {Flame.Tongue} slashed through the side of the big one and at the same time a sizzling noise sounded out as the wound was burnt.

That, isn't it stopping the bleeding as well?

Even then it seems like a considerable amount of blood is coming out.

The movements of the huge one weakened a bit but even then it seems it still had plenty of energy left.

However, I've already arrived at the battlefield, so I'm sure it's just a matter of time.

"How's this? Is there still any pain?"

I used the spell {Cure All} a number of times before asking Angela.

"I'm sorry, I still feel like it's a bit numb.."

"Hn, I see."

I use healing spells on her even more and confirm if the pain has completely disappeared.

I put heavy emphasis on everyone making sure to tell me if there's any pain remaining.

In the worst case scenario, that might end up being the difference between and life and death after all.

Recently even my combat slaves don't show any restraint and let me know if there's even the slightest bit of pain remaining.

"This, it's an amazing wazamono. 【Blood Point.Halberd】 huh?"

"Certainly that seems to be the case, Zenom-san. But no one uses the halberd..Though I guess Rubi does."

"You're going to let him use it? It's a waste for the quality of it."

"Even if you say that, since we managed to obtain it."

"Hey, did you find the {Magic.Item}?"

"I still haven't found it. Bel, how about over there?"

"I've checked everything over here. The weapon seems reasonably good but nothing else. How about you Gwine?"

"Wait just a moment..Ah!"

"Hn?"

"I think that this is it. Miduchi-san, please take a look at it. How about it?"

"..Certainly. But somehow the reaction seems weak."

"I thought so too."

"Show it to me for a minute. {Status Open}..【Bloody.Hand Axe】..What's this?"

"Ral! Let go of it!!"

"Uhyi~!! Don't yell so suddenly, Miduchi."

What is it?

"The name isn't ordinary! It might be a {Cursed Item}."

"Eeh!!?"

Cursed item..

There's no way that's the case right.

The mino was using it after all.

Though it's strength certainly wasn't ordinary but there wasn't anything particularly strange.

Here.

【Bloody.Hand Axe】

【Mithril Steel.Hinoki】

【Condition: Normal】

【Manufacture Date: 28/10/7446】

【Value: 1】

【Durability: 19998】

【Ability: 30-100】

【Effect: It's ability as a hand axe is completely normal. However, every time you land an attack and it bathes in the blood of the target, including the penetration of the attacks, the accuracy, damage, and other abilities increase. The duration of the increase is the level of the target who's blood it bathes in multiplied by 60 seconds. The increase in ability and duration of the effect can accumulate. Furthermore, in order for the increase in ability to take effect the attacks must contain blood-thirst, or otherwise an emotion that corresponds to that as they're performed.】

It's a vicious item that is comparable to a {Cursed Item}.

Chapter 278: Towards 10th Floor 3

Year 7446, Month 10, Day 28

Hmm, {Bloody.Hand Axe}, huh?

It's quite the {Magical.Weapon}. It might be just right for Ralpa. For as long as the battle continues it increases in effectiveness, it's perfect for that idiot. If it continues like this then the only one who has a chance of continuing to go to the front lines even into their 20s, 30s, and maybe even 40s is Ralpa after all.

For the time being I decided to twist and turn the hand axe while observing it and then held the handle while swinging it.

"Yeah, well I'm sure it's fine. It seems like there's no problem with Ralpa either, it has a violent name but I'm sure it doesn't have anything like a curse or spell on it."

I said that before finally grabbing on to the handle letting Miduchi relax. While Miduchi was asking Ralpa, "Are you alright?", after seeing me hold the handle she didn't question it anymore than that.

"Hmn. After all it doesn't suit me. Hey Ralpa, I'm going to leave this in your care. It seems to have magic cast on it, and it's a hand axe, so it should be just right."

"Eh? But, this axe.."

I thought that Ralpa would be excited but somehow that doesn't seem to be the case.

Why? and just as I was thinking that I thought of something. The tomahawk she's using now is one that Zenom used for many years before giving to her. It was originally of considerably good quality so it's lasted quite a long time.

Several years back, when I turned the vampire into dust I ended up doing it along with the hand axe Ralpa was using at the time as well. That time, after she ended up losing her weapon Zenom let her use his hand axe and then switched to using a sword we picked up. After we returned I bought a pretty good axe as an apology. After that Zenom used the brand new axe and Ralpa started using the axe that Zenom had used up until then. After that, even after I handed the magic axe to Zenom, Ralpa has continued to use the old axe without changing weapons.

Come to think of it I don't remember when it was but Ralpa mentioned it while she was drunk.

"You know, I wanted this axe. Since I was small Zenom would always protect me with this axe, it's also because I'm familiar with it but to me it's the most reliable thing."

It's nothing more than simple sentimentality but if she's fine with that then I felt it wasn't my place to say anything more so I just let it be like that. Since she's always seen it used from nearby over many years I thought she would have used it a number of times and because I thought it would be the easiest one for her to be comfortable using. Being used to the small differences in the balance and weight of a weapon can be a big difference in fighting power but it was also because the foundation of my thinking is that, "if it's the same type of weapon then there's no big difference no matter what you're using".

Of course, I don't think there's all that much of difference between something that's high-quality and a wazamono as well. If I were to use an extreme argument then I don't think there's much of a difference between something with magic on it as well. It's only obvious that the higher weapon quality is better but no matter how dull of a weapon it is it'll hurt to be hit by and if you're stabbed through with it there's no difference that it'll be a fatal blow. If you were to ask me the minute differences in damage that show up using {Identify} are nothing more than a charm or consolation.

Personally the value that I find to be the most important is Durability and whether or not the shape of the weapon is just right for being used or not. Though Miduchi laughed when I said this. She may have thought I was joking or something. Though, I haven't forgotten what she told me at that time, "there may be enemies out there that can't be damaged unless it's a weapon with magic cast on it". There's a huge world out there so I'm sure there's monsters like that as well. Like Dragons or something.

In any case, there's not much of a difference when it comes to a weapon that can only show its effect on the user. It's nothing more than a luxurious personal-use weapon that an adventurer or low-class soldier would treasure. Of course, I won't deny the meaning in fortifying your equipment with those sorts of high efficiency items. It's only obvious to try and equip yourself with even just a bit better quality equipment and even I want them. It's just that I don't have as much concern with it as everyone else.

It's just that I don't want to sell them yet because of the "enemies that can't be damaged without magic weapons" then I mentioned and other than that it's not as if there's no meaning to them at all for the time being, but as a matter of fact there isn't any great significance to them.

"I see. Then I'll loan it to someone el" I didn't say I don't want it right! I'll use it!"

Ah, is that so?

Then say that from the start.

"Here, take good care of it."

"Yeah!"

Ralpa immediately started swinging it around as she checked the balance of the axe.

"Are there any other magic items?"

Thinking that all 9 of them might have been holding on to {Magic.Items}, I wonder if it's possible?

There's no way right.

After all.

Things aren't that convenient.

{Bloodpoint Halberd}

{Double-edge Battleaxe}

{Single-edge Baridche}

{Reverse-Thorn Trident}

{Cross Spear}

{Pole Voulge}

{Black Glaive}

{Ribbon Partizan}

All of the wazamono that we obtained this time. Every single one of them has an extremely high value. If we sell all of them I'm sure it would be over 40,000,000 Z. Furthermore, just from what I can tell the {Double-edge Battleaxe} has a feel similar to the one we obtained from the Minotaur guardian on the 8th floor(after we brought it back and confirmed it, other than the chips made during combat and manufacture date it was exactly the same).

Furthermore, the largest one that was using the halberd was called a {Minotaur.Guard Leader}, and then the others were all {Minor Minotaur.Sentinel} or {Lesser Minotaur.Sentinel}. Incidentally the levels of almost all of them were single-digits but just the {Lesser Minotaur.Sentinel} that I was having trouble with was over level 30. That makes sense..screw you, shit. Well at least the experience points I gained were that much higher thanks to that.

After seeing the status Miduchi was muttering things like, "I wonder if this large one is the usual guardian of the 9th floor? But, the one that was holding the magic weapon was different.." but that sort of stuff doesn't matter at all. The problem is that there's a high chance all of these things will eventually respawn. Next time I'm sure we can definitely take the first move from behind them but 9 of them is still difficult. Ah, no, I guess that isn't the case? I don't really know but we need to try it here a number of times.

"Miduchi, save your thinking for later. There's no guarantee there aren't anymore enemies..though the lightning bolt cage has disappeared, so I guess there aren't any?"

I returned to around where we were noticed by the Minotaur and placed several rocks as a rough marking.

I guess it was around 50 meters or so from the pillar?

Just the same as the 8th floor it's around where the rocky area stops huh?

During the time it's dark the visibility is at best around 50 meters.

Even that's only when you're looking carefully.

Normally you can only see about 40 meters or so.

Just the same as the 8th floor the teleport crystal of the 9th floor was in the center of the pillar in the middle of the floor.

After carrying all of the items in we're taking a break. During that time Ralpa is helping Zulu and Angela carry the corpses of all the mino into one spot before using the magic bracelet to change them to water all at once. Ah, it would have been best if we just used it to change the corpses of the mino on the 8th floor into water as well right. But, I didn't want to use it then.

"Al, it's troublesome that 9 Minotaur will respawn."

"Al-san, what should we do?"

"Judging from the width of this hall, even if we all line up to the limit at best wouldn't it be 4-5 people right?"

Zenom, Toris, and Bel said. Yeah, I know. We still don't know in what way the mino will appear either. I'm sure the way they appear will be the same as the 8th floor but whether they appear all in one line, appear cramped together in a group, or already in formation is completely unknown.

"Wait just a minute."

I raise my hand interrupting them and sort out my thoughts a bit.

Once the minos respawn we can't use magic or Unique Abilities anymore so it's difficult to choose the strongest looking one and defeat it with a sneak attack. Leaving luck to the heavens and taking down 4-5 of them is probably the limit. It will mean our only advantage is that we can definitely sneak attack them from behind. Though even that is an insane advantage.

Probably, if we attack them from inside of this teleport crystal room then even if we end up missing the high level ones I don't think we will struggle as much as before. However, it's different if we try to come back here from the outside again. There's a high probability that it will end up being a dangerous fight again like just now. The salvation is that the weapons the mino are holding will probably drop in quality, though just that much, just as mentioned before if you ask me that isn't much of a consolation at all. In the first place, we only have 20 {Arrows.Of.Blindness} remaining.

What should we do?

I'm sure we have some leeway until the mino respawn.

Should we just take a look into the 10th floor for a bit and then stop exploring the dungeon here?

Even the treasure that appears up until the 9th floor is considerably good.

If we just keep exploring the dungeon just like we have until now countless times I'm sure there's a high chance we'll find plenty more.

..However, according to Miduchi's theory I can't deny the possibility that there's even more amazing treasure deeper inside of the dungeon.

Or rather, including myself everyone else is starting to believe Miduchi's theory.

Honestly speaking, I can't ignore the possibility that we'll be able to obtain things like mithril or adamantite or other precious metals that we haven't seen.

I'm sure they exist, for sure...

There's also the powerful equipment like the {Elvin.Chainmail}.

There might even be things that can turn the tides of a war like the representative wand which let's anyone use {Fireball}...

Hm~mm...

Well, there's no help in worrying about it myself.

In the first place it's fine as long as we can do something about the minos.

"There shouldn't be much of a problem as long as the Minotaur outside respawn while we're in here. I'm sure we can take out half of them with a sneak attack and if it comes to that then even if we can't use magic I don't think we'll struggle as much as this time."

"I guess so.."

Miduchi said in response with a worried expression. Her face seems to be worrying about when we come back here from outside of the 9th floor again.

"However, the problem isn't there. It's the next time we come here. We won't be able to catch them off guard."

"Certainly..The Minotaur that Al-san and Maruso and the others were fighting against were extremely strong right. Even from what I could tell it was obvious."

It seems Bel was able to understand what I wanted to say.

"Yeah, that's right. That was dangerous. It's different if we could clearly tell from it's appearance but just from a glance it looked the same as all of the other Minotaur. This time, it was a miracle that Angela managed to get away with just some light injuries. Putting it frankly it wouldn't have been strange even if I had died."

"" .. ""

Zenom and Toris were speechless. I'm sure they can't tell because they didn't directly fight against them.

"There's only two methods we can use to safely and definitely clear things."

After I said that I noticed that not just Zenom, Miduchi, Toris, and Bel but the remaining five people had all approached us and were carefully listening to my words.

"The first one doesn't even need to be said, it's to become much stronger to the point where we can easily deal with things like those Minotaur. I've said it a number of times but we just have to massacre monsters right and left far beyond what we have until now to raise our body levels."

It's only obvious right.

And then, I change my expression and look around at everyone.

I looked at the faces of Zenom, Ralpa, Toris, Bel, Gwine, and Basutoral in order. I have no doubts towards Miduchi and the two combat slaves at all. Probably but it should fine to trust Toris, Bel, and maybe Basutoral as well. Also, depending on how I think about it Zenom as well I guess. Hn~ Gwine might be fine. Ralpa..as expected I'm sure she should be able to differentiate between things which she can say and are no good.

What the, so I guess it's fine?

I continue talking.

"There's technically one more method but..this one isn't so easy. No, it's simple if you want to call it that but it requires some preparation and I need to gather some amount of materials as well. Also..training..No, I need you to absolutely keep things in regards to the method a secret. It's necessary for you to swear that."

I said that once again but everyone was making expressions like, what are you saying at this point?

"Umm you know, sometimes I think it but, Al you, wouldn't it be fine for you to have a bit more faith in us? There's no way we would betray you at this point."

Ralpa said while looking a bit displeased. I can understand the meaning of what you want to say. Under the meaning that is but things aren't that simple in regards to this. Additionally saying it but I'm not worried about you all going anywhere at this point either. It would just be troublesome if you talk about it when you're excited.

"Is it using "guns"?"

Toris said while making a face as if he understands. It seems that Toris had talked about it with Bel. Bel is nodding as well. But, they've reached a good conclusion, but they just missed it. Hearing the words gun, Ralpa, Gwine, and Basutoral were making surprised expressions as they start talking.

""Eeh!? You can make them!?"""

I can't make them, yet. If it's just at the level of a matchlock then it's fine at anytime though. But, when it comes to the matchlock other than carrying around the spark, there's the gunpowder, and preparations to make sure the bullet fires in a straight line, it's difficult to manage. It's even necessary to learn the amount of gunpowder it needs. Also, when it's being fired the gunpowder that gets lit can fly out from the pan. If every time she fires it she has to use healing magic to fix the small burns Bel's beautiful face then her mana won't last right. Just watch if she ends up suffering burns in 10 places after just firing it once. Bel's mana would end up being halved with just that.

Putting that aside and if it's a bolt action that makes use of metal cartridges or a semi-auto rifle then I can make the parts using metal and spells. The only full-auto rifle I've touched before was the Type-64 but there's a large number of parts and the structure is too complex. In that regard, even at Self-Defense College I used the semi-auto M1 Garand but the mechanism is considerably simple compared to the Type-64, and even in the guard unit I did far more dismantling and maintenance for it than the Type-64 so I can remember it well. There's no problem. I'm sure I have several times more experience in practice shooting it than the Type-64 as well. Though it was blanks.

It's also fine in regards to the firing agent Nitrocellulose. I'm sure I can make the combustion agent DDNP(Diazodinitrophenol) as well. In the worst case silver fulminate is fine too. Both of them are things that I made some amount of from natural materials in training after all. Though it was using proper tools in a lab. Different from the firing agent Nitrocellulose, I haven't done any tests on this one yet so it would take a decent amount of time making adjustments. I'm sure I wouldn't suddenly be able to make something usable in regards to the body of the gun itself as well.

Also, there's an even bigger problem. If I let them hold on to a personal firearm, I won't say who but I'm sure there's someone who will get full of themselves. I'm sure there will come a time when we eventually do proper training in the dungeon so guns are put off until then.

"Unfortunately it's different from the "gun" that fires bullets in order to kill. Keep it a secret from the other members of the {Slaughterers}. For the time being."

Even if you manage to hit that large and durable physique(even the smallest one was close to 2m and there were some that didn't flinch no matter how many times you hit them) that's got even more Endurance than an ogre with something like small bullets unless you can hit their vital points I'm sure there isn't much meaning. In the first place the only one who has done any kind of training on hitting moving targets is Bel.

"If it's not a "gun" then what?"

Toris said a bit unexpectedly.

"It uses "gunpowder". But it's not a gun and not only have I not done any tests on gunpowder for explosive use yet but I've never even made it before. However, there's no problem in regards to gunpowder that can fire a bullet. Ah, if you want to call it a "gun" then I guess it could be called a "gun"..But, I think it's a bit different from what's normally called a "gun". Putting it in easy terms for you all to understand then it's something like a "bazooka with a fuse". Ah, no, a "grenade launcher" I guess? though it's similar it's kind of different."

While I was saying it I lost track of what I was talking about. Well, it's nothing all that amazing.

It's just a fuse-type net gun.

Using some durable(if I make metal wire then it's the fastest) rope that's 1 meter high and 40-50 meters wide to make a net with rough gaps(about 25 cm or so I guess), then make small hook-like things in various places. The size of the hooks should be fine at 25, no around 35 should be good. Then fold that up in waves at an appropriate width. Both ends are then attached on to the gun, or rather, cannon-like warhead or arrow.

It's something similar to a high caliber gun that uses a slightly high amount of firing agent and the barrel slightly spread out horizontally like a double-barrel rifle, inside of there it would like from the front of the barrel like a cannon using the arrow-like warhead before being fired. If things go well then the net would spread out and it should be possible to tangle up the Minotaurs. After that it's fine if we just stab them with spear while their movements are slow.

I'm sure it won't suddenly work out well but after 1~2 months of production and adjustments, then if we just practice we should be fine. After all it's fine even if the aim with it is random. It's even fine if it doesn't manage to tangle up all 9 of the minos at once. Though if I was to mention it then I'm sure adjusting the amount of gunpowder to be used for the firing mechanism and the angle of the muzzle are going to be far more difficult.

The problems are the firing mechanism and the form of the net. I'm sure it will end up a decent weight as well. But, supposedly after you defeat the guardians a number of times they eventually stop respawning so if we seriously try to hole up in here and continue to defeat them that's a possibility as well.

Thinking like that and it might be good to start seriously making a couple of guns. If it's just aiming for the vitals of an opponent that's several meters away from the entrance then I'm sure anyone can manage it. They can calmly and slowly aim since they're outside and they won't come over.

I wonder what I should do?

Chapter 279: Towards 10th Floor 4

Year 7446, Month 10, Day 29

In the end we decided to stay in the teleport crystal room of the 9th floor and take look in the 10th floor before defeating the Minotaurs by attacking them from behind when they respawned. I thought all 9 of them would respawn at the same time but that wasn't the case, first off 7 of them respawned with only a few minutes difference between, and then when the remaining 2 finally started to respawn the fog just started whirling around where they would have been and there's no sign of them appearing. For over 30 minutes it continued in that state just like that so we attacked the 7 that did respawn from behind and finished them off instantly.

After I tried Identifying the corpses all of their levels were 8 or 9 in the single digits.

They weren't quite to the level of wazamono, but even then we obtained another 7 high quality weapons and it was before the mana recovered in Ralph's bracelet so we couldn't help but drag the corpses behind the pillar and pile them up there.

Here I ended up having to go into thought again.

The first skilled Minotaurs that Angela the others and I fought against, mine was level 32, and Angela and the others was level 30. In all of the monster groups that we've fought against up until now there's never been a level difference this big. Even when it comes to the respawn of monsters the only ones I've directly observed were a few types of room bosses on the 1st floor. Whether it was slimes or giant spiders, in a group or otherwise, the levels were all either the same or only 1 level difference.

Certainly while the sign of them respawning, the fog appears at the same time, there was a vague difference in the time they actually appear but it was at best several seconds to at greatest a few minutes so I just thought it was a measurement error or that amount.

What I can think of here is that maybe the levels of the monsters have relation to the respawn.

I guess it would be proper to think that the higher the level is the longer it takes for them to respawn.

Though in order to verify the theory it would require a maddening number of samples of them respawning. It's necessary to keep the theory at nothing more than a theory and guideline.

Also, in regards to the 10th floor we took a look at but just from a glance it doesn't seem any different from the 8th and 9th floors. Since the 2 remaining Minotaurs still haven't respawned we decided to just take a peek and then immediately went back.

.....

Year 7446, Month 10, Day 30

Already, we're reaching the limit of our stock in emergency use preserved food.

Let's head back today.

The same as usual the fog that appears when the Minotaurs are respawning is still whirling around.

On the side of that the other 7 Minotaurs respawned again. It can't be helped worrying about it.

There's no accomplishment to it but we ended up finishing them off by attacking them from behind again.

Along with the corpses from yesterday Ralpha changed 14 Minotaur corpses into water and then we decided to take another look at the 10th floor.

I wonder if more crabs and crickets and what-not will come out? It's fine to use the spell {Audible Clamor} to lure over monsters but sometimes it might be good to move around a bit. Since we've just been sitting in the teleport crystal room waiting for the Minotaurs to respawn walking around should be fine.

I return my feelings to the initial resolution and we carefully advance forward.

"Something is coming! One..It's fast!"

Bel gave out a warning and prepared an arrow on her bow.

Everyone went on guard with their weapons at the ready.

I started looking further down the cave with {Identify} vision as well.

..What is that? Just from a glance it looks like a 4 meter or so lizard but the shape of it's legs are almost like an insect and it even has six legs. Along with the noisy rustling from it's legs it's heading towards us.

【

"{Arrowhead.One}!"

Just as I shouted that I fired off a {Fire Arbalest Missile}..It was deflected!?

Seeing that everyone raised their voices in surprise.

The flaming arrow flew off in a different direction scattering as it hit the wall of the cave.

It seems it was deflected by the fine scales covering the surface of the monster's body.

I wonder if the angle it hit was shallow?

Otherwise they're considerably tough?

Immediately after I fired off a {Stone Arbalest Missile} which is acknowledged for it's piercing capability(or at least in my mind), this time while I lowered the speed a bit, I fired it off almost vertically from right above it's back.

As expected this splendidly pierced through it's scales and after deeply stabbing through it was stuck to the ground almost like a specimen!

"Shigyaaaa~!!"

While it was letting out an unpleasant scream a {Fire Javelin} and arrows someone fired off stabbed into it's mouth.

There's fangs all lined up inside of it's mouth and just that almost resembles an alligator.

Following that I used the spell {Grow Spike} and gave it the gift of being skewered from below.

"Ge..Gyabu!!"

While letting out it's voice in agony the insect lizard spit out some poisonous looking brown liquid like it was choking but it was almost no momentum and didn't fly any further than 5 meters. Obviously there was no damage on our side.

And then, Zenom's axe went flying with a spin and after stabbing into it's head came back.

This, if in just a matter of seconds..if you don't have a magician who can use {Missile} at a speed of less than 3 seconds you would struggle quite a bit with it.

Zulu collected the magic stone by further cutting open the holes my spells made.

The value of the magic stone was roughly 60,000. If we sell it then it'll be over 400,000 Z.

Just like this, other than the Lesser Yowies, we killed off Blue Battle Crabs and Killer Mantis which were of a different color and even more ferocious while advancing, and after all, or I guess you could say just as expected we discovered a teleport crystal.

I guess we'll return here this time.

"Ah, master! I'm glad you're safe!"

After returning to the teleport room on the 8th floor and Giberuti greeted us so pleased that he might start crying at any moment.

"Sorry about worrying you. I'll talk about the details later. Make us something to eat."

Since we had been holding out by eating preserved foods we devoured the potofu made with carrots, cabbage, and baldoggie, along with bread until we were full.

Furthermore, in his spare time Giberuti finally manage to complete what could be called the prototype for the hardtack. The recipe itself is just a biscuit that you cook twice so it's not all that difficult after all. It seems it was worth it teaching him the method for the flame to pass through better when you open needle holes and add things like hops, sesame seeds, sugar, salt, before boiling it in lard a number of times, filtering out the impurities and adding things of a higher quality.

"I think the taste was decent. It's light and easy to carry around so I'll make a lot of them for everyone during the next days off rather than stocking up on more preserved food that you ate this time."

After I gave it a pass Giberuti happily declared that to me. I think the 7 cm or so long and wide square baked hardtack certainly had a decently good taste to it. This, somewhat decent taste is actually important. No matter how skillfully made they are hardtacks must not be too delicious. Since you'll end up eating them normally. Well, if it ends up being that good then even that's fine so we can start selling them as sweets though.

Since butter is an ultra expensive luxury item there's not many delicious sweets. Obviously these don't use any butter so no matter how much effort is put into them they won't get that delicious.

"Ah, in regards to the recipe for this "hardtack". If you make something that you can consider perfect then make sure you properly write it down."

Later on it's fine if I buy it from Giberuti and depending on the case it's fine to start selling it as something that personally belongs to Giberuti himself as well. Of course it's a matter for after I have my territory though. If I remember right this guys dream was to own his own restaurant after all.

Of the remaining stuff, we just brought along the vegetables and such that expire quickly and returned to the surface.

"..And, just like that we somehow were able to clear the 9th floor. The 10th floor had a similar feel to the 9th floor but it seems like there's a number of new types of monsters and we still haven't tried going to a monster room so I don't know what kind of room bosses there may be."

I gave a simple report of how we arrived at the 10th floor to the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} and displayed the items we obtained from beat down the guardian Minotaur.

"If you want to use it then I'll lend it to you. Though it'll be after I report to the King. I think he'll probably return it though."

After I said that Kevin wanted to use the {Single-Edge Bardiche}. Oh~ as expected he has a good eye. I thought it was a waste not to use the {Double-Edge Battleaxe} we obtained previously so in the end I let Rodrick's combat slave Karimu use it.

Since Kevin said he was going to use one, everyone got excited seeing all of the high quality wazamono weapons and ended up switching out with quite a few of them.

Ginger was greatly interested in the {Cross Spear} and Jeru requested using the {Reverse-thorn Trident}. For Kimu as expected the handles were too long compared to the one she's using now and there were no good substitutes so she had to give up on them.

Ruttsu ended up changing from just a simple spear to the {Pole Voulge} and my combat slave {Rubi} took the {Bloodpoint Halberd}, and I ended up loaning the {Ribbon Partizan} to Jesu.

Rodrick's combat slave Denda who uses the war hammer didn't seem to want to change weapons for some reason. The {Glaive} ended up being leftover but whatever. Basutorial said that he preferred the spear he was used to using as well.

After that I said would be gone for a short while in order to report to the King so while it wasn't a break for the {Slaughterers} overall but the {Slaughterers} don't have me so they're taking a break(it's too frightening going to a new floor without me) but they still wanted to dispatch leaders to the {Exterminators} and {Butchers} just the same as until now so I gave permission for it when they enter the dungeon again in another 3 days.

.....

Year 7446, Month 11, Day 3

"..These are the items that we obtained from defeating the group of Minotaurs that were the guardians of the 9th floor."

I showed off the items we obtained while also handing over the magic stone. This time I'm in front of the King, first Queen her highness Morairu, as well as his highness Richard the prince who was acting as a bodyguard from the first knight group.

Huh? Putting that aside, the {Refrigerator} that's in the corner of this audience room..I feel like I've seen it before?

【Refrigerator】

..I see now.

"..Certainly...It seems you cleared the 9th floor, Greed. That's quite something."

Morin said in admiration. His highness Richard opened his eyes wide as he checked the status of the weapons and magic stone I handed over along with his parents. Hmhmph, how's that?

"What's so amazing about it? In the end he wasn't able to obtain anything decent so he's just covering it up with things like this."

Ke...and the King said as if he was spitting it out but I'm sure he's just bitter that I surpassed the achievements of his ancestor. As proof of that he was scolded by her highness Morin and his highness Richard for his attitude.

"By the way, putting that aside, why did you come to report on it this time following the last time? Last time I can understand because it was unprecedented achievement but.."

Morin said curiously.

Something like that, even if I say to the world that we "went to the 10th floor" there's no way to prove it was true, so it's only obvious I wanted it to be formally proven to be true. Or at least that's the official reason.

"Ah, I see now."

Even though she asked the question, it seems Morin immediately understood the reason.

No, you know, I can't just say it's because I wanted to be praised or wanted to change their opinion for the better right. It seems I'm still a brat after all~

"Da~hhahaha! He was told it, this brat! That's exactly right! What? Did you want to be praised? Eh? Yes, that's right how amazing~ you are~ As expected of the number one adventurer in Baldukk right~ You shhure did give it your bescht. How great of you~!"

The King turned bright red and held his stomach while laughing out loud. Shit, he saw through it. This is seriously embarrassing.

"Ah..That is, a midway progress report for his majesty.."

I wonder if my face is red?

"Buhyā~ a midway progress report~!?" Just leave it at that already."

Morin said in amazement cutting off the King. It sounded like she might be a bit angry at the King as well.

"Greed. It's good to be proud of your own achievements. Furthermore it's reaching the 10th floor that his majesty George.Rombert the First couldn't reach, it's truly a magnificent deed. You should be very proud for the sake of those who accompanied you as well. It's because only we can officially acknowledge that right?"

Morin smiled lightly while saying. I'm grateful that you're willing to accept the formal reason as the formal reason.

"Wa~ha."

I couldn't do anything but fall prostrate.

"Just the same as last time, the royal family will announce the great achievements you've done."

Last time, soon after that the Royal Family sent out an official notice saying, "The 8th floor of the Baldukk dungeon was cleared by the adventurer Alan.Greed and his party. He's arrived at the 9th floor. This royal family gives praise to this honor." Thanks to that the face value of us {Slaughterers} was even greater than up to now in the town of Baldukk. Though even more riffraff than ever came wanting to join the {Slaughterers} as well. It was around that time when the {Verdure.Brotherhood} and {Black.Topaz} started to push themselves as well.

"Wa~ha..I'm very grateful."

That's right, I didn't want to be praised.

I just wanted the achievements of our party to be recognized not just my own.

I'll think of it that way.

.....

Year 7446, Month 11, Day 4

Yesterday on my way back from the royal castle, I stocked up on iron ores from a blacksmith.

Additionally, I went to a specialty company to put in a order to periodically purchase large amounts(around 10kg) of freshly picked raw cotton that hasn't been processed yet.

Also, I went to the dyed goods shop and purchased some yellow dye.

Yellow dye has a history being made from the primary ingredient for DDNP(Diazodinitrophenol), picric acid.

If the yellow dye of Orth is made from picric acid then it's an easy profit.

In my room in an inn of the capital I placed some iron ores in a bucket and used {Transmute.Rock.To.Mud} to change it into mud. After that I used sorting to take out the iron and while separating it molded the shape as well. Hmm.

First off is just the receiver of something like the simplest revolver. Giving up on the mechanism for the cylinder to automatically revolve around(It's necessary to rotate the cylinder around with your hand every time you fire it. It heats up so gloves are necessary.), it's a very simplified version. Adding to that even the grip is just an iron plate. I'll use a vise or something to fix this into place and then attach a string to the trigger in order to fire it from a distance. It would be best to test out the bullets like this and raise the completion rate of it. It uses gunpowder so it's necessary to take safety somewhat into consideration after all.

Other than that, including the bullet I produced a large number of shell cases and parts of the primer.

During the process of selection and molding I ended up having to remake it a number of times to get a feel for it but since I somewhat got a hold of the trick to it while making the meat mincers, I was quickly able to make them all at exactly the same size. For the time being I made the rifle shell cases in the bottleneck form like general rifle bullets.

I'm sure the net shooter will need a reasonable amount of propellant after all.

After that, while the gunpowder is already fine, it's necessary to produce the primer with the detonation powder packed into it.

Author's Note: (TL: bunch of notes on how new monsters respawn in the general area when other monsters are defeated and there's some amount of randomness to it. If the group isn't completely wiped out a new group won't respawn, though altar rooms are different.) Chart of respawn times:

Chapter 280: Endless Development

Year 7446, Month 12, Day 26

Bang!

The sound of a gunpowder explosion rings out in the central plaza of the 8th floor.

"I guess it's fine to think that it won't "misfire" anymore.."

I couldn't but talk to myself while test firing the gun.

Incidentally, if you're wondering why I'm not doing it in the central plaza of the front line on the 9th floor and it's because we can't use magic there. Since then we've gone there a number of times and defeated the Minotaurs as they respawn but the first 2 powerful ones that Angela the others and I fought against still haven't respawned so we've just been killing the other 7.

It's inconvenient being unable to use magic so I intend to kill the hell out of the minos until they run out of stock(?). Incidentally, I guess the mino on the 8th floor ran out of stock midway through last month, because it's stopped respawning. Well, thanks to that not just the net gun but I've started trying to make a gun that can fire proper bullets. I intended to do it eventually and it's just on the occasion so it's fine.

"Just now was exactly the 1,200th shot."

Bel said. I can hear her muffled voice through the earplugs.

Incidentally while were test firing the gun everyone within 50 meters is wearing ear plugs.

No one was wearing them at first but the explosion sound largely exceeded our expectations and echoed way too loud through the dungeon. Even though it's a large room with a diameter of 1 km, it's probably related to the fact that the ceiling is only about 30 meters high. Though they had roughly heard about the firing sound from us, since Zenom, Zulu, and Angela couldn't even imagine the precise volume of it they were a bit afraid after first hearing the large explosion so I made some ear plugs.

The rabbit ears on top of Bel's head are a slightly different shape from those of hyumu, elf, and dwarves so I ended up making ear plugs with a slightly different shape for her along with Zulu, Angela, and Basutorial.

Until I was able to prepare some proper ear plugs for them I had the natural-born Orth people keep watch a bit of distance away or dispatched them to the {Butchers} and {Exterminators}.

This test firing is also for the sake of investigating the durability limits of the barrel and receiver but it's one that's smooth with no rifling carved into it and even if it technically has a revolving cylinder, it doesn't automatically rotate so in truth it's nothing more than a single-shot gun and it's not like the receiver has all that complex of a structure either. Since it has nothing more than an extremely simple structure it should have considerably high durability.

First off I was trying to create the base for the net gun after all, since I thought it wouldn't need rifling so I just didn't carve it in, and as a matter of fact I also prepared one which has the rifling carved into which I'm testing along with it. In regards to the internal structure of this one, it's not just gilded with chrome but I made it entirely using chrome. Luxurious right.

Ever since then every time we enter the dungeon I've been doing the tests but I think you could say it's reached quite the high level of completion. Though, even if I say that it's about 50 points out of a 100 perfect score. In the first place there was no way I could make a perfect 100 points so the place I'm aiming for is around 90 points. Though in reality even that is an objective so high it seems pretty impossible.

Whether it be rubber, swords, or guns, it's not like I'm trying to reproduce things from modern day Earth. I think it's plenty as long as I can make things that are of a quality that would be useful to me on this Orth. Things which are perfect I'm sure a proper craftsmen will appear eventually that makes something on their own and I'm sure that's not my role. However of course, it's all the better the higher quality things are and if the quality is fixed then even more so I have nothing more to say, so I intend to do what I need in order to try an get even just a bit closer to that.

Either way I'm sure imitations will appear.

Then in that case I should just try at least a bit more to make it harder to copy.

In my case, it's just a matter of that being related to magic and even if I didn't have any talent with magic then it would have just taken far more labor and time but I'm sure I would have come up some reasonable ideas around it. Even in regards to guns, for the time being the two types of gunpowder is impossible to make unless they have an aggregate amount of mana at least at Miduchi's level, and while it's an extreme discussion in this situation, even if one of the prototype guns were to be stolen along with the bullets I can guarantee that it would be impossible for them to fire anymore than the number of bullets they took.

And then, I'm sure it would be nearly impossible to make a copy of my prototype gun with the level of craftsman on Orth. Though I don't think it's completely impossible. Even if they push it and forcefully create a copy, the accuracy and durability would fall, no matter how they struggle it wouldn't even reach the feet of the original, I think they would only be able to create something that's absurd to even call several levels inferior.

Since that's already the case at 50 points I personally am very satisfied.

Recently, I've been firing around 100-200 rounds during each test but around the 500th shot both the bullet and gunpowder have stabilized quite a bit. Even when it comes to this smooth barrel gun, if Bel carefully adjusts the position while firing this bullet then I'm sure she can hit a 2 cm circle within 20 meters. At the same time I've reduced the misfire rate to less than 3%.

I struggled quite a bit to reach this point. Though there were some great harvests as well.

First I'll start from the troubles I guess.

In the process of making the smokeless gunpowder that I experimented with as a child there were almost no accidents that could be called an accident.

However, when I tried firing a cartridge which was packed with smokeless gunpowder it ended up misfiring and almost all of the fingers on my right ended up one stage before being completely torn off, that happened twice. Carefully using a small amount at a time and splitting it into parts ended up being a success. If I had tried to take it easy and use a lot all at once then it wouldn't have been strange if I died instantly.

Just in case, I had made a shield for work use. It was like a much larger version of the shields that welders use and the small seeing window was made using diamond(It's comparatively cheap on Orth. Though even then it's slightly more expensive than crystal). In both cases I did it in a corner of the central plaza on the 8th floor when there were no other people around so I was able to avoid secondary damage.

Also, I thought that my skill with the spell {Transmute.Rock.To.Mud} would increase even further by producing the primer parts, shell cases, and bullets but after all I guess you could say, the fact that it still takes just below 40 minutes once again let me realize how difficult this spell is to use.

Furthermore, with a reasonable amount of brass ore I can make several hundred shots of the shell cases all at once. Using a small copper ore I can make several thousand primers as well. Even if it takes a considerable amount of time to change it into mud it doesn't take much time at all to do the shaping and casting. It's especially wonderful and worth mentioning that it's possible to shape and mold it so the appearance, size, and adjustments are all exactly the same and perfectly uniform.

Incidentally, I was safely able to make the detonation powder for the primer using DDNP so there wasn't much of a problem. However, I don't know if it's my essential stinginess that caused it or because of habit and I've convinced myself it's common sense from the SDF but all of the shell cases I make are boxer-primed center fire types. If we collect the shell cases of these boxer primed types after usage and clean them then they can be used a number of times. No, I'm just stating an appropriate sounding reason but in reality it's just a matter of me not remembering anything but that.

Add a very small amount of DDNP to the primer and then push it into the small depression in the center, after that you create a simple lid using an even smaller amount of wax that's about to harden. Just like this the primer is completed. When I was inserting the primer into the base part of the shell casing, I ended up causing countless accidental discharges. It's only obvious that I first started by just assembling the various parts without any gunpowder and confirmed the process after it's hit with the hammer but I screwed up quite a bit when it came to the actual thing.

If I hadn't already assumed it would fail and made an exclusive jig for it before hand I would have ended up suffering quite a bit again here. Though even if I say jig it wasn't anything all that fancy. It's just a very thick iron pipe. The base of the jig is nothing more than a wooden board and I leave the primer facing upwards here, then place the jig that is the iron pipe down. Then I gently place the shell case down from above and with just a bit of power from my hand wedge the primer into the shell case. After that I place a board above the shell case and lightly tap it vertically with a hammer to fit it into place.

The power used to tap it is difficult to adjust. If it's too weak then it ends up taking time and if it's too strong it ends up discharging. Even if it discharges thanks to the jig there's no damage done but including the amount of time spent working the materials end up being wasted. However, when packing the firing agent into the shell case and fitting the bullet onto it it requires even more care.

Since discharging at this point means the bullet being fired after all.

Obviously I prepared an exclusive jig for that as well. In the center of a heavy iron plate I made a sinkhole that was just a bit larger than the bullet and then filled the inside lightly with raw rubber. I push the bullet into there. In the shape of the bullet being stuck into there I flip over the iron plate and carefully place the shell case with the primer set on the base over that matching them up before slowly driving it in.

And then, from here is the harvest.

After seeing those failures a number of times Toris said to leave the mixing and work to him.

At first I thought even if he has {Scale}, I still haven't properly established the process yet and turned him down because it was dangerous when you're not used to it but I quickly reconsidered it. Come to think of it, when I first met him, it's true that I originally thought he would be useful in the future in producing gunpowder and had expected this. If it's a small amount then even if he fails I'm sure he won't die instantly. And as long as he doesn't die instantly it can be healed.

"{Scale} huh...I guess so, give it a try. Be careful while you're doing it.."

And, I started teaching Toris the mixing method, process, and how to use the jig. Toris nodded while saying hmmhmm to himself listening and every time he heard it just once he ended up succeeding. After sitting down cross legged, it looks like he's just casually grabbing and tearing the materials I made with his hands while measuring by eye. Occasionally he would confirm various things like, "The amount of firing agent needed is fine the same as this right?". However, when I tried confirming the quality after he was done with the work, it seems he was able to do it with far greater accuracy than I could.

When he was inserting the primer in he would slightly adjust the position of the board and say something like, "..Here huh?" before hitting with the hammer. After confirming it was properly fit into place and it was almost as if he was making fun of my trouble. It was just the same when fitting the bullet made with iron(Copper is cheap but it's more expensive than iron and lead is considerably cheap but it requires making an order for it in Baldukk) into place. Obviously the bullets made by Toris haven't misfired even once.

Not just that but he increased the number of holes in the jig when fitting the bullets into place and managed the feat of fitting six bullets into place at once with a straight face on. Now it's to the point where I make the materials, Toris measures the amounts and then assembles them. I only make the blanks with a rubber stopper instead of a bullet for firing the net gun. If you ignore the fact that it's handling dangerous materials even an infant could do the work.

Just like this thanks to the fact that I had the skilled Toris for making the bullets, the time spent in production was largely shortened but even then it eats up a considerable amount of time. Even though it doesn't even take a total of 2 hours to test fire 100 rounds, pretty much all of the time other than that is used up in making the bullets.

However, in any case it might be fine to say that for the time being I've completed the bullets and the gun which can fire them.

All that's left is to redesign a gun-stock that makes the body of the gun itself easy to carry and make it the shape of a double-barrel shotgun(though they'll both fire simultaneously). Also, if it's possible(and if I have the leeway) design a real gun that can fire live bullets. If it's possible then a revolver or bolt action or anything else but one with a cylinder that can be loaded and shot consecutively, if it's necessary then even something that discards the shells. On this end it's, let's aim for semi-automatic rifle!

No matter how short won't it take a number of years?

Well, let alone the second world war, the single-shot bolt action gun was still used even after that, and even when I died in the accident it was still a solid operation function used in military purpose firearms. A famous sniper from Finland supposedly used a bolt action rifle with no safety to fire 16 shots in 1 minute after all.

We returned to the surface and started the winter holidays.

Either tomorrow or the day after that a caravan from my family should arrive, if it's possible then I'd like to go and visit Mila-shisho as well.

.....

Year 7446, Month 12, Day 27

I've come to the capital while accompanying brother and the others with the caravan.

Accompanying us there's over 10 others including Miduchi.

That's other than the large portion of the two carriages taken up by brother, the coachman, and the six guards.

The color of Ralpa and Gwine's eyes changed the moment they heard shopping as usual. It's the usual for Zenom aiming for some smoked goods, then there's also Rodrick and his two slaves who he wants to let sight see in the capital now that they have some leeway in their earnings. Rokko and Kevin are worked over playing around like crazy. It seems that Kamu and Kimu have something they want to buy, while Binsu and Hisu want to order some new weapons. All of the other members intend on enjoying their break in Baldukku.

The squire leader Sean was in a good mood as he said, "If we have this many first-rate adventurers as guards it's almost like we're a transport unit delivering important supplies to the front lines." As a matter of fact he whispered in my ear, "Al-sama, it's really quite amazing, in less than 5 years Al-sama has obtained a lot of magnificent subordinates." It's a bit embarrassing to be praised but even with this I don't think it's enough yet.

Also, starting with brother, all of the squires were surprised hearing about my achievements.

"You're really quite the guy! I'm proud of you as well. Today is my treat! Let's go to a good place!"

And brother even pat my head. Really I'm already 18. It's about time you show some restraint with that sort of stuff.

"Wow, that is quite! We've obtained a good story to tell when we get back!"

"Amazing!"

"As expected~!"

"You've really grown up to be so splendid~!"

All of the squires congratulated me from the bottom of their hearts as well. It's embarrassing but I'm honestly happy.

Just the same as usual I appeared at the royal castle to make deliveries and after receiving the remaining money took the order for next time. At the same time taking half the amount. Since we're carrying this much in cash, a larger number of guards can't be helped. Up until now we've had too few with us. According to brother they've got quite a bit of leeway with money so for the sake of letting the squires learn some things they cut out a greater number to come along this time.

Though he also said that one of the greatest factors is that they've got some leeway in workers thanks to using horses and cattle for farm work. Now other than the three war horses used by my family and the four pack horses used for the carriages, they've employed a total of 16 horses and cattle for farm work.

The number of chances for the squires to directly do anything in regards to farm work has been reduced and the amount of time they can spend doing sword training has supposedly increased. And then, cultivating new land is proceeding smoothly, centering around the rubber plantation the fields have spread out by a total of over 20 hectares since I left the village. It's not as if I went around looking at every corner when I returned at the start of this year after all.

Also, it seems that Myun is currently pregnant with her second child.

..I'm glad for your good fortune, Myun.

I want to think that I was able to return the favor to her a bit.

Furthermore, it seems that there was no new matters for congratulation between my brother and his wife. If sister-in-law Shani were to have gotten pregnant just like this then they would have had friends of the same age again. When I said that brother complained, "We really have our hands full with just Zetto and Bekki..All they do is play pranks. Al(Ailado) always has the role of cleaning up after them." with a sour face.

Chapter 281: Mystery of the Letter

Year 7446, Month 12, Day 28

After traveling to the capital the other day, everyone split up to do their own things, the faster ones even left last night. One night passed into this morning, after breakfast Miduchi and I went to the sausage factory and then she left go shopping saying, "I'm going to Tukerin-san's place for greetings with a bit of a "year-end gift"." I said I would pay a visit to Tukerin's clinic after I finished my business as well so we'll meet up there. First off is going to the castle with brother and the others to make rubber deliveries.

With this we've almost completely finished taking orders from the first knight group. Starting next time we have orders for four suits of armor from the first knight group and the remaining seven suits are all from the second knight group. Though I say that, it's not as if this is the end of our relationship with the first knight group. Only about 60% of the knights and squires have purchased the rubber armor our family makes.

I'm sure the remaining 40% will order a suit even if their current armor is still usable once the period comes where they can get the subsidy from the knight group and there's some people who are already using it that will probably buy a new suit again in seven years when they can receive the subsidy again.

In comparison to the leather and metal armor that they've used up until now it's a flaw that rubber armor runs out of durability in fewer years. However, the merits are that it's cheaper than metal armor, light, and the defense isn't all that lower, furthermore the cost of repairs are so cheap it's not even worth comparing them. It's really great that it's thanks to that we were able to form and maintain this business relationship for so long.

It's unfortunate that it's not as flashy as platemail and full plate armor, so it's not very good for appearances. Probably just in that regard no matter how effort we put into it I don't think we can win. Well, ebonite plate has a pretty good gloss to it as well. Though the color is just a bit..It's too plain.

That's why for the above-mentioned reason there will definitely remain a need for metal armors. Certainly I'm sure that by being pressured by our rubber armor the number of orders they'll get will fall considerably compared to before but they'll never run out completely. Adding to that as well, after all the defensive capability of metal armor is still higher. Though it's heavy. Of course, there was also the idea to just add a thin layer of metal to the surface of the plate portions as well.

However, if we end up going that far...I already discussed this with brother and father before but we came to the conclusion it wouldn't be very profitable.

It's better to just gradually spend a number of years continuing to push the name of the {Bakuddo Brand}. In regards to the production amount as well, even if we increase it it's thought that around double the current amount, or at greatest 2.5 times more would be the limit. Even then in the next 10 or 20 years we should be the largest armor maker in the country. I wanted to wedge into a corner of the oligopoly of the market and control it to some extent but it's not like I want to buy resentment from monopolizing it. In any case, starting next time we'll primarily be doing business with the second knight group. Unlike the first knight group which can receive a subsidy payment every seven years for half the price of their individual equipment, the second knight group only gets a 30% subsidy everyone seven years so it's expected that the percentage of members who make orders will be far less than the first knight group.

However, the total number of members is a completely different set of digits. In the second knight group there's five times the amount of cavalry knights than the first knight group at 500 people. Even when it comes to the infantry squires they have 20 times the number at 1,000 people. If it were to come to the third or fourth knight groups then the number of people increases even further. Supposedly there's no subsidy for personal equipment for the third and fourth knight groups but even then when it comes time for them to replace their armor I think that eventually about 10% would purchase our armor.

If we take the order cycle into consideration then I don't think there would be any major effects on the market even if we raise the number of orders we take by a few suits next year. After all, it seems that a workshop that makes platemail from start to finish is at it's limit with just two suits per year. Even when it comes to the specialized workshops at best they can manage five suits. That's why it's extremely expensive. It's far too expensive so there's countless knights who can't afford it and end up just enduring with splintmail, bandedmail, scalemail, or even in the worst case just chainmail.

The people who were aiming to deal with are those sorts of people or those who dislike metal armor because of the weight. Even in the first knight group, I'm sure there's probably people that won't purchase our armor because it's too plain. But, almost all of the people that don't use rubber armor say they're envious of light armor. Though I'd be happy if the number of customers increase.

.....

After splitting up with brother and the others who are returning to the company I started heading towards Sandak Company. I wanted to ask about the progress of that one ring and about the magic nullifying amulet.

First off, in regards to the ring but I was handed a sealed letter.

There's a family crest of some place on the wax seal but I'm not familiar with family crests so it doesn't matter at all. I don't have much interest in which places noble wants to purchase it.

"Fufu...You're well versed in the moral code even though you're young."

After simply saying a single line of, "Please allow me to take a look at it." and without taking a very good look at the family crest, immediately opening the seal and taking the letter out, the company president commented that when I was placing the envelope on the table so the family crest can't be seen. That's right. I have no intention of breaking into Sandak Company's business area at all.

I gave a single bow to the praise and opened the letter.

..To the seller of this ring,

First off, I'm very grateful to you for selling such an extremely valuable magic item.

Also, in regards to how the ability of the ring is determined, I was able to confirm if it actually displayed the expected effects after being equipped. Once again after that by confirming using a special type of spell, I was able to identify that it was a genuine magic item. The ability of it is the recovery of life force. The recovery itself is only at the degree of somewhat promoting the recovery of injuries but there's no difference in the fact that it's of great value.

Once again, I'm grateful from the bottom of my heart that you were willing to sell such a precious item as this to me.

Kingdom of Rombert, Minister of the Right, Marquis of Daurain, Zotoruto..

Well, writing your name on the letter is etiquette even on Orth right.

It can't be helped reading something that's written down.

And, what?!?

Mentioning the name Marquis of Dasurain and that's one of the current ministers.

He's otherwise known as the Head Magician of the Royal Court.

The Director of the Department of Royal House.

He's famous to the point where even I know his name.

Though I have a stronger image of him as a pitiful old man with few remaining years left that was brushed away by Baron Logan when he was begging sister to show him her spells, but as a minister, he's one of those who rules at almost the top in management and politics.

Though I don't know if his abilities are used on the political end.

Additionally mentioning it but just like many ministers in the past, the period he's stayed in office isn't short.

For example, different from his long period of over 10 years in office, the prime minister or Minister of the Left, switched leadership after a short period of only 2 years in office a couple of years back.

If I remember correctly it was a cousin of the King or something that doesn't even have a proper territory and was just a Duke in name.

Furthermore, the family head of the of the Sandak family is one of the Ministers of the Right, and also holds the position of director of the Department of Territorial Affairs, in essence he's the cabinet minister of dealing with territories. Though officially it was territory record keeper or something like that I think it was.

"..!"

Seeing how I was at loss for words the company president made a gentle smile and said, "I'm guessing you're surprised after finding out who the buyer is, right?"

"..No..Well, I was surprised though.."

Well, just that.

Certainly I was surprised at Marquis Dasurain's name but..Rather than something like that, I'm more interested in this "special type of spell".

This, I'm sure he wouldn't teach me it even if I ask...

Though it would be fine if he just shows me as he uses it once.

"You don't need to worry about it. Since you're being that careful I doubt you would directly try to deal with them in person. It's not strange at all for their name to be written on the letter."

The company president said that but if I can get the chance I'd like to request that he teach me the "special type of spell" or even just show it to me. Of course, if we were doing some kind of business transaction then I have no complaints about going through Sandak Company at all.

Furthermore, in regards to the magic nullifying amulet they're still giving out advance notice about the auction and gauging what kind of reactions they can get for it. Just like this, after gathering information on the initial reaction they'll decide on an actual end date for the bidding as well as the minimum bid price at the same time, then they'll formally send out notice for the auction to start once again.

"It's expected to reach a considerable price."

The company president said while making a pleased face. It seems he can't disclose what kind of price it could reach to me yet.

If it's too low (less than 100,000,000) then I wonder if it's possible not to sell it?

But it's also good to experience the so-called auction at least once right.

Before the evening I made preparations to receive the payment and made plans to visit again, just like that I started on my way towards the clinic that the dark elf Tukerin runs. It's still fresh in my how pleased he was three months ago when I tried sounding out selling Baldoggie to them.

After arriving at the clinic and Miduchi who didn't accompany me to the castle or company was drinking tea while chatting with Tukerin and his wife. On the table there's a wooden box filled with sweets from some high class store that she purchased as a year-end gift and the contents appear to have already disappeared. Since they're all from the same country, I guess they have plenty of things to talk about. It seems they didn't discuss anything business related until I arrived. That's just like Miduchi.

"Greed-dono. Just the other day, I received contact from my country. If it's possible then I'd be happy if you can sell us 3,500 Baldoggie every month but.."

It might just be my imagination but Tukerin's correspondence feels like it's gotten a bit more polite.

However, just 3,500 of them..Is that all they need?

It's an amount that the current factory can produce just by operating through one of the days off.

I reflexively looked at Miduchi's face but she was nodding with a face as if there's no problem.

Eh?

They increased the number of caravan trips to the capital of Rombertia?

Just for this?

If I remember correctly they have a number of dark elf warriors escorting each carriage right..Since it's weight reaches close to 400kg I guess it would almost completely fill a single carriage huh?

"Of course there's no problem at all. Ah, also, if you wrap them in an airtight rubber cloth and then pack that into linen bags they'll remain delicious to eat even at room temperature for two months. I guarantee it."

I think it's probably fine even at two and a half months but just in case I reported it a bit shorter.

"Oh! That is splendid! It's a great help if the quality can be maintained for a long time."

"And then, what should we do about the flavors? Since there's five types do you want 700 of each or all of them in the same flavor?"

After asking that Tokerin was a bit embarrassed as he said, "I would like to request that they're all normal Baldoggie." Yeah. Well I'm sure it's also a matter of individual preferences so that might be the best for starting things off. Ah, or maybe he's embarrassed because they're cheapest? Something like that, I'm not bothered over it at all.

"Also, in regards to the price but is it really fine to sell them to us at 30% of the market price?"

"Yeah, of course it is. It was a request from her, Miduchi, after all. I didn't even take into consideration trying to profit."

Rather~ even if I were to sell them at the market price, normal Baldoggie are 300 Z each.

It's not even enough for the profit to reach 1 gold coin(1,000,000 Z).

It's not like I need to pay the slaves a higher rate for overtime pay working on the holidays so I'm not particularly losing anything, if he's pleased with it then that's all the better. I told him that if he gives us a notice of the amount they want about 10 days before the expected delivery of the goods then that's fine and left the clinic.

After this is..Ah, that's right.

I need to buy iron ores and the various other ores.

Also, it's the most important thing but it's only obvious for Rassegu and the others as well as the Yotlen family, I need pay the taxes for all of the employees of the {Slaughterers}. When we get back to the company I'm sure Miduchi and I will be flooded with calculations and office work for the rest of today and tomorrow. So troublesome~ I want a calculator.

.....

Year 7447, Month 1, Day 5

Starting tomorrow we're entering the dungeon again.

Things were pretty busy during this New Year holiday.

After confirming the account book and deliveries at the end of the year and taking care of the payment of taxes, Miduchi and bought a large amount of dried fish before entering the dungeon and went to Mila-shisho's place to do magic training. Even after we returned, just like that we flew straight back to the capital again and had to charter a passenger carriage to carry all of the metal ores I ordered in mass from the large companies in the capital to our inn.

After that we started doing spell training for the new spells we learned from shisho, {Pyrotechnics}, {Grave.Strike}, and {Ground.Smoke}. Incidentally, I tried asking about the "special type of spell" that was written on the letter from Marquis Dasurain during our training at the end of the year but it was extremely disappointing that Mila-shisho had no idea at all.

If I remember correctly then according to sister, Marquis Dasurain's void magic skill level was just about 7 or somewhere around there so even if it's really "special" I don't think there's any reason why I wouldn't be able to learn it.

Though at the very least, putting aside the extremely advanced spells that the Gods use, I once again reaffirmed that Mila-shisho and the fairies can't cover for every spell that exists in this world. Though even if that is the case there's no difference that she's our important shisho.

Now then, I've already finished making preparations for tomorrow, time to sleep.

"{Pyrotechnics}" Alteration

(Earth Magic Lv 1, Fire Magic Lv 3, Void Magic Lv 4, Consumed MP

10+ Differs based on the type)

A base flame is necessary for the spell to activate(it's fine for the base flame to be one produced with magic or a natural flame).

Firework type: Cause a bright multi-colored explosion of light to happen in an instant and while it will brilliantly burn up it won't be associated with any sound. Any living creature that sees this light within a distance of 30 meters has a possibility of temporarily entering a state of blindness.

Smokescreen type: smoke gushes forth from the base flame and forms a smokescreen covering an area of 10 meters. This smokescreen continues for 1 minute times the level of the caster(it's possible for the caster to cancel it at will). Inside of the smokescreen whether it be Infrared vision, X-ray vision, or any vision type skill they won't be able to see through the other side of the smokescreen. All living creatures that enter the smokescreen have a possibility of receiving a penalty of -4 to Strength and Speed. These effects last until the smokescreen dissipates or 2-5 minutes after the target moves out of the range of the smoke.

"{Grave.Strike}" Enchantment.Necromantic

(Earth Magic Lv 3, Fire Magic Lv 3, Wind Magic Lv 1, Void Magic Lv 5, Consumed MP 12)

The caster can surround one desired weapon(otherwise their own fists) that they're touching in a magic sunlight. The brightness is only half that of the spell {Light}. This weapon imbued with light will have a special attack power added when used against {Undead.Monsters} and become a powerful anti-Undead weapon(double damage). The duration of the effect is the level of the caster times 5 seconds.

"{Ground.Smoke}" Alteration.Enchantment

(Earth Magic Lv 1, Wind Magic Lv 1, Void Magic Lv 3, Consumed MP 5)

Allows a volume of smoke equal to the level of the caster times $0.1m^3$ produced from a flame to be absorbed into the ground directly under it. The absorption has no effect if there's no ground below it. It's a spell that makes the smoke from a campfire more difficult to find.

Chapter 282: Head Slave

Year 7447, Month 1, Day 8

It's the third day since we entered the dungeon.

In the spacious center room of the 8th floor we arrived at before the evening I'm making bullets for the sake of test firing the same as usual. A considerable distance away from the central pillar, in a slightly open area the production of smokeless gunpowder is being done centering around me. Inside of the glass and ceramic containers that I purchased in mass I use magic to separate the raw materials, or rather it's the acids I made through nitrification of the raw cotton.

Though the primary objective is nitrification and denitrification but on that occasion I'm always keeping an eye on it. If the reaction isn't fixed then I immediately stir the mixed acids and accelerate the reaction of the late portions. The stirring can be done safely using my excessive mana.

The next washing process is normally the part that would take the longest amount of time but as a matter of fact it doesn't take that long at all. I'll mention the reason later but my magic(or rather my massive amount of mana I guess?) plays a major role in it.

When it comes to boil washing it, I just use a stupidly huge cylindrical pot for it and it's fine to periodically heat it up with fire magic. Of course, if you have the fuel then it's fine to place it over fire as well. The washing after that is really nothing more than a bonus. I make a huge bath buckets using ice and after filling that with water carry out the washing. Though rather than a bath bucket it might be more appropriate to call it a pool.

In regards to the current of the water as long as they can use water and void magic anyone can do it.

The majority of the water is something I created but if they just add the water they made themselves to there they can move it by using void magic to move that water. Though the efficiency will drop quite a bit because the amount is small in comparison to the rest but in the end my water will start rotating around in the pool so it's still far better than mixing it with a pole. Also, it's using magic with a clear objective to it's more efficient for earning experience points than just randomly using elemental magic.

Though I say that, the reason for the boil washing and washing with water here is to remove the remaining acid, fat parts, and trash from the raw cotton that underwent nitrification so I don't mind even if they're both done halfhearted. In the end if I just use the spell {Selection} then po~of it'll all be perfect separated from the impurities all at once after all. The only reason I don't do it from the start is so I can take it even just a bit easier. Through using the spell {Selection} it leaves almost no impurities so it reduces any accidents to close to none.

Most likely, I don't think it would be wrong to say that just this most important part is done at an even greater level than the technology on Earth.

After that, while it's wet from the water Toris separates it all at once. Even here it's possible for us to do precise separation that's almost perfectly uniform so it raises the level of safety when being used even higher. I use {Selection} on the separated materials once again and then use magic again to dry it all at once, or rather if I just pass it through an {Anti-Magic Field} all of the water created with magic completely disappears. If I store in a bottle together with alcohol separated from vodka then it won't deteriorate for a short while.

As a matter of fact right now I'm confirming the mixture ratio for the stabilizer to help the quality last even longer. Sodium bicarbonate is used for laundry and cooking so it was easy to obtain and oxidized magnesium is the main ingredient in the leftovers of a type of magnesium called {flash metal} which was pleasantly easy to obtain as well.

No matter which stage it is water magic is a necessity so it's almost always been Zenom, Ralpha, Zulu, and Angela that have been dispatched to the other teams. Since just Gwine has the important job of producing the map and confirming our current location when teleporting she's still acting together with the {Slaughterers} as usual. Recently she's been on firing duty when we test fire the gun. Though it's just pulling the string tied to the trigger on Bel's signal.

Since it's already the new year, this time I intend to go one step further and start making a new gun. Of course, it's still not one for use in the real thing. One that still doesn't leave the realm of a test gun but this time rather than one that is shot while resting on a bench, I intend to make one that someone can hold in their hand and fire. Just in case I brought along some walnut wood for making the gun-stock.

Year 7447, Month 1, Day 9

I made a prototype of the second gun. Without giving any thought to the changing of barrels or the magazine, I honestly just made it a back-loaded smooth-bore "completely single-shot gun". Every time you fire a bullet you have to manually release the chamber and add another but learning from the first gun I made a prototype of, even if there's a misfire in the chamber it isn't dangerous other than the muzzle. Also, no matter who is firing it if it's a distance of at most 20 meters then it's hard to miss a human-sized target.

If it's this then all of the mechanisms from the gun barrel to the chamber can be lined up double parallel and then if I just slightly shift the angle into the shape of a fan it should be usable as a splendid net gun. Getting the two hammers to fall simultaneously is simple after all.

The problematic point is putting aside the stabilizing agent of the smokeless gunpowder I'm making, I haven't put any fire retardant in so I've been making the chamber a bit thick and large in order for it to endure the detonation. It's still fine since I'm using shells but with the first prototype gun I put too much firing agent into the shells and ended up having to replace the cylinder twice after all. But, it ends up heavier for that portion.

For that reason, right now I've reconsidered that after all a fire retardant is necessary~ and looking for one. Dibutyl phthalate or Dinitrotoluene, there's no way right... Ah, maybe the blood from trolls would work? Since it's weak to fire. I just thought there might be some relation but there's no basis to it.

Rather than that, the next topic is the net that this gun will fire. There's no problem with the network or the needles that hold it together but it's not like it directly fires the net from inside of the barrel so I need to design something like a spear that acts as the actual body to be fired.

It's fine even if it's just once but a durability capable of resisting the impact. Fire resistant and difficult to burn. And then not as heavy as metal. There's already no choice but a wood stick right. It's fine if it's evergreen oak or walnut or anything else but it's necessary for it to be as fire resistant as possible.

I wonder if it would be fine to just fit the back of it that's exposed to the detonation with some metal? No, I guess it's fine even without it? Either way I'm sure the rubber stopper that acts as a seal for the blanks will be here so the remains will still cling onto it. Putting aside the net, it's something that's fine as long as we don't re-use the launching platform.

Ah, that's right, when it comes to wood that rarukku that's used for funerals might be good. It doesn't seem all that durable but that's just a matter of durability as lumber, and above all else it's resistant to fire. I guess it's plenty for this type of role?

Furthermore, in the very end, I was finally able to make the horizontal double-barrel type net gun prototype on the day we were going to leave the dungeon. First off we'll test fire it a number of times with blanks. It seems there's no problem. With this next time we should be able to try test firing this gun with a net.

.....

Year 7447, Month 1, Day 11

We returned to the surface and while waiting we bit into some baldoggie from Murowa's cart when the members of the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} came out lead by Zenom and Ralpha. Including us none of the teams were able to obtain any big treasure. How dull, and just as I was thinking it's a bad sign for the start of a new year, I reconsidered that something like this was only obvious.

Also, there was some news from while we were in the dungeon. Two things, one that was reasonably important and another that doesn't matter at all. First off I'll start with the one that doesn't matter at all. The other day, it seems that {Black.Topaz} came back. End.

The important news is that there was contact from Sandak Company about talking with Marquis Dasurain. It seems like it would be interesting enough taking a look at the face of an old man who'd spend 140,000,000 Z on a boring ring.

Also, I want to ask about that one "special type of spell" as well.

Additionally if I have the chance I want to know why he used the expression "recovery" in regards to the ability of the ring. Does he really believe that it's recovery or did he say it intentionally thinking that we don't know the ability of it, otherwise maybe it's just a misunderstanding(if the method of confirming it is bad then that's possible), I wanted to confirm things like that.

If you were to ask me as long as he didn't intentionally say it like that then I don't have much more to say about it. There's no method to accurately investigate the ability like my Unique Ability {Identify}, or at least I can just confirm that after all. Eh? I mean, if the Royal Court Magician and Minister can't investigate it then isn't it impossible for the average person around there to do it? Miduchi said, "There might be skilled magicians out there which haven't surfaced in the world" or something like that but even she's recognized that it's not very realistic, an extremely minuscule possibility that is fine to just ignore.

Even if they do exist as long as they don't appear in the world then they aren't any major influence and there's no way they would specifically go out of their way to come to me just to use a "special type of spell" on me. Even if something like that happens, I'll deal with it when we get there. If it's done in a way which I can tell then it's just a matter of shutting them up. Though if I can't tell there's really no helping it. When I said that to Miduchi she said, "Really, that's so reckless. But there's nothing other than that right." with a difficult expression.

It's true for us but I'm sure it's the same for the other party as well, so I just wrote a letter that any day during our next couple of days off would be fine before leaving it to a passenger carriage to deliver. After all, it seems like the thing he wants to ask me about is the specific details on how we obtained the ring, what kinds of monsters we fought, and about the dungeon. It's a bit troublesome but there's nothing bad about becoming acquaintances with a major politician. Even more so when that person has a history of trying to mess with sister..though I guess that's only obvious given his work duties huh?

.....

Year 7447, Month 1, Day 12

The next day, after having breakfast Miduchi, Zulu, and I entered the dungeon with just the three of us.

In order to practice the spells we just learned the other day.

After moving around bodies around a bit against goblins and such on the 1st floor, we immediately got started.

I thought there wasn't much meaning(So what if you can use it within a few seconds?) in practicing {Ground.Smoke} too much so I felt it was plenty being able to cast it within 30 seconds and just adequately practiced it a couple dozen times. The problem is the spells {Pyrotechnics} and {Grave.Strike}. Both of these should be even more effective the faster you can cast them.

Miduchi started practicing with breaks and I started without stop.

Recently I've started to understand it but when you're using spells as an example, it seems that the more skilled you are for the example the easier it is to learn it from watching. It's a bit different from leaving it to your high skill proficiency to use the example spell in as short of a time as possible.

It's not that it's best to simply use it in as short of a time as possible but rather if the person carefully spends 30-60 seconds casting a spell they can cast quickly it's even closer to the ideal example for teaching, is what I mean. Just somehow or other I feel like the person watching can learn it in less uses of the spell.

Though it's just a feeling so it's not as if I know that's the case for sure.

In any case, for starters there's the spell {Pyrotechnics}. If it's this then even Ralpa can use it and if it's her then I think she would even be able to determine the locations of enemies and allies within the smokescreen with her Unique Ability.

"That smokescreen spell is frightening. You end up unable to see anything."

Zulu said with a shiver. Certainly I was surprised at first as well. When I felt the slight discomfort and tried identifying myself only to notice that the "upper limit" of my Strength and Speed had fallen I was trembling inside beyond Zulu just now. Though I was relieved when it recovered a short while after that.

It might be that this guy noticed there was an abnormality with his body.

"Yeah. But wouldn't it be fine as long as you don't rely on your vision? Using Miduchi's {Party-ization} then putting aside the enemies you can tell the rough location of allies right? It's convenient even just for avoiding friendly fire."

I tried saying that but hearing it Zulu said some words I've never heard him say until now.

"Come to think of it, master never uses that {Party-ization} like the madam right."

It seems he said it slightly but he doesn't know anything much at all about the Unique Abilities and just thinks it's one of the spells that Miduchi can use since we said that. Since he knows that magic is my specialty it's almost unnatural that he didn't ask about it until now. Although, since it's Zulu I'm sure he was showing restraint.

"I've discussed it with Maruso before as well but I've always thought it's extremely convenient how using {Party-ization} doesn't let us feel the madam close by but master, and everyone else as well. Maruso and I would prefer if master uses it so we can feel master's presence even closer but.."

Zulu said with some restraint. You could say it's quite the admirable slave spirit but if you just take the words at surface value and it could be interpreted in a slightly strange way. Of course, that's even when I already know that Zulu doesn't have those sort of feelings or interests at all. Well, that sort of crap doesn't matter at all. Rather than that it might be a good time to tell him already.

"..It would be best if I use it, huh? There's a reason why I don't..can't use it. Do you want to know?"

Zulu noticed that my atmosphere changed a bit. Furthermore, during this time Miduchi is desperately focused on trying to use the smokescreen type of {Pyrotechnics} and hasn't noticed our conversation.

"Eh? No..that is.."

Zulu started making an expression like he's screwed up and said something he shouldn't have. Even though magic is my specialty and I have an extremely high amount of mana but I have an inferiority complex towards the spell that Miduchi specializes with. He must think that he accidentally stimulated that.

While covered in sweat from concentrating countless times and leaning against the wall of the dungeon, I looked at Zulu who was kneeling in front of me and started talking again.

"I can't use Miduchi's {Party-ization}. Most likely from here on out, I'll never be able to use in my lifetime. The reason being that {Party-ization} isn't magic after all."

"Eh?"

It must have been an unexpected statement to Zulu. His eyes opened wide.

"Just the same the reason why Gwine specializes in remembering terrain isn't a spell either."

"..Ha...ha?"

"Ralpha, Bel, Toris, Basutorial, and Faruergaz all have something they specialize with. Of course, I do as well..The content is varied for every individual."

I continue saying to Zulu who's making a confused expression.

"It's nothing to be so surprised over. Even you already know how we were reborn from a different world right? It's an ability that those sort of people all have. It's called a {Unique Ability}. It's something that can only be seen by the person them self in their status like the level of magic and {Special Skills}."

".."

Zulu who was at a loss for words just continued to look at my face.

"Even you were amazed by Gwine's growth rate right? I'm sure you accepted the reason for that when I mentioned in the past but.."

Ralpa who's combat abilities were high from the start from being raised and educated by Zenom as an adventurer. Bel and Toris who received combat training as nobles. Even though they're considerably young brats, Angela and Zulu didn't mind it at much from the start. However, when we first started training Gwine I realized they had the feelings of, "Master sure has taken on some baggage". Of course, since they're my slaves they would never say something like that openly though.

A short while after that when I explained things about the blessing of level increases for reincarnated people they seemed to have easily accepted it. That's why when I added Basutorial to the party I didn't feel displeasure from them at all.

"Well, {Unique Abilities} are something special that we reincarnated people have from the moment we're born. In Miduchi's case that is {Party-ization}."

I continue speaking to Zulu who's still dumbfounded and staring at my face.

"..The Laios race has the special skills {Instantaneous} and {Night Vision} right? It's the same as how I'll never be able to use those in my lifetime. It's the individual version of those that only reincarnated people have."

Zulu made a face as if he understood a bit.

It seems the doubts within him have been cleared.

The color of understanding appeared in his eyes.

Along with a light poof sound the smokescreen type {Pyrotechnics} activated.

It seems that after concentrating five times she's finally been able to use it.

"..Oh~ I did it!"

She happily shouted. She was concentrating a bit of distance away from us so she doesn't seem to have realized we were discussing things somewhat seriously.

"You and Angela must have thought it was a bit strange right? Yeah, I get it. It's fine if you don't worry about it."

I continued saying to Zulu who was making a slightly apologetic expression.

"It's a special power that only reincarnated people like us have.

In addition to having a high growth rate, we even have all our memories previous to being born. Do you think it's unfair? Don't hold back. Tell me honestly."

"No. I don't think it's unfair. If you were to say that then someone who was born as a slave would consider the fact that I was born a commoner unfair. Rather than that, I'm pleased that I was able to understand that after all master is a special person."

Zulu said while properly looking me in the eye and after that smiled a bit before fixing his posture and politely lowering his head.

"You're my head slave after all..I'm depending on you from here on out as well. Also, I intend on saying this to Angela. Though I don't intend on telling those other than her "yet". Sooner or later..Even if it's not everything I'll tell everyone else about it eventually.."

"Ha."

With just a short reply Zulu lowered his head even further. I thought he would ask something even more about my and the others {Unique Abilities} but Zulu didn't say anything. That's exactly like Zulu.

"Uoo~ I can't see! I can't see anything! Hey! You can't see anything right, with this!..Hn? Also, I've got this vague feeling..Hey say something?"

I'm glad to see she's enjoying herself.

"That's great isn't it! Come out. It's almost past noon so let's go and eat something."

Chapter 283: Magic Ring

Year 7447, Month 1, Day 21

Following the last time we entered the dungeon I'm still developing guns in the plaza on the 8th floor as usual.

Crushing the small problems and making small improvements to be tested during the next time we enter the dungeon.

If there's no problem at that time then I think we'll try using it in the halls and room bosses.

If that goes well then the next time after that I intend on finally going to the 9th floor and trying to fire the net gun against the group of Minotaur. If it's effective against trolls and the such then it should be fine to expect it to be useful against the mino.

And, putting aside the dungeon which has been going somewhat smooth(though it's not completely smooth), as a matter of fact right now Miduchi and I are on way towards the capital.

While we were in the dungeon this time there was a reply from Marquis Dasurain that he wanted to meet and talk with me as soon as possible. The meeting place is the Department of the Royal House area inside of the government office in the capital. I could have sworn that even if other places were different the department of the royal house(has the role of acting as secretary to the King and manages the royal court and such) and the department of castle forces(deals with military affairs) would be located inside of the royal castle.

Even the imperial household agency of Japan is located in the imperial palace right. Well, when I tried asking about it later, not just both of the departments, but the other departments also have an area in the castle as well but the castle itself is nothing more than the location of the organization and something like the headquarters are all packed into an area of the government office building.

And, if the King has business with the minister, politician, or bureaucrat or whatever and wants to talk with them he calls them all the way from the government office to the castle. This, the higher your position is wouldn't it just become that much more troublesome getting called out by the King all the time? It would have been fine if the royal castle was at least right next door to the government office.

Of course, even I understand that it would be unpleasant to have a ton of politicians(or you could call them high rank nobles) and officials coming to work in the royal castle which also acts as the house of the royal family everyday, so I can understand the reason for splitting them up.

But, even then I have to wonder about how it's over 1 km in distance away. I'll have to make sure I don't make the same mistake. I wrote it down in the notes of my heart.

Since we're meeting a minister, Miduchi and I are wearing high class clothes like the ones on the days of judgement.

They open in the front resembling kimono from our past life. Though even if I say kimono there's no difference in the sleeves for men and women. Also, there's no hakama on Orth so I can't help but feel like it's off with the appearance. In exchange we're wearing somewhat comfortable pants and the same combat boots as usual. Incidentally, I don't have any official position and I'm a low ranking noble so the color of my obi is deep green. Miduchi's is a vivid pink color.

First off we stopped by Sandak company which was acting as the intermediary and greeted the company president before going to the department of the royal house together with him. After coming to one of the government office buildings that was assigned to the department of the royal house and the company president conveyed to the squire or knight from the third knight group that was acting as gatekeeper about our appointment with Marquis Dasurain. However, we had a chat about the buildings around here and recent affairs with a different knight from the one that went inside for about 15 minutes while waiting so we weren't bored.

After that we were let through into a reception room like place.

After sitting down on the sofa and sipping at the tea we were given I heard a shouting voice saying, "Hn? The room of Makkaze? I said to take them to the room of Kamukura right!". Miduchi and I exchanged glances. How noisy right.

"He's on his way."

The company president of Sandak company who's wearing the same green-type obi as me said.

So that voice was him huh?

And then, a single old man entered the room. It was a skinny old man a sharp glare. He has a gray reverse triangle beard growing from his chin and his slightly long and plentiful hair of the same color for his age was carefully combed towards the back of his head. You can tell from a glance that what he's wearing is high quality and while it has a similar design to the kimono Miduchi and I were wearing but I'm sure it cost several times more. The color of his obi is..wow, red. It sure is different when it comes to a minister and Marquis.

Ah, the King's is purple, the queens, princes, and dukes are blue.

If my father were to "formally" have an audience then his would be black. Marquis Webdos is yellow and the commander of the first knight group, Baron Logan is red. When it comes to company commander level I think it would be white or so? The color of these obi displays they're nobles and even among them are graded by ranking to some extent. No matter how important they are commoners and free people can't use any colors except brown, light blue colors, or otherwise pink and different colors like Miduchi.

This old man must be Marquis Dasurain.

"Your excellency Marquis, thank you for the other day. And then, these two over here are the ones.."

Sandak Company's president exchanged glances with us.

"It's nice to meet you, your excellency. My name is Alan.Greed."

"I'm Midu~ritto.Chizumagurol. It's an honor to meet you."

We stood up from the sofa and greeted him.

"Oh! Oh!?Greed? I've heard that somewhere..Greed..And, excuse me. I'm sorry about especially calling you out. I'm Dasurain...What, Greed!?"

Obviously Marquis Dasurain has only just found out about our information as the sellers.

Since he was so infatuated with sister I'm sure he had some memory of the name Greed.

Although, recently I haven't heard his name from sister at all anymore, so I thought he either gave up or was just too busy to bother with it.

While Marquis Dasurain froze up staring at my face as he was about to sit on the sofa, Miduchi and I took our time taking our seats again.

"Forgive my rudeness suddenly asking something like this but do you have a relative in the first knight group?"

Marquis Dasurain asked me while still frozen in place.

"My older sister is in the care of the first knight group. I'm amazed you know of her."

"..Alan.Greed..Greed Companys..The {Slaughterers} huh..No wonder."

He~ I'm amazed he knows about trivial adventurers like us. Well, a youth who's still at the age of a brat established a company that centers around rubber products and furthermore just the other day surpassed the achievements of his majesty the founding King George.Rombert the first so I guess it's not strange for him to know the adventurers name. After all thanks to that I've become a bit of a celebrity even beyond just an adventurer.

"Ah, no. I'm sorry for all the rude questions. I've heard that your older sister is an extremely skilled magician. Is magic your specialty as well?"

Well, I thought he would ask something like that.

"I'm just a bit better than the average person. When it comes to magic then this Miduchi is even better than me."

Miduchi smiled when I said that about her.

"Hmm, a dark elf huh...Then I guess it's not strange for you to be skilled with magic..By the way, Chizumagurol-san, what is your void magic level?"

Marquis Dasurain asked Miduchi as he sat down on the sofa.

What are you spacing out for?

It seems Miduchi missed that while spacing out.

I poked her with my elbow.

"Ah!!? Yes! Pl..Please excuse me. I'm just a bit nervous.."

It couldn't be helped so the Marquis repeated his question again.

Could you stop with those sorts of things?

It would suck if we leave a bad impression on such a big shot right.

Though it can't be helped.

"It just reached 5 the other day. Your excellency."

Hearing that Marquis Dasurain's eyes opened wide in surprise.

Though it's really 7.

"As expected adventurers who use spells in live combat on a daily basis have an easy time raising the levels of their magic special skills."

Supposedly this old man entered the dungeon in Baldukk when he was young as well. However, as expected when it comes to the Royal Court Magician he knows that it's more efficient to directly use magic to deal damage to earn experience towards magic. Of course, efficiency earning experience points and the proficiency levels of spells are completely different, and if you were to ask rather than using attack spells to deal damage adventurers save their mana for using healing spells far more often. That's why it's not known very well.

I kind of want to try bluffing and pretend to show admiration to see how much he really knows but it would be unpleasant if it ends up a snake in the bush and it's not like I have anything to gain from it so I just let it pass.

We discussed recent events for a few minutes and it was finally time for the meeting to enter the main topic.

"Putting that aside and the matter today was about that ring. After all was that something you obtained in the dungeon of Baldukk?"

"Yeah, that's right."

Since Marquis Dasurain didn't know that I was the seller of the ring he didn't know that it was something found in Baldukk. After that when I told him we obtained it from an altar on the 9th floor and he was humming to himself with a face of admiration.

"By the way, it was mentioned in the letter we received from you the other day but supposedly the ability of the ring is "recovery" right?"

If "recovery" means the "acceleration of healing" then it's something extremely valuable to adventurers. Even if you get injured it shortens the amount of time you have to spend laying around on the surface and that directly relates to earning even more.

"Umu. I've already confirmed myself that it has the same name, {Ring.Of.Protection}, as the one that's passed through the generations in my family and has the same effect as well."

"I see now.."

If it's not a mistake in my memory then that wasn't supposed to be recovery but damage reduction.

"For future reference would it be alright for me to ask what kind of method you used to test it?"

Hearing my words Marquis Dasurain gave me a simple explanation.

The method was just as listed below.

I think I mentioned previously how when writing contracts you mix your own blood with powder from magic stones to use the thumb print. During that time you normally use a pin to prick your fingertip. HP doesn't decrease for just that degree of wound. But, things that hurt still hurt. It's nothing significant and it doesn't even interfere with concentrating for using magic. Well this depends on the person though. In the case of most people, if they seriously start concentrating to use magic it's still possible.

That's why in the case of nobles who have a higher ratio of people that can use magic, many of them will use a healing spell right away. It's the same for me too.

It seems that for the matter this time Marquis Dasurain put on the ring and pricked his finger with a pin just like when doing a contract. He said that while it made a wound no matter how hard he tried to press his finger no blood would come out. Furthermore the wound itself quickly sealed up. After that, the ring didn't display it's effect again that day.

The next day, this time he injured his finger with a pin without wearing the ring. After squeezing his finger obviously blood came out. After confirming that he immediately wore the ring. And then, the wound sealed up and obviously the blood stopped as well. This is the exact same effect as the {Ring.Of.Protection} that was passed down from the ancestors of the Dasurain family and since it also has the same name, he said that it lead him to believe it was really a ring with the exact same effect.

Hearing his story up to here I started to wonder about it a bit. I wonder if the "damage reduction" would still be effective even if it's damage you take before wearing the ring? In the first place you can't call wounding the tip of your finger with a pin damage. If it's damage that light(just the same as experience points, it's possible to think that there's such a thing as damage below a decimal point) then I wonder if it would be a target for the reduction if there's not much time between?

Additionally the friendly Marquis showed me the {Ring.Of.Protection} that was always passed down through the generations in his family.

【Ability: Damage Recovery;1 HP】

【Effect: In the case that the target who equips this ring undergoes something where they receive damage to their HP, through the mana in the ring it can recover the damage taken by just 1 HP. The amount of damage it's possible to recover is up to 1 HP per day.】

Just the appearance is vaguely different and it looks really similar, even with my {Identify} the details are the same..or not.

However, without showing any sign of realizing that, I intentionally used the spell {Detect.Magic} and whispered as if showing admiration.

"Certainly it's a magic item..Excuse me, {Status Open}..Just as you said the name is the same as well."

Hearing my words the Marquis lightly nodded as he took the ring and started talking.

"Also, the reason I was confident it was exactly the same is because I confirmed it using a "special type of spell".

That, that's it! What I wanted to hear about.

"Come to think of it you wrote about it in your letter right. What kind of spell is that "special type of spell"?"

"I'm sorry but I can't say that much. But, I'm sure it's difficult for you to accept just saying that. The "special type of spell" is a spell that compares the mana from two items. If you use this spell then you can compare the mana of {Magic.Items} you're holding in both of your hands."

..Ho? So there's a spell like that.

"So you were able to determine that they're the same using that spell?"

"That's right. These rings don't have any other ability than healing small injuries but I treasure them greatly. I'm happy that you were willing to sell it to me. Even more so if something that is passed down in my family through the generations came from the 9th floor, deep in the dungeon that even the founding King didn't reach then it'll raise the character of it."

The Marquis put on the ring again while grinning.

Miduchi moved a bit uncomfortable next to me.

It seems that it appears as almost the exact same thing with that comparison spell. Also, we were able to confirm that even if this Marquis has a "special type of spell" it doesn't compare to my {Identify} unique ability. That's plenty. The only thing remaining is the slight doubts I have about the ability of the ring we found but in the first place it wasn't a significant ability so I'm sure there's nothing more to bother about with it.

After that we discussed the dungeon as we pleased for just a bit and excused ourselves from the room.

We split ways with Sandak Company's president after leaving the building.

.....

On the road towards the headquarters of Greed Company, I was discussing it with Miduchi.

"That minister, I guess his true intention was that he wanted to hear the story about how we obtained the ring right?"

Additionally after hearing that it came from the 9th floor it was just right for raising the status of the magic item that was passed down through his family.

Hearing that Miduchi brought her horse close to my horse.

"Just..there was one thing."

"Hn? Was there anything bad?"

She approached my ear with a serious face and whispered.

"That person, he only lied on one part. The part about it "not having any other ability". Hey, that ring, I wonder if it really only had the ability you said..."

What?!?

Certainly we only just used {Identify} on it and didn't properly confirm the ability at all...

Though I understand the fact that {Identify} isn't perfect(or believed to be) but...

Side Story 28 - In the case of Munakata Shizuka(Age 26 at time of accident)

Part 1

Really~ there's really no helping that. That seems like it will take some work. A difficult opponent...

Munakata Shizuka quietly whispered to herself while remembering things from last night.

She received a job transfer order from her workplace to move from the Northern Kantou to the main office in Shinjuku of Tokyo. Since she had the chance she decided to borrow an apartment in the regional town of Kanagawa prefecture where she lived when she was a child and commute from there. One appeal was also that she could get to Shinjuku without needing to change trains.

Yesterday and today were moving days so it was fine for her not to go in to work but after this all she has remaining is unpacking trivial belongings that she won't need right away, and starting from this afternoon she came in to the office a bit late because she wanted to organize her desk ahead of time.

As a matter of fact there was a reason why Shizuka decided on her current apartment as a residence. One of the reasons as also because of the cheap rent from the landlord's family being an acquaintance of her family but the other reason was there was someone she was looking forward to meeting.

The main occupation of the landlord's family is running a small liquor store and she was the same age as the son there. When they were kids they often played together, slept together, and even took baths together. She remembers his back seeming considerably reliable when he chased off a stray dog while they were in kindergarten. During elementary school he covered Shizuka when she was being bullied and boldly stood up against the bullies, you could say it's thanks to that Shizuka was able to comfortably spend her elementary school days in this town.

Unfortunately partway through her fourth year in elementary school, around the time Shizuka had just turned 10 years old, they ended up splitting ways along with her father's job transfer. At first they exchanged letters but after about one year they both ended up stopping. After that, when Shizuka graduated high school she entered a Touhoku National University and she heard that after her childhood friend graduated from trade high school he started helping with the family business liquor store just like that.

Yesterday she spent time bringing in her luggage and greeting the nostalgic neighbors so she didn't have barely any time to meet. Since it couldn't be helped she made a promise with the landlord in order to go to dinner with him at a pub. She tried going and seeing him like that but...

"Ke...Dinner at a pub~? Fellows who are employed by a good company after college sure have it good~"

"Ha? What's that? I couldn't meet you today so I just wanted to try talking to you for the first time in a while~ What is with those remarks? Are you picking a fight with me?"

"Not particularly"

I guess she heard the argument in the back of the store, his mother came out.

"Shizu-chan, I'm sorry..This child, every since middle school he's been a bit rebellious..Look, Takashi, apologize to her! Go on."

With a reluctant sort of feel her childhood friend Takashi left the house and followed after Shizuka.

"And, what's a good place?"

"Huh? Aren't you the one who invited me? I have no clue. I don't go drinking outside much."

Hearing this Shizuka felt a bit disappointed thinking(This guy, I wonder why he changed so much).

She only had the memories of him always being gentle in the past.

That's why she thought he would already have a girlfriend now and go out on dates a reasonable amount, even if they're not all that stylish she thought he would at least know a delicious restaurant.

It couldn't be helped so they entered the chain pub in front of the station(She was even more amazed hearing him say it's difficult to show his face in the individually managed pubs because they sell alcohol there) and talked about various things while eating and drinking. After a short while they were able to speak openly to each other and she was able to confirm they could speak considerably freely like in the past.

During that time Shizuka was roughly able to understand why Takashi ended up with this sort of personality. Shizuka didn't know(though she guessed it) but after Takashi saved her from being bullying he still didn't accept bullying and stood resolutely against it.

Through that he interacted more with a bullied kid he met during high school even after graduating and it seems their friendship has continued until now. After graduating from high school he started helping out at home just like that and since the number of friends he had around the same age dropped significantly he ended up heavily influenced by that friend.

Takashi himself evaluated that friend as "Starting with the state of society, he knows a lot of things well and is smart. And above all else his ability to see the essence of things is admirable."

However, hearing his story Shizuka couldn't help but think (Isn't he just a hardcore net otaku. Not to mention a NEET).

The two of them poked at their chicken karaage as they tilted their beer mugs.

"Ah, Hey, why are you squeezing the lemon as you please?"

"It's more delicious to put lemon on it right?"

"Ju..Just doing as you please.."

They ordered one more plate of karaage.

Next a large plate of sashimi was carried out.

"Oh my, after all they're different from over there."

"Odawara is close after all, even the fish of Kanagawa are pretty good right?"

"This place, it's a chain. There's no way of knowing where they stock up from right."

"Come to think of it that's true.."

Some grilled shirokoro came out. In this region since the past there's been horumonyaki from pig's large intestine and it normally gets seasoned while still raw before being diced and eaten. It's a menu item that's almost always offered in the daily set for restaurants in this region. It's to the point where even the soba shops have a shirokoro set on their menu. The intestine grill doesn't have it diced and it stretches out for a long of 1 meter. The customer then uses scissors to cut that at just the right size before eating it.

"Yeah, fuwafuwa. It's delicious as usual."

It gives off a inexplicable texture in your mouth almost like you're eating fuwafuwa marshmallows. If it has a bit of fat on it along with deep miso sauce for seasoning then it matches up with beer extremely well. Of course it's good as a side with rice too.

Shizuka remembered how horumonyaki using shirokoro was one of her favorite foods as a child. Either they didn't sell them at the butchers where she was transferred or the ones that were occasionally sold were always cut up and boiled so both the look and taste were completely different.

The only place they're circulated around while still raw is just this region. Even if you say shirokoro in the place she transferred it wouldn't be conveyed and when she couldn't get her mother to buy any for her she gave up and tried to buy it herself, but after all it still wasn't conveyed so she remembered returning home hunched over and apologizing to her mother.

"If it's Maruchou then they're more delicious at Nagano Shop than here."

"Then why didn't you bring us to that Nagano Shop.."

And then as the alcohol started to circulate the two of them gradually got into deeper conversation.

"N~ I'm considerably satisfied with my current lifestyle. We have frequent customers as well. Of course~ the sales of the store are slightly dropping but in this sort of economic condition, it can't be helped. I'm busy with deliveries and various things, it's pretty difficult but I have quite a bit of flexibility with time as well."

"The sales are dropping..Isn't that a huge problem. Do you not have any intention of making it into a convenience store? That area, there's no convenience stores right. If one appears from some place you won't make it in time anymore?"

"A convenience store right..I've heard about that them. Father and mother both said I could do what I please but...Satoshi said that the convenience stores take the franchise affiliation charge and after that even if your sales drop they'll just look the other way, even though that's the case it seems they still force harsh quotas on what you need to sell.."

"Again with that Satoshi."

"Eh? Did you say something?"

"No~pe"

Shizuka was disillusioned by his appearance of not trying to take any counter-measures towards the dwindling present state and just giving off an air of resignation.

"It would have been good if I hadn't taken over something like the business..I'm sure it would have been different if I had gotten employed at some company..But there's no meaning to working at a company if you don't work harder than the amount your paid and there's also the hard floor of being restructured after all."

She felt some intent to kill towards that statement. Of course~ if Takashi had gotten employed he probably would have had a different life. Putting aside firing surplus employees it's only obvious for companies to restructure when reorganizing themselves. However, even if this sort of man were to find employment, she felt like they'd end their entire life as a low-end employee at the window. There's those sorts of people in Shizuka's company as well. They're fine if you just pay them an appropriate amount in wages and by the time of people working their hardest they only can think about their own small life directly in front of them.

In the current economic conditions, even if you put in massive effort working you get low wages, when things start to look bad the company throws away employees at it's own convenience without hesitation. If that's the case then isn't there no reason to put so much effort into working for the company? and there's a lot of people who think like that.

Shizuka thought, "You're not doing the job just for the same of the company." She thinks if you don't want to be thrown away then it's just a matter of polishing yourself. Even though it's fine if you just become a person the company can't fire.

He's become a person who says these sorts of small things. Even today if he were to go to one of the individually managed pubs owned by one of those frequent customers then they would have built up a closer relationship and then could have even sold more alcohol, and thinking that made her feel sad.

"Hey~ Shizuka. Even if you were returning from a transfer to Tokyo, it would have been fine if you didn't live in this sort of distant place right? Why did you go the trouble of...Ah.."

(Takashi this guy, just now he definitely misunderstood something.)

"No reason. "Thanks to aunt and uncle" the rent was cheap after all. Ah, I have a boyfriend so."

The stuff in regards to a boyfriend was a lie.

.....

While they were riding on the train along the way a frivolous looking man carrying a guitar case got on and sat down next to Shizuka before opening his legs. She could hear music playing through from his earphones. There's a considerable number of seats open but it's not as if she can't endure it enough to change seats. Above all else, there's a music player on her smartphone as well so it's just a matter of her listening to that.

Shizuka started listening to the music she likes and before she realized it closed her eyes.

The next time she opened her eyes was the moment of the accident.

It was when someones bag came flying into Shizuka.

The place that Shizuka received her new life was a large-scale village called Kerasamisshu surrounded by a forest and fields in Viscount Yoraizu's territory. The population exceeded 2,000 people so it might be more correct to call it a town. It's close by the second largest town in the Viscount's territory, Samisshu, and a place blessed in both location and water.

She was named Margaretto as the eldest daughter of sub-Baron Jibekkusu the lord of this village. Her nickname is Peggy. Even if you say she's the eldest daughter, above her is the eldest and second sons, so it would be difficult for her to inherit the family.

The time when she underwent the naming ceremony was later than other people, when she was close to one and a half years old. Obviously shortly after that she noticed her own Unique Ability.

【Margaretto.Jibekkusu/3/7/7429】

【Female/14/2/7428】

【Wolf-People Race.sub-Baron Jibekkusu Family Eldest Daughter】

【Special Skill: Super Sense of Smell】

【Unique Ability: Holy Hands】

When she noticed it she had no clue what it was. However, since it has the name "Holy" it shouldn't be anything bad. Thinking that (Shizuka)Peggy wanted to try using that Unique Ability or whatever.

It's because she already know about the special skill. However, no matter how she tried she couldn't use it. It was around the time she turned six years old that she learned how to use her Unique Ability. She tripped when playing on the rocks by the riverside and suffered a large cut from her shin up to her knee. The children she was playing together with were stunned over injuring the lord's daughter and just went into a panic. Even Peggy almost started to panic from the pain and bleeding.

"So..Someone go and call an adult that can use healing magic!!"

The boy who was like the leader of the children said that as the other children scattered like a cloud running off towards the center of the village.

"It..It hurts.. It hurts~ Bill, it hurts.."

"Ah, Peggy..I'll wash the cut right now."

The boy brat leader called Bill collected some water from the river and used it to start washing Peggy's leg. It was a cut so deep it went through the flesh and you could almost see the bone. Even after washing it the blood just kept overflowing and the cut ended up being hidden in it again.

(It hurts it hurts it hurts. I want to quickly learn magic. Rather than that don't wash it with that water from the river that hasn't been disinfected, it's dirty.)

Peggy put her hands to the cut and clenched her teeth while enduring the pain.

"Bill, go out a bit on to that road. Even if an adult comes they might not be able to find this place."

Under the overflowing emotions, the thoughts of Shizuka the adult were running and she was able to think just a bit calmly.

Bill was a bit surprised seeing Peggy's face suddenly able to calmly decide on something but soon after ran to the road along the riverside.

Though that's the case she's six years old. She ended up feeling uneasy right away. She desperately (Calm down, you won't die over something like this) tried to calm herself down and stop the bleeding even just a bit more taking off her waist cloth and tying up her thigh with it. She has no strength so she couldn't satisfactorily tie it up but it should be better than nothing. It seems the amount of bleeding has stopped a bit from holding the cut down with her hand.

It was just then, something flashed through Peggy's head like a revelation. She put quite a bit of effort into trying to use it up until several years ago but in the end gave up unable to use it.

(Unique Ability..【Holy Hands】)

"Ah!!"

The hand she was holding to the cut gave off a bright white light.

The amount of time it was shining was short but it was certainly shining white.

Simultaneously she also felt the pain from the cut soften just a bit.

It's far from being completely healed but the cut is certainly getting a bit smaller!

Just now it went from the shin up to the knee and was split about 15 cm even.

But, now it's definitely just a bit smaller than that!

(What? My Unique Ability is..)

After using 【Holy Hands】 once more Peggy recognized that the cut got a bit smaller again. And then, shortly after that, a chill ran down her spine as she was engulfed in overwhelming feelings of fear.

Peggy started crying and screaming in a loud voice. Even she didn't understand why but she couldn't hold back the fear towards the cut no matter what. Even while crying and screaming (Even though I was able to somehow calm down until just now..) and thought that for a moment but that was it. In any case it's scary. The thoughts that if the blood continues like this she'll die took control of her head.

Before she noticed Bill came back to her side and rocked her trying to calm her down but completely ignoring something like that she continued to shed tears and raise her voice as much as she could.

During the several tens of minutes until an adult came running,

Bill continued trying to comfort the crying Peggy with a troubled face.

Shit!! She...

After returning last night he couldn't sleep for a short while from the humiliation.

The night passed and today because he overslept a bit he was late to start his morning deliveries and ended up chewing through the matter last night while having a late lunch.

He wasn't directly spoken badly of but you could feel her criticism from the ends of all of her words.

That girl Shizuka..!

Just because she was able to find a job at a somewhat big company after leaving college, she's looking down on me.

Even I would have made it into that level of company if my family business wasn't a liquor store and I had gone to college.

And then, around now I'd be giving it my best at some sort of big job.

She to that...

It can't be helped right.

My house is running a business.

What do you expect me the eldest son to do?

My little sister has only just entered college, what would happen if I weren't doing the job?

Of course~ the old man has only just turned 50 so he can still work plenty.

There might have been the option of gaining social experience of doing a job for a different company while I was still young.

But, delivering alcohol is heavy labor.

Even if I don't like it there's no choice but for me to do it right!

However, a convenience store huh...

Certainly it's just as Satoshi said you have to pay a considerable amount in affiliation charges to the franchise headquarters.

It would be necessary to rebuild the store as well.

I'd even have to hire part-time employees.

However, what Shizuka was saying makes sense.

There's still no convenience stores in this area.

Right now is probably the only chance.

In our case, fortunately we're originally a liquor store so it's big that we can deal in alcohol.

In a place just a bit of distance away there's one more liquor store that's about the same size as us.

If we end up being beaten by that place..!

Ah, shit, in the end it's just as Shizuka said.

Even I understand that our business is dwindling.

Almost like an octopus eating it's legs, eventually we'll have to start cutting into our low savings or we won't even be able to continue business.

I just didn't have the courage.

I wanted a guarantee that it would definitely succeed.

However, something like that, I knew there was no way of getting one.

If it's now then I still have the stamina remaining to convert to a convenience store.

However, since last year we've been in the red even after cutting my wages in half, right now we're in a state where we're barely getting by after cutting mother's wages in half as well.

We've long since been in the red as a liquor store.
Even the corporate tax for countless years now we've been bringing it forward with a blue losses.
Well, you can't say this is all just my responsibility
though.
..Shall I do it?
I'll do it as if my life depends on it.
If I'm doing it, and have decided that then I'm sure even Sato will cooperate with me.
I'm sure he can't always continue laying around without working
either.
I'll give him a job.
Thinking that and strangely I started to feel a bit grateful to Shizuka.
Regardless of the circumstances it was Shizuka's words that fortified my feelings.
I'm sure even she's gone through a reasonable amount of trouble.
Since it's a mainstream corporation I'm sure there's tons of excellent people around her, for sure.
Even I understand what it means to be transferred to the main office in that sort of situation.
Looking from Shizuka's point of view I'm sure she couldn't stand to watch.
Suddenly I looked up at the clock.
The time is still just past 1:20 pm.
If I remember right Shizuka was going to her company once this afternoon.
It's noon and not packed I'm sure so did she go to the terminal station next to the local station to check the time for switching over to the express train was it?

Even if I go to the local station now I won't catch up to Shizuka.
It would be more definite to taking a car and head towards the terminal station.
I want to say just a single word of thanks.
Since she helped me noticed the turning point in my life.
It was a mistake that I forgot to exchange phone numbers or mail addressed but these sorts of things should be done in person rather than through phone or mail.
I think I could speak my honest feelings right now.
Thank you.

.....

I was barely able to jump on to the last car of the express train going to Shinjuku.
In any case I was focused on getting on the train in time so I couldn't confirm if Shizuka was in the platform.
However, if I go towards the front car from here I should be able to meet her.
After we passed the next station I had made it up to the front car.
But, I was able to find Shizuka.
When I was going to call out to her she had her earphones on and eyes closed.
It seems like she's already asleep as well.
The seat across from her was conveniently open so I sat down there.
I wonder what kind of face she'll make and say seeing me right across from her when she wakes up.
I'm sure, she'll say something like I don't understand a girl's feelings quietly watching her sleeping face.

That too is fine as well.

.....

I didn't make it in time.

No matter how much I regret it's not enough.

It was an accident.

The moment I thought...ah..I was thrown from my seat.

Soon after I hit my head on something and my consciousness when flying when I heard a cracking sound that was probably my neck breaking.

.....

And then, when I thought I was somehow saved it seems that wasn't the case, and I realized that around one week after the accident.

It seems I've ended up as an example of the cycle of reincarnation.

Not to mention it seems to be a foreign country and I can't understand what the people around me are saying at all.

I feel like it has some English to it but somehow it seems different as well.

After around one year passed by I was roughly able to get a grasp on my situation.

It seems I was reborn in the something or other noble's territory of Rombert Kingdom.

Judging from the scent of salt in the wind I can guess I'm close to the ocean somewhere.

Normally I'm not all that intelligent but during this one year I've somehow reached the point where I can understand what's being said,

I think.

Well, as expected if you just quietly listen for a whole year even an idiot would remember a reasonable amount of it.

There wasn't anything else to do after all.
Just like that one such day, I found out about {Status Open}.
When my uncle or whatever from the neighboring village coincidentally stopped by the house he stopped me while saying {Status Open} or something and for a short while after looked in a slightly off place from where I was.
That time I couldn't help but wondering, what is he doing?
However, one day a short while after that, there was an incident where a considerable portion of the preserved meat they had purchased and stored before winter went bad.
My parents made a grim face as they called the slaves(that's right, my family was in possession of several slave families!), and wrote some sort of characters on the ground instructing them to start sorting through the dried meat.
My mother was acting as the supervisor there but during that time I was being carried on a shoulder cord.
That's also why I was able to notice it.
Every time the slaves that were digging up the barrels filled with dried meat being stored in the storehouse they would say {Status Open} while touching the dried meat and look at a slightly different place, then they would start comparing it with the strange characters my parents drew on the ground.
Seeing that it came to me.
And then I wanted to test it out right away.
I mean, isn't that only obvious?
I had already secretly started practicing talking so I can at least pronounce it.
After acting like I was getting tired my mother brought me into the bedroom and left soon after I closed my eyes.

Just in case I waited several matches and then finally I tried saying it as well.
Nothing happened at all.
Suddenly it all seemed stupid so I couldn't help but start laughing but after that I quickly figured out how to use it.
And then, I tried saying it while touching myself.

What is this? Kanji? Japanese?

【Dog-People Race】

A dog, huh?

Somehow or other I knew it.

I had a tail after all.

At first I thought it was an uncivilized area where Western-looking people lived.

There's a lot of Westerners even in Africa and I'm sure there's a lot in Southern America as well.

I thought it was a clan of people born there with ears and tails through some kind of genes.

However, with this it's all clear now.

It isn't even Earth, this place.

I don't get this part at all.

In the first place why are just the characters here in red?

.....

I spent some time keeping an eye on things for a short while and I started to understand it.

Most things have some kind of name attached to them.

However, as far as I know I'm the only one that's nameless.

Couldn't I overwrite the name data(?) with this so-called 【Overwrite 10】?

Though the meaning of the number 10 next to it is unknown.

Since it's a skill I'm sure it should have a way of using it.

After testing it out a number of times it seems I was finally able to use it.

First off I'll try it on my clothes I guess.

Up until just now the diapers I was wearing came out as 【Underwear(Infant Use)】.

It's a diaper right, if you think about it with common sense.

Diaper, diaper, diaper..Huh? Somehow I feel really tired...

.....

It seems I feel asleep before I realized it.

There's no one in the room right now so I guess I'll try checking the result?

"{Status Open}..Oh!"

Looking at my lower body while I was still laying down and the blue window displayed 【Diaper】.

It was just then that my mother came into the room.

"Huh? No one is around..How strange?"

And said something like that.

Hmn, I guess it would be better to be more careful when looking at status?

It would be bad if they find a problem with me talking and it seems creepy.

I had my usual meal that was like rice gruel and not very good at all.

I should obediently eat it here.
I want to quickly become alone and test things out after all.
Alright, next up is obviously my name.
I'm called Wally by my family.
That's why it's Wally.
Wally, Wally, Wally..Gya~!!

It hurts it hurts it hurts it hurts it hurts it hurts it hurts it hurts it hurts it hurts it hurts it hurts it hurts.

It hurts like my head is being crushed!
It hurts so much I can't even let my voice out!

Hmm. With this then even if it's seen by someone no would think I'm nameless I'm sure.

Huh? Come to think of it when my status was looked at by my uncle or whatever there wasn't any sort of strange uproar...

Somehow isn't this..kind of bad?
Eh? And the number has decreased!?
Why?

.....

After half a year passed and I've gradually started to understand
it.

I don't remember when it was but I met God.
Though it was in my dreams.

I was able to hear about various things.

I had predicted most of it but I was reborn in a different world from Earth.

I can't return to my old life(although, in regards to that, I had given up on it from the start, in others long in the past).

Also, it seems that Shizuka is somewhere as well.

Well, you could say this redundant though.

It's a bit late at this point after all.

It seems that the effects of the Unique Ability 【Overwrite 10】 were almost exactly as what I had guessed they were.

When I tried asking, is this perfect? and it seems that's not the case so it's not like I understand it all though.

I ended up using quite a bit of time just asking up to here.

After that I heard several things about the world and such and that was the end.

Was it a dream? and just as I woke up thinking that there was a window floating in front of me with content that seemed to be screwing around written down so I don't think it was a dream.

If it's something that a God did then I can't understand it but I can accept it by abandoning thinking about it.

I mean, it's God after all.

I'm sure it can do anything.

After that I racked my brains investigating the fine details of my ability that I couldn't find out no matter how much I asked God.

First off, the number of uses.

I don't really get why but occasionally it increases.

Recently it rarely increases.

Next up is the effective duration of 【Overwrite】.

This is something that I've figured out after using it countless times.

As a matter of fact right now, there's addition to the display of my Unique Ability, but it's this.

【Unique Ability: Overwrite(Lv.5)5】

That sort feel. Now wouldn't it remain in effect for close to probably 100 days or so?

After all at first the effect ended after about 6 days.

I was relieved when my name disappeared without anyone noticing it.

A short while after that when it changed to level 2 the length doubled in duration to 12 days.

When it changed to 3 it doubled once again to 24 days.

It was difficult trying to count the days without anyone realizing it.

It's not like there's a calendar on the wall after all.

It was at this point that I predicted the effective duration was doubling every time the level increased.

It was 48 days when it reached level 4.

Also, the number next to the level display.

I've somehow figured out in regards to this as well.

Rarely when I use 【Overwrite】, I suffer from that pain from once upon a time.

And then the number decreases by just one.

I don't know what would happen if it reaches 0.

However, it's just somehow but I think that this number is something of a postponement.

In other words, it's the number of times remaining where "it's fine if I make a mistake".

That would mean that including the first time I used 【Overwrite】 on myself I've committed four mistakes.

I'm sure it's something like a warning in regards to using 【Overwrite】 on targets which it shouldn't normally be used on.

The time when I used it on myself, the time I used it on a bed that entered the room, when I changed the bed to "1,000,000 Yen", "Space Battleship Musashi", and after that when I tried naming something "Malt 100% Yuuhi Ultra Dry", those five times.

In all of those times the 【Overwrite】 itself succeeded.

I've understood it as a warning when I try to name living creatures or 【Overwrite】 things with names that are normally unlikely for this world.

Though I say that, things like "Liquid Crystal Television" and "Bicycle" were okay so it also feels vague whether this guess is correct.

.....

And then, the time when I was officially given my name finally came.

No~ I'm glad I wasn't stuck with it still as just Wally.
I had a family name as well.

Part 2

"..Yes, how's this?"

"Yeah, thanks. I'm saved thanks to you, Peggy."

The squire smiled at Peggy as she rubbed an ointment on the bruise.

At the training place in the back of the village lord's manor.

Once again today the sight of Peggy could be seen mixing in with the combat training of the squires.

Of course, she's also one of the ones holding a wooden sword and spear as well.

Right now she's 13 years old.

A short while after she first noticed her Unique Ability, she wanted to know how much power she had so she tried testing it out every time she had the chance. And then she quickly ended up meeting God but she wasn't able to ask much of anything at all in the short 2 minutes of time she had to ask questions.

It couldn't be helped so she continued testing various things out even after that but as far as she comprehends after doing it for six or seven years she's almost perfectly gotten a grasp on the details of her ability {Holy.Hands}.

It's been a while since the level of the Unique Ability was displayed as Max.

The power she understood {Holy.Hands} as having is the ability so heal injuries.

Adding to that it seems through activating the body of the target, it's not perfect but she can treat some diseases as well.

The effectiveness of this ability increased as the level of her Unique Ability went up as well.

Now when it comes to injuries whether it's an external wound or a bone fracture she can heal it close to perfect in just a single use. It's regrettable that it still leaves a small amount of numb pain and a scar if it was an external wound.
It's truly worthy of being called holy hands.

.....

Here we return the time back to several months after she first used {Holy.Hands}.

For a short while after that(I'm still not used to it so this is already my limit), and whether it be by the riverside, on roadside, or on the side of the night soil reservoir, she falls over and goes to sleep without picking where she does it countless times(her family went looking for their daughter after she didn't return home and have even thought it might be a troublesome disease) but recently that hasn't been the case as often.

Of course, that's the result of her self-restraint. Starting from the earliest stages she's still trying to avoid using it in front of other people.

Obviously the supernatural power of magic exists so it's not as if this power can be said to be unparalleled but there's no mistake it's extremely useful.

(Ah, this is bad. Like this I'll end up stealing the job of the healers...It's fine if in the future I use this ability to work as a healer myself but if rumors of me circulate around to this village or the neighboring village then..I'll end up standing out too much. I might end up being resented.)

There she came up with a plan.

She decided to dress it up as if it was a special power granted to her by God.

For that sake, she needed to carefully ascertain the abilities of this Unique Ability.

During that time Peggy was six years old.

Her {Holy.Hands} had only just reached level 4.

(Speaking of level 4 it's the level said to be plenty full-fledged as a magician right..I've heard that even among adventurers{Vasataira} normally magicians only reach level 4 past their 30s. Then it should be fine to think that my Unique Ability has the power to be full-fledged as well right.)

Since it showed the effects of healing on the first injury by the riverside, she's already confirmed that it has an effect regardless of the degree of the injury. Even though she had a cut that large it was just a bit but it had the effect of healing it. Since it's reached level 4 now then the effect it has should be even greater right?

Thinking that she decided to cause a serious injury to herself and was going to go all out in stabbing herself in the thigh with a knife.

Carefully, she tried to stab into an area where she didn't think there were any major arteries.

However, she couldn't bring herself to do it.

It's also because she was simply afraid but there was also a lot of fear towards the pain and bleeding she knew would occur.

After all not even one month had passed since she suffered that major cut which was so frightening she ended up losing control of herself.

Up until now she's just scraped her kneecap on a rugged rock causing small scrapes that didn't hurt much and tested her Unique Ability on those. Since a portion of her mentality is already on the same level as an adult, scrapes of that level are nothing at all. But, stabbing herself with a knife is something completely different.

In the end, she couldn't stab herself in the thigh with a knife.

Her plan to come out about {Holy.Hands} ended up being setback.

.....

After that for a short while Peggy continued to use {Holy.Hands} in secret.

And then, one winter day when several months had passed. In the middle of combat training her oldest brother suffered a serious injury. During training, or rather it was normally after training was over, after all of the squires returned to their houses, he remained being training by their father and grandfather. Peggy was playing with her second older brother digging up an ant's nest nearby after he had finished swinging the sword.

Peggy was still about to turn seven years old so she hasn't participated in the training itself yet but since the start of the year she was told to stay nearby when they were training to watch it. This time is normally after the normal training time is over so she doesn't have to watch and just the same for her second older brother who had finished his swinging there was no need for him to stay either so they were just playing together.

"Ah!!!"

Her father shouted in a loud voice.

Before that voice echoed out Peggy had been keeping an eye on her father and grandfathers training just in case it could be of reference to her.

Partway through her father and grandfathers rule based training using real spears, the spearhead of her grandfathers spear came off when her father parried it and it stabbed into the face of her eldest brother who was doing form training nearby!

Her father and grandfather shouted her eldest brother's name as they ran over and her second brother just watched that not understanding what happened. And then, Peggy saw the series of event from start to finish.

Isn't this precisely the time to use that {Holy.Hands}?

Peggy hesitated.

From her standpoint in this dangerous Orth where you never know what might happen from here on out {Holy.Hands} is her one reliable trump card.

However, she only hesitated for a moment.

She ran over at full speed slipping through her surprised grandfather's side and as her father was carefully trying to pull the spearhead out, she casually grabbed it from the side, took it out, and threw it away before putting her hand to her older brother's wound.

Her hand gave off a white light as the wound of her oldest brother gradually closed.

It already was gone leaving just a small bit of traces remaining and she had healed it to point where even if you look closely at it you would just think, "An old scar from quite a while back?" This surprised not just her oldest brother himself but her father and grandfather who were watching on the spot as if they were going to fall over backwards. When she was asked "Is that magic?" Peggy shook her head.

(I moved spontaneously..But, it's better than older brother dying right..Ah, that's right. The thing I thought up a while back..)

Peggy explained to her family that this {Holy.Hands} was "A strange power she was given by a God that appeared in her dream". In order to get them to believe it for a short while she used her ability to it's limit and her family accepted it. However, after one week passed from the previous day she said, "God will only lend me the power when these hands are really needed.", "God will only show it's miracles when someone has clearly suffered a serious injury and their life is in danger."

Additionally she properly added on, "If we boast about it or brag that there's a special person in the family this we'll suffer divine punishment. The divine punishment will probably take place through a number of events that befall this land." as well.

She thought it would be effective on this Orth where civilization hasn't developed far and there's a wide variety of superstitions passed around.

In regards to this at that time, just when her second brother was about to try and secretly brag to his close friend about Peggy, coincidentally there was thunder from the distance so he really ended up believing in it. As a matter of fact it's also related to the fact that the other members of her family doubted her words as well. Even Peggy was grateful for the coincidence that seemed to come at almost too perfect of a timing.

In any case, thanks to the power of God which she could actually manifest and the lightning they felt was the omen of divine punishment, from that moment on Peggy's treatment from her family changed.

In the first place, she seemed mature for her age but after she opened up about {Holy.Hands} she received treatment that wouldn't be expected for the youngest child and eldest daughter.

And then, the months and days passed.

Both her oldest and second brother entered the regional knight group of Viscount Yoraizu on the spring of their 14th birthdays, a few years ago, and three years after entering her oldest brother received investiture as a true knight.

It's been two years since her second brother entered but he still can't see the promotion to a true knight yet.

Viscount Yoraizu's territory is a land that has a lot of 10 meter or greater hills deeply covered in trees and there's few consecutive plains. Obviously it's not very wealthy and the equipment of the knight group are lackluster and new recruits have to prepare their own spear, sword, and armor. The equipment for both the oldest and second son was a heavy burden on the family of sub-Baron Jibekkusu. Since Peggy was against becoming something like a soldier she already said she had no intention of taking the exam to enter the knight group. Nevertheless, since it's still a land where monsters are wandering around, she thought continuing with her training and learning to defend herself at the bare minimum was necessary.

From her point of view she knew that if she made use of her Unique Ability she'd never be troubled living from here on so and that was the biggest reason she didn't want to enter the knight group, so she explained that to her parents as well. If that's what their daughter who was blessed with a useful but troublesome power wants then her parents wouldn't be against it. Though they couldn't deny that deep in their hearts they felt some fear towards their daughter as well.

Since Peggy herself was sensitive towards those sorts of feelings of her parents, she wasn't bothered by it because after she was able to build up some confidence in her ability to support herself, she intended to go to a slightly larger town and adequately speak the words of God again.

Also, in regards to {Holy.Hands} since it healed skin diseases to some extent along with the injuries of her family while they were doing combat training, she had guessed that it was effective against some kinds of diseases as well but when her grandfather suffered a serious injury when trying to soothe a rampaging war horse that was stung by an insect, she was shocked noticing how he vaguely started to grow hair again even though he was going bald before she healed him.

Through carefully confirming the effects, she found out that it heals light diseases at the same time. It was around this period that Peggy started to guess whether (could it be that I can turn back time of the person I'm touching just a bit?) as well.

However, after testing it out on various examples in front of her, as expected she had to abandon that sort of unbelievable idea. For example those complaining of serious stomach aches that suddenly start up and you can tell it's a serious disease from how they're rolling about, also diseases people are born with. For example tetanus which even healing spells can't treat after the symptoms have reached a certain stage. For example putting aside the initial symptoms but just like with normal healing spells it only has a soothing ability towards the heavily contagious disease

Variola.

Seeing her family and the people of the village cringe in fear every time there was thunder in the distance she felt sorry but if she just gravely whisper something like "It seems someone was thinking lightly of it" then everyone would tense up.

The clincher was an incident when one of the caravan of merchants that very rarely comes to the village was attacked and eaten by monsters on their way to the next village after leaving their village.

If you were to say incidents like these are unusual then that's true but they're something that occur somewhere in the Viscount's territory at least once a year. However, after finding out about that incident one of the squires came to the lord's manor and confessed with a pale face that they had unintentionally talked about Peggy to that merchant.

Hearing that her father the Lord went pale and gave the squire a punishment of two lashes with a whip.

It was then that Peggy thought she screwed up.

She thought that it was her fault that an innocent squire didn't just feel more guilt than they should but even ended up getting whipped. She felt sorry towards the squire but she also felt sorry towards her father who had to perform the punishment. (It would have been better if I just remained quiet..No matter what happened after I healed older brother..Hmn, it can't be helped. If I hadn't said it at that time I really don't know what would have happened..but..)

While feeling ashamed of herself she thought it was already too late at this point.

And then we return to the time when Peggy was 13 years and old and treating a squire.

"Dear! Could you come here!?"

Her mother called out for her father from the house.

After Peggy finished treating the squire she picked up the wooden spear and started training once again.

Close to evening that night, they had a guest at the Lord's manor.

The reason her mother called out three hours ago was an advance notice had come announcing the visit of that guest and they wanted to arrange for lodging.

Peggy guessed that she needed to greet the guest as well.

The guests were a Viscount family that came from the south and the head that is the Viscount along with his son are lodging in their house while their escorts are staying with the squires.

Compared to merchants it's unusual for a noble to be a guest but it happens 2-3 times a year.

They have a guest room prepared in their house for those sorts of guests.

It seems that the Viscount family that is their guests are of the Dog-People race. She's also a Wolf-People race so somehow compared to other races she feels a bit of familiarity with the Dog-People race.

When she greeted them she strongly felt something was off seeing the face of the child.

Nostalgic, a face with strong Asian features remaining, black hair, black eyes.

Also, it was a face she somehow thought looked familiar.

Though she couldn't remember where she had seen it.

The other child made a slightly surprised face as well.

"What is it? Wally. Were you charmed by his excellency the sub-Baron's daughter?"

When the Viscount teased his son, the son's face turned red as he denied it.

Even Peggy was a bit charmed by the son so she quickly tried to change her thoughts as well.

Of course, it doesn't need to be said but it's not like they're were charmed because they were interested in each others looks.

.....

During the time until dinner Peggy twisted her head trying to think how she could be alone to talk with him in a natural way.

When they were having dinner together with the guests, Peggy decided to go all out and take action.

First off is a sign.

She tried sending meaningful glances every chance she could but the boy called Wally didn't react to any of them. Even though she kept glancing at him in meaningful ways so she could talk to him without being suspicious Peggy was suspicious of how slow the boy was.

(Huh? I wonder if he's not a Japanese person...)

Thinking that and he started to look even more like a Japanese person.

Since it couldn't be she decided to go with the final method. When the maid was carrying out tea she said she would do it and intentionally spilled some tea when she was pouring it into the boy's cup.

"I'm sorry! Did you get burnt!?"

In a hurry Peggy apologized and took out a handkerchief she had prepared to wipe up the tea.

On a corner of that handkerchief she had written a memo in charcoal. The memo said "Midnight, vacant lot 100 meters from the back of the house" in Japanese.

"No, it's nothing significant, please don't worry about it."

In reality, it wasn't anything significant.

The boy named Wally gently took the handkerchief Peggy was going to wipe his leg with and with polite gestures wiped the tea while glancing at the handkerchief for a short period and seemed to be reading the details. And then, he quickly took a handkerchief from his own pocket before folding it up in the one Peggy gave him and giving it back.

Peggy assumed that meant he accepted it.

After dinner, when Peggy was alone she opened up her handkerchief.

It was written in Japanese on the handkerchief wrapped up in her own, "After midnight, I want you to teach me a place we won't be seen."

She felt a new door of fate had opened.

One day after turning 13 years old a letter arrived from his older sister who had already received investiture as a knight in Viscount Yoraizu's knight group. The letter was left in the care of a merchant and it arrived close to three weeks(18 days) after it was written.

Reading the letter his father made a slightly pleased face.

However, soon after he started thinking about something and discussed it with mother but the next day he said several squires and I would be accompanying him to the capital of the Viscount's territory Zarakkusu. It seems the objective is to go and pick up sister who received investiture as a true knight. It was my first time leaving the village so I was a bit excited. I'm still a brat~

Zarakkusu is considerably far to the North from this Masumocchi village and the roads aren't properly maintained so even pushing along a carriage and hurrying quite a bit it seems it'll take close to a full four days for one-way. Since it's not like we're in a hurry it seems we'll take it slow over one week this time.

Shaking in the carriage and occasionally riding behind father on the horse as we crossed the hills, valleys, and proceeded through the great nature. There's a thick overgrowth of 4-5 meter tall trees in this area and it's quite a bit worst than even the remote mountain roads of my previous life.

Along the way, we had lunch by the roadside and I had them draw a simple map for me of this area up to the capital Zarakkusu on the ground as we moved down the road.

Map

The pink mark on the bottom left is Masumocchi Village and the red mark on the top right is our objective Zarakkusu. The blue marks scattered along the way are different towns(Of course it's not all of them. The mid-size Winro village in the Northwest of Masumocchi Village isn't marked down. It just has the other towns marked with a reasonable population other than Masumocchi Village).

The black line below Masumocchi village is the coastal line and the brown mountains are the mountainous area going up to Board Mountain. There's almost no flatland where there's nothing marked and it's just small hills up to ones over 10 meters in size all over the place. It feels pretty similar to the Chocolate Hills somewhere in the Philippines I saw on television in my past life.

Right to the West from this map is a large peninsula called the Jindaru Peninsula and it's a territory Marquis Webdos rules over, on the other side of the mountains of the map, to the Northwest, supposedly North of that is where Viscount Pendlaid's territory stretches out. In the East is Royal Territory and of all things some sort of Count that even father doesn't know the name of acts as governor ruling over the Western Dirt region. North of that, it would be Northeast on this map is the Western Kandeiru region which also has another governor ruling it.

Come to think of it, it's the first time I had them draw me a map. Up until now rather than worrying about things outside of the village, I've been ordered by father to record the harvest amounts for crops this season, gather the taxes from the farm families, helping out the slave fisherman with unloading, checking if the fishing tackle has properly been repaired, overseeing the production of smoked and dried foods, and then there's also the obligation of a noble lord's family to train with the spear and sword so I've been worn out everyday and didn't have the energy to do something like that.

Really you know, when all these jobs come surging in one after another and something like what's outside of the village don't matter at all, or at least's how I felt. If you were to ask me I'd like for sister to just quickly find a husband and come back. Two years ago that sister turned 15 years old and entered the Viscount Yoraizu knight group. It was about the time she should have received investiture as a knight so this time it's really something to be happy about.

And then one evening while slowly taking our time traveling over a week, just to the South of Zarakkusu, we arrived at a village called Kerusamisshu. Since we sent an advance notice ahead of time requesting lodging we were able to stay at the sub-Baron lord's manor without any major problem.

The time is midnight. The two moons of Karutari and Neitari were floating in the night sky and it was just a bit bright out from the moonlight.

I started towards the vacant land a bit of distance from the Lord's manor which the sub-Baron's daughter Margaretto specified.

I felt like I had seen her somewhere before so there was something that was bothering me about it as well.

Margaretto was hiding at the edge of the vacant land waiting for me.

In a whisper she quickly said "Come over here" and dragged me out to the edge of the village.

Kerusamisshu is a large village(It already might more appropriate to call it a town), so we moved along vacant land some amount of distance from the peoples houses.

"If it's here then we can relax and talk. You're a Japanese person too right?"

"Yeah, it's the same for you too right?"

We introduced ourselves once again.

"I'll say it once more. I'm Margaretto.Jibekkusu. Everyone calls me Peggy."

"I'm Walter.Heimudaru. It's fine if you call me Wally."

After that checked each others status.

"Oh? I guess you can't see Unique Abilities even among Japanese people."

"That seems to be the case. Peggy, what's your Unique Ability?"

After asking her that she made an expression like thinking about it for a bit and before sighing once said, "{Holy.Hands}. It can heal injuries almost like magic" while looking me in the eyes. Healing injuries, that considerably amazing, but this person, I guess she won't say anything about the ability level huh? Then it should already be at Max but it's the same for me as well...

"Mine is called {Overwrite}. It's something like naming {Named} and it can attach names to things. There's things which are no good like living creatures and there's a time limit to it as well though. Though, I say that, now I think it won't disappear over a period of years."

Hearing that she made a face in admiration for a moment like "Hm~n" and then immediately made fun of it with "It's plain on top of not being very useful." It's certainly plain so it didn't make me angry. However, it's an unpleasant feeling even though it's out first time meeting. I feel like it's a good thing I didn't say everything. Well, there's a limit to what I'm hiding about it either way.

After that we each discussed our origins and discussed our plans from here on out.

It seems Peggy has confidence that she won't have any trouble living or eating if she makes good use of her Unique Ability and in the future she wants to live a large town like Zarakkusu. Since my Unique Ability is "plain and not usefull" I never deeply thought about it. At most, I thought that if I buy some silver bars and manufacture them into an appropriate shape I wouldn't be troubled if I use {Overwrite} to rename them "Silver Coin".

That's right, that was several years in the past. It was after my Unique Ability reached Max level and I was getting bored of {Overwrite}, by chance I saw father using {Status Open} on the Silver Shu he was going to pay for construction work. Since I was interested in it I asked father and had him let me check the status of Silver Shu as well and, is how it appeared. After that, I nervously tried using {Overwrite} on a piece of wood to change it to "Silver Coin" and I was able to do it without a problem. I danced in joy to myself at that moment. For a short while after that I resolved myself for that pain to occur again as I started testing out various things with {Overwrite} once more.

Silver Shu {Silver Rectangle}

As a result I realized I could use {Overwrite} to change anything to read "Silver Coin" and "Silver Shu". Just this is something I can't tell anyone about no matter what. I'm sure it'll take a reasonable amount of funds to buy the silver bars and the tools to manufacture them but one day I'll become a billion.

Though before that I need to save up some small change. Also, in regards to the work room I make in the future I need it to be absolute secret even from my family so I'm sure that will be difficult.

I sent Peggy a lukewarm glance as she made fun of my Unique Ability and thought that her face was one I've seen before but couldn't remember it. She was looking at me with a lukewarm glance as well. Well, with the features of a Japanese person remaining I'm sure anyone would feel they've seen each other somewhere before.

"Hey, haven't we met somewhere before? My previous name was.."

.....

In the first place I had intended to leave Masumocchi Village in the future.

Shizuka, I mean, Peggy intended to leave Kerusamisshu Village in the future as well.

Since we both have experience being born and raised in the vicinity of a large city in Japan we didn't want to get involved with something like farming or fishing. We didn't have any insistence on this sort of territory in a remote land to the point of trying to get our older brothers or sisters disinherited.

The two of us came up with various ideas.

Several of them ended up being rejected and we decided on several of them as being worth adopting.

"Then in that case isn't it like I'm your servant?"

"That can't be helped right? But, we're sharing lots in life together right."

"Sharing lots in life..Well, I understand that it can't be helped though."

"But, if it goes well then I think we'll be in a delicious situation~"

"Certainly that's true. And don't say it arrogantly. Wasn't it my idea?"

"Don't mind it~ That is that right."

"Do you really get it? Things will be difficult at the start you know?"

"Nn~ I don't think that will be the case

though."

"I wonder about that?"

"It won't."

"Chi..You haven't changed..Hey, Shizuka, I mean, Peggy"

"What is it?"

"..Well it's fine. Wait around two years. I'll come to meet you after becoming an adult."

"..Yeah. I'm waiting. This time.."

"Ah?"

"Fufu, it's a secret."

The time was just about close to dawn.

We need to go back.

Today will be harsh since I haven't slept.

Other than the light from the moon it's pitch black as Peggy and I returned to the house together.

Before I realized it Peggy had held my hand.

Author's note: Masumocchi Village is barely along the southern coast of Yoraizu territory and Kerusamisshu Village is close to the top of the territory with almost 100 km in distance straight between them. Kerusamisshu Village isn't drawn on the author's dirty map this time. Furthermore, this map is inaccurate.

The capital Zarakkusu was started up as far away from the Dirt

Plains where there's frequent battles as possible and is still a considerably developing(200 years or so of history) town.

Chapter 284: Not For Their Sake

The title is 人の為ならず a part of the saying "Mercy/Pity is not for the sake of the people." There's also a saying near the end 驕れる者は久しからずや、盛者必衰か。 , I honestly have no clue how to translate that something about arrogance and prosperity from some book, but it's meaning is supposedly similar to "all worldly things are transient".

Year 7447, Month 2, Day 7

The fifth day since we entered the dungeon.

We're testing out firing the net gun against the bosses of monster rooms on the 8th and 9th floors.

It's the boring job of going over and solving the small problems that surfaced after actually trying to use it.

In regards to the gaps between the nets just as initially expected at 25 cm, quite a bit larger than a soccer goal, it was plenty in terms of size. However, we also learned that it would be best to increase the number of fish-hook like needles attached to there as well. Also, there was a bit of a trick needed in how the net was folded. We ended up failing a good number of times.

And then, in regards to the gun itself the largest problem we predicted was the weight of it but after all that ended up being a problem. After all the weight of a single piece is close to 10kg. It's a gun which I essentially forced a two piece gun into one piece and I ended up making the chamber pretty thick as well so it can't be helped.

I thought of having Bel use it but even with her high Strength value it was difficult to maintain a shooting posture for long periods. Though I say that, there was no problem for short periods of time so there's no other choice than for her to endure it. When it comes to transportation we have Zulu when he's around and if he's not then it's just a matter of Toris gasping for air. However, after all it's difficult to place any trust in the various status values that can be seen with {Identify} themselves.

Of course they're useful as somewhat of an indicator and just as is shown (It doesn't even need to be mentioned that her proportions are good just like the average female Bunnyman race but compared to the time when we first met her she's developed some decent muscles. Every time I touch her limbs and body to heal wounds I end up vaguely conflicted over the muscles I can feel under the fat layer. Even Miduchi has ripped abs.) Bel is reasonably strong in terms of power.

Other than running she also does strength training a bit. Also, it doesn't even need to be said but she's an adventurer, she doesn't slack off in training with the bow or sword so let alone a normal girl, she can move considerably fast even among adventurers. I'm just repeating myself but even her strength is quite superior. Even if it's not as high as the value shows..Even if it's doesn't reach the point of the Strength value, it's fine to say she's built up quite a bit of power.

If she were to arm wrestle against a random mob that hasn't done any decent training I don't think she would lose. However, I still think father from when I was a child has more power than Bel and Miduchi. Bel's current {Strength} is 24. It's about the same value as father's Strength when I was a kid but no matter how favorably I look at it, I can't help but think that father's strength was greater. Just the same because of the problem of level while Giberuti has the lowest Strength value out of all of us but I guess because he's always carrying things, he can display the greatest strength among the {Slaughterers} when it comes to carrying heavy things. Though that's excluding me.

Most likely, the various status values that can be seen with {Identify} are the upper limit of "you can train up to this value".

Well, it can't be helped since it was bothering me but there's no point in thinking about status values anymore than this, and above all else right now we're in the middle of testing the gun.

"I've already more or less gotten a feel for it. I'm pretty sure I can definitely entangle 5 or so of the Minotaur from the group at a distance of about 30-40 meters. Shall we go?"

The average size of the boss rooms are about 50 meters per wall in a square shape so it's difficult to do tests based on the assumed distance. It's not completely impossible if we fire it from the hall outside of the room but there's no guarantee that the monsters will all be grouped together after all. Well, it's possible to confirm how the net spreads out as it flies so that's still plenty for the test.

"Alright, let's go and try it. It's already late afternoon today so let's just do some decent earning for today and go to the center tomorrow."

After resolving on that and making my declaration I went back to guarding one of the halls while Ralph, Gwine, and Basutal gathered the magic stones in the edge of my sight. This time Zulu and Angela are each leading the {Butchers} and {Exterminators}. There's only 8 of us but as long as those strong minos aren't mixed in there's no problem.

Even if they are mixed in I'm sure we'll be fine as long as we can restrain their actions and even if they don't get caught in the net as long as we can all team up against it I'm sure we can win.

.....

Year 7447, Month 2, Day 8

"Then, everyone, just as we planned. I'm going to confirm things once more. We'll advance just like this then after the Minotaurs have noticed us and are 30 meters away Bel will shoot the net."

Bel nodded while releasing the chamber and loading the blank cartridge. The rod with the net attached to it still isn't in the muzzle. It weighs a decent amount so Basutal is carrying it. We'll be taking it out now before carefully folding it with everyone and then loading it.

"Immediately after that Bel will change equipment to the bow.

Miduchi will be guarding Bel. Miduchi, while you're guardian shoot as many arrows as you can."

Miduchi takes the important role of support plus guarding. In the worst case if Bel's net can't entangle a bunch of the Minotaur, if she doesn't have a bow then the degree of danger would greatly increase.

"Everyone else will charge in together with me. It's expected that 7 of the Minotaur will have respawned. We'll split up into two groups, Toris, Basutorial, and I will go from the right. Zenom, Ralpha, and Gwine will go from the left. The first targets are the ones that don't end up captured in the net. We'll finish off the ones captured in the net after the first targets are annihilated. Alright?"

After confirming everyone nodded, we immediately lowered the net from Basutorial's back and after attaching the edges of it to the launching platform of the rod made from rarukku branches, we folded up the net like a hairpin. The trick to it is folding the edges a bit tight while the center is wide. In order for the hooks to not get caught it's necessary to do it carefully. Furthermore, in order for the stitches with the hooks attached to them to not interfere with each other, for the horizontal lines excluding the ones going up and down I made them all slightly slanted.

We finished up our preparations and started advancing.

It's the formation {Arrowhead.One} with Zenom and I at the lead.

Basutorial and Toris are behind me on the right while Ralpha and Gwine are behind Zenom on the left, then Bel and Miduchi are behind Zenom and I.

And then, at last we're facing off against the Minotaurs.

The 7 Minotaur let out a war cry before furiously charging at us when the net gun Bel was aiming at the one in the center suddenly spit out flames along with a loud roar.

Out of the Minotaurs that were scattered as they charged ahead the net entangled the 5 in the center.

It worked!

The fish hooks that were attached to the net dug into the almost naked skin of the minos and the more they struggled the more other hooks would dig into them. They were trying to swing the axes in their hands but it's not that easy to cut a net made from wire. Not just that but as they pulled the net it caused the hooks to eat further into the skin of the other mino. I thought it would be plenty if it could last 30 seconds or so but judging from this it seems it will last over 1 minute. A happy miscalculation.

I smiled to myself while charging at the mino on the right end with my bayonet at the ready.

I dodged the partizan that thrust at me with a growl at the last minute and after diving in towards the mino thrust my bayonet deeply into its open flank before prying it to the side and slicing through the back as I ran past just like that.

"Gooe!!!"

The mino let out a shout in pain just as Toris shout "Emeron!" while cutting at it, followed by Basutorial making a wide thrust towards its heart.

The cooking finished in no time at all.

After stabbing the slowed mino entangled by the net like crazy with my bayonet, just look, we've already finished them all off.

"After actually trying it was a huge success."

"Mm. If it's this then we can safely defeat them. Now we can relax and come here anytime we want."

Zenom replied to my words as he wiped the blood of the head of his axe.

"But, collecting the net seems like it's going to be a pain.."

"They rolled around in a showy way after all."

"It seems to be torn a bit. They have quite a bit of power."

Ralpa, Gwine, and Miduchi said while observing the mino that died still entangled in the net.

Certainly they're in a pretty bad condition on this end. There was one that tried to tear the net alone with the hooks embedded in it's body and ones with small wounds all over it's body. A portion of the net is all messed up and entangled, certainly like this it'll take a lot of work to be able to use it again. Since we tested it against trolls and such I could already imagine it but as expected when it comes to entangling 5 at once maybe it would be best to give up on the net..No wait, it was pretty troublesome just to make this in the first place.

"Sorry but I want to recover as much as possible to reuse it. It was pretty troublesome making this.."

"It should be a bit easier if we use Ral's bracelet to change the corpses of the Minotaur to water all at once."

Bel said with a satisfied smile. I see.

"Certainly that's true..Then I guess taking the magic stones out of them comes first."

Basutral took out his large knife for gathering magic stones and approached one of the Minotaur on the edge before cutting through the net to it's chest. Seeing that the other members all took out their knives and started the work as well.

In the end it took all 8 of us close to 30 minutes to properly stretch the net out after changing the corpses to water and then fold it. Well, just this amount of time should be fine. Having to repair a portion of it that was cut can't be helped.

.....

Year 7447, Month 2, Day 9

The first day of our three days off, after finishing our combined training in the morning I was discussing our recent plans while eating with everyone.

"In regards to the next time we enter the dungeon, but we {Slaughterers} will spend over 2 weeks, or if possible this entire month inside the dungeon. Since I want to make it so we can somewhat safely reach the 10th floor by the replacement match in April. During that time, Zenom will go to the {Butchers} and to the {Exterminators} will be.."

"Yes~yes! I'll go!"

"Nn~then Ralpha, you."

I'm sure it's just because Ralpha is bored from endlessly fighting against the mino while we're in the dungeon. Though everyone is sick of it including me...

Even though I finished the net gun, recovering the net and fixing it to a condition that can be used again is a pain so if possible I don't want to do it. Also, it's easier than using the net gun to just sneak attack them from behind the moment they show signs of respawning, and safer. That's why we're going to camp out in the teleport crystal room of the 9th floor but in order to use magic there we have to move quite a bit of distance, and as a realistic problem, just thinking about camping in the dungeon for a long time is extremely depressing. Of course, as a change of pace we intend on going to the 10th floor or monster rooms on the 9th floor between respawns though even then.

Even that gun I don't think I can say it's perfect. Above all if you miss there's nothing more you can do after that. Though I say that, since it's shooting a net which is a considerable size there's no way to rapid-fire it. Even when it comes to a spare I would have to make once more net. Furthermore there's still plenty of places with room for improvements so it's necessary to continue with various tests. If you move more than 500 meters away from the center of the room on the 9th floor then you can use magic so there's no choice other than to do it there.

"The {Butchers} and {Exterminators} should enter the dungeon the same as usual starting from the 12th. Since the {Slaughterers} have to secure consumables and food as well we'll enter the dungeon one day later on the 13th. I'll make preparations for the {Slaughterers} consumables for after the first week so we're depending on everyone from the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} to transport them to the teleport room on the 6th floor."

After confirming everyone understood, I continued talking.

"If there's anything you need to get into contact with us about or any worst case occurrences then leave a letter inside of that one pot in the teleport room on the 6th floor. I'll contact you about our plans and such through that as well."

I said that before ending things.

Of course, I intend to have Miduchi using {Party-ization} over and over again this time. We can only get in contact through Miduchi but in the case that anything happens when we're split up it's hard to give up on such a convenient method of immediately contacting the other members. Thanks to that every time we enter the dungeon

Miduchi's always got her Unique Ability running so {Party-ization} is still only level 8(Reusing the ability to extend the duration of the effect doesn't earn any experience for the ability. Also, even when it comes to using it consecutively, she doesn't earn any experience unless there's an interval of over 1 hour between uses).

Though she's only 500 experience from reaching Max with it so if we assume she can earn 20 experience a day for it then it's possible to level up in less than two months. Because of magic training and such it's easy to forget about so she's only done it at those times. After we finish exploring the dungeon this time and things have calmed down it might not be bad to use the {Cantrip} {Reservation} or void magic and take time to get her to use it. The bonus to experience points and proficiency levels is appealing after all.

We all moved together on our way towards the center of Baldukku before splitting up into small groups. I started on my way towards the food shop together with Giberuti. After ordering and paying the money I need to go to the capital once with Miduchi to show my face in the company and give out the necessary instructions. After finishing up the instructions and office work tomorrow, we'll return to Baldukk with some Baldoggie, then I need to check if there was anything missing from the orders of consumables and have Giberuti confirm and receive them...

"Oh, it's been a while right."

When Giberuti and I arrived at the food shop the leader of {Black.Topaz}, Anderson, was there. Come to think of it, this sis was selling my information to the King along with Viruhaima from the {Verdure.Brotherhood} right...It's not really a reason to criticize them but it's not a very pleasant feeling either.

"Yeah, hello there. Hey, old man, I've got an order."

For the time being I made a sociable smile before a light bow and passed by Anderson's side to talk to the old man of the store. It seems that Anderson's follower Kaku came along with her and the two of them just kept talking about something without minding me as I passed by them. Originally they never used things like combat slaves or porters, so they must buy their consumables on their own as well.

After being half-destroyed and losing 3 of their members the current {Black.Topaz} is at best a half first-rate adventurer party. I've heard that they were recently recruiting members but it seems that there was no one who met sis Anderson's standards so they ended it after just pulling a magician out from the second-rate party {Prime Rose}. 驕れる者は久しからずや、盛者必衰か。I feel a bit sorry for them as well.

"Greed-kun, do you have a moment?"

After finishing up our orders, I was called out to as we were about to leave the store.

"What is it?"

"It's difficult to talk about here. I want to enter some place and talk."

Umm you know, I'm busy. I need to go to the capital after this. I have no time to be talking about recent events with you all.

"Well, I don't think you'll lose anything from hearing it. You went to the trouble of coming to Gary, Rotto, and Marin's funeral after all."

About what?

"It's about my little sisters."

Anderson suddenly whispered in a low voice.

"Giberuti, tell Miduchi that I'll be a bit late."

Chapter 285: Work

Year 7447, Month 2, Day 9

Invited by Anderson the two of us entered a random restaurant. We sat down across from each other at a table in the back of the place and the two of us ordered some tea. Until our drinks came out we killed time by discussing things that happened in Balduku when she wasn't around.

"And then, what was it about your little sisters?"

After taking a sip of bean tea I asked Anderson. This "little sister" isn't a little sister of the Viscount Anderson family. I'm sure it's the little sister from a different mother with just the same father. Yorire-sama, the daughter of Baron Refaisu flashed through my mind. Come to think of it, they may sort of resemble each other.

"You already know my real father right? Then that's fine. Then you should already know that I have 13 younger brothers and sisters over 8 years younger than me."

8 legitimate children.

Richard of the Prince Ronbarudo territory who's 25 years old and the eldest son of her highness Molail is at the top and at the bottom is the youngest son her highness Marinen gave birth to who should have just turned 8 years old last summer. I knew about it since I heard from Rodrick. If I remember correctly excluding the ones that started to appear in mass a few years back that child should be the youngest.

Other than that, there's 5 illegitimate children that are known.

These ones are just the comparatively older children.

Misseru.Beirun who was executed two years back should have been somewhere in the middle. If he was still alive then it'd be 6 of them.

After confirming that I nodded Anderson continued talking.

"Among them there's only one child that I was acquainted with. Ah, the other children shouldn't know about my existence. Eh? I can't say that. But, I'll just tell you this."

After taking a sip of tea to wet her throat Anderson continued in a lower voice.

"Though I just found out about it last year. It seems they've already started moving so there should have been movements on your end as well right Greed-kun? That child never told me the reason either so I don't know everything but of the illegitimate children just the females, three of them were made to enter the knight group several years ago."

Ah, I've heard about that before...

"It seems they're being worked hard by the knight group but what's strange is it even exceeds the hedges of the knight group and they're even being taught by the eldest son. It seems the content is limited to combat training against small groups."

He~ I guess that means his highness Richard is also a bit involved in it.

Ah, the thing the King and them were talking about last summer, so it was this? He confirmed if the training was being done properly...

However, it seems it'd be best to avoid mentioning any names.

"That face says you knew about it. Then I'll stop the talk here already. It doesn't seem it's necessary to say everything after all...A considerable bait may have been thrown before my three little sisters..whether that's the case or not as expected I don't know but whatever the case it seems they're being trained pretty hard."

That does seem to be the case. Though the only one who directly showed their face to me was the middle one Yorire-ojosama. Of Anderson's little sisters that are illegitimate children, from the oldest there's Noirura.Jibekuto, 22 years old. The middle child Yorire.Refaisu, 19 years old. And the youngest daughter Mimairu.Fokein, 16 years old. They're each 3 years apart in age. Even when it comes to the oldest one Noirura, she's only 4, no, 3 years different from me in another few days so you could say there's no problem in terms of age difference.

However, they're being pushed pretty hard, huh?

After all...

Last summer, after talking with Yorire-ojosama I tried investigating it a bit but I couldn't find out that much. I could only investigate the things on the surface. Though I was able to guess it to some extent, the only basis I had was the short conversation from that time. Well, I guess I'll try asking a bit huh?

"How are things from your opinion Anderson-san? Out of the three of them, which one receives the deepest affection from your father?"

Since it seems like she originally intended to say various things, it should be fine if I ask from my end as well.

Anderson looked me in the eyes before lightly smiling and said.

"The one with green eyes."

Gu..I have no clue. I didn't investigate as far as hair or eye color. Yorire-ojosama's eye color was..What was it again? I feel like it might have been green as well but I can't remember...

"Her hair color is..blue."

Anderson said it with a bit of a grin.

Ku...I don't know that either. But, I think it should be fine to exclude Yorire-ojosama right? She had blue hair the last time we met but I think she mentioned that she was dying it to match up to my interests.

Rather~ this sis, she's enjoying herself knowing that I don't know their hair or eye color.

"Really~ don't make that sort of face. It's the youngest child. I was a bit acquainted with her mother in the past..That old man..with Farun-san who's only 4 years apart from me..Shit."

Hmn. I'll pretend not to have heard the latter part.

However, I guess that means the time when she was in the second knight group?

Sis Anderson is 34 years old this year.

If I remember correctly I heard she entered the second knight group at the same time as she reached adulthood.

If she has a child that's 16 now then going from the ages I think it would be around then.

I properly heard those words.

"And, what I wanted to talk about today wasn't something like that.

Well it is related though."

Yes?

"Greed-kun, what in the world did you do? Even if my father is..umm.. Even if you were an excellent adventurer that has quite literally made an unbelievable achievement, I don't think just that would be enough for that person to urge his daughters on."

Anderson suddenly asked me with an intense stare. It's not particularly like I'm announcing it everywhere but I've told a number of people about my dream to create my own country. In the {Slaughterers} including the former {Sun.Ray} members there's no one who doesn't know about it.

When I was talking about it there were a variety of reactions like surprise, laughing, and understanding.

But, I see, so it wasn't being mentioned lightly huh?

If it was being discussed then there's no way Anderson wouldn't know about it at this point. After all together with Viruhaima the two of them were selling my information to the King. There's no way they would overlook it right. Ah, no, I also feel like there's a high possibility of already knowing but thinking "it's unrealistic to create your own country" so tying that together with sending an illegitimate child as a bride might be difficult as well.

Otherwise, it wouldn't be strange to not believe it thinking "A dream-like tale like that. I'm sure it's just for just laughs from the start right." as well. Rather this way of thinking might be closer to the truth.

Of course, it's not amusing from my point of view but anyone who wants to laugh can. Even then I have no intention of putting in the effort towards it.

"That's something that I would like to ask though.."

After hearing my words Anderson looked up into the air. And then,

"I guess that's true right...That's why you don't really know..That child seemed like she knew something but didn't say that far.."

said with a vague tone of voice.

"Putting that aside, Rokkuwaizu-san was it? You're new magician.

How is she?"

"Ah, Mimu? Nn~ Decent I guess...But, it's somewhat hard to find attackers..."

After trying to ask about the magician they just invited into {Black.Topaz} the other day and it wasn't a very good reply. They did pull her out of a second-rate party that was barely able to make it to the 4th floor after all. If I remember correctly, her former party {Prime Rose} is one I've seen camping in the teleport room of the 3rd floor a number of times. I don't remember their levels but just because a single magician of that level joins their party there's no way there would be something so convenient as {Black.Topaz} returning to their prior standard.

"Well, for the time being, there's no other choice than for her to get used to the 4th and 5th floor. Ah, that's right. Greed-kun, would you lend me your combat slaves for a short while?"

"No thank you"

"Right..Maybe I'll buy some combat slaves.."

Well, there's no other choice than that for immediately increasing your combat strength.

.....

Year 7447, Month 2, Day 14

The second day since we entered the dungeon of Baldukk. After opening my eyes in the teleport room on the 3rd floor, all of the reincarnated people including myself were 19 years old. The hyumu race had an increase to the upper limit(?) of just 1 point but the members of other races are vaguely different.

But, we're already 19 years old huh? It's unpleasant how every year older you get they feel shorter..In my mind one year doesn't even make up 2% of the time of my entire life. In my past life, when I was still a child it felt a lot longer...Of course, this is just my sentiment and I understand that everyone of any age has the same length of a year but I can't help but feel like time passes so quickly in no time at all.

I've already experienced over 60 birthdays so they don't seem new or anything else. Rather, my feelings of it being a slightly not good day that reminds me of the passage of time are stronger. Giberuti showed some consideration in using slightly higher quality ingredients for our meals. The other day when we were shopping for ingredients we also purchased the ingredients for some sweets so we'll be able to have something sweet tonight. Well, just like this it's a day which is good to have slight changes in the food.

When we ran into Ralpa while camping in this teleport room she shouted, "Ah! Someone switch places with me in looking after the {Exterminators}?" as if she just remembered but no one reacted to it. I'm sure Zulu and Angela already realized we'd have some slightly good food while entering the dungeon this time because they carried it. In the first place we had planned to spend a while inside so I prepared even just a bit better ingredients to reduce the amount of stress. Also, the one who volunteered was you. "It's a bit regretful but it can't be helped right, Ral-san. Now, let's go. We have to return to the surface once the day after tomorrow to transport the supplies after all. Here"

After being called out like that by Rodrick, Ralpa was dragged along and disappeared into the 4th floor.

Then I guess it's about time for us to go as well.

I hope we can make it to the 6th floor safely again today.

.....

Year 7447, Month 2, Day 16

We arrived at the teleport room on the 9th floor just before noon.

Of course the 7 guardians were in the care of the net gun once again as we finished them off. If you're wondering why we didn't come this far by yesterday, it's because it took some time to pack up the various luggage in related to gun production on the 8th floor.

After this, we'll take a bit of a break to have lunch and then leave Giberuti behind to start preparing dinner while the 8 of us go to the 10th floor. Either way the mino will respawn 18 hours later, which is early morning tomorrow.

I intend to properly start producing guns tomorrow. It's been proven that the net gun is effective so I intend to go outside of the Anti-Magic area on the 9th floor to make improvements and work on making the guns. First it's necessary to make a spare net gun but I just wanted to forget about the troublesome gun improvements for at least the first day after we arrived on the 9th floor.

By the way, this time we don't have Zenom or Ralpa so I don't intend on going into any monster rooms on the 10th floor. I've already said this to everyone. As expected if we don't have those two then the front line is difficult unless I join in. Up until now we've just been fighting against monsters we've fought a number of times so it was fine just thinking of that as an extension of training but as expected if I leave the back support it's scary against opponents we're seeing for the first time.

"Then shall we go?"

After finishing lunch and taking a short break, we departed for the 10th floor.

We've come to it before but the state of the 10th floor wasn't all that much different from the 8th and 9th floors. The width of the halls and the state of the walls were both the same. Additionally, there's teleport crystals at the end of each place and it's not hard to imagine that they most likely lead to areas we haven't been to before.

We wandered around until the evening killing all of the random monsters we encountered and taking their magic stones before withdrawing.

Several days passed with this sort of start.

.....

Year 7447, Month 2, Day 30

As expected it's about time.

After all it's the 15th day since we started camping out in the teleport room of this 9th floor, that's two and a half weeks.

This time entering the dungeon we've killed the mino group a total of 20 times including the first time. A total of 140 of them.

Matching that up with our previous results and..how many has it been again? In any case we've killed a lot of them. We went to resupply on food six times. Staying in the dungeon and staring at the ceilings for such a long period as this is extremely bad for mental health. In the first place, I've run out of the cotton needed for making gunpowder to make any further improvements to the guns.

Thanks to that in regards to the guns I was able to obtain somewhat satisfying results for the net gun. I decided to leave one of them on top of a random board in the teleport room of the 8th floor. I have to digress a bit in order to explain the reason. Previously, it's something we knew since making the shower rooms and such but inside of the dungeon if you leave crafted items around without being used they break at a speed far faster than on the surface.

Something like the shower room if it's not used at all for around two weeks the ropes will start to come loose. It's to the point where if it reaches one month the ropes will completely break apart. However, if you just use it with a few days apart there's no wear other than normal aging. When it comes to buckets made from plants, simple leather armor, and bags that don't use any metal parts if you just leave them on the ground without touching them for a period of time they start to break in the same amount of time, or rather the various parts the items are made up of us start to scatter.

We were able to figure out that if no one touches them and they aren't used for roughly 3-4 days they started to loosen. But, strangely enough if you just leave some water inside of the buckets it seems they're considered being used so as long as the water doesn't evaporate there were no problems. It's fine even if you put something like dried meat inside of it.

Also, there's no problem like that with magic tools like the stove or clock. There's no problem at all with tableware like ones carved from wood or ceramic either.

Obviously it's the same for knives and forks whether they have wooden handles or just ornaments there's problem at all.

What's even better is that as long as the bucket is a properly made one with a metal ring around it then even if it doesn't have water inside it'll last quite a long time to where you can't see a difference even after two weeks.

We couldn't see any problems with knives or ladles either.

In other words, simple things that aren't made up of parts, things that have metal parts included in their production, magic tools, and things that are believed to be in use only deteriorate at the same speed as the surface but manufactured goods which are only made up of fibers or leather and just organic materials deteriorate at an abnormal speed.

Even if I say deteriorate it's not a deteriorate of the quality of the materials but the object itself can't maintain it's form anymore, would be a more appropriate way of putting it. For example, if you were to put a bucket with a hoop made from rattan inside of another proper bucket or tub made with a metal hoop then it's fine even after one month.

Our harvest this time was of course the large amount of mino we killed but also the fact that I was able to seriously start tests on a gun with proper rifling that can fire bullets. It's not as if I hadn't done it at all so far but it was just at the level of exchanging the barrels of the net guns, so it's not like I made all of the parts exclusively for it.

Just the same as the net gun, I still can't manage a complex structure, it's a completely single-shot gun that isn't even bolt action. However, just as expected because of it's simple structure there's not much need to worry about it misfiring and I ended up with a gun with considerably high precision.

In regards to guns this is the third one in total.

I've left the older net gun and the normal single-shot gun in the teleport room on the 9th floor and since the newly improved net gun is a bit slighter and easier to carry, I've decided to store it in the teleport room on the 8th floor.

Obviously in the bullets and blank cartridges are just lined up in an appropriate bucket for now but I think it's necessary to make an exclusive storage box for them eventually. I want to make it so we can easily pass through the 9th floor by mid-April when the substitution matches start. With the middle of next month as the goal I guess I'll order some exclusive wooden boxes for each size. I'm sure some portable ammunition cases will be necessary as well.

Recently Zulu and Angela seem to have gotten quite a bit used to the firing sound of the guns as they don't appear afraid at all. Particularly when test firing the gun that fires real bullets, they've seen it a number of times and were interested in it's destructive power that's incomparable to a bow. It's close to obvious knowledge for reincarnated people but Zenom, who isn't here, and them seem to have quite a bit of interest in it.

However, excluding the reincarnated members not a single one of them has said "let me try firing it" yet. I'm sure it's big that they saw the initial accidents when making the bullets. Also, another big part of it may be that I did enough nagging about dealing with the bullets and gunpowder to the point of a sour taste in my mouth.

Miduchi, Toris, Gwine, and Basutorial who found it new at first have recently seemed to be bored with it and are just acting as assistants to Bel and I as we continue test firing.

It's true that it's started to get difficult for that Bel and I as well.

"As expected I've started to miss the surface. Shall we return once?"

""Once!?""

That's right. We're going to come back and camp out for the same amount of time again. I was able to build up quite a bit of confidence from my tests with the guns this time. I intend on making a prototype bolt action rifle next time. It's necessary to prepare the materials and I need to go and buy the yellow dye and cotton as well. Ah, putting aside the yellow dye, the cotton should have already arrived at Boil Manor I guess?

On our way back returning to the surface, when I saw the Trent lumber we hadn't taken to the surface still packed in a corner of the 8th floor, I started thinking about various things.

Chapter 286: Beauty Mark

Year 7447, Month 2, Day 30

When we passed through the teleport rooms of the 6th and 4th floors the ones from the {Slaughterers} who were watching luggage in the campsites were Kimu and Denda. Zenom and Ralpa must have no intention of leaving my low level combat slaves to have a rest and watch the luggage.

I left them with the message, "We'll be returning to the surface once but after getting some rest today and tomorrow, we'll be returning to the dungeon again the morning of the day after tomorrow." There won't be any change in members.

Since the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} don't have an exclusive porter like Giberuti the amount of luggage they can carry at once is limited. That's why, other than when watching the bags they shouldn't have been able to get much rest coming to the dungeon this time. This time, it's just for a short while but we're returning to the surface so I'm sure Zenom and Ralpa can both put in an appropriate rest at that timing.

Returning to the surface we saw the sunset sky for the first time in a while and then went to cash in the magic stones. We decided to just eat dinner at the usual Murowa and then everyone split up to return to Boil Manor and Shuni.

In front of Boil Manor Basutorial nervously started talking to me.

"Umm, excuse me, but if it's now I can still make it for the last carriage to the capital. Is it fine if I return tomorrow night?"

Ah, I see. Basutral told Cathy that there were no plans for days off so it's not necessary for her to return to Baldukk.

"Nn, got it. Go ahead."

After hearing my reply Basutoral quickly ran into Boil Manor in front of us.

"Che~ Saji-san, how nice..."

Gwine said while climbing the stairs to her room.

"Gwine how are things with that person?"

Bel asked her. That person..There's no way of knowing like that.

Just as far as I know she's been screaming over a number of guys recently.

"Nn, somehow, I've already gotten bored of him."

You get it!? Not to mention, "already bored"...

"The other day I had to carry that person back to Pegizu. People who are weak to alcohol are just a bit..uncool after all."

So..So cruel~ There's also the matter of constitution, something like alcohol even Zenom is weak against it...Is it a value of dwarves? Zenom is weak against alcohol but still seems to have the respect of all the dwarves in Baldukk though...In the first place does being strong or weak against alcohol have anything to do with being cool? Well, it's not as if I don't understand though...

"Now it's that person right? Look, from {Gehenna.Flare}.."

Toris is saying it like he knows but it's Garun from {Gehenna.Flare} right, I'm sure.

It seems like she liked him from quite a while back after all.

"Ah, Roiru-san? That person, he's somewhat cool but his gaze is too lewd~ He immediately tries to put his hands around my waist when we're drinking as well.."

Oh, so I was wrong?

"After all I think Zenda-san is cool and like him."

Who's that? Zenda, Zenda..I feel like I've heard it before but can't remember.

"Ah, Masshuzu's?"

It seems Miduchi knows about him. Also, Masshuzu isn't it the name of that cheap clothes store? I don't know about the salesperson of some clothes store.

"That's right, that person, he has good sense right?"

"Eh? Yeah, I guess so."

"During the last holiday I had a meal with him at Rasurun but he pulled the chair out for me and his sense with alcohol was good as well, his fingers are super sexy right, Miduchi-san, don't you think so too!?"

"Ah..Yeah. I think so too, I guess?"

When I tried asking Miduchi about it later it seems he's the successor son of Masshuzu and a hyumu with a playboy face. Certainly it seems like he has good sense with clothes so he's popular among female adventurers with a decent amount of money. But, isn't Masshuzu a place with nothing but cheap hanging clothes? I think the tailored clothes in the capital have a lot better sense and are more comfortable. Even Gwine, after getting some women's clothes tailored at one of the better shops in the capital Kennoton, you were pleased saying "These are the best~" Ah, I guess the quality of products they deal with isn't related right.

After entering Boil Manor and there were several letters leftover beyond the periodic reports from Rassegu in the capital. Three of them were requests to join the {Slaughterers} so I just adequately scanned over them. Then I started looking over the somewhat more important messages.

One of them was from the madam of Ronslail and it was an invitation to her wedding banquet with her third husband. The end of April huh. She seems to be earning quite a bit.

The senders of the remaining two were Noirura.Jibekuto and Mimairu.Fokein. Excluding sis Anderson, it's the older and younger of the King's three illegitimate daughters. The contents were similar for both of them and they'd absolutely love to meet me once or want to give praise to my great achievements as an adventurer, and it's not a single step outside of my expectations after confirming the sender's name.

If I remember right I met the middle daughter Yorire-ojosama last fall so I guess they're a few months behind her. According to the head clerk of Boil Manor in both cases the senders of the messages appeared themselves and after being told I was in the dungeon wrote the messages on the spot before leaving them. The dates were certainly from a few days after we entered the dungeon and a few days ago.

"Hmph. Unlike that Yorire-ojosama they didn't send squires or attendants and came directly themselves huh..It's a bit admirable."

After reading the message in my room and saying that, Miduchi thought for a moment before making a slightly displeased and uneasy face while saying.

"Nn..Normally it would be a high good impression right. But, if you were to ask me I'd have to give them a minus assessment I guess...If it was just a simple city girl then of course I might feel it's favorable and a plus evaluation. However, just because they want to take the position of future queen the person them self suddenly comes, isn't that sort of thoughtless action a minus?"

Mu, if it's put like that...

This fellow seems to be thinking a bit as well..No, that's wrong.

"Hey, you..stop saying things you don't actually believe."

"Eh? Things I don't actually believe, that's not..I was just thinking about the future.."

It seems I was correct. Miduchi's eyes are darting all over the place.

"You sure are a petty fellow~ Those words just now are something Bel or I would say after carefully thinking about it right?"

After I pointed it out with a bit of a grin on my face Miduchi's light purple face changed to reddish purple.

"I mean.."

"There's no mean or anything else to it. In the first place, don't say things that put down other people just to try and strengthen your own position. Putting aside if you had a clear basis for it, that's nothing more than your imagination right? It doesn't suit you."

I think Miduchi's statement just now was saying a bit too much.

Those daughters might not have heard that I intend on making a country in the end yet. It's possible they've only heard that I've got extremely good prospects and might be one candidate for a high ranking noble that a territory will be left to look after.

Even if that's the case I guess it's still thoughtless huh? No wait, why would they think of trying to marry me? Stop getting so full of yourself, me. The only information I've got is that they were urged on by the King and even sis Anderson didn't say a single word that they were progressively trying to win my heart. She just said that they were being urged on and trained pretty hard.

"Nn..I'm sorry.."

The dispirited Miduchi meekly apologized.

"Don't say things that are so unlike you. For example it's possible they could say something like, "Sub-Noble Greed, I was ordered by his majesty so I just met with you to act in line with that. I already have someone I've decided in my heart so..I apologize for the rudeness."

It's possible they directly came asking to apologize(?) as well right. If that's the case then coming in person could be said to be good manners. Though judging from the contents of the messages I'm pretty sure that's not the case.

"Ah, yeah..I guess, so."

Well, looking from this fellow's point of view I'm sure it's not very amusing. Just on the surface and from a theoretical standpoint she might be willing to recognize it but it's difficult for her to accept it in her heart, it's not as if I can't understand. However, in some meanings it's only obvious for a high ranking noble or King to have several partners. Not even limited to nobles, if it's a wealthy person then even some commoners have multiple partners. Not limited to men or women. Though it's a different matter whether or not there's love there.

Without going running or doing any training we gathered at the entrance plaza at around 6 am. As expected the time was when it was so the plaza was packed with adventurers and merchants. It's annoying being called out by various people so it might have been fine to go running and shift the time but it's a waste of time. I intend on going all the way to the teleport crystal of the 4th floor at once today.

Recently entering the dungeon has mainly focused on improving the guns and we haven't spent much time at all exploring so it's possible to train as much as we please in the large rooms on the 8th and 9th floors. It's spacious so we can do running or practice matches every couple of hours, as well as kill time doing push-ups and sit-ups for training more than usual.

Just the same as the other adventurer partys we started confirming our equipment in an adequate corner. Whether or not there's any loose strings or bands, whether we're forgetting anything, if our weapons are in good condition, it's necessary to properly confirm everything. It would suck if any problems come up because we slacked off on this after all.

After we finished confirming things, we cut through the mass of people the same as usual on our way towards the entrance. And then I was called out to by the guard Church-san after paying the entrance tax.

"Greed-san, how long are you planning to stay inside this time?"

Even though they don't normally confirm the plans of adventurers exploring inside...I wonder what's the reason for this change..And, I guess there's only one~ Out of the three I don't know which but they must have asked Church-san. It doesn't matter who though.

"Just the same as last time I can't say anything other than it will be somewhat long.."

"I'm sure."

Church-san nodded seriously.

After giving a light nod I started down the stairs.

.....

We arrived at the teleport crystal of the 4th floor quite a bit after 8 pm. But, it seems everyone is very satisfied that we were able to arrive in roughly 15 hours, so the mood is bright.

Excluding one person, he didn't participate in the combat but since he's carrying a lot of luggage Giberuti seems to be having a pretty difficult time. Sorry about that.

It was Ruttsu who was acting as bag watcher on the 4th floor. It seems like he was applying oil to maintain his leather armor in front of the {Slaughterers} stove but he had already started cleaning up. There's no one else around.

"Huh? I heard that you were going to enter the dungeon today though..Was it a misunderstanding?"

"Fufu, what do you think?"

Gwine proudly stuck out her non-existing chest. Angela and I watched that with the same light smile. I met eyes with Angela. She quickly looked away.

"It's too late for you to have entered yesterday..After all it was today huh? Seriously the 4th floor in just a single day..I'm feeling sad now~"

Ruttsu said with a light tone as if he wasn't feeling down at all.

"What, I'm sure you'll be able to reach the 4th floor right away soon."

Toris said while taking some cabbage out of the bag and handing it to Giberuti.

"Hee~ it'd be good if that's the case. What is it today?"

Ruttsu asked Giberuti while drooling. You, judging from the time it's already long past since you ate dinner right? If you want to eat I don't particularly mind though.

"Tonight is the so-called "Wokonomu Yaki". Do you want to eat some?"

That's okonomiyaki. Yesterday when we were shopping there was some good squid being sold. There's no sauce or aonori but we have mayonnaise and it was a request from Miduchi who was together with us so it should be fine once in a while. Since I thought Giberuti would be tired today as well I made it something that wouldn't require much work or cleaning up.

"What's that? Is it good?"

"I've eaten it a number of times but it's pretty good."

Furthermore, it seems that Basutoral worked part-time at an okonomiyaki place in his past life and he starts nagging everyone about the way to stir it so we rarely eat it. We just eat it on the occasion when someone says they want to have it. We don't have any otafuku sauce so it's not all that delicious after all.

After our meals, leaving Angela and I as the first lookouts they quickly cleaned things up and the men immediately went to sleep. We can take a shower tomorrow. But, recently I guess the girls have gotten extravagant because they went off to the corner of the room to wipe off their bodies with a towel dipped in warm water. I guess Giberuti was considerably tired, I can already hear the light breathing from him sleeping. Toris is letting out some light snores as well, while Zulu and Ruttsu are both sleeping like they're dead with their stomachs full. The extra portion we made was all taken care of by them. Basutorial who was rolled up at the end was making a noise grinding his teeth as he slept. Be quiet~ and knowing it was impossible I tried conveying it telepathically and it became quiet.

I can hear talking voices from behind a simple partition on the other side of the room. There's some distance so I can't hear any of the details though.

"Ah, Bel-san how nice so big..Miduchi-san's shape is as well.."

"Really~ don't touch them."

"Gwine as well isn't that beauty mark on your chest sexy?"

"Ah, this? Though it wasn't there in the past. Now it's been there since I was a child."

"Come to think of it, in the past i used have a large beauty mark on my right hand but now it's disappeared."

Judging from the sounds of their voices it seems like Gwine is providing the topics as usual. I was having Angela massage my right foot after soaking it in the foot bath bucket.

"If you're reborn then something like beauty marks will appear or disappear right.."

It seems Angela can hear their conversation and made a dry smile.

Since she's a Dog-race person even if she doesn't have {Super.Hearing} she can still hear better than my ears.

So it was a discussion about beauty marks.

How pointless~

Miduchi has a beauty mark close to a place that can't be mentioned~

It's easy to tell because her skin color is light for a dark elf.

Though I guess it doesn't matter because the wife of Tukerin in the capital has deep purple skin but the beauty mark on her chin is easy to tell.

Ah~ Feels good..Right there, harder.

Next, the left one.

Chapter 287: Respectively

Year 7447, Month 3, Day 4

Late last night after we arrived in the teleport room of the 8th floor we took a full 8 hours of sleep per person and recovered our stamina before stepping foot on the 9th floor. Of course starting with the net gun we left on the 8th floor we brought along as much Treant lumber as we had the leeway to hold.

And then just past noon after defeating the mino guardians of the 9th floor we had a slightly late lunch.

"Today after this are we going to the 10th floor?"

Bel asked me. The last time we took a bit of a look around the 10th floor on the first day. However, without hesitation I said, "No, let's not today. I want to do it when we can spend a full day starting tomorrow.", before pulling out the iron ores from the bottom of Giberuti's bags.

"Ah, starting with the guns huh?"

"Yeah. Thinking about those {Lesser Yowie} and I thought I should make a proper gun first."

"You were going to make a gun that can fire consecutively right?"

"That's right. I want to get a good outlook of the gunpowder and bullets today."

I brought along some brass and copper ores. Of course, I haven't forgotten the cotton and I've already resupplied on yellow dye. Also I intend on trying to use the Treant lumber to make the gunstock and hand-guard this time. Last time I made the gunstock out of walnut wood but I think it was a pretty decent job for the first time. Although, I've made a number of wooden guns in the past so I can't say it's completely the first one.

First off is producing the gunpowder and bullets I guess. Since we're already pretty used to these we can proceed up to the washing process right away. Since we've already reached the point where there's almost no problem with the amount of gunpowder in the bullets there shouldn't be any problem with making the thickness of the barrel a bit thinner.

During the start when there was too much gunpowder the cartridges couldn't withstand the explosion within the cylinder and would expand(there was also expansion from the temperature of the explosion but it was mainly expansion from the blast wave), then I couldn't get the empty cartridges out and in worst case there was no choice other than to break it. Since I didn't add something like an ejector rod after all. I made this possible by somewhat increasing the thickness of that portion of the cartridges to increase the strength. Though because of that the cartridges ended up a bit longer. If possible I didn't want to sacrifice the power.

It's no good if we don't replenish the bullet-heads and shell cases as well. The primer too. Recently the cartridges we've made have a proper thickness and are reusable so I guess it's fine to make a bit less huh?

Now then, while they're washing the acids out from the cotton, it's finally time to work on producing the gun during the spare time.

This time what I'm going to make is a bolt action rifle..is what I'd like to say but as expected that's getting too complex all of a sudden. I intend on making a revolving rifle which is like a revolver made into a rifle. While I'm at it I also abandoned the {top break} form and made it a {solid frame}. Different from the average modern day revolver the revolving cylinder doesn't {sling out}. It's necessary to take out the empty cartridges from the loading gates on the sides one at a time before loading new bullets but for that portion the structure can be made a lot simpler. Additionally for the portion it's made simpler I can raise the durability.

I made the firing mechanism only {single action} as well. Of course it's because I can make the form of the parts simpler. The number of parts I have isn't many. After all, it's only two springs, the trigger, the hammer, the hand which rotates the cartridges pulling the hammer back, and the latch which holds the cartridges in place when they stop rotating. {Double action} is something similar but the structure gets a bit more complex and the number increases by one or two. That's up next. Pin? Ah, it's fine as long as you directly hit the primer so it shouldn't necessary for the time being.

Of course there's no way there would be something like a {gas sealer} so when a bullet is being fired the firing flames leak out through the gaps in the cylinder and barrel which makes a long glove required for your left hand. Though if you're fine with being burnt there's no need for even that.

I made the parts for the first gun in about 1 hour. Once again this time I made the rifling within the barrel using chrome. I'll use the tungsten after I've built up a bit of confidence and got the proper form down. I carved down the treant lumber while roughly estimating the gunstock and barrel and putting them into place. If I match them up other than the receiver and revolving cylinder it should have the shape of a rifle from a while back. I used an exclusive jig to hold the barrel in place while carving out the pipe and shaved it down to almost the same shape as outer circumference of the barrel.

"Shave down the fine places and adjust it for yourself."

I said that while handing over the skin of a fish similar to kawahagi that works as sandpaper.

It should be about time for the bullets to enter the selection process. I need to head over.

Just like this our first day on the 9th floor ended. Tomorrow a short while after we eat breakfast we'll defeat the respawned mino and then continue off from today. The 10th floor is put off until after the day after tomorrow.

.....

Year 7447, Month 3, Day 5

Including Zulu and Angela, everyone participated in the test firing but a problem came to light.

"Lift your chin and close your right armpit. Make sure the gunstock is properly touching your shoulder. Hold your left hand even further forward.."

"Even if you say something like that~"

Since just Gwine's body was small, her arms are equally short so she can't take up the proper form when firing a rifle.

At first I thought about just teaching her the proper firing form but you could say it's a good thing we discovered it early on. Her left hand almost barely reaches beyond the rotating cylinder so even if she has a glove on it's dangerous and in the first place

I'm sure it would be difficult just to properly aim. The gunstock is too long. I wonder if I should create an exclusive gun for Gwine and Zenom?

When we test firing the net gun it was just pulling a string that was tied to the trigger for benchrest firing and when it came to test firing the nearly complete net gun I finished by just letting

Bel test it out to get used to the posture so I completely overlooked it.

Hmn. As expected making another gun of this is...It's fine if I just exchange the gunstock but it's a pain to change them every single time after all...I'm sure the characteristics will change every time I take it apart to exchange them and it'll influence the firing precision as well~ I guess it's fine after I've made a proper and more practical bolt action rifle huh...

But, I wanted to teach everyone how to shoot before I made the bolt action rifle. Well, I guess it's fine to make a {double action} revolving rifle huh? I'll make that one easier to use for Gwine and Zenom. Eventually I intend to have Kamu and Kevin use it as well so

I'm sure it won't go to waste.

And, then because that's the case in the end I ended up making guns again this afternoon as well. Thanks to that I ended up using up a considerable amount of the iron ores I had prepared. The number of bullets we can make will be 10% less than planned, like this. Let alone that I only realized it during our first shooting practice today but the consumption rate of bullets is faster than I expected. Ah, even if we collect the bullet-heads I can't reuse them. {Transmute.Rock.To.Mud} can only change things to mud once. Of course, if we melt them down and pour it into a mold then we can still use them one or two more times but thinking about the price of iron ore and the amount of labor and it's not to the point of needing to do it.

It's quite a bit sooner than planned but I guess we should return once.

Yeary 7447, Month 3, Day 6

We went to the 6th floor to restock on food. When we teleported in I'm sure it was just a coincidence but it was just as the {Butchers} lead by Zenom were taking a break. It seems they were about to return to the 4th floor for today.

"Will it be long again this time?"

Misu asked.

"Hn~ I intended on that but we'll probably return once on the 11th of this month. That's why the last time we'll come here should be the 9th so I'm depending on you all with that intention."

After replying that I guess Zenom worried that things weren't going smoothly and said.

"Is there any kind of problem?"

"No, it's not really a problem. It's just there's something I need to return to the surface once to resupply. By the way, it seems like you're earning quite a bit."

Rokko and Kevin were holding what appears to be several magic stones from ogres while making a racket over the weight and color. Around them starting with Kamu, Binsu, Kimu, and Jeru all seemed to be in a pretty good mood as well. It seems there's around 10 magic stones or so?

"Yeah, it's also because we had good luck but we encountered a number of ogres alone or with just two of them. We defeated a total of 9 of them."

That's amazing! Isn't that over 7,000,000! Henry and Rubi aren't included in the head count so my cut is 1/9th. Even subtracting the expenses I profited 700,000. It's not surprising the {Butchers} are in such a good mood.

However, hearing that I thought for a bit. In order to give the {Slaughterers} a bonus of 800,000 Z per person it requires earning 40,000,000. This time, I haven't properly calculated it but on the outward trip we've only earned around half of that.

Even when it comes to clearing through the 7th, 8th, and 9th floors after this I intend for us to return within one day so there's no intention of casually wandering around seeking out ogres. Hmm. If we just spend one day seriously exploring the 10th floor then..No, that's no good. It's too frightening going into a monster room without Zenom and Ralpa in the party. I'm sure there's monsters we'll see for the first time so getting impatient is no good. At the very least until we can properly use the guns...

"Since they were all groups with low numbers everyone wanted to use them as practice for the member change matches but as expected that is~ We properly fought against all of them so there's no need to worry."

"Yeah."

Of course, I know Zenom would never do anything so careless.

Probably no one else would do it either. I trust them on that end.

.....

Year 7447, Month 3, Day 8

"Don't close your eyes when you're shooting. Properly look at the target."

"Yes, I'm very sorry, master."

While teaching Angela how to shoot I glanced to the side at the hand-to-hand combat training Miudchi, Toris, Bel, Gwine, and Zulu were doing in the distance. It seems like they're putting quite a bit of energy into it because they're bored.

I sent Basutorial to check out the condition of the rock we're using as the enemy about 100 meters ahead.

After confirming the target Basutorial raised his hands into a large X.

"You missed. It's best to think that if you close your eyes you won't hit the target. Well, regardless of the case it's just about quickly getting used to it."

I said that while giving Basutorial the sign to come back with my hand. The role of observer is the hardest.

After all they have to go back and forth between the target and the shooting point. If they slack off I end up yelling at them. Well, this is a form of training as well.

"Wa, yes. I understand."

Angela said that before putting her ear plugs back in and wearing her helmet. It seems she's still afraid of the guns which fire high power bullets along with spitting fire and a loud roar. However, even with this Angela is considerably better off in comparison to Zulu.

After that we continued shooting training while switching out the observer role in order.

.....

Year 7447, Month 3, Day 11

Just as I told Zenom and the others the other day, we decided to return to the surface once. As a matter of fact we ran out of bullets yesterday. Today we investigated the monsters that appear in the halls of the 10th floor starting in the morning. Even if we can't use guns there's a lot of things we can and need to do.

Honestly speaking even if we don't return to the surface it would have been fine to just keep defeating the minos that repawn like crazy. Well, that's that.

If you were to ask me since I went to the trouble of creating a rifle I want to quickly be able to use it.

Yesterday night, after thinking carefully about it I realized I hadn't even fired one shot this time and after all decided to return just as planned. When it actually comes time to use the guns if I'm the worst at aiming it wouldn't be a joke.

Around the evening when we returned to the surface it seems they heard from the {Butchers} as Ralpa and the {Exterminators} were on the surface.

"What is it? This time you brought along a lot of cotton and such right?"

Ralpa asked while biting into a baldoggie.

"We ended up running out of bullets so we're resupplying."

Toris replied in a whisper but isn't it fine if you don't whisper when using Japanese? Though it's fine.

"Zenom, Ralpa, switch out today. Miduchi take over the {Butchers, Toris take over the {Exterminators}."

This time, I planned ahead for this and put emphasis on letting Miduchi and Toris practice shooting. Thanks to that I think the two of them are able to use it decently well.

"When do you plan to enter next?"

Zenom asked. How unusual.

"Since we came back matching up this time, it's just right. The same as usual we'll have three days off starting tomorrow and enter starting from the 15th then not leave until the end of the month.

Ah, of course there's combined training on the 14th as well."

While replying to Zenom I told everyone our schedule. It seems Zenom wanted to go to the capital tomorrow to buy smoked meat. It was just right so I had him bring along Angela and requested they buy a larger amount of iron ores. Though I intend on buying from the blacksmith in Baldukk as well it's a bit cheaper in the capital. Ah, Zulu made a slightly pathetic face when this topic came up so I exempted him from it. I'm sure he just wants to be together with the sister from Murowa. It's fine.

It seems Basutorial is going to capital without eating dinner. I asked this fellow to buy additional yellow dye and cotton.

.....

Year 7447, Month 3, Day 30

We returned from another long two and a half week period in the dungeon again. I already told them our plans ahead of time so the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} were all gathered on the surface.

"With the three days off in between we'll be entering the dungeon again on the 4th of next month but...It's about time we've figured out the monsters in the halls of the 10th floor. Next I intend to challenge the monster rooms on the 10th floor. Though since the minotaur guardians on the 9th floor are still respawning there's no choice other than to continue defeating them."

Next time, first I intend on testing out the rifle against the minotaurs. This time when we were returning to the surface I didn't just leave the net gun on the 8th floor but one of the rifles as well. On our way in I intend to try out using it in live combat against the monsters in the halls and rooms on the 9th floor. If there doesn't seem to be any problem then we'll use it against the mino and then just like that use it on the 10th floor as well.

"Well in any case, in regards to the 9th floor we're able to clear through it with no problem for the time being. After the next time we enter the dungeon we'll have the member change matches. Everyone who wants to participate say something."

"I want to challenge it again."

"Me too."

It's Kamu and Kimu. Just as expected.

"Of course, I will too."

"Me too."

"Obviously right."

Jeru, Ginger, Misu huh? This was just as expected as well.

"Obviously I'll be challenging it as well."

""We will too.""

Rodrick, Denda, and Karimu. I knew about it.

"Yeah, we'll be trying it too."

"Obviously."

Sanno and Ruttsu huh? I guess so.

"I'll try alone."

Binsu? Was he challenging last time?

"I'll be trying alone as well."

Hisu. She seems to be fired up. Give it your best.

"Fu~"

"You~"

""Can't forget about us!""

Rokko and Kevin. Isn't that everyone?

I glanced at Basutorial and Angela. The two of them were smiling confidently.

Though we've slacked off from exploring recently, we've been training pretty heavily for that portion.

Also, putting aside everything else we've been hunting trolls and mino which are considerably higher experience points than ogres.

Even looking at it favorably I think they've increased their power quite a bit.

But, just like the {Slaughterers} in the past they're killing monsters right and left and have earned quite a bit of experience as well.

Though as expected since I'm not around they can't recover all they want.

Now then, I wonder how things will go?

It shouldn't go so easily for either side anymore.

"Alright, so everyone's challenging huh? Got it. I'll decide on a proper evaluation method once again before the end of this break."

Tomorrow I intend on showing my face at the company in the capital and I want to look at the factory as well. I should be able to take my time thinking while traveling.

Chapter 288: Experience Points

Year 7447, Month 4, Day 1

After having breakfast, Miduchi and I started on our way towards the headquarters of the company in the capital. After going over the paperwork and giving out any necessary instructions we'll check out the sausage factory as well. Since Basutorial came last night obviously it won't be in operation today. By that time it was already close to lunch but John or Terry one of the watch guards should be there.

""Ah, master, madam. Welcome.""

When we arrived at the factory John was disassembling and cleaning the meat mincer while Terry was cleaning up inside of the factory.

Umu.

The hygienic "feeling" is important since we deal in food products.

It's completely impossible to reach modern day Japanese standards of hygiene, a level that will never be reached, but just because other places are dirty doesn't mean we should follow suit.

It means that my efforts in harshly directing them paid off.

Since we had the occasion I had them make some tea and have a short break.

"Is everyone getting along well without fighting?"

Miduchi asked the two of them while handing them a bag of candy she bought along the way. We've already read the report from Cathy but there might be some places she doesn't notice. It's possible for fights and bullying to occur anywhere in the world of children. It even occurs between adults at times.

"There were two fights since the year started. Myusshi and Bagu, Maru and Rinbi. But, in both cases it wasn't over anything important."

Terry put a piece of candy in his mouth and smiled while saying.

If you can resolve it all on your own then fight as much as you please.

Incidentally, Myusshi and Bagu are both boys at the same age as John and Terry. This is fine.

However, Maru and Rinbi are the eldest boy and girl who reach adulthood this year.

Get along well with each other...

"Also, there wasn't any cases of bullying anyone. Cathy-san has always harshly spoken out against it since then and..umm, everyone is afraid of being scolded by master."

John said while sucking on some candy as well.

Come to think of it, I guess it was around the end of last year?

Something like this happened.

I heard from Cathy that Byogu the smallest child was almost neglected for not moving fast enough. In anger after hearing that without even taking my armor off when it was close to night when we came out of the dungeon I hopped on my horse and rushed into the factory. Rushing my horse from Boil Manor in Baldukk to the factory I arrived in 30 minutes.

After arriving at the factory I told John and Terry who came out to greet me to gather all of the slaves. That day it was already in the a.m. after everyone returned to their inn but I had them all gather within 1 hour.

And then I hit John and Terry. It's only obvious for a small child to have slow movements. Take your time and patiently teach them. Furthermore, using that as a reason to neglect them is absurd. In the first place if you can't resolve it then why didn't you tell me about it? Ah, it doesn't matter either way whether or not you all were involved in neglecting them. After all for the time being future candidates for management positions.

For that sort of reason I yelled and hit them each once in front of everyone. Of course, I properly took off my gauntlet with brass knuckles embedded into it. Also, I held back quite a bit so healing spells weren't necessary. Obviously I paid no mind whether or not John and Terry had any complaints about it. Though I think they probably didn't have any.

I heard from Cathy that there's a number of children older than John and Terry and with the passage of time there was an age based hierarchy being formed. Well it's only natural so I have nothing to say about that. If the oldest one in the group is superior then that person would do just as expected from their age after all. If it was Japan then I think that would have been plenty.

However, the seniors John and Terry learned to read and write from the Basutoral couple and along with that were a bit more intelligent. They're both 13 years old this year. The level of their studies should be around the middle to late years of elementary. After all it seems they can do the addition and subtraction of fractions now. In comparison there's other child among the slaves who reach 15 years old and adulthood this year but supposedly they're at best around the lower to middle grades of elementary school.

It's because it's gotten difficult for Basutoral to take the time to directly teach them and the incomplete teaching that Cathy can do through hearsay. Even in regards to Cathy her calculation abilities and various knowledge are at best around the first year of middle school. In fact this level is already more than enough to consider it high level. Particularly if you think about how she was born at the slave ranking and you could even call it a miracle.

Even on Earth until just a few dozen years ago there were a lot of people that couldn't read or do calculations. Those sorts of people weren't educated with the foundations to make logical thoughts or come up with abstract ideas. Because of that they were said to not have enough imaginations in regards to things outside of their sphere of life. It's just my personal opinion but I even think that a low literacy rate may be an necessary requirement to maintain a system based on social status. I think this is just because the past Japan is abnormal and that isn't the case for the trends of the entire world.

Whatever the case, even if it's not all of them a reasonable number of the slaves who are working in my sausage factory right now have a chance of taking on decent jobs in my country in the future.

That's why a certain level of education is necessary. For ruling class purposes.

That's the reason why I told John and Terry who were one stage higher from the start for obediently learning things to keep an eye on everyone. I gave them individual rooms for the night watch in the factory and even told all of the others to listen to what they say as seniors, showing the difference between them and the others. And then I've heard from Cathy's reports that no other child has appeared yet that can exceed John and Terry. That's why the only ones I can scold in front of everyone is just those two. Well, the only time I've scolded them was just that once.

Thanks to that John and Terry had the dishonor of being directly scolded by me but at the same time it had the result of putting more emphasis on the fact that they're "left in charge of things" by me after being by the number one adventurer in Baldukk. Just as planned.

Putting that aside, I ended up receiving complaints from the third knight group that act as guards of the capital for running my horse through the town in the middle of the night and had to stupidly pay a fine of 30 silver coins.

While discussing various things with the two of them it reached noon. It seems Terry is looking after things for lunch today. Since they were properly cleaning without playing around I thought about inviting even just John for a meal. Intending to give Terry a bit of allowance for his lunch I went to invite John but he nervously said.."I'm sorry, I've already promised someone else.."

Well I'm sure these two at least make appointments to eat with others.

"Oh, is that so? Then it can't be helped. Don't hold back and go ahead."

After I said that John gave his thanks and went to his room.
It might just be my imagination but he seemed pretty happy.
"John said he was treating his father and mother to lunch today."

Terry said. Ah, so that's why he was making that sort of face. If I remember right John's parents were the slaves of a store that was about to go out of business. I wonder if they were somehow able to go on? For just a moment I thought of giving John a bit of money but decided against it. It's better if he treats his parents to lunch using money he earned and saved up himself.
When John returned from his room he lowered his head once and ran off holding his wallet.

"What about you?"

"Ah, that is..It's the same for me tonight.."

"That's something to look forward to right."

Miduchi said to Terry.

"Ehe~"

Terry smiled shyly.

After Miduchi and I had lunch we went to pay a visit to Tokerin's hospital and then went around greeting several places before returning to Baldukk.

.....

Year 7447, Month 4, Day 6

We entered the dungeon the other day and pushed ourselves quite a bit to clear four floors a day and just arrived at the teleport room of the 8th floor late last night at a considerably fast pace.
And then, today we're finally going to try using the rifle against a boss in a monster room on the 9th floor. If it seems to work pretty well then just like that we'll use it against the Minos.

Just when we're using it against the Mino I'll have Angela firing the rifle. Bel will be firing the most important net gun.

"Is everyone ready? We're carrying a huge burden again this time but everyone give it your best."

We stepped foot on the 9th floor. Giberuti is carrying the net gun and rifle. We'll switch equipment just before the monster room.

"Nn..Right now we're here. That direction."

Following Gwine's guidance I continue down the halls. We keep advancing while quickly defeating the {Spotted.Cave Crickets} that appear along the way.

And then we arrived near a suitable monster room.

I'd usually prefer to scout out what's there but this time Miduchi is leading the {Butchers}. I left the lead to Zenom and Ralpa while the rest of our main group follows a bit behind. Of course, Bel's already loaded bullets and standing at the ready with the rifle.

Zenom quietly looked into the monster room before sending everyone a sign with his left hand.

4 Trolls, Cave Trolls, or Troll.Kin huh?

I send out a sign that we had decided ahead of time and we get into formation.

This time Bel using the gun is the guts so we won't suddenly rush into the room.

We'll start off with everyone fortifying the surroundings while Bel is in the center. Giberuti will be on standby a bit of distance away.

Bel slowly started advancing while aiming the muzzle of the gun above and after passing between Zenom and Ralpa advanced towards the center of the entrance to the room. Zenom and Ralpa are on standby at both of her sides. Of course they're already using the ear plugs.

I stand on guard with my bayonet besides Zenom as well. Hmn, Cave Trolls huh?

After confirming that everyone's in position I give Bel the sign.

Bel held the gunstock to her right shoulder with her cheek to the rifle at the ready.

Several seconds later.

Bang!!

Along with the roar of the rifle a certain kill bullet was fired.

The troll that was closest to us facing the side fell over to side just like that.

The bullet doesn't have any jacket, since it's just the so-called hard tip lead bullet, after hitting it's believed it didn't change shape inside of the body but just pierced through the head.

Immediately after the other 3 turned over here to the direction of the roaring sound.

Bang!!

Just as I thought a small hole was opened a bit below the left eye of the one on the left side, it fell over face forward on the spot.

Whether they realized that or not the remaining 2 started running over here while holding their clubs.

Even if it's Bel she should be about at her limit.

"I'll take the one on the right!"

I shouted before hitting the one on the right with a {Flame

Catapult Missile} killing it instantly.

Zulu and Angela charged at that one with their weapons ready.

Finally Zenom threw his magic axe and without missing it stabbed into the trolls forehead from the front.

After that we all gathered around and beat the 2 Cave Trolls that were convulsing after being shot by Bel until their regeneration couldn't keep up and they completely died. Ah, I forgot to use {Identify}.

After we killed them I checked their heads and the bullets Bel fired completely pierced through, there was a slightly large hole on the exit from the bullet with gray brains sticking out.

Hmm.

I guess they passed out from the large damage to the brain when it hit their heads, or did they die instantly the moment their brains were destroyed...

While it might not be to the point of lead but the bullets are made from considerably hard and heavy iron so they shouldn't have flattened too much when hitting. Most likely they wouldn't have changed in shape anymore than {full metal jacket}. After all making them {Soft.Point} or {Soft.Hollow} might be the best.

I can't tell the precise caliber for sure but I used the image of M80s a copy of 7.62*51mm NATO bullets that were used by the M1 and my Type-64 in the SDF, so they should be exactly as my image seems.

Though I don't know whether the amount of gunpowder is the same.

Judging from the penetration force this should be fine in regards to the caliber and amount of gunpowder.

I think taking into consideration the piercing even the bullet-head should be fine like this. However, that's when the opponent is {Lesser Yowie} and such which are difficult to pierce through their bodies. When it comes to Trolls, Ogres, and Minotaur they fundamentally aren't much different from people and horses so it might be best to make some changes...

If it comes to this then a revolver type cylinder ends up being a pain to exchange the bullets.

But, it's fine whether it's bolt action or auto but the complex structure of the parts are on a completely different level so trying to suddenly use some other form of magazine than a revolving cylinder is too difficult right~

Also, if I were to take into consideration exchanging the ball cartridges in the chamber and if I can just make it possible to exchange for each rotating cylinder then the rotating cylinder will be far more useful. After all, they can be replaced along with the chamber.

Well, that can be done eventually..I guess. It's not like you can't kill using bullets with high piercing power.

The possibility that you can't pierce through their skin when shooting them is far more frightening.

Though I say that, even if you can't pierce through they still take the energy from the bullet so I'm sure they wouldn't take no damage at all.

Either way is fine.

However, putting that aside, we've proven the usefulness of the rifle.

If it can pierce through the head of a troll then it should be fine against the mino as well.

Even if it can't pierce through their heads there's no problem as long as it works against their large chest or body which isn't covered in solid bones.

If it quickly pierces through their lungs then either way they'll quickly have difficulty breathing.

If it hits their heart then it just takes one shot I'm sure.

Out of the 7 Minotaur Bel managed to entangle 4 of them, Angela instantly killed 1 of them with the rifle and heavily injured 1 more. She must have had good luck with the one she killed instantly.

The bullet went into it's mouth while it was shouting and then pierced through the back of it's head just like that.

If she can take out 1.5 of them then the rest of us can deal with them in any way we please.

Yeah. It should be fine to call it a big success.

If we have this then there's no longer any enemies that can oppose us on the 9th floor. I'm sure even the 10th floor is no problem.

I'm very satisfied.

I tried to use {Identify} on Angela while she was gathering magic stones from the mino.

Obviously I couldn't do it.

I hatefully glare at the 2 whirlpools of fog that are still swirling around.

If I think about it isn't Angela the first one to completely kill a mino all on her own other than myself?

We always team up to beat them from all sides after all.
Even when we can't beat them from all sides, there were almost no instances where one person could completely kill one alone.
If I remember right then Angela was just a bit more from leveling up to 22.
I'm sure she should have leveled up from that Mino just now.
After taking a short break I intend on going to check out a different room on the 9th floor so it should be fine to {Identify} her then.

...

.....

.....Huh?

【Experience: 1429651(1430000)】

It hasn't..increased...

No, it hasn't increased much?

What about the others? I guess Basutorial is fine.

【Experience: 844678(950000)】

It's increased by about 2,000 since before we fought against the mino, I think. Though I don't have much confidence. But, I can hope for this much.

Why?

I'm sure she killed that mino instantly.

Hmm, though it might be an exaggeration that she killed it instantly but it should have been pretty close to that.

Soon after she fired it started convulsing like the trolls but after we finished off the ones in the net and went to gather magic stones no matter how I looked at it, it was already dead.
She certainly received a large amount of experience over 1,000 but that's from the ones stuck in the net and the ones she defeated together with us..Is it my misunderstanding?

I'll watch the experience points of the shooter once more.
Bel's current experience points are at 【Experience:

1133265(1260000)】 huh.

.....

Out of the 2 Troll.Kin Bel finished off 1 of them. This sort of fellow.

【】

【Male/28/10/7447.Troll.Kin】

【Special Skill: Super.Regeneration Type III】

The remaining 1 was beaten to death by everyone before Bel could do anything.

Everyone who participated in combat excluding me earned around 100~500 experience points each.

Basutorial who stabbed it with a spear using all of his power received a bit more but that makes sense.

Ralpha and Zulu who parried and dodged it's attacks at the front also received a bit more than the rest as well. That's fine too. I already understand the logic. It's more important that everyone else received experience points that weren't far off from my expectations.

Since Bel defeated 1 of them alone it's fine to hope for about 2,000 from this opponent.

【Experience: 1133265(1260000)】

..Don't screw with me.

I observe the Troll.Kin whose head was shot through by Bel while thinking.

Swords and bows are okay but guns are no good?

What in the world is different?

...

Is it because pulling the strings of a bow require your own physical strength?

Even when it comes to a crossbow in the end it requires human strength to load.

Do you not earn any experience points from defeating enemy soldiers using a catapult during war?

Damn it.

Chapter 289: Anxiety 2

Year 7447, Month 4, Day 6

"Al, what have you been doing since just now?"

Zenom called out to me when I was observing the head of the Troll.Kin in order to cover up the fact that I was focused on thinking. I'm sure it's necessary to explain and it's not like I'll come to a conclusion even if I think anymore than this. I guess it's just right.

"Nn, I was investigating the wound. Look at this. Here is where the bullet from the gun hit."

"Hmm."

"And just like that it passed through the skull and the back of the head and now it's probably stuck in the wall somewhere over there."

"The wound on the back sure is big. Even though the wound on the front is smaller than an arrow wound."

"Yeah, when it passed through the skull from the face the angle must have shifted slightly. Because of that when it passed through the skull in the back of the head it wasn't from the front but a bit above that. It's fine if you just think of it as the bullet getting a bit bigger without losing any momentum."

"Hohou, I see, no clue at all."

As expected even if I were to tell him about the movement of energy or shock waves he wouldn't understand it. I said it as simply as possible without touching on those but it seems it was still outside the category of comprehension for Zenom. Though, I don't think Gwine or Ralpa would understand either so there's no problem at all.

"Is it necessary to modify the bullet?"

Bel came to participate in the conversation. Although, in her case

I'm sure it has a completely different meaning than Zenom.

"Nn. I don't know if it's necessary or not yet. It would be good if we can use several types based on the opponent but as expected that is..(Eh..)"

When I turned around while replying looking at Bel I almost raised my voice and took a step back. Th..This girl, what kind of expression is she making...

There was a blazing light in Bel's eyes and her face was a bit red.

She was making a cruel and bewitching smile while her breath seemed a bit rough. Ah, this girl..Is it that? Is she a dangerous person?

But, rather than that there's a problem.

"Bel! Don't lower the muzzle! Remove your fingers from the trigger!! Rather than quickly call over Giberuti and hand him the gun."

I reflexively yelled in a loud voice.

"Eh? Ah, I..I'm sorry! I..I'll go and call Larry."

After being warned by me over something extremely basic, Bel turned red from embarrassment and ran out of the room in a hurry. She was properly holding the top base of the gunstock in her right hand while holding the barrel up with her left hand as she aimed the gun upwards with an angle of 30 to 45 degrees.

It's the gun reserve stance.

Yeah, it's no good if you can't naturally and subconsciously do that reserve gun {high port} stance.

Even though she was able to do it just before...

Today I was planning to keep an eye on things while letting everyone try shooting living targets but judging from that state of Bel it's a bit troubling.

Because it's necessary for shooting I only taught her the most basic stances for firing and holding the gun in reserve but judging from this state of things, I wonder if it's really no good if I don't do gun drills?

It's probably no good.

Next time I'll make sure to add a strap to the gun.

In the end after that I decided to hold off on using the gun because of Bel's bad performance in gun safety.

It's force was plenty to be recognized and either way it doesn't earn any experience points after all. If they can't pay attention to the surroundings and in the worst case someone gets hurt during an accident then that's still fine but there's no going back if anyone were to die.

Also, it's about time for them to get conscious about joint responsibility over a wider range.

Bel apologized to everyone while we were having dinner that night.

"Umm..Everyone, I'm sorry that I stole your chance to practice today."

From how she apologized herself before I said anything she must be feeling responsible for it.

It seemed like the mood was about to get a bit darker and I don't want it to become a situation of blaming Bel.

"It's good that you feel responsible but that's something everyone who was on the spot and had their sights on you should feel."

I'll take this chance to explain how to treat guns or rather about guns once again.

"..Particularly this gun right now doesn't have a safety attached to it. There's no such thing as being too careful about the safety of your surroundings. Be careful."

I repeat saying the details I've said countless times since I made the first net gun. In particular it seems everyone was shocked that Bel, who's the most skilled at shooting, was intoxicated by firing and got negligent with safety so they appeared to be listening more seriously than usual.

"I'll say this once again but there's three classifications for firing stances. Five classifications when you're holding a gun. However, for the time being the firing stance is the standing position. I want to thoroughly enforce the reserve and upwards positions when handling guns other than when firing. Including Giberuti I want everyone to continue until you can do it subconsciously. Until then using guns in live combat is banned."

For the most part the crouching and laying firing positions aren't necessary in the dungeon so I've skipped those. In reality the standing firing position wasn't on any textbooks I knew of from the JSDF but the firing distance in the dungeon is several tens of meters and depending on the case it could be even closer combat so I made the standing posture the fundamental so they can move right away. Both the hanging and lowering gun postures are impossible until the strap is done as well. Just holding over the shoulder is possible but that's only really used for marches when trying to look good so I left it out as well. The lifting position? That's another that isn't needed until I've actually got an army and it's necessary to salute.

In any case I just need to pound into them that the holding posture when moving must be in the reserve position holding it upwards.

Also, there's the matter of experience points this time as well.

It might be about a good time for that one matter.

Of course it's in regards to the "{Identification} spell".

I'll consult with Miduchi and Rodrick when we return from the dungeon.

.....

That night when keeping lookout I was together with Bel.

While the two of us were sitting down sipping at hot bean tea together on a bench near everyone sleeping she apologized once again.

"I didn't notice it at first because I thought I can't afford to miss but after that when we were against the Minotaurs I was excited by it's power when Maruso was firing the gun. Ever since then I've been wanting to use it and itching to try firing it to the point I couldn't help it...The second time against the Troll

Kin I was extremely excited seeing a monster fall after a single shot from a bullet. I might not be suited for using guns.."

Bel was nervous like a child as she apologized ashamed of herself.

"If you've realized that yourself then there's no problem. Also, if Bel doesn't act is shooter than who should? It would be a waste of {Shooting.Sense}."

I said it as a joke but I didn't think Bel was actually that worried about it.

"But.."

Bel lowered her head while giving off an air almost as if she was afraid of something.

"You know, even in the JSDF there's a considerable amount of time before they lend out live guns and have you start actual shooting training. The handling of guns is called "gun control" but I feel pretty responsible for not properly pounding that into everyone from the start as well. The matter this time, if you were to ask who is the most responsible then it would be me for using them in live combat in that half-assed state. I'm sorry."

Ralpa's rolled up in her blanket right behind us after switching watch a short while ago. I lowered the tone of my voice while saying it so as to not wake her up.

"No way! Please don't apologize. Putting aside the proper posture, I..it's the same for Ral, Gwine, and Saji as well but we knew very well about the power and dangers of guns. It's something that we should be careful about safety when using."

Completely dropping her nervous lack of confidence Bel tried to cover for me.

"Yeah, I'm sure you could look at it that way as well. But, the one with the most experience and knowledge in handling guns is me. At the very least I shouldn't have let you all use them in live combat until I was confident there were no problems in handling them...I must have been in a hurry myself..Sorry."

With the completion of the guns, I was the worst in getting too excited. Certainly I wanted to be able to safely pass through the 9th floor but there was no need to hurry.

"..I..I'm sorry. I..was worried what I would do if Al-san said he didn't need me.."

Eeh!!? How could that even be possible?

"..Hey, there's no way I'd say something like that right. It's not just to Bel. I wouldn't say something like that to anyone else in the {Slaughterers} either."

I wonder if I seem like someone who would easily say something like that? It's a bit depressing.

"Yes, I already understand that. But, I was talking with Toris about it before we entered the dungeon this time. The power of guns is amazing. If you can make something that good then you should be able to make it deeper into the dungeon of Baldukk anytime..Also, anyone can easily land a hit if they just practice a bit for the distances of battles in the dungeon. If it comes to that then someone like me who's just a bit good at shooting..I'd never know when I'd be told to exchange spots with someone from the {Butchers} or {Exterminators}.."

Bel said with tears falling from her eyes.

So she was afraid of that?

But, if things come to that then it can't be helped..or rather it's not a matter of just that level of discussion I'm sure.

From Bel's standpoint, when there were no guns excluding magic she was just someone a bit skilled at using a powerful long distance attack. That's why she must have had some pride and confidence supported by that. Even after obtaining guns Bel's shooting skill is still quite amazing and everyone's recognized that. She should understand that herself as well.

However, if you just think about it in terms of simple shooting skill without using Unique Abilities, Bel can't be considered the best. Shooting is after all decided by the amount of practice. Of course I'm the most skilled since I've used guns in the past.

Holding guns in the correct posture is effective in enduring recoil and particularly when it comes to the operation the moment the hammer impacts I'm number one at naturally understanding the meaning behind it. In the first place I'm the one designing and making them after all.

Although, I think it's just a matter of time before I'm overtaken.

Well, that's enough about me.

It seems like Bel wasn't thinking about exceeding me right from the start either.

There an unexpected ambush was laying in wait. Angela. At first she fell over hearing the explosion from the gunpowder and was afraid of it but after having her practice firing and getting used to the sound, I guess she has a natural talent because her skill has visibly improved. In no time at all even Bel doesn't stand a chance against her when not using her Unique Ability. From Bel's standpoint she might have felt a sense of crisis.

But, even then she's still number two excluding me.

Probably, I don't think I was all that skilled at shooting in the first place so I doubt I'll improve much from here on out either.

Even then I have no problems in the short distance of around 100 meters so it's fine though. Even Bel boasts of a considerable accuracy in the 10s to 100 meter range without her Unique Ability just like me and her skill is still continuing to grow.

For her to worry this much just because she got a bit full of herself seeing the power of guns and was negligent with safety...It might have been especially a shock for her with her confidence in shooting.

"Well...I still can't imagine there would be anyone willing to challenge Bel in the next member change match. Also, there's no way you could have it so easy as madam Marquis in the future. If you want status then both Bel and Toris need to eat mud together with me~"

I replied while lifting just the right side of my mouth into a nihilistic smile that I thought was cool.

"Yes..Yes..That's right. But, please just let me say one thing."

Bel who was sitting on my left side said while looking up at me with a crying smile.

Hn? What is it?

"It's fine if you don't try to act so cool and cover it up. Say it a bit more honestly."

Hearing Bel's words a natural smile appeared.

"Nn, I see. I guess so. Bel. It's the same for Ralpa as well but.. just for that level of reason, there's no way I would so easily let go of you two. You two were my first Japanese friends on Orth."

"Oh, what about Toris, Gwine, and Saji? It's the same for Rodrick as well, and if you say that then Miduchi-san's position..Also, what about Zenom-san, Kamu-san, and the others?"

It seems she's feeling a bit better. Bel said while leaning her body against and looking up at me.

It's a teasing tone.

I'm troubled where to look.

Rather~ didn't I just say "first Japanese"...

I scratch my head while scooting forward and leaning all the way back into the bench looking at everyone upside down to try and cover it up.

Ralpha who should have been sleeping right behind us was sitting up and looking over here with a grin on her face.

I completely met eyes with her.

Fufu.

Sleep while you can.

Don't be staying awake to eavesdrop~

The position was a bit painful but I beckoned her over just like that.

If you're awake then you join us for a bit as well.

It seems Bel stood up to make some more bean tea.

Chapter 290: Anxiety 3

Year 7447, Month 4, Day 8

Now then, once again today I've been thoroughly teaching them about the handling of guns just the same as the day before yesterday but after all thinking about things from here on out and I can't help but feel complicated about not using them for very long. There's no helping the matter of not earning any experience points but there's no mistake that it's a useful weapon. The advantage of anyone being able to use a long distance attack with a fixed attack power is still great even excluding the experience points.

On the occasions when we're up against Mino, Trolls, and Ogres, monsters with strength, I after all want to one with us as insurance. Those sorts of powerful monsters even if they don't land a hit on the vitals like the head all it takes is being grazed to suffer serious injuries. Particularly if we could let the porter Giberuti use it then it would be a big trump card.

While Giberuti was preparing breakfast I was thinking about various things while checking my equipment in a corner of the room. "Hey, Al. I discussed it with Saji when we were keeping lookout yesterday but.."

Before I realized it Ralpa was nearby whispering to me in a low voice. It seems she just finished taking a shower and her hair is still wet as she has a towel wrapped around her head. We can't use magic here so I can't dry it for her.

"Did Bel really point the muzzle of the gun at Al that time?"

Ralpa with a suspicious expression on her face started saying things that make no sense in an even lower voice as her face approached mine.

She was certainly pointing the muzzle in my direction and her finger was still on the trigger. If that wasn't the case there's no way I would have panicked that much. Even Zenom saw it by my side you know.

"What's the mean?"

"Hmn, as a matter of fact.."

Supposedly Basutorial and Ralpa discussed Bel's actions that were the reason for banning the usage of guns while keeping lookout last night. And then the two of them couldn't help but feel doubtful about Bel, who's knowledgeable about projectile weapons and normally using them damage monsters, handling one carelessly.

"If you put it like that then that's certainly true.."

Though I replied like that, I've already understood the reason why after talking to Bel that night. She said she couldn't hold back her excitement over the gun that was several times more powerful than a bow. She was intoxicated by the fact that it could even render a mino or troll powerless in a single shot. After all, when it comes to the bow let alone a mino or troll, unless you can hit them in the eye from the front you can't even stop an ork or hobgoblin with a single hit.

"For that Bel to handle a gun carelessly is.."

Ralpa was trying to say that Bel's actions were too unnatural coming from her. Certainly if it's put like that then it's hard to imagine Bel ignoring something so basic even though I've been nagging them normally over the handling of guns for so long. Fundamentally Bel's never gone against the things I say. Of course, she occasionally objects and comments on things so she's not just a simple yes-man but she's never done something so shameful as going back against something that's already been decided. Even though she's like that for her to be negligent with safety in that sort of situation...

Certainly it doesn't make sense.

However, didn't we just enthusiastically go over learning gun command yesterday...

"Hey, what do you think about it?"

"Hmm. If it's put like that then..Certainly I've started to feel that it was a bit strange. Call over Baustoral, no, I'll directly ask Bel about it."

"Yeah, do that. But I'm sure Bel has some sort of thoughts about it. If possible you should do it when you're alone with her and not get angry."

That's only obvious. Of course I understand.

The next one to leave the teleport crystal room for morning beauty(though there's no shampoo) after Ralpa was Bel. She's the only one outside of the room..right. Everyone else is in the room. I told Giberuti to wait a bit longer on breakfast and left the room. I'm not going to peep so don't misunderstand. I decided to wait for Bel to return in the middle area between the rocks we use as a shower and the teleport crystal room.

"A..Al-san, good morning."

"Yeah, Bel, good morning."

"Al-san are you having a shower as well? That's unusual. What's going on?"

No, it's just a portion but I've already got my armor right.

There's no way I'd take a shower at this point.

"Is it fine to talk for a bit?"

"About what?"

Bel tilted her head while wiping her wet hair.

"Hey~ I only just realized it at this point but do you have anything you want to say?"

"Fufu..For Al-san I thought you were acting quite dense."

Dense you say, that's overestimating me right.

"Though, even if I say that since I was able to talk to the other night it was fine whether you realized or not. But, if you've already realized, then don't you already understand what I was going for?"

I felt a bit complex hearing Bel's words but after all she had some sort of objective huh...

However, an objective..In order to thoroughly enforce gun safety once again?

At this point?

"I see. Honestly speaking I didn't realize it myself so I can't boast about it."

"That's fine~that's fine. But, the feelings I talked about at that time were the truth."

"Hn?"

"That I didn't know what I would do if Al-san said I wasn't needed."

"Nn, yeah.."

I guess that means there was some acting and hidden messages behind the parts other than that...

"Nn..It can't be helped acting cool. What Bel wanted to do, I still understand the reason. Why did you do something like that?"

"..Really?"

Really? you say, if it was an objective that easy to understand?

Then after all I can only think of trying to reinforce gun safety once again?

"..But, over half of my objective has already been achieved."

Bel said with a soft expression.

".."

"For the time being, guns have been banned from use. I was able to make time for us to think about the handling of guns again in the meantime."

Bel adjusted her posture and made a serious expression.

"..Al-san. There's something I discussed with Miduchi-san, Zenom-san, and Toris the other day. Would you listen?"

"Of course."

I'll listen to anyone's opinion including Bel and if it's something worth implementing I'll obviously take it into consideration.

"Al-san haven't you been too overconfident recently? No, there's no special meaning behind it. I can't find the right words for it..Right. With the completion of guns for the time being haven't you been exposing too many weaknesses? Hmn, that doesn't sound quite right either..That's right! Aren't you paying too much attention to everyone that you've lost sight of our original goal?"

Eh? Weaknesses? Was I revealing some?

Well I'm sure there's some things I wouldn't realize myself, I'm grateful that she's pointed it out.

Bel continued speaking in rapid succession.

"Al-san said that he wouldn't let any member of the {Slaughterers} die or be killed. Of course, that's something great and wonderful. I'm in full support of it as well. But, in the first place something like that can't be promised from the moment we enter the dungeon. It's just a front right?"

..Being told straight to my face is quite harsh, this. I wasn't thinking of it as something like a front but was seriously going for that. But, I can understand what Bel's trying to say. Something like not having any casualties, it's impossible to promise while exploring the dungeon of Baldukk where you never know what might happen.

But, if you say that then you can't mention anything about what will come in the future right? I think at the very least I have the responsibility to make that one of my objectives and even think of it as a duty.

"I understand that. But, please just remember this. People will eventually die. Haven't we already seen countless people who have died inside the dungeon up until now?"

"Nn, well, that's right."

"By the way, this time, why are you still continuing to dispatch Miduchi-san and Toris? If it was Al-san up until now, shouldn't you have dispatched me who was skilled at shooting practice the last time we entered and Maruso who's growth has been considerable to the {Butchers} and {Exterminators}?"

Since Bel suddenly started talking about something completely different I looked around thinking someone was approaching us but that wasn't the case.

"No, there's no particular reason. If I had to say it then, I wanted to concentrate on the training for the two of you since you seemed to be skilled at it, would be the reason I guess?"

Yeah. Miduchi and Toris are both somewhat decent and they can use magic as well so I thought it would be fine to put off serious shooting practice for them. It's nothing more than putting priority on Bel and Angela who I thought would quickly pick up on it. After hearing my reply Bel started grumbling complaints to herself.

Saying things like, "Really now" and "Because of that.."

Somehow..it seems I took an unexpected action when picking members for the {Slaughterers} this time. Certainly I've been dispatching them successively for no real reason recently.

"This time it was supposed to be Miduchi-san who discussed it with Al-san. Since it was originally a discussion that started from Miduchi-san. But it can't be helped. I couldn't think of anything other than that."

Hnn?

"Really~ why is it only at times when I'm trying to talk about things like this...Even though I don't have any confidence in properly conveying it..The same for Miduchi-san, Zenom-san, and Toris..Ah, excuse me."

Somehow it seems difficult to say.

"Al-san. Couldn't we just stop using guns in the dungeon already?"

"Ha?"

What's she saying?

"Ah, that's not what I meant. The aspect of using guns itself is fine. Though it's not good, it's fine."

I don't understand at all.

"I obviously trust Kamu-san and the others. They're normal Orth people but after accompanying them up until now I feel like I can trust them a reasonable amount. But, they're people from Orth. I'll say ahead of time that I'm absolutely not looking down on them. I don't want to have to say something like this but starting with guns they don't know how truly frightening weapons from Earth can be. I'm sure they can somewhat imagine it after properly explaining to them but there's no way they could truly understand how frightening they can be in the true meaning."

That might be true. Though it might not be. Whatever the case it's not a topic that we can ever be sure on.

"Umm you know. I, no, we all think that sooner or later someone will die in the dungeon. Of course, no one wants to die. It's the same for me as well. I have no intention of dying."

Y..Yeah.

"Having said that, I'll say it once again. Isn't it fine no matter who dies? As long as Al-san doesn't die the dream will still continue."

Eeeh!! That's not good!

"I heard from Miduchi-san. You were originally only planning to make guns after you had a territory...You pushed your plans forward because we were struggling with just those mere Minotaurs right? Please stop. Please don't take such a large risk for our sake."

Nn..Well, it's certainly true that I started making the net gun because there was no way of telling when the powerful Minotaurs would respawn. We can't use magic after all~

"Certainly everyone was intoxicated by the power of guns at the start. We were really excited. That's the same for me too."

Bel's explanation jumped all over the place as she continued speaking. Simply summing up the main points and it's like this.

She only wants us to use guns when the party consists of the reincarnated people, Zenom, Zulu, Angela, and Giberuti. That would be everyone who currently knows about the existence of guns. While they may look like that even Rokko and Jeru who appear frivolous are pretty solid at keeping secrets. Even if they were to know about guns it's hard to think that they would reveal the information. From the standpoint of a top adventurer at the front lines of Baldukk it's suicide revealing the secret moving force of the {Slaughterers} after all.

However, you never know what might happen next time or the time after that, someone may eventually appear who replaces them in the member exchange matches. If it's the same as up until now then we would continue using the guns at that time.

Furthermore, if we go to even deeper floors from here on out it's easy to think that monsters more powerful than those Minotaur will appear.

Would they really be able to remain quiet about guns that could possibly easily defeat such a powerful monster? Even if no one reveals it directly it's possible it could be leaked from discussions in the party.

Especially when we go to the 10th and 11th floors, everyone is already focused on the conversations between members of the {Slaughterers}, and that'll increase even more.

We can't afford to increase the "possibility" of exposing information about guns, which will be a huge power for us when we go independent in the future, over something like this. If there's something we have no choice other than to use guns for then it should only be when we have all of the former {Slaughterers} members in the party.

Even if someone ends up losing their life as a result of that we should accept it.

If that's unacceptable then it's fine if we rig the member change matches or anything else so make it so no members are switched out.

And that's the conclusion that the four of them decided on.

"Bel, are you saying that seriously?"

"I'm serious. It means that anyone who dies along the way only measured up to there."

Bel coldly said with no expression like a Noh mask.

Certainly I thought something pretty similar up until a while back...

However.

"Is that the same for Miduchi, Zenom, and Toris?"

"That's right. It was originally something that Miduchi-san brought up and it's the conclusion that we all decided on after discussing it."

".."

"In order to reduce the danger you pushed forward your plans and made guns. That part is fine. But, that might end up bringing about calamity in the future. Al-san, what meaning is there in doing something so naive?"

Naive, huh~ If it's being naive by trying to reduce the chances of casualties among my subordinates even just a bit and raise the safety then it can't be helped. It might be naive. However, I don't think that's the case...

I'm obtaining a massive treasure from this dungeon of Baldukk, where you never know what might happen, without a single sacrifice. Though I think it's a harsh goal that even that George.Rombert the First couldn't accomplish. However, it's certainly a bit different from what Bel and the others are saying. It would certainly be wonderful if we could do that without using guns. However, the absurdly strong ones that were among those Minotaur. If something like that comes out in the future..I'm sure it will. It'll be close to impossible to deal with that without guns. Even if I were to fight against {The.Gazer} once more there's no way of telling what might happen.

"..That's right, there's a "message from Miduchi-san"."

Bel continued talking just as I took a breath and was about to say something.

"That is..it's a message from Miduchi-san but what I'm about to say is also the opinion of the four of us. Everything up until now was just the type of front that Al-san might like. Even if I say front it was considerably serious about the exposure of information though..in truth though.."

There's a real reason behind it?

"If they just use a gun then even a small child can kill you instantly. It's scary."

Certainly if they witness the power of guns then there's no guarantee someone might not have a change of heart. If it's a person even just a bit quick witted they could kill us in our sleep with a gun or something and then for example it's even possible to imagine them selling it to the Kingdom of Rombert as a new type of weapon. I'm sure they wouldn't be able to create new ammunition but if it's right after we've made some it would still be a reasonable amount.

Bel continued to say.

"I already know that it's unlikely to the point of overthinking.

Starting with Kamu-san, all of the current members are relying on Al-san and obviously respect Al-san's intentions...you have a firm will as you speak of a dream bigger than anyone and run towards it. Everyone understands quite a bit about Al-san. Also, we think of you as stronger than anyone, wiser than anyone, and thinking farther ahead than anyone else. And then..you share your heart with everyone and wish for our safety more than anyone else."

What kind of Saint is that? I'm not anything that significant.

Also, don't say things like that with such a straight face.

It took quite a bit of willpower to endure breaking eye contact.

"Don't you know? Starting with Kamu-san, everyone says they're going to become a noble below Al-san. Of course~ even if they earn big here in the dungeon at best they could end up as a squire family of some noble somewhere...That's right, supposedly even Misu-san and Jeru-san who planned to return to their home towns one day are discussing things about the future you know?

In order to act more refined Rokko-san and Kevin-san have started joining the study sessions with Saji that they used to turn down as troublesome up until now. Ah, saji only teaches words and math and it's primarily Toris and I that are teaching those sorts of things.

Sanno-san and Ruttsu-san just mastered up to division the other day. Zulu and Maruso aren't just teaching Al-san's slaves Henry and Mekku but they're teaching various things to Denda and Karimu as well. Everyone's saying they want to quickly participate in Al-san's lectures for Miduchi-san, Zenom-san, Rodrick-san, Toris, and I, that they're definitely going to reach the level where they can.

On days off, there's no longer anyone who spends their days playing around."

Eh..I didn't know that far. But...

"Ah..Ral and Gwine are..Umm.."

Yeah. That I knew about.

"In any case, it's hard to imagine that anyone would betray Al-san and expose things regarding the guns but even if we don't think that way we can't deny the possibility that it'll still be exposed. It's an unpleasant way of thinking but in the first place the focus of reincarnated people and Al-san's slaves are different in that regard after all.."

Ah..Well, that might be the case...

"Al-san, you're already everyone's hope. You're the hope of everyone who wants to entrust their lives to your dream. Of course, that's the same for us as well. Even by chance we don't want you to trip up in an insignificant place."

Bel said that and smiled.

Chapter 291: Identify 1

Year 7447, Month 4, Day 9

For a full 2 days or so after I talked to Bel I continued to pound things about guns into everyone properly. During that time I'd always say, "I have something to think about" and spend it thinking to myself.

After that we returned from the dungeon and just as we were returning to the entrance plaza after cashing in our magic stones it was just as everyone else was returning to the surface. Just the same as usual we moved over to Murowa's food cart and exchanged information about our battle gains this time before everyone started discussing the upcoming member change matches.

Yeah, just as expected.

"This month we'll enter the dungeon once more and then have the member change matches on the days off after that. That's why it'll be after the 18th. Also about the method but I'm making it a more simple and easier to understand method."

I thought about the conditions for the member change match while we were exploring the dungeon this time. Last time was far too overprotective.

Everyone's paying attention to what I'll say next.

"Obviously the stamina test is the same as up until now. We'll have this on the next day after we come out of the dungeon, though I guess that's too harsh so we'll do it on the 19th. After you pass through that we'll confirm who each of the pairs wants to challenge. Alright, everything up to here is the same."

Everyone's got a light smile on their faces as if they have some confidence.

Yeah, since it seems like they've been putting in quite a bit of effort after all.

It might be possible that a number of people or groups will pass other than Kamu and Kimu.

"Things are different starting here. Last time we were measuring time and searching around for just the right ogres it was all too troublesome. From here on out we'll make the method I'm about to explain the standard."

After saying that far I looked around at everyone's faces and it was as if they were saying, "Just hurry up and say it already"

Yes~yes.

"There's no change in that you'll be up against ogres on the 7th floor but this time it'll be a single round match, the details are simple. The test will last almost a full day. It's fine no matter how you use that day. It's over who can bring back the highest value in magic stones from the 7th floor in that day. Of course it's fine even if it's 1 or a lot of them is fine as well.

Obviously only magic stones obtained from the 7th floor will count. The one with the highest value after cashing them in at the magic stone shop Danhiru will win. Right? Isn't it simple?"

Nfu~ and I can hear the sound of sighing. There's some small suppressed laughs as well. They must have quite a bit of confidence. Putting aside the {Exterminators}, the {Butchers} have gained quite a bit of experience fighting against ogres after all.

Of course, I'll be handing each of the groups a map of the 7th floor. Also, I'll have several people go with them as guards and observers to prevent cheating. However, the guards will always remain at least several tens of meters away. They'll confirm the course taken and combat methods but they won't say anything about the methods the challengers decide on and even if they're asked for opinions they won't reply. We'll only tell them just their starting point where we teleported into on the map. Also, it'll act as the safety measure role to prevent them from charging into too dangerous of a place like the monster rooms.

I'll be careful in picking these guards so there's no cheating that occurs. For example, if I let Basutorial or Angela who will definitely be challenged to act as guards, I'll add in at least one other person from the challenger side to act as guard together with them. Depending on the case the person being challenged might be moved to the last in the order and it's fine to fill the guards with nothing but the challengers. If Miduchi or I mix in with them just in case then it shouldn't be all that dangerous.

"Obviously, you should use the weapons and equipment you normally use. Borrowing from someone else is prohibited. It's no good if you can't continue to use it after the test after all. Also, the first ones to pass the stamina test will be given priority in the order for naming someone. If multiple challengers all challenge the same person and everyone wins it would be troublesome in various ways."

Here a number of people started making grim expressions. They must not have though that far. The strongest contenders among the challengers at this point are Kamu and Kimu who won the right last time. If they can't surpass them in the stamina test it doesn't seem like they'll be able to challenge Basutorial and Angela after all. However, since it was still something only obvious it seems they accepted it soon after.

"Obviously you're free to use the full day however you want. It's fine if you return to the 6th floor partway through to take a break or get some sleep, and it's fine if you don't return as well. Well I don't really recommend not returning though."

After that I went through a Q&A over the fine details and finished the discussion.

.....

Year 7447, Month 4, Day 12

We finished our group training in the morning. Yeah~yeah, it was worth it having them practice attack spells on top of just practice matches this time. After giving out some simple instructions to everyone for entering the dungeon tomorrow, I stopped Rodrick who was about to go for lunch.

"I have a bit of something to discuss. It's something I don't really want everyone else to hear for the time being. Sorry but after you finish eating I want to talk inside of the dungeon. Ah, just in case how about you bring along Denda and Karimu as guards. Which, is why please refrain from any alcohol for lunch today."

Rodrick obediently nodded. In the first place he wasn't the type to drink alcohol at noon. At best drinking some beer occasionally~ on hot days. Though that's with ice floating inside of it.

After that is, Miduchi who I already talked to ahead of time and..Zenom for sure.

.....

"What's going on?"

Rodrick asked with a curious expression.

Denda who came along as a guard is standing near the teleport crystal while Karimu is about 40~50 meters away from us on the other side of the hall watching out for monsters.

"During our days off this time, I finally completed the new spell that I've been working on for a number of years now. I wanted to hear your opinion on it."

Miduchi who was standing quietly nearby looked over at me naturally.

Zenom made a "Hmm" expression.

"Ah..that. The expansion of {Status Open} was it? So you were able to do it. Isn't that great."

Rodrick replied like, is that so, congratulations. It's a bit half-hearted of a reply. He also seemed as if he was about to say, so what if that's the case? Zenom also gave a reply that was a bit anticlimactic like, "Ho~ that's~ great right."

Although, in the first place I explained it as "making it possible to use {Status Open} without touching them with a hand" after all.

Being able to confirm the targets name and types of special skills in secret from a bit of distance away was the sales point so I had already somewhat expected this reaction.

"First off, this spell consumes a massive amount of mana. Even for me it's a matter of whether I can use it 5 times or so right now."

"Even Al can only use it just that number of times..That's a bit?"

Zenom made a doubtful expression and asked while stroking his beard.

"Yeah. But the effects are even better than that. Give me a bit of time. I'll try using it on Rodrick."

"That's fine but..it might be nice that you can use {Status Open} without needing to touch someone with your hand. Even if you say there's an effect even better than that for Al-san to only be able to use 5 times is.."

Rodrick replied a bit disappointed while putting a bit of distance between us and sitting down on the floor of the dungeon.

Fufu, just watch.

I slowly start mentally concentrating.

That's right.

I've started concentrating.

As a matter of fact it was true that I developed a new spell.

It really took quite a bit of time for me to complete this spell.

Though by the time I remembered it I only worked on it in my spare time.

I named it, "{Shine.Light.Eyes}".

In order to activate the spell it requires void magic at MAX level as well as all elemental magics at MAX level and furthermore requires using all of them respectively between 30 and 35 times to use. Believe it or not the MP consumed is 1450.

Furthermore, the effect of the spell is just as it's name reads. It let's your eyes shine. If I don't add any sort of extension to the duration it lasts my body level multiplied by 60 seconds or so but it can be canceled at anytime. If you know the effects of the spell and pay close attention then you'll just barely notice my eyes giving off a light blue light in a dark place, that sort of exceedingly extraordinary spell.

Also, what you can't forget is because the amount of MP used is absurdly high even if anyone were to see it there's almost no way they could imitate it. Even if they did have enough mana to imitate it since I'm explaining it as the spell {Identification}, the effects and flow of mana used wouldn't match up so it's unlikely they'd be able to acquire {Shine.Light.Eyes}.

There's not a single effect other than that.

I solidify my mental concentration in order to activate the spell, and glare at Rodrick.

...

.....

I've completed it!

My eyes should be giving off a dim blue light right now.

"Rodrick.Faruergaz, Year 7444, Month 11, Day 11 name change.

Rodrick.Faruergaz, Year 7428, Month 12, Day 7, name change or naming."

Immediately after I obviously used {Identify} and started reading off the details listed in Rodrick's {Status Window}.

"Male, born Year 7428, Month 2, Day 14, Hyumu race, Count Faruergaz Family Eldest Son, Count Faruergaz Knight.."

Up until here is the general information you can see and obtain from anyone's {Status Open} window.

Rodrick and Zenom both were making amazed expressions as I started smoothly talking without even touching him. I only roughly know how much time has passed since I started. I wonder if I took too much time for the activation? Even then I practiced so I could activate it within 5 minutes.

There's some sweat that built up on my forehead from concentrating to the extreme and it's started running down.

"Condition, Normal."

""Eh?""

The two of them raised their voices a bit surprised.

Hmhm.

"Age, 19 years old."

The two of them made slightly disappointed faces.

Oh~

"Level, 14."

The two of them made expressions as if they didn't really get it.

"I wonder if it's the body level?"

Soon after Miduchi followed-up saying that and it seems they understood.

There's no way they would know whether the number 14 is high or low but Rodrick's face was somewhat satisfied and I could tell he seemed a bit proud as well.

I guess it's because of how high of a number it is in comparison to the levels of magic special skills.

Incidentally, I think you already know this but it's a number that may or may not be considered low for a member of one of the top teams though it's not so low that it's embarrassing either.

Rather considering his original level I think you could say he's put in quite the effort in these past 2 years.

"Unique Ability, Resistance, bracket Virus Infection close bracket.

No level, horizontal line, no hyphen I guess?"

"Eeh!!?"

"Mu.."

Though I had heard about the fact that his skill had no level information, I never heard how it was displayed, at least I think.

"Special Skill, Earth Magic, Level 3, Fire Magic, Level 3, it seems it's gone up. If your magic special skills level up then say something. Don't forget about it. Wind Magic, Level 2, Wind Cu..I mean, Air Cutter, I've been telling you to use it right. Void Magic, Level 4."

"A..Ah? {Status Open}..!! This is.."

"Hm~mm"

They've already started to show quite the impressed expressions.

They seem quite busy.

Miduchi is smiling a bit while watching that from the side.

Weren't you supposed to be acting a bit surprised, really~

"..Experience."

"Huh?"

"An? Ah."

"Eeeh!!?"

Even Miduchi made a surprised expression.

Since it's still too soon we already decided to keep quiet about experience after all.

I decided to play a joke since you were acting too calm.

Sorry.

"This is a lie. But there should still be something else. There's several unnatural empty boxes."

"Al-san" Well wait a moment, there's a bit more. Count Faruergaz Family, rise to power, Ronbato. Faruergaz was granted the title for raising funds for Rombert Kingdom when it was being founded. The current family head is Varisshu.Faruergaz the 20th generation."

While I was reading the sub-window about the Count Faruergaz family and Rodrick's eyes and mouth opened wide as his expression twisted in shock.

Is it really something that surprising?

In order to avoid it being doubted as unbelievable Miduchi and I decided to read this out to some extent but even this is something that you should be able to find out if you spend a bit of time investigating it. After all the household of Count Faruergaz is considerably famous in the Kingdom. Of course, it's troublesome, and in the first place since I have {Identify} I didn't investigate it.

It's hard to fully trust in them in regards to the ability values but I think this sort of information is worthy of believing in it.

There's no way I'd investigate it.

"A, umm, Al-san, were those words just now really..."

"Yeah. Though I was just reading the things written on it. It's not like I was just putting on airs as I said it after investigating it."

"What is it?"

Rodrick started thinking while looking at my face with a serious expression.

"Would everyone here right now please remain quiet about what they heard just now? If possible I'd be grateful if you could forget about it."

This fellow suddenly started saying something weird.

"If you're saying that then it's fine though. But it's not anything worth hiding right?"

Thinking it's strange I tried asking him and the reply was simple.

Officially the current head of the Count Faruergaz family is the 19th generation and the reason they were granted the title of Count was because of achievements they made in a war after the country was founded. The only ones who know this are the Rombert Royal Family, and those highest up in the line of succession of the Count's family, it seems it's a secret for those other than that.

According to Rodrick the founder of the Faruergaz family isn't Ronbato but his son named Kobisshu. Ronbato was praised for founding Rombert Kingdom together with George. Rombert the first in the past but a short while after his death it was discovered that he betrayed the Kingdom and was providing funds to Guranan Empire. Obviously the King was enraged and even considered dismantling the Faruergaz family. This scandal was forgiven because Kobisshu who was the head of the family at that time presented a massive amount of money to the royal family and ended up being buried in the darkness without becoming public.

The one who helped assist in that was a person called Marquis

Kuraveru, who is said to have been a loyal retainer during the founding of the Kingdom.

Simultaneously while he was aged quite a bit the King of Rombert,

George the First who was still on the throne didn't have a bad impression of him so Kobisshu declared, "The Faruergaz family starts again with my generation" and started naming himself as the founder of the "reborn" Faruergaz family. Just right for the timing he had made some decent achievements in the war so it's said they made use of those achievements to raise the family. After that, Kobisshu went about thoroughly erasing all records of his own father Ronbato and you can say he more or less succeeded at it.

However, it's still passed down through only oral instruction to the heads of the Count family and conveyed so that they know that Marquis Kuraveru put in quite a bit of effort to prevent them from being dismantled so they should do their best to serve his family and rerun the favor if they ever experience an emergency. Since he was the eldest son and in a position to inherit the head of the Count Faruergaz family, Rodrick was told about it when received investiture as a knight. After receiving permission and leaving his house, his little brother is supposedly number one in the line to inherit the main household so it seems he sealed away the memory.

After all one of the high ranking noble families that should have sworn loyalty to the Rombert Family having simultaneously sworn loyalty to another family within the Kingdom is far too bad for outer appearances.

It goes against the morals of nobles. Of course, it's not like there's any sort of law against things like that but it's still something that would be scorned against.

Incidentally, the family of Marquis Kuraveru has a decent size territory in the northern Royal Territory and it's built on considerably stable management so they've never even once fallen into any sort of emergency.

In any case, while I wasn't aiming for it thanks to me casually speaking about one of the top secrets of their family they were able to recognize the {Identification} spell as useful.

It was also big that I pointed out the increase in Rodrick's Fire Magic level.

About the details I discussed this time but what was new was confirming the numerical values of {Levels}, {Condition}, {Unique Abilities}, and the fact that I can confirm the levels of {Skills} with levels, just those four. {Age} and such isn't all that important. Also, what you can't forget about is that there's empty boxes and I hinted that there might be even more information. I'll keep an eye on things from here on out and it should be fine if I reveal it progressively.

Particularly the fact that I can confirm things related to {Unique Abilities} both Rodrick and Zenom were impressed by that. They must have think it will be an advantage in searching for reincarnated people with this.

"But, if you can only use it 5 times then it can only be used as the final confirmation on those who we've guessed are highly possible to be reincarnated people and are still trying to hide themselves or we can only use it gain final confirmation on things and such right."

Miduchi said in disappointment and closed things up.

It's in order to give the impression that it's not something I can use freely as I please.

Obviously Rodrick and Zenom both wanted to know the level of someone else. For the time being since they're here I said that Miduchi's level is 22 and Zenom's is 23 and Rodrick was depressed.

Me? I've only just reached level 31 but in the end I was forced to say it.

I was going to put my hand on Rodrick's shoulder and cheer him up as he started writing the character "no" on the ground but decided not to.

It would sound too sarcastic right. But, Zenom said,

"After all it seems it's easier to earn more experience by going to lower floors. Just like Al said previously it should be fine to think that there's something like experience points like unique abilities...Hey, Rodrick don't get so depressed. There's no choice but to give it your best right?"

And he put his hand on Rodrick's shoulder.

I reflexively met eyes with Miduchi.

Of course I'm sure Zenom didn't have even the slightest bad intentions.

Look, Rodrick's even started mumbling things like, "Even though I worked that hard.." with an expression like he's dead.

Chapter 292: Identify 2

Year 7447, Month 4, Day 12

After that it took quite a bit of effort to comfort the depressed Rodrick.

We discussed how to handle the spell of {Identification} but just as Miduchi pointed out, we came to the conclusion that it's only really useful for drawing a final conclusion in identifying if someone's a reincarnated person. Other than that is just using it as a reference point for the current abilities of the members in the {Slaughterers} and it's not like it's necessary to use it for that very often either.

Other than that there's the method of use that Miduchi and I expected from the start, using Identify on weapons, {Magic.Items}, and the various pieces of equipment. It's a simple way of putting it but we were thinking of using it for investigating the abilities. However, it seems that Rodrick and Zenom were too overwhelmed by learning about personal identification and finding out levels so they still haven't realized the possibility of using it to Identify items yet.

I'm keeping HP, MP, and the ability values hidden so I have no intention of revealing the durability or ability fields. There's still more things that I don't understand about them after all.

However, putting aside the manufacture date it's big that I can point out the {Effect} fields.

By the way, both Rodrick and Zenom said together that I should avoid revealing the fact that I've acquired the {Identification} spell for the present time.

"Even if you tell them it would be best if you keep it to just the reincarnated people I'm sure."

"I agree with Rodrick's opinion as well."

"I think it would be best if we tell everyone about it but..would you tell me the reason?"

Miduchi asked. She's intentionally speaking the opposite opinion to hear their thoughts.

"Hmph, it would probably be best if I say the reason."

"That's true. Zenom-san, I'll leave it to you."

"Previously, I've heard about it from Ralpa so I know it well and I don't really think anything much of it at this point but.."

According to Zenom the concept of body levels would be considerably difficult for pure Orth people that didn't reincarnate to accept.

Also, judging from the case of Rodrick just a moment ago. There will be a gap between the body levels of the original members of the {Slaughterers} and those in the {Butchers} and {Exterminators}. There's no way anyone would say things like it's unfair or complain about it at this point but it could invite subconscious impatience and lead to some unexpected dangers was the reason.

"We dispatch leaders in order to prevent that sort of reckless impatience you know?"

Miduchi said but that's exactly the case.

If it's just something like that then they should properly hold it back.

Even before that, while I'm sure everyone will be shocked just like Rodrick at first but I revealed it because I'm already confident that no one would get impatient over something like this if we just give them some time.

Even they're first-rate adventurers you know?

They should already know there's a single good thing about getting impatient in the dungeon.

"Of course I'm sure Toris, Bel, Zulu, and Maruso can hold them back..but.."

"Ral-san is.."

Ralpa huh...

If it's her then she might rile everyone up and suggest earning experience points to level up..No, that's not the case. She's already known about experience points and leveling up since several years back. It's just a matter of not knowing the number up until now but she already had that sort of knowledge.

After I pointed that out both Zenom and Rodrick started looking at my face in doubt.

"She's now able to learn the number of something she wasn't able to up until now. Just the same as magic skills she'll start desperately trying to increase it.."

"It's alright. The two of you should place a bit more faith in Ralpa..Though I guess that's a weird way of putting it. Even when it comes to magic she's doing a decent amount of training but it's not like she's putting all her efforts in just to raise the level of her skills. She's just putting in the efforts because that makes everyone safer."

Zenom you're the parent who raised her so don't say such mean things...

"I understand her the best. On top of that I'm saying it but there's no way that's the case. She's simply doing it because she was told by Al and because she wants to use new spells, nothing more."

Zenom shrugged his shoulders while asserting.

If her parent Zenom who declares he understands her the best says that then I can't say anything more.

"Zenom-san. Have you properly talked with Ral recently? Even if she's like she thinks about things quite a bit."

Miduchi provided some backup fire.

I agree with Miduchi's view as well. Even if she's like that I think she puts a good amount of thought into things.

However, for Miduchi to defend Ralpa...

"Even if you say that, Miduchi. Ral's had some places which she doesn't think about since the past. She's already 19, no in reality I guess she's close to 40? That's the part that I'm worried about.."

I guess to her parent Zenom she'll always be a child.

Well it's fine.

"Got it. Then Toris and Bel, also let's discuss it with Zulu and Angela just in case I guess. Let's think about it once more after hearing their opinions. Shall we head to Boil Manor then.."

I said that before standing up.

.....

We picked up Zulu and Angela from Shuni and then returned to Boil Manor to discuss it with Toris and Bel as well.

After discussing it all four of them wanted to know their own body level just the same as Rodrick but even if I give my best I can only use it one more time so I had them give up telling them it would be too hard in terms of mana today if I don't take a break.

"After tomorrow..I guess so, when we're resting after we arrive on the 7th or 8th floors, we're relying on you when you have spare mana leftover."

I intended on telling you in order so there's no reason to hurry so much right.

I was about to say that but Zenom said the same thing.

However, Zenom already knows his level so even if he leisurely says something like that they argued back with him.

Though I don't think it's information that they need to know in that much of a hurry.

It's not like anything changes just by knowing it either.

Higher than that fellow? even if you know you're above or below someone else so what?

Well, the only ones who know that levels and ability values can't really be counted is myself and Miduchi who I've discussed it with so I guess it's similar to the mental state of a student who wants to know the test results of those around them.

But you know, even if you're placed 50,000 out of the 100,000 total in the country, in reality there might be plus/minus of 40,000 or so, or at least I think there's that much room for measurement errors.

I guess as expected that's saying too much huh?

However, in this case I still think there's several 10,000s in potential difference.

It's weird saying this but because I have {Gift of Natural Talent}

I have over 3,300,000 in experience points.

However, if we were to cut that down to 1/3rd, putting aside

Rodrick, my level would be even lower than Zenom and Miduchi.

If we were to compare the number of monsters we've directly defeated I'm pretty sure I've killed less.

Recently, the number of chances for me to directly defeat monsters has decreased after all~

Well, putting aside that sort of useless talk, in conclusion even here the opinions were split in half.

Toris said, "Since it's the result of experiencing various painful things earning experience points up until now after all." and claimed that it would be best to tell everyone, Bel's opinion was that there's no need to tell them right now. Zulu and Angela both said, "However master pleases", the usual opinion without a lack of self-assertion that can't even be called an opinion. After pointing that out and they even said, "I don't think our opinions would be useful even if we were to mention our thoughts."

When I said even that's fine so let me hear it and Zulu said, "Well then, while it's truly presumptuous of me but.." with that sort of preface before finally speaking.

"If what master calls the "body level" is the same as the levels of magic then I'm sure the higher it is the more useful everyone would be to master. I remember it being discussed previously so I think it's something similar and while I don't have much confidence in it I remember a feeling that might be the so-called leveling up...If you can understand that in terms of numbers just like with magic then I'm sure it's something good but.."

After saying up there he went silent for a bit as if he got stuck.

Then almost as if taking off from there this time Angela started speaking with a bit of restraint.

"I'm sure it's not just good things. For example, Henry and Mekku have their origin as knights. Appropriate for that they can both fight considerably well. While they won't specifically put it in words I'm sure they have a decent amount of pride as well. However, it's just a guess but since we've spent more time in the dungeon since a while back, I think that the body levels of both Zulu-sama and myself would be higher."

In other words, she wants to say don't say it?

"Certainly that's one way of thinking about it as well. Maruso sure is kind."

Miduchi said.

"No, madam, that's not.."

Angela said a bit shyly as if it was embarrassing.

"But, Maruso, in reality you want to say this right? Even if we say they've gone to the 1st, 2nd, and recently the 6th and 7th floors, there should be a reasonable amount of space between the levels of Kamu-san and the others just like between Rodrick and myself."

"Ha, well.."

From Angela's point of view she's on the side of receiving challenges for the member change matches so there's a level gap between them, though I think the one who appeals that in advance would have the advantage. But, I'm sure Angela and Zulu wouldn't think of something like that. Whether their level is high or low they should be a useful combat force for me and they think the one that's the most useful should be the member of the {Slaughterers}. It's just a matter of them being happy if that's themselves and if there's someone more skilled than them they think it can't be helped if they're switched out. They're really model cases of slaves.

"But, it's a result of all your efforts up until now so I still think it would be best to properly tell them but.."

After hearing the discussion up until now Toris advocated his own opinion once again.

It could also be said that if we give them time and they calmly think about it, it could be material to inspire them.

That way of thinking makes sense as well.

I strongly felt that way as well.

Though it's not just about that.

But if I were to say my thoughts on it then that might decide it all.

However, it seems no one is willing to yield on it~

Though it's not a bad thing to push forward with your own opinion.

It's a point that's honestly worth admiration that even then the mood shows no signs of turning bad.

But, I wish someone would just realize it already.

I guess there's no choice other than exchanging looks with Miduchi...

"Ah!! That's right!"

Rodrick shouted with a slightly loud voice and got everyone's attention.

"Let's put aside things in regards to body level for a while. Since there's no difference even if you know about it after all. You could also say it's just a matter of readiness from here on out as well. Al-san, just once more, you said you could use that magic right? That, if you use it on items what happens?"

Hearing Rodrick's words everyone's attention went to me.

I was a bit relieved that someone finally realized it.

This time, body level was a bonus.

Of course it's extremely important that I can confirm both Unique Abilities and the levels of magic but they're just a bonus.

"Of course, I can find out various things. I can still use it once more time so let's try it out. Toris, bring out your chainmail."

Toris went to pickup his armor from their room in a hurry. During that time I told them that I've already identified Miduchi's sword and we were able to confirm that it has 4 special effects.

I explained it to Toris after he came back while pretending to the use {Identification} spell on his chainmail. Everyone was shocked when they heard it has six special effects, even more than Miduchi's {Blade.Of.Dyurou}.

"Even things like this..If you already knew then please say that from the start."

Toris complained about it but was rebuked by Bel.

"It's our fault for not noticing it right away. That I couldn't think of it until Rodrick mentioned it...Alright? The magic of {Identification} is useful. But, it can't be used all that often.

We should have noticed such a useful method of using it right away.

Something like finding out their body level from identifying people or confirming whether they have a Unique Ability or not, that's certainly important but we need to be able to instantly realize the even more important aspects."

"..Certainly that's right. I'm sorry, Al-san. I complained about something stupid. This is a simulation right? Whether we can immediately analyze information we've been given and select the ideal methods..Shit, I can't let my guard down."

"Well, it's not anything as exaggerated as that though. But, putting aside Toris and Bel who heard about it afterwards, I wish Rodrick and Zenom would have realized it a bit sooner."

I said while making a bitter smile.

"..I guess that's true. If it's put like that then certainly. I was a bit too excited that we can find out things like levels and skills in detail. I must have been too overdependent on AI."

Zenom said with his arms crossed while looking at Toris's armor.

And then,

"It's a bit strange for me to say it but every depends too much on AI. We rely too much on him."

and closed things up with that.

Well, it helps when you say things like that.

Even in my case I have intention of dying that easily from here on out but there's still the worst case possibility.

Right now the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} are more often still challenging the dungeon without me.

If I were to die and yes, that's all there is too, then it would be a bit sad right.

Putting aside bad omens like things about me dying, I want everyone to build up a habit of analyzing information they've obtained from various viewpoints.

Also, just as Zenom said there's still quite a bit of overdependence.

It's good that they've built up a reasonable amount of confidence but it's still clear that in the end they're conscious of the fact that I'm behind them.

"And, what should we do? Should we tell everyone? Or otherwise remain quiet for a while longer?"

In the end we decided to tell everyone about it.

However, that's just for the members of the {Slaughterers} that lead the way into the dungeon.

If anyone enters as a result of the member change matches then obviously I'll tell them.

By the way, when I told everyone how it's annoying that there's two meanings to the single saying of {Slaughterers} they agreed. I want to think of a different name for the former {Slaughterers} that take the lead in the dungeon. Tonight, while we're all having dinner together I'll bring it up and have them think about it for a night.

Tomorrow morning, we'll discuss it when we all go to the dungeon and decide on one.

Honestly speaking I never really liked such a violent name like the {Slaughterers} from the start. Now I've already gotten used to it and it's spoken so often that I don't have any conscious thoughts about it all though still.

.....

Year 7447, Month 4, Day 13

In regards to the matter of names but my idea was to follow the naming of a legendary group of adventurers that managed to defeat a blue dragon in the past and go with, "{Blue.Flame}".

And then Ralpa said I have "bad sense".

I mean, ones like {Verdure.Brotherhood} and {Black.Topaz} they all have colors in the name right.

Even {Blue.Flame} magnificently managed to defeat a blue dragon you know.

But, in the end everyone rejected it together.

Then when I tried asking what about you and it was,

"{Butterfly.Orchid}".

Something like the name of a flower it's just like a second-rate party from somewhere and she had bad sense.

Though the butterfly orchid is extravagant and beautiful so I like it as well.

Zenom came up with the idea of "100 Year Dream" and bought the admiration of most of the members including me.

However, when Basutorial retorted, "That, it's the name of the premium vodka you bought the other day right?" and his triumphant face turned bright red.

That Basutorial teamed up with Zulu and Angela to suggest {Slayers} which was the exact same idea I came up with in the past as a replacement for {Sooner}.

There were quite a few approvals for it but after all such a violent name isn't to my liking.

It's rejected, rejected.

Gwine came up with the name "{Snow.White}" but it's too cute so rejected.

Giberuti came up with the name "{Greed.Army}" and earned great praise from Zulu and Angela but it was too unpopular with everyone else.

Miduchi came up with the highest number of names.

"{Annihilators}"

"{Black.Lightning}"

Ones around here were a bit disappointing.

"{Golden.Dawn}"

"{Flare.Braver}"

I can still understand ones up to here.

"Mighty Warrior(Samurai Master)"

"Summit of Justice Power(Grand Slam)"

They gradually stopped making any sense and along with that Miduchi gradually got more excited so I rejected them all at once. Written Mighty Warrior and read as Samurai Master or just the same Grand Slam was supposed to have a meaning of complete domination or something like that but I have no idea what she was talking about in regards to Summit of Justice Power.

Among those, there was the name "{Saviors}".

Incidentally, it was Toris and Bel who came up with this name.

I wonder if the two of them were thinking of the type of name I'd like?

Supposedly they came up with it because we seem to save people in the dungeon pretty often.

{Saviors}...

Umu.

{Saviors} huh?

Don't you think it's a perfect fit for me to be leading them?

In the end, the former {Slaughterers} newly decided name was the {Saviors}.

.....

Year 7447, Month 4, Day 14

"Hey, is it already no good? For sure? Is it impossible for me?"

Ralpa is looking at me with expectation in her eyes. This is the teleport crystal room on the 8th floor.

After saying they want me to reserve my mana for using identify, everyone fought even more carefully and boldly than usual.

Starting with Toris, even Ralpa and Gwine used their mana to the very limit to finish off monsters with attack spells.

"That's already it for today. Tomorrow okay."

This time I dispatched Bel and Angela so I already used Identify on the two of them and told them the details yesterday morning when we decided on the {Saviors} as our party name. Though I can identify items as well, after all they were still curious about their body level.

And then when reached the point of taking a break in the teleport room of the 8th floor everyone said to use Identify with my remaining mana. I used Identify on Toris, Gwine, and Basutorial for today. Toris and Gwine are level 20 and Basutorial is 18.

Furthermore, they decided on the order for being identified by drawing lots.

"Che~ it can't be helped..But Bel was 20 and Maruso was 21 right?

And, father is 23 and Miduchi is 22 right? Then it should be fine to hope for mine to be around 22 right?"

..Yours isn't all that different from Bel. It's 20.

Aside from Zenom who already had a large difference in experience points from the start there's no way you'd reach Miduchi and my slaves who have been putting in so much effort in the dungeon even on days off since the past.

Obviously, I ended up(pretended to) using identify on everyone's level and magic items while were in the dungeon this time

The only thing that was impossible was Bel's {Shortsword.Of.Sturdy} or so because she's not with us this time.

Chapter 293: Replacement Match

Year 7447, Month 4, Day 15

In the end in regards to the guardian of the 9th floor the mino we decided to continue using the net gun only when we fight against it ahead on when going back in. We haven't done the replacement matches yet. Those minos with superior skill probably aren't mixed in but after all I'm still a bit worried. Miduchi, Zenom, and Toris didn't say anything either.

After that we spent our time going into the 10th floor and attacking the minos on the 9th floor from behind to defeat them.

The matter of interest everyone has their mind on is the next Monday after we leave the dungeon, the replacement matches that start on the 19th.

"Saji, Zulu. What about you two? Are you confident?"

Toris asked Basutorial and Zulu. This time I dispatched Angela to the {Exterminators} so these two are the target of discussion.

"What are you saying, Toris-san. Isn't it only obvious that everything's fine? Didn't you see how I just finished off that {Great Troll}!?"

"Even if I were to be challenged it's just a matter of properly doing everything I can. There's no need for worry."

Basutorial said full of confidence and Zulu replied with indifference. Certainly Basutorial's gotten more used to fighting against ogres and trolls since the replacement match last time and can be seen with the same feelings as the other members. He's no longer on edge all the time like in the past and not as excessively cautious either.

Zulu's just the same as always in only focusing on putting his all into accomplishing his job. Those who properly do what they need to do aren't disturbed so easily and you can tell while he might find it regretful if he loses, he'll just think it can't be helped and work even harder to flip things over again next time. Even from my point of view they don't seem like they'll be defeated all that easily right now. I think it's become a pretty big wall.

"Putting that aside, Al, you still properly have some mana remaining right? Hurry up and look at it."

Ralpa asked me.

Really this fellow...

"Yeah, you're level 2."

"Eeh!!? No way!!?level..2..that.. can't be.."

Her eyes are wide open as she seems to be considerably shocked.

"There's no way that's the case right, idiot. In the first place he replied immediately. It's not like he can activate it in this short of a time."

Toris said with a bitter smile while shaking his head. Both Zenom and Gwine were making slightly amazed expressions as if wondering why Ralpa didn't realize it right away. Up until yesterday I spent more than 20 minutes each time I used it.

In order to really activate the spell {Shine.Light.Eyes} instantaneously it's probably impossible unless I use it another

1,000 times or so. Even if I were to put in the effort and exhaust all of my mana several times on a daily basis like I did in the past it would take several months.

"Ku..you.."

It seems she only realized it after she was told.

She seems considerably embarrassed but she's just glaring at me with a mortified expression.

"Just stop teasing her already. Isn't she pitiful?"

Miduchi told me off with an amazed tone.

Ralpa was looking at me with such an expectant look and spoke to me in that cheeky way so it was just a bit of teasing.

After that, in the end she heard level 20 and made a slightly relieved face but it seems she was still a bit mortified. And, while I say that, putting aside Zenom, it's more in comparison to Miduchi and Angela who she already knows she's lower level than.

On this day I also identified Zulu and Giberuti's level. Zulu was level 21 and Giberuti was level 6.

Starting tomorrow I need to identify the {Magic.Items}.

.....

Year 7447, Month 4, Day 19

This time there was obviously an increase in the number of people who passed the first stamina test.

Following last time there's the Kamu and Kimu pair.

They easily cleared it.

Then there's the three person group of Ginger, Misu, and Jeru which barely missed it last time.

Misu ended up slowing them down again but because she didn't slow them down as much compared to last time and Ginger and Jeru increased their times quite a bit they were able to clear it with some leeway.

And then there's Binsu who challenged it alone.

It was a pass at the very last second but it's still pretty impressive.

What was unexpected was Rokko and Kevin's group.

Kevin was close to 15 minutes behind the time limit but because Rokko showed off some absurd speed in the end they were barely able to make the passing line. Rokko's good walking speed even surpassed Miduchi's when we were determining the times.

This fellow sure is amazing.

Honestly speaking it's something I've thought since before.

If Rokko were to just pass the stamina test then other than Miduchi, Zenom, myself, and barely Ralpa would be the only ones who he wouldn't be able to defeat if he were to challenge alone.

Since they have magic then he might also lose to Toris and Bel in a quick match but that's only if they don't need to worry about mana recovery, if things were to be drawn out a bit then he still surpasses them in a number of ways.

Of course there's also a number of areas where he loses to them as well.

He's a bit of a half-assed and has a devil-may-care attitude. He appears to be idiotic and easily get carried away. However, his skills built up leading the front as the {Assault.Vanguard} in {Sun.Ray} for many years are real.

His age is just starting to pass his prime as an adventurer at 31 years old.

It's about time for his ability values to enter the descent but right now is also the period where each of them are at their highest.

It's unfortunate that his weapon is a long sword so he's a bit lacking in decisive force.

Also, if he were to take a single solid hit that would be the end for him.

As expected I'm sure things would be difficult for him alone. The order of making challenges is decided based on this first test.

I said it last time but they can't challenge the same person. Even if the person who receives the challenge manages to fend off the first challenger, the runner-up still can't challenge the same person.

It's a test which runs over an entire day and rest is also necessary so I had them restrain from consecutive battles.

Since I'm sure the strategy and pacing will change based on the opponent there's no point to applying the results of one match to the other opponents either. If they have any complaints then they'll just have to raise their ranking in the first test.

Kamu and Kimu obviously declared that they would be challenging Basutorial and Angela.

Basutorial and Angela were already prepared for it from the start so they didn't show any disturbance.

If this was Rokko and Kevin then I think they'd have the highest chance of an upset...

Though I say that, I think it's still the pair that has the highest chance of an upset.

Ginger's three person group challenged Zulu, Toris, and Ralpha.

They must have avoided Bel and Miduchi because they can skillfully use the bow and have magic as well.

The three on the side of receiving the challenge all had expressions as if they'd lend them their chests.

If anyone let's their guard down and takes an attack from an ogre then Toris and Ralpa's mana runs out from healing then it's possible.

Binsu hesitated for quite a bit but between Bel and Miduchi seems to have thought that Bel would be easier to deal with.

It seems that challenging Zenom wasn't even worth taking into consideration from the start.

Bel accepted the challenge with no expression.

I'm sure things will be difficult on this end.

And then Rokko and Kevin threw down their challenge letter to Zenom and Miduchi.

There was a bit of an atmosphere of self-abandonment but they were the only ones left after all.

This side I can assert with full confidence.

There's no chance of an upset.

Tomorrow and the next day everyone will get plenty of rest to get rid of the fatigue and then three days later, the second test starts from the 21st.

This time even though we're going to the 7th floor since there's the challengers, guards, and observers we'll be going with everyone from the {Slaughterers}. Of course, we can't all stay together so it's necessary to split up the parties until the teleport room on the 6th floor. I made it so that those being challenged and the challengers aren't in the same group and split everyone into 8 people per party.

I left leading each of the parties to Toris and Miduchi. Gwine who's excluded from being challenged as a special case is together with Toris's party while Giberuti and Hisu are in Miduchi's party.

In my party is Sanno, Ruttsu, Rodrick and his two combat slaves, along with my four combat slaves as we head towards the teleport room of the 6th floor. Putting aside the 5th floor, it's the first time for a lot of them to experience the 6th floor. If they aren't put together with me then who could manage them right. Looking at it like this and everyone from the {Butchers} obtained the challenge right.

.....

Year 7447, Month 4, Day 27

We finished the second test and it was just around noon when we returned from the dungeon.

The second test was performed over a period of four days but we still don't know all of the results.

All of the magic stones obtained are still in each of their bags and I haven't seen them either so we really won't know until we cash them in at the magic tool store. For guard and observation purposes while I accompanied several of the teams for the test, it was just one side and I was only able to watch for about half a day after all.

There's only one group which the results are already known. Just Binsu who ended up being hit in the back by an ogre's club a few hours after the test started. The magic stones he obtained up until then was 1 from an ogre and 3 from goblins so as expected there's no way Bel would lose to him.

It seems everyone is greatly interested. This time while we met up at the 6th and 3rd floors on the return, as expected just like last time each of the groups gathered together and started whispering to each other, since it would be boring to figure out the results partway through I put a gag order on it until the tests all are complete and we finish selling the magic stones to know the complete results.

Of course I let them talk freely about things unrelated to the tests. Particularly Sanno, Ruttsu, Rodrick, and his combat slaves it was their first time seeing ogres so they couldn't hide their excitement.

"Then shall we go and cash them in?"

Leading along a large group we head towards the usual magic tool shop Danhiru. The only ones entering the shop are myself and 1 representative of each group. It's considerably small after all.

First off we cashed in all of the magic stones we obtained on the way into the 6th floor. So they can't be falsified when they're gathering them, each of the parties were properly doing joint management of them. As long as you don't fuse the magic stones together the date they were gathered can be confirmed on them but that can only be determined using my {Identify} after all.

After that we finally reached the point of selling each of the magic stones for determining the test results.

It should be fine to start with the challengers side first. The bag of Kamu and Kimu's group that were at the top of the ranking.

"{Status Open}..Hmm. 7 magic stones from ogres and 10, no 11 from goblins huh...In total that'll be 5,902,200 Z."

The words of the old man from Danhiru spoke echoed through the strangely quiet store interior.

I accompanied their group for half a day as guard and observer as well. As expected guarding and observing for an entire day consecutively is impossible. While I was still watching them they would carefully set their aims on just 1 ogre and then definitely defeat it with the 2 of them. Their combat was completely stable with no danger.

But, for them to obtain a total of 7 they must have put in quite a bit of effort.

I accompanied them for half a day from 12:00 midnight on the first day until noon of the next day but they must have been tired after exploring for a day, they teleported into the 7th floor after a short 5 hours or so of rest without even taking a shower.

They especially put emphasis on the fact that they would fundamentally be eating the bento that they had Giberuti make while moving.

While making an effort to not look at Basutorial's face behind me, I concentrated on the hands of the old man from Danhiru.

Next up is Ginger and the other's group. I never saw this one.

The number of magic stones they obtained from ogres was amazingly 11 of them! There were 18 from goblins.

The total was determined to be 9,284,500 Z.

I can hear a number of sighs.

Ginger let out a cough while holding the empty bag.

And then Binsu. I just mentioned it but it can't be helped.

The total was 833,600 Z.

Don't get so depressed. You were alone so it really can't be helped. Luck is important too.

Finally was Rokko and Kevin. I was watching but after all they were quite impressive.

They obtained 9 magic stones from ogres and 14 from goblins.

Of all things they obtained even more than Kamu's group.

Rokko's face as he took a step forward from my side looked somewhat proud.

The total was 7,536,800 Z.

I can hear some pretty surprised voices.

"He~ We never even slept."

Go to sleep!

Now then, next is finally the magic stones of the side being challenged.

First off is Zenom and Miduchi.

I wonder how things will turn out?

Zenom casually flipped the bag upside down.

A bunch of magic stones rolled out.

The number, 21 of them. Not a single one from goblins.

Without even needing to wait for the estimate there's no room to doubt their victory.

Rokko's jaw fell so far I thought it might reach the floor.

"We only slept for 3 hours after all."

Oh my~ so that's why there were so many. Zenom sure is rough at handling people~ No wonder Miduchi was grumbling about it being

"bad for the skin".

And then, Bel.

She's still expressionless like a Noh mask as usual as she took a step forward and casually flipped her bag over too.

7 of them huh? There's no goblin magic stones in Bel's results either.

There's no need to wait for the estimate on this side either.

It's believed that Bel periodically used {Detect.Life} and efficiently hunted down lone ogres before finishing them off. And then, magic and her bow, even if it comes down to close combat she should have been able to finish things off all at once by relying on her {Shortsword.Of.Sturdy}.

"7 of them alone huh.."

Kamu grumbled to herself.

Next up obviously Toris took a step forward.

Just as expected from how punctual he is he carefully took out the magic stones one at a time.

The number was 19 magic stones from ogres. There appears to be over 30 from goblins as well.

There's not much meaning in waiting for the purchase price on this end either.

Ralpa used almost all of her mana on {Detect.Life}.

These guys, when they ended up finding 3 ogres together Ralpa said, "Since we happened to come across them" and still went to fight them.

Additionally, they didn't even return to the teleport room on the 6th floor and boldly camped out in a hallway of the 7th floor.

I ended up feeling nervous about it.

"Ku..."

I could hear Ginger let out a groan.

Last up is finally Basutorial.

His face has turned pale.

Hey, it can't be!?

But, it's possible.

Basutorial put his hand in the bag and started taking out magic stones.

Chapter 294: Surprising?

Year 7447, Month 4, Day 27

Basutorial first took out the magic stones from goblins.

The number was 8.

Since they're low-value magic stones from goblins it's almost like a measurement error so they aren't a big problem.

And then next he took out the magic stones from the ogres.

After that first day of the test there hasn't been anything different about either Basutorial or Angela.

That's why they should have obtained a decent number of them.

One.

Two.

Three...

With an uneasy expression still on his face he carefully took out one at a time, the total amount was 7 of them.

..This is also..Somewhat difficult...

If I remember right Kamu and Kimu's record was 5,902,200 Z.

So the match is decided by the magic stones from goblins

huh...

In any case, the purchase price that the old man from Danhiru puts on them is everything.

If it's with my {Identify} then I can quickly calculate the results and as a matter of fact I immediately did the mental math so I already know the result.

However, while it's only slight there's some measurement error using the magic tool scale.

Even that measurement error is a part of the match.

...

.....

The old man of Danhiru was using a wide abacus to do the math. To me it's something that's not very easy to use even if you're used to it. That's why I made a Japanese-style abacus and normally use that one. It's a compact one with only 12 rows but after all the Japanese-style one is easy to use right. Since I didn't have any bamboo it was somewhat difficult making it. In my past life, it was a technique that I learned when I was still a brat but I guess it's something you remember with your body.

In the 50s of the Showa period(TL: 1970-1980) it wasn't strange for a brat to attend sentence structure and abacus classes at all. Out of a class of over 40 elementary schoolers roughly half of them attended one or the other.

The old man of Danhiru moved the various stones up and down before finishing his calculations.

"7 ogre magic stones and 8 goblin magic stones huh...In total that'll be 5,902,200 Z."

Voice of Oh~ were raised everywhere.

It's exactly the same amount.

The magic stone from an ogre that Basutoral brought out was only a bit higher than the ones Kamu brought out.

It was enough that the magic stones from goblins were able to make up for it.

"The same.."

I unintentionally whispered out loud as well.

I can tell that the attention of everyone who was peeking at the counter of magic tool shop Danhiru switched over to me.

As expected the same amount was beyond my imagination.

In the case that Basutoral and Angela won or in the case that Kamu and Kimu won.

Though they were slightly different based on the difference I had ideas in the case that either side won.

Of course it wouldn't be all that different even if Basutorial and Angela won.

Just, I was thinking that even if Kamu and Kimu lost and it was a close difference(as a matter of fact I thought it would be the difference of 1 or 2 ogre magic stones) then it would be fine for Kamu and Kimu to occasionally accompany the {Slaughterers}, now {Saviors} in order to earn experience.

If it was the opposite of that where Kamu and Kimu won then I would make Angela a fixed leader of the {Butchers} and have Basutorial act as her assistant.

Still I didn't think that it would be determined as the exact same amount.

If there's no mistakes with the abacus in my brain then there should of been a difference of 12 value in the magic stones with Basutorial's side having been higher.

Though if you convert that into the sales price it's a small amount that doesn't even reach 100 Z.

"Everyone gather at Murowa after this."

I said before turning around and leaving.

Basutorial was to my side with a pale face and completely covered in a cold sweat as he looked at me with a crying smile.

I tried to remain expressionless but couldn't help but make a bitter smile.

Bel sure is amazing being able to completely erase her expression.

After leaving the store everyone was gathered and waiting outside.

They must have wanted to hear the results even just a bit sooner.

Angela who was making a worried expression couldn't seem to come to a conclusion from comparing Basutorial's and my expressions.

I smiled and looked at Angela.

Angela closed her eyes and looked down for a bit before raising her face.

It's the good smile that I've occasionally seen recently.

Everyone who came after me was standing in front of me.

Basutorial still has a pale face.

It's not all that much but as expected Kamu appears a bit tense as well. Also Kimu.

She must have been confident, Miduchi has her usual calm expression on.

Kevin's already made a face as if he's given up but can't hide having some hope.

Jeru and Misu who are holding their heads up in expectation.

It seems they were able to imagine the results after seeing Ginger's expression.

Ralpa's eating balddogie at a time like this as usual.

Zulu seems to have guessed the results after seeing Toris's expression as well.

Other than that, there's the other members who ended up not making the cutoff for the first test but came along as guards for the second exam and still don't know what the results are.

"Congratulations, Kamu, Kimu. Also, Basutorial and Angela. It was the same amount after all so all four of you are {Saviors}."

After I declared that things got noisy all at once.

"After that, Ginger, Jeru, Misu. You were close. It was unfortunate for you too Binsu. Rokko and Kevin..you ended up with a bad opponent."

Since things seemed like they were going to get even more noisy I continued with one more statement.

"Kamu and Kimu don't relax too much? Don't forget that next time you'll be on the side to receive challenges."

After I said that, the expressions changed of all the other members who seemed to have completely forgotten.

"Then everyone let's go to Murowa. Let's have lunch while discussing our organization from here on out."

.....

I decided that the new organization of the {Slaughterers} would be just as follows.

First off, the {Saviors}. Fundamentally I'm the leader. We're primarily in charge of the front-lines of the dungeon, the lower floors. And then, putting aside the porter Giberuti as different, there's a total of 12 combat members including Kamu and Kimu who joined this time.

Of course, it's not possible for all of us to teleport at once so at least 2 people and if possible 3 should always be dispatched to other parties. It should end up close to a fixed rotation of the members excluding Gwine as usual.

Next up is the {Butchers}. They could be considered the main force as a normal adventurer party as they have enough skill to pass through the 6th floor of the dungeon. Though in the {Slaughterers} they're in charge of the middle floors. This time 2 people are being taken from here so if things were left just like that they'd lose a bit of their battle lineup.

Therefore it's necessary compensate for that but since the archer {Blast.Back} Kamu and spear-user {Attacker} Kimu are being taken out this time, I had Ginger and Hisu switch parties with the meaning of them supplementing that since they have the same positions.

The organization will be Ginger, Rokko, Kevin, Jeru, Misu, Binsu, Hisu, Henry, and Rubi, the 9 of them and then one member of the {Saviors} will be dispatched as the leader.

And then the {Exterminators}. They don't quite reach the level of a first-rate adventurer party but their strength is plenty to see as between first and second-rate, and they've started to build up some actual results. They're in charge of the upper floors down to the 4th floor. This time with Ginger and Hisu being taken out their combat strength is expected to have a considerable decrease.

The fixed members are Sanno, Ruttsu, Rodrick, Denda, Karimu, Mekku, and Jesu, the 7 of them.

If it's possible then I'd like to dispatch 2 people from the {Saviors} to their end. I guess I should take into consideration buying another 1 or 2 combat slaves. I'm already more than half planning to do that.

And then, the greatly anticipated Golden Week announcement.

Either tomorrow or the day after that a caravan should come from Bakuddo. It's possible they've already arrived yesterday or today and it wouldn't be strange for them to be waiting at Boil Manor.

Also, if possible I'd like to stop by Sandak Company and hear what the situation is with that one amulet as well. Furthermore, I want to go and visit Tukerin's place and discuss things in regards to the preservatives and I obviously can't leave Greed Company alone either. Of course, there's no forgetting about heading to Mila-shisho's place as well.

I announced that starting today until the 5th of next month is a holiday, then on the 6th we'll have group training, and we'll head back into the dungeon again from the 7th.

Also, at the same time I specially gave all of the members excluding my combat slaves a present of 2% of the magic stone sales we earned this time, the usual compensation amount for the {Saviors}, rounded to 1,360,000 Z per person of the roughly 68,000,000 Z. I gave it to 21 people so around 29,000,000 or so disappeared in bonuses.

Here Kevin gave Rodrick an envious look as he accepted the portion for Denda and Karimu as well.

"Maybe I should buy some combat slaves as well..If they have at least Henry's level of skill then they'd be pretty useful after all."

Of course I don't mind.

If they work properly then I'll pay for that portion as well.

"Kevin, really you~ just think about it for a moment. It's pretty troublesome even just feeding slaves you know? If it's a combat slave then they need at least a somewhat decent place to get rest so it's best to let them stay in a place on the Shuni-class like where I'm staying, and you need to properly feed them as well. Also you have to pay them wages and it costs money to prepare equipment for them as well you know?"

Kimu said as if Kevin as a fool.

Certainly that's true.

There's also quite a few other things you need to be careful about as well.

"Ha ha..Well the expenses certainly do tend to pile up to a decent amount. Even Denda and Karimu require a reasonable amount every month even if I don't have them doing anything."

Rodrick said with a bit of reservation.

This time we only entered combat on the way down and were just acting as guards and observers for those taking the test so I wonder if he feels sorry for receiving the same cut?

Although, what Rodrick was saying is just right and using the Henry that Kevin mentioned as an example, it costs 60,000 Z every month in inn costs with breakfast and dinner costing even more than that.

Though this is also because I didn't put any limits on them. Other than that I'm also paying him about 200,000 a month in wages. It's questionable if someone part of a normal adventurer party that earns primarily from bosses on the 1st floor would even be able to earn that amount every month. Thanks to the fact that I'm spending as much as a full-fledged adventurer on him Henry's performance in the dungeon doesn't fall but if my treatment was bad and their inn and food were of a lower rank, I'm sure the combat slave wouldn't be able to show their full power.

"Also if they were to die then that's the end of it.."

Misu joined in on the conversation.

"Since Henry was originally a knight he supposedly cost 20,000,000 and it even cost quite a bit for his equipment you know?"

Hearing that Kevin made a face like he understood. Rokko was quietly listening beside him while seeming to do the math on the table with his finger. And then he slowly started talking.

"Fu..Kevin, listen well. Recently we've been earning close to 2,000,000 every month. It should be over 1,900,000. "Aberaging" that out since we entered this year and it's 2,100,000."

A ? appeared over the heads of everyone who heard that. If it's "close" to 2,000,000 every month then there's no reason the average would exceed 2,000,000. Well, in reality ever since we entered this year when Zenom is commanding the {Butchers} they've been able to obtain some magic stones from ogres so they should certainly be earning an average of around that much. But, I still felt a bit relieved that this guy wasn't able to win the replacement match.

"Then you subtract 400,000 from there for your own living expenses. The remaining amount is 1,700,000. If you were to buy a combat slave on the level of Henry then it would take roughly 1 year. It's necessary to think about the equipment as well, but well, it should be fine."

That much should be correct. Though 400,000 in living expenses per month is the lowest class for a first-rate adventurer and on the level of a second-rate adventurer.

Well, it should have been about that for them while they were a part of {Sun.Ray}.

"1 year later you purchase a combat slave. If you were to do that then the amount of money you can use is..subtract 400,000 and 200,000 from double 2,100,000, so 3,600,000. However, for the 1 year up until then you can't really spend on luxury, if you were to go to {Honey Collection} then you'd end up with even more deductions. After that, you'd have to continue enduring the same sort of lifestyle for a further 6 months before you'd finally be able to recover the portion that you spent to buy the combat slave. If you're fine with that's how you spend your final year in your 20s then I won't say anything more though."

Really other than the first part it was all surprisingly correct.

Additionally the fact that it was a pretty logical and well-organized explanation shocked everyone including myself. "Alright? If you spend a full year and a half giving it your best in the dungeon then you'll finally earn some profit from it. If you were to die before that then it's all for nothing and even if it all goes well just watch and see if the slave dies half a year after that. If it comes to that then I'd have to start calling you an idiot."

Rokko closed things up with an expression as if he was completely making a fool of Kevin.

Hm~~m.

I have to wonder about using a former knight like Henry as an example for the combat slave but in the first place it was the request of Kevin so that much should be fine.

But, for that Rokko to...

Kevin is at such a loss for words all he can do is stare at Rokko's face.

"Rokko, you, did you eat anything strange?"

Ginger said with a surprised face.

"An? Anything strange, you mean this?"

Rokko made a lewd face while running his forked-tongue over a baldoggie with lemon grass spices on it as he replied to Ginger.

Ginger yelled "Die!" before starting a different conversation with Hisu.

"Jeru, did you understand what Rokko said just now?"

Misu asked Jeru at a table a bit of distance away.

"Yeah, I understood it. It's only obvious right?"

Jeru casually replied. Misu made a satisfied expression as well.

"Then, tonight explain to me how different it is if we were to go to the {Saviors} rather than just staying in the {Butchers}.

Convert everything other than money into money as well."

"Ah~ I think I can properly explain it..all?"

Ah, I want to try listening to that as well.

But why was it a question? I guess he's still not that confident?

.....

After having lunch we returned to our inn.

I had a shower and changed clothes, then as I was returning after depositing money in my locker at the shrine it was just as the caravan from Bakuddo was arriving. This time the one leading the caravan was surprisingly the head squire, Sean.

Miduchi was having a good conversation with him.

He's saying that they'll stay one night in Baldukk before heading towards the capital tomorrow morning.

There's no real reason for me to refuse.

Since the {Slaughterers} are just starting a long holiday I'm sure a number of members will want to come along to the capital.

Ralpha, Gwine, and Basutorial have already packed up a change of clothes and should be jumping on the passenger carriage to the capital about now.

After being pestered by the young squires accompanying him I was made to tell stories about the dungeon as the day ended.

Going to Ronslail's place to make orders for combat slaves..should be fine when I have spare time anytime after tomorrow. That night before going to sleep Miduchi came to my room and said something like, "You might be a bit surprised tomorrow?", but I have no idea what it's about and when I tried asking she wouldn't tell me.

.....

Year 7447, Month 4, Day 28

After waking up in the morning I went running with everyone the same as usual.

It seems it wasn't just Ralpa and the others who went to the capital last night and the only ones left were mostly the {Saviors} and my combat slaves. The only other ones running with us are Kamu and Kimu who's entry into the {Saviors} has already been decided and are putting some spirit into it. Well, that's fine. It's the first day of a long holiday so it might just be that everyone else is simply sleeping in. Particularly Rokko and Kevin who had stayed up from two days ago through to yesterday fighting against ogres. I'm sure they're reasonably tired.

When we returned from running it was after Sean and the others had already finished preparations to depart. Seeing that Miduchi and I took a shower in a hurry and then changed clothes before hopping on our horses. Sorry for the wait. When I tried to have us depart right away Miduchi started going on about not having eaten breakfast yet. But, I guess that's true. We should be able to eat breakfast in about 10 minutes. I had the caravan wait for a bit and the 2 of us went to eat breakfast.

Miduchi even started drinking some tea acting as if we have plenty of time.

Though it's the same for me too.

Supposedly Toris and Bel are planning to head to the capital together this afternoon and Zenom said he would take his time going to buy some vodka and smoked meats as well. The same for my combat slaves and Giberuti, since Kamu and Kimu are going to play in the capital they'll supposedly accompany them. Only Zulu seems to be going to the capital at a different time. Ha~han~ it must be that sister from Murowa.

Well, the escort squires of the caravan Miduchi and I will be accompanying are walking so we'll take our time heading there over 2~3 hours.

We arrived at Greed Company in the capital just before noon but surprisingly almost all of the members of the {Slaughterers} were there. Furthermore, everyone was wearing pretty nice clothes.

The only ones not here are..Ralpha, Gwine, Cathy, and other than that is just my slaves.

Even Toris, Bel, Basutorial, and Zenom are here.

Kamu, Kimu, Ginger, and the others are all here as well.

I guess they went ahead of us while we were slowly taking our time eating?

Let alone that even Rooko and Kevin were wearing clothes that don't suit them.

"Hey, why is everyone here? And those outfits..."

I reflexively asked Miduchi.

"Fufu..Surprised?"

I'm surprised.

Chapter 295: Youthful Recklessness

Year 7447, Month 4, Day 28

Seeing almost all of the {Slaughterers} gathered together Zenom took a step forward as Sean and I were surprised.

"Well, since we have the chance. Bring along these fellows when you make deliveries at the castle this time. Outside of the {Saviors} the only who's entered the castle before is Rodrick after all.

There's a bit too many people but they should at least let us past the middle moat right? Let them see the castle. I want to see it for the first time in a while too."

Certainly there's quite a few people..including me there's about 20 people from just the {Slaughterers} here. If we include the caravan from Bakuddo and Ressegu the head clerk then it'll be close to 30 people. Even then it's just said Zenom said, everyone is registered as employees of Greed Company so I don't think there's any problem.

Probably they should be fine making it past the outer moat into the third outer citadel. In order to enter the second outer citadel you have to go past the middle moat but whether they're armed or not it's questionable if they'd be let it..I don't know.

There's some slightly deformed parts to it but the castle is more or less in the hirajiro(TL: built on flat land) Japanese style with a layered structure. Putting it simply it means that there's several circular rings of land of different sizes and moats in-between. The outer moat runs around the very edges of it and then there's three citadels inside of that covering a considerable area. There's bridges across the outer moat in several places but they aren't drawbridges but very sturdy fixed bridges. There's large gates at every end of the bridges on the side of the third outer citadel and that acts as both a guard station and lookout tower. If you were to have a weapon on you then you'd leave it there when going inside.

In the third outer citadel there's the stables and lodging for the stationed guards and there's also lookout towers in a number of places other than just the gates. I guess it's taking into consideration the possibility of a siege but the considerably vast vacant land stands out. It's simplistic compared to the castle tower but what I guess you could call the castle of the third outer citadel acts as a more serious fortress and lookout tower as it continues past the middle moat into the second citadel, it's placed to protect the sole drawbridge that leads inside.

If you pass that drawbridge and go over the middle moat then you'll be inside of the second outer citadel. Here other than the defensive lookout towers there's a bit of a garden and such. Just the same as the third outer citadel it's got three layers of lookout towers to protect the drawbridge leading further inside. The various ministries castle branch buildings are located in this area and each of the knight groups from the first to the fourth have their headquarters here as well. The leader, vice-leader, and headquarters personnel of the knight groups all come to work here. Sister is a member of the first knight group but the actual station grounds of each of the knight groups including the first are in a different location from the castle so she isn't normally here.

Normally, the delivery of armor takes place in a room in one of the lookout towers of either these second or third outer citadels. If you were to ask which, it takes place in the third outer citadel more often. At first we even took care of the deliveries and orders in a vacant lot of the third outer citadel but in the past 2~3 years it's had a feel like going to the second outer citadel when a convenient room isn't open close to the castle in the third outer citadel. In other words I've only gone in a number of times that can be counted on one hand myself.

And, finally there's an inner moat and that leads to the inner citadel. Obviously the castle tower looms over that area. Obviously I've never entered there either and I've only seen it from the outside so I don't know what's going on inside.

"Just a bit, we thought we'd take a look at our future objective."

Ginger took a step forward beside Zenom while saying.

Fu..

I don't know who brought it up but I guess it was that sort of thing.

"..Well, that's fine. But, I think they'll only let you in up to the "third outer cit"..up to the outer perimeter?"

"That's no problem. I just want to take a look at even a portion of the castle that I've heard about."

Sanno said while shrugging his shoulders.

Ah, that's right. I need to say this.

"Also, Miduchi, Zenom, Toris, Bel, and Rodrick you guys stay behind this time. You've all seen it before and as expected there's way too many people."

"Eeh~~~"

Leaving behind the five who were grumbling that they went to the trouble of coming, even then we took along a total of over 20 people to the castle and took care of the deliveries. We were able to enter the third outer citadel without problem but after all we weren't allowed into the second citadel.

Even then everyone seemed to be impressed by the delicate and splendid ornaments around the building and the magnificently mowed lawn in the vacant land. I was a bit nervous that Rokko or Jeru might start making too much noise but as expected even they were impressed as they just looked around occasionally saying, "Ha~" in a whisper.

Supposedly this Rombert castle was completed for the time being and started to function as a castle 50 years ago from now. Including the ornaments and such the building was only completely finished 40 years after that, a short 10 years ago. Prior to that, Rombert castle used to stand a bit to the North from here in what's currently considered the low-ranking noble district. The grandfather of the current King who was the King at that time had just finished an 80-year project to complete the new Rombert castle 10 years after he took the throne so he spent another 20 years moving castles and tearing down the old one.

I smoothly gave everyone an explanation of that sort of hearsay.

We left the castle after finishing up the delivery and sightseeing and I talked with Kamu on the way back to the company. The one who proposed sightseeing at the castle with everyone this time was Toris. Supposedly Toris told everyone he wanted them to understand my objective to make a new country after this even a bit better. Hearing that they thought it would be good to see the castle at least once. Of course, it seems like there was also the reason of wanting to see the interior of the castle together with everyone at once as well.

On our way of slowly returning to the company headquarters I listened to what everyone was saying.

"Really~ it was amazing right~"

"Yeah, I've only heard about something like that in stories."

"Sean-san you've gone in a number of times right? Have you ever gone even further inside?"

"Yeah, just once I've gone a bit further inside."

"What's going on beyond that?"

"Things get even more luxurious. You can also see a garden with quite a bit of work done to it as well."

"Ha~ ..Garden! So there's even something like that!"

"Did you see the ceiling of that room?"

"Yeah, it had a beautiful picture drawn on it."

"That, it's a fairy tale from the past right."

"Is that so?"

"He~"

"That's right. Don't you know it?"

"I couldn't tell..I felt like I was going to go blind from how extravagant it all was."

"Right. It wasn't just gold but there was even one door that was completely varnished right."

"That was supposedly something with scenery of various places in the Kingdom drawn on it."

"Eh? Is that so Jamie-san?"

"Pu..It really wasn't a fairy tale right?"

".."

The first time I saw it I looked around quite a bit in admiration as well I think it was.

I thought that the original construction of large temples and shrines in Kyoto or famous great cathedrals in foreign countries would be like that. Though I'm sure the theme for the pictures is different.

While that was going on we arrived at the company. Five people with bitter smiles on their faces came out to greet us.

Even here everyone ended up talking about how luxurious and magnificent the castle was. I wonder what everyone's doing after this? Thinking that when I tried asking them about and it seems everyone is going out to eat. Last night, the three who came ahead to the capital early on already reserved a restaurant.

If you're doing that then how about having a meal with everyone in the caravan from Bakuddo and the store? Thinking that I tried suggesting it but was gently rejected by Toris. He wanted to wait until night before we all eat, drink, and get acquainted. Somehow it felt like things weren't adding up but if that's the case it can't be helped. There's probably things that are difficult to talk about when I'm around. In that case I proposed footing a bit of the bill but was rejected on that too. Somehow it wasn't very amusing as I felt like my good intentions were turned to nothing but sooner after Toris lowered his head to me and simply explained the reason.

Supposedly the lunch meeting this time is in the shape of the seniors of the {Slaughterers} Zenom, Toris, and everyone treating the juniors. Hmm, certainly there's no room for me to join in that case. They've all acted as leaders a number of times and built up a decent amount of trust.

However, in the end they're still mostly 19 year old brats. In order to act as the leader of first-rate adventurers in their late 20s and 30s they can't just be reliable and individually strong but need to pay attention to things on all ends. Putting aside what degree of meaning that has, they must have decided that even just doing a little bit is better than not doing anything at all.

Even the reincarnated people have started again as brats in addition to their past life. I'm sure they want to show off that they aren't just slightly strong brats with a bit of intelligence.

In order to lead people you need to show them the future. Of course, it's not as if there's no other methods as well.

For example instilling them with fear, even the method of controlling people through fear is somewhat effective. Though there's a lot of people who failed trying to do it, if it's up to some extent I think there's even more cases of it succeeding. It doesn't really matter what method is used at the start. In the end if you show them the future and let them believe that you're the assistance they need in order to aim for that then there's no problem wherever the startline is. If you can take responsibility for it that is.

In other words they must want to do something like a rise to action meeting.

If I were to retort even further on it then it's basically Toris declaring that he's aiming to become a high ranking noble of the country I make. In that case putting aside the retainers right now, he must want personal connections that connect to the future as well. Rodrick and Binsu are nobles and supposedly even Misu has some connections after all.

If that's the case then I should just do what I can do on my end.

First off is going over the account book of the company and making corrections, then going to the government office before I forget to pay the luxury tax for armor this time along with the taxes for last month, listen to the state of customers from the Yotlen and Rassegu families, put in an order with Sean and the others for improvements on the items delivered next time, perform an inspection of the sausage factory without warning and reprimand them over any problems to fix, check on the progress of the slaves education, go around explaining changes in the amount of sausage ingredients we'll be needing to the sellers while greeting them, and I need to show my face at Tukerin's clinic to greet and thank him as well. Oh~ it's necessary to stop by Sandak Company and check on things regarding the amulet as well.

Though I can split up some of them with Miduchi there's quite a few things I need to do. First off it's necessary for Miduchi to accompany me in correcting the account books. Thinking that I was about to call out to her and it was just as she was about to go out with Toris and the others...

Even you're going along with them...I'm sure she's not going just to play around but...Even though it's already been over 10 years since my thoughts have switched primarily to the Ragudarios language of Orth, whether it be using an abacus or doing mental math for some reason saying, "Which is~ why, it becomes X0~ yen.." in Japanese feels a bit more efficient and is easier to concentrate...

It can't be helped so I had Anna go and buy me some sandwiches and ate those while correcting the accounts. After that when I went to the government office and took care of the taxes it was long past 3:00.

The sun is still high but I had Yotlen and the others discuss customer complaints and improvement points of the products with Sean and the others while having tea. It's not like Sean and the others will always be here after all. And then the day passed by as we were doing that. Rasseg and Mili who went out to make deliveries to companies we have contracts with finally came back after finishing up most of the jobs. After that Angela with a slightly red face probably from drinking appeared in the store to tell us to go eat and drink with the {Slaughterers} while she keeps an eye on the store.

Supposedly Zulu is taking the slave brats working at the factory out for a meal so there's no need to worry about them. Originally I've paid them enough in wages so they can eat so I wasn't worried about that. Supposedly Giberuti is keeping an eye on things at the factory.

According to her they were having a motivational meeting at Rokiddo this time and everyone including Basutorial and Cathy are still there. If it's one of the top restaurants of the capital then it's just right for thanking Sean and the others for their long journey. After bringing along the squires from Bakuddo, Ressgu family, and even the Yotlen family it was already a party. Ralph and Gwine's loud laughing was echoing out to the entrance. I almost misunderstood whether that Rokiddo suddenly decided to setup a cheap bar like the ones in Baldukk.

Everyone was completely drunk and considerably cheerful. It seems they were originally having a study session on manners during a meal...Hey now, wasn't it a motivational meeting? Well, I guess that's fine. It should be fine to occasionally have a huge party at this level of high class restaurant while eating high class food.

Anna, Hanna, and Kamuna all loved it after all.

Year 7447, Month 4, Day 29

In the end last night the party continued until late into the night. Thanks to that the squires and normal employees for the company were able to get very acquainted with the {Slaughterers} who are registered as security employees. It was pretty fun. Starting today it seems that all of the {Slaughterers} are going to enjoy themselves however they please in the capital and then return to Baldukk after they're satisfied. It seems Sean and the others are planning to stay one more night to get some rest before returning to Bakuddo.

Just before dawn I woke up the still half-asleep Miduchi to go running and we encountered the slaves from the sausage factory working hard at running as they're lead by Zulu and Angela. I thought they were missing some people so I tried asking about it and it seems they'll return after finishing half then next time Henry and Mekku will lead them for the other half of the running. That explains why it seemed like only the older ones were with them.

It was then that I heard someone speak from within the slaves. Just when I was thinking who it might be, it was the oldest two slaves among the factory, Maru and Rinbi. Supposedly they want to discuss something with me later.

I don't particularly mind.

Is it negotiations over a wage increase?

For the time being there's not much of a difference other than John and Terry.

Though I say that, the two of them are the oldest and there's physical labor as well, since they also have to look after the smaller kids a bit I had already given them a bit more compared to the others.

Just when I was thinking that, unexpectedly they said they want to be combat slaves.

There's some strange people out there.

I went to visit the store once after returning to the inn for a shower then left soon after greeting the Yotlen family. I thought about visiting Sandak Company first thing today but I decided to go to the sausage factory for the matter from just now. It's to do an inspection without warning as well as to discuss things with Maru and Rinbi. I decided to have Miduchi go pay a visit to Tukerin.

It'll be a bit later but I'll head over there afterwards.

There's 22 slaves I have working at the sausage factory excluding John and Terry. Of those I bought 11 of them at the same timing as we started operation of the factory last summer. A short while after that I bought an additional 9, then another 2 who we purchased to adjust Toris's chainmail and after that was over threw them into the sausage factory.

That's why even if two people or so were to be taken out I'm sure there wouldn't be much of a difference in the productivity of the factory. But you know, these two just reached the age of adulthood this year. It was just as I was thinking I wanted one or two people as combat slaves but they're useless in terms of combat strength. If they haven't learned how to use a weapon for at least one year it's too frightening that there's no way I could bring them into Baldukk.

Just obediently work without showing interest in strange things.

And, a short while later start a relationship whenever and have some kids. There's something I was thinking of having you do around 5 years later after all.

When I arrived at the factory Zulu and the others were waiting together with Maru and Rinbi.

"You said you want to be combat slaves is that right?"

I took a sat on one of the chairs in front of the factory and started biting into a fried baldoggie Giberuti handed me for breakfast while asking.

"Yes, master. We want to become combat slaves that can earn like Zulu-sama."

Maru knelt down and replied with a serious tone of voice.

"I do too, master. Please let us enter the {Slaughterers}."

Rinbi knelt down and said just the same.

".."

I'm sure they look up to things like that at this age.

Otherwise, just as expected they might want an improvement in their treatment.

I felt like I wanted to see what kind of face Zulu and Angela were making by my side but decided not to look.

It seems Giberuti went back into the store to start disassembling the meat mincer.

Maru and Rinbi just hit level 3.

Their slightly low ability values when I first bought them have recovered to the average for a Hyumu at their ages together with the improvements to their diet.

Of course both of them have magnificently healthy bodies.

"Have you gotten sick of making and selling Baldoggie?"

""No!! That's by no means the case..!""

The two of them replied in a panic.

Well, I guess there's no other way they could have replied but that.

"You two, have you ever held a weapon before..There's no way right."

""Yes. However we'll definitely learn and be useful!!""

I wonder where it comes from, this unfounded confidence?

"Hey, you two, stand."

I bit into a Baldoggie while saying.

""Yes.""

The two of them stood up.

There's hope sparkling in their eyes.

They're underestimating it too much.

"Zulu"

"Ha!!"

"Angela"

"Ha!!"

"Hit them"

""Ha!!""

Just as I heard a couple of dull thuds overlap, Maru and Rinbi were both crouched over on the ground holding their cheeks after being sent flying by the blows.

I made a bitter smile.

They sure held back.

Just like that about 10 seconds passed.

After all Giberuti is the best at frying them just right. This Baldoggie is delicious.

"Maru, Rinbi, master ordered you to "stand". How long are you planning to lay there?"

Maru and Rinbi stood up in a hurry.

Yeah, just relax.

In the past sister and I beat each other up all the time and when I started training with father, the head squire back then Aizensaido, Sean, Whitney, or Mikkensu I was punched and kicked plenty so I understand.

Even if you're punched with bare fists the amount of damage done to your HP is limited.

"Hit them."

""Ha!!""

Another two dull thud sounds overlap.

This time both Maru and Rinbi stood up right away.

They're still going easy on them~

"You already understand with this right? You two won't be useful for anything."

It's somehow started to get pitiful so I called out to them like that.

Both Maru and Rinbi lowered their heads.

The cheeks on both sides of their faces are swelling up.

However, they don't even have nosebleeds yet.

Maru is grinding his teeth while clenching both of his fists as he looks down.

Rinbi's looking down just the same but I can't tell her expression because it's hidden behind her long blue hair.

Well I'm sure she's mortified just the same.

"Master is talking to you? Reply to him."

"" .. ""

"Hit them."

""Ha!!""

This time a couple of even deeper thuds overlapped.

Both Zulu and Angela hit them in the body.

""Guwu...!!""

Maru and Rinbi groaned while holding their stomachs and somehow were able to stand up.

But it took close to 10 seconds.

It's pitiful but like this there's no way they could make it as combat slaves.

The silence continued for quite a while.

"Hey, Maru. If you're like that then you'll die right away you know?"

There's no response.

Just the silence continues.

"Rinbi, it's the same for you too. In the end you'll just be killed by an ork or hobgoblin."

There's no reply from here either.

They're just looking at my feet as I'm sitting on the chair while either recognizing their own powerlessness, feeling mortified, or maybe feeling terror as they just keep trembling.

They might be feeling discontent thinking it's unreasonable.

Well, these two were born as slaves so I don't think they'd go so far as seeing it as unreasonable.

However, if they think something can be done about it at just this level then they're underestimating death matches too much right, these brats.

I hold onto my Baldoggie skewer that's completely gone cold as I look from my chair towards Maru and Rinbi.

While their faces twist from the pain I can still somewhat see expressions of resent and regret.

Hmph.

I looked up to my left. I can tell Zulu's making a strict expression.

I looked up to my right. Angela's trying to remain expressionless.

Though I also feel like there's a bit of kindness in their eyes as well.

Though you know~

It's still fine if these two were to die. Though it's not good.

But you know.

Someone else might end up falling into a crisis trying to cover for these two.

Ah, that's right, if these two were to die wouldn't that be a decrease in my assets?

Let's go with that.

Just as I was about to start trying to persuade them.

"I'm hungry. Let's hurry up and eat~"

"Supposedly the factory has today off."

"John and Terry are here right?"

"..Huh?"

"It's Greed-sama."

"Zulu and Maruso..Also.."

"It looks like we'll be able to eat Baldoggie right~ Isn't that one in Greed-kun's hand?"

"Ooo~ Isn't that great master!"

"Yeah, I like having fried eggs and baldoggie for breakfast."

Sanno, Ruttsu, Rodrick, and his two combat slaves came along.

I guess they're on their way back from running?

All five of them are covered in sweat.

"Hey now~ what's with all the serious faces?"

"What is it? Are you in the middle of disciplining? Properly listen to things your owner says~"

Don't interfere in this?

Chapter 296: Re-Departure

Year 7447, Month 4, Day 29

Maru and Rinbo both brazenly said they want to become combat slaves so in order to get them to give up I was having Zulu and Angela knock them down until Sanno, Ruttsu, Rodrick, Denda, and Karimu appeared. The five of them appeared covered in sweat as expected from just finishing their running this morning and it seems they came along to get John and Terry to make some baldoggie for breakfast.

"Morning, Greed-kun. What are you guys doing?"

"Yo~ so you were already finished with your running? Zulu, Maruso.

What's going on?"

Sanno and Ruttsu called out to us. You're loud~ Don't interfere.

"If it's about baldoggie then Mekku and the others are cleaning inside so just say something."

I replied with just that before turning my attention back to Maru and Rinbi.

It seems that Sanno and the others quietly went into the factory.

The two of them are still looking at me bitterly as usual.

Even if you look at me with eyes like that those who are useless are still useless.

In the first place something like wanting to be combat slaves, you screwed up in how you suddenly brought it up with me first. If it's to report bullying then that's fine but it's not even that urgent of a matter right.

First off you should have consulted with the head slave Zulu and passed it through him and then only finally came to make the request with me after you've convinced him, even Cathy would have been fine. If it's with her then I'm sure she's easy to talk to as well. In the first place what have John and Terry been doing. Completely skipping over the head slave Zulu and making a direct appeal to me is ridiculous.

Do they not understand that it completely ignores Zulu's position?

Though they must have done such because they didn't know.

Ronslail-san~ you never properly finished training them...

Zulu's still making a strict expression.

Well, it's not like you're normally together with them after all.

It would be barking up the wrong tree to criticize Zulu over something like this so don't make that face.

Though it's a face that doesn't seem to be worrying about himself.

"Hey, the two of you. You want to die?"

"No, I don't want to die."

After a short pause Maru nervously replied.

"What about you?"

I asked Rinbi once again.

"U..Umm, I don't want to die either."

Her voice started to crack up a bit.

"That's only obvious right. Even I don't want to die."

I throw the remainder of the baldoggie skewer I had in my hand into my mouth and play around with the remaining skewer.

"You two, are you saying that fully understanding what kind of thing combat slaves are?"

"" ... ""

You never know when you might be ordered to be my shield you know?

You never know when I might abandon you in order to earn time to escape?

There's no way I'd bring along someone who wouldn't even be able to properly earn any time if it comes to that!

If the number of people increases then so does the food we have to carry.

For as long as the number of people that can teleport at once is limited we can't waste any spots.

Now both Zulu and Angela are combat slaves whose names are known pretty well.

It's to the point where if a random newbie with no achievements meets them on the street or somewhere they'd have to quickly move out of the way and bow down in respect.

Ever since we cleared the 8th floor they've even made it into a reasonable number of rumors over here in the capital I'm sure.

I wonder if that's why...

It would be stranger if these two hadn't heard about things like that.

"How about trying to bring them into the dungeon once?"

Rodrick started talking to me after coming out from the store.

It's got no relation with you right.

Let alone that, even if I were to make these two into combat slaves then...

"Rodrick, sorry but if you aren't willing to take responsibility can you show a bit of discretion? Also, if I were to use these two as combat slaves they'd end up being put into the {Exterminators} you know?"

There's already your Denda and Karimu, along with my Mekku and Jesu a total of four combat slaves. If there's anymore it might end up as a party with nothing but combat slaves.

Of course, it's not as if becoming someone like the elf slave user Rozuwera is prohibited either. Taking into account that his slaves haven't rebelled while inside of the dungeon and you can tell Rozuwera's got a firm grasp on the hearts of his slaves and is proof that he's treating them properly.

Whether it's from a rebellion or he's killed by monsters, for combat slaves who have lost their master you never know where they may end up through inheritance of relatives so you could say Rozuwera's properly earned the loyalty of his slaves.

Furthermore, it's obviously okay to fortify an entire party of 10 with slaves but even if you were to make such a party I can't imagine it functioning properly. I'm sure they'd take advantage of the fact that there's no overseer and just spend all of their slacking off in the teleport room of the 1st floor.

"Well~ Certainly that's true but just showing them the 1st floor for a bit is teaching them about life. Don't they say, "hit the iron while it's still hot"? Isn't it important to train them while they're still young?"

No, I understand what you're trying to say but if they were to die in the process of that just showing them for a bit there's nothing more that can be done after that...

"Oh~ I just heard about it from Larry but supposedly those two want to become combat slaves?"

Ruttsu came to stick his head into as well. Seriously wouldn't you guys just stop. Well in this guys case I'm sure the majority of it is just out of interest.

"That's impossible right. I'm sure they don't know how to handle weapons so it'll just end with them dying right away. It's not something as simple as that."

Sanno joined in as well but he seems to be speaking from my point of view. Denda and Karimu are behind him holding small leather pouches. It seems they were properly able to buy baldoggie for breakfast.

"I think so too...At your guys level you'll just end up killed by monsters right away and reduce my assets. Give up."

After I said it as if spitting it out Maru and Rinbi just lowered their heads even lower.

See?

If they can't say anything else over just being told this much then there's no way they'd be able to fight inside the dungeon.

"Al-san, if you put it like that then they won't be able to say anything else...Right~ you two?"

Even after Rodrick called out to them like that, naturally the two of them were still clenching their fists while looking down.

I thought Rodrick would be used to dealing with slaves but after actually seeing it he's pretty easy-going.

Well, I'm pretty easy-going myself though.

I can't help but think that I'm dealing with people.

The fact that they're things, I can't clearly come to terms with the fact that they're simply assets which can be consumed.

Even after passing away in my past life I've never had kids.

While I loved my nephews and nieces, I'm sure from their point of view I was just an annoying relative uncle that gives them an allowance occasionally when we meet.

Even when it comes to Zetto and Bekki, I only spent the short period until they were 2.5 years old together with them so it's not like I was together with them until they built up a solid individuality. Of course~ for the most part I understood their personality but personality is in the end just personality. Babies don't have any individuality. I never spent time with them and watched their growth until they were able to think somewhat on their own as a single individual.

In that sort of meaning the closest one would be my older sister Mill but since I myself was an infant, we only ever had any proper contact around when she was 5 years old. By that period her personality had already considerably taken form. I don't know much at all about when she was 3~4 years old and her personality was in development.

Additionally, while it was in the middle of nowhere Mill was born in a noble household and there's the education from father and mother as well. On top that she was raised with plenty of love being poured into her. I'm sure there's no comparison to a child slave from the city.

In comparison Maru and Rinbi were born slaves and if I remember right, around 5~6 years old? Or maybe even earlier? In any case they were estranged from their parents since they were small. It might not be wrong to say they were raised without knowing parental love at all. In a wider sense you could say they were raised while being neglected. When I first purchased them it wasn't limited to just these two but all of them were extremely thin and had a bad look in their eyes with almost no expression. They even seemed to have some fear of I, their master, in their eyes.

Although, I was already a pretty well-known adventurer back then and also managed a decent company as well.

I thought it was something that couldn't be helped.

Even though that was the case, somehow less than one year later they've started to assert themselves and are expressing their wishes to me.

If it was just that...

The radiance in their eyes.

However.

Of all things to become combat slaves...

Shit.

Why are they looking up to such a dangerous position?

"Call out Mekku and Jesu, never mind. Mekku!! Jesu!!"

Without replying to Rodrick I raised my voice and shouted towards the factory.

I start talking to Maru and Rinbi while waiting for the two of them to come.

"You two, be able to run the same outer crater course as we do within 2 hours by next month. If you can do that then I'll listen to what you have to say once more."

Even if you make that sort of face I still haven't accepted it.

..Damn it.

I feel like there will be regrets.

..Damn it.

..I encourage living a life without any regrets..

Certainly that's true right...

But, I can't take back something I've already said.

Henry, Mekku, Rubi, Jesu.

You all have enjoyed yourself a bit too much until now right.

I'll let you experience a bit of mental stress.

After pushing the care of the two brats for the time being onto Mekku and Jesu, since time was getting late I immediately went to Tukerin's clinic and met up with Miduchi. After greeting him, I made the request, and paid the bill in advance. Surveying the Dirt Plains. Incidentally the estimate of the cost to survey it was 25,000,000 Z. Expensive~ These greedy dark elf bastards~ If they give me a half-assed survey report after this I'll bully Miduchi at night.

..One year since then. It should be about time for Kuro and Mary to have retired from the Webdos Knight Group and be departing. Near the end of last year both of them received investiture as knights together. Particularly Mary seems to have been put in charge of quite a few duties regarding accounting so with training their replacements and all that they were expecting retirement to be around spring. After they retire I asked them to investigate the Dirt Plains on their way to Baldukk so they should arrive around summer or fall.

I've already sent them 20,000,000 Z to purchase some horses and as travel expenses just in case. I said to make sure they buy two proper war horses so it can't be helped that it ends up costing about that much. After they group up with us if they do things properly then something like 20,000,000 Z should only take them about half a year to return.

Now then, if it's possible I want to pay a visit to Sandak Company while it's still morning. Miduchi and I went all the way to Sandak Company but since we hadn't made an appointment the company president was in the middle of meeting someone so we couldn't meet him. After he confirmed the openings the old man clerk said it would be at earliest in the evening so I said we'd be back then and left.

It couldn't be helped so Miduchi and I split up and went around offering greetings to the merchants and companies we purchase pork and materials from. Of course, greetings are just secondary and it was really to investigate shares among their clients. It might be better to call it negotiations to increase the amount of consumable meat they're willing to allot and sell to their new customer Greed Company. If possible I want them to sell us beef as well as pork. We went around to the acceptable butcher stores and farms making use of the spell {Suggestion} when possible to slowly advance our negotiations.

While we were doing that the time passed by until 4:00. Miduchi and I met up before heading towards Sandak Company once again. And, it was just as a group with excited looks on their faces was coming out of Sandak Company and getting into a carriage. The company president had come out to the entrance to see off that group. I guess they're a large-scale business partner or something? While maintaining some distance to not get in the way they quickly departed. After Miduchi and I made a light nod towards the president, he called us over.

"Hello~ Greed-san, in regards to that {Earth.Amulet} but it's popularity is superb!"

Hohou!

Isn't that the best thing I've heard all day!

"Is that so! That's great."

"Thanks to that while we already sent out notice for the auction it's unfortunate that we weren't able to start taking bids yet.

Well it can't be helped standing around and talking about here so please come inside."

I've mentioned it before but the auctions for expensive items aren't up for public bidding.

The kinds of people who buy or can buy things like that are all busy so there's no way to gather them all in a single place at a fixed time and date. The process of the auction is, first, a notice is sent out in advance.

They have a number of people who would definitely participate in the bidding or are well-informed about the item take a look at it.

And then they have a discussion with the company president on the spot to decide the minimum bid price.

After that they once again send out an official notice to people who seem very likely to make a bid while simultaneously conveying the minimum bid price. Those who wish to make a bid can come look at the item on a day convenient for them and propose the price they'd be willing to pay to the company. After everyone who's interested in bidding has seen the item, the company once again makes a list of everyone's proposed prices and distributes it to everyone. And then they decide on a fixed date and have private bidding. Those who wish to bid will look at the list before deciding their final bidding price and then tell that to the company. It's because of this that you could say deciding their proposed price at the start is where the bargaining takes place. Therefore, the bidding doesn't take place until everyone who's interested in bidding has seen the item.

The company president said that's the reason, "please think it'll take at least half a year for the price to be decided".

"Those people just now were interested bidders as well. They come on a long journey from far away along with their knight leader and financial affairs minister to have a look at it."

"Ho~ that is quite something.."

"The proposed price they just discussed a while ago was 4,500,000,000 Z. This is around the average proposed price for the auction this time. Therefore, the final bid price should be roughly 1.5 times that."

Nuwwa! 1..1.5 times!?

Isn't that 7..7,500,000,000~!!!

"Eh..then that means it'll be around 6,700,000,000 ~

6,800,000,000?"

Miduchi said with her eyes wide open as Zeni(Z) marks appeared in them.

I'm sure I'm making a similar face.

"That's correct. Even for us it's been a while since we made over 1,000,000,000 in profits from a single business transaction. We're grateful, Greed-san."

The president of Sandak Company lowered his head to Miduchi and I with a pleased face.

Of course, we're also making pleased faces.

After all even after paying the handling charge and taxes it still comes out to 5,000,000,000, that's 5,000,000,000!

Even after I pay out bonuses to everyone in the {Saviors} that leaves over 4,000,000,000 remaining in my hands.

Won't my funds increase by over double all at once!

"There's 9 gentlemen who have expressed interest in bidding and only 1 remaining who wishes to view the item. Please wait just a short while longer."

Waiting, I'll wait, I'll wait as long as you need. Waiting with my head held high.

Supposedly those wishing to make bids aren't just from Rombert

Kingdom but also from Guranan Empire and Bakuruni Kingdom as well.

Obviously it's not like they've made direct contact with the nobles of countries like those. They get into contact with a local organization that acts like an embassy and then that contacts their own country. The purpose of the local organization is for information gathering and negotiations regarding tariffs but occasionally they do jobs like these as well. Even transactions dealing with paintings or sculptures are splendid sources of cross-country negotiations.

Furthermore, there's a local organization for Devas Kingdom in Rombertia as well but for the most part we'll still in the middle of disputes over the borders so it's more or less never used and the knight group always has them under surveillance. Of course, the degree of surveillance is extremely high and it's surveillance to the point that they can brazenly tell they're being watched.

Obviously parties like that aren't given any notice about the auctions.

Supposedly all of the foreign country embassies with fast horses that wish to bid for the amulet have already inspected it and now they're letting important high ranking nobles and clients within the country take a look at it and propose their prices.

Ah, I need to ask this.

"Ah, come to think of it, about the sale price but can I receive it in platinum coins?"

5,000,000,000 in gold coins is 5,000 of them. In the worst case even that's fine but I'm sure it'll be bulky in terms of both weight and volume. I've somewhat heard about platinum coins in discussions but I've never seen the real thing so I want to take this chance to see them.

"Fufu, that's only obvious. That's also one of the reasons why we set the minimum bidding price to 1,000,000,000 this time."

Supposedly it's a custom to set limits on the type of currency being used to pay by setting the minimum bid price. Obviously they carefully limit those who are told about it. In this case it has the meaning of, "It's inevitable to reach the billions. We won't tell those who don't have the ability to pay in the first place but pardon us from any window shopping."

.....

Year 7447, Month 4, Day 30

Yesterday, or rather during this morning when Miduchi and I returned to Baldukk we started on way towards the fairy village.

After passing through the 1st and 2nd floors we sang the Japanese national anthem as usual and teleported into the fairy area on the 2nd floor, then after clearing through the pitfalls and snake fountain it was time to have a rest until night.

"You can sleep first. I'll wake you up in 4 hours."
After making a simple bed by just spreading my robe out on the floor it was decided that I'd sleep first.
"Yeah. Then I'll get some rest first."
I closed my eyes while using arm guards I took off as a pillow.

Soon after something was placed over my body.
Miduchi must have put her robe over me.

.....

"The rainy season this year was shorter than usual so it's gotten quite a bit sweet."

On my right Shiina with her hair tied up is giving an enthusiastic speech to the buyer in charge of fruits and vegetables for a mid-size supermarket. The official presentation was finished last month during a visit at the end of October and while the mangoes our firm deals in which are imported from Nam Doc Mai in Thailand are more expensive than the pelican mangoes that from the Philippines that over firms deal in, they decided that the flavor and packaging of ours were better so today is the delivery day for that company.

The other party is making sounds as if they're satisfied as well.

If I remember right this was the first client that I'd left her in charge of.

Things sure were pretty hard this time. No matter how hard we tried we couldn't get a hold of them and by chance our fruit and vegetable stocking route had started growing them so I decided to chance it suggest mangoes which I don't usually handle very often.

That ended finishing the deal.

She was overjoyed by her first sale I think it was.

After offering our thanks and standing up from our seats the buyer saw us all the way to the elevator on the reception floor.

After the door of the elevator closed Shiina said, "Thank you very much. Over half of the reason I was able to make the sale was thanks to Kawasaki-san." and lowered her head to me. When she raised her head again a beauty mark on her earlobe stood up because of her tied up hair.

Something like that did happen...

.....

I was shaken awake.

It's time to change shifts.

I stand up from my bed and stretch out before putting my protector arm guards back on.

Switching out with me this time it's Miduchi's turn to rest.

After taking off her arm guards and placing them as pillows just the same, I placed my robe over her after she laid down.

I saw down to her side with my back against the wall of the cave.

"Night."

"Good night."

Miduchi closed her eyes while facing me on her arm guard pillow.

After about 2 hours passed, I think the time should already be past 9 pm?

I started playing with the bullet-head of a bullet that was mixed into a pocket of my bag while looking at her face.

The scar I couldn't fix in the end stands out.

I felt a bit sorry about it.

In the end I still can't use the spell that cures illnesses.

"If they just use a gun then even a small child can kill you instantly. It's scary."

I remember Miduchi's words that I heard from Bel.

..I guess so.

Stray bullets on the battlefield are frightening.

That's why I need to make absolutely sure that guns aren't used outside of my camp.

They're an absolute secret until the time comes.

Even though I used to think that..right.

I've changed.

"Nn.."

Miduchi rolled over a bit and her face was hidden behind her white-dyed hair.

I gently brush her hair and push it off her face.

Her slightly pointed elf ears appeared.

There's no beauty mark on her earlobes which are smaller than a hyumus.

I guess it's only obvious because it's a new body.

I start playing with the bullet-head in my hand again.

Pin~ and I flick it with my thumb before grabbing it as it falls.

It's the same thing I've already repeated countless times.

【Arrowhead】

【Iron】

【Condition: Normal】

【Manufacture Date: 26/3/7447】

【Value: 1】

【Durability: 114】

【Ability: 10-120】

【Effect: None】

Arrowhead, indeed...Come to think of it the shells are 【Brass.Craft】 while the net gun and revolving rifle were 【Metal.Craft】 right. Even when it comes to the gunpowder it's still 【Cotton(Processed)】 or 【Dye(Processed)】 after all. I have to wonder about that compared to the bullet-head which has an ability field and is still barely recognized as a weapon...Though I guess it's still better than being recognized as clubs.

Oh~ while I was spacing out thinking about things like this it's almost time.

"It's about time for you to wake up."

"Nn..D..ea.r..no way..that's too embarrassing.."

You, what in the world are you letting me do to you?

.....

Year 7447, Month 5, Day 2

This time the spells that Mila-shisho and Karl taught to us were {Peace.Glue} and {Roaring.Wall} these two. We struggled a decent amount to acquire both of them. Putting aside {Roaring.Wall}, I want to be able to immediately activate {Peace.Glue}. Other than Toris and Basutorial it's possible for Binsu and Rodrick to learn to use it after all.

After returning to the capital while still lacking sleep, Miduchi and I first decided to get some rest.

Though there's only a short while left until dawn, let's sleep until noon today.

Though in the end both of us still woke up at around 9:00.

A poor person's mentality right.

Now then, I spent plenty of time talking with Miduchi other than when we were trying to learn the spells.

If Maru and Rinbi can't run the course within 2 hours by the end of this month then I'll return them to their previous jobs. If it seems like they can run then it's fine for Henry and Mekku to train them with the spear and they can act as reserve members for the {Slaughterers} or it's fine for them to enter the {Exterminators} as well. We'll deal with it when it comes to that when Kuro and Mary group up with us.

I'm sure the investigation of the Dirt Plains will start with just a summary.

According to Miduchi, they'll report the truth of the things they investigate but how much effort they put into the investigation is unknown and depending on the case Kuro and Mary might give a sharper viewpoint of it. In regards to this it's fine if they properly investigate and if not then I'll eventually have to form a surveying team.

And then, the {Earth.Amulet}.

After all an item that can cancel out spells made up of only Earth and Void magic with about a 50% probability is quite impressive. If I were to take it to the extreme then it even has the possibility of canceling out my ultimate attack spell, {Stone Cannon (Missile)}.

Although, I still have things like ice and flame so even if my enemy were to equip it there's not much to fear.

However, that price is attractive.

If we follow Miduchi's theory then below the 10th floor it's possible we could obtain something even more effective.

We've already finished re-organizing so isn't it about time we put some enthusiasm into it?

{Peace.Glue} Alteration

(Earth Magic Lv 4, Wind Magic Lv 3, Void Magic Lv 4, Consumed MP 10)

The targeted weapon along with giving off light for an instant will no longer be possible to pull from the scabbard, holder, or quiver it's already placed inside. The duration of the effect is the level of the caster times 60 seconds. However, it's possible for the owner of the weapon to attempt drawing the weapon just once during the duration of the effect. There's a 1% increase in the chance of breaking the spell for every level different from the caster and the minimum is 1%. However in the case that they realize they can't draw their weapon because of a spell the probability of breaking the spell is doubled and if they try to resist the spell using mana the probability of breaking it increases by 3% for every 1 point of MP poured into it using level 0 void magic.

{Roaring.Wall} Evocation

(Earth Magic Lv 4, Wind Magic Lv 4, Void Magic Lv 5, Consumed MP 13)

On a single wall(The maximum size is 10 square meters per level of the caster. The duration of the wall is 10 minutes per level of the caster.) that the caster wishes creates a wall of noise that can deceive those trying to listen through said wall. The wall can be a large level surface or a gently curved surface and in the case it suddenly bends partway through the valid range will be up to turn. The noise will only be heard by those intentionally trying to hear sounds from the opposite side of the wall.

Chapter 297: Disclosure

Year 7447, Month 5, Day 5

After returning to Baldukk I called for Kamu and Kimu.

It's in order to change their contracts to a new one for the {Saviors}.

The largest modification is to the compensation.

1% of the sale price of anything "other" than magic stones that we obtain while in the dungeon is provided as a bonus. Along with that I need to change the details in Basutorial's contract as well. The version of the contract document has gone up to 4. Or rather I guess you could say the {Saviors}-use contract? No, I guess it's just a contract revision with changes to professional duties.

That's not it.

It's something important.

"Think about it once more before you sign the contract. Kamu and Kimu, I want you to think that with this you're completely throwing your lot in with us. The obligation of silence written in the clauses isn't just for show."

"What are you saying at this point"

Kamu casually signed it with a face as if saying she's long since known everything.

"Me too. It's only obvious for there to be secrets. Even {Sun.Ray} had some secrets, did you already forget? In the first place, whether they're small or big every party has some secrets."

Kimu signed after taking the pen from Kamu and then took a pin to poke her finger before squeezing some blood out.

I guess it means they aren't just blinded by the high compensation.

The other day I heard from Bel that Kamu and Kimu aren't just in it for that.

Didn't I just hear about the actions of all the {Slaughterers}?

..It seems it would be best if I stop using this exhausting viewpoint pretty soon.

.....

Year 7447, Month 5, Day 6

About this holiday but I don't I really like I got much rest.

Miduchi and I aren't allowed the luxury of taking a restful break.

It was the same days as usual of running around to butchers requesting any increase in the amount of pork and to sell us beef as well as teaching Ressg and Mili about the slightly advanced techniques for adjusting the accounts.

The small amount of spare time we had was used for practicing spells, meals and the bathroom, other than taking showers in the inn I feel like I was always doing something.

About the only good time I had was when I happened to see sister walking around all dressed up while walking around Rombertia negotiating with the butchers. Of course, it wasn't the formal front opening clothes like a kimono but the so-called Western-style clothing on Earth and she was even wearing a skirt.

I guess she's made some big progress just that she was wearing slightly better clothes than her under armor or the ones she wore when we went drinking at a bar last time.

And while wondering where she's going or who she's meeting, thinking it's in bad taste I tried following after her but there wasn't anything to it at all. She went inside of one of our rubber work sheds. She had a bag in her hand so she must be repairing sandals or something. It all became idiotic so I stopped following her. Something like that she should just tell a squire to do it. On a holiday you should be trying to catch a good guy and go out on some dates. But, I felt a bit sad for my sister who's still got no sex appeal as usual.

Just like this the holidays quickly passed by.

The Golden Week break ended yesterday.

Today is our group training after the end of the holidays.

I started thinking a bit about the plan for things after tomorrow while watching everyone work hard training in the vacant field outside of the crater.

..First off is the {Exterminators}.

Since Ginger and Hisu switched out there's some fears about their decrease in combat strength. After all things will be tough if I don't dispatch two people from the {Saviors}. I wonder who I should pick for the first time? I guess Toris and Bel are fine.

As expected I don't intend on letting them overdo things right after Ginger and Hisu switched out. If it's these two then they'll take things slowly without overdoing it as they search for a method for everyone to fight with the deceased combat strength.

Next up is the {Butchers}.

In exchange for Kamu and Kimu switching out Ginger and Hisu joined so there's no major decrease in their combat strength. They were originally members who were familiar since their time in {Sun.Ray} so I think they'll be able to regain their sense of cooperation after just the training today. In that case, I should aim for even more stability here and dispatch Zenom or Miduchi. This time it would probably be best to leave it to Miduchi since she can use magic.

And then the {Saviors}.

It's only obvious for there to be some members leftover but first off I need to properly discuss things with the new members Kamu and Kimu. I guess we should talk on the 7th or 8th floors where no one else can hear our discussion...However, if I'm talking about us then it might be best to do it when all of us reincarnated people are gathered. They should follow-up in various ways. In that case, I guess it would be best to dispatch Zenom and the two slaves..No, it's not necessary to discuss everything at once, there's no need to hurry for them to understand. The starting battle formation should be fine this time.

After that, I have Maru and Rinbi just continuing to run. Of course, I didn't forget to put emphasis on them definitely taking a break after running for 1 hour and getting plenty of hydration and nutrition. Though I've more or less left it to Henry and Mekku, since they also enter the dungeon I can't leave them to look after two brats all year round. If they can't run all on their own then becoming combat slaves is just a dream within a dream.

By the way, because these two became combat slave candidates there was a bit of trouble at the sausage factory during the holiday.

There was an increase in the number of brats who started saying they want to become combat slaves like them. However, I was easily able to deal with it this time. It's because I set the conditions for becoming a combat slave as being over 14 years old and being able to run the outer crater course around Baldukk within 2 hours.

Though it's also because Maru and Rinbi were the only ones older than 14 years old but when I explained that 14 years old was when I left my house to become an adventurer everyone accepted it...Hmm. I'm sure that not everyone hoping to will try to become combat slaves but if even a few of them who wish to were to appear wouldn't it be fine to think of it as profiting based on their initial purchase price...

Also, it's not unexpected or anything else but neither John nor Terry said they wanted to become combat slaves. It seems that the two of them certainly admire being one but because they've spent quite a while in contact with Zulu and Angela, they know the reality of what being a combat slave is like. Also, it seems one of the reasons is that both of them still have parents as well.

Though this is just something I can imagine based on the few conversations I've had with them up until now. Both John and Terry are still completely brats but just as expected from working at a food cart popular with adventurers for a reasonable period, they know very well what kind of thing the combat slaves of Baldukk are. Well, even if the two of them wanted to become one at 13 years old they're still not qualified.

Year 7447, Month 5, Day 8

Yesterday we entered the dungeon and now we're in the teleport room of the 6th floor. Since we have Kamu and Kimu who are participating in the {Saviors} for the first time I decided not to overdo things by rushing to the 8th floor within 2 days. But, while the two of them didn't seem to have any problem from the 1st to the 3rd floors yesterday, they seemed pretty fatigued going from the 4th to the 6th floors today. Even though they have experience accompanying us at this pace and they experienced an even faster pace when we were rescuing {Black.Topaz}, after all they're still lacking in the total amount of experience. We'll probably need to continue at this pace for a short while.

"And, what are we going to do? Will we talk about it today?"

Ralpa asked me after I finished taking my shower and was getting comfortable.

"That's what I plan on. Is there any problem with it?"

"Hnn. I was just asking because everyone seems restless about it."

After glancing around and everyone certainly seems a bit stiff.

They've all gathered together near Giberuti while he's making dinner and are whispering about something.

Kamu and Kimu must have felt this weird atmosphere since we arrived at this room as they're both looking a bit uncomfortable a bit of distance away.

Hmm, it seems it would be best to discuss it right away.

"Kamu, Kimu. Can we talk for a bit?"

After adding more hot water to the bucket for Zenom who's going in after me I called out to the two of them. They said "What?" as they approached me.

"There's just something I want to have a simple discussion about.

First off, listen to what I'm about to tell you. Even if you have any questions or doubts partway through, I want you to just listen to it all first."

I sit down on one of the long benches while pointing at the chairs across from me.

"Yeah."

"Got it."

Before I realized it Ralpa was sitting on my right. Everyone other than Giberuti who was preparing the meals started to gather as well. Gwine sat down on the opposite side from Ralpa, to my left.

You all really...What are you planning to do when Zenom gets out of the shower. It seems Zulu, Angela, and Basutorial are standing behind me.

Somehow it feels kind of like I'm interviewing the two of them. It might just be my imagination but it feels like we're putting pressure on them.

"What's with you all, don't stand behind me. I won't tell you not to come over but even if you stand in a place like that it's hard to relax so sit down on the side or something."

Look even Kamu and Kimu are making tense expressions.

"Don't get so nervous. I'll finish talking about it before dinner is ready. It's nothing all that important after all."

Even then it seems the two of them were still tense as they sat straight up and gulped.

"..Now then, where to start...I guess so. First off take a look at my status."

I said that before stretching my hand out to the two of them. The two of them checked my status just like I said.

"Yeah. The two of you, what can you tell from my status?"

"Even if you say what? There's not anything particularly strange.

It's the same things we already knew?"

Kamu said in confusion as the representative for the two of them.

That's true.

"Then, next up look at Ralpha's status."

The two of them checked Ralpha's status just the same as mine but there was nothing really different. Hn?

Kimu's expression changed a bit...

"Next up is Gwine."

As expected if they check three people in succession they'll start to notice it. They're making shocked expressions.

"And, Basutorial."

This time they must have already figured it out from the start.

They didn't make surprised expressions.

If I had to explain it they were acting more like they've seen something creepy, I guess? Though that's not unreasonable.

"No way, for all four of you to have the same birthday..."

"Is a coincidence like this really possible..."

Well, unless you were on really good terms with someone you normally wouldn't be interested in their birthday. Even I don't have any interest in the birthdays of those other than who I'm really intimate with. This makes me remember back to the "birthday paradox". According to that since there's close to 30 people in the current {Slaughterers} there's around a 60% probability that it wouldn't be strange for at least 2 of those to have the same birthday.

Since there's a lot of members at the same age it wouldn't be unnatural for Ralpha and I to have the same birthday.

"There's no way that's the case right. It's not a coincidence. Ah, no, I guess it could be a coincidence? I can't think of a good way of putting it. Incidentally, Rodrick, Toris, Bel, Miduchi..and also Hi..Fio has the same birthday as well."

As you could expect I'm sure this reply surpassed their expectations.

They're dumbfounded.

"Now then, just now was the introduction. The main point starts from here. You must find it strange why we all have the same birthday right? I need to start explaining from there.."

A different world. Accident. Reincarnation. I smoothly continued explaining everything while looking at the two of them speechless.

A portion of it isn't necessary after all.

"No way..Suddenly something like that.."

"Are you telling us to believe that? But, the birthdays.."

"Yeah. It's fine whether you believe it or not. I'm not saying it because I want you to believe us. I think it's fine if you just understand the fact that I, we believe it. Even if you say something like, that's stupid~ or you're all mad~, I won't blame you for it. I don't think it's unreasonable. We've only let you confirm our birthdays which is just a single basis for believing in it after all. Of course I don't mind if you check Miduchi and the others status later as well. I don't think they'll be against it either."

"" ... ""

"Also, adding one more thing on top of that and everyone whose name I just said have another common point as well. Everyone's eyes and hair are black. And aren't our facial features somewhat thin? As a matter of fact the hair color of all of us is black just the same as Rodrick and Fio. Even I've dyed my hair. If I remove the color it's pitch black. It should be easy tell if you look at Ralpa right? The roots of her hair are blackish right? This is a characteristic of the "humans" in our original world. "Humans" are basically the Hyumu race of that world."

It seems they had already realized this point. I guess it's only obvious.

"Well, for now just think, "Is that so?" and listen. From our point of view we were living reasonably carefree lives until one day we were suddenly in an accident. But, we didn't die, we were saved, and just as we thought that after all we weren't saved. We had become babies after all. Obviously all around us were people we don't know and we have no idea what they're saying. We didn't know the Ragudarios {Common.Language} after all."

We were reborn while maintaining just our consciousness and memories as adults over the age of 15 without barely being able to move. The hopelessness of not being able to understand what's being said. Attachments to our previous lifestyle, giving up on things afterwards.

I discussed all of it while faltering to mix in some emotions.

And then around the time we had completely blended in with Orth our meeting with the God who rules over reincarnation. While we had already accepted the reincarnation, the explanation that became the final blow. I guess it's because there's the divine punishment of lightning but the parts about God seemed to be easily accepted.

"Now then, from here on out is an even more important discussion.

Prepare yourselves while listening."

I change my mood completely from up until now.

The two of them fix their sitting posture while tensing up a bit.

"Before I say this..there's one thing I need to talk about. What I'm about to tell you is pretty important. Since I'm about to say it the contract of the slau, the {Saviors} that you signed the other day is absolute. I've already had you sign it so from here on out you're in the same lot as us. However, I don't intend for things to go badly for you."

When I said it with a pretty serious feel the two of them said,

"What are you saying at this point?" at the same time.

Certainly it's a bit late at this point.

"In order to meet God the condition was supposedly that something had to level up. Of course, it's fine even if it was a magic skill.

However, the majority of us met God before we even learned magic.

And, I thought about it. If this is the case then levels must exist beyond just magic."

The level of magic special skills can only be seen by yourself.

Then in that case it wouldn't be strange even if there's something you can't see yourself, is the reason I gave that's almost completely sophism. Along with that I also explained body level.

The fact that increasing that is most likely one of the methods to increase individual combat strength.

"So that's why the {Slaughterers} are.."

"Even though everyone's so young.."

After hearing my explanation(?) the two of them exchanged glances for just a moment before blanking out.

"Well yeah. I think that's the case."

Just when I replied while shrugging my shoulders the sound of the shower stopped.

Well whatever. Let's continue.

The fact that killing living creatures is believed to be the fastest method to increase body level.

However, the fact that body level is close to a concept so it's difficult to place any great faith in it. But, that we still believe it actually exists beyond just a concept.

"I'll explain things about body level once more after we eat."

Using the spell {Shine.Light.Eyes} takes some time after all.

"So the reason why the {Slaughterers} don't run from monsters is.."

"In order to..raise our body level.."

The two of them are grumbling about something with their eyes wide open.

"I guess that's about it?"

I said while looking around at Ralpha and Gwine. If you have anything to add then please do..It seems they don't. I guess that's only obvious. Including Unique Abilities it's not like I told them everything so even if they wanted to add more I'm sure they don't know if they should bring it up. Particularly the fact that the culture of Earth is about 1,000 years ahead of Orth is something I didn't touch on at all.

"Fu~ ..I feel refreshed. Al, dry me off."

Zenom came out of the shower in borderline underwear wiping his head as he came towards me.

Something like the half-naked appearance of an old dwarf man, I've already gotten used to seeing it.

"Yeah.."

I paused the discussion to dry off Zenom's head.

And then Zenom started talking as the drying wind was blowing towards his head and he continued drying it off.

"Kamu, and also Kimu. You were surprised right? There's no way to believe it right? I was surprised when I heard about it from Ralpa in the past as well. However, Ralpa started talking about 1 year after she was born. Normally it's something that's hard to imagine.
I didn't have any choice other than to believe it. The fact that I had more or less heard about the details before I met Al and heard his story must have been a big reason it was easier for me to accept it."

"..."

"I don't know how much Al told you about. However, just remember this. For Al to talk about their secret..though I guess you can't completely call it that but in any case the meaning of them discussing such an important matter. Tomorrow we'll be going to the 7th and 8th floors but I think there's still plenty more for you two to be surprised about. Seeing that, knowing it, I don't know what you'll think but if you have any thoughts it's fine if you just ask without holding back. I'm sure they'll reply. Nn, thanks, that's plenty."

I was released by Zenom from being an exclusive dryer so I decided to say one more thing before dinner.

"Just as Zenom said just now we aren't particularly hiding the fact that we were reincarnated so it's not a secret. That's why if you want to tell someone else I don't particularly mind. But, if you're going to talk about it then I want you to think about what kind of meaning is behind it. Including what kind of influence the things you say will have on the surrounding people."

Kamu and Kimu both nodded quietly.

"Just, I want you to keep things related to body level and such a secret for the time being. For example even from the {Butchers} and {Exterminators}. We think it's still too soon to tell them. If you think about it a bit you can understand right? If they were to find out about this then they might get full of themselves or overdo things. It's fine if they just think they're killing monsters like crazy because I told them to and it can't be helped..Still for the time being."

"Certainly..If I had heard about it a while ago and believed it then I too.."

"But, thinking about the strength of the {Saviors} and it makes sense..Even I would have probably pushed myself quite a bit.."

I'm sure.

It's even possible members of the same party might start fighting over earning experience points from monsters.

No, it wouldn't be strange for that to happen.

After all when it comes to monsters on the 1st or 2nd floors, particularly if it's just on the level of goblins or gnolls then while they might be a bit dangerous, if first-rate adventurers properly get into formation there's almost no danger to their lives.

Though they must suffer some injuries but at most it's at that level.

"It would be a problem for this discussion to reach outside of the {Slaughterers} as well right.."

"That's right. Everyone will start killing monsters like crazy in order to get even stronger."

"But, reckless idiots might die all on their own."

"Though I can't imagine those sorts of idiots would be in the {Verdure.Brotherhood} or {Gehenna.Flare}."

It seems the two of them have regained themselves to the point where they can speak lightly.

"Yeah, I don't mind if you talk about it with someone else who knows but there's no guarantee who might be listening in on the surface. Since people pay quite a bit of attention to us after all. Just be careful of that."

It seems that preparations for dinner have just finished.

I guess we can take our time discussing the rest after dinner.

Chapter 298: Towards A New Floor

Year 7447, Month 5, Day 9

We arrived at the monster room which ogre mages are believed to be in on the 7th floor.

Today Kamu and Kimu are with us so our pace is a bit slow.

The current time is around 10:00 in the morning.

It took us 4 hours to get up to here in the usually fast pace 7th floor after all.

Furthermore, we discussed even more of the fine details with the two of them last night.

A meeting is necessary before we charge into the monster room.

Though I say that the content is just a single sentence.

"I'll go and finish them off so wait here. Let's take a short break."

Just that.

Ah, I also put some hot water into the flask Giberuti handed me and ordered him to make some tea.

It's just the right sort of place for a rest point after all.

After that I carefully sneak up to the center of the room and after discovering the ogre and ogre mage group freeze them in ice using level 8 water and fire magic then it's just a matter of waiting. In reality though it would have been fine to fight them in close combat like usual but this time Kamu and Kimu are here, well~ I thought I should show them a somewhat good show.

Now I already know that I can finish them off with ice made using just level 8. It's not necessary to use it 8 times over like the first time I tried it. That's right, though a single usage of level 7 is a bit tough. At the very least double is needed. If you can at least use 3~4 times the amount then even if the aim is a bit off from the center of the group it'll definitely end the lives of the ogres.

When it comes to level 8 you create an amount of ice that is more than enough to not have to worry about things like that so the consumed MP is plenty at just two types of level 8 magic for a total of 16. It's still plenty even if I don't use all of it and decrease the amount. Additionally it's easier when it comes time to erase it.

I froze them inside of ice that's 5 meters high and 30 meters or so in diameter.

Even this is barely 1/30th of the amount of ice I can make with level 8 magic.

Though it's still roughly 3.5 times the amount of level 7.

The reason I'm so bent on using ice is because even if I were to bury them in the same amount of dirt with Earth Magic at least 1 of them would be able to escape.

If you use Earth Magic to create dirt it either appears from your hands or falls from the space above where you're aiming so it's necessary to create more than the amount you actually need. Obviously there's a time lag before they're completely buried so they can move out the way. Although, it requires less MP so you can create all that much more for that amount but if there's that much more it becomes a pain when you're erasing it with {Anti-Magic Field} to find the corpses and gather the magic stones.

After freezing them in ice I briskly walked back to the place where everyone was waiting. A short break while sipping at the tea Giberuti prepared for me.

"Umm, Greed-kun. What about the ogre mages..."

Kamu who's sitting in our circle so we can keep an eye on the situation behind each others backs asked while taking some tea from Giberuti.

"Hn? Yeah, I went and took care of them. They should die pretty soon."

After entering the circle I immediately started sipping at my tea after taking it. It seems like Kamu and Kimu don't understand what I'm saying at all. They exchanged shocked looks with each other before preparing to say something.

"How many were there?"

Ralpa asked while sitting cross-legged and sipping some disgusting tea so the two who were about to say something stopped. No matter how you look at it Ralpa appears to have no sense of danger at all. However, it's certainly not very good even though it's made with hot water~ I understand what you're thinking but couldn't you make a bit better of a face, isn't this fellow too honest?

"The same as usual. Around 10 or so I guess? I didn't properly count them so no clue. Oh~ give me some roasted beans."

I take some roasted beans as a tea snack from Gwine and start crunching away at them. Beans are delicious.

"It sure is a good room as usual right."

"For real, this is about the only place with over 10 ogres all gathered together after all~"

"Right~ it's a nice break whenever Al-san does it at times like this."

"I know right~ give me some roasted beans too."

"Here you go."

Gwine and Basutorial were having that sort of carefree conversation.

Zulu and Angela have already taken out their large knives for gathering the magic stones and have them placed at their sides as they drink tea while Zenom is busy trying to pull out a hair from his beard that's grown in a weird spot.

"Hey, Greed-kun. Is it fine to be doing something like this? Even if I ask everyone they say there's no problem and that we'll understand soon but won't tell us anything.."

Kimu asked nervously while holding a cup of tea with both of her hands.

"I heard that you would take care of them using magic

though.."

Kamu seems to be having trouble calming down.

"Yeah, I froze all of the ogres together in ice."

""Frozen in ice...""

"They should all be dead in another 10 minutes or so."

""All dead...""

Nn..I see, the two of them aren't able to use magic was it..Then it makes sense that they wouldn't be able to understand.

Of course, I don't mean the fact that I can freeze ogres in ice.

"Nn, you'll understand when you see later."

We killed some time while taking a break waiting for the frozen ogres to suffocate and then it's finally time to gather the magic stones.

If Miduchi was here then I could have her erase the ice as practice for using {Anti-Magic Field} but she isn't so I have to erase it. I deployed an {Anti-Magic Field} that's 5 meters in every direction in front of my left hand before walking around erasing the ice.

Whenever a corpse appears Zulu, Angela, and everyone else quickly take out their knives and run over.

I can hear Kamu and Kimu talking a bit of distance away from me where I have them keeping lookout just in case.

"If he could have done this from the start at that time.."

"Sis, what are you saying? If that was the case then Koritto-san and the others will still be cheating money out of us."

"Ah, I see."

"Also in the end no one died that time after all."

"But, along the way I thought that someone would definitely die.."

"That might be true but even though my arm was broken I didn't think I would die~"

"Since I was able to see it all from the back..I saw them use magic, I was really surprised."

It's not like they're whispering in secret so I think those nearby can all hear them.

I took a look at Gwine who was gathering magic stones closest to them and she had a clear bitter smile on her face.

The corpse of an ogre with an expression of anguish on it's face.

A young female dwarf making a bitter smile as she cuts open it's chest.

It's a bit surreal.

And then we arrived at the teleport crystal room of the 7th floor.

It seems that Kamu and Kimu were so surprised seeing the ogres frozen in ice in the monster room that they fell over backwards but when I explained to them how I discovered an efficient method to earn experience points and level up the magic skills on the way here they made faces as if they were impressed. We took a bit of a break and then teleported into the 8th floor because it was still too early for lunch.

.....

"After all the 8th floor is different.."

"Trolls was it, what's with those things..No matter how many times you stab them their wounds heal right in front of your eyes, I couldn't believe it until I actually saw it.."

Both Kamu and Kimu were considerably fatigued by the time we arrived in the teleport room of the 8th floor. Just as I thought they were grumbling they were sitting down. This, if the mino was still remaining wouldn't it have been bad?

"Even then if you just ignore the recovery of their wounds and continue to stab them you can defeat them though."

"It was easy when using fire magic right?"

Gwine and Ralpa started talking to the two of them. I quickly started taking off my armor and handed the parts to Zulu. I want to be ready so I can go and take a shower at anytime once Giberuti takes my change of clothes out from his bag.

"But, it's still worth the trouble with how the value of a value the troll's magic stones are right."

Kamu happily said.

"The color is bad but they're bigger than the ones from ogres."

Ralpa replied while quickly taking off her leather armor.

"And you know. Those huge bugs, defeating them itself is considerably easier than the ogres."

Kimu said with a tone of voice several times more cheerful.

"That's right. Even though that's the case their magic stones are worth around 100,000 a piece after all. Honestly speaking if you want to earn money it would be easier to just walk around the 8th floor than wandering around trying to find ogres right. And ogres are strong after all."

Well, if you were to ask me ogres are easier though. Less numbers of them appear so I don't have to use magic as many times. But, well, it's just as Gwine said the bugs don't send instant kill attacks flying like the ogres so that's also true. Ah, the scythes of the mantis aren't for the sake of cutting but in order to fix their prey in place once they've grabbed them. Even if they were to get a hold of your arm with no armor on it at worst it would cut down to the bone or break it and it's not to the point of cutting it off. Though if they were to get a hold of your neck it'd be dangerous but that's not just limited to the mantis after all.

By chance we didn't encounter any Scavenger Crawlers today so we were able to obtain mostly relatively valuable magic stones.

Yeary 7447, Month 5, Day 10

"What's that?"

Kamu asked Giberuti who was carrying the net gun as usual.

"Hn? It's a new model of bow."

Giberuti sure says some good things. I've had him learn how to fire the gun as well so he knows about the word gun.

"Bow? It doesn't have any strings, how strange..It doesn't seem like it's a crossbow either."

Kimu asked out of curiosity.

"It's something we use against the group of Minotaurs just before the teleport room of the 9th floor. I think you'll understand when you see it."

Basutoral said with a bit more detail but in the end didn't explain anything.

Though that's fine.

I worried about it for a bit on whether or not to use the net gun but in the end decided to use it.

Prior to that, as expected it's a bit scary not using it even though Kamu and Kimu are with us.

In the first place, different from the rifle this one has almost no ability to kill or injure.

If the sticks that act as the launching platform land a direct hit then it might hurt a bit but even that's limited.

Umu, the name net gun isn't good.

It would be best to change it to {Net.Shooter}.

..Though it's just word play.

Well, since I've already decided to use it for the time being I forbid Kamu and Kimu from speaking about it.

Though the two of them said they have that deep of an understanding about the obligation to silence in the part, just in the case, right.

"But, the 9th floor huh.."

"If we're talking about the 9th floor then"

However, I guess they lost interest in it soon after because Kamu and Kimu started whispering about something in a low voice.

It seems it's a discussion about food.

The crabs?

.....

"Delicious! This crab is so good!"

"It was called kanishabu right? I really like this."

The single crab we defeated along the way on the 9th floor. It was worth it having Giberuti carry it.

Kamu and Kimu were delighted as they ate it.

Us?

As expected we didn't make that much noise over it.

We always eat it at least once after all.

Though it never gets old.

"Ah~ I'm so glad I made it into the {Saviors}.."

"We were only able to eat it once after all..It was worth it putting in the effort.."

I'm glad you're willing to say that.

However, I'm sure it's a joke saying you were willing to put in the effort for the sake of the crab but that sure is cheap, really.

Occasionally Basutorial would go back carrying some crab legs and even Toris brings back kanimiso pretty often you know.

Didn't you know?

That time when Bel made crab shuumai, weren't you around?

Or did we just eat that with the {Saviors}?

Since we didn't have any soy sauce we stopped after just that once.

Rather than that what happened to the talk about being impressed by the net gun, or rather net shooter?

Putting that aside, things will be tough starting tomorrow when we work on the map of the 10th floor.

Make sure you get plenty of rest.

.....

Just like this we gave our best for about two months and a considerable portion of the map for the 10th floor entered Gwine's head.

During that time the only real thing that happened was the elf Basu, Hyumu sara, and the {Shield.Holder} Benno from the party {Verdure.Brotherhood} ended up seriously injured against ogres on the 7th floor and had to escape, so they had no choice but to suspend activities for a short while.

Ah, supposedly {Gehenna.Flare} is carefully walking around the 6th floor. Also, it seems that {Black.Topaz} purchased several combat slaves.

Oh that's right, in regards to the amulet but it seems that the bidding will end on August 4th.

Just one more month away.

I'm really looking forward to what the final price will be.

Everything is going smoothly for us {Slaughterers}.

Kamu and Kimu have completely blended into our {Saviors} and just as expected from them originally being first-rate adventurers they're pretty reliable as well. Particularly when it comes to knowledge about discovering ores through mining, Kamu was extremely familiar with it. If Kamu says this area smells then roughly 1/10th of the time some type of ore or gem will come out. Though they're mostly just cheap ones.

According to Miduchi gnomes are the next best at these sorts of things after dwarves. Though hearing that pissed off Zenom who doesn't have any knowledge about mineral veins or mining. Come to think of it Arnold, the squire dwarf in Bakuddo who was in charge of forging, his father Gerudan.Furintogel was completely useless when it came to things like forging and craftsmanship. Though different from Zenom he was extremely strong at drinking alcohol.

Kamu was born in a squire household that serves a baron who manages a mining district in Count Rozenhaim's territory so while she hasn't ever actually worked in the mines she was reasonably knowledgeable about it. No wonder. According to her almost everything below the 6th floor is iron and there's rarely some suspicious places when walking through the halls. Particularly since she entered the 10th floor she said the number of times her intuition has kicked in has increased quite a bit. Even just taking this into consideration I think it's great that Kamu switched parties.

Also, while we weren't able to find any actual {Magic.Items} us {Saviors} were able to find 3 magic tools and while Miduchi was acting as the leader the {Butchers} found some completely transparent lens-shaped glass that's estimated to be worth 10,000,000 Z. You might think the price is a bit too high but completely transparent glass is extremely expensive. Since it can be used as seed glass after all. According to the president of Sandak Company something similar to it has come out of Baldukk a number of times up until now. I ended up buying this. Since it seems like I could use it in the future.

Between the end of June and the start of July the time for Kamu and Kimu to be dispatched to the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} as leaders arrived. Since neither of them can use magic I told them not to push things too far this time.

However, it's different for the {Saviors}.

It's finally time for us to clear the 10th floor.

I wonder how far we can go against the guardian without the rifles?

Would it be best to at least bring along the net shooter?

Chapter 299: Underground Terror

Year 7447, Month 6, Day 29

Just before entering the 2 km in diameter large room where the guardian of the 10th floor is believed to be waiting for challengers we decided to have a meeting along with lunch. In the end we brought along both the rifle and the net shooter. Since we're fighting against the guardian of the 10th floor for the first time I thought it was necessary to be as careful as possible. We've even predicted that the guardian this time might be a lot more of those absurdly strong minos. Therefore, including Miduchi not a single person was against bringing along the guns.

"I wonder if it'll be Minotaurs again.."

Gwine said while burying a bone from the chicken leg she just ate in the ground.

"Won't that be the case?"

Toris replied while licking the oil off his fingers.

It sure seems convenient when the end of your tongue is forked.

"The 8th and 9th floors are fine since we know them but I wonder if there were really Minotaurs on the 5th, 6th, and 7th floors?"

And then said as if confirming with me.

"Yeah, that's what I heard from the King. Though supposedly there's no records remaining of the 1st to the 4th floors but I think it's most likely fine to think they were Minotaurs."

I sip at the dried meat soup that was made in my flask while replying.

"What method are we going to use when going in?"

Zenom asked while wiping his dirty beard with a towel.

"What method? Isn't the same as usual fine? Bel entangles them with the net. Then Maruso shoots the ones that aren't caught up in the net. Isn't that fine?"

Ralpa replied as if wanting to say what other methods are there? while already peeling the skin off the dessert orange. Though that's fine as the procedure for charging into battle. But, what Zenom is asking about is the details of the formation, the distance between each person, the order for Angela to shoot in and simultaneously the order for Miduchi to provide backup fire, he wants to discuss things like that ahead of time.

"Isn't the same basic line we used against the Minotaurs on the 9th floor fine?"

Bel said that but there's no way of coming up with any other strategy than that.

The things we should be discussing right now are re-confirming our tactical patterns when up against the group of Minotaurs on the 9th floor and how to deal with unexpected circumstances.

In other words, first off is the problem of whether or not there's another {Anti-Skill Area}. We should assume there "is" I'm sure. I'm sure we'll be able to figure it out immediately if Miduchi's {Party-ization} gets cut off and in the case it remains in effect then it's just a lucky situation because I can freeze them or use attack spells to finish things up.

Next up is problems in regards to the terrain where the battle takes place. Just from a glance and this ridiculously large room doesn't seem any different from the room in the center of the 8th and 9th floors. If we were assume that it's the same sort of room then in the center would be a large pillar with the teleport crystal room in it and the Minotaurs should be guarding the entrance to there. Roughly 50 meters surrounding the pillar there's no rocks that can be used to hide behind, it's believed to be a dull and dry area with just dirt ground spread out.

The problem is in the case that there's rocks which could act as obstructions or to hide behind and depending on the case maybe even trees and bushes like on the 7th floor. Depending on the size and density of those it might even be difficult to use effectively use the net shooter. We needed to discuss what to in a case like that.

"..I guess it's about time to go."

We finished up our discussion and after burying the the chicken bones and other food in a hole we did a final check of our equipment.

Bayonet, good.

Knife, good.

Survival kit, good.

The various bands including the tie for my helmet, good.

Everyone else is checking their equipment as well.

Along with the usual equipment Bel has one of the net shooters on her. Furthermore she brought along 1 of the Arrows of Blindness just in case.

Miduchi has the spare net shooter and 3 Arrows of Blindness.

And then Angela is using the rifle. This time Angela isn't carrying a shield.

Basutorial and Zulu who carried the nets up to here have finally gotten lighter.

"We'll go with {Hammer Head.Three} with 5 meter intervals."

Zenom stands in the center of the formation with Toris on his right, then Ralph to the right of that. Zulu is on Zenom's left and further to the left from Zulu is me. Basutoral is standing at the head of the handle portion of the hammer and behind him is Gwine followed by Angela, Bel, and Miduchi who are in formation in the shape of a T.

And then we charged into the room and just as expected roughly 500 meters into the room the sensation of the 5 at the lead almost simultaneously disappeared from {Party-ization}. Since we were already used to it on the 8th and 9th floors and had predicted it ahead of time there's not a single person in a panic over it.

Everyone is calm.

Immediately after Toris hid behind a nearby rock before activating the flames of {Flame.Tongue} for just a moment. It seems there's no problem with the usage of {Magic.Items}.

Just as planned the members acting as the handle of the hammer continue advancing while we switch over to the formation {Echelon.Two}. The moment we enter sight of the guardian the room will get bright and the moment Bel fires the net this time we'll change formation to {Balance.Two} as Miduchi takes command over the whole.

Since I don't have any projectile weapons it's best for me to act as a pawn on the front line.

It would be fine for me to use the rifle as well but if it comes to that then the combat strength of our front line would decrease considerably.

Up until now there's been no major difference between the center rooms on the 8th and 9th floors.

We should enter the sight of the guardian if we proceed another 400 meters and I'm sure the cage of lightning bolts will activate.

We continued advancing carefully.

Long before the point we were expecting the room suddenly got bright and following that the cage of lightning bolts activated. There's still rugged rocks all around us. Though the size of the rocks are smaller and only about the height of a person we still can't confirm the appearance of the guardian that should be below the pillar ahead of us.

Everyone including myself suddenly tense up.

Our plans weren't set until another 50 meters ahead.

This, isn't a mino!

Even if it is a mino it's one that's even more powerful!

"{Arrowhead.Six}! Our field of vision is bad here, advance forward!

Bel, the moment you see the opponent fire!!"

I immediately gave the order to put Bel at the lead with Miduchi and Angela behind her on both sides as the {Saviors} quickly switched into formation following my orders and started advancing at a fast pace. The fact that the room brightened up means that the guardian knows we're here so there's no point in trying to hide our footsteps at this point.

Also, the fact that it was able to detect us at this distance means the opponent has sharp detection senses on the level of ogre mages otherwise it might have a skill like {Vibration.Sensing} similar to the Sand Sharks and Lesser Yowie. Even if it does have such a skill, I don't know whether it's using that or not.

After dashing about 20 meters ahead Bel jumped on top of a 1 meter high rock and prepared to fire the net shooter. Following behind her Miduchi and Angela both deployed to the sides before preparing their weapons. What I saw in the direction they were looking were 2 large humanoid monsters that seemed to be over 3 meters tall running over here.

Their legs look thick and sturdy and their tiptoes are split into two as if they only have two toes, then at the end of those are sharp claws.

It seems there's also a large sharp finger at the back of their heel as well.

Their arms are thick and they appear to have four fingers but all of those have similar sharp claws just like their feet.

They have wide bodies almost like they're covered in chitin and the color is a dark brown {Amber} close to black.

On top of their bodies there's a large horizontally flat head almost as if it was embedded into their necks.

The width of it is almost the same as their body and probably close to 1 meter in size.

Below the front of their wide flat heads is a large mouth that seems like it reaches from one side to the other and I can see countless fangs inside of it.

On both sides of it's mouth there's a large curved fang that's at least 10 cm long going towards the interior.

1 of the 2 has another pair of fangs on both the inside and outside that seems to be 10 times the length and has edged teeth along it almost like a stag beetle with a sturdy looking curved upper jaw.

The other 1 has an upper jaw with fangs that curve towards the outside but this ones just look slightly larger than the fangs on the inside.

Above their mouths there's a pair of eyes almost like an animal that aren't spread apart at very wide intervals but even further on the outside of their large flat heads there's a pair of compound eyes almost like an insect giving off an emerald green light.

What in the world are those? Giant stag beetles!?

The giant stag beetles seem to be letting out a roar as they gradually accelerate running towards us.

The heavy thud sounds from their footsteps echo around the area allowing us to recognize once again just how big they are.

Since there's 2 of them it would be ideal if Bel can capture both of them at once but I won't say anything too extravagant.

It's fine even if it's just one of them.

They seem like troublesome monsters but if Miduchi can entangle the remaining one then I'm sure it's over for them.

"!"

After seeing the appearance of the monsters Miduchi took a breath for just a moment but soon after that fired the net shooter. She fired it at almost the same time as Bel. After firing the net shooter Miduchi drew the sword at her waist and yelled.

"It's an {Amber.Goliath}! {Spread}!"

Just from a glance it's an opponent that looks dangerous.

All over the surface of it's body it reflects dull light almost like a stag beetle.

I feel like, I've previously heard of the name {Amber.Goliath} itself from Miduchi.

Supposedly they encountered it when they were in the middle of expansion work for her hometown, the underground city Erurehei.

I remember it as being something that specializes in digging tunnels.

That's right, supposedly it's status comes up as {Underground.Vodyanoy} I think it was?

It seems that the nets Bel and Miduchi launched entangled the individual on the left side with the smaller jaw.

"Everyone, open up as wide of intervals as possible! The front line should try not to look at the opponent as much as possible!! Arrows won't be able to pierce it!!"

That's absurd!

But, there's not a single person who said any complaints and let it dull their actions.

"Just watch their footsteps! If you look at both of the {Amber.Goliaths} outer eyes from nearby you'll be confused! Maruso, you should retreat and put some distance between them before calmly aiming."

While Miduchi was in the middle of saying that Angela's rifle let out a thunderous roar.

The bullet certainly hit the leg of the one with a large upper jaw.

It's a sure thing if you first aim to injure it's legs and steal it's mobility so aiming for the legs was the right choice.

However, of all things!

The surface of the shell that covers it's knees almost like armor let off some sparks!

The fact that it gave off sparks means that the bullet was deflected!?

No way!?

However, there's one more shot.

After the thunderous roar echoed out once more a bullet was fired from the rifle and hit its large abdomen.

This time it didn't give off any sparks and seems to have properly done some damage.

There's a yellow liquid almost like pus spraying out from the hole in its abdomen.

I felt a bit relieved.

"Fall back, Maruso!! Just make sure you properly maintain your distance!"

At the same time as Miduchi's strict voice sounded out, Zenom put some fighting spirit into it with a "Hmph!!" as he threw his axe.

The axe spun around in circles as it flew before stabbing into the right arm of the giant stag beetle as it tried to defend.

Nice diversion!

"Gimo~~~!!!"

The giant stag beetle with injuries to its right arm and stomach let out a scream in agony but even then continued running while swinging its large claws without lowering speed.

By the way, I wonder if being confused from looking at its eyes is a special skill?

Then wouldn't it not be able to use it here?

Just in case I guess.

"Ku!!"

Bin~ and I heard the sound of bowstrings being released from Bel's bow.

It seems she was aiming for the eyes on it's head but the giant stag beetle shifted it's posture slightly and took the arrow in an unexpected place.

The arrow was deflected.

"Arrows will bounce off! Bel you join in the front line! Zulu {Cover.3}!"

I listen to Miduchi shout towards Bel while dashing ahead with my bayonet at the ready.

Bullets can pass through it's stomach and chest.

Then I should be able to manage with my bayonet as well.

"5! 3! 10! Oooooohh~!!"

I simply convey my plan while ducking under the claws of it's left arm and stab into the place believed to be it's abdomen.

Good resistance!

"Geeee~!!"

Don't scream in my ear. You're too loud~

I twist around my bayonet trying to expand the damage.

"Saji! Cover for Al!! Ral you go from {Right.2}, Toris and Zulu go {Left.11}!"

After receiving my orders I listen to Miduchi as she gives out commands at a fast pace and evade the attack from it's arm as it pulls it back.

"Ta~rya!"

A spear is thrust over the top of my head.

Basutorial huh?

"Eeei!!"

Gakun~ and the posture of the giant collapsed.

It seems that Ralpa's axe hit it's injured right arm.

In the corner of my sight Zenom's axe pulled itself out automatically and returned while rotating.

"Emeron!"

Toris stabbed into it's left side with his sword covered in flames and then ran past while slicing it.

A sizzling sound came out from it's wound and in a moment an unpleasant smell started to appear.

"Gogyaaaaa!!!"

A high-pitched shriek started surging out from right above me.

"Hmph!!"

After Toris ran by it seems Zulu dealt a blow to it's left arm with his bastard sword.

What a magnificent combo.

It must be the results of their usual training.

Miduchi yelled, "Maruso! Restrain the other one!" while entering position to cover for me.

"Gabubado!"

It seems Bel's finally drawn her sword and started charging.

Ralpa is still holding it in check to my left.

"To the right!!"

Hearing Gwine's shout I shifted my position to the right of the giant while pulling out my bayonet.

The stance of the giant collapsed and it fell with it's left knee to the ground.

A magic spear was suddenly thrust through the area that my body was in up until now.

However, the giant suddenly opened it's upper jaw and towards me..!

"Quickly!!"

At the last minute Miduchi entered to cover for me and cut off one of it's upper jaws.

Almost simultaneously Angela fired a bullet to hold back the other enemy.

Once again Basutorial and Gwine thrust their spears and helped avert the giants only remaining upper jaw away from me.

It's the beat-it-from-all-sides mode the same as last time.

"Uaaaaaa!!?"

That's Ralpha's voice!

Fear, anxiety, excitement, confusion, chaos, there's a lot of emotions mixed into it.

I spontaneously looked in her direction.

Obviously during that time the giant was still on one knee...

It flexed the inner fangs of it's remaining upper jaw and fixed it's aim towards me.

Both of it's large compound eyes at the base of it's upper jaw entered my sight.

Each of it's small individual compound eyes are flashing giving off a minute light.

What? Is this?

I can't take my eyes off it.

Even though there wasn't anything at all when I saw it from the distance...

Suddenly I felt like throwing up and my vision started twisting together.

Chapter 300: Confusion

Year 7447, Month 6, Day 29

I could still somehow tell up to the point where Ralph raised her voice and cowered over in fear.

However soon after the scenery reflected in front of my eyes gradually became unfixed and began to melt together almost like paint tossed all over a canvas, the scenery twisted around into a mix of rich colors.

My hands, feet, and body all lost their fixed shape and crumbled fusing together with the things nearby transforming into a portion of some avant-garde art painting or something.

Simultaneously,

"Uwa~~~~n" a sound almost like a swarm of winged insects,

"bang~bang" a sound almost like a hammer banging into concrete,

"swish~swish" a light sound,

"Ban~" a sound almost like suddenly hitting various keys of a piano,

"Biyo~~n" a sound almost like one from stringed instruments, and then the sound almost like an engine from an automobile revving up...

There was a wide variety of sounds that I can't even express them all flowing through my head.

I feel seriously nauseous.

I momentarily remembered my sense of crisis.

In any case I need to be able to give out at least the bare minimum orders.

First I need to do something about Ralph who's condition seems strange.

"Ralph 9~nine!"

There's so much strange noise interfering that I can't even hear my own voice.

However, I definitely felt the sensation of my voice passing through my throat.

Suddenly a pure white concentric circular pattern spread out in front of my eyes almost like blooming flowers.

While it was spreading out and moving far away it gradually got even more transparent and in no time at all scattered and disappeared.

I thought that the scenery had crumbled into an unfixed form but before I noticed it had changed to pitch black almost like outer space. All over the place inside of that there were small gatherings of rich color almost like a small coin being born, moving, and disappearing. Even though there's so many various noises flowing through my head it's strange because I can ascertain the direction and volume of each one of them.

However, whenever I try to look in the direction that the giant stag beetle was in the loud sound of an insect swarm rapidly moves in front of me. Simultaneously a violent stream of sounds and colors that I've never experienced before mercilessly passed through my ears and eyes making it even more disgusting and strengthening the nausea.

Shit!!

I don't know what's what but I can still clearly feel the sensation of the bayonet held in my right hand.

Several overlapping bright red circles moved by my side and then after passing me, scattered, and disappeared again.
All over the place there's yellow, green, and blue circles overlapping as they move around at high pace expanding and then soon after becoming transparent and disappearing.

If I were to say that the direction they're heading stretches almost like several rubber bands piled on top of each other would you understand?

Otherwise, ripples that spread out into the sky while advancing?

Though I feel like it might be a bit different something like that doesn't matter at all.

In the low direction where I believe the ground should have been there's some light brown circles appearing but these ones disappear without advancing all that far away.

I feel almost like I've taken some kind of dangerous drugs.

However, the back of my mind is rapidly growing cold.

Though such an absurd situation suddenly started up I can still somehow think about things.

I don't feel the so-called happiness that supposedly comes when drugs take effect at all.

Though I can't tell for sure since I've never tried drugs.

Now that I've ordered Ralpa to withdraw from the battlefield in any case what I need to do is somehow hold back the giant in front of me. I'd really like for her to take some distance from the giant once and then take another look at the situation but Ralpa had just yelled out in a strange voice as her appearance turned strange. I need to backup those who come to help Ralpa withdraw!

However, the noise is too loud it's way beyond the level of just distracting.

All that's reflected in front of my eyes is the brightly colored balls that make no sense at all.

It's really confusing to the point where I don't know what the hell is going on.

I wonder if Ralpa ended like this as well?

In front of my eyes various brown-colored bubbles almost like carbonation from soda started to surge out.

Simultaneously what seems to be the origin for the sound of the swarm of insects around there seemed to have moved a bit.

The giant should have been just around that area.

At the same time as the clear "kin~" sound of metal hitting something echoed through my ears a large rainbow-colored shining circle suddenly spread all over the place before disappearing.

What in the world is going on!

The nauseous is still seriously bad.

Almost at the same time the sound like a piano suddenly appeared to my left side and then moved ahead of me just like that.

However, just before it moved in front of me a number of small red circles stretched out from the source of the sound and the sound of the piano pushed me away along with them, at the same time large red circles spread out around where my chest should be.

It felt almost like I was pushed away by someone as they passed by.

Suddenly the loud sound of a swarm of insects passed by around where I was until just now.

I ended up falling to just my right knee and somehow managed to endure falling over.

I wonder if it was good luck that I managed to avoid completely tripping over, or...

!?

Ah, damn it!

So that's what it was!!

The red color and piano sound from just now was Miduchi!

The sound of an insect swarm is the giant!

My sight and hearing have been switched!!

What appeared to be circles were actually sounds.

What sounded like noises were the scenery that should have been reflected in my eyes.

Calm down, me.

In, other words..

I must have been captured in some kind of special skill or spell.

In that case.

First off I should try using Identify.

The moment I activated the Unique Ability Identify I felt like the sound of an insect swarm that I can hear in front of my eyes got a bit higher.

I guess this means that Identify took effect?

Then in that case!

"You should be able to use magic!"

I shouted in a loud enough voice that everything in front of my eyes was covered in pure white circles.

Simultaneously I left the giant in front of me to Miduchi while thinking I should finish off the giant that's caught in the net.

I look in the direction I can vaguely recall.

.....It's considerably smaller than the sound in front of my eyes but the sound of a different swarm of insects certainly reached my ears.

At the same time I can tell there's a very small amount of what appears to be the brown-colored circles...

Over there!

There shouldn't be anyone over in that area.

I can't hear any other sounds in between myself and that insect swarm that's far away.

That means there shouldn't be any obstacles between us.

Alright.

Along with another "kin" and the vivid sound of metal, a tremendously large rainbow-colored flash appeared covering everything before disappearing again.

..This is, Angela's rifle I guess? I wonder if that vivid metallic sound is the muzzle flash?

With my right knee still on the ground I stretched my left hand towards the sound of an insect swarm in the distance.

{Stone Ballista Missile}!

I feel so nauseous it's difficult to concentrate.

In part because I was in a hurry but it felt like it took almost an eternity for the spell to activate though even then I'm sure it was at most 3~4 seconds.

Simultaneously the sounds of 5 "ki~~n" sounds almost like a jet engine appeared along with the shrill of metal as they flew off into the distance in no time at all and along with deep blue circles disappeared around where the swarm of insects were.

The moment I was sure that the spell had hit I finally reached my limit and threw up all over the ground.

Sour.

Smelly.

It seems my taste and smell are normal.

I don't know if it's because I threw up once but it feels like things got just a bit more comfortable.

There's multi-colored circles appearing here and there before disappearing.

After firmly adjusting my hold on the bayonet in my right hand again I can hear a light "powa~powa" sound from around where it should be.

I guess it's the sound of my bayonet in my vision.

In front of my eyes there's been some small yellow and earth colored circles appearing around where the swarm of insects is and then moving off into the distance. I can also hear some sort of bouncing sound as if something was hit and a cry almost like cicadas moving off into the distance.

One of them should probably be Ralpa and the other should be Basutoral or Gwine dragging her away I guess.

Almost simultaneously an extremely loud sound of a piano being hit rang out and mixed together with the sound of an insect swarm.

Along with the sound of the piano several red circles appeared and started to move around.

Miduchi must be shouting something while fighting.

There some pink-colored circles joined in and twisted together along with a sound like "gishi~gishi" as they moved. Around where my feet should be I can tell there's some small brown circles appearing. It seems to be the sound of footsteps.

Bel huh?

Somehow it seems like a high sound was sucked into the sound of an insect swarm but the moment it made contact the high sound changed directions along with an outbreak of green circles.

I guess Toris or someone's attack spell was deflected?
After that there was a banging sound almost like an engine and then sounds almost like stringed instruments approaching that sound.

"That's no good, don't approach it! Everyone take some distance!!

Bel you retreat as well!! Angela stop firing!! I request backup from just Zenom!!"

You'll end up just like me!

It would be best to leave it to Miduchi who has a bit of knowledge and decent close combat strength.

She has a sword that could even cut through that upper jaw after all.

Also, it's already injured.

The "gishi~gishi" sound went off into the distance.

"Miduchi!! 5 seconds after I give the signal duck down!! I'm going to blow it away with cannon!! Everyone countdown! Let's go!"

I shouted that before pointing my left hand towards the closer insect swarm this time but just the same as usual I can't hear my own shouts at all and there's just the pure white circles spreading out in front of me and disappearing the same as before. I feel like this sight is making it feel even more disgusting. I start concentrating in order to use {Stone Cannon Missile} so the timing matches up with my shouting.

"5!"

Simultaneously various multi-colored circles started spreading out and disappearing.

Everyone, I guess they're counting down together with me?

It's good that they've kept their composure.

"4!"

"Ding~" a sound almost like the bell of a Buddhist altar or the ringing of a bell was absorbed by the sound of an insect swarm and continued to ring just like that.

"3!"

It must have been Zenom's axe, that.

"2!"

I pour in the mana while carefully pointing my left hand towards the sound of the insect swarm. I guess it's because I normally would be able to see it, I can properly grasp where the sound of the insect swarm is.

"1!"

And then the spell was completed.

A sound almost like a giant F/A-18E fighter jet's afterburner came out from the end of my left arm and flew off.

If it's Miduchi then even in the worst case she wouldn't mistake the timing.

I believe in her.

The insect swarm was just before my eyes.

Just in case I added missile to it but it's a distance that's hard to miss.

The sound of the F/A-18E super hornet fighter jet passed straight through the middle of the insect swarm sound.

Immediately after the sound of the insect swarm scattered into multiple directions.

All of the sounds seem to be coming from on top of the ground.

Did I do it?

I don't know if it's a stag beetle or whatever but that was my ultimate attack spell.

There's no way the likes of an insect swarm could win against Super Hornet-senpai.

If it hit then I think it would have killed it but I have no idea what's going on so I can't let my guard down.

"Did I kill it!!? If it's already fine then grab my hand and help me up."

The sound almost like a piano and a swerving flame started approaching me.

I felt the sound of a piano wrap around my hand which was still stretched out.

I guess that killed it...

I spontaneously leaned over onto the sound of a piano.

For just a moment I wondered what I should do if it isn't Miduchi but this sensation should be Miduchi.

Even if I look at my own body, it's mostly just small gray circles almost like grains that occasionally outbreak and almost completely transparent.

The sound of a piano returned my embrace.

It seems there's no longer any danger.

"What kind of condition is Ralpa in? She might be the same as me.

If she's still alive then grab my hand."

Various multi-colored circles appeared in front of my eyes before disappearing.

"Wa!!? Did she die!!?"

The various circles appear in front of my eyes and disappear again.

"Shit!!"

My hand was held tightly.

"So she's alright?"

My hand was held tightly again.

"Ah, sorry. I can see and hear but my eyes and ears were done in.

Also, I feel sick. I'm about to throw up."

Though I've already thrown up once.

The multi-colored circles are breaking out and disappearing in front of my eyes.

Ah, I should rinse out my mouth with water.

Etiquette is important.

Feels a bit late at this point though.

"Sorry but while I can tell you're saying something, I can't understand the content at all. I can tell where everyone is standing but I don't know what kind of expressions everyone is making. It seems the sensations of my eyes and ears switched places."

Multi-colored circles started appearing in front of my eyes and then disappeared.

"It might be the same for Ralpha. Someone hold her hand and help her relax."

"It's fine if it's Miduchi or anyone else but would someone use {Detect.Magic} on me? If there's a reaction then I don't think I'm injured but could someone use some kind of healing spell on me."

And while I was nervously talking suddenly~ the nausea disappeared and simultaneously my senses returned to normal.

I was relieved from the bottom of my heart.

Miduchi was crying with her eyes bright red.

It seems everyone else was worrying about me as well.

Even after identifying myself I couldn't find any major problems.

It seems there was a reaction for magic but whether it be {Cure} type, {Remove} type, or every other healing spell, none of them were effective.

I guess that means the duration of the effect ran out?

After listening to what happened once again and the combat itself didn't even last over a minute after Miduchi fired the net launcher. It seems that the duration my senses were messed up continued for over 10 minutes but supposedly Ralph recovered after 4~5 minutes.

Supposedly everyone around her including the {Amber.Goliath} changed into the appearance of the same person from her past life. Since it was her grandfather who she watched pass away from lung cancer after much suffering when she was young she ended up panicking. It must have been a kind of trauma. I just heard about it from Miduchi so I didn't ask in too much details but it seems she was forced to watch and listen to his dying screams. I'm sure it must have been terrifying.

According to Miduchi the effect of the {Amber.Goliaths} confusion is usually like that and shows illusions of people you knew from the past. Otherwise, if you're unlucky then you start to misunderstand everyone around you as being the {Amber.Goliath} and start attacking them by mistake. Supposedly she's never heard of anyone with symptoms like mine. I wonder just how unlucky I could be.

Also, the moment I finished of the second {Amber.Goliath} the cage of lightning bolts disappeared the same as usual.

Furthermore, just as can be determined from the situation, my stone cannon magnificently hit it and the giant stag beetle was split in half through the middle of it's body. In regards to this because it was a powerful spell that I've never showed even once in the past, everyone excluding Ralph were excited as they talked about it.

However, thanks to that even if I use Identify they just show up as {Corpse of Great.Underground.Voyanoy}.

Now that I've recovered Zulu was finally able to relax enough to start gathering the magic stones.

After confirming that I'm safe Angela started walking towards the other giant stag beetle further in as well.

I need to Identify the giant stag beetle to figure out their status and about that confusion.

I tried looking at the other one with Identify first but unfortunately this one was already {Corpse of Great.Underground.Vojanoy} as well.

I've already mentioned that if {Corpse of} appears in the status when I use Identify I can't get much information about them at all.

"Angela, check the status and if it's not a corpse then I'll use the {Identification} spell."

I said to Angela who stopped walking and turned around.

After nodding in agreement she started talking again.

"Hey, and then what was the {Magic.Item}?"

After recovering from both the stress and confusion Ralph Said.

The moment she recovers from the confusion and this.

As expected from our {Slaughterers} number one miser.

I was a bit impressed but it's true that including myself everyone else had completely forgotten about it.

Right. The fact that it's a guardian we've encountered for the first time means that it should have some kind of {Magic.Item}.

Everyone started looking at the torn in half corpse of the {Amber.Goliath} that Zulu was dissecting.

Zulu's already grappling with the upper body as he searches around so if he finds anything he should report it.

The fact that he hasn't means that there's nothing at all.

When the lower body was split off it seems to have done a few flips while flying about 10 meters away as the open wound of the body is facing over here.

Just from a glance that doesn't seem to have any kind of equipment on it either.

Next we looked in the direction of the corpse that Angela's crouching down by.

"Master!"

Angela raised her voice.

So it was this one.

Now~ it's time for the highly anticipated inspection of loot.

.....

"This is..a metal ingot I guess?"

There was a large leather bag hanging from the waist of the {Amber.Goliath} corpse that Angela was removing from the net in order to gather it's magic stone. After moving the leather bag to the ground I could see a clump of metal almost like metal ingots from the opening.

"Alright! There's a reaction so isn't it magic metal!?"

Ralpa dashed over even faster than me and already used {Detect.Magic}. I said I would use the {Identification} spell so being careful of {Cursed.Items} everyone left the unknown

{Magic.Item}-like thing for my arrival without touching it.

However, for it to be magic metal!?

I reflexively used Identify on it.

【Manufacture Date: 29/6/7447】

【Value: 1】

【Durability: 524288】

【Ability: The same as normal horseshoes.】

【Effect: Auto.Mending】

【Effect: In order to use these horseshoes it's necessary for over 50% of the surface area of the horseshoe to be in contact with a single nail(hardened skin) on the body. In the case that the conditions are met, the shape will automatically transform to match just the right size and shape of the target creatures nail. After this horseshoe has been equipped in a usable condition and the the creature starts using them, it will be able to move for 12 hours consecutively without being fatigued on top of being able to transport double the weight that creature can normally carry. Also, the creature that equips these horseshoes will be able to move over water that is less than 10% of it's height as if it were moving over normal land and furthermore it's possible to move over mud or other unstable terrain just the same. On the occasion of removing them they will easily come off with a touch for the one who equipped them. Furthermore, bear in mind that it's only obvious for the effect to be displayed if horseshoes are equipped to all of the nails required for movement.】

I just glanced through it but it's fine since it doesn't seem to be anything cursed.

Just in case I picked up the leather bag without touching the contents.

It was a lot lighter than I imagined from the size of it.

This, it's questionable whether it's even 10kg or so.

And then I grabbed on to the bottom of the bag and flipped it upside down.

Then a number of sparkling silver rough metal bars or plates that are about 7~8 cm long, 1 cm wide, and 5mm high came rolling out.

Just from a glance there seems to be around 200~300 of them. Furthermore, there didn't seem to be anything unusual about the leather bag at all.

With everyone watching over, I saw down cross-legged in front of the mountain of small metal plates and started pouring mana into the spell {Shine.Light.Eyes}.

...

"How pretty~"

"Ral, what kind of reaction did they have?"

"Nn~ I think it was the feeling of void magic, earth magic, and wind magic.."

"He~ I wonder what they are?"

.....

Sorry for the wait.

It'll take a while longer for the spell to be complete.

"Since there's a lot of them, I wonder if we'll sell a few?"

"You never know something like that."

"I guess that's true."

"But, if it's magic metal then we might be able to make a sword or something..Uwa"

.....

Of course it takes some time you know?

I can tell you're bored just watching over.

But you know~

"Master is concentrating, if you want to talk then do it over there.."

Angela, you're a really good person.

I'll definitely repay you.

Plus 1 point.

.....

Finally just now, my eyes should have shined.

Though I've just been continuing to stare at the metal on the ground so I'm sure it's not like anyone noticed either way.

"They may look like this but supposedly they're horseshoes. It seems they have the name {Breeze.Horseshoes}."

I said that but only Zulu and Angela who were on standby by my side were impressed and congratulated me.

Everyone else was a bit of distance away and,

"Hey, Miduchi. Can magic metal be sold for a high price?"

And the miser Ralph babbled on,

"You could say they're quite the valuable items."

Miduchi is nodding with a triumphant face as well.

"I wonder if you make arrows and such with it?"

Bel asked in a voice filled with anticipation and,

"Arrowheads that are made using magic metal have a considerably high attack power."

"Then, I wonder if it would be more effective than the gun.."

"Hmm, I wonder about that~ But, it might be close. Bel, what do you want to do?"

"If I ask Al-san he'll make some for me right?"

And, it seems she's talking about something together with Miduchi.

"If there's that much then it should be plenty to make a spearhead and such right?"

The sole married-man in the {Saviors} has started getting over-optimistic all on his own,

"If it's Al-san then wouldn't that be fine?"

Toris casually replied like that while equipping two powerful {Magic.Arms}.

"Hey now, everyone stop saying such self-convenient things. There's still no guarantee it's magic metal right?"

"That's right, really."

Zenom, Gwine. You dwarves are precisely the conscience of the {Saviors}.

"But if it's that beautiful then maybe I'll get my ears pierced?"

Supposedly the accessories from Seishen in the capital are super popular right now. If it's magic metal then I could brag all I want about it."

"Oh? A piercing huh? My dead father used to have it done on one of his ears.."

"Eh? Isn't that cool?"

"Is that so?"

"That's right, I think just having one ear pierced is manly."

"Hmm."

"Not to mention it's magic metal and that sparkle?"

"Maybe I'll get one done as well?"

"If Zenom-san were to use a piercing from Seishen then it'd be cool and I'm sure it would suit you."

"Hohou..But if you were to use that to make an alcohol cup and drink from it I'm sure it would be delicious."

"Ah! That too..That sure is wonderful as well~"

"Right?"

"If you were to make an alcohol cup and a matching small dish, then have a matching toothpick to stick into salted olives I'm sure it would suit you!"

"I'm sure it would be exceptional."

Putting aside weapons and let alone accessories..using magic metal to make tools for drinking, so these dwarves were precisely the cancer of the {Saviors}.

"Listen!"

""Ha!!""

Zulu and Angela both stood up straight.

"Not you two."

All of the cancerous cells started to gather over here.

Everyone present is making an apologetic face but roughly 1 person has their hands behind their while casually babbling, "Wasn't that pretty fast!? I think it took a while longer yesterday though."

"They might look like this but supposedly they're horseshoes. It seems the name is {Breeze.Horseshoes}."

After saying it once again and they all started saying things like,

"Horseshoes~!?", "This is?", "He~", "How unexpected~", and such.

Yeah. It's not as if I didn't think the same myself.

"Probably this wide surface, I guess you call it? If it's in contact with more than half of a hoof it will automatically equip itself. It lets the horse continue to move from morning until night without ever feeling tired and doubles the amount of weight it can carry. It also seems you can move on top of water or mud and such."

It seems everyone is so surprised their voices aren't coming out.

Though in reality it's the same for me too.

I can't test it out here but after we return to the surface first off I'm going to try equipping them on my war horse Uranus.

By the way, I wonder why the {Amber.Goliath} was holding something like this?

With no emotion at all Angela took out the magic stone and looked at the messy corpse of the {Amber.Goliath} still entangled in the two nets. I guess this individual with the smaller upper jaw would be the female? Otherwise it could just be a child with a huge body though I have no clue?

Two on the tiptoes and while it's completely covered in dirt there's properly a Y shaped metal plate stuck to each of the heels growing from the backs of it's legs.

After cutting each one of them off and touching it with the tip of my finger and with a plop they fell off returning to the same shape as the other horseshoes in no time at all.

The number of horseshoes inside of the leather bag was 252.

Adding in the ones we recovered from the feet of the 2

{Amber.Goliaths} and there's a total of 256 of them.

If it's horses then it's possible to organize a long distance high speed mobile unit with 64 of them.

If I were to have them pull a carriage made with rubber tires and an axle with bearings I'm sure it would be pretty amazing.

Ah, though I guess the carriage wouldn't be able to run over water huh?

Chapter 301 : 11th Floor

Year 7447, Month 6, Day 29

After returning the horseshoes to the leather bag and tying the mouth shut I left them to Zulu.

However, it hurts that I wasn't able to properly identify things in regards to the giant stag beetles.

Whether that confusion attack is a spell or special skill.

According to Miduchi, most likely it has the special skill {Confusion} but supposedly the one she knew about was just a normal(?) {Amber.Goliath} without the {Great} attached so it's fine to think that Ralpa was hit with the same special skill but she can't say anything at all in my case. Though that's the case, I ended up like that because I saw the those complex and shining compound eyes so it's easy to guess that wasn't a spell but a special skill.

I remembered that experience while trying to explain what kind of situation it was and started to feel sick again. That was seriously an unpleasant experience.

It seems like it'll take a reasonable amount of time for the net entangled with the corpse covered in yellow body fluids and green blood but I can tell quite a bit of it can still be used so we'll obviously recover it.

The corpse itself has other uses before Ralpa changes it to water to get rid of it.

We'll test out hitting the corpse with attack spells.

Particularly confirming the strength of the sturdy looking parts of it's carapace and figuring out where the weaknesses are in it's joints is necessary.

We all tried out various things in line with Miduchi's explanation. It's supposedly an uncommon monster which you never know if you'll see it once in every ten years at her hometown. Therefore, she's only ever heard stories about it but didn't have any experience directly fighting against one. There's a lot of points that need to be confirmed.

The result of that was we determined that while the sturdy looking surface of the carapace was impossible but if you land a direct hit on the joints then even Arbalest class attack spells can deal plenty of damage. Even when it comes to the carapace portion if you use Ballista class then it pierces through pretty well so we found out that we can expect a reasonable amount of power from it. However, in regards to the back, elbows, and knees that looked the hardest at the very least power over the heavy catapult class is necessary.

Furthermore, when it came to the rifle other than the hardest portions it was able to pierce through the carapace no matter where it hit. That means we can expect the penetration power of the {Stone Heavy Catapult} class from the rifles. Although, it's something that I realized after using it up until now but if the rifle hits a bad spot the damage it deals is pretty low. It's not particularly limited to just the {Amber.Goliath} but even against ogres and trolls the larger their bodies are the lower the damage is when it hits a place other than their vital points.

Though the same goes for bows as well.

The only exception is when you land a direct hit with a sword. Only at times like that does the damage not decrease but actually increases.

Whenever Zulu swings down the bastard sword that he normally uses with one-hand with both of his hands the damage increases by quite a bit. Of course even if he uses it with one-hand if he lands a direct hit the damage increases by a bit. This goes the same for Toris's sword and my long sword when I take out of the bayonet as well.

However, in the case that I use it while it's still a part of the bayonet or in the case of spears and halberds it seems to do the same damage as when up against normally sized monsters up to the same size as people. Also, even if they're both swords when it comes to Bel's shortsword or Zenom and Ralpa's magic axes even if they land a direct hit the damage seems a bit lower.

Also, what could be considered the most abnormal is Miduchi's scimitar, as long as she lands a direct hit that isn't at a half-assed angle on the neck or limbs then regardless of the damage it will cleanly cut it off. It seems the special effect {Energy.Drain} is working at those times.

Other than that, both the magic stones from the {Great.Underground.Vodyanoy} had an identify value of close to 800,000. If we sell both of them then it should be over 11,000,000 Z.

Something like selling them for 5,500,000 Z a piece, I'm sure magic tool shop Danhiru can't afford to deal in them. If we want to sell them then I'll probably have to take them into the magic tool shop Splendor in the capital. Well, I have no intention of selling them for the time being though.

By the way, we weren't able to find any high quality equipment like the ones the Minotaurs use.

However, I noticed that the leather in the leather bag that the horseshoes were in was double-layered.

After flipping it inside out and there was a complex pattern carved on the inside of similar to the ones on all of the equipment we've found up until now, if we were to think of this side as the surface then it could be considered quite the high quality leather bag. In order to imprint this intricate and complex of a pattern into such a thin piece of leather it should require quite a high level of technique.

After using {Identify} it came up as {Double.Tool.Bag}. The materials are supposedly sheepskin(judging from the sensation it should be the original exterior) and {Abyssal.Ogre.Leather}(the side with the pattern on it).

And then right now we're finally taking a break in the teleport crystal room of the 10th floor.

Now then, I wonder what we should do next.
We decided to discuss our plans from here on out.

The conclusion we came to was that the next time when we encounter the {Amber.Goliath} from the outside, when it either discovers or recognizes us and the the room brightens up along with the cage of lightning bolts appearing there's no other choice than to try using some kind of magic.

If it's possible to use magic just like this time then we can blow the giant stag beetles away and kill them with attack spells before they even get close to us. It would be fine to just aim carefully with the rifle as well. It seems fine as long as you don't look at both of it's compound eyes from a considerably close distance at the same time after all.

This time Ralpa and I ended up in a pretty terrible condition but as long as we're careful of that then it's good news that we can use magic. Ever since we've entered the latter half of the dungeon you could say this is the first good news other than finding treasure in a while.

For the time being there should be quite a bit of time before the guardians respawn so first we should explore the large room that surrounds the teleport crystal room. After that if we can manage it we'll take a peek into the 11th floor for a bit and then defeat the guardian at least one more time after it respawns before returning to the surface.

There's a high probability that it'll take close to 20 hours to repawn just like the last floor so we should have plenty of time to spare. After we return to the surface we'll probably need to carry luggage back here twice or so but if we don't take care of the things we can do before that I can't relax.

In the evening we tried taking a step onto the 11th floor.
After teleporting what was in front of us was obviously the same teleport crystal we had been holding up until now.
This is the same as always.

And then, the place we thought we were most likely to be at was near the outer wall.
The surroundings of the teleport crystal were like a small semi-circle plaza and the bottom of that semi-circle was almost like the wall of a cliff with the dense overgrown trees from a deep forest surrounding it.
Just from a glance they appear to be broad-leaf evergreen oak trees.

Furthermore, completely different from up until now the 11th floor had light. Gentle orange colored lights were pouring down from the ceiling almost like twilight.
In regards to this it wasn't almost as bright as noon like the 7th floor but it's not like light like this hadn't appeared before.

That's why you could say there was still problem up to here.

However, there was a large difference that you could tell from a single glance.

First off the height of the ceiling was way beyond the 100 meters of the 7th floor.

It most likely goes far above into the kilometers and strangely enough there even appears to be something like clouds.

And if you're wondering why I can tell, it's because there doesn't seem to be anything like hallways at all.

Far into the distance above the the top parts of the forest surrounding us there's a long and thin pillar that stretches all the way to the ceiling almost like an orbital elevator that comes out in SF novels and beyond that is a wall surrounded by light mist that is probably the opposite side of the outer wall.

In other words, the floor itself seems to be a single large room just like the 14th floor(?).

Just as far as can be seen there doesn't seem to be any walls that would make up hallways.

"This was..unexpected right."

Toris casually whispered with his shield at the ready and {Flame.Tongue} in his right hand but he's carefully scanning the surroundings without his guard. He doesn't have his sword covered in flames.

"It seems like twilight but I wonder if it's because of the current time..."

Bel whispered while looking up at the sky with her magic sword in one hand but I'm sure no one has an answer to that.

"It seems there's no monsters nearby.."

Zenom said while observing the surroundings on guard with his magic axe just like Toris. Obviously I've already long since scanned over the surroundings with {Identify} vision but I wasn't able to find anything unusual.

"For the time being I'll write down the number."

Gwine took out a brush and ink from her bag and wrote "1" on an appropriate rock.

"I wonder if it's fine to move forward just like this?"

Basutorial said while guarding Gwine together with Zulu and Angela but I don't think there's any other way about it.

"But wait, isn't that pillar-like thing the place where the teleport crystal is? Probably. It doesn't seem like there's any walls either, doesn't it seem like we could easily pass through~"

Ralpha said while pointing at the orbital elevator far in the distance with her magic axe held in one hand. Though you could say that's exactly the case but I really doubt things would be that simple right?

"Excluding the fact that it's bright and the forest and it's almost like that place..Ah, or was the ceiling even lower?"

Miduchi said as if confirming with me with her scimitar in one hand.

"I just thought the same thing myself."

I replied while observing our surroundings but I couldn't find any dangerous monsters or traps.

"In that case, I wonder if only the boss is here?"

I wonder about that? Just like you said just now, that place on the 14th floor wasn't as bright as it is here and it didn't have any plants growing. The height of the ceiling is completely different and there's no guarantee that there isn't something lurking in the forest.

"If that's the case then I'm just praying it's something other than that fellow."

Just as I replied like that Gwine put away the brush and asked, "What should we do?"

"Let's try teleporting back in a number of times."

.....

We repeated teleporting into the 11th floor around 20 times. However, every single teleport location was believed to be somewhere along the outer wall just the same as the first time. I had Ralpa check the direction a number of times but because the orbital elevator can always be seen in the center we were able to get a grasp on the general outline with Gwine's {Mapping}.

After all it was a large room of about 10 km in diameter and all of the teleport locations were somewhere along the outer wall.

According to Gwine because we can always see the pillar in the center and the outer circumference we should have the easiest time ever in producing the map.

"Hey, if you use wind magic to fly up high wouldn't you be able to look far into the distance?"

Unexpectedly Miduchi came up with an unbelievably reckless idea.

According to her, either she or I would hold on to Gwine while entering something like the barrel of a cannon made with earth magic. And then, after climbing up a bit higher than the bottom of the barrel use a decent level of wind magic to fly high into the air. Then when falling you just have to consecutively use wind magic to attempt a soft-landing. Even in the worst case if you fail on the landing as long you don't die instantly either Miduchi or I whoever remains can do something about it with healing magic, how do I put it, who in their right mind would do something as terrifying as that? or at least it was such an unrealistic idea that it seemed idiotic to even consider it.

After rejecting it without a moments thought and she said she experienced something similar so she suggested it was a reasonable amount of basis for it but there's no way we could do something like that this close to the outer wall. If we even make a single mistake with the angle and we'll either crash into the outer wall or die rolling down. Even if that isn't the case there's a forest below and there's guarantee we'd be able to skillfully land in the plaza.

Ralpa and Basutorial both said "I see!" as if it was a great idea worth hitting their knees over but the Gwine in question was so pale she might start foaming at the mouth at any moment. Although, the idea of having Gwine confirm the surroundings from a high place itself is naturally pretty logical.

The outer wall is just the same as the 6th and 7th floors with just enough footholds that a professional rock climber with the right tools in our past life..may..be.. able to climb up it.

Since it couldn't be helped while paying the highest level of attention to safety we had Gwine climb up to the tallest tree nearby just once to confirm the surroundings and just as expected quite a few things were confirmed.

First off, along the outer circumference there's a doughnut shaped forest with a width of about 200~300 meters.

Most likely all of the teleport crystals from the 10th floor are positioned inside of the dense forest along the outer circumference. In regards to this we confirmed that it was almost certainly the case by moving a mere 100 meters or so along the outer wall and found another small plaza exactly the same as the teleport location excluding the fact that there wasn't a teleport crystal like the one we used. If we were to assume that they're 100 meters apart with fixed intervals then there should be about 314 teleport locations on this floor.

Though there probably shouldn't be any major differences no matter where we teleport. It's possible there's 360 locations if the intervals are a bit below 100 meters.

After passing through the forest along the outer circumference and just as expected there's a 200~300 meter wide waist-high grassland spread out in a doughnut shape. Beyond that is more grasslands or wilderness and then it mixes together with a different forest or bushes. She was only able to confirm the terrain up to there from on top of the tree, but no problem~ if there's more trees growing ahead then it's fine if she just climbs up again. Other than that just as far as Gwine could see she couldn't find anything like monsters.

"If we were to try and go in a straight line towards that pillar I feel like we could make it."

Gwine gave us some good news. But it seems she was pretty scared as the color of her face isn't very good.

Supposedly she doesn't have anything like a fear of heights but the height of the tree we had Gwine climb was about 10 meters. She climbed up to a height of about 6~7 meters but I'm sure scary things are scary.

"Were there any rivers or ponds?"

Zenom asked.

"I couldn't tell that much."

If we were to assume that there's no monsters or guardian then it wouldn't even take us 2 hours to clear through this floor. Even if there were as long as there's no traps and we don't get injured it shouldn't be all that different though.

"Shall we stop here for today? It's almost 8:00 right? I'm seriously starting to feel hungry and if things go smoothly those things should respawn around tomorrow morning. I want to catch them off guard and kill them once after properly identifying them after all."

I'm sure it'll take some time for us to repair the net as well so we'll get by with just hardtack and dried meat soup for our meals for today.

It seems there's still over 20 bullets remaining for the rifle and if we can use magic it should be simple to blow them away with that.

It should be fine to slowly take my time identifying the monsters after that.

It's female partner is pretty similar as well.
However, back stabbing from behind is seriously frightening.

In order to verify the timing which magic can be used, when they were first respawning all of us surrounded the swirling fog while waiting leaving just Gwine in the teleport room. The minotaurs on the 8th and 9th floors respectively took 17 and 18 hours to respawn. I wonder if this time it'll be 19 hours? While that was what we predicted since it was just a weak basis we obviously woke up pretty early and did a number of simulations while waiting for them to respawn so we don't look at both of their compound eyes at once.

Just as expected 19 hours later at just past 7:00 in the morning.

The respawn fog finally started swirling around.

During that time we were able to confirm that we were unable to use racial skills, magic, and unique abilities.

And then the moment the {Amber.Goliaths} respawned in a stance with one knee to the ground just like the minotaurs we all swung our weapons down with all of our strength just as we went over in simulations. Attacks that land in a bad spot might not be able to pierce through the hard carapace and deal no damage.

Even then if 4~5 people continue to attack each of them then they'll fall over and those with some leeway might be able to aim their attacks at the joints between the carapace.

That's what everyone thought.

However, the carapaces of the newly spawned {Amber.Goliaths} were pure white like an albino and almost like jelly. It was soft almost like a crab or crayfish immediately after molting. Additionally at the same time as the room turned bright and the sound from the cage of lightning bolts echoed through Gwine's voice yelled "It works!" from the entrance to the room. I was just about to stop everyone from beating them on all sides and immediately hit with a powerful spell but it didn't even require magic. That's why even when I used Identify on them at this point it still ended up as {Corpse of Great.Underground.Vodyanoy}.

It couldn't be helped and some tests were still necessary so we endured the wait for it to respawn one more time (we spent the spare time investigating unexplored areas of the 10th floor), and just the same as when the minotaurs respawn after taking one step outside and kicking them over the cage of lightning bolts activated.

Immediately after I pulled back into the hall leading to the teleport crystal room.

And then this time we waited for over 1 hour in the teleport crystal room after they respawned for the color of their carapaces to turn fully black. I just mentioned the details of Identify which I checked during that time right? Ah, {Confusion Type III}...

In order to use the special skill {Confusion Type III} it seems it requires simultaneously looking into both of it's compound eyes and you must be in close range that's a distance of less than half the height of the {Amber.Goliath}.

The targets captured in the special skill will see an unpleasant scene of a person of the same race they knew in the past or a scene that they find frightening but supposedly the possibility of seeing through it as an illusion is close to zero. Supposedly it creeps into your heart after taking on more than enough reality to make you believe that it's real.

Otherwise it supposedly can make you mistake all other living beings besides yourself as the {Amber.Goliath}. The possibility of each of those effects is 40%. But, there's also the possibility of your senses being exchanged like me as well. This possibility was the remaining 20%.

I really had some bad luck.

After that I had Miduchi, Bel, Toris, Ralpha, Gwine, and Basutorial, everyone who can use magic practice using attack spells to aim at joint between it's carapace in the back of it's neck. Partially because we dealt some major damage to it all at once you could say it was an easy victory.

Again one more time. This time we returned to the teleport crystal on the 9th floor and after having some proper rest and meals made it back to the teleport room on the 10th floor with no guardian before the {Amber.Goliaths} respawned. On that occasion it was a bit of a waste but we brought along blankets. This time we threw the blankets over their heads at the moment they respawned and beat them to death without using magic after safely sealing their compound eyes.

Yeah. There seems to be no problem even without magic as long as we stab them in the back.

Even when it comes to fighting head on, it's fine if I just try invading from the outside matched up with the timing they respawn again and try to finish them off with magic. As insurance it should be fine as long as everyone else remains on standby in the teleport room.

Chapter 302 : Altar 1

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 2

It was evening when we returned to the surface.

It seems like we'll somehow be able to manage the guardian of the 10th floor.

But, the 11th floor...

Completely different from up until now it's a vast world that spans an entire floor.

It's believed to be around 10 km in diameter so the total area should be about as wide as the Oota district and Shinagawa district in Japan combined.

Though I only vaguely remember the top and bottom 5 districts in terms of area so I'm not too confident.

We met up with Cathy and the other members of the {Slaughterers} who were gathered together at the entrance plaza.

I already told them that we were going to try and break through the 10th floor of the dungeon this time so Kamu reserved Murowa for us. For the time being we returned to our inn to change and then all of the {Slaughterers} gathered together.

After confirming that everyone was gathered I gave a report on how we succeeded in breaking through the 10th floor.

Hearing my report everyone started cheering and congratulating us.

I took out the magic stones from the 2 {Great.Underground.Vodyanoy} and showed them.

Since the giant stag beetles this time weren't close enough to being human to call them humanoid we weren't able to obtain any weapons or equipment from them but I explained how we found magic horseshoes and the frightening abilities of they had before moving on to the sights we saw on the 11th floor.

Everyone who wasn't able to see that sight made expressions of admiration and a bit of yearning as if they were greatly interested in it.

It seems like they don't have much interest in the magic horseshoes. I said I don't have any intention of selling them so I guess it's because there won't be any bonuses?

Though it would be fine if they just immediately realized how useful of an item they'll be in the future and thought they weren't anything worth making a racket over right now.

And~ Miduchi and Toris are talking about them. Well, I guess that's fine.

But, putting aside those giant stag beetles, everyone might eventually be able to see the 11th floor.

After all supposedly the {Exterminators} were able to arrive at the teleport room on the 5th floor by 4:00 pm on the second day this time. Even though they lost two members and should have had a reduction in combat strength it's quite the miraculous record. It's not all that much different from when Ginger and Hisu were with them.

Though I'm sure one of the primary factors for it is that Rodrick and my combat slave Mekku's magic levels increased but I'm sure it's also because their progressive nature in combat even surpasses the {Butchers} filled with veterans. They've accumulated quite a bit of experience and because their levels were originally the lowest they're the party that's grown in levels the most over the past two years. In just a bit longer, I guess, if they can shorten their time by about 2 more hours then they should obtain the ticket to explore the 6th floor.

Of course, the {Butchers} aren't losing to them either. Since it seems they were able to arrive at the teleport room on the 6th floor by just past 8:00 pm on the second day as well. On their end if they can arrive before 8:00 pm on a stable basis then that would be plenty as proof of their abilities. I'd even be willing to give them permission to enter the 7th floor.

After all the results this time were without a leader from the former {Saviors}. In the first place making it to the teleport room on the 6th floor in two days is a high speed that beyond the {Saviors} not even the {Verdure.Brotherhood} has managed.

Their faces are colored with confidence.

"Now then, we'll be going back into the dungeon from the 6th but next time Zenom will go to the {Butchers}. Take over command of them. And then for the {Exterminators} will be..I guess so. Basutorial, you try going."

"Eh? Me!?"

Basutorial replied with a surprised face.

"Yeah, that's right. Isn't it about a good time for you to gain experience with things like that?"

"..Yes. I'll try doing it! By the way, would it be no good for me to bring along Maru and Rinbi?"

..This guy, don't get so nervous over something stupid~
Maru and Rinbi who I let sit at the lowest seats are looking at me with sparkling expressions.

Their eyes are so radiant I can almost hear the sparkling sound effects.
Ah, Basutoral has a relationship with these two from when he taught them at the sausage factory so I guess he wasn't just nervous but just wanted to make use of them even sooner?

"..Obviously that's no good. I'm afraid to even let these two fight against goblins yet."

After I said that Maru and Rinbi both lowered their heads. Of course~ if it's one-on-one then let alone goblins they might even be able to manage against a gnoll. If they're prepared to suffer injuries then while they might not be able to win they may even be able to hold their own against an ork or hobgoblin. But something like that, if any random adult gets desperate enough they could probably manage it. In the first place, there's aren't over in the dungeon after a single battle.

"Hey, Maru, Rinbi. It's still too soon for you two. Putting aside your skills you need to grow a bit taller."

Ruttsu said that to try and cheer them up.

"Yeah, in the first place you've still got a ways to go with your spear thrusts. Saying to master that things will be fine for you at that level~ Ha~ there's no way I could say it."

Even Jesu my combat slave who's teaching them rejected it.

"Maru, Rinbi."

Since I started to feel a bit bad I called out to the two of them.

""Yes, master""

"Are you eating properly?"

""Of course!""

I obligated them to eat at least one baldoggie, several vegetable side dishes, and six slices of something like plain bread from our past life of a decent amount for every meal. It's still only been about two months so it hasn't shown much of an effect yet. However, if they make sure to properly run and swing the sword 500 times everyday in addition to the diet muscle training menu Miduchi taught them that focuses on squats every two days then they should reach the stamina of a beginner adventurer within a year. Putting aside their technique.

"It's still the period for you two to build up your body. You shouldn't bother worrying about something like the dungeon yet. After a short while longer I'll check on your progress alright? Make sure you do it properly."

""Yes.""

Umu. That's a good answer. Stuff like this sure feels good.

The next day, we found a gap when the stable brat of Boil Manor wasn't looking and tried attaching the {Breeze.Horseshoes} to my Uranus and Miduchi's Ball-Dragon.

Hmm.

Just as expected they're easy to equip and remove.

It felt like it would be unnatural to tell the brat not to touch their horseshoes and if he finds it strange that he can't get them off he might check the status so we removed them right away and threw the lot of them into my locker at the shrine.

.....

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 10

We've taken a step onto the 11th floor.

"I can't see the ceiling..."

Kimu said while looking at the sky.

"There's really no hallways..Also, this light.."

Kamu is trying to stand as tall as she can with her short height as she restless looks around the surroundings but the 5 meter semi-circle radius we just teleported into is completely blocked out by the dense trees so you can't see at all beyond into the sky.

After all, if we hadn't made Gwine climb a tree last time we weren't even able to see the grasslands that are supposedly 200 meters ahead. Trees with a thickness of 50~60 cms are spaced out with intervals of only about 2~5 meters between. There's undergrowth with large leaves growing all over the place as well and even branches are growing from considerably low heights.

Do they know the definition of photosynthesis?

Isn't it supposed to be no good if the light can't reach them?

..Though it's a bit late to be saying something like that.

Furthermore, the light from the ceiling was still the same madder red color as if it's twilight.

"What should we do? Advance just like this?"

Miduchi asked me.

All of the teleport locations seem to be along the outer wall so there's no choice other than that.

"First let's try clearing through this forest. We'll go with {Wedge.One} using 5 meter intervals."

I said that before standing at the lead.

Just in case I tried using the spell {Detect.Life} but I couldn't detect anything other than us within the 200 meter range.

I also tried using the spells {Find.Trap}, {Detect.Snare}, and {Detect.Pitfall} but as expected there was no reaction.

Well, it was the same last time so I had already predicted it.

After putting in a decent amount of effort to pass through the forest and things suddenly opened up before our eyes.

Even though there was that many trees up until now, they all suddenly disappeared with not a single one remaining.

We all gathered once again just before the grassland that Gwine saw last time.

"Did you see any monsters?"

Just in case I tried asking everyone but obviously the answer was no.

What's spreading out before our eyes is a thick grassland of about several tens of centimeters and then beyond that is dotted with forests and bushes of a decent density just as Gwine reported.

They appear to be just a bit less dense than the forest on the outer circumference but probably aren't all that different.

Even though there's no halls or walls I can't help but sigh over how bad the visibility is.

For a short while everyone strained their eyes looking but after all we weren't able to find anything moving like monsters.

Though it might also be because the light of twilight is quite a bit weaker than the 7th floor.

"Things seem to be pretty open here so isn't a good place now that we've confirmed it's safe?"

Miduchi is talking about using earth magic to create a high platform so Gwine can see a wider range.

Ever since I heard there was a grassland I thought it would be necessary.

Last time there were too many trees so it was difficult to make a stairway. I won't say it was completely impossible but in order to make twisting stairs that avoid the branches up to the top would have required quite a bit of mental concentration.

If we're going to do something that stands out like this then I want to finish it off in one go.

Including Gwine's height she was only able to see from a height of 6~7 meters. There's not even 10 km to the horizon(as far as can be seen). Not to mention taking into consideration the height of the dense forest and she was at best able to see about 5 km. Seeing up to the teleport crystal pillar was the limit. That's why I felt it was necessary to make a hill that's at least 12~13 meters this time excluding Gwine's height.

Though if I can be greedy I think a height of over 20 meters is necessary. When it comes to a height of 20 meters then taking into consideration the angle and the ease of climbing the stairs and it would need a base with a diameter of 50~60 meters or so. A wide area with no trees in the way was necessary. Additionally it would be best if the summit is like a submarine where it has a wall you can just stick out your head from as well. If we take into consideration attacks from monsters that we don't know where they might be lurking.

"Just as expected the outer circumference is a forest with a width of 200~300 meters. The interior appears to be a grassland similar to that but it's most likely the same for the opposite side as well. Because I couldn't see all the way to the outside of the grasslands. It seems like the interior has quite a bit of dense forest and thickets. In terms of percentage I'd say it's about 20% grassland or wasteland, 50% forest, and around 30% thickets I guess."

After descending from the hill Gwine's report itself was mostly just what we had predicted.

"Would it be best to try teleporting to the opposite side of the room as well?"

"Nn~ I'm sure that would raise the reliability of it but isn't it fine to do that later on?"

If Gwine's saying that then it's probably the case.

"And, did the ground seem level everywhere?"

Miduchi asked. This is something important as well.

"Yeah, even if there's some hills inside of the forest they shouldn't be all that high. If I had to say which it's unfortunate that it was difficult to tell whether the ground is even lower than here or not. I couldn't tell what was going on with the ground below the forests and thickets without getting closer.."

"It's big just that we know there doesn't seem to be anything like mountains."

Bel joined the conversation. Certainly that's true.

"Yeah. However, there's not very much of a height difference in the terrain of each floor in this dungeon."

Everyone seemed to agree with what I said but no one was able to explain the reason.

Of course, it's not like there's no highs or lows in this dungeon of Baldukk at all.

Miduchi and Kamu who have the special skill {Inclination.Sensing} can both tell the slight inclinations of the ground and even Ralpha notices it using {Spatial Comprehension}.

However, there hasn't really been any way for us to clearly determine that up until now.

Though I found it strange.

"In any case, nothing will start unless we go and take a look."

After ending our conversation here and I hesitated for a moment on whether or not to erase the platform.

Well, I guess I'll erase it.

While I was erasing the platform everyone was discussing things about this floor.

They must be worried.

"{Wedge.One} with 20 meter intervals. The goal is that tree."

I conveyed that we'd aim for a slightly tall tree ahead of the grasslands with considerable intervals between us.

It's questionable whether or not there's even 200 meters to that tree.

There shouldn't be any traps up to there.

"Let's run it all at once."

I lowered my posture a bit while taking a step into the grassland.

Though I don't think there's much meaning to it, it's a matter of feeling.

.....

After passing through the grassland and moving through the forest and thickets for a bit we entered a plaza in an opening between. Everywhere we just passed by is covered in trees other than behind us and with this even if there's some kind of monster it should be blocked from seeing us.

As expected everyone let out a sigh of relief after the tension of passing through a grassland with nothing to hide us.

However, it's eerie that Gwine wasn't able to see any monsters at all even from such a high place.

It was at that moment.

"That, what is it?"

Ralpa asked while looking further into the forest.

The direction Ralpa was pointing into the forest was towards the center where the teleport crystal is believed to be.

"Hn~? What?"

"Where?"

Kamu and Toris are looking in the direction she's pointing but can't seem to find anything strange.

"It's probably hidden behind trees from there and hard to see. From this angle.."

Ralpa let them take over the position she was standing in until now.

"Nn..That is!"

"Eh...Ah.."

Toris stood behind the short Kamu and both of them looked in the same direction.

After a short while they seemed to realize something.

"What could you see?"

"What is it?"

Starting with Angela and Bel, everyone gathered to look in that direction. I want to look as well but it seems the position I'm standing is bad and there's so many leaves, branches, and trees that I can't even see more than 20 meters.

"Al-san! That, it's an altar! I can see an altar!"

Wh~at!?

In a hurry I switched places with Toris and there certainly was a portion of an altar that could be seen around 200 meters ahead.

It's the perfect angle where you can't see it anymore if you even shift your head just a bit.

If there's an altar then that means...

In other words monsters will be summoned.

And then, if it's the same as up until now there should be 4 gargoyle statues nearby.

However, there's also the possibility of obtaining treasure. There's no reason to let this chance go.

"What should we do? Should we try going over to there?"

Ralpa said with a defiant expression as if she might lick her lips at any moment.

"But, it's in the forest. If it's not a plaza then.."

"The trees might be in the way quite a bit."

Bel and Toris both warned at the same time.

That's right.

Especially Kimu and Gwine's weapons are spears. It would be fine if they just thrust it but it would be quite difficult to swing it or rather impossible.

Not just the spear but even using the sword would be pretty difficult.

Wouldn't it only be Ralpa's {Bloody.Handaxe} that can be used without much different from normally?

It's the same for missile type attack spells when the visibility is this bad and even my certain kill technique of freezing them would only work if they're right in front of us...

If there's an enemy that's swinging a weapon or using a portion of it's body as a weapon in front of me then there's no way I could manage something like freezing it.

It takes less than a split second to swing a weapon down so it's considerably faster than something like freezing.

What should we do?

Up until just now if the density of the forest increased anymore than it was I was about ready to use fire magic to burn everything to the ground before retreating to the 10th floor.

Even if I can't burn the trees I thought it would at least burn the leaves and small branches.

Also, I thought if there were any monsters nesting in it I might be able to finish them off with the heat from the mountain fire and the lack of oxygen.

Although, that's only if my previous hypothesis about the composition of the air on Orth being the same as Earth was correct and monsters require the oxygen in the air to breath.

Even if that is the case I didn't have much more than a weak basis for it in the first place.

However, if there's an altar then it's a different matter..I'm sure~

It would be bad if it even burns the altar right.

Since a lot of it is made of stone it might not burn but there's no guarantee it wouldn't cause some kind of damage to it.

In terms of treasure.

If there's just this many trees then it should be possible to cut them all down with the wind magic level 7 attack spell {Vacuum Blade}.

But, what would cutting them down help?

If they fall down in place it would just make them even more of an obstruction.

Hey, what should I do?

After all I guess there's no way to obtain the treasure other than fighting normally?

Chapter 303 : Altar 2

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 10

I spent a short while contemplating while glaring at the altar.

"For the time being, let's try going to a different place."

It's not like we've seen any monsters. If we approach the altar then there's a high possibility that a monster will be summoned but it's not like we've actually seen it. This is different from fleeing. It's simply changing directions.

No, though it's fine even if we're running from monsters. Even up until now we've run from them a number of times.

For the time being I decided to move to the right along the grassland that's believed to be in the shape of a doughnut. The next time there's an opening in the forest I intend to go further inside from there.

After walking for a short while just as expected we arrived at an opening in the forest. It's about 10 meters wide and the trees of just that area has no trees growing almost like a hallway. After trying to look further inside and it seems to gently curve to the right. It seems like there's no traps either. Then, shall we try advancing from here?

After a distance of about 100 meters this time it curved to the left and then after another 100 meters we were surrounded by forest again almost like a dead end. After advancing a bit further while remaining cautious and this time Miduchi said "Wait" so we all stopped.

"That, it's an altar right?"

..Miduchi pointed her finger but even looking to the left the trees are too dense so I can't see anything.

After all the vegetation of the forest is thick so it seems it can't be seen other than from Miduchi's position.

I have her open up the place she's standing.

"It looks like an altar..But I can't see anything like gargoyles."

"Al-san. Show me as well.."

I switch places with Gwine.

We need her to properly remember the location.

After advancing a bit from there again and this time Angela discovered an altar in the opposite direction.

"That altar, it seems to be about 200 meters from the one we just saw."

Gwine said after confirming the location of the newly discovered altar.

Hm~mm.

Unexpectedly this is the third altar we've discovered today.

I wonder if there's such a high density of altars on this 11th floor...

I guess that means this hallway like opening in the forest passes in between the altars?

It seems everyone else has the same questions as me.

Up until now all of the altars that have existed inside of this dungeon have been in what you could call monster rooms and they're enshrine together with statues of gargoyles inside a room with a decent area. If you step foot inside of that room then the gargoyle statues start to move as if they were given life and simultaneously the large magic circle like pattern in front of the altar floats up while giving off light before summoning a monster that could be called the guardian of the room.

If you defeat all of those then the door of the shrine installed on the top of the altar opens and if you're lucky you could obtain some kind of treasure. For adventurers who's goal is to obtain treasure other than this the only way is the magic items which room bosses are confirmed to be holding with a low probability once every couple of years. Other than that, it's possible to obtain valuable ores and gems from mining the walls and such below the 3rd floor, just that.

After that is..I guess just the guardians?

That's why it's not limited to just us {Saviors} but normally it's absurd to overlook an altar you find. I think the only ones who would normally overlook them are the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} when Kamu and Kimu are commanding them. If Kamu and Kimu hadn't said, "it's fine if it's a monster you can defeat without any casualties.." then I think they would have challenged it.

Even when it comes to them I heard they met with some firmly rooted opposition when they made the decision to overlook the altar and go around it.

There's a possibility of obtaining treasure worth that much from the altars in the dungeon after all.

Eh? It's something you can only say if you're alive?

That's right.

Shall we put it into an easy to understand example?

There's clearly a gap between you who normally neglects your health and an adventurer that's decently trained and used to fighting. Let's go easy on the opponent as well.

If you were to fight against a Tosa dog that does dog-fighting and if you win it's okay for you to roll some dice.

If you roll a decent number then you get several hundred million yen. If you were told that depending on the roll of the dice you might be given something worth several billion yen, what would you do?

Of course, it's fine for you to bring allies as well. Though it's only up to 9 people other than yourself.

It's fine if you wear armor and it's even okay if you use a katana, spear, or bow as your weapon.

Though there's no guarantee that it'll only be one Tosa dog either.

But, judging from past precedents even at most there's rarely more than 5 of them.

I think challengers would appear at a decent rate.

Even if you're thinking, "there's no way I could do something so frightening", there's at least one person around you who would be delighted to aim for a gamble that could turn around their life in a single go right?

The adventurers who enter the dungeon are people like that.

Kamu and Kimu said they struggled quite a bit to hold everyone back.

I can tell that even those two are anticipating it every time they look at the altar because they have powerful allies with them right now.

Though as expected they have at least enough judgement to not bring up challenging the altar when it's a floor in the depths of the dungeon and almost our first time here.

Well, we can anytime after all.

"Hmm..It's still early so let's head back and check out some other areas."

Somehow I feel a bit hesitant to advance just like this so I decided to start searching from the beginning again.

In the end we spent all morning and explored around 3 km of the interior perimeter of the grassland.

We discovered altars in a total of 7 places.

Obviously we just took a glance at them from the distance.

We didn't approach even a single one to check it out.

The distance between each of the altars was between 200 meters and 1 km or so.

There's some things that can't be seen because of the angle so I'm sure we overlooked several of them.

Somehow I feel like they're all lined up in a circle centering around the teleport crystal pillar in the center of the room.

Though as expected I don't think they're at fixed intervals.

After lunch we gathered our resolve and decided to approach the first altar we discovered.

.....

It's clearly different from the altars we've found in the dungeon up until now.

First off, it doesn't have any black flames.

Or rather, in the first place it doesn't have something like a torch for flames to burn.

Other than that the shape appears to be a bit different as well.

Furthermore, what appeared to be the shrine from the distance doesn't have any doors.

And, there's no gargoyles and there didn't seem to be any summoning of monsters.

It was hard to even call it anticlimactic.

Even though everyone was on guard and we approached it carefully all we could do in the end was make confused expressions.

It was the same for the other altars we found as well.

I have an endless number of questions while standing in front of the moss-covered altar sitting silently in forest buried by trees but in the end we decided to take a look even further inside of the forest.

After advancing past the densely overgrown branches and stepping on the broad-leaf undergrowth and the forest ended leading into a wasteland with no vegetation growing at all. At longest it's probably about 50 meters, a bit of a plaza with no trees growing.

"How far have we advanced?"

After asking Gwine and she said our current location is about 800 meters from the outer circumference.

There's no traps and we still haven't seen any monsters.

Even after approaching the altars there's nothing at all.

"If nothing happens just like this then it doesn't seem like it'll take much time at all to get over to there.."

Miduchi whispered while looking up at the pillar.

Lead by her I looked up at the long and thin pillar stretching out from above the trees as well.

It's still far away so I can't tell what's going on with the surface of it but thinking about things up until now wouldn't it be close to an exact square?

I guess the surface would be rough almost like it's carved from dirt or rock?

Or maybe it's smooth almost like something man-made?

I can't really tell from here.

The pillar stretches far into the clouds in the sky but whether they're clouds or fog they seem to be slowly moving.

How mysterious~

Putting that aside, it's certainly true if we continue like this it'll take us quite a bit longer than a level ground because we need to duck below branches and such. However, even then it's 5 km. Taking into consideration how there's occasionally openings in the forest with vacant land like this and it should take about 1.5 hours at our speed if nothing happens.

"What time is it right now?"

Bel asked Ralpa and the answer that came back was 2:00pm.

"What should we do?"

Toris asked me.

If it's from here then we could return to the teleport crystal we came in using within 15 minutes if we felt like it.

If we run across the grasslands along the way then probably even faster.

"Let's proceed a bit further."

.....

After passing through the wasteland and we stepped foot on a thicket-like area with a bit of light vegetation.

The formation is {Trail} with Ralpha at the lead.

I'm in the center focused on the right.

Around 5 minutes or so since we started advancing we came out to more vacant land just like the last area.

Though this time it wasn't a wasteland but was covered in short grass.
It's a grassland.

"We're about 1 km away from the outer circumference."

I nod at Gwine's words and look at our surroundings.

There's no birds, animals, or monsters, nothing at all.

"If things continue like this then it seems like we'll be able to pass through all at once."

Hearing Kimu's words everyone made expressions as if saying, "I guess so."

"Hn? Somehow it seems to be protruding outwards?"

Miduchi who was looking up at the pillar without getting bored said something strange.

The direction she was pointing was far above the pillar around where it enters the fog or the clouds or whatever.

It should be right around where it cuts into the clouds.

After hearing it said and it certainly seems to have a bit of a protrusion or rather it feels like there's a part of it that's expanded outwards.

It was at that moment.

A loud ear-splitting noise sounded out.

This sound is, the one made when the cage of lightning bolts activates!

Simultaneously I felt the sensation of Miduchi's {Party-ization} losing effect.

In a panic we all looked around at each other.

The intensity of the light increased and the surroundings became almost like daytime.

The cage of lightning bolts is far in the distance and seems to have occurred along the outer circumference surrounding the entirety of the 11th floor.

And then, far in the distance in terms of kilometers I can see several pillars made of seven-colored light rising into the sky.

Trying to count them and there's two in both directions ahead of us and two more in both directions even further inside for a total of four of them.

I have no idea what's going on but for the time being I can at least say this.

"Run into the forest!"

Everyone scattered in different directions running into the forest.

It's the proof of veteran adventurers that they don't run in the same direction clumped together even when not told.

If we were to gather up again it's best to do it inside of the forest where visibility is blocked off.

However, even then if it were to be mentioned everyone seems to have primarily run into the forest that we just came from.

It's definitely seems safer so it can't be helped.

I ran off after creating a dirt hill in the center of the plaza.

If there's any monsters nearby then we can use it as a shield.

Even if they aren't nearby I'm sure they'll head over here so if they think the hill is suspicious and show signs of approaching to investigate it then it'd be fortunate.

But, rather than something like that I needed to test whether or not we could use magic.

After all, the fact that the cage of lightning bolts activated means that the guardian has already detected us.

As the last one to run into the forest, I turned around once just before and looked in every direction.

For the time being there doesn't seem to be anything particularly different.

"Al-san, over here."

I heard Toris whispering.

After looking over there and other than Toris, Gwine and Kamu were by his side.

I guess they regrouped after entering the forest.

"Where's everyone else?"

"I saw Bel and Maruso run in over there."

"Miduchi-san and Kimu both ran in that direction as well."

Toris and Kamu both replied while pointing towards the right of the plaza but it seems that Gwine didn't have enough composure to pay attention to anything else.

"What about Ralpa and Zulu?"

"I don't know."

"Maybe over there?"

After looking to the left while saying and I saw a glimpse of golden hair over there.

"There they are. Gwine, go and call Ralpa and Zulu over. Toris you go and call for Miduchi and the others. After regrouping if you encounter any monsters then you don't need to forcefully try and make it back. If it seems strong then use your voice or magic or anything else to try and call me. I'll hit them with attack spells when I find them as well."

After giving out those instructions Kamu and I hid in the shadow of a tree that's hard to see from the plaza.

Shortly after Gwine came back along with Ralpa and Zulu. They seemed to be trying their best to move quietly without making a sound but Zulu's banded-mail makes quite a bit of noise.

"Where's everyone?"

It was just as I replied, "Over there. I sent Toris to get them." to Ralpa in a whisper.

"What..is that!?"

Kamu raised her voice and pointed upwards.
Lead by that everyone tried following where she was pointing.

I can see something that's still as small as a grain of rice flying over here.

Eh? Is that...
Could it be!?

It's too far away so it's outside of the valid range for {Identify}.

Obviously it's out of range for magic as well.

If I were to pour in quite a bit of mana I wonder if it would reach?

And while I was thinking that it was steadily approaching us.

It became about the size of a grain of wheat.

It appears to be a lizard-like reptile with wings like a bat growing from it.

The color is..it's still too far so it looks pitch black.

"Hie!!?"

Kamu let out a small stifled scream in fear.

"Dr..{Dragon}?"

Zulu said in a daze.

"It's my first time seeing one!"

"It's cool!"

Ralpa and Gwine are saying absurd things.

However, a dragon huh?

If that's the case then I've heard about it from Miduchi.

Even I know about it.

It should breathe fire.

Though depending on the type it could be acid, poison, or ice..I feel like there was one more thing as well...

"Don't move, don't talk."

In a hurry I touched each person in order and used the spells {Resist.Earth}, {Resist.Water}, {Resist.Fire}, and {Resist.Air} on them.

I'm glad I practiced them seriously...

The duration of the effect is 1,000 seconds so it should last for over 15 minutes.
..Finally on myself as well..Alright.

"{Spread}!"

At the same time as I pointed towards the left and gave out the order I lowered my body and ran towards the right.

I took a glance up into the sky.

I can see a lizard flying through the sky from the gaps in the trees.
The dragon which was the size of a grain of wheat is already pretty big.
Around the size of a small marble I guess?
It's head is almost like a slightly thin alligator.
What in the world is that?

A horn?

There seems to be several horns growing stretched out towards the back of its head.

Its body seems to be stretched out and streamline.
Growing from its back are what appear to be the wings of a bat from a glance.
In the center of the wings it seems to even have a frightening looking claw grown out.

Shit, these branches are in the way!

I maintain my posture as low as possible and run as if crawling along the ground.

There they are!

Miduchi and the others were moving towards us from a bit further in the forest with Toris at the lead.

After adjusting my direction towards them and it seems they noticed it right away.

"Did something come out!?"

Miduchi asked cautiously in a low voice.

Why are you all acting so carefree!

Have you not noticed it!?

"It's a {Dragon}!"

Everyone's facial color changed.

It seems they didn't notice it.

"I'll cast {Resistance} spells on you!"

After saying that first I used the {Resist} spells on Miduchi.

She can use all varieties of the {Resist} spells as well but Miduchi's mana is the next most precious attack method after mine.

I want to preserve it for as long as possible.

Following that I cast the {Resist} spells on everyone else.

I turned around for just a moment and tried looking into the sky but the trees are in the way so I can't see.

I guess it's not unreasonable for them not to notice it like this.

"That is!!?"

The first one I used the spells on, Miduchi, looked up into the sky while approaching the plaza.

Angela who was a bit behind her had a stiff expression on her face just like Miduchi while looking up at the sky.

It seems they've finally noticed it.

"Spread out in that direction!! I'll shoot it down after it enters range just like this!"

In a hurry I passed by Miduchi's side while giving out orders to everyone. Angela ran off with her body held low as if she were being pulled.

"{Dragon}..it's not?"

Stop clattering around!
It's already about the size of a large marble!

{Identify}..Obviously it's still impossible.
But, if I use an attack spell while extending the range then it should already reach.
It's not good that we're gathered together at the firing point.

"Hurry up and go!!!"

I yelled at Miduchi who was casually squinting her eyes while looking up at the sky.
Simultaneously I stretched my left hand out aimed at the {Dragon}.

"It's a {Wyvern}!"

Anything is fine!
I fired a {Stone Cannon Missile}.

A super large telephone pole was launched from in front of my left arm.
If there's this much distance between us then it's plenty for it to accelerate.

The crystallization of my mana went flying towards the flying lizard with extreme speed!
In order to make it easier to see the lizard after firing it I shifted the trajectory slightly.

I don't know if it's a {Dragon} or whatever but as long as this lands a direct hit!

..Whatt..!!?

Chapter 304 : Altar 3

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 10

The warhead of my greatest attack spell {Stone Cannon Missile} obviously went flying towards the flying lizard that was approaching us from the sky.

But, what in the world!

Around the point when it was 50 meters from the surface it was offset by countless spells(?) that came flying from it's side.

Came flying? No, they might not have come flying.

It almost looked like an extremely long and thin {Anti-Magic Field} stretching out that even I can't make.

It looked like the spell warhead was exposed to something resembling a purple beam.

In any case, the flying spell warhead was exposed(?) to that beam or whatever that acted as if it wouldn't allow the flying lizard to be attacked so in order to try and avoid it I shifted the course of the warhead even more. My {Stone Cannon} was only able to endure it for a really short period of time. In the end it scattered midway through it's path.

Along the trail that the beam followed to the warhead there was something like a sparkling powder scattered about.

Looking at the scattering trail and it seems that the beam was fired from the surface.

I said it was an {Anti-Magic Field} but that's probably not an {Anti-Magic Field}. The warhead didn't look like it crumbled from losing it's mana and an {Anti-Magic Field} wouldn't leave behind that kind of sparkling powder after it moves. That's why I think it should be something different.

However, what in the world was that just now!?

Miduchi who stopped moving raised her voice in surprise as well.

The beam came flying from the outer circumference of the room from every direction.

Right. Every direction including from behind us as we face off against the {Wyvern}.

Did we overlook a monster!?

Or was it summoned from those altars!?

The flying lizard has already reached the size of a baseball.

I should be able to see it pretty soon and after trying to {Identify} it after all it was the so-called {Wyvern}.

There wasn't anything that seemed to be really problematic among it's abilities. Though {Venom} seems pretty dangerous we have the method of resisting it with magic.

Other than that, it doesn't have any magic special skills and no {Breath} like the {Dragon} I've heard about in stories or the {Lesser Yowie} and {Frost Lizard} either.

"It's fine so go!! Everyone be careful of the surroundings!! Something is out there!!"

I yell at Miduchi while using an attack spell one more time.

This time it's {Ice Cannon Missile}.

Once again a spell warhead with powerful force behind it was fired from my left hand.

This time for sure!

I started guiding it immediately after firing it.

This time I'll lead it along an arched curve from bottom to top.

I'll give it an ice uppercut.

It might appear difficult at a glance but it's possible to guide the flying warhead while looking at the opponent so as long as the target that is the flying lizard doesn't make any sudden maneuvers there's no doubt it'll hit.

I'm sure it can't manage that with that large of a body.

That's the frightening part about a spell with {Missile} added to it.

It seems that the beam isn't flying at it this time.

But, of all things!

Right before the spell warhead was about to land a direct hit on the {Wyvern} it flapped both of its bat wings wide in front of it and performed an unbelievably sudden deceleration. Since the state of it was almost as if it used emergency breaks in mid-air, it temporarily stalled, and then fell a bit of altitude.

My spell barely grazed just the tip of its nose.

That maneuver completely ignored the laws of physics!

That was way beyond something like the combat helicopter {Cobra}!?

However, for what reason do you I think I added {Missile} to it?

It'll end up taking a bit of a detour but I can still guide it.

Since it's a lot closer than just now after all.

There's still plenty of room remaining in the effective range.

I made warhead of the {Ice Cannon} do a sudden turn as quickly as possible. Then I had it do a sudden descent leading it to the back of the {Wyvern}.

However...

Shit..

It's difficult to control big spells with {Missile}.

If it was a less powerful warhead then it'd be easier to make sharp turns though..!

The sudden turn ended up killing a large portion of the spell warheads speed.

There more of those beams from just now hit it again.

The {Ice Cannon} endured it for just a short period of time again and then quickly crumbled and scattered.

Once again the sky was filled with particles of something almost like a sparkling powder scattered about.

The speed of the {Wyvern} dropped quite a bit because of it's repeated turning as well.

Either because it was making use of that or because it was cautious of attack spells flying towards it, it started flying zigzag while shaking it's head right and left.

Ah, is it searching for prey?

I can tell it's distracted by the hill I made in the center of the plaza.

It's already gotten quite a bit bigger than a soccer ball.

It's width with it's wings stretched out is about 10 meters.

I guess it's length is probably about the same. Or maybe a bit longer?

Looking at it from the front and the thickness of it's body seems to be over 1 meter.

It's huge.

Up against something like that I'm sure a bow and arrows would be almost meaningless.

It's suspicious if they could even pierce into it.

It would be good if the {Arrow.Of.Blindness} can stab into it but it seems pretty hopeless.

"Bel!"

"Yes!"

I heard a good reply from a place several tens of meters away.

"Shoot it down with the gun!! Also countdown!"

A bow and arrow is no good but if it's a gun then...

Since it's our first time on this floor we brought along the guns.

I had Bel use the gun, Miduchi and Kamu the bow, and Angela is using the broad sword she's used up until now.

Since there seemed to be quite a bit of forest this time I had Angela use the sword without letting her hold any projectile weapons.

For the time being I drove Bel who's probably entered the firing position to a corner of my head.

It's fine as long as I concentrate solely on her countdown.

"3!"

I need to do what I can do.

The {Wyvern} flying zigzag is already pretty close.

"2!"

Even if I don't extend the range of my spells after a bit more my magic level should be plenty to reach it.

Since this time it's already close in terms of distance.

One more shot.

It's {Fire Cannon Missile}.

"1!"

If I fire from the distance even if it were to dodge it should be fine as long as I make some slightly adjustments.

Also, it seems those beams can't be fired rapidly in succession.

I won't let you escape anymore!

We'll finish things with this!

I fire a large spear that's almost as if condensed magma has taken shape just like that.

This time there's no tricks or anything else.

I fired it in a straight line along the shortest distance towards the {Wyvern}.

For just an instant I felt the radiant heat from the warhead.

Almost simultaneously I heard a gunshot.

And then, my {Fire Cannon}...

Was obstructed by multiple beams once again and disappeared without a trace.

It can fire consecutively after all!

Nn? Nnn?

It seemed like all of the beams only aimed for my spell warhead...

Come to think of it I wonder if the bullet hit?

There weren't any beams that went towards the gun, I think.

Though there was a distance of about 200 meters it's difficult to imagine that she'd miss that large of a target.

It seems that at the very least it hasn't done any major damage.

Though I say that, the gun itself might be effective.

"Bel, that's already fine. Stop! Hide in a different location!! Everyone else continue to watch all directions of our surroundings!"

I figured out several of the opponents tricks from that just now.

The one using the spell for that beam is either not moving at all or not moving much at all.

It seems like the route for that sparkling powder all converge from fixed locations along the surface.

It's a spell that can erase my highest level of spell warhead so it should require a considerable amount of concentration.

Do they not have enough leeway to move around?

Other than that it's unknown how they're determining it but I think it aims for whatever has the higher threat level.

Though I can't say that with much confidence.

There's a high possibility that because the bullet flew faster than my attack spell on top of being extremely small it wasn't noticed in the first place.

And then while the only examples for now are spells but it seems to fire that beam when it reaches an altitude of 40~50 meters.

Is it because of problems related to the height of the ones using the spell and they can't see that high without that much of an angle?

Though taking into account how they're fired from various places on this floor and I feel like it might be different.

However, there's also the case of the {Ice Cannon} just now.

There was a very short period of time after the exposure starts and it won't even last 1 second but my spell warheads can endure the erasure.

In the end my {Ice Cannon} was an attack from almost directly below and even after it arrived at the interception(?) altitude it didn't seem to be destroyed right away.

Even if the {Wyvern} was able to dodge it depending on the direction the {Wyvern} might end up entering the space between the spells several of the magicians(?) are using and my warhead.

Isn't that why it wasn't able to start the exposure?

Can that beam not just do damage to spells but to the body of the {Wyvern} itself?

In that case it seems like it would be best off aiming directly for us but it might be blocked by these trees and unable to accurately grasp our location. Probably.

The {Wyvern} already appears to be the size of a bath bucket.

I guess the distance is about 100 meters or so?

I can finally tell after it's approached this close but it's body from the head to it's tail should be over 15 meters long.

The span of it's wings should be a bit larger than 10 meters as well.

It's altitude seems to be 60~70 meters high from a glance.

Additionally it's looking in my direction.

I guess I was found.

Well, since I've been firing those kinds of flashy attack spells consecutively it's only obvious.

Without taking my eyes off the {Wyvern} I ran a bit and hid behind the trunk of a tree.

After that I carefully picked treetops that are outside of it's visibility and hid behind a tree trunk several trees away from the first one I hid from it behind.

Come closer just like that!

I'll shoot you down from directly below!

Ah...

This bastard...

The {Wyvern} suddenly started rising and raised it's altitude.

It's leisurely started circling above.

Is it starting again because it lost sight of me?

However, it shouldn't have any attack methods that can be used against us.

But, continuing to glare at each other like this is bad...

I'm sure the ones firing those spell beams won't remain in the same place forever if they see this situation.

It's dangerous if I don't finish the {Wyvern} off right away.

I guess attack spells which send something flying are no good.

In that case, I'm sure {Fire Ball} wouldn't work either...

Then would {Lightning Bolt} work?

Judging from the {Wyverns} size I'd say it's current altitude is about 200 meters or so?

If I extend the range just in case then it's a distance that should be plenty to deal it a blow.

I'm sure even those beams would be powerless against electrical discharge.

Even if erasing it is possible it can reach it's destination over a distance of just 200 meters in a literal instant.

If I pour mana into the power then it should be able to deal a decent amount of damage before it's erased and if I'm lucky it's muscles will stiffen from the shock and it won't be able to use it's wings anymore.

If it falls from that high of an altitude I feel like it could die from just that.

Just as expected from that large of a body, it should deal plenty of damage.

I look at the {Wyvern} through an opening in the treetops.
That bastard, it's not just me. It seems to have lost sight of all of us.
I gauge the timing of it's revolutions and stretch my hand out almost straight above.

Well, this should be the end.

...

.....

Now!

Lightning was fired from my left hand straight up towards the {Wyvern}.
The bluish-white sparks arrived in an instant...

It turned midway and disappeared!

Eh!?

What's going on!?

I didn't see the beam for that spell!?

Then one more shot!

It's no good.

It seems to be attracted towards whatever that sparkling stuff is.
Centering around the space where those beams passed through it seems that the sparkling powder that was scattered has properties that attract electricity.

There's no doubt it was able to determine my position so I think while moving towards a different tree.

Like this I have almost no hands I can play when it comes to using attack spells from the distance.

The only spell that seems like it might work is {Disintegrate} but even if I were to pour all of my mana into it I'm sure it wouldn't be enough for that volume.

What should I do?

More importantly, is everyone else alright?

I scanned the surroundings but couldn't tell for sure.
There's not a single sound.

If they're hiding inside of this forest then they should be safe from the {Wyvern} for the moment.

They must be hiding while watching carefully for the casters of those beam spells.

The casters of those beam spells are troublesome as well but first off I want finish off that {Wyvern}.

In regards to the beam it should be fine to just use an {Anti-Magic Field} to block it and finish it off with bow and arrow or gun from behind that. Probably.

Ah, that's right.

In the first place it's possible it never even noticed the bullets from the gun. In that case, it might be a spell which requires proper sight of the target warhead.

Then it's best to hurry.

I'll hit with the level 9 wind magic attack spell, {Hurricane.Cluster}.
Though I feel like even the level 8 {Gale.Turbulence} would be plenty powerful judging from that {Wyverns} body but here I should use this just in case.

In the first place, if it's wind magic then it shouldn't see it right?

Also, even if it's erased the temporary outbreak of wind should be able to scatter those particles.

I raised the edge of my lips and stretched my left hand out upwards.

Chapter 305 : Altar 4

There's actually another char intro/stat page in between this chapter and 236 but I probably won't do it for a while.

It's just updated stats. If you really want to see ncode.syosetu.com/n9511bs/348/ , and for added humor run the page through google translate or something.

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 10

A massive amount of air springs forth with my left hand as the starting point. That spreads out in a cone shape and raised up into the air as turbulence. The surrounding trees that were hit with waves from it bent back and forth twisting and shaking.

My ears popped from the rapid change in air pressure.

While still maintaining some amount of direction it arrived at the target {Wyvern} in an instant.

The {Wyvern} that was caught in the vortex of turbulence lost it's balance.

A flood of purple beams rushed there.

All of the beams rapidly moved up and down erasing my spell.

However, just as expected while even more sparkling particles were left behind almost all of them including those were scattered upwards and aren't remaining!

Without a moment's delay I sent lightning flying.

Even if it was only for a moment it was swallowed up by the super turbulent air and while it barely managed to avoid crashing my lightning flew towards that sort of flying lizard.

"Gyaooooo~n!!"

This

time for sure my lightning hit the {Wyvern} without being obstructed by the shining particles and caught it with bluish-white shining tentacles. And then, the beams started flooding again but it was already too late. I don't know if it's because of the damage or because it's muscle stiffened up from the lightning but the {Wyvern} started falling with it's wings spread out halfway.

"Finish it off!!!"

After yelling that I started running towards the place where it seems to have fallen with my bayonet in hand.

Everyone's started regrouping from the surroundings.

Along with the breaking of branches I heard a loud thud! as a sound similar to tremors could be heard.

"Over here!"

I heard Toris's voice from the shadow of a treetop a bit ahead.

By the time I arrived Angela had stabbed her broadsword into an eye of the {Wyvern} and was gouging it out like crazy.

"Did you finish it off!?"

Someone asked but Angela is moving the grip of her sword in her right hand like she's mad and punching the side of it's head with the small spike attached to her shield.

The {Wyvern} isn't moving.

【Condition: Shock Injury.Internal Bruising.Puncture Wound】
【HP: -9(612) MP: 25(25)】

"Angela, stop already."

It's already on the verge of death. It already can't do anything at all.

"Hie..gu"

Angela let out a small scream while moving the sword stabbed into it's eye and continued punching it with the spike of her shield with a thud~thud.

Hyun~ and someone's arrow came flying but was deflected by the scales covering it's long neck.
Is it Kamu?

"It's already fine, Maruso. Stop."

Toris embraced Angela from behind to restrain her and after taking his left glove off with his mouth touched the {Wyverns} head with it to check it's status.

"It's dead."

Tors reported to me as I finally got close to it.

【Condition: Death】
【HP: -76(612) MP: 25(25)】

"Hiu..Ha..Ha..."

Looking at Angela's face and it's crumpled with tears.
She must have been quite terrified.
I wonder if it fell right nearby the place she was hiding?
I'm sure that would be pretty shocking.

"It's already safe, the {Wyvern} is dead."

Miduchi grabbed Angela's hand and helped her stand up.

"Ah..Ma..Mad..am..Already.."

"Yeah, Maruso. It's already safe."

It seems Angela was able to recover her composure.

"Don't let your guard down. There should still be something out there."

I gave the warning to everyone.

The cage of lightning bolts is still going strong as if nothing happened.
Though the four pillars of seven-colored light that had risen up have disappeared there should still be over 20 beings remaining that fired those beam spells to erase my magic.

We can't let our guard down after just finishing off the {Wyvern}.

"It's fine to put off this things magic stone for now. Rather than that, let's move to a place that's easy to defend. We'll move to just before that plaza from just now."

We should move to the place just before entering that plaza.

Not only is it possible to secure visibility of one side but we can hide ourselves in the deep forest.

.....

After waiting on standby while observing the surroundings for a few minutes and we could tell something was approaching.

Of course, the one who noticed and gave out the warning was Bel.

"There should be one of something with four legs from the left..and four legs from the right as well, I guess...from further in to the left..It's hard to tell..There's something coming from even further in to the right as well. Other than the close ones on both sides it's still too far so I can't tell."

At the very least there's a total of 4 of them huh...

"Miduchi, do you know they might be?"

Ralpha asked Miduchi.

That's right, Miduchi's special knowledge often shows it's true worth at times like these.

"I can't even begin to guess.."

As expected it seems to be difficult.

However, if she can't guess it then I'm sure it's impossible for anyone else.

I can hear a rustling sound in the distance and feel the presence of some kind of animal approaching.

Simultaneously there's a breath like "Bufo~"

The sound of something being crushed like crunch~crunch~snap.

"What's that sound.."

"No clue?"

Ralpha and Kimu were talking in a low voice.

"Somehow it sounds like something is being destroyed.."

"I wonder if it's breaking rocks or something?"

Zulu and Gwine are talking as well.

Hearing that and it certainly does sound like it.

"Bel! The number of legs it has is four right!? It's not two, three, or eight right!!?
It's important!! Tell me for sure!"

Hearing their conversation Miduchi asked Bel in a panic.

What is it?

"Nn..I guess so. There should be four legs on both sides, I think."

Bel replied with her eyes closed while concentrating on her eyes.

"You're certain right!?"

Miduchi's eyes started turning bloodshot from excitement.

What in the world is it?

"Three? Wai..Wait just a minute..The two nearby certainly have four legs."

Bel firmly replied after opening her closed eyes.

"We don't have any room to spare! Everyone if you see something like a cow whether it be with a bow or spells attack it all at once! Absolutely do not approach it until we weaken it! It's no good to be gathered together as well! Dear you use wind magic to somehow disperse the air!"

If I were to disperse the air something like a bow wouldn't hit right!?

"That sound! In the worst case it might have petrification breath! No matter what you and I mustn't be hit by the attack!"

Before I could say any complaints Miduchi said some surprising details. Hearing that fear ran across everyone's faces.

"Bel you too don't use the gun but use magic as much as possible! Kamu-san it's fine if you try to hold it back. Other than that running into the forest is no good because the footing is bad. We need to run around in a wide area and somehow finish one off without a doubt!"

Even if you say magic, that beam will...I guess it won't be erased immediately and as long as it has no visibility it can't fire the beam.

"In any case if it has four legs then it's still quite a bit better than eight legs. {Spread}!!"

Miduchi ordered with a strong tone of voice.

Reflexively all of us ran in different directions.

It was just a bit of information but I'm sure she must have thought of something.

.....

The first one I saw was the one that was approaching from the left. I reflexively hit it with {Fire Arbalest Missile} and everyone's spells cleanly hit so it ended up falling over without being able to do anything.

Various places on it's body have keratinized and it has blackish skin that from a glance looks like the shell of a turtle. It has two large horns growing from both sides of it's head and looks exactly like a cow the so-called {Gorgon}. I've heard about it.

The moment the next one showed it's face in the plaza approaching from the right I fired off a spell. It was able to evade several of them but Miduchi and mine had {Missile} added to them so they hit without a problem. We won't give them any time to spit out the breath of petrification.

However, the two that appeared after that were a problem.

They petrified all of the trees along the sides of the plaza while making crunching noises. Then they charged into the plaza we were in while smashing through the petrified trees. Both of them at the same time!

Both of them spit out grey {Petrification Breath} while going to the left and right at a ferocious speed, they approached while avoiding the attack spells Bel, Toris, Gwine, and Ralpha fired!

Freeze them?

Before it solidifies they would be able to spit out breath faster.

It's obviously impossible.

"Bufo!!"

Every time they spit out breath I use wind magic to disperse it.

After it's scattered it seems to lose quite a bit of it's effect or disappears.

However, if things keep up like this let alone freezing them I don't even have the time to hit them with attack spells!

It seems Miduchi is desperate behind me as well.

"Kimu! With your spear!"

I heard Kamu's shout.

"Sure!! Leave it to me."

Kimu replied to that like alpha and omega.

They must be trying to finish it off with Kimu's spear or Bel's spells while Miduchi defends against the breath.

Because the bow and arrows are useless Kamu who threw it aside early on and Zulu are gallantly charging at it and acting as decoys.

On my end Angela and Ralpa are acting as decoys while Gwine and Toris are acting as attackers with spear and spells.

However, while Gwine's spear is a magic weapon it's not as long as the one Kimu uses and Gwine's body isn't very big either.

Inevitably her reach will be shorter and the burden for that portion falls on the decoys.

I want to use attack spells but there's no one else here with a high enough level of wind magic to disperse that breath.

Even on the other side there's no one but Miduchi.

Toris's {Stone Bolt} hit it's front leg by chance and if Angela hadn't seen that as an opportunity and landed a clean hit it probably would have taken a lot more time to finish it off.

Angela landed a number of attacks consecutively until Gwine's spear stabbed into it's side and Ralpa split it's head open.

Somehow we were able to defeat the one over here.

How are things on Miduchi and the others end?

I turned around while controlling my mana.

"Aaaahhh~!!"

It was just as Kamu's small body was sent flying.

I spontaneously canceled the attack spell and ran towards the direction Kamu was sent flying.

Putting aside the breath if she were to be stepped on..!

And then the worst case scenario unfolded.

"Guo"

Next Zulu's large body was sent flying and hit me so even I was sent rolling. And then flew into Miduchi just like that.

"Hiii!"

"Ah, my hand, my hand is..!!"

Kimu and Bel were hit by the petrification breath!

Before our eyes the two of them gradually turned into nonspeaking statues.

Their equipment and weapon remained just like that without change.

Shit!!

"Bel!!!"

Toris ran over towards Bel.

"Stop!!! If you get close then even Bel will be attacked!!!"

Miduchi yelled from below me.

Zulu, move!!

I sent Zulu flying with all of my strength and then started controlling my mana again as I stood up.

"leeeee~i!!"

Angela went charging in while letting out a scream with fighting spirit and cut through the neck of the {Gorgon} with her broad sword.

.....

We released Kimu and Bel from being statues right away using the spell {Remove.Petrification}.

It seems the two of them were unconscious while they were changed to stone. The moment their bodies returned they went half into a frenzy.

But, it seems they understood the situation soon after and regained their composure.

After that I healed Kamu and Zulu's injuries.

Also, at the same time as the {Gorgon} died the cage of lightning bolts disappeared.

However, since the cage of lightning bolts disappeared I wonder if that means that beam was fired by the {Gorgons}?

I tried using {Identify} on them but they only had the special skill {Petrification.Breath}?

Let alone a magic special skill, they didn't have a single skill that might be related to that beam.

"{Status Open}..But, it's strange."

I couldn't help but say my doubts out loud.

"What is?"

Ralpha replied.

"That beam of light right?"

Bel said. That's right.

"It seems like it would be best to remain cautious for a while longer."

Toris agreed as well.

"Miduchi-san do you have any ideas?"

Gwine asked Miduchi but she didn't know either, or rather she had too many monsters that it could be so there was no way for her to determine which.

Truly so.

I'm sure every monster that can use magic would be a candidate after all.

For a short while we were on guard while remaining careful of the surroundings but nothing in particular happened after that.

For the time being we decided it was safe so I ordered the two slaves to gather the magic stones from the {Wyvern} and {Gorgons}.

The value of the {Wyverns} magic stone according to {Identify} was just over 890,000 by 123. The values of each of the {Gorgons} magic stones were slightly different but all four of them were around 200,000. If we sell them then it'll be over 10,000,000 Z in just magic stones.

Also, it's only obvious but we cut off the {Wyverns} thorn-like tail and carefully recovered it.

Miduchi carefully stored it away.

It's supposedly filled with deadly poison after all.

But since it has the special skill {Venom} then wouldn't it not normally have the poison?

Even when I tried using {Identify} on the tail we cut off it just came up as {Wyvern's Tail-end} and even in the sub-window there wasn't anything related to poison.

And then I realized it when we were recovering the tail but the {Wyvern}'s scales.

The largest ones were a diameter of 6~7 cm while the smallest were 4~5 cm and they're a rounded diamond shape but that one floor guardian pattern was drawn on the surface of every single one of the scales.

There was no reaction using the {Cantrip} {Magical.Detection} but a slight reaction could be seen when using the spell {Detect.Magic}.

Everyone got really excited over this.

"If we make equipment using the scales of a {Wyvern} I can't even imagine what kind of price they'll be worth."

and it was also largely because of what Miduchi said,

"The lord of my home town Duke Zamu supposedly has armor made using the scales of a {Wyvern} that's passed down through the generations as their family heirloom."

And what Kimu said in a daze also spurred that on.

If it's on the same level as the heirloom of a Duke family then it would be more difficult not to get excited.

It's troublesome and will take some time but there's no way we'd just throw it away.

We decided to gather all of the scales without leaving a single one behind.

And then after checking the status of the scales we gathered things got noisy again.

{Pure Breed Wyvern's Scale}

A blackish brown scale with a slightly transparent tint.

Even after checking the sub-window of {Identify} there wasn't anything particularly unusual.

Just in case we collected all 8 of the horns from the {Gorgons} as well.

{Gorgon's Horn(Left)}

Something like (Left) are you making fun of me?

I thought that but it seems no one found it strange.

Though after thinking about it there's certainly things with names like {Goblin's Right Hand} or {Ork's Eyeball(Left)}.

Somehow I just really don't care anymore.

After that we decided to first try searching the area around where the pillar of light appeared.

It's true the beams bother me but it can't be helped thinking about things you don't know.

We decided to just start by investigating a place where we might figure something out but there wasn't any deeper meaning than that.

Relying on Gwine's memory we went to the area where the closest pillar of light appeared but it was just a small 20 meter or so wasteland spread out and we weren't able to discover anything suspicious.

It couldn't be helped so we decided to try going to the next place where the pillar should have been but it was the same.

By this point the time was already past 12:00am.

"It's about a good time but what should we do?"

Toris asked but we still can't afford to rest.

On our way up to here someone brought up the possibility that the source of the beams might not be a monster but the several altars we saw along the way.

They have a different shape from the altars up until now and a certain word floated into the heads of all the reincarnated people including myself.

In other words, a machine.

Otherwise a magic tool or magic item.

We nervously tried approaching one of the altars.

However, the cage of lightning bolts didn't activate and nothing happened just like the last time we approached them so there was no particular need to fear them.

Even investigating them from the outside we couldn't figure out anything at all. After making up my mind I decided to send the attack spell {Stone Cannon} flying into it and it easily broke apart.

There wasn't any sort of mechanism inside it looked just like plain rock.

But, as expected everyone was completely exhausted.

Most likely, the monsters shouldn't respawn until around 10:00 tomorrow.

For the time being we should munch on some hardtack and take a rest in the teleport crystal room at the center of the room.

By the way, it's unknown how much HP it had remaining but today's MVP was Angela who finished off the {Wyvern} and furthermore dealt massive damage to two of the {Gorgons} after that.

It seems like her level went up as well.

Chapter 306 : Live On Bread Alone

People Cannot Live On Bread Alone

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 11

"Fu..."

We arrived at the teleport crystal room in the center of the 11th floor. It's something we figured out after getting closer but this pillar where the teleport crystal room is was just as expected a square which each side is about 50 meters just like the 8th, 9th, and 10th floors.

Over 5 hours have already passed since then.
It's completely morning.

I haven't slept in almost a full day.

Since we haven't been running it's still a bit easier than the time when we rescued {Black.Topaz} but somehow I remember the hard days exploring the dungeon with {Sun.Ray}.

Since there was a high chance that those altars were the source for the beams we went around destroying them in a hurry.

We destroyed over 20 of them in all.

According to Gwine and the altars are at fixed locations exactly 500 meters from the outer circumference lined up in a circle.

In other words, roughly 200 meters from the outer circumference is forest.

The next 200 meters or so from there is a grassland.

The cage of lightning bolts appeared around the border between the doughnut shaped forest and grassland or at most in the center of the grassland. It was a huge cage that's over tens of times larger than the ones from the floors up until now.

Then after you pass through the grassland you enter a forest or thicket again but another 100 meters or so from there the altars are placed with a fixed distance of several hundred meters in a doughnut shape once again.

Therefore, the total length of the circular shape which the altars are placed along is around 28 kms. If we were to assume they're lined up with an average interval of 300 meters then there should be over 90 of them. I wanted to destroy at least $\frac{1}{5}$ th of them. Of course, it's believed there's a good chance the dungeons automatic repair would take effect but we still did it because we thought it would take a considerable amount of time for them to be repaired.

In any case, we went around destroying as many altars as we could in a hurry so that's why it took this much time. After all this is only the second time we've come to the 11th floor. Even though there's no hallways I didn't think we would defeat the floor guardian after just that amount of experience so the matter this time was really unexpected.

Judging from the things we saw last time we guessed that clearing the 11th floor would take far less time than every floor until now but I never thought it would be this time on just our second try.

It was a floor we were exploring for almost the first time and it's not like we could let our guard down regarding traps either.

As expected we're reaching the limits of our willpower for today.

I talk to everyone while biting a hardtack.

"Everyone, sorry when you're exhausted but endure for just a bit longer. Probably, the {Wyvern} that was the guardian should respawn around 20 hours after last time so, tomorrow, no, it should be around 10:00 today. There's already less than 5 hours remaining. Right after this we'll get some sleep. Zulu and Angela you two take turns keeping watch."

Sorry but you two be patient with just 2 hours or so of sleep. You're slaves and can't use magic so you drew the unlucky lot. Particularly Zulu who said, "This will increase masters reputation even more!" and cut off the {Wyvern}'s head then carried the damn heavy thing in shifts with Angela.

Even though I told them to stop because it would just add to the burden. Everyone else agree with them so I just let them do as they like but isn't it fine if we have that many scales?

"In regards to the place the {Wyvern} will respawn but I can think of several patterns. First off is the case where it respawns over in front of that hall as if protecting it. In that case it'll be the easiest.

Since it's fine if everyone just attacks it all at once.

It's got a huge body so once it's noticed us and we can use magic then we can attack without needing to worry about hitting each other. If it's magic a distance which you can punch then I'm sure those beams won't have the time to come flying and in terms of position the forest should act as a shield so I don't even think the beams will come flying in the first place."

Everyone's munching on hardtack and sipping dried meat soup while silently listening to me with exhaustion on their faces.

"It should be plenty possible to finish it off before the {Gorgons} come.

In regards to the {Gorgons}, the surroundings of this pillar is nothing but wasteland and viability is good so I think we'll have a safe time fighting with magic or bow. Depending on the case we can just run into this room as well.

They most likely won't be able to enter the room just like up until now and even in the worst case they do the hall is narrow so it'll be one at a time. In that case~ it's fine if we just wait for them on both sides of the room."

Ah, even I'm having trouble thinking from fatigue. I'm glad I thought about it ahead of time.

"And in cases other than that. There was a protrusion way above this pillar right? If that's the {Wyvern}'s nest and it respawns up there then it'll be troublesome."

It started to get troublesome so I just dipped all three of my remaining hardtack into my soup.

"Nn~ I wonder about that?"

"I wonder if something like that will really happen?"

Miduchi and Bel brought up their doubts.

"What do you mean?"

Toris, Ralpa, and everyone else looked at the two of them curiously when I asked them.

"Certainly I agree if it ends up like Al-san said then it would be troublesome but if it's a floor guardian then in the first place shouldn't it respawn while protecting that entrance?"

"Yeah. I think so too. Though it'll probably move up above where it's easier to attack intruders afterwards."

Bel and Miduchi didn't just find this case doubtful but seem to have the same opinion.

"I see..Certainly that might be true."

Ralpa agreed with a self-satisfied look.

Hm~mm.

"If it were going to respawn in a place where it's at an advantage from the start then why do the Minotaur on the 9th floor all respawn gathered together? It wouldn't be strange for them to respawn separately all around the pillar right? Even the {Amber.Goliath} wouldn't it be best for it to be underground?"

Miduchi said things which all make sense.

Certainly that might the case hearing it said.

Not just myself but everyone else is nodding as well.

"Nn..That might be the case. But, for now I want to think of as many cases as possible. If it respawns above here then it's impossible to aim at it with magic because we can't see it and even if we could the distance is too far. Even if it were to come down since we'd have to aim the attack spells upwards those beams would be a problem.

Also, it's hard to imagine since it's called a guardian but it's possible it might not come down right away. They also say, "it's harder to see in the light" so it's even possible it might not see us right below it's feet for a short while."

I sip at my soup and swallow down the soggy hardtack together with it.

"In that case we'll test out everything we can and then return to the 10th floor. We'll restart from the beginning."

Depending on the case we might come to the 11th floor one more time but if the cage of lightning bolts is still in effect we'll give up advancing to anymore of floors after this. It seems like the amulet will sell pretty high and there's also a high chance that the {Wyvern}'s scales we obtained this time can be made into equipment that won't lose to that in price. We can still obtain quite a bit of treasure up to the 10th floor so if we just focus on nothing but earning for the next one or two years then I should be able save up plenty of money.

Though I say that, I'm sure that won't be the case.

That cage of lightning bolts should stop when either the challenger or guardian's life signs stop or they disappear. If that wasn't the case then it's just a matter of having it already activated from the start.

"Now then, let's get some rest already."

.....

I wash my face with cold water to blow away the drowsiness.

After putting on my equipment, we started waiting in the hall of the teleport crystal room for the {Wyvern} to respawn.

Eventually the amount of light outside rapidly started to drop and it returned to the madder red twilight.

And then, the whirling fog that is the sign of respawn appeared.

"It's coming!"

I warn everyone in a whisper.

Everyone gripped their weapons once more and I can tell they're tense.

In front of the room huh...

Even though I heard what Miduchi and Bel said, honestly speaking I still found it surprising.

However it's just as they said, it's only obvious for a guardian to respawn in a position of protecting the entrance to the teleport room.

That means their guess was correct.

But, no matter how long we waited the fog just kept whirling and the {Wyvern} didn't respawn.

This is~ the same pattern as the strong mino on the 9th floor I guess?

That {Wyvern} was level 28 after all.

It's not like I'm absolutely sure about it but I guess the respawn time of monsters is based on their level?

That's probably the case.

Probably though I have close to no basis for it.

The cage of lightning bolts never activated and the pillars of seven-colored light didn't rise into the air either.

Miduchi's {Party-ization} was never canceled as well.

Just in case we remained on guard while continuing to wait in combat stance in the teleport crystal room but it seems it'll end up pointless...

After gathering our resolve we tried going outside but nothing happened in particular.

Furthermore I tried firing attack spells into the air at random but the beams weren't fired.

I guess the remaining altar-type battery guns are silent because the cage of lightning bolts wasn't activated?

So pushing ourselves to destroy the altars while we were exhausted was meaningless?

Well, whatever.

After that we continued to wear down our nerves while waiting but the fog just kept whirling and there wasn't any change at all.

Since we hadn't got any proper rest as expected our fatigue is close to it's limits. It's fine to get some rest here just like this and then continue exploring after that.

In the first place we had planned to stay in the dungeon until the end of tomorrow.

We decided to return to the 10th floor once and get some rest after having a proper meal.

After that the next time we come it might be meaningless but just in case we'll start off by destroying all of the altars.

I'm sure it'll take close to a full day but it can be done.

Also, if we inspect how much the altars we destroyed this time have recovered we can guess how much time it'll take for them to return to normal.

If those altars are battery guns and we destroy them even if the {Wyvern} respawns it's threat level will fall quite a bit.

Even then just in case we spent a full two hours.

We continued on standby until noon before returning to the upper floor.

Maybe we should bring along a war hammer next time?

I wonder if Karimu will lend us his?

But, it's fine to use magic to attack in order.

Even last night not just Miduchi and I but Bel destroyed a consider number of altars as well.

Thinking about that and a war hammer would just end up as more heavy luggage.

.....

We returned to the 10th floor.

There was an appetizing smell drifting about in the teleport crystal room.

"Master! Also everyone else, it's good to see you're all safe."

We still haven't carried in a proper stove magic tool so Giberuti called out to us when he noticed while cooking over a portable stove.

Yeah. We somehow managed again this time.
But even so, that sure is a delicious smell.
Ah, beef huh.
It was the centerpiece ingredient we brought along this time.

"Ah! It's stew!"

Ralpa threw down the scales we tore off from the {Wyvern} with all of our effort and ran to the pot.
This girl..handle them more carefully.

"Wait just a moment, Ral. First we have to take care of them."

"Ow!! Ow!! Ow!!"

Bel pulled Ralpa back from looking into the pot by her ear while saying.
That's right.
That'll be for after we take care of the two giant stag beetles that respawned outside.

"Don't make such a face. Let's give our best for one more job."

I said while carefully placing the bag of {Wyvern} scales into a corner before confirming my bayonet.
Zulu carefully placed down the {Wyvern}'s head that he was holding in both arms into a corner as well.
Let's quickly finish them off before having a relaxing meal and a good rest.

Though there's still no shower.

.....

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 12

Evening, we returned to the surface just before sunset.

The sky is heavy and clouded.

The wind was blowing heavily but I guess because it's damp there wasn't all that much dust blowing around.

It feels like it's about to rain.

However, while it was unexpected we were magnificently able to finish off the {Wyvern} that was the guardian of the 11th floor and since we succeeded in carrying back a large amount of scales that could be considered {Magic.Items} our expressions were all bright.

Zenom and the {Butchers} he was leading all seemed to have sour expressions on as if they didn't obtain much of anything and all of the members of the {Exterminators} seemed to be the same except Basutorial who lead them for the first time and seemed to have a comparatively satisfied expression on his face as they were all drinking and eating baldoggie near Murowa's food cart.

In comparison to them, Kamu and Kimu started boasting about how the 11th floor was cleared before their very eyes.

Hearing that everyone was considerably surprised at the unexpected turn of events but at the same time they were pleased with cheerful expressions.

Their expressions changed so much you'd think their sour faces from just now were all ie.

Yeah...

Even though it doesn't have any direct relation to their own earnings...

I see..So they're this pleased about it.

The one who triumphantly raised his voice there was Zulu. He placed down the huge bag he was carrying like Santa Claus and opened the top showing everyone while saying, "Don't be surprised, don't shout in a loud voice".

"!! Dra"Shh!! It's a {Wyvern}. As expected of master right?"

Just like that.

Though the one who finished it off in the end was Angela...

She was together with him opening the bag and bragging about me.

So they had just wanted to do this...

Right away, we went to cash in the magic stones we obtained this time other than from the {Wyvern}.

"What is it?"

Miduchi who was walking next to me asked a bit curiously.

"Hn? About what?"

"You seem very pleased."

Is that so?

Leaving behind a gentle smile Miduchi went ahead to the door of magic tool shop Danhiru and opened it.

Very pleased?

I see, so I'm pleased.

After that we returned to the inn once to take showers, change, and then had a report meeting once again. It would be bad if the {Wyvern}'s head rots so the slaves asked me to freeze it. It can't be helped~

Furthermore,

a number of members knew that {Wyvern} scales can be tailored into high class equipment because they maintain both their strength and flexibility. It seems it's normal to tailor them into scalemail or splintmail. It seems they're extremely valuable and you can't easily get your hands on them so the average armor shop around there wouldn't even be able to deal in them.

"Would it be faster to get someone from the first knight group to introduce me to someone who can produce that sort of equipment?"

After saying that and I was told, "When it comes to high class equipment then Karimu's armor workshop in the capital is supposedly good." and, "Wouldn't it be good to have them attached to the surface of a shield?". Come to think of it I've heard that the commanders of the first knight group used to buy their armor from Karimu's armor workshop before they started buying from us. It must be a first-rate workshop. It should be fine to ask them.

Hmm.

The

delivery of rubber armor was planned for the end of this month but either way we have three days off starting tomorrow and I have some business to take care of at my company in the capital as well. I guess I'll go and make an appointment to report(brag) to that old man King tomorrow.

If I want to meet him for even a bit of time during deliveries at the end of the month then I need to notify them during this holiday after all. No, the {Pure Breed Wyvern Scales} themselves seem to be {Magic.Item}-ish. Since I'm sure I'll be selling them through Sandak Company, first off I should go to Sandak Company...

No wait, even just for the purpose of properly appealing that I'm earning without slacking off...

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 13

Even though I traveled from afar, there's no way I could suddenly meet the King or the first queen her highness Morail so suddenly today. Obviously I haven't made an appointment and I'm sure they aren't so free that they can meet a mere in and out merchant like me. No, of course I didn't think I would be able to meet them today either. I just came to make an appoint through the first knight group. If it's the first knight group then putting aside the leader baron Logan, the sub-leader sub-Baron Bittowazu will meet me after all.

But, I went to the trouble of coming. Thinking it would be no good when I tried asking if I could meet the leader Baron Logan and ask about sister, I was made to wait for close to 30 minutes for a reply but I was given permission. I always think it but the power of the plate symbolizing a direct merchant for the first knight group is really amazing. Or maybe it's the direct merchant for the royal family that's amazing? Unusually I was told to come to their headquarters in the second citadel so moving through all of the guards that challenge my identity every time while bowing, "Thanks for your work" I eventually arrived at the first knight groups headquarters building.

Just as I was about to enter the building I encountered his highness Richard who seemed to have come along to discuss something with Baron Logan. I bowed to him with the almost empty {Double.Tool.Bag} filled with just three guardian magic stones and several random scales in it hanging from my waist(in the castle, while he may be a princess, since he's on duty there's no need to take the retainer's pose), and moved to the side to let him through.

"Ya~ Greed-kun. Weren't deliveries not for a short while later?"

It seems he's interested in a bit of talk about recent events. He doesn't seem to be in a hurry and neither am I.

After accompanying him for a bit he noticed the bag hanging from my waist.

"Nn...That is, could it be from the floor guardian..."

Come to think of it this person knows about the pattern of the floor guardian. I thought it would look bad carrying around the dirty looking outside in the castle so I flipped it out with the high class looking inside. I told him that I came to make an appointment with the King to report defeating another floor guardian.

"So you cleared the 10th floor! As expected."

And he was extremely impressed while saying,

"If it wasn't for the magic stones you adventurers {Vasataira} bring back the Kingdom wouldn't keep running. I've heard that the {Slaughterers} you lead are the highest peak among them, Greed-kun. It's an important duty of the royal family to praise and announce those sorts of achievements to increase the number of people who follow in your footsteps. I'm sure it would be best to hurry, I'll tell his majesty after this and try to get him to meet you. Wait inside."

and then went off somewhere.

I'm sure that Kingdom not running bit was just lip service but if I can meet the King today then there's no problem. It couldn't be helped so I asked a random person to give a message to commander Logan. And then soon after the commander came along to where I was sitting in a chair at the entrance of the knight group headquarters.

"Yo~ what's going on today? Shall we head to the reception room?"

The commander spoke with a frank manner.

"I'm sorry when you're so busy. I was nearby on a bit of business so I thought about greeting you.."

Also, blahblahblah it would be bad for me not to be here and I explained the situation.

After that I talked with him for a bit but since last week sister was sent on a campaign to a border dispute with Devas Kingdom again. I never heard about it...

Other than that, I heard rumors about it but it seems that commander Logan is retiring at the end of this year.

"I'm already 45 years old after all. It's started to get difficult in terms of stamina. Taku, Visshu, and Segan have all grown plenty as well.."

Taku

is referring to the first company commander, Viscount Takurado. Gendairu and Visshu is the second company commander Viscount Vishuru, Barkisas. And then of course, Segan is the third company commander Viscount Segan. Kendusu.

"And it's necessary for the organization to rejuvenate as well."

Though I don't think the first knight group has so many old people that it needs rejuvenation.

There's people who switched over to the second and third knight groups after losing the competition for company and platoon commander seats and even before that there's people who retired being recruited as commanders for other territories or their home towns knight groups as well. In order to make up for those retirees roughly 10 new squires join every year.

Isn't the average age between the late 20s and the 30s?

I think it's still plenty within the realm of an organization filled with youths. Well, compared to other knight groups the average age might be 7~8 years higher I guess.

"No matter who becomes my successor I can leave Jeff to support them for a while and after Jeff retires someone else should succeed Jeff as the sub-leader. It's not like you already know them so get along well."

Things will be lonely. They're words of courtesy just for outward appearances but they're still convenient words. But, I actually liked this commander Logan. There's also the favor of him covering for sister but for some reason I like him.

"I've started to want to retire to the countryside and take things easy myself, I've already troubled my wife quite a bit after all."

Commander Logan's territory is a town called Kasoidel which is roughly 500 km east of the capital in Duke Zamu's territory and supposedly along the border of Count Rinflight's territory further to the east. Along with that he also has a territory he received when he was promoted to commander a town in the royal territory called Hamura that used to be managed by Marquis Goruttsu. It's a detached territory and even after he retires from being knight commander he'll have to move back and forth all the time so I doubt it could really be called "taking things easy" but even then I'm sure it'll be less stressful.

It was around then that Richard came back.

His highness said two or three things to the commander before accompanying me from the second citadel to a room on the third floor of the guard tower into the inner citadel. The commander followed behind his highness after greeting him.

.....

"It seems you're doing well, Greed. I offer my praise."

"Ha..I'm very grateful for your words."

In front of me as I take the retainer's bow is the first queen her highness Morail. Obviously she's the oldest among the four queens and Richard's real mother. She's also one of the few people who know about the floor guardians. As expected the King wasn't able to free up any time.

I handed over the {Double.Tool.Bag} with the floor guardian pattern on it for them to inspect.

"{Status Open}..this bag, it's different from equipment but it's something from a floor guardian...Hn? There's something inside? Magic stones?"

Ah, I forget to take the magic stones out.
Also the {Wyvern}'s scales.

"Inside is the magic stones from the 10th floor guardian {Great.Underground.Vodyanoy} and what is believed to be the guardian of the 11th floor, a {Wyvern}'s magic stone and scales."

"What! Two floors in this short period of time? Ho~ how big."

Morin said while looking at the scale with a diameter of 3 cm.
That, it's one of the pretty small ones.
Richard opened his eyes wide on her side as well.

"{Status Open}..This is!"

Her highness Morail was surprised seeing the status of the Wyvern's scale.
Scales from a Wyvern themselves are a precious item so along with that they're considerably expensive but not anything that should surprise royalty.

Even in remote regions of Rombert Kingdom there's places with {Wyverns} living in them so once in every couple of decades they're defeated by the local knight groups of those lands.

".."

She went silent while looking at the {Wyvern}'s scale.

"It seems this scale is also a {Magic.Item}. There's a reaction for all elements of mana...Because it's from a Pure Breed Wyvern..."

I guess she was silent because she was using {Detect.Magic}.

I've already long since known that Wyvern scales were valuable so could you just put out an official notice praising us and end things already? I want to bring them into Sandak Company.

"Greed. Do you have all of the scales from this {Wyvern}?"

Morin asked while narrowing her eyes.

"Ha. I have all of them. Just in case, we also cut off the head and brought it back."

"Ho! What about the tail and claws?"

Putting aside the tail, even the claws? No one said anything about them being able to sell so we just threw them away on the spot.

"No, not those..the meat was rotting so..we didn't bring them along."

"I see..I wanted to see what they looked like..However, the things that you brought back are magnificent. I think it would be good to place the head beside it when we put out the official notice. I want to see it once myself as well."

Yeah, I thought so myself which is why I had Zulu carry it.

Though that's a lie.

Thanks, Zulu.

"Also, about these scales but what do you intend to do with them?"

"Ha, I still haven't particularly decided but either I'll bring them in to the company we use..or carry them into an armor exclusive workshop to tailor into armor..."

"Ho~ I thought you would make some armor out of them through your company."

If it was possible then that would be fine as well but I don't know how to process scales and they can't be used on rubber protectors so I didn't include in the options from the start. Leave the mochi to the mochi makers. I explained that.

Her highness Morail whispered something to his highness Richard. Hearing that his highness called for the palace guards in a loud voice.

Her highness Morail handed one of the guards who appeared her ring and ordered them to call for the King.

Han?

It couldn't be helped so all I could do was kneel and act humble.

Her highness and his highness seemed to be whispering about something serious.

Her highness seemed to be having a good time while his highness seemed to be shrinking back a bit.

While that was going on the King appeared.

"What's going on?"

He gave a slight glance towards me before taking a seat on the throne. Her highness whispered something to him.

"What! Is it even more amazing than what Zamu is always bragging about!? Here, {Status Open}..Hm~mm, Pure Breed Wyvern huh.."

So what about it?

"Hey, Greed. These scales, I'll buy them for 100,000 Z each. How about it?"

Eh? Eeehhh...!!?

"Ha?"

I was at a loss for words.

I mean, we brought back a massive amount that's way over several thousand of them you know?

It took six hours for all 10 of us to tear them off.

Assuming there's 10,000 of them that's 1,000,000,000 Z!

Am..Amazing~!

Of course I'm sure tailoring them into armor would increase the price a bit more, isn't there enough for two or three suits?

However, I'm sure it'll take six months to a year to make it, so won't it barely balance out with the cost of the fees?

Though I say that, I wonder if he won't buy all of them?

"Dear, Greed is also someone who can be considered a first-rate adventurer. I'm sure he at least knows the value. Right?"

"Ha"

No clue~ It seems I was about to be deceived.

"I was just joking. A joke."

Don't lie.

"I'll pay 200,000 each. If it's this then you have no complaints right? How many of them do you have?"

Double!

Amazing!

"Ha. That one is considerably small but ignoring the sizes and there should be about 10,000 or so.."

I'm greatly satisfied, with this.

"An? Hey! Don't screw with me! This is small..This is one of the largest sizes of scales you know!"

Not just the King but her highness and his highness were extremely surprised as well.

A normal {Wyvern} is at most 7~8 meters and it seems you can at best get about 2,000 scales that can be used for armor, it's questionable whether you'll get enough for one suit of armor or not. It seems it's common sense that you won't even have enough to think about a shield as well. If they aren't scales that are somewhat the same sizes then it doesn't look good and if they're too small then as expected it's impossible to process them. If they're below a certain size then they can't be used for armor but only the scabbards of swords or spears and such, and they end up unprocessed so the toughness drops.

I spread my fingers out to about double the size of the one they're looking at now and said,

"The largest one is about this size I think?" and they didn't just open their mouths in shock but a sharp glint appeared in their eyes as well.

In the end, I had to return to Baldukk in a hurry and return with the decapitated head and all of the scales. It seems they're going to invite an artisan that the royal family is acquainted with to investigate the price. I personally didn't think they would be something worth that much so I didn't even feel it was troublesome returning to Baldukk in a hurry at all.

Chapter 307 : Finally?

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 14

Yesterday was exhausting.

In the end I had to stay overnight in the royal castle.

Incidentally I didn't get a wink of sleep.

After that I returned to Baldukk once and up to chartering a carriage to bring the {Wyvern}'s head and scales back to the castle again was fine.

I can accept that I given my own room to stay at in the third outer citadel as well.

Shortly after I arrived the King and his wife along with his highness Richard came along.

First off they said to show them the head so I showed them the frozen head of the {Wyvern} while still loaded on the back of the carriage. The moment I took off the rubber tarp covering it all three of them seemed to be unable to hide their expressions of surprise. But, by that time I had already heard the fact that the "scales are huge" yesterday morning and since I also heard that there were a lot of scales as well, I felt it was a bit unexpected that "they would be surprised to that extent".

After all there's not a single person in the {Slaughterers} who has seen a real {Wyvern}. That's why there's no way I could have known that this {Wyvern} was over double the normal size either. I just thought, it seems to be just a bit big~

While everyone was raising an uproar including the King all of the military officers and officials who happened to pass by were shocked seeing the head of the {Wyvern}. In the end a ton of unknown people came along switching places and standing around as they all started another uproar seeing the {Wyvern}'s head.

I'm sure that was almost every person in attendance at the castle hearing the rumors and coming over to take a look at it.

Before I realized it the job of managing the number of people was pushed onto me and I had the realization, "I was able to do something that impressed this many people enough to come take a look~" while at the same time feeling proud of the allies I went to the 11th floor together with.

Up until here was busy but it was also pretty pleasant so it wasn't to the point where I minded just managing the people coming to take a look.

I'm sure something like the scales on it's head are dirt cheap so if you want it then it's fine even to give it to you. But, if I can sell it

I'd like to do that.

While I was doing that all of the artisans were called out and arrived at the castle one after another.

The number of them was a surprising 12 people.

Though they were artisans they're still coming to visit the royal castle so most of them were wearing reasonably tidy clothing.

A lot of them seemed to be pretty rich and it wasn't uncommon for them to be wearing clothes several levels higher quality than mine.

Putting that aside, the problem started when his highness Richard invited them and I into the third outer citadel to inspect the scales.

His highness Richard seemed pleased to irresponsibly say, "These four large bags are all filled with scales from the {Wyvern} at the entrance. All of you, inspect them as you please and attach a price on them."

The bags were casually filled with the torn off scales without being organized so the artisans pointed out that it was first necessary to organize them based on the size. It couldn't be helped so I flipped one bag over thinking of making different piles with each 1 cm as the cutoff when all of the artisan's eye color changed seeing the scales and jumped at them.

Supposedly it's rare to obtain scales that over 3 cm in diameter so from their viewpoint it seems it looked like a pile of treasure. In the end the 13 of us, including myself, spent an entire night sorting them into piles with a 0.5 cm cutoff.

It seems that processing the small ones below 1 cm in diameter is difficult so they aren't worth much at all but even then they're easily worth over 10,000 Z so for the ones that are even bigger than that they're sold at the high price of several tens or hundreds of thousands of Z each. It seems there's several processing methods for each piece of armor so supposedly because I brought them in without any processing done to them they can make any size of armor they please and this will raise the price a bit as well.

And then things were difficult when it was time for each of the artisans to try and attach a price to them. The five piles of sizes from 1 cm in diameter up to 3 cms in diameter were quickly given a price. Even though we took them all off we peeled off the small ones along with the skin itself so the number of them was the highest. It was confirmed that there were over 3,000 scales in just these five piles.

The prices they were given were from the lowest at 255,000,000 Z to the highest at 315,000,000 Z.

It was decided that they'll be purchased at the average price these 12 artisans put on them. In other words these five piles were given a final price of 275,000,000 Z. There wasn't any major problem up to here. After all they weren't all that different in size from the ones taken from a normal {Wyvern}.

The problem was the eight piles(after counting there was just below 5,000 of them) of scales with sizes between 3.5 cm and 7 cm and the pile of ones even larger than that. There wasn't even 200 scales in the pile of the largest ones over 7.5 cm in size but they were given a price of 680,000 ~ 800,000 Z each. On average that's 750,000 Z and with just these it totals to an amount close to 150,000,000.

It's too

troublesome so I'll just skip over the fine details other than this but the average price that the artisans estimated all of the scales from the pure breed {Wyvern} at was just below 2,300,000,000 Z.

However.

The above amount is an estimated price in the case of a "normal" {Wyvern}'s scales. All of the artisans said not to forget it was simply attaching a price based on only the size. In other words, in the case that they're processed and armor is made from them they're materials which are likely to create some kind of special named item and that's ignoring the price ignoring the fact that they give off a reaction from magic, they put even more emphasis that in the case that these are tailored into armor(supposedly it should be enough for four suits if they use all of them and even if they use them extravagantly it'll be about three suits) that price would be even higher.

Obviously it was a very grateful matter to me.

It was almost like a dream where I was about to jump up and start dancing.

After all with this...

It required almost all of my mental strength to hold back my grinning face and because I was also lacking in sleep, on the next day when it came time to report to the King I almost let out a strange voice on accident.

The high tension from lack of sleep is frightening.

"..Fu...So it seems like something named will made from them.."

After hearing the report from his highness Richard and I the King nodded with a slightly excited face.

"All of the artisans were saying that together. They can be made into named armor of the national treasure grade! No matter how low the quality ends up it still wouldn't be strange for it to end up as the heirloom for a noble family.

However, in regards to the scales this time it was the common opinion among the artisans that the quality went way beyond the highest so.."

Even his highness who is giving the report while taking the same retainer's pose next to me can't seem to hide his excitement judging from the tone of his voice. Even in this era there's some art pieces like paintings and sculptures but since something like the patron system hasn't been developed things like that are extremely rare and have absurd prices. It's common sense for items with unique names attached to them to have an even higher value than those. It's also one of the reasons why magic items rarely obtained from the dungeon are worth so much.

"Hm~mm...Though that's the case that's a matter for after the tailoring of armor is finished.."

In comparison while the King was saying something like this his voice had a spring to it.

By the way, I still haven't mentioned a single word about selling them.

No, of course it's not as if I don't want to sell them.

I just thought that if it's at the national treasure class then how about I just present them as a gift and in exchange won't you give me some territory~

After all, when an adventurer like myself presented the previous King with a {Fire Ball Wand} he received the title of Viscount and was entrusted with a territory as a reward for it right?

I understand that it seems it can be made into {Magical.Armor}.

And not just one suit of armor but three suits..I heard it might even be possible to make four suits of armor.

But, I have no attachment towards something like magic armor.

I have no interest at all in things like national treasure or heirlooms and such.

An item that you just use as an ornament without using has no higher value than a piece of art.

Of course~ even I want expensive pieces of art.

Just by owning one you can brag about it and just by being in possession of it raises your reputation.

On top of that if someone who knows the value of it sees it they'll be impressed.

And above all else, they'll allow, I, the owner to enjoy myself.

However things like that are fine for the generations after my children and grandchildren.

Probably, there won't be enough leeway for things like that while I'm alive. I'll be satisfied as long as I can obtain the achievement of founding father. It's fine if I can just think, I did it!

Also, I think rubber protectors are plenty as the armor for my army.

Last year when I returned home I had them share some seeds with me for the para rubber trees on the condition that I don't export them in the future. With my mana and the spell {Growth Plant} I can accelerate the growth of 500 rubber trees by 1 month everyday. If I live like in the past where I spend everyday just eating, doing it with Miduchi, and then sleeping then even 3 months worth of growth everyday is possible. That means it would be possible to gather sap within three weeks. Well, during that time I wouldn't be able to do anything else though.

In the end, we decided to measure the value once again after the {Wyvern}'s scales were tailored into armor. For that reason I had to first bring the materials to an artisan as an individual and request for them to make some armor. Of course, it's fine to sell all of the scales just like this as well. The royal family recommended that. However, after learning that it's possible for it to be a named item the moment the armor is complete there's no way I could say something like, "Yes, sure". I won't yield on just that point.

Processing the scales will take about four months and tailoring the armor will take about the same amount of time per suit of armor. In other words, the earliest the official price can be determined is spring of next year. Well, it's a super expensive item, that sounds about right.

Furthermore in regards to the processing of the scales but several of the artisans came forward requesting to let them do it. But, one of those, the person named Karimu who I heard has a good reputation is the person I intended on asking. At first I thought about splitting them up equally between all those who came forward to reduce the time it takes but supposedly each individual scale needs to be slightly bent to match up with the figure of the one wearing the armor (according to the King's wishes, first off one will be produced matching up to his highness Richard's sizes) so I heard that it would be best to leave the entire process to a single artisan.

The processing fee for one suit's worth was estimated to be about 30,000,000 Z. It seems that the fee for tailoring the armor after that is at most 10,000,000 Z. First off it was decided to have them tailor his highness Richard's armor and shield and leave the remaining scales unprocessed. Supposedly this is to use them to tailor a suit of armor for his highness Richard's son who currently just turned 5 years old. After he reaches adulthood they want to process them again before tailoring them into armor.

A professional armor artisan has a sharp eye for predicting the growth of the one wearing the armor but as expected it's necessary for them to at least be at the age of adulthood. It seems that if they're at least that old they can manufacture it while anticipating the growth of their height, arms, and legs in the future to some extent.

As expected armor is the dictionary definition of a high class item~

It's different from the rubber protectors of Bakuddo that are close to mass production.

I was impressed.

Furthermore, it was decided that I would sell the royal grandchild, in other word his highness Richard's sons armor at the same price as his armor is estimated to be. In other words, they reserved the exact same amount of scales as are used in his highness Richard's armor and even in regards to the remaining scales they'll keep them for repairs. I'm sure the estimated price put on the first suit of armor won't quite reach four times the amount but it shouldn't be wrong for me to hope for three times the amount.

.....

While making those sorts of over-optimistic calculations(though they've already been made) I returned to my company with a pleased face and invited Rasseg and the others out to eat.

"What's going on? Suddenly inviting everyone out to eat?"
"Al-sama, you seem to be tired today but did something good happen?"

Rasseg and Mili said after suddenly being called out from the workshop.

"Hn? Yeah, that's right. You'll find out eventually. Right~ Harisu?"

"Wa, yes?"

Harisu had a face on like he didn't really understand and didn't know how to reply.
That's only obvious but you should make a bit more overjoyed of a face without getting so tense, right?

"Ah, yeah. Around tomorrow, no maybe even today, I think an official notice will start going around?"

When I said that while unable to endure grinning and it seems the Donneoru couple understood right away. They must think it's because I was able to clear the 10th floor.

"Nfufu. After eating I'll be returning to the store to sleep for a bit. You all, take today off from your jobs and go check out the government office or something, alright? There's no problem~ Leila and the others will watch the store so there's no need to worry. Right? Go and take a look for a bit."

Since I'm saying that much Resseg and Mili both nodded.
Fufufu.

Supposedly today at noon the {Wyvern}'s head will be displayed in front of the government office along with the official notice.
I definitely want you to take a look!
Since it seems they'll be taking it to a mounting artisan tonight after all.

.....

In the evening when I returned to Baldukk I was relaxing in my room before dinner when I was caught by Miduchi.

"It was decided the scales will be tailored into armor. I don't know how much it'll be worth until spring of next year."

I started talking in my room.

Miduchi's sitting on the other side of the table while drinking bean tea with ice floating in it.

"But you already know the rough estimate right?"

"Yeah.

Each suit should be worth over 1,000,000,000 Z. Depending on how things go it wouldn't be strange for it to even reach 2,000,000,000. Though how many suits can be made I really won't know until a bit more time passes. But, it's estimated to be at least two suits."

In any case before they actually start the processing it's necessary to plan out the objectives for the processing. Along with that some temporary tailoring is necessary. It's necessary to listen to the wishes of his highness Richard the one who will be using it and the design needs to be decided as well. By this point a rough estimate of the number of scales that will be used is done. By this point the number of suits that can be made will roughly be determined but just the same as before there's no way of knowing in the end.

After that, the processing of the scales will start based on the design. Obviously it's possible for processing the scales to fail so there's no way of knowing the yield until the processing is finished. After that they need to sort through the scales that can be used. Along with that they'll perform temporary tailoring a number of times. At this point the number of scales used of each size is finally accurately identified. It's only at this time that the number of suits that can be made is accurately identified. It's said that it'll most likely be two or three suits. Since it seems they're intending to use the scales extravagantly after all.

"Amazing! If it's two suits then that's 4,000,000,000!? Even after paying the bonuses and taxes that's 3,000,000,000...It seems like the amulet will sell pretty high as well..If it's like this then"

Miduchi's face got even more excited and it might be my imagination but has a bit of a blush mixed in.

"Yeah.

Though it depends on the prices of the other {Magic.Items} as well.

Putting aside the other {Magic.Items}, with the amulet and everything

I've currently got on hand I think it'll add up to close to 12,000,000,000 Z."

"..I see. Congratulations. You're dream is going to come true.."

Miduchi placed her cup with the bean tea on the table and said with a smiling face like she was about to cry.

"Yeah. Umm..Thanks."

Miduchi and I exchange glances.

A smile naturally appears on my face as well.

Gradually our faces get closer.

It was right then, I heard the sound of someone rudely running up the stairs of Boil Manor.

There sure is someone rude out there.

..It's not as if we're the only ones lodging here after all.

I felt a bit disappointed.

A bitter smile appeared on Miduchi's face as well.

I shrug my shoulders.

However, those rude footsteps came up to the door of my room and knocked.
Who is it?

"Greed-kun, are you here!?"

It seems they're in a hurry.

This voice, it's not the {Slaughterers}.

But I know it.

It's the leader of {Black.Topaz}, sis Anderson's voice.

Side Story 30 - In the case of Moroi Hisa (Age 16 at time of death)

(Come to think of it today was Valentine's Day..)

Moroi Hisa remembered after hearing the words of the high school girls talking noisily inside of the bus. Seeing the uniforms of the high school girls Hisa could tell they were upper classmen of the Hatsudai High School he attends. In reality he already knew the face and name of just one person among them but Hisa wasn't being conscious of her. He wanted to think that way.

(Yukino-san..She won't notice me at all..)

Up until they entered elementary school, since their houses were close by during kindergarten they would often play together you could say she's a childhood friend one year older than him. When they went up to elementary school they separated from Hisa moving and that was the end of it. However, soon after entering high school and when he was taking orientation for club activities, Hisa immediately recognized that the manager of the soccer club was his childhood friend Yukino. Since even after entering the club and introducing himself Yukino didn't react to his name at all he hasn't been able to mention it until now.

If you were to say he's just a substitute first year member who doesn't stand out and isn't even in Yukino's consideration then that would be the end of it.

(That chocolate, after all it's for Sugii senpai..)

"I want the soccer club to give it their best as well. You know Takashi-senpai, because of his sense of responsibility as the former captain even now he still is properly looking after everyone. Isn't that amazing?"

While hearing Yukino talk to a girl who seems to be her classmate next to her Hisa recognized that he was getting even more depressed.

(For her to not even realize that one of the underclassmen of that soccer club is on this bus at this time..)

"Sugii-san, is he still coming to the school? Was the school he was entering already decided?"

"Yeah, it seems he's going to Jonan Music School! And, he intends to make a band! Isn't that cool? Even today he came to the school to coach some juniors! Isn't that great of him?"

Yukino's voice which stretches out the ends of all of her sentences echoed well through the bus.

(Thanks to that I'm greatly troubled though..Even today I was driven out by Sugii-senpai and the others and made to go and buy a present..Well, it's my own fault for losing at rock, paper, scissors though)

The next generation captain after Sugii as well, because even after retiring he often shows his face under the pretext of individual coaching he's gotten sick of Sugii, so they planned a farewell party to try and chase him away.

(Shit, I can't concentrate on my game either)

Every since Yukino and the others got on the bus he's lowered his face to look at his smartphone trying to not to stand out as he plays a boring game.

It's supposedly a popular title recommended to him by friends in his class. He's been playing it since just now but he couldn't understand what was fun about it at all.

He heard a loud squealing sound from the left and the glass windows from the wall behind Yukino and the others went flying. Yukino came flying along with the bench she was sitting on.

(It seems I was somehow saved..)

Hisa could somehow remember up to where the train came plunging in but he couldn't remember anything after that. A pain as if his entire entire body was being crushed, he sort of remembers that but he wondered if he was stuck in between some kind of material of the bus and train when he was rescued.

It seems he was seriously injured as his eyes are blurry and he can't see very well but since he was somehow able to see that the walls weren't white so he thought it must be a considerably stylish hospital. He must have been injected with a strong pain reliever as even the slightest bit of stimulation causes him to react and cry out but there was nothing like being scolded either. Somehow it seems his head is a bit dim as well, the talking of the nurses or doctors aren't entering his head at all either. Not just that but it even sounds almost like a foreign language or something.

However, in just a few days he noticed that somehow things seem strange.

And then, while carefully observing his surroundings and touching various parts of his body he gradually started to understand.

(Where is this? Who am I?)

I wonder if this is the so called spiritual out of body experience and possession I've heard about?

The fact that he couldn't speak well, in the end was it really the best for Hisa.

The confusion lasted for at most one day and after that he was able to take his time thinking.

.....

After several months passed and Hisa was able to obtain a considerable amount of information.

Probably because the words were close to English but he was able to somewhat understand what someone was talking about.

Obviously his eyes has started to be able to see clearly.

The scenery he saw was almost like that from some kind of Traveler's

Journal magazine in the remote areas, not to mention some developing country where no convenience electronic goods exist.

On some plains and a forest with not many hills there were just fields cultivated by human power spreading out.

And then he was a baby.

His parents had the appearance of Westerns but they seemed strangely young. He already found out his name. Matthew is new name Hisa was given. Since he energetically moved around for the fir six months after being born, he ended up being tied up to a pillar so he doesn't move around foor long as he pleases.

It seemed like his family were farmers and they were often seen going to the fields carrying what could be called considerably primeval farming tools.

It's not like there's anything in particular to do, it's all things that he couldn't understood from just thinking about it.

(What should I do..)

Hisa, now known as Matthew thought but after all there was not a single thing he can or could do.

(After all I, died didn't I..)

Since he was bored he confirmed his current situation countless times and thought about it. It's only obvious that the conclusion he came to every time was the same.

(Father and mother..I wonder how they're doing..)

.....

Von! Von!

He could hear the barking of a wild dog.
Usually even if he hears wild dogs it's just at the level of howling.
It was unusual that he could hear it from this close.

Genbiru Village where Matthew lives is in the inland areas near the center of Duke Belgriddo's territory.
The public order is decently good and it's a land with almost no damage from monsters.

Though thanks to that the Viscount and squires who govern the village have had their sense of danger drop but that's nothing to criticize them over.

(It's considerably close.)

Judging from the volume of the barking he was able to guess it was right near the house.

Unable to control his emotions Matthew started crying in a loud voice.
Since he started crying in the middle of the night Matthew's mother left the house holding him.

Matthew would occasionally cry at night but he would often stop crying right away after circling the house one time.

.....

And then several days passed.
Some nights, just the same as usual Matthew's mother would carry him outside around the house in the middle of the night when he starts crying, but this day developed in a major incident.

They were attacked by a wild dog.

However, fortunately they were also able to chase it off right away.

Hearing Matthew's cries spurred on by the wild dog attacking and his own wife's screams the father of the household quickly ran out of the house and things ended without a problem.

Though that's the case, there was 4 or 5 wild dogs.

Including Matthew his parents suffered some light bites wounds.

However, the wounds were really light and even to a baby like Matthew they weren't anything significant.

Obviously there was no problems with his bones either.

Matthew himself even thought (it should heal cleanly in 2-3 weeks).

.....

One day around two months later, the abnormality first appeared in Matthew. He felt listless from the morning almost as if it was a light cold and even though the bites have already completely healed the area where he received it around his knees itched.

The reason is unknown but he felt strong feelings of unease as well.

(Ah, it can't be helped since I've returned to being a baby but I'd like to be pardoned from this~)

Since up until now Matthew had been unable to control his emotions numerous times he didn't realize he was infected with a disease.

The name of the disease is {Rabies}.

Even since ancient times on Earth it's stolen countless lives and still hasn't been eradicated, after the symptoms have started to appear even in modern times there's no treatment method, a frightening disease that has tens of thousands of victims every year.

The only salvation could be that it can't be spread from one person to another.

.....

Just a few days after that Matthew completely stopped drinking water.

Every time he tried to swallow soup or water an intense pain ran through his throat.

And then soon after just seeing water caused him to remember the pain, he would get afraid and cry out half in confusion.

Matthew's parents were unable to do anything.

They brought him to the healer in the village where he was diagnosed with hydrophobia and were told there was nothing that could be done.

When asked by the healer if the parents had any idea of how he could have gotten sick they couldn't think of anything. Being bitten by cats or dogs is a daily occurrence in this sort of remote territory and above all else there's far more frightening monsters out there, the healers have no knowledge that cats or dogs could be the source of disease either.

In the end they just had healing magic used on him once for consolation and the family returned to their house.

Patients with an outbreak of hydrophobia last at longest a few days before all of the muscles in their bodies go numb and they die.

His parents lamented and were saddened, but the two of them couldn't have even dreamed that they would follow after their son from an outbreak of hydrophobia as well.

Side Story 31 - In the case of Yazawa Ikuko (Age 61 at time of accident) Part 1

The end of the year before last Ikuko turned 60 years old and retired from the company that she had worked for the 38 years after graduating from college and was now riding the train for the sake of getting a medical exam for chronic disease. Ikuko was a shipbuilding engineer. When she first found employment, female shipbuilding engineer were unusual and she went through quite a few troubles but since she was blessed with talent she was proud of the fact that she managed to stand at the front line of designing ships through her lifetime.

Since the time she entered the company it underwent reductions as well as business transfers and mergers, and along with that the name of the company was changed a number of times as well as downsizing. However, since Ikuko was superior and had actual results she managed to overcome all of those. She never actually got a license for an ocean engineer but she always took part as the representative of the design department on the test voyages of the ships she took part in the design of and didn't overlook a single abnormality.

When she was still young and didn't have any experience she was only allowed to take part in the design of motorized sailboats of the tens of tons class but since she was one of the faster staff members to learn to use the CAD software as it was developed she was able to take charge of the designs when it came to a cargo boat with a max load of over 60,000 tons a panamax (the maximum size that can pass through the Panama canal). It was a promotion that almost seemed like a lie. Also, she ended up handling a number of large fishing boats that do deep water fishing and smaller coastal boats over the short-term as well. Those sorts of large scale ships down to motorized sailboats which require sails a wide range of actual results made Ikuko's reputation shine.

Before long she was even known as the hope of the hull fundamentals design department of industrial military vessels both domestically and internationally.

However, no matter the life they all end up reaching their end, she wasn't able to escape the company regulation called required retirement age. There was the route of remaining in the company part-time as well but she wouldn't be allowed to stand at the front line jobs of designing ships and above all else there were some anxieties about her health so Ikuko decisively cut off her attachment and retired. Also, you could say one of the reasons is her long-time husband who was five years older than her retired from his company around the same time as well.

Her health insurance from her time as an employee was still effective even after retirement as long as the fees were still being paid for it so she was able to take the medical exam at a considerably cheap price.

Additionally, she was looking forward to the trip to the city a bit for the first time in a while after they purchased a house in the remote areas of Kanagawa prefecture.

As expected she couldn't win against her age and there were C and even D results on her medical exam.

Ever since the result of her last exam came up with the decision "requires specialist examination" she's been visiting a hospital in the city one a month. Of course, it's also because this hospital is one designated by the insurance she has through her company as well so the amount she has to pay herself isn't much.

(I wonder what I should have for dinner tonight?)

While she was thinking that the train she was riding ended up in accident.

.....

Yazawa Ikuko was born and given the name Kristina as the eldest daughter of the Viscount Hanigan family which is the lord of a village called Avu in the territory of Count Metokafu on the Western edge of Devas Kingdom.

Since Avu village is a considerable distance from the coast she wasn't able to smell the salt from the ocean.

It's not like they were particularly wealthy but if in the worst case something happens to her older brother the heir then Kris would end up having to take over as head of the family. For that reason she was made to participate in combat training since her infancy as well. However, around the time she reached adulthood her three year older brother married, then two years after that his eldest son, her nephew was born. Another year after that since her nephew was growing up healthy, he formally underwent the naming ceremony, and top on top of that her older brother was blessed with yet another child so the chances of her having to succeed the family had decreased significantly.

Since she had only taken part in combat training up until now and didn't know farm work her choices were limited. Marrying an appropriate squire and joining their family as the wife of squire family was the most realistic choice but Kris rejected that.

(I wanted to try making wooden ships as well right~)

Kris thinks as she looks back on her life after reincarnating. The reason why the culture of this world of Orth doesn't seem to be developing.

Isn't that because marine transportation hasn't developed almost at all?

As expected she only had the basic surface knowledge on how the internal combustion engine works so that can't be helped but if she makes use of her experience designing motorized sailboats and large scale ships then couldn't she make a proper sail boat, is what she was thinking.

The design plans are still inside of her head.

She also has knowledge about the sextant and quadrant which aren't known on Orth. Though it's just the sun and moon but there should be a revolution table for those in the world as well..probably. Since there's the magic tool clock that is supposed precise then even if they can't see land navigation should be possible during times while looking at the moon as well..if the weather is good.

And then, her Unique Ability which should be able to make effective use of those, {Magnetic.Body}. The effect Kris recognizes of it is to let her feel and create a magnetic field on her body. After she first noticed her Unique Ability she was only able to somehow tell the directions North and South but as her Unique Abilities level increased she was able to generate a magnetic field on her body and even discovered she could freely control the lines of the magnetic force and the magnetic field.

It was almost like magic. In regards to that magic as well, after reaching adulthood she learned it well and put it into practice. It seems like she had more mana than other people so around the time she reached her 19th birthday the three types of elemental magics she could use all had reached level 2 and void magic had even reached the high level of 3. Going off her common sense, it was an unbelievably high level for her age.

Well, putting that aside, as a matter of fact both the quadrant and sextant already existed and were being put to use. Since they require mirrors that make use of glass which is close to perfect transparency they're extremely expensive and Kris just doesn't know. If they didn't then no one would be able to tell the height of mountains and when it comes to creating large buildings unless they knew about the Pythagorean Theorem during the development stages then those would be impossible as well.

The reason why techniques relating to open sea voyages hadn't developed was none other than just the fact that measuring the direction was difficult. After all in the places where mining is possible on Orth there's no minerals which have magnetic fields to them, in other words magnets can't be found. There is geomagnetism. It's just a matter of there being no compass.

One such day, she tried asking her parents about something she had been thinking for a while.

"Father, my water, fire, and wind magic skills have all reached level 2. Please teach me the magic {Cure Light}."

Her father Viscount Hanigan is a skilled magician who can use all elemental magics as well and on the side of his duties as lord he also acts as a healer for the village. He's considerably skilled at using magic but at his age of 42 even water magic which he's the best at is only finally level 4. Healers are only full-fledged after they can use {Cure Light}. Among those particularly when the user uses it with water magic the effects of it are high and they won't be troubled for food no matter where they go.

That's right, Kris was planning to start off being employed as a healer and look to receive investment capital from a high ranking noble who has a large town or territory in order to make a ship capable of open sea voyages.

"I see, Kris. Congratulations. You've done well giving it your best with your training. However, for all three of your elemental magics to be at level 2 at that age huh..It's quite something."

While showing admiration Viscount Hanigan was also greatly welcome to the idea of Kris being able to find employment as a healer. Since this Avu village has another healer including Viscount Hanigan there's no vacancy for Kris but there's any number of towns or villages which would want a healer. It's not as if there's any openings with squire families either so the fact that she's willing to leave the house and support herself was convenient for he, her parent as well. Of course, it's lonely that his daughter leaves his side but if he wishes for the happiness of his daughter then it's something to be glad about.

"Well then let's start right away from this afternoon.."

.....

It didn't take much time at all for Kris to be able to learn {Cure Light}.

She was properly about to learn it within two weeks of starting the Viscount's lectures and she's already proficient with it. Over six months has already passed since then and she's in the middle of making preparations to move to the capital of the Count's territory Rakon. If it's Rakon, while the population doesn't even reach 10,000, they should still want all the healers they can get.

It was during that sort of time. An official notice was issued by the crown prince centering around the high ranking nobles in charge of each region. The official notice was passed around using fast horses running to the various places high ranking nobles rule.

The below details are the abridged version of what it said.

Recruitment for the imperial guard of his highness crown prince

Alexander.Belgriddo. Through the powerful magic of Royal Court Wizard, sub-Noble Rentia.Geguran, we offer a figure that those who were born with the aptitude will react to. The required distinction for the aptitude is as listed below.

1. Born on Year 7428, Month 2, Day 14
2. Black hair, black eyes
3. One who has said the password

The password is the name of the figure enclosed. Have your subordinates transcribe this figure as accurately as possible and on top of sending it to all nobles who govern towns and villages, make sure it's shown to all social standings of citizens who meet the above listed conditions 1 and 2. There's no limitation on social standing, gender, or race. And then the words that are uttered upon seeing this figure. If it's someone with the aptitude then just that should bring the password to mind.

Figure

The password is {Nihon} otherwise {Nippon}. As well as words that have a similar pronunciation as those. In the case that someone who has met these qualifications appears, no matter what the difficulty the lord should overcome them to escort those qualified to the royal castle. If they are confirmed as being qualified and employed by the imperial guard then for the expenses of that a considerable amount will be paid from the national treasury. Also, along with that a reward will be paid as well. Furthermore, even in the case that they weren't someone with the qualifications you will not be punished for it and money will be paid to cover the escort expenses for up to two people.

There was some other finer details in regards to the reward money and conditions but they're omitted here.

After receiving the official notice Count Metokafu got to having his subordinates transcribe the necessary password and figure pages for the villages and towns in his territory and had the knights deliver them.

One of those arrived in Avu village.

After Viscount Hanigan received the official notice from the knight he immediately showed it to Kris. The Viscount knew that his own daughter was born February 14th and has black hair and eyes after all.

"Kris, take a look at this. Do you know what it is?"

A shock ran through Kris's body after she was shown the figure.

"Eh...This..Nippon..."

Kris looked back and forth between the figure and her father's face a number of times.

Why does father have this?

Of course, Japan hasn't ever appeared in their topics until now.

"U~mu. It can't be, for you to have been one with the aptitude..No, but.."

Viscount Hanigan was surprised as well but he did have some thoughts on it. Kris was only a bit above average with the martial arts but she was a superior child no matter what she does.

"Wh..y? This, what is it? Why does father have!!?"

Viscount Hanigan was surprised by Kris approaching suddenly but without losing his calm he stated.

"It seems to be an official notice from his highness the crown prince.

Since you said the password, it should be fine. Will you read it?"

Kris grabbed the official notice offered from her father's hands and stared closely at the details. And then started laughing.

"Ffu. Nfufufufu. I see now. The imperial guard for his highness the crown prince indeed.."

Kris wanted to openly show her delight but she couldn't afford to remain cautious as well.

If his highness the crown prince is a Japanese person then it's fine.

However, the possibility that one of his subordinates is a Japanese person and it's a suggestion from that subordinate can't be ignored either.

For example, the {Court.Wizard} written down here.

Kris was wondering if it was the equivalent of her knowledge of Orth as that of a {Court.Mage}?

However, there's no doubt that it can be thought of as a large, a very large connection.

It's only obvious that in order to make the ships Kris wants to make it will require an unusually large amount of money.

She thought it would be fine if she spent the rest of her life just for the sake of building one ship.

"Father. It seems I have the aptitude to join the imperial guard of his highness the crown prince. I'm going."

If she wants a far higher and more stable income than something like a healer and depending on the case she might even have the chance to gain peerage as a Viscount. It's not unreasonable for Viscount Hanigan to think like that.

From his point of view he felt like the future prospects of his daughter opened up.

"I see. Go and do what you need to do. I won't hold back in supporting you."

Kris arrived in the capital of Randogurizu one month later at the beginning of fall.

Side Story 31 - In the case of Yazawa Ikuko (Age 61 at time of accident) Part 2

"I've brought someone one who has aptitude for the imperial guard of his highness the crown prince. Please convey this."

The sub-Commander of Count Metokafu's knight group started talking to the gatekeeper of the royal castle Gamuroi that towers in the center of the capital Randogurizu. In order to send Kris here the Count sped up the departure for the caravan of the top company in his territory by one month and sent along an escort of 1/3rd of his knight group as guards that was 12 true knights, true 20 squires, and another 60 conscripted squires for a large unit of close to 100 people. Incidentally Count Metokafu believed that Kris was really someone with the aptitude just from seeing her birth date, black hair, and eyes, so it was just a matter of that being the case.

They split ways with the caravan of the company when they entered the capital but since they had sent an advance notice they were able to step foot into Gamuroi castle without any large confusion.

"Come this way..There's an interview."

Only Kris was invited further into Gamuroi castle. It seems she splits ways with the escorts here. After Kris politely thanked the escorts for bringing her up to here she followed the official who came to guide her.

Kris started thinking while quietly waiting in the reception room she was brought to.

(Interview..Well, I guess it's obvious...Now then, I wonder to what extent the crown prince or whatever understands the importance of marine transportation..)

Obviously, she doesn't think even the slightest bit she'll fall through the interview. Since she thinks it's impossible that someone gathering Japanese people would reject her but that assumption is correct.

After being made to wait for a bit over ten minutes, around the time she was starting to feel a bit restless, the door of the room finally opened and three men armed with swords entered the room. All of them have black hair and eyes and nostalgic Japanese facial features.

Two of the three men are Hyumu and one appears to be a dwarf. One of the Hyumu's was wearing some considerably high class looking clothes with high practical use and has on a superficial expression but his build is reasonably good with tight muscles. The dwarf man was wearing the same design of clothes as the superficial looking Hyumu but he was completely expressionless.

"Umm, Hanigan-san? Born in Metokafu?"

The man with a slightly superficial expression asked. His hair is grown out a bit long and tied up behind his head.

"Yes. I'm Kristina.Hanigan."

Kris said that while standing up and stretching out her right hand.

"{Status Open}..Certainly it seems like Hanigan-san herself..Ho? Three elemental magic skills huh.."

After taking her hand and confirming her status the superficial looking man sat down and urged her to sit as well. Kris only just realized it but this superficial looking man has some kind of emblem on his left chest.

The design is considerably intricate and it's something like a spear, sword, and phoenix mixed into one.

And then, the dwarf man who's sitting on his left side with short hair and black beard also has the same emblem on his chest. He has a very sturdy and powerful build that is suitable for a dwarf but there's also a sharpness that can't be felt from him as well. Since the clothes and emblems of these two are uniform it could be possible they're related to a knight group.

It seems the man on the right side doesn't have anything like that on him but he has a brooch that's almost like a true circle that's been polished into a hemisphere shape which leaves an impression. He's the one who feels the most balanced between the three of them and is considerably good looking. However, he's trying to remain expressionless to not give off any sort of individuality and while his clothes look a bit neat they don't appear to be anything too expensive.

"Now then, let's get down to serious introductions. I'm Myuneil.Sagal. It's fine if you call me Myulu or Sagal, whichever you please. And, this is Tsetto. The one sitting on the other side is Hekkusu."

The two who were introduced didn't show a single change in their expressions and just nodded when their names were called. Kris thought they would stretch their hands out to confirm status but instead of that they were just nodding. It was a bit of a disappointment.

"Fumu. I think you already know but could you say something for us? Probably, it's just as we imagine but, just in case, right? Ah, I see, even if you're suddenly told to say something it's difficult to do isn't it...Then make it something you're skilled at or something you want to try doing, how about saying something like that?"

The superficial looking man Myulu said.

"Obviously, in Japanese, is what you mean right? I understand. Before I say what I want, is it fine for me to ask a question?"

The moment she replied, the three men showed expressions of relief all at once and additionally relaxed their expressions.

"Umu. It was what we predicted but for it to be this effective.."

"However, if things go this well right from the start it's somehow a bit frightening."

"It was the right choice to make it a simple figure of a Japanese map.

After all if it were to come to Kanji you never know what might happen along the way. Ah, a question was it. Feel free to ask whatever you want."

Kris slightly had predicted it from the moment she saw the faces of the three men. After all these three were reincarnations.

Since she was permitted to ask a question Kris opened her mouth.

"I understand right away that you were trying to gather Japanese people. I can somehow imagine the reason as well. Putting that aside, what does everyone thing about Orth, No, about how the culture of Devas Kingdom doesn't seem to have developed much at all?"

After hearing Kris's question the three of them exchanged glances once. It's good that they don't have to start from boring conversation but it seems they were debating who would act as representative to reply to the question they were suddenly thrown.

"..That's a difficult question. Certainly just as Hanigan-san pointed out the development of culture seems to be a bit distorted and we can't help but think that the development speed is considerably slow compared to Earth. But, that's the response in the case that you're making the assumption the history that's been passed down through generations is correct."

The man with the brooch replied. It's the good looking guy introduced as Hakusa. His hair has grown out in an incomplete way.

"It's said that this Devas Kingdom has 1,000 years of history but if I were to speak my true feelings I think it's just an exaggeration. Even on Earth there's no cases of a single constitution lasting for 1,000 years.

You could say that the Roman Empire and Japan are exceptions in how long they've have similar constitutions but putting aside the outward appearances of those two, in fact they've undergone a number of internal changes.

Also, in this situation there's no guarantee that the history that's been passed down is correct as well I'm sure. Even on Earth there were a lot of countries that claimed "this country has 1,000 years of history" with no proof or basis after all."

After Hekusa said that far he scratched his right ear with his left hand.

"Putting aside the history of Earth, first off there's the existence of magic.

Next up is the yield of mineral resources, No, the fact that there doesn't seem to be any sort of convention to the locations of mineral veins. Ah, this might just be that we still haven't discovered a convention to it though...And then, the existence of monsters. Finally there's the fact that horses and cattle are immensely valuable, you could say those four are the primary reasons."

Since Kris was remaining silent Hekusa started talking again.

"Since healing magic exists it seems the development of medicine is quite a bit behind. Though I say that, it's in regards to surgical procedures and when it comes to internal medicine there's some benefits from nostrums and other things but they're probably just things like those from ancient Earth with a bit of a bonus from magic I'm sure. If Hanigan-san has knowledge of medicine then I think we can promise you good treatment."

Kris silently shook her head as a reply.

Seeing that Hekusa slightly shrugged his shoulders and continued talking.

"Just the same since there's fire magic the techniques relating to metallurgy still seem pretty limited as well. The methods to make alloys are close to secret art only passed on in families of workshops and putting aside purification, we believe that the low level of refining is proof of this. Almost all of the manufactured metal products are casted and we think that's the reason why no one seems to arrive at durable forged products. Obviously since manufacturing techniques are still immature when it comes to producing small or fine parts it's impossible unless it's done by a considerably skilled artisan."

Sagal and Tsetto were listening with their arms crossed. They've probably heard this type of conversation countless times up until now.

"There's one more reason why this metal manufacturing technique is still underdeveloped, it's in regards to the matter of ore veins I just mentioned. Inside of the sedimentary rock of the sandstone layer you might find a vein of bronze ores and just as you think that you could end up taking silver ore stones from the mud and rock layers, furthermore you could end up finding high purity iron ores and solder from layers of granite, there's times when pewter alloy comes out as well. The yield of alloy ores isn't high but because their existence has already been confirmed I'm sure it's difficult to come to the idea of creating alloys from scratch. Since metallurgy techniques are something with developed on the foundation of making alloys after all."

It was Kris's first time hearing things in regards to this matter so she was surprised but it made sense as she listened to Hekusa's conversation.

"And then, the fact that there's monsters wandering around acts as a direct obstruction for different cultures and civilizations to have any interaction. It's difficult to domesticate them and almost all of them are carnivores with a brutal nature. They're also the reason why it's difficult for villages and towns to clearly set borders and expand. You could say the sole salvation is that they're overall population is low compared to the number of people. Well since they're carnivorous you could say it only makes sense that they don't exist in a large quantity though."

After Hekusa confirmed that Kris was nodding as she listened he continued his words.

"It's also difficult that cattle and horses are so valuable. One of the reasons is because it's so easy for food circumstances to end up getting worse. Edible meat can be covered with pigs and chickens but the lack of dairy products should be a good indication of that right? The other direct reason is because a network of transportation is difficult to develop. Since mass transportation is difficult to develop, industrial manufacturing trade doesn't develop either. I think it's happened many times where a long awaited industry was born but it was unable to grow larger and then ended up dying out while still small."

Kris thought this is it! Since it seemed like his conversation was finally over, from here on is Kris's turn.

"Certainly I think there's a limit to transportation just over land. But isn't it possible to cover quite a bit with maritime transportation? At the very least shouldn't areas along the coast receive plenty of blessing from that?"

But, Tesetto cut into the conversation.

"Open seas voyages can't be done. Handling large ships along the coast is difficult so in the end things go from start to finish with small ships traveling very short distances."

While making a difficult face Sagal continued after that as he opened his mouth.

"There's tools that resemble the sextant and quadrant. They have idiotic levels of prices though. However, the most essential compass doesn't exist.

Magnets don't exist. There's no method of determining your direction on the sea. Since you quickly end up losing sight of land and in the first place since movement is entirely dependent on the wind there's no hope even then."

It's fine come. The details were just as Kris predicted but so that's how it was. There's already the quadrant.

However, the fact that there's no magnets is the most fatal point. Even on Earth a proper compass was made after the 10th century. Up until then they just measured the direction by floating a magnet in some water and on top of a ship it wasn't very useful. Kris says while grinning.

"Thank you for the valuable information. Then I'll say what I want to do. I was a shipbuilding engineer. I'll make a ship large enough that can do marine transportation so please give me money and people."

It seems her skills can be sold quite high. She tried changing her tone of speaking.

"However, you. Hanigan-san. For you to start saying to hand over money right from the start that's quite the confidence."

"No not all, isn't that proof of her confidence right. Didn't you hear? She can make large ships, this is amazing."

"A shipbuilding engineer huh..But even if you make just the ship.."

"And? How about it? If you can give me money and people then I can make a ship capable of voyaging the open sea."

"Don't hurry so much. Even if it comes to giving money in the first place we don't have that kind of authority."

"But, if she can make a warship.."

"Yeah. It's possible they could approve of it."

"Then would you let me meet with the person who has that authority?"

"You'll be able to meet soon. However, before that we need to confirm various things."

"Yeah, that's right. First, please tell us about Hanigan-san's Unique Ability."

".."

Hearing that Kris hesitated a bit on whether to put into practice what she had thought about before hand. There's no much meaning in hiding it once things have reached this point so she had no intention of hiding it from the start.

"..My Unique Ability is called {Magnetic.Body}. I can create wear a magnetism around my body. Putting it simply I can become something like a magnet in the shape of a person. That's why, as long as I'm on the ship there's no problem in regards to a compass."

"..Seriously another cool sounding name..Damn it..Something like {Paralysis.Tolerance}..Shit."

"Hmn. And then, the level?"

".."

Kris looked at Hekusa who was remaining silent on his own but he wasn't paying any mind.

"It's 7. By the way, I'm sure that imperial guard is a means but what would I actually be doing? Even I don't think I would be allowed to just do whatever I want."

"7! Oh~ excuse me. If we know that much then it's a quick conversation. It's a help to us. He's not here but the crown prince is a Japanese person as well. There's also several others as well.

I'll put it frankly but I'd like for you to cooperate with us."

The superficial looking Myulu changed his expression before saying to Kris.

"I don't mind cooperating. I intend to do anything I'm capable of doing."

"..Anything indeed. Well then first off a question. Hanigan-san. What do you think about the social standing system?"

Tsetto killed his expression again before asking.

"..It's difficult for me to accept personally. But, it's something that's necessary. Particularly in this sort of era I think it's a considerably valid policy for maintaining social order."

Kris looked at the expressions of the three and thought for a bit before opening her mouth.

The three exchanged glances for a bit before nodding.

"Isn't it fine?"

"I guess so."

"..No objection. By the way, let me confirm one more final thing. Teach us your magic skill levels. All of them."

Hekusa who had been remaining quiet for a short while said while evaluating Kris.

"Water, fire, and wind are all at level 2. Void magic is at level 3."

Kris said it while holding her chest a bit high but even hearing that the three of them didn't react a bit. Normally it's something considered quite admirable. Kris felt a bit discontent by that but remained silent.

.....

After Kris was let through even further into the castle she was finally able to interview the remaining Japanese people.

First off was the crown prince Alexsander.Belgriddo. Just as expected of a prince he was wearing magnificent high class clothes and his hair was combed swept back. It doesn't really suit him but the naturally refined gestures give off the feel of a noble person. After expressing a welcome to Kris, unexpectedly he frankly said "When it's just us there's no need to speak politely. I only want you to be aware of public and private when talking in such a stiff way." before receiving the report from Sagal and the others. Everyone calls him Alec* or Alex.

Next up was the distinguished noble family Duke Stahlz family's Senlaid.Stahlz. He wasn't losing to the prince in how he acted like a noble. Just the same as the prince his hair was slicked back but it actually suited him well. However, in terms of purely the features of their faces the prince is much better looking. He has a pretty frank feel to him and on that point Kris was relieved. Everyone calls him Sel.

And then there's the {Court.Wizard} Rentia.Geguran. It seems {Court.Wizard} is a position that was just made the other day. Kris couldn't imagine what kind of position it was at all but it seems it was a position they went out of their way to make just for her.

She has long hair with a bit of a wave to it and her sparkling kind eyes below that leave an impression. Just as Kris felt from her impression, she talked with a gentle way of speaking but you can also feel a firm one-track stubbornness as well. After hearing everyone's discussion about her and she understood that {Court.Wizard} wasn't just for show. There's a difference between heaven and earth when comparing Kris's magic skills to hers. It seems her nickname is Ren.

There's one more, a Free Person elf named Arakeru.Karifurorisu. Her long straight hair that's grown out is healthy and beautiful but what surprised Kris was her beauty. Even in comparison to a pure elf she doesn't fall behind. Let alone that, her original looks as a Japanese person were probably quite beautiful as well. Since that still deeply remains it makes her looks as an elf shine even more, even though she's the same gender she felt her heart jump a beat. The actresses of Japan? If she's like the moon shining in the night sky then they would be snapping turtles, no, just ugly insects that crawl on the ground.

Furthermore,

Arakeru.Karifurorisu was the only one who had on a similar polished ruby brooch as Hekusa. These two might have some sort of special relationship. Her nickname is Aruko. Incidentally the ko in Aruko is the ko in child and that's how her Aru Ko is spelled. Excluding herself which she joked as being just a mascot, these were the Japanese people who make up the core of this country.

Here the three from earlier finally showed Kris their status. The superficial looking man is Myuneil.Sagal. It's something you can't predict from his aloof conduct but surprisingly his family is a squire that directly serves the royal family and he's even a true knight in the White Phoenix Knight Group.

While she only knew the name of the White Phoenix Knight group, it was Kris's first time seeing the emblem so she didn't notice it just now.

The dwarf is Zuhentisu.Heriosaido. He's a true knight of the White Phoenix Knight Group as well. He's supposedly a commander of 100 at this age. He seems to be considerably skilled. Furthermore, the crown prince and Duke's son also seem to be qualified as true knights of the White Phoenix Knight Group as well.

And then, the Free Person who left an impression teaching her various important things, Hekusa.Barnes.

Normally he's traveling here and there as an adventurer it seems. It seems this past year he's gone on short trips with Ren to Benkelish Dungeon as well. On those occasions it seems that as many members as possible also try to match up their schedules so they can accompany them. It's a dungeon that's famous enough even Kris had heard rumors of it. Unexpectedly it seems that when this group has most of their members along they've even reached the foremost line on the 4th floor.

After only challenging around 10 times?

Does that mean they have abilities on the level of first-class adventurers that have challenged the dungeon countless times?

Or else Benkelish Dungeon isn't as dangerous as it's said to be?

"First off is this I'm sure."

It seems that the report ended. The one who's called Sel by everyone, the Duke's son of the Stahlz family handed Kris a Ruby brooch the same as Hekusa.

"This is?"

"It's the emblem of a senior imperial guard member. If you have this on you then you can freely enter the royal castle. However, when it comes to being able to enter this area by just seeing your face you have to do something about it on your own."

It seems that the two of the Free People social standing are also members of the imperial guard.

"It is just the people here that are members of the imperial guard?"

"No, there's around 20 ordinary group members as well. Though I won't make them senior members. Ah, for the time being I'm the commander of the imperial guard. In formal situations call me commander."

"Got it."

And then, Kris started negotiations for constructing a large scale ship.

.....

Since just as expected when it comes to construction of a ship it would require a considerable amount in expenses, first off it was decided that she would show actual proof by making a middle size ship(Though it's still plenty to be considered large size from Orth's common sense) capable of open sea voyages. Even that just from what Kris roughly made preliminary calculations of, assuming the transportation and acquisition of all of the dried wood material goes smoothly and she manages to assemble a group of skilled workers, it will still take "at shortest" one year or so. There's still a limit to the budget that Alex can capture.

It seems they intend to try and use this open seas voyage ship as actual proof for the future construction of a warship to present to the King and Minister of Financial Affairs. Even if it's only limited to marine transportation within the country it has to prove it has a reasonable amount of defensive capability against monsters in the ocean as well and someday it might even be used for pioneering sea routes to foreign countries. Although in any case it's also welcome to Kris for her to take the first step forward.

However, Alex and Sel had a different expectation for it. Rather than the Dirt Plains which are stuck in a pointless stalemate, if they can detour around and sent an army of several hundred to around 1,000 people directly into the territories of Rombert then it would be a great achievement with no comparison and along with that their authority in the royal court would increase as well. If the one who takes command of the invasion plan is Tesetto or Sagal then they would gain an even stronger position in the knight group as well.

Just like Rombert, Devas also has a permanent army. The difference is that Rombert doesn't use a system of conscription but even without it they still can gather plenty an amount of soldiers. It's a portion where the large difference in national power shows clearly. Just the same it also includes showing one of it's weaknesses. In other words, the forces they have other than on the front lines of the Dirt Plains is kept to the bare minimum, other than the front lines it's believed to be fine if they just keep forces of a couple hundred at bridgeheads.

A ship capable of voyaging the open seas is a large means to realizing that and a high speed method of transporting people and supplies hasn't existed on Orth until now. There were times in the past for both Kingdoms where they planned to invade using a large number of small size ships moving along the coastline detouring around the Dirt Plains. For example, around 60 years ago Devas prepared close to 60 ships and attempted to invade the Rombert side on the shores of Viscount Yoraizu's territory with a force of around 1,200.

However, while they were in the process of drafting ships or construction new ones to prepare the number needed the information was leaked and a reconnaissance unit was deployed to the shores of Viscount Yoraizu's territory to observe their movements. Rombert had it's proud elites laying in wait along the parts of the shore that were easy to land.

Since there was also the fact that not much speed could be produced along the shore and since being near the rocky areas of land was dangerous at night they had no choice but to lower anchors and stop the ships, it's also in part because they couldn't navigate. If they end up being threatened with fire arrows to the hull at night then it's impossible to oppose them. Even further when it comes to the beaches where there's nothing to block sight they end up an easy target for bows and since they can't bring along horses, the moment after landing they become easy targets for cavalry making it difficult no matter where they try to land.

Of course, in order to support the plan of landing at the time they tried deploying units for battles at various locations across the Dirt Plains but it was leaked from the start that the landing operation was the main strategy. The Rombert side was by no means making a movement and just focusing on fortifying it's defenses like a turtle from start to end.

After that the Rombert side attempted a similar plan but the results were more or less the same. Both sides ended up taking a hard blow and the dream of an invasion by sea came to an end.

However, if they can build a large ship and navigation of the open seas are possible then things are completely different. It would make it possible to bring along horses and if they have transportation boats for provides supplies afterwards then they would be fine for the time being. Above all, they wouldn't have to depart from a place close to the Dirt Plains but it would make it easier to depart from farther away where they can hope for a complete ambush. Even the landing spot doesn't need to be the area right near the Dirt Plains.

They could send forces directly into the backwoods where there's no decent soldiers. It's the application of a landing warship.

Of course, since it wouldn't have an engine a feat like the hull landing on the shore, lowering a ramp, and departing all at once is impossible.

When landing they would need to make several round trips with small boats loaded on the ship but as long as it's not near a large town if they do the landing in a place which is hard to be seen then it's believed they should be able to gain plenty of time.

Even if they discover the landing there it's easy to predict that it would take a considerable amount of time for the army to be dispatched there. During that time if they smash the brittle remote station troops (even more so if it's an ambush then it should be easier than twisting the hand of an infant) fortify at a bridgehead and depending on the case they may even have enough leeway to have the ships make another round trip to gain even more supplies or a second organization of troops.

"..I see now. If you just provide the funds for it and I have enough time then a ship that can manage that much, I'll definitely build one for you."

Seeing Kris make a daring smile, Alex and Sel decided to cut the seal on a treasured bottle of wine.

Chapter 308 : The Un-Dead 1

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 14

Ah..Really, shit!! Even though we were getting to the good point for the first time in a while!?

In the first place what's the meaning of someone other than a lodging customer coming to someone's room!?

Even Kamu, Kimu, and Rodrick get stopped at the front you know?

Employees of the inn properly do your jobs!

"Let's just ignore it."

I lift up Miduchi's chin.

"Is that okay? Wouldn't it be better to answer it?"

Miduchi said with a slightly worried face.

It seems the moods completely gone cold. Damn it.

"Something might have happened."

I'm sure. If she didn't have any business she wouldn't come here.

"Hey!? Are you here!?"

Along with some slightly more violent knocking I can hear Anderson's voice from outside the door again.

It sounds like she's at her limits.

Furthermore at almost the same time I could hear the voices of the inn's owner, employees, and the brat saying things like, "Customer, please stop!" or "Hey, you, stop her!", and "Is..isn't it obvious that's impossible~"

"It can't be helped, I'll go out for a bit."

"Yeah, I think that's a good idea."

I stood up from the chair and went towards the door.

.....

"..is the reason why. I'll blow up the compensation from father and their parents so wouldn't you lend me a hand?"

I looked down at the middle-aged woman with deep pink hair holding her head down with both hands on the table and looking up at me with upturned eyes and couldn't help but let out a sigh.

After opening the door just now, Anderson was standing there with her leather armor breastplate on, a crossbow hanging down, and a sword at her side fully armed with a desperate expression on her face. Along with the employees of Boil Manor following her like goldfish poop. When I opened the door while making annoyed expression everyone including Anderson made relieved expressions. It couldn't be helped so I invited her into the room and started listening to her together with Miduchi.

She started off with saying, "I'll tell you everything without any secrets" before talking.

Last Wednesday(in other words, July 9th), 14 knights came here from the capital on their holiday. Supposedly each of them were split into groups of four or five people. Furthermore, the group was made up of activate duty knights so those with decent official positions in the knight group were mixed in with them as well. It seems all of them took a long holiday from the knight group.

It doesn't even need to be said that hearing this both Miduchi and I started to get a bad premonition.

Just as expected the bad premonition hit the mark and the three groups were each lead by Noirura.Jibekuto, Yorire.Refaisu, and Mimarufokein. All three of them are the King's illegitimate children. They brought along what could be called their group of retainers, squires from their parents households and all of them were the same as them active duty knights in the kingdom's third and fourth knight groups.

They might have been the most elite of the squires from their households.

Putting that aside and the reason they came along to Baldukk was the same. They were going to have the {Verdure.Brotherhood} and {Black.Topaz} who have connections with the King accompany them as they gain combat experience against monsters in the dungeon and build up strength as adventurers.

According to what sis Anderson was saying it's because they needed to be useful talents to me as an adventurer. Well~ I'm sure it will be necessary to hunt monsters to maintain peace in my territory in the future so it's not as if I don't understand. It's also necessary for a new lord to gain popularity with the population of their territory so if an army from the country is willing to hunt monsters without request any compensation anyone would be willing to welcome them.

In other words rather than bringing in money when they come to my place they wanted to bring along some immediately useful subordinates. Additionally I'm sure it's an appeal that they can combat and defeat monsters themselves as well. It's not unusual for the spouse of a lord to stand on the battlefield and in this sort of era I'm sure it's necessary as well.

Even more so you could say it's indispensable in a place like the Dirt Plains where combat occurs with Devas once every 4~5 years.

In any case, the 14 people who came along to Baldukk just to get used to combat against monsters first off made contact with Viruhaima and Anderson, and requested that they train them as adventurers in exchange for some pretty good compensation. Putting it simply they were hired as guides.

In regards to their circumstances as illegitimate children not only

Anderson knew but Viruhaima did as well. Come to think of it when I was invited to the Elm Tree Manor where Yorire-ojosama was staying I ran into Viruhaima but I guess that wasn't a coincidence. It must have been because they were clearing everyone out~ Before even that, there's no way they who worked as spies for the King in Baldukk could turn it down I'm sure.

Also, putting aside the matter about spies, since several members of the {Verdure.Brotherhood} suffered some pretty heavy injuries and they weren't able to do very much during that time, they might have also been interested in the decent compensation as well. If they aren't going to the 5th floor then it's probably just right for rehabilitation. In regards to {Black.Topaz} it seems that Anderson was on pretty good terms with the youngest daughter of the three Mimairu, so I guess it wouldn't be surprising if she happily threw down training the slaves they just purchased to be hired by her for a few weeks.

Noirura and three of her followers jointed with Viruhaima and five of his party to form a party of 10 and Yorire and three of her followers joined with the Basu the sub-leader of {Verdure.Brotherhood} and four other members to form a party of 9. Anderson brought along Mimairu and three of her followers to form a party of 10 and they all supposedly entered the dungeon the next day on Thursday.

Since they're accompanying them they obviously properly confirmed that they had a decent level of skill. They're active duty knights so even if they aren't at the level of first-rate adventurers they can still match up to second-rate or so.

Even the three illegitimate children themselves were forced to train by the knight groups so I don't think there was any doubt about them having decent skills.

Of course, I'm sure they were behind the members of {Verdure.Brotherhood} and {Black.Topaz} but if they're commanded by adventurers with their expertise and they have backup from first-rate adventurers then they should somehow be able to fight up to the 4th floor.

Putting it frankly the ideal place to increase your combat skills against monsters is the 4th floor which has undead mixed in with them. Attack spells are pretty effective against undead on top of them being particular weak to fire magic after all.

Though they have disgusting appearances and attack methods you can't let your guard down like poison and paralysis but it's pretty important that their movements are often pretty dull. They should be good for building up courage and guts.

Also, the types of traps increase compared to the 1st and 2nd floors and different from the 3rd floor the halls and rooms are damp natural caves so the footing is bad and it's good for earning combat experience in those sorts of situations. It's just right for learning caution against surprise attacks as well. There's even a lot of places where they come out of the walls. Obviously it's more dangerous for that portion but on the 4th floor gaining live experience in everything from the basics to the advanced techniques is possible for adventurers. It's easy to put the actions you learn here to use outside just like that as well.

In any case, there were five people from {Verdure.Brotherhood} with Viruhaima leading them. Another party of four with Basu as the leader and then six from {Black.Topaz} with Anderson as the leader as they brought along each of the three illegitimate children into the dungeon.

And then on the 10th of this month,

Friday night, they arrived at the teleport crystal room on the 3rd floor. Since they already had Gwine's map of the 1st and 2nd floors they cleared through to the teleport room of the 2nd floor on the first day. Then starting from the next Saturday they finally started teleporting into the 4th floor.

According to Anderson, at the very least

Mimaru and her followers were very obedient in listening to the things {Black.Topaz} say and gave their best trying to learn all of the know-how. Well, it seems Mimaru has some connections with Anderson and in the first place it's not often you get a chance to receive direct instruction from a first-rate adventurer. Even if it was a true knight from the first knight group I'm sure they'd put in all of their effort trying to learn it. Even I learned quite a bit from {Sun.Ray}.

It seems the first two days, Saturday and Monday, when they started challenging the 4th floor things proceeded smoothly with no particular problems. All of the parties properly returned to the teleport room on the 3rd floor at the decided times and got plenty of rest. Obviously there were some small mistakes but they were exploring the dungeon lead by ultra first-rate adventurers so they stopped things before it ever developed into fatal problems. The problem was Monday night, in other words last night.

Since they were camping on the 3rd floor they couldn't afford to break the so-called unwritten rules. In other words, the slightly more comfortable spots in the corners or along the walls belong to the first ones there and you have to respect other party's territory.

Of course, it seems that the young ladies and their retainers endured at first without making any complaints.

However, as expected a group of members all wearing expensive metal armor stands out. There's also quite a few indiscreet fellows among the second-rate adventurers as well. It's not like there's no rude fellows who shout jeers and whistle while they're removing armor or changing either.

And then, even if they hide behind a cloth both Anderson and Viruhaima understood it would be hard for a young noble woman to wipe their body with a large number of adventurers watching. Above all else while they're illegitimate children they're also of a high class lineage as well. Even by mistake they wanted to reduce the possibility that adventurers would see their skin. That was the same for sis Anderson but it's kind of late for her at this point and on this occasion her being middle-aged doesn't matter at all.

They wanted to say just endure it but because of reasons like that it was hard to say. Even if they were to tell the adventurers not to look, there's no one who would listen obediently. Though Viruhaima and the others are ultra first-rate adventurers it's not like they have any influence over other adventurers they have no relation to after all. If they're warned then they might look down or in the other direction but the majority of them would just start looking secretly right after.

Even for the retainers to make a wall of people there's limits to it and in the end it's the same as a situation where they're wiping their bodies from behind a single sheet of cloth. Just like this the retainers gradually started to complain and requested that they do something about it. And then finally, after camping out in the teleport room filled with dirty adventurers for several days the young ladies reached their limit and started requesting an improvement to their camp situation.

It couldn't be helped so Viruhaima and Anderson discussed moving their campsite to the teleport room on the 4th floor.

Well, it's troublesome but not all that bad of a decision. The knights acted even more carefully than ever and didn't get full of themselves. And it was also a fact that they were obediently learning from their guidance. During combat they would fight considerably carefully but also at times boldly so you could feel that they were trained decently well. It's also big that they felt it was plenty for them to clear through the 4th floor.

As expected even if the 5th floor is impossible they felt it was plenty to continue guiding them while camping in the teleport room on the 4th floor. Instructing them in the depths of the 4th floor where even the second-rate and half first-rate parties rarely enter is somewhat more efficient as well. Above all if they make the teleport room on the 4th floor their base camp then they can form a large party with all 30 of them in one spot. The degree of safety will jump up all that much higher.

Also, there's obviously their initial aim as well. Normally the only ones who use the teleport room on the 4th floor other than them are just {Gehenna.Flare} and the {Slaughterers} after all. Both of them just pass through and rarely ever camp on the 4th floor for long periods. Even more rarely a half first-rate party will appear there but that's a possibility they can just ignore.

The

{Exterminators} now use the 5th floor as their home and repeat combat primarily on the 5th floor. After all having proper kitchen and shower facilities and a bed is a big reason. That's why there was a high possibility that neither {Gehenna.Flare} or the {Slaughterers} would be there. Even if they were it would be at most a single night.

After

discussing those sorts of reasons they the two of them decided to switch their campsite to the 4th floor and spend almost a full day moving to the teleport room on the 4th floor.

Morning, the same as usual the {Verdure.Brotherhood} and {Black.Topaz} each teleported into the 4th floor in their parties. And then, Anderson and the others arrived at the teleport crystal room on the 4th floor before 4:00 pm just as they expected. Supposedly the party lead by Basu had already arrived. However, even one hour after the expected time the party being lead by Viruhaima hadn't arrived.

Though that's the case, someone with high skill was leading five newbie adventurers. There was a good chance that Viruhaima and the others had bad teleport luck and had to take a long way around for the sake of safety. Also, since it was the 4th floor they weren't all that worried about it. However, while Anderson and the others were in the middle of preparing the campsite the Bunnyman spear attacker Renbaru.Korumain lead Noirura and just two of her followers as they arrived in the teleport crystal room on the 4th floor. Other than Renbaru all of them had suffered some kind of injury large or small.

After listening to the circumstances in a hurry and it seems when they were being lead by Viruhaima they arrived at a monster room 2 km away from the teleport room just before noon.

Supposedly the {Verdure.Brotherhood} passed through that room about one year prior and at the time there was a nest of ghouls in it. They had the map and things proceeded pretty smoothly up until there so they expected to arrive at the teleport room on the 4th floor by about 2:00 pm or so.

They carefully scouted out things inside of the room but couldn't discover the boss.

They guessed that it must have been soon after {Gehenna.Flare} or the {Slaughterers} passed through. In that case it's possible one of the parties would be in the teleport room but they still expected they would be able to take their time and relax in a spacious room without many others around.

And then, the tragedy struck as they in the middle of passing through the room. She said before anyone noticed the enemy was in the room.

Not noticing it's appearance and being caught completely off guard one of Noirura's followers who was walking at the rear was taken out.

The sound of that person falling over acted as a warning and thanks to that they noticed the attack.

While they immediately switched to attack formation, the enemy supposedly didn't appear to be a monster.

Renbaru, Noirura, and her followers all reported that it was believed to be a different adventurer.

Viruhaima, the {Shield.Holder} Sara.Pachiku, and one other follower all started harshly questioning them while pointing their swords but the follower was easily defeated after being hit by an attack spell from that adventurer. Spells started being fired at high speeds in close proximity before they could blink. Supposedly they were shocked by their overwhelming skill.

It was at this point which Viruhaima threw the map to Renbaru and ordered him to immediately regroup with {Black.Topaz} and the other members of the {Verdure.Brotherhood}.

Since they were already halfway through the room and the distance to the teleport room was far closer in terms of distance, Renbaru decided to regroup with them without hesitation.

The ones left remaining were Viruhaima, Sara.Pachiku, the dwarf glaive user Rizara.Redflare, and the elf bow user Rokkuweru.Marosutaron, the four of them.

Just as I was thinking it's absurd for that old man Viruhaima to choose to go up against a group of adventurers with just the four of them, supposedly that adventurer was all alone. And then, there for the first time I heard the appearance of that adventurer and understood everything.

Supposedly he was naked.

Naked, fires magic at surprisingly fast speeds, and looks exactly like a person...

I happen to have an idea on who that might be.

The floor he appeared on was the same 4th floor.

If I'm certain last time I turned him to dust in a single shot.

"Who's going to the rescue?"

"The remaining members of the {Verdure.Brotherhood} with Basu as the leader and all of {Black.Topaz} excluding me are heading there. I had the knights return to the surface together with me. I came here right after that.."

And then, we return to the beginning of the story.

After

sighing together with me as we change the atmosphere, Miduchi opened her mouth as she was about to say something when I just said, "Hey".

Miduchi seems to have figured out my intentions right away as she stood up from her seat.

She's even faster than me at switch overs like this. As expected of her.

During that time I'll kill time discussing things.

"But, the opponent is alone right? Even though they were caught off guard at the start, Viruhaima-san had four of them so they should have been able to handle it anyway they want right?"

without making a sound. I stood up while talking to Anderson and went to a corner of the room while switching over to combat mode mentally just like Miduchi. Anderson made an irritated face and replied while looking at me.

"..Are you saying that seriously? It's already beyond abnormal that he'd be completely naked in the dungeon and it's also strange that he suddenly appeared in the middle of the room. Also, just from what I heard he was considerably skilled at using spells just like you. Probably, he had other allies hiding inside the halls or somewhere to attack them all at once."

Well, since they immediately sent a rescue party and had the members who would hold them back withdraw right away I can tell they felt it was considerably dangerous. But, as expected they don't seem to have realized it was a monster. They haven't seen it themselves so I guess that's not unreasonable. It's only obvious to think he was trying to get them to let their guard down by attacking naked and the main group would attack from a different direction.

"..Che..It seems I've been underestimated quite a bit..Though it can't be helped."

It's not like I'm particularly underestimating you. I just wanted to confirm what kind of recognition you had of him and there were no ill feelings.

"And, about the compensation. How much would it be fine to hope for?"

I quickly take off my shirt and start taking my socks and shoes off while sitting on the bed.

"..I'll promise at least 10,000,000. However, the condition is that you recover the corpse or magic stone of Noirura's follower. Also, if you can rescue Viruhaima alive I promise to double the reward."

If we consider that it's the 4th floor that's quite the high and good reward.
But...

I'm sure..I won't be able to obtain that reward.

Most likely, I think that old man should have already been killed along with that old dwarf lady, the bunnyman, and elf.

In regards to Noirura's follower and the others since they were bitten by the naked target, I feel like their magic stones would have changed a bit as well.

No, it might be possible that the old man and others won as well though.

"What about payment in advance?"

I threw my shirt and socks into the dirty laundry while saying.

Anderson's still sitting in the chair staring at me.

After putting the shoes I was wearing up until now under the bed and I stood up to go and get some new underwear.

"Do you want payment in advance?"

"If possible that is. Of course~ that's the case."

Both Miduchi and myself don't care at all about getting payment in advance let alone the reward itself.

Honestly speaking, too much time has passed so the rescue itself is probably impossible and almost a joke.

I'm just making small talk to calm myself down from getting too impatient.

In the first place I boast about being number one in Baldukk.

I need to act appropriately for the part.

"Is..Is that so...That sort of..ad..advance payment..is it?"

Anderson seems to have started grumbling about something.

Even if you reject the advance payment I won't say anything stingy~
I put on some new socks with my upper body still naked and took off my pants.
I start taking my newly tailored underarmor off a hanger from the wall near my bed.

"Th..That is..I'm in a hurry..So..Something that will take time is.."

I roughly check over my underarmor and confirm there's nothing wrong with the belts and bands for my protectors. No problem.

I take out a clean shirt from the dresser at the base of my bed and put it on then put on my underarmor pants before putting on the upper part as well.

I continue to calm myself down so my feelings so the blood doesn't rush to my head.

"An..And..I, I, umm..not really.."

I take the sash I had hanging on the hanger along with my underarmor and tie it up around my waist.

I pass my feet through my combat boots and properly put the hems of my underarmor pants inside of my boots before tying the knot.

I briskly kept putting on half of my armor before tightening my belt.

Just like usual whenever I start putting on my protectors I can feel the tension build up.

"Wo.Wouldn't a younger girl be..I..I'll go and call Noirura?"

I equip the parts on my arms, chest, and back.

I pass both of my legs through the loins and attach the girth parts.

I connect the stoppers for the thighs, knees, and shins.

My heads started to cool down.

"Or..Or maybe..Yorire is best? O..Or Mimairu? The..The younger is better right."

She's still muttering about something.

I was just joking about saying I wanted advance payment just now.

Defeating the {Vampire} is our objective.

I'll definitely gouge out it's eyeballs!

It might not be a {Lord} but we need to grasp whatever straws we can get here.

"Ah, please(I) don't mind things like that."

I fix the plate tassets around my back and gave a random reply.

I fix the parts on my shoulders into place. Then put on my helmet and properly fixed it to my jaw.

I put on my elbow guards, pass my hands through the long gloves, and start clenching my fingers.

Alright, I'm starting to get worked up while maintain my composure well.

Furthermore, we chose to call ourselves the {Saviors}.

I need to prove through words and actions that we're appropriate to be called that.

"Eh? You..You unexpectedly..prefer, older women?"

Finally I put on my gauntlets and fixed the emergency supply pack onto the D-ring on my waist.

I pull my knife out from it's scabbard and check the blade. No problems.

I return it to the scabbard and attach it to the rubber belt on my right thigh.

I can do it today. I can do it!

"I..I'm over 30..and..It..It's been a while..Wa, I'm embarrassed.."

There's no problem with the throwing needles in both of my gauntlets either.

I confirm my bayonet leaned up against the wall.

There's no problem here.

Now then.

Eh!!?

What in the world is she doing? This sis.

Anderson was holding her head down as she undid the string to her studded.leather armor.

She's been wearing it up until now so there's no problem right?

I wonder if the string was loose?

"Sorry for the wait, preparations are..it seems you're ready."

Miduchi entered the room wearing all of her rubber protectors just like me. She has her bow and quiver on her shoulder, her scimitar on her waist, and is properly suited up as her expression has completely entered combat mode just like mine.

"Yeah~ all we need to do is confirm the location of the room."

I guess because I was ignoring her while putting on my armor, Anderson seemed to start tying up her leather strings again in a fluster. She turned bright red as if she was embarrassed falling behind us in making preparations with her equipment.

"You know the location of the room right?"

I took out the map of the 4th floor and spread it out while asking Anderson.

"Room? Yeah~ah, room..Yeah, the room. Oo..Oo..Of course."

She spread out her own map of the 4th floor and showed it to us. Don't get so flustered.

"..It should be this room."

Around that area huh...Miduchi and I confirm Gwine's map that we have spread out on the table again. Since it's drawn down it's a place we passed through in the pass as well.

"Miduchi, was everyone around?"

"No one was there. It's still a bit early for dinner..If I try to search for a bit then the time will.."

"I guess so. Well, they have the map so that's fine. It should be fine with just the members in Shuni. I need to leave a message for everyone and need to buy food and some garlic as well so you go to Shuni and gather the slaves before going ahead."

"Got it."

I had Miduchi go ahead to the inn where all of the slaves stay. If we have Miduchi and I, the six combat slaves, the porter Giberuti, and Anderson then it should be plenty. Furthermore, according to Miduchi and crosses and torii probably won't have any effect so I didn't take them into consideration from the start. I'd really like to test out a silver bullet but unfortunately all of the guns are in the teleport room on the 8th floor. I have no way of getting them.

"Then, shall we go from here?"

Even if we hurry to arrive it should take us until tomorrow morning. We should move around to buy the food first. Furthermore, I didn't feel the need to meet the three young ladies at this point.

.....

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 15

The current time is..2:56 am huh?

We'll take a break in a short while.

We should have entered at around 6:00 pm yesterday so that's 9 hours after taking a short break in the teleport room on the 3rd floor.

We have Anderson, Henry, Mekku, Rubi, and Jesu with us so the pace is a bit slow.

Well, that's also why we have the time to look at the map in the halls since we don't have Gwine with us.

"Madam..huh.."

Anderson whispered to herself while looking at my combat slaves as they took turns going to the bathroom.

Yesterday, after buying food with Anderson and gathering at the entrance plaza

Miduchi was giving the combat slaves instructions.

"..Anderson-san is even more of a senior than us. Treat her with respect."

""Yes, madam!""

And said something like that.

Even after that they've been calling Miduchi madam, madam over every little thing.

From Miduchi's viewpoint she must be trying to keep the three illegitimate daughters and the King in check through Anderson.

I understand her touching efforts and feelings though I feel a bit of pity and it's pitiful, there's no helping this.

It's about time.

"Lets go."

I give everyone the sign to depart.

Since Anderson is together with us I talk a bit more politely.

Up to here I haven't shown her freezing things but both Miduchi and I were using a decent number of attack spells in monster rooms. The monsters we ran into in the halls were taken out by Miduchi and Anderson's bows effortlessly.

I already have no intention of hiding the fact that our party can clear through the dungeon at an abnormal speed or we have a detailed map anymore.

Either way at latest I intend to say farewell to the dungeon in the spring of next year after all.

Even the map if they want it in the end they can have it, is what I'd like to say but that's probably no good, yeah.

In any case, even if it's informal, we have the eldest child of the King and the leader of the ultra first-rate adventurer group {Black.Topaz}

Anderson with us so she's not lacking to be the story-teller about the legends of the {Slaughterers}.

We grab on to the teleport crystal.

"Kudobisu!"

..There's a slightly bad smell. In a matter of ten minutes or so we should get used to it and not smell anything anymore but it's always an unpleasant feeling. I opened the map.

"It's 94, master."

Mekku said after confirming the number on the teleport destination.

..Here.

It doesn't seem like we'll need to teleport back in again.

About 6 km from here huh?

If we assume there's no traps or enemies and we dash then it wouldn't even take 20 minutes but as expected even for me that's way too dangerous.

"Over here. Let's go."

If we can maintain our pace up until here then I'd say around 2 hours to our destination...

The adventurers camping on the 2nd and 3rd floors said they hadn't seen anyone from {Verdure.Brotherhood} or {Black.Topaz}.

That must be why.

Recently Anderson has stopped saying much at all.

Chapter 309 : The Un-Dead 2

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 15

"..Something's there. 70, no, around 60 ahead. I guess there's about 15 of them."

I discovered a group of Goblin Zombies in front of us.

"Again? How can you tell?"

Anderson is surprised about how I've noticed monsters in the distance a number of times up until here. It seems she thinks that this good intuition is one of the driving forces behind the {Slaughterers} getting ahead. Of course, even if it's someone other than me if they have good intuition then there's fellows who can detect living monsters from this distance up to the 3rd floor or so and when it comes to Bunny-men or Wolf-race people there's quite a few who can feel the presences of monsters from an even further distance using their racial special skills. But, there's also quite a few mistakes and misunderstandings.

However, in my case, up until here I've gotten it right every single time after all.

"Ruby and Jesu go to Miduchi. Everyone else come to me."

While Anderson was acting surprised I calmly gave out the necessary orders.

On the days off my slaves occasionally enter the dungeon with Miduchi, the other members of the {Saviors}, or myself so at times like that they act practice targets for spells. And right now, the spell that Miduchi and I are using is {Grave.Strike}, a spell that specializes in combat against Undead. Recently we've been in the care of this spell on the 4th and 5th floors a lot.

My slaves are all used to it so they held out the weapons in their hands right away.

I touch those in order while using the spell.

Weapons with the spell {Grave.Strike} cast on them give off a light similar to sunlight in the center of the area the spell takes effect. The light given off by each of them individually isn't anything great but even then when you have this many, when six peoples worth gather together it brightens things up almost like mid-day.

"{Balance.Nine} formation. Sweep them away within 30 seconds."

I order my six combat slaves as if sending out hunting dogs to attack and then immediately after Zulu charges off with Mekku, Angela, and Henry right behind, followed by Ruby and Jesu with their pole-arms at the ready in back.

And then, Miduchi, Anderson, and I get into formation with Giberuti at the center while following after the slaves.

The Goblin Zombies are already in a horrible shape with their rotting flesh and juices falling off all over the place but by the time we arrived at the battlefield the damage to their bodies made you want to look away even more as various parts were rolling around the surroundings.

"You..exactly how many spells can you use..."

Anderson whispered in shock.

Well, that's not unreasonable. Normal adventurer magicians use only attack and healing for two types in total, even the ones with a lot use at most three different types of spells. When it reaches the point of the top teams then there's fellows who can use one more type or so but even then there's no mistake in thinking they focus more on using spells for the sake of healing their allies injuries and quickly finishing off monsters with long-distance spells.

It's unusual for there to be people who use spells for things other than that and you could call them oddballs.

It's not even strange for people to take over 1 minute to use the spell {Light}. Or rather that's normal.

We continue on straight towards our destination without attempting to collect magic stones.

After a short while we arrived at a monster room.

"What about scouting?"

Anderson asked once again here but her face was as if she already understood.

"It's a waste of time. Hey"

Without betraying her expectations I cast {Grave.Strike} on my slaves weapons again and had them charge into the room. In over 80% of the cases the room bosses of the 4th floor are some kinds of Zombies or Ghouls and uncommonly there's {Giant Centipedes} or {Gray Wuzu}, something like a miniature slime, at most. Even if there's no undead with Miduchi and I right behind them we can deal with it any way we want.

.....

And then about 1.5 hours later we arrived at a point within 100 meters of the room that was reported to be where Viruhaima and the others were attacked. I've already confirmed that there's no traps or hidden doors at all on the path up to the room.

"Is there anyone who needs to go to the bathroom?"

There's no reply.

"Alright.

The fellow moving around in the room up ahead is an Undead. Judging from the details of the report it's most likely a {Vampire}."

"Eehh!!?"

Anderson unintentionally raised her voice in surprise but as expected of a veteran she didn't let out a loud voice. Furthermore, my combat slaves are all making surprised expressions as well. Even Zulu and Angela only just found out that the target was a vampire right now, so it's only obvious.

"Va..Vampire you say..Why is something like that..."

"There's no time to explain in detail. However, there's something I need to mention ahead of time so I'm bringing it up. I've just judged that it's very likely that the opponent is a vampire from the details fo the report."

After saying that I faced the combat slaves.
It's

already been confirmed that there's {Vampires} on Orth and you could say they're a famous example of Undead monsters. Even in Rombert Kingdom supposedly around 30~40 years ago there was a case where a remote village was wiped out by a single Vampire. Although, it's said that after receiving the report about the vampire the local knight groups all attacked it at once and finally defeated it after countless sacrifices.

The number of casualties until it was defeated was said to be 80% of the villages population of 500 people along with 23 true knights and 47 squires, that sort of tragic number. Prior to that there's been similar incidents in various other places.

In the process of those there's been a decent amount of investigations about {Vampires}. One, they even absorb the life force of their victims through bloodsucking and depending on the case increase their familiars.

Two, there's cases where they have special skills like {Paralysis} and {Petrification}. Three, they're also occasionally experts in the various magic special skills as well. Among other things.

This,

"occasionally experts in magic" has a reason for it, since it seems it's not always the case for all {Vampires}. I already can't remember in the case of the vampire last time and in the case this time we can't even determine if the attacker is actually a vampire or not yet. However, it's only obvious that it's best to assume the worst case scenario.

"Giberuti, bring out that item"

I had Giberuti prepare garlic. I have everyone wearing something like a necklace made of several garlic bulbs attached to a string. Furthermore we've rubbed garlic juice on the blades of our weapons. Obviously the same for Anderson as well.

Including my own, we finished rubbing garlic juice all over everyone's weapons.

"Anderson-san.

Depending on the situation please think that it's possible for members of the {Verdure.Brotherhood} and {Black.Topaz} to have already become {Vampires}. In the case that they attack we'll cut them down without mercy. I'm not saying this to ask for permission. I'm declaring it."

"..If that's the case then, that's obvious.."

It's fine as long as you understand.

If you really understand.

But, depending on the situation I don't think things will go that easy.

"{Arrowhead.Two}.

After arriving at the room first off we'll determine the situation but if anything attacks us then immediately switch to attack. Have your weapons ready."

Miduchi and I split up using the spells {Resist

Earth}, {Resist Water}, {Resist Fire}, and {Resist Air} on everyone.

Anderson's eyes opened wide once again but there's no time to pay any attention to her. There's a limited amount of time for the spells to remain in effect.

Next we touched everyone's weapons again and cast the spell {Grave.Strike} on them. I said to Anderson, "Please support us from the rear using your crossbow. Leave the attack spells to us." Furthermore, Miduchi succeeded in cutting down a Hobgoblin on the 3rd floor using {Energy Drain} so her HP's maximum limit is still increased.

"Let's go!"

I head towards the room with my gun raised in high-port.

Miduchi is taking the lead.

With her at the lead Mekku and Henry are on both sides and then Zulu and Angela have the edges fortified behind that.

Since her HP is buffed with {Energy Drain} and she has resistances up, along with her close-combat skills Miduchi is acting as the tank while we've fortified her surroundings with the other members with high defense. Ruby and Jesu will both focus on attacking with their pole-arms.

This time, I'll have the role of attacking with spells but depending on the case we may rush forward and we're prepared for Miduchi and I to take the lead with just the two of us as well. But for now I'm at the rear being careful of an ambush from behind. We want it's eyeballs so I have no intention of using {Disintegrate} after all.

We turned at the final corner and charged into the room.

The room wasn't any different from a normal room. It was a bit anticlimactic since I was expecting a sight of blood and guts scattered all over the place but without letting our guards down, we continued with the formation of Miduchi at the lead. It's because all over the room there's adventurers equipped with first-rate gear in tatters collapsed on the ground and in the center of that there's a single man and woman standing and looking spaced out.

Both of them are familiar faces.

After they noticed us they both raised their heads.

The man is wearing a helmet that covers his eyes and you can barely see the lower half of his face.

He's wearing a suit of banded mail and has a kite shield in his left hand with a long sword in his right. The man's name is Kaku.Dankel. A bold and brave, steady and honest man who's taken on the burdens of acting as sub-leader for {Black.Topaz} for many years.

The woman is equipped with a metal headband, splint mail, a round shield, and long sword. I can see her face well. Her name is famous for being a super veteran {Shield.Holder} for the {Verdure.Brotherhood}'s front line, it's Sara.Pachiku.

Their equipment is first-rate the same as those of the members collapsed in the surroundings but just the same they seem to be pretty damaged. There's marks as if they were cut with a sword and stabbed with a spear.

"Kaku! You were alright!?"

After seeing Kaku, Anderson shouted in delight.

However, the two of them remained ready for combat without putting their weapons aside before saying two or three things to each other and approaching us.

"Kaku! It's me! Stop right there!"

I guess because he heard her shout, Kaku hesitantly stopped moving and blocked Sara's way with his shield. Sara stopped as well and looked towards Kaku.

Seeing that Miduchi and the combat slaves stopped advancing as we entered a standoff with shields up.

However, there's no deceiving my {Identify}.

"Don't bother with it, kill them!!!"

The moment I said that I fired off a {Stone Bolt Missile}.

What can be seen of Kaku's face from behind his helmet is pale-white and no life can be felt.

Sara's face is pale-white as well with no signs of life that can be felt.

I guided my {Stone Bolt} to circle around the two of them with their shields at the ready but it was deflected by Sara's shield.

Deflecting a bolt that can be maneuvered so quickly that easily!?

That reaction speed, after all they don't seem to be human...

Also, Kaku's become able to use elemental magic which he shouldn't have been able to use and when it comes to Sara she's even learned Void Magic along with two types of elemental magic skills.

"Stop it!! That's Kaku!!"

"It's a Vampire! Don't let your guard down!!"

Miduchi and my combat slaves only listen to what I say.

We advance forward without letting our formation collapse and start combat.

"!! All of you, in the name of the Viscount Anderson family! Stop attacking immediately!"

Even then my combat slaves didn't slow down their attacks towards the two of them.

Anderson is a noble but I'm a noble as well. Even though we're both the same ranking as sub-nobles, I'm sure normally it would be proper to respect the orders of Anderson whose family is higher ranking but my slaves have been well trained in taking the time and place into consideration when conveniently interpreting the law. Like they would stop with just ordering them like that.

Miduchi dashed towards Kaku.

She started easily avoiding his attacks head on and soon after Henry and Mekku joined in as well.

Henry and Mekku are primarily focusing on Sara.

Zulu and Angela were moving to circle them from even further on the outside while at the same time remaining cautious so none of those fallen in the surroundings nearby interfere and throwing out feints.

And then, as if they had set their aim Rubi and Jesu start attacking with their halberd and partizan.

All of our attacks were parried by their shields and armor but as expected both Kaku and Sara were driven into a defensive battle in no time at all.

"Stop it!! Greed-kun, make them stop! Kaku, you say something as well!!?"

During that time we continued to attack and finally our attacks slipped through the gaps of the vampires armor and shields and damaged their bodies. Though I say that it's still just some scratches and nothing too deep but from the parts where our attacks hit there's a thin smoke rising up so it seems it's properly doing damage.

However, the fact that only the flawed attacks from the two spear users have hit is proof that the two of them have changed into something inhuman. That they can endure for this long against a group composed of my six combat slaves and Miduchi..

Furthermore it's not like I'm just playing around either. I'm even backing them up with consecutive {Stone Bolt Missiles}.

This sort of superhuman display, it's impossible for even me.

Anderson might be acting naive.

But, she's just shouting and not physically interfering.

The fact that things would play out like this was already within expectation but it seems she was already prepared for it herself.

She just can't make the final step to come to terms with it so you could consider it mercy for us to make it for her.

"..As expected of you, {Slaughterers}~!!"

All of a sudden Kaku roared.

There's fangs showing in his mouth as he shouts.

His red eyes shine from inside of his helmet.

"Kaku!"

Anderson raised her voice in joy that Kaku finally spoke after not saying anything up until now.

"Greed! Stop it!!"

Sara started speaking things as well. Honestly I was surprised but previously I had heard from Miduchi that vampires often maintain their intelligence and actions from when they were alive so I didn't panic. After all her eyes are giving off a red glow as well and there's no mistaking the fangs peeking out from her lips.

"Redddd~!! Make them stop~!!"

Kaku told Anderson to make us stop attacking.

"Kaku, you.."

Anderson raised her crossbow up at the ready.

"Gumu!!"

Henry's thrust finally caught Sara's leg. Just the same as Rubi and Jesu's attacks there's light smoke rising from her wound.

"....!! Is this all you can do~!!"

Kaku yelled while thrusting out his shield and hitting Henry in the chest. Henry lost his balance but Zulu and Miduchi skillfully followed up for him so he managed to get away safely.

"Shit!!"

Sara starts cursing. After all it seems that weapons with the spell {Grave.Strike} cast on them are considerably unpleasant.

They're displaying quite a bit of hate.

Mekku hit with his shield and knocked Sara off balance. Good!
Just as expected from someone who was originally a knight, including {Shield.Bash} he's considerably talented at using the shield.
I fire off an {Air Cutter Missile} at her throat.

"Geu!!"

At the same time as me, Angela didn't miss the opening and thrust her broadsword into the side gaps of Sara's armor.
A lot of white smoke started rising from Sara's side.
Sara's face twisted and she clenched her teeth.
It seems the fangs protruding from her lips are tearing into her own lower lip.
Almost simultaneously my spell tore away at Sara's throat.
There was almost no blood.

There came exploding a solid attack from Rubi..or so it seemed but he was a bit late.

"Ga!!"

Zulu grabbed Kaku's attention as he continued to keep him in check and Miduchi started slashing towards him without missing the opening. While she didn't manage a clean hit, Kaku's shield band has already been cut off and fallen, and his left arm is gradually getting more tattered by Miduchi.

"Geo..Gu..Go"

Before I realized it Angela had moved around behind Kaku and started thrusting with her broadsword in the right hand while punching with the spiked gauntlet using her left hand.

By the time Jesu finished aiming and thrust his spear the red light in Kaku's eyes was already on the verge of disappearing as he was near-death.

And then, a crossbow quarrel pierced into Kaku's mouth as Kaku fell down face-forward.

Condition: Death; Vampire(First Stage Familiar)

HP: -36(171)

Sara as well,

Condition: Death; Vampire(Second Stage Familiar)

HP: -77(168)

had that sort of status. However, these two are undead. They still haven't completely di, no, been destroyed. The negative HP of undead monsters is different from normal ones as they have a large amount of it.

Something

which is already just the remains of a moving corpse just becomes a temporarily not moving corpse and it's no good if you don't damage them even more. But, it doesn't matter as long as you take out the magic stone and even if you don't you can relax for a bit as they'll stop moving for the time being.

I started using {Identify} from the person fallen closest to me.

It was the Laios man who was a member of {Black.Topaz} named Baruteinesu.Zomu. Other than his condition being {Paralysis} and missing a bit of HP there doesn't seem to be any other abnormalities. There's others whose skin I can see to use {Identify} as well...

Basuraito.Kerutein.

The elf who acted as sub-leader of the {Verdure.Brotherhood}. This guys condition is {Paralysis} as well. Other than that..Julietta.Kamushu.

She's the Wolf-race person who is a member of {Verdure.Brotherhood}. Her condition was {Petrification}.

"Check the corpses laying around. Make sure there's no naked people who are just playing dead. Don't let your guards down"

I ordered the slaves before turning to Anderson.

At first she was trying that hard to stop us but partway through it seems she overcame it.

"Kaku..That you would call my name without using 'sama'.."

Because of that?

But, certainly I can't imagine any of the squires of the Greed family not using honorifics when talking to sister or I as well.

I'm sure it's not just because she was displeased about being called without honorifics.

She must have thought that Kaku's personality had completely changed.

The previous Kaku was a splendid sub-leader with a strong sense of self.

She must have believed that no matter what his willpower wasn't so weak that his personality would change that easily.

That's why I can somewhat understand Anderson was able to come to terms with it.

"Anderson-san. He's already a vampire."

I called out to Anderson who was flipping the fallen Kaku over so he was facing upwards.

Kaku's face was twisted from the pain as his fangs showed from the edge of his mouth with a quarrel stabbed into it, a terrible expression.

Right now it's still fine but if we leave him be he'll revive sooner or later just like ghouls and zombies.

"Yeah.."

Anderson pulled out the quarrel she shot herself and took off his helmet.

"{Status Open}.."

Anderson took off the glove from her left hand and touched Kaku's face while checking his status.

It probably looks like this to her.

Kaku.Dankel/18/7/7430 Kaku.Dankel/28/11/7413

Human.Viscount Dankel Family Second Son.Viscount Anderson Knight

Special Skill: Bloodsucking

Special Skill: Paralysis

Special Skill: Earth Magic

Special Skill: Fire Magic

Special Skill: Wind Magic

Special Skill: Void Magic

During that time I pointed towards Sara's corpse and nodded towards Miduchi.

"Miduchi, I'll leave Pachiku-san to you. Zulu remain cautious of the surroundings."

Though I don't have any real basis for it but since Sara's a second stage familiar while Kaku is still just a first stage, I guessed she was at a higher rank. Even when it comes to the increases(?) in their status points Sara's were higher after all.

I crouched over by Miduchi's side in a position so Anderson couldn't see before taking my knife out of it's holder and handing it to her.

"{Bloodsucking}..{Paralysis}..And, {Wind Magic}?"

It sounds like she understood once again after seeing that he had more special skills.
During the brief moment when Anderson seemed to hesitate as I was handing her my knife I cast the spell {Grave.Strike} on it.

"I think this is your duty."

After I said that Anderson nodded and thrust the knife between Kaku's right collarbone, numerous times.
White smoke started rising and the identification result changed to {Vampire's Corpse}.
Partway through, I glanced behind and saw Miduchi shutting away a rubber container into her bag.
I guess it's fine to think she was successfully able to collect the eyes.

Miduchi gave Zulu some kind of order before he handed her his shield and waved his bastard sword down at Sara's face with all of his strength.

.....

In the end, there were no deceased.

All of the members who had collapsed were either just paralyzed or petrified and fortunately no one else other than Sara and Kaku had become a vampire.

Also, that naked bastard(according to what they said it seems to have been a guy) who should have been the boss of this room wasn't around either.

Additionally, Viruhaima wasn't here either.

After curing them of {Paralysis} and {Petirifcation} were listened to what happened.

After being ambushed two of Noirura's followers collapsed then Noirura and her other two followers were evacuated lead by Renbaru.Koromain under Viruhaima's orders, after which a fierce battle started.

Under

the command of Viruhaima, Sara.Pachiku, Rizara.Redflare, and Rockwell.Marosutaron challenged the naked man with all of their strength. However, the man displayed a terrifying level of physical ability as he evaded all of their attacks.

And then finally, Sara fell after taking an attack from the man then Rizara was beaten next.

It seems the surviving Rizara noticed it was a paralysis attack at this point. However, let alone moving she couldn't even speak, the only things she could do were breath and blink. Adding to that she can only use earth, fire, and void magic.

With just that there was no way for her to recover from the paralysis. Although, even if she actually had water magic since she hasn't practiced it at all it would take her dozens of minutes to use the spell {Remove Paralysis}.

Aiming for the opening when it was attacking Rizara, Viruhaima charged at the naked man but once again here the man showed off his frightening movements as he evaded Viruhaima's attacks and used some unknown magic(most likely it seems to be the paralysis spell) at a super speed before he collapsed too. Rock had started concentrating in order to use an attack spell but he was paralyzed as well.

The naked man checked each persons status one at a time before touching Viruhaima and Rock.

Seeing both of them rapidly change to stone without a trace of spell light

Rizara felt like she would go insane from the fear. Finally at this point she realized that there was no spell light when Sara was paralyzed just like Viruhaima and recognized that the naked man was a monster.

And then, at the edge of Rizara's sight the naked man bit into Sara's neck. It seems the bloodsucking was done slowly during a period of over two hours. During that time Rizara said she couldn't do anything but tremble in fear.

A short while after that when Sara got up she said her eyes were giving off a creepy red light and fangs were showing from her mouth. Sara had completely changed into a living corpse that obeyed the man's orders. Just as she was questioned by the vampire she gave him all of the information on her allies magic skills and everything she knew.

And

then when Rizara heard the adventurers lead by Basu and Kaku call out for Viruhaima she felt a brief moment of hope but it quickly changed back into despair again soon after.

The naked vampire jumped up towards a corner of the ceiling and then seemed to use some kind of spell before disappearing.

Sara remained completely armed standing in the middle of the room.

When the adventurers came in lead by Basu and Kaku they couldn't hide their surprise at Noirura's followers, Rizara, and the others laying around like corpses as well as Viruhaima and Rock who had changed into stone statues but they were overjoyed that Sara seemed fine as they ran over to her.

And then the tragedy was repeated.

The vampire who had disappeared ambushed the members starting from the ones at the rear.

From the point he attacked the first person the vampire had reappeared but he had already succeeded with his ambush and furthermore they were attacked by Sara who they thought was an ally.

In no time at all they were reduced to half then finally Kaku who struggled to the very end ran out of strength.

Once again the vampire started checking everyone's status before petrifying those who had the possibility of using {Remove Paralysis} and then just left everyone else like that. After that there was quite a few people like Basu and Vikkusu who were just paralyzed so we heard quite a few of the details.

Supposedly the vampire said this to Sara.

"As long as nothing happens the ones who are paralyzed will live for a few more years. We need to treat them carefully."

The vampire told Sara she could pick one of the people who are paralyzed and suck their blood.

The one Sara chose was Kaku and it seems he carefully instructed her on how to do it.

After Sara bit into Kaku's neck she spent several hours carefully sucking his blood.

After quite a bit of time passed and he confirmed that Kaku had changed into a vampire, the vampire walked towards the petrified Viruhaima ignoring the other fallen members then effortlessly picked him up before ordering the two of them to remain and protect their remaining prey until he returns then disappeared somewhere.

After that neither the vampire nor Viruhaima have returned.

Chapter 310 : The Un-Dead 3

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 15

Over there I guess...

This monster room is an almost perfectly square room that's about 50 square meters and is the same as the other monster rooms in the dungeon. Including the passage we entered from there's a total of five cavern-like passages connected to it.

We came in from the northern area of the eastern wall and a bit further to the south on that side there's another different passage. Along the southern wall there's two passages including the one the party that came to rescue Viruhaima entered from as well as one more passage along the northern wall.

Only along the western wall there's no passages at all.

Well, monster rooms like this aren't unusual or anything so it's not like I'm saying it's unnatural because of that either.

But...

According to my {Identify} there's a trap in a corner along the western wall. At three meters high with a width of one meter in the shape of a thin board or door.

That is..that I'm sure.

Eh? If we're mentioning that, then it's that.

In the past, that thing I got caught inside.

The pitfall trap in the wall that sent me flying down to the 14th floor.

If the boss were to disappear from a monster room then there's nothing else than that right?

I think the fact that the hidden door appears with my {Identify} is the best proof that it was opened recently.

I guess because it was opened once the camouflage between the wall and the joints came off?

Normally whether the pitfall is on the floor or the wall I can't tell them apart with {Identify} after all.

Although, just because there's no slit for peeking through doesn't automatically mean it's not a hidden door.

I can't tell at all what's going on beyond that door after all.

It's uncertain whether it could even be the punishment game type that suddenly leads to the 14th floor just like that one on the 3rd floor.

It might lead to some different place in the dungeon.

Or it could just be a small storage room and he brought Viruhaima in there before removing his petrification to drink his blood.

Putting aside the jokes, what to do?

Whatever the case, the first priority is taking care of one of our jobs of returning Noirura's surviving followers to the surface. In regards to the pitfall trap on that wall I'd say there's no doubt the boss of this room used it and if we're going to follow it then there's no other option than to jump in. Or rather, other than that there's no choice than waiting in this room forever for the vampire based on it's words that it would "return".

Also, there's Kaku and Sara's magic stones and equipment..as expected I don't really want to take the belongings of acquaintances.

There's still adventurers who were allies in the same party as them up until just a few hours ago in front of us after all.

All of the members of both {Verdure.Brotherhood} and {Black.Topaz} are giving off a depressing and heavy atmosphere.

Furthermore, not just those adventurers but with the two of Noirura's followers still here is a bit...

I guess I should start around here?

"First off let's return those two to the surface."

After I said that to Anderson she finally seems to have remembered.

"Also, isn't it necessary to take care of Dankel-san and Pachiku-san's funerals?"

It seems they agreed with what I was proposing but the members of {Verdure.Brotherhood} and {Black.Topaz} gathered together and started discussing something.

"Don't you think we shouldn't be taking things so leisurely? We don't know when the boss of this room might return right?"

But just as expected they seemed to understand this as well so they just wanted us to wait for five more minutes. Although, they spent more than half a day paralyzed or petrified so I'm sure it'll take a bit longer for their bodies to loosen up, whether it's five minutes or one hour either way is fine. Noirura's three knights don't seem to have anything to do as they just chat with each other. Hurry up for their sake.

Well, this situation is also convenient for me because I can discuss things with Miduchi.

I gathered my combat slaves over and told them to chat so no one can hear Miduchi and I talking, then pulled Miduchi to the corner of the room.

While glancing at Basu and the others going back and forth in front of that hidden door or trap in the corner I started whispering to Miduchi.

"It was displayed as Second Stage Familiar {Second.Order.Kin}. After all they're different from that {Vampire Lord} or whatever right?"

The {Slaughterers} are all gathered together a bit of distance away as I confirm with Miduchi in a whisper.

It's probably different but just in case.

"Eh?"

Kin? Then in that case I think there's a high chance they weren't even complete vampires..I did something bad to Pachiku-san.."

Miduchi said in a disappointed and somewhat apologetic voice.

Oh~, so after all they were different things?

If that's the case then I feel a bit bad about doing that to Sara as well.

"Then I guess there's no choice other than waiting for the vampire to return to this room? Though there's also the choice of following it."

"Follow?"

"Yeah, there's a pitfall on the wall. The same kind which falls inwards when you lean on it like we got caught by in the past. The vampire probably used that and went somewhere. Though I don't know what it'll do when it returns. It might not be a pitfall but there could be a passage or stairway on the other side you can use to pass through."

"That huh..."

Miduchi made an expression as if she remembered something unpleasant and looked into the air for a moment.

That was an unpleasant event right.

Though it's certainly true I was able to meet Miduchi and get into contact with Lilus thanks to it but from start to finish that was only time I've ever been so depressed that I seriously thought I'd die alone in the middle of nowhere.

That feeling of being in a pitch black space where you can't see anything enduring hunger, sleep, and sexual urges as worry and anxiety continue to increase. I seriously never want to experience it again.

"But, if it's the same as that even for a vampire I wonder if they'd go inside?"

Miduchi said as if she suddenly realized it.

"Hmm, they were properly holding a conversation so I feel like mentally they might not be all that different from people. Though their urges might be weak because they're undead but considering they drink blood they should at least have hunger remaining..and prior to that if their mana were to run out I think a variety of problems could come up.."

Otherwise maybe it just doesn't drain the mana of monsters?

I personally don't think it's the type of trap that leads straight to the 14th floor.

That's why I don't think it's one that drains your mana.

Though you could also say that's what I'm hoping is the case.

But, it's not as if I have any proof.

Furthermore, I have no intention at all of jumping in without investigating it or any evidence.

Up until now plenty of adventurers other than us have found those sorts of pitfalls where the wall falls inward like that.

Depending on the case there's one where the wall just simply falls backwards and there's cases where they've been found leading to a deep hole as well. Of course, we've found a number of those sorts of traps as well.

Now that we've determined the location of this room there's no real need to do it right now but I feel like it's necessary to investigate that trap.

"Master, it seems they've finished their discussion."

Zulu came to call for me.

I went over to where Anderson and Basu were before asking what they plan to do.

It seems {Black.Topaz} is planning to bring Noirura's two followers as well as Kaku and Sara's remains and return to the surface immediately.

Well, that's only obvious.

However, in regards to the {Verdure.Brotherhood} not only was Sara turned into a vampire and killed(though you could say we all killed her but it seems they think of her as being killed the moment she was changed into a vampire) but on top of that their leader Viruhaima is still missing. It seems they've resolved to wait in this room to ambush the vampire and then tie up before making it spit out Viruhaima's location.

I guess they think the reason two small groups were beaten by it was because they were caught unprepared and as long as they can ambush it while ready they'll be able to defeat it?

But, somehow that doesn't seem to be all there is to it. Even if he's like that I guess Viruhaima had quite a bit of charisma.

"Though I think it would be best for you all to return once.."

I tried suggesting in a moderate reserved way.

"It's not as if we didn't consider that. But, things would be too late after Roberto turns into a vampire. At the very least we need to wait for the vampire to come back, beat it down, and confirm.."

Is what Basu

said. Ah, well, certainly at this point Viruhaima was only petrified and brought off to somewhere. It's not like it's guaranteed his blood was sucked. Though, even if you say that while massaging your legs...

"Though if you really insist, I won't stop you but..for that there's something I need to confirm as well as a condition."

I said that as an opening before continuing.

"First off, this is a confirmation. Let's presume that everything goes as planned and you manage to beat up the vampire and save Viruhaima-san who's been petrified. After that how do you plan to return him to normal?"

I coldly stated. The only method I know of returning someone to normal from petrification is the spell.

The reverse magic of {Flesh.To.Stone}, the spell {Remove.Petrification}.

It's an extremely high level spell that demands a high level of magic special skills at level 7. For the time being I don't know anyone who can use it other than the fairies and I. The one who's saying it is I, who returned people from petrification just now, so Basu and the others were shocked.

I ignored their shock and continued speaking.

"The

second thing, this is the condition. If everyone plans to ambush the vampire here or whatever that's all fine and good. However, please do that after first compensating me for saving everyone and curing their paralysis and petrification.

It's strange saying this but the vampire that was here is considerably stronger than Dankel-san and Pachiku-san from just now right? After all it didn't just defeat Viruhaima-san but it easily beat everyone else as well..Since it seems like everyone from {Black.Topaz} is returning to the surface doesn't that mean the number of people remaining will be less than the second time it attacked?

Certainly we accepted rescue job from Anderson-san. However, rescuing you all wasn't included in that."

I intentionally made an unpleasant and greedy expression as I said it. However, it doesn't seem to have had much of an effect. After all, if I was seriously just after the compensating for saving them it would have been most effective to just save one person before starting negotiations. No matter what I say after saving everyone it has little effect. It's said that everything that happens in the dungeon is your own responsibility but even when saving people you're on your own. If they were to claim I just saved them all at my own convenience there's zero room for me to refute it.

Of course, I'm sure there's people who would say something like that among the adventurers in Baldukk, or at least that few a number of them, and normally you could say it's common sense to thank them and pay a reasonable amount of compensation.

"..Yeah, I forgot about that. How much do you want?"

Basu said acting as the representative for the {Verdure.Brotherhood}. Since we were able to rescue Noirura's two followers alive it should be fine to think we've already earned 10,000,000 Z. Well, it's weird to mention a small amount like that as this point. It doesn't matter at all.

"Since

this is the 4th floor, according to the market price I'd like about 2,000,000 Z. Also, I'd like 2,000,000 per person in compensation for restoring someone from petrification and 1,000,000 per person for paralysis. Marosutaron-san and Kamushu-san were petrified and the five other than that were all paralyzed for a total of 11,000,000 Z. I have no intention of discounting a single Z less. If you can all gather it up and pay here on the spot right now then feel free to do as you please."

I'm sure there's no way they can pay 10,000,000 right here and now right? Or can they? In the past, I remember when they paid 1,000,000 Z on the spot in full for some medicine we had.

"..First please return to the surface together with everyone from {Black.Topaz}. If it's on the surface then I'll accept negotiations about the amount. But right now it's a waste of time. An ambush is fine but everyone is far from their best condition after being stuck in the same posture for a long period right? Do you really think you can compete with the vampire in that condition?"

"Hmph. So you mean baggage should just hurry up and disappear...We sure are being looked down on.."

Basu said while grinning in comparison to his words.

Shut it~ I'm saying it for your sake.

In the first place, even if you say it while you're all massaging yourselves it's not persuasive at all.

"No matter how you word it that's fine. However, if everyone intends on remaining here then it's possible we won't be able to receive our compensation. Ah, in regards to Viruhaima-san he's included in the conditions of rescue so you don't need to worry about him."

It was when I said up to here that the situation changed.

"Ah!!"

As expected there's no way it would be overlooked with this many people here. The first one to notice was Vikkusu from {Black.Topaz}.

Hearing his yell everyone put up their guard.

The pitfall door started opening without a sound and from there a naked man entered the room.

At almost the same time as Vikkusu I noticed the door start to open and immediately charged in between Basu and the others and it. And then, momentarily after getting in front of everyone I used a spell.

{Anti-Magic Field}.

Whether lightning giving off a blue light came from the right hand of the naked man was faster or my {Anti-Magic Field} was able to deploy faster.

With only a slight difference it seems I won the battle.

Lightning ran across the surface of a 2 meter long and wide power field with an area of 5 meters that appeared from my hand and offset the naked man's spell.

"Miduchi!!!"

This guy uses magic. I leave attacking to Miduchi and I should just focus on blocking all of his attack spells.

A powerful enemy!

The vampire made a surprised expression seeing the {Anti-Magic Field} not only offset it's attack spell(I think it was probably a strengthened {Chain Lightning}) but still maintain it's mana.

It seems it has emotions.

"What, are you.."

The vampire said something in a whisper along with a hissing breath that rings the ears.

"Aaaah!!?"

"This guy!!?"

"Where did you take Roberto!!?"

"You bastard~~!!~"

Basu and the others are all shouting as they take out their weapons. Thanks to the vampire which suddenly appeared it seems they missed the fact that I used a spell while running just now. I'm saved..though, if this bastard hadn't come out just now there would have no need to worry about it either way.

"Stand back! Leave it to Al and I!!"

Miduchi shouted while charging over.
That girl, she's gotten desperate to finish it off!

"Miduchi!! Don't recklessly charge at it!! Keep an eye on the situation and attack when you're certain!!"

I didn't want to have to say it while using a spell but it can't be helped.

"..!"

I guess the vampire saw me speaking as an opening so he started using magic again.
This time it's a {Fire Ball} or something like that. Judging from the size, one with plenty of extra power.
I immediately shifted the position of my {Anti-Magic Field} to receive it and erased it.

With this I'm sure it's been exposed...
But, I was able to get Miduchi to stop her charge.

"Sorry, I'm calm now."
"Yeah, I'm depending on you."
"What should we do?"
"First off cast {Grave.Strike} on my weapon."

For some reason we can't cast the spell {Grave.Strike} on Miduchi's scimitar. Although, even without using the spell her scimitar does plenty of damage so you could say it's unnecessary.

"..What are you saying..."

The vampire spoke once again with an unpleasant sound as if he was breathing while talking as he gradually started to move away from the wall with the surprised expression still on his face. However, Kamushu and Marosutaron are firing arrows keeping him in place. I guess he's the spell {Shield} or something because those arrows are giving off a light blue light before falling to ground as if they're hitting an invisible wall.

Then {Grave.Strike} was cast on my bayonet still held in my right hand. Sunlight lit up the area and revealed the vampire that was difficult to see. I need to be careful that the tip of my bayonet doesn't touch the {Anti-Magic Field}.

Pale skin that doesn't seem to have any vitality, regardless of whether he's lived for several hundred years his hair isn't all that long. He's got just a bit of stubble on his face as if he just shaved several days prior.

He's making an unpleasant expression as if disgusted by the sunlight and garlic coming from the blade of my bayonet. The glowing red eyes on his grimacing face and the fangs that show when he's speaking.

His physique is pretty good and his height should be about the same as mine at 180 cm. Though he'd be considered the slim type it's no good that he doesn't even try to hide his nether regions.

Furthermore, there's no change in the disgust he's showing towards the light given off by my blade or the garlic smell smeared on it. After all it seems to be effective.

"..It seems that those two were defeated..With that level of skill it makes sense.."

Thank you for your praise.

But, I don't feel even the slightest bit happy being praised by a monster.

"..That spell..It pisses me off.."

After all you don't like it?

However, my specialty isn't this.

It's freezing.

"Let's all charge at it together!!"

Basu shouted.

Stop, idiot!!

The moment I took a breath to say that.

The vampire suddenly charged forward with almost no preliminary movement! This bastard, he used wind magic against his back!

I move to counter him with a kick.

Miduchi is circling around to cut at his back.

A good combination.

There I heard the sound of a string being released from behind me on the left. The sound of a crossbow being fired.

It's Anderson.

Great timing!

Geeh!!?

I almost spontaneously let my voice out.

Th..There's seriously someone who can manage that...

Of all things, the vampire grabbed the quarrel that was flying at it and used it as it's own weapon like a knife!

I shortened the distance of my kick like a feint and barely managed to avoid the quarrel by rolling.

I wanted to maintain the {Anti-Magic Field} while rolling but this is a chance!

I stopped maintaining the {Anti-Magic Field} and fired off an attack spell.
{Stone Javelin}!

Seriously! He evaded it!

The vampire used wind magic again and changed his movement to avoid my {Stone Javelin}.

Even if missile had been added to it that's impossible. There was no way for it to hit.

However, the fact that he used wind magic with that timing means he noticed my real finishing move.

But, beyond the point he dodged my spell Miduchi was waiting.

Miduchi skillfully twisted her body with the scimitar still held in her right hand and just like that elbowed the vampire in the head!

Completely taking the elbow to it's head the vampire fell to the ground on the opposite side.

Nice.

After jumping up I started charging towards it with my bayonet ready.

I lost sight of it when I rolled so the identify window disappeared.

"Uoo~!!"

While yelling to put some fighting spirit into it I thrust my bayonet towards it's back while it's on the ground.

However, just like usual the vampire showed a frightening level of reaction speed as it rolled to evade but still ended up getting kicked in the stomach by Miduchi.

The vampire who rolled back this way from the recoil was once again kicked by me.

Both Miduchi and I are wearing combat boots with hardened ebonite tips. Even with just this we should have done quite a bit of damage.

I felt a response as if the kick broke it's ribs.

Ah, since it came to this I wish I had cast {Grave.Strike} on my combat boots.

On the opposite side Miduchi raised her right leg once again preparing to kick him once more.

It was for just a moment when I thought to kick him to death like a soccer ball. The moment the naked bastard fell flat on his face after being kicked by me he stabbed the quarrel in his hand into the ground and used that as a pivot with one arm to jump straight ahead escaping our encirclement.

Frighteningly fast.

A tremendous level of physical ability!

Trying to freeze something like this is impossible without being prepared to blow myself up together with it!

However, beyond that Zulu was waiting and completely ready to swing his bastard sword with both hands.

That's great!

"Yao~!!!"

A shout filled with fighting spirit came from Zulu's mouth.

Fwooosh! As expected of him seeing through my special attack, the naked bastard used wind magic on himself once again.

Miduchi and I who were following after him were hit with a large amount of air and had to brace ourselves.

Fwooosh!

A loud sound of the wind being cut by the bastard sword echoed around.

"Guaaaaa!!"

Zulu's scream rings out.

And then shortly after that several screams overlapped.

Paralysis huh...

Zulu isn't the only one that collapsed.

Basu, Bennoko, and Renbaru from the {Verdure.Brotherhood}, Zomu and Vikkusu from {Black.Topaz}, as well as Henry and Mekku from the {Slaughterers} all collapsed along with Zulu. The only one remaining who can manage close combat is Angela.

Miduchi and I can't use magic because everyone is in the way.

Even though he's just a naked bastard he showed off some abnormal moves and defeated eight people in an instant.

Though almost all of them still have symptoms of the paralysis and petrification remaining, they're super first-rate adventurers.

"Fushi~~fuffufuffu. Not bad, you're quite skilled."

In the middle of the collapsed eight the naked bastard said while casually standing up.

He stepped on Bennoko's stomach who can't move from the paralysis.

The quarrel he had obtained is still stabbed in the ground between Miduchi and I.

If there's this many people laying around I really can't freeze it.

"..!!"

Bennoko can't seem to speak.

And then the vampire with a satisfied smile on his face.

"Benno!!!"

"Shit, I still can't move my body well.."

"Yeah, it's still stiff"

It seems everyone still has the effects from the paralysis and petrification remaining.

It's not unreasonable considering they were stuck that way for over half a day.

Bennoko's face is pale.

Hn?

HP: 186+201(222) MP 0+27(112)

Eh?

HP: 220+201(222) MP 0+26(112)

Fushi~ ..Well this much should be fine.."

It can't be!

Shit. {Energy Drain} was it...
Bennoko's level decreased by two.

"There's quite the catch today..And, of all things for there to be a dark elf{dyurou}.."

So you're just realizing it at this point? Though this room is pretty dark so I guess it's hard to notice without the light coming from my bayonet
huh?

"The vanguard mentioned by my master the {Lord} has finally...Woman, you alone won't be able to interfere with..... This dirty dark elf{dyurou}...I'll make sure you definitely die here."

What is this guy saying?
It seems like Miduchi has no clue either.

The vampire suddenly stretched out his hand towards Miduchi before a faint blue light appeared.
He's certainly fast!
At the same level as me!
In opposition I raised mine as well..!

"Nn!!"

My {Anti-Magic Field} barely made it in time.
It seems it was an attack spell that fired a stone type warhead.

"Nu..After all considerably..Gu!!?"

A {Fire Javelin} was fired at the naked bastard.
It seems he was barely able to react in time so it just grazed his side but even then it was effective.

I don't know who fired it but it was good timing.

"Let's go!!"

I yelled while charging.

While still maintaining the {Anti-Magic Field}.

"Ku..you bastard..I'm amazed you could put that much into it..but"

Without paying any mind I stopped maintaining the {Anti-Magic Field} and used wind magic behind me.

It's the same strategy the arrogant bastard who's pale-blue to the tip has been using over and over up until now but it's extremely effective at throwing off the balance of everyone but me.

I'm using it in the same way but I put quite a bit more mana into it.

I used it to the point where everyone who was behind or beside me would only trip.

Someone might end up injured because of it but they should just endure with just that for now.

Rather than that any more careless attacks would be more dangerous right.

"Keaaaa~!!"

A flash of fighting spirit, I slash down with my bayonet.

The naked bastard twists his body to evade.

I barely grazed the surface of his skin.

However, my bayonet was just a feint from the start!

Instantaneously I used {Grave.Strike} on the left foot of my combat boots before kicking into him.

Dobu!! along with a dull thud he went flying with his nether regions swaying in the wind.

I somehow managed to land but fell off balance and wasn't able to move right away.

"Eeee~i!!"

Ahead of that Angela was waiting and landed a solid hit with her broad sword before jumping backwards.

I used {Identify} once again and it had become HP: 94+201(222) MP 0+13(112). It's decreased by quite a bit.

After that Miduchi charged in and cut at him with her scimitar. His right arm was completely cut off from the upper arm.

"Fushuaaa~!!"

However, the naked bastard is still the naked bastard. Even though he's just a naked bastard.

With his expression still twisted showing he felt the pain he stretched out his left arm with perfect timing and thrust it into Miduchi.

"Agu"

Miduchi's movements stopped.
This is bad!

However, it seems she immediately used magic. Her entire body was covered in a faint blue light.

But right after she took the attack before the light from {Grave.Strike} being cast on her entire body appeared I felt like there was a much weaker light that appeared for a moment.

Miduchi quickly regained herself and made a sneer as if ridiculing him.

"It looks like it doesn't work on me?"

I was relieved. Most likely it was his {Paralysis} special skill or maybe a spell?

Whatever the case it seems you can still use spells after being paralyzed. Miduchi's practiced quite a bit with {Remove.Paralysis} after all.

"Im..Impossible.."

As expected the naked bastard couldn't hide his shock as Miduchi coldly stared him down and started swinging down her scimitar. It seems she's planning to cut off his left arm next.

"Guwu~!!"

With something swaying in the wind it seems he tried using wind magic again attempting to escape from peril.

But, it's already impossible for him to use magic anymore than this. He's become a great target.

{Stone Trebuchet Missi}..!

I cancelled it.

"You bastard~!!"

At almost the same time as I started pouring mana into it Angela started charging at him again.

And then while the vampire couldn't properly regain his balance as he landed on his ass she started slashing at his back like crazy.

"How dare you with your dirty hand!"

"Guo!!"

His remaining left arm was almost completely cut off.

I'll just use identify and keep an eye on the situation. I should stop them at an appropriate point.

But, I wonder if torture would work on an undead?

"To the madam~~!!!!"

"Gebu!!"

Her broad sword was thrust into his stomach and then withdrawn before cutting off his left foot.

The {Grave.Strike} cast on Angela's weapon has already worn off so the damage itself isn't all that high. But, an injury is still an injury.

"Lay your hands on her~!!"

"Ga~!!"

Though it seems that the injuries themselves still hurt so torture might actually be effective.

Even if his HP goes into the minus he would just lose consciousness as well...

"So you still won't die!!"

"Gupu!!"

Nn, I guess it's about time?

"Angela, that's fine. Good work"

"You sure are sturdy!!! You~!!!"

"That's already fine, stop"

"Ahahahaha!!! So you're still alive~!!~"

"Hey, stop already"

She finally stopped...

..Barely safe.

Miduchi's increased maximum HP disappeared and returned to it's original value.

She must have been hit by {Energy Drain} at the same time. Her level hasn't decreased.

I guess he wasn't surprised because of {Paralysis} not working but {Energy Drain} not taking effect...

We cornered the vampire until it was on the verge of annihilation.

He's still barely conscious with 3 HP remaining.

His remaining left arm is still barely connected by just the skin. His left left is tattered and I can see the bone. His guts are sticking out and there's a horrible smell as well.

Furthermore, he only has 4 MP remaining.

I checked over all the sub-windows of all of his special skills. It seems that bloodsucking {Drain} and {Paralysis} are basic special skills of vampires. However, it seems they can't use {Petrification} and {Energy Drain} unless they're perfect vampires. Furthermore, it seems {Petrification} takes about 10 seconds for it to take effect. In regards to {Mist.Form} and {Bat.Form} they both take about 20 seconds each for the transformation to complete as well.

Additionally, the members of the {Verdure.Brotherhood} and {Black.Topaz} who were fine were dumbfounded seeing Angela but still requested that I cure their paralyzed allies so I cured them. But, they still couldn't seem hide their shock over how I used spells.

Also, it's only obvious but they asked the naked bastard with only a single limb remaining intact about where he took Viruhaima but not only did he not talk, he even used the spell {Cure} on himself and went into a state of apparent death. Since it couldn't be helped I ordered the combat slaves collect his magic stone and cut off his head as a trophy. The magic stone had a value close to 700,000. So it's on the same level as that crazy strong Minotaur! Even though it shouldn't be a floor boss, amazing~!

"Further in there is suspicious."

Basu and Renbaru both said.

That's true but you know...

Well since it was going in and coming out I guess that means it's safe?

Hn? Berserker Angela is pulling my woman towards a corner.

Chapter 311 : The Un-Dead 4

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 15

What in the world are Miduchi and Angela doing discussing something?
While glancing at them to the side I declared.

"Well then, it's about time for everyone to return to the surface."

"It was 11,000,000 right? It's fine as long as we pay it right?"

Basu is making a face as if I was making fun of them as he said it.
They're seriously carrying it!? Shit.

"..Just a moment ago I cured Basu-san, Hyuruni-san, and Flameshaft-san once again. It's only obvious for the price to go up right?"

I'm glad I remembered before replying.

"That's not something you should be acting so cool about."

He completely saw through it. But, if I were to admit it here then regardless of whether I go or not they'll probably go all on their own.

"..Eh?"

What are you saying? You understand from just now right? It was my party that defeated this vampire you know? None of you did any work at all right? Even Basu-san didn't you just get paralyzed again and lay around?"

It's already gotten too annoying to act discrete~

Even if you all want to continue down this passage and get killed it doesn't...matter to me at all.

If you all come along with us it's just a bother.

If you end up being paralyzed and collapse I can't freeze things and if anyone gets taken hostage it's not like you can just abandon them right? In worst case their blood might be sucked and it would just increase the number of enemies.

It's plenty with just Miduchi, my combat slaves, and I.

Just that is more than enough for battle.

..That's right!

"And even if everyone comes along didn't it say something as if there's still vampires remaining?"

"Huh? Did it say something? Like that?"

"I panicked from being paralyzed so I didn't notice."

"Me too."

"I, was a bit further away so I couldn't hear anything."

"Did it say something?"

"I could hear it say something about being skilled about magic."

..Is that so.

It sounded like something important so properly listen!

"In any case, it's true there still seems to be some vampires. Do you want to be paralyzed and end up having to trouble me again?"

I intentionally made an arrogant expression as if making fun of them as I said it.

"That's fine already. It's certainly true that we're just a burden to you."

Anderson said in order to smooth things over.

Well, you weren't paralyzed so you wouldn't be as much of a burden as the others though.

But, if there's no one to lead {Black.Topaz} and the followers then they won't be able to return~ to the surface.

"That might be fine for you all but not only did Sara from our party get killed but even Roberto was abducted. We can't back off that easily."

The spear attacker Bunny-man from the {Verdure.Brotherhood}, Korumain complained.

That is~ I can understand those feelings.

I'm sure there's also your pride, you want to save your leader with your own abilities or at least be of some help towards it, I can understand.

"Han? Are you picking a fight with our {Black.Topaz}? Even our Kaku was killed. If you say too much I'll kill you~!?"

Anderson replied in a threatening tone almost like a yakuza.

"Ah?

Who do you think you're talking to? A coward who runs away without even getting revenge for their sub-leader being killed should just back off!"

"That's right, these ball-less bastards! If your leader has no balls then it means none of you do!"

"What was that, bitch!"

"Ah, sis! These bastards, saying whatever they want!"

Ah, really~ They're all bickering back and forth while massaging themselves like idiots.

"Shut your mouths~!! All of you underlings just be quiet! Second-rate adventurer trash who are stuck just wandering around the mere 7th floor should be quiet and listen to what master says!!"

Zulu roared. If you hadn't said it I was about to.

"Come now, Zulu. You shouldn't speak so rudely...Putting that aside, I really wish everyone would just understand already. What can you do with your bodies in that condition? We can't just wait around here for everyone to return to their best condition you know."

I attempted to speak in a soft tone almost like Koumon-sama scolding Suke-san. Kaku-san is..I guess Angela? But, he seems like he'd be bad at making speeches like that.

Personally I think there's either some room that {Lord} is hiding in beyond that door or otherwise a teleport crystal kind of like on the 8th floor which teleports to a different area on the 4th floor. Since there's no guarantee that there's only one vampire on the 4th floor it would be troublesome if any other adventurers are made into the vampire's familiars and increase their numbers. Furthermore, now that Viruhaima has been abducted there's no time to waste taking our time and letting them make even him into a vampire increasing their combat strength.

Suddenly I noticed Miduchi in a place a bit of distance away looking at me as if she wanted to say something. At the same time the orders "caution", "don't make noise", and "discuss it" appeared in my head. I guess she has something she wants to discuss without anyone else hearing it.

"Excuse me for a moment."

And I just said that before heading to where Miduchi and Angela were standing. After going to where they were Miduchi started whispering to me with an expression as if it was somewhat difficult to talk about.

"Sorry, it's started"

"Eh?"

What has?

"I, don't think I can go with you today."

What is it? She must have noticed my confused expression. Miduchi brought her mouth to my ears while making an expression as if I'm dense.

"That's why I'm saying, that. It started. It seems Maruso noticed it when she was using her special skill."

Ah, her period huh..Against vampires that is..I wonder?

Just because they suck blood I wonder if they're sensitive to the smell of blood? Like sharks.

If that's the case then it would mean our surprise attack will completely fail. Putting aside whether or not there even is a chance for a surprise attack, it means we could completely lose that possibility from the start.

"Also, this. It seems Maruso noticed it just now. At the end she managed to grab it in the confusion. Look look~"

After Miduchi took a potion out of her emergency pack she handed it over to me together with that.

A ring made of some kind of stone that's been crafted extremely thin almost like wire. It's considerably damaged and along with how thin it is unless you were paying pretty close attention you're almost certain to miss seeing it.

"Don't hurry like usual. Take your time and drink the potion."

I open the cork on the potion and slowly drink from the bottle while using {Identify} on the ring.

Invisibility Ring

Hiyashinsu Zircon

Condition: Good

Manufacture Date: 2/5/6631

Value: 1

Durability: 4

The same effect as the spell {Invisibility}(However, it includes this ring itself):

Charge Count(47/999)

The one who equips this ring can become invisible along with the ring for as many times as there are charges remaining. For every charge used the user can stay invisible for up to one hour maximum. If the user makes any sort of attack actions then regardless of the remaining time the effect will immediately be cancelled.

..Hmm, a {Magic.Item} is it.

So this is the reason Angela was aiming for it's left arm?

It's big that she was able to obtain a precious {Magic.Item} without anyone realizing it.

She must have noticed it when she landed her first attack.

So everything after that was half an act I guess?

So it wasn't unnatural to chop him up when gathering the magic stone.

Everyone, was looking away after all.

Ah!!?

That vampire we met the last time..I guess I turned it to dust along with the ring?

Well there's no point bringing it up at this point.

In any case, I offer cheers to Angela in my heart.

.....

In the end, it seems all of the remaining people are going to return carrying the corpses.

They're just a burden(they were mostly useless just before after all) by being here so that's for the best.

However, I can't afford to return.

Though I'd really like to go back once and return with Gwine and everyone else but the more time that passes the chances of Viruhaima being made into a vampire increase(though, judging by the amount of time that's already passed..), and if the vampire we just annihilated was periodically in contact with the others then things would get troublesome if they notice there's no further contact.

If I were that {Lord} then the first thing I'd think after being unable to get into contact with my underling is that they may have died. After all it's in the middle of a dungeon with adventurers wandering around.

And then if a pawn with that level of skill is taken down I'd immediately start preparing my defenses assuming my information was leaked. I'd also consider increasing my number of pawns. Considering the vampires abilities it seems possible.

In that case, in order to obtain their eyes there's choice other than to hurry and attack them as soon as possible.

After all we've already confirmed the fact that there's a being he considers {Lord} to exist here. In other words, it's very possible that just having his eyes might be insufficient.

..However, it hurts that Miduchi's period started...

If Miduchi, who's the next strongest after me, isn't around then it'll be even more dangerous. But, putting it frankly if the number of enemies with strength on the vampire class of the one just now increase it's even worse. Even newcomer vampires like Kaku and Sara were powered up considerably.

I still have close to 7,000 MP remaining. With all six of my combat slaves here there's plenty of combat strength. In addition to them Giberuti is here as well so if it's just two days or so there's no problem with supplies.

"Miduchi, follow the passage those guys used and return to the surface."

"But.."

"Even Angela was able to notice it. I'm sure the vampires will notice it as well. Relax. We'll definitely gouge out that {Lord} or whatever's eyeballs for you."

I take a storage bottle from Miduchi and carefully packed it away.

I hesitated on whether or not to leave the ring to her but in the end I decided to bring it along.

It's too scary to get naked against vampires so I don't know whether or not

I'll use it but it's still big being able to turn invisible for an hour without consuming any MP.

In the worst case it's possible to use it to run away as well.

But I think there probably won't be any chances to use it.

I walk over to where all of the {Verdure.Brothers} are making displeased faces.

"Right now we're about to start investigating that door and if there's no problem we'll be heading inside. If it's just one or two people then it's fine if they accompany us. But.."

"Got it. That you can't guarantee the safety of anyone who comes along. Jiru and I will come along from our party."

Basu said while pointing to the Wolf-race bow user Jurietta.Kamushu.

She's also the magician that managed to back us up in combat just now with the {Fire Javelin} with pretty good timing.

"Don't worry. Even if I don't return once you get back to the surface our party will properly pay the compensation."

I couldn't care less about spare change but as long as you understand then it's easier on me.

Of course, I don't mind even if we were to bring along over 10 people as well but there's no guarantee that things beyond here will still be the 4th floor.

"I understand. The two of you, how is the condition of your bodies doing?"

"There's already no problem."

"Me too."

The two of them replied immediately. Well they're still super first-rate adventurers. If there were any problems remaining I'm sure they wouldn't volunteer.

"Well then, from here on out I'll be taking command of this party. You'll properly obey my orders right?"

"Yeah."

"I don't mind."

The two of them quietly nodded.

"Then, first off one of you two please enter that door and confirm what's beyond it. After confirming things, if possible please return right away to report about it."

Just in case I tried saying that.

"Ku..Greed..you...the most dangerous job.."

Renbaru started making complaints.

"Stop it, Ren. I'll abide so there's no problem."

Basu said that restraining the members of the {Verdure.Brotherhood} who were about to have an outburst and briskly walked in front of the door.

"..Hmm, here I guess."

After saying that he put his hand on the door without hesitation and started putting strength into it.

The door started opening upwards almost like a shop curtain.

Including me, everyone was watching over the series of events with their weapons ready.

Of course, it's just in case there's any monsters lurking on the other side of the door.

However, the only thing on the other side of the door was a hallway just like everywhere else on the 4th floor.

The difference was that it was only one meter or so wide and three meters high.

Several meters in the passage turns to the left.

After all it wasn't a pitfall I guess.

If it were a pitfall then I'd have no idea how he managed to come back.

Just in case Basu tied a rope around his waist and took a step into the passage. In the worst case we can always pull the rope and safely recover him.

"..Something is here!?"

Basu said in excitement while peeking at something from further down the curve.

"Something you say, what is it?"

Jiru tried asking Basu. Certainly.

"If I don't get a bit closer then I can't..Something's flashing..Also, there's something written here. Ah, no, it's floating..waiting Hanumin? What in the world is this?"

What in the world is our line.

Since it seems like there's nothing that would have an effect on our bodies I went in to take a look.

A bit ahead of the curve inside was a dead end and above the floor there was a plate giving off a pink colored light that seemed to be floating slightly.

It reminds me of a hologram.

On the center of that plate there were words written in the Ragudariosu language.

{On Standby}

If I were to forcefully try and translate the Ragudariosu language written on the plate into 21st century Japanese then that's what it would probably mean.

I glare at the plate while thinking.

First off, what is this?

Most likely it seems to be some sort of teleportation device.

The destination is unknown.

But, there should be a method to return.

Next up, what to do about Miduchi?

Should I bring along Miduchi or the other reincarnated people to investigate that kind of suspicious place?

However, right now investigation isn't the goal.

Of course it's not rescuing Viruhaima either.

The primary objective is to gouge out the eyeballs of a {Vampire Lord}.

Investigating things can be done afterwards.

It's unknown whether there's an a single or multiple opponents believed to be waiting beyond there but there's almost a 100% chance that vampires are included in them.

If were to question whether it's possible to negotiate with those individuals then I think it's probably impossible.

If someone were to ask you for your eyeballs there's no one who would say, "here you go".

Then, in that case there's definitely going to be a battle.

It's fine to carefully take our time investigating things after that.

I forcefully restrain my rapidly beating heart.

I returned from the passage and stood in front of everyone before starting to talk.

"We're about to go further inside to take a look. I intend on returning once within five minutes but if five minutes passes and no one returns then with Anderson-san as the leader, everyone please depart for the teleport crystal at the center of the 4th floor. Just in case from our party we'll send along Miduchi as an escort."

And then I immediately ordered Zulu.

"Zulu.

Stand on top of that flashing floor. I think it'll probably teleport you to somewhere. After you teleport if there's nothing you need to battle then just take a glance around before coming back as fast as possible. Most likely if you take one step forward from where you're standing then take a step back to where you were I think you should be able to return. If you end up having to fight something then get as far away as possible and endure it for one minute. If you don't return within 30 seconds then we'll all follow after you inside."

Zulu

immediately followed my order and disappeared further inside the passage. If it's the same as the teleport crystals then you won't know where you'll be teleported to but my intuition is telling me that this goes back and forth between a specific location. If that wasn't the case then the fact that the vampire was using it in the first place is too unnatural.

While watching over from the back, Zulu took a step onto the flashing plate before turning into a powder of light and disappearing. It's completely the same as the teleport crystals.

Different from the teleport crystals the flashing plate didn't lose its radiance shortly after being used.

And then in less than 10 seconds Zulu was reformed from beads of light and returned.

"Master, just as expected beyond here is somewhere in the dungeon. It was some kind of place made of stone that I've never seen before. I think that was different from the 3rd floor as well. Also, the light only seemed to be coming from the ceiling but I think it was brighter than usual."

It seems the location Zulu teleported into was a small room five meters in every direction. There was something like a door that was left open and after taking a step forward shortly after teleport the floor regained it's pink colored radiance in the shape of the flashing plate. Beyond the opened door appeared to be made of the same kind of stone as the room and spread out like a hallway.

"Alright, let's go in order.

First off is Jesu, then Henry, Rubi, Mekku, Angela, and Zulu. After teleport in remain quiet and don't leave the room. Next I'll go. After that Basu-san and Jiru-san. If there's no problem to the end then Giberuti. If there's no problems after Giberuti finishes teleporting inside then I'll send someone back once."

.....

Just as Zulu reported the place we teleported into was an empty storage like room made of stone.

Even if I say it was made of stone it's certainly different from the 3rd floor and almost feels like unfaced concrete. There's dust and such covering the walls so I can't really tell for sure. Then the only light appears to be coming from the ceiling but it's true it seems to be pretty bright. It falls behind the spell {Light} but even then it's considerably brighter than other places in the dungeon. Hn~ it almost feels like being in the hall of a hospital or subterranean tunnel lit up by a weak fluorescent light.

After waiting for Giberuti to teleport in I then sent Jesu back once. The details of the message were "No problem. We'll start exploring so everyone else start returning".

While

waiting for Jesu to return I tried going into the hallway outside of the room. The width of the hall is about four meters. I realized it after taking a step into the hall but I feel like the floor of the hall is smooth almost like concrete as well. The borders of the floor, walls, and ceiling all seem to be at a perfect 90 degree angle as well. I can't help but think that it was artificially made.

On the floor there's footprints of bare feet that come and go, and after coming out of the room they continue to the left.

I looked around both sides but couldn't find any other footprints.

However, looking down the left side and it seems to loosely curve to the right. It seems like the right side curves in the same way to the left. It's something we can tell because the light is brighter than other places in the dungeon.

This hallway seems to be in the shape of a considerably large arc. It might be possible it's a large arc that goes around the outer circumference of the dungeon or something close to that.

"How is it?"

Basu asked Jiru. Probably confirming if she can sense anything with {Super Sense of Smell}. Ah, come to think of it, I wonder if Jiru noticed Miduchi's period started? Even if she did notice she must have ignored it.

"..It's hard to tell..I don't think there's any particularly strange odors."

Hmm, even though Viruhaima passed through, it's made of stone after all, as expected it doesn't seem to leave any odors behind...

In any case, it's not like we have any other clues so we decided to start off by following the footprints.

Though normally we should be proceeding carefully while on alert for traps but there's no particular disturbance in the pace of the bare footprints. I stopped at just saying "be careful of traps" to Zulu and Henry who are standing at the lead before I periodically used spells to detect traps.

Our movement speed is about 20~30 meters per minute.

Furthermore, there were a bunch of empty storage like rooms similar to the one we teleported into all along the left wall as we were moving but we couldn't find anything like a flashing plate on the floor in any of them.

Around when we had proceeded for about 10 minutes?

We arrived at a place that seemed to have something like a board stuck to the right wall.

If you're wondering how we could tell then it's because on just a square portion of that wall on the right side there was less dust than the surrounding walls.

There was nothing below it.

"It's almost like the place where you return from the 1st floor at."

Basu whispered to himself.

Hearing that it certainly does seem to be the case.

Though there's only rooms on the left side of the hallway but if there were rooms on both sides it's true it would look just like the first room you enter at the entrance of the dungeon.

Though the light isn't from torches.

I quietly gave out a signal and entered a random room.

"Try not to talk as much as possible. In the hallway sound might echo pretty far."

After I made a complaint my slaves all looked at Basu as if to blame him for idle talk.

But, I can understand the feeling of wanting to say something.

I was about to say something myself.

"Yeah, I guess so. My bad."

It seems Basu was aware of it himself.

He honestly admit his mistake.

It's fine as long as you understand.

There's still nothing at all in the hallway.

Not a single trap or monster is coming out.

.....

It's already been over one hour..No, I think we've walked for close to an hour and a half.

The hallway still appears to be the same as usual.

However, a change finally appeared.

Ahead of the right curve at the point which we can barely see the light seems to be a bit stronger.

Chapter 312 : The Un-Dead 5

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 15

Just now was the 40th is it...

Of course, I'm talking about the number of small storage-like rooms along the left side of the hallway.

There's a small room every 50 or 60 meters.

Just in case I had them write a large "one" in ink on the floor and wall of the entrance to the small room we came out from so we won't miss it on our way back.

As far as I can tell from looking ahead this seems to be the end of the small rooms.

We walk into that last small room.

It's still the same tasteless room with nothing but dust and dirt.

We haven't discovered anything recent enough to consider them footprints except for the ones from the first room.

"It seems there won't be anymore rooms ahead. I'd say there's about 300 meters until we reach the area where that light gets brighter. I'm thinking of heading over there. Does anyone have any opinions?"

It seems neither Basu nor Jiru have anything to add.

"It seems there's not much traffic..."

Henry whispered while looking at the footprints leading along the right hall.

"I guess so. But, there's quite a few footprints nonetheless. Just from a glance I wouldn't say every week but they're probably making a round trip at least once a month.."

Basu replied after observing the footprints in the hallway up until here. True, it's just as he says.

There's several new footprints on top of the old footprints and even more new footprints on top of those.

Judging from the layers of dust covering them the history of these footprints should go beyond just the last 100 years or so.

It looks like this hallway might have existed for either several hundred years or maybe even several thousands of years.

In that case there must have been a number of round trips made before the birth(?) of even that vampire.

No problem.

Let's head further down the hallway.

.....

Further down the hall it suddenly turned once to the right at a right angle and then several meters further turned again to the left at a right angle.

And then a few meters ahead of that continued into a small room.

It's a slightly twisted circular room that's about seven or eight meters in diameter.

When we noticed the room I was wondering if the ceiling would rise as well?

but that wasn't the case.

The height of the ceiling is the same as the first small room we teleported into and the hallway we've walked up until now, 3.5 meters or so.

On the opposite side from where we entered there's another exit that continues into a hall and then on the right wall there's one more similar exit.

Also, there were monsters in the room.

One of the boss types from the rooms on the 4th and 5th floors, ghouls.

There were 8 of them.

All of their levels were over 10 so taking that into consideration they're way higher than just the 4th or 5th floors.

They seemed pretty strong.

After using {Identify} to check it seems that they don't have the usual goblin or ork as their base as well. Hyumu, elf, dwarf, gnome, the races of all the ghouls were pretty mixed up.

But, different from the 4th floor the humidity isn't all that high so most of them are in relatively good condition and none of their faces are collapsing.

I don't know if that's the reason why but all of them still have their unique names remaining.

But well, something like this still just takes a single spell of freezing.

Normally I freeze the entire lower bodies of ghouls so they don't tear off their own legs to start moving around but trying to form the ice so we can climb on top of it is a pain and in the first place it takes a decent amount of time for them to tear off their own legs.

If we all attack them at once then just freezing up to their knees with level 5 fire and water magic is plenty.

I had the slaves attack them and finished them off all at once.

It seems Basu and Jiru aren't very surprised by my magic anymore.

"Leave the magic stones for later. Let's hurry ahead."

After just confirming that the ghouls are completely dead and won't revive I started walking down the hallway on the right.

Judging from a quick look the hallway in front of us is the same as the hallway we've come down until now and should bend at the same times as when we first came out of the room. If I were to say both sides are mirrored with the room at the center would it make more sense? Also, we found a different set of old footprints from the ones we were following but all of them seem to continue down the hallway on the right.

The hallway on the right continues straight ahead.

However, about 100 meters ahead it splits up two directions like a T.

The footprints are still remaining so if we go that far we should be able to tell which direction to go down.

Blame yourselves for being too careless and not cleaning up the dust. Lord-san yo~

After advancing up to the T split and just as we expected the footprints all go back and forth down the left side of the hall.

There's no footprints that continue down the right side at all.

Ah, I forgot to use trap detection spells from the last room up until here.

There weren't any traps up until here but there's no way of telling beyond this so I need to remember to use them.

..Nn, there doesn't seem to be any as far as I can see.

With Henry and Mekku at the lead we continue down the hall following the footprints again.

.....

The hall we were proceeding down bent to the right and just as Mekku was peeking around the corner while sticking to the right side of the wall I remembered that Henry and Rubi were both about to level up. Angela's done quite a bit of damage to a number of powerful enemies lately as well so she should have leveled up too. I guess I'll confirm it.

I use {Identify} vision.

But, when I went to take a look at the back of Henry's head I noticed it.

Roughly 10 meters ahead of where I'm standing, there's a door-shaped board where the brightness of identify vision increases along the wall that bends to the right.

The door extends from the floor to the ceiling and is about 2 meters wide or so.

I almost spontaneously flinched.

After that I tried checking all of our surroundings and there was a similar wall on the left side with a door that I could identify.

This is bad.

I turned around to look in the direction we came from and there's several similar doors along the hallway.

Additionally there was one along the wall right beside me.

However, they don't seem to be the type of doors that open in a direction for a surprise attack.

In the first place they look like they're completely fused with the surrounding wall so it's difficult to even tell them apart, or rather more or less impossible.

Other than with {Identify} that is.

I quietly gave out a sign and ordered everyone to standby in place without advancing forward.

I pretend as if I'm thinking while carefully observing the door that was beside me.

I put the back of my arm against the wall and then put my hand against my forehead.

Then I tried groaning a bit.

Just as I thought if I don't use identify I can't tell it apart from the surrounding walls.

Furthermore, I can't even find a gap with the naked eye.

For the time being I decided to try identifying it.

Sliding Door

Condition: Deterioration(Aging)

Manufacture Date: -/-/-

Value: -

Durability: 854692435

Ability: -

Effect: Through the sliding of the entire body it's possible for it to arbitrarily block or release the entrance between two rooms.

Well the Condition makes sense and the Durability is abnormally high but there's nothing unusual other than the obvious under the effect. With this much durability even I would have trouble breaking through it with my attack spells.

In theory it's not as if I can't break it, but rather, it's basically the same as the dungeon walls.

Putting that aside and I guess it was a sliding door instead of a hinged door. Incidentally if it were a hinged door it would say "revolves around a single point to" in the effect text.

However, even putting aside the fact that it's missing various information it's still unnatural.

Prior to that if it's really a sliding door then it would need some place for it to slide into. It's impossible for it to be fused together with the entire wall itself like this. It's impossible to open unless it slides further inside or to the sides. Unless it's something that comes straight from the world of 2D.

Even if I check the floor there's nothing strange in the volume of the dust in the hallway so if it were to pull back inside and then rise to one of the sides..ah, I guess it's possible for it to slide up and down?

Hmmm...

No matter how much I look at it I can't tell where the boundary between the door and the wall is.

Even when I try touching it I can't feel any difference.

It would be too unnatural to take off my glove so I didn't go that far though.

This is something necessary to investigate.

Later though.

It's a bit strange to be facing the opposite wall for too long so I decided to continue advancing.

.....

Just like this we continued walking for a considerable amount of time.

Jiru is drawing a rough map but everyone's long since realized it.

This isn't the 4th floor.

The 4th floor doesn't have this much extra space.

Everyone's remaining quiet but I(probably, Zulu and Angela as well) am sure of it.

This is either the 12th or 13th floor.

Along the way we ran into two more spacious rooms like the one with ghouls.

One of them had three {Wights}, which were kind of like ghouls or zombies but covered in a yellowish light, though I looked at them with {Identify} from quite a bit of distance away. One of their special skills was {Energy.Drain} and they seemed pretty dangerous so I shot about 10 {Fire Balls} with extra mana added from the place I used identify at and wiped them out.

My experience points increased by over 200,000 and I leveled up. I regretted it a bit if I had known they'd increase this much I would have frozen them in ice and let my combat slaves finish them off. It seems you can't injure them without using magic weapons but they're undead monsters so I think {Grave.Strike} would have taken effect.

In the other room there was a single monster called a {Specter} which had a name like some rampaging bandit from years past. But, it was half-transparent almost like a ghost so I didn't think freezing it would work and ended up just trying to kill it by rapid-firing magic again, though it was pretty fast. In a hurry I poured 500 MP into a super powered {Flame Thrower} and roasted it.

It had {Energy.Drain} as well so it's dangerous right. Unexpectedly this fellow gave 180,000 experience points for just it alone. I felt like it was saying something as well but it's voice was too quiet, it felt kind of like "who the hell are you" so it might have been something like a gatekeeper to where that {Lord} or whatever is holed up inside.

Incidentally this ghost impertinently used magic and when I first used {Flame Thrower} it tried to block it with {Anti-Magic Field}. But, it only had about 400 MP so in the end my spell won over it and it died with a cry like "gya~~". It was pretty loud in the end.

Just this guy dropped three separate magic stones so(it didn't leave a corpse) I picked them up as some bonus income. Ah, monsters that drop multiple magic stones are already well known. Though this is might first time seeing once, dragons and other giant monster types are examples of ones that do.

I've said it before so you still remember right? The size wasn't anything great but the color was beyond white and close to perfectly transparent and beautiful. When I used {Identify} each of them had a value a bit over 1,000,000. Uhho~ just this is worth over 20,000,000.

Basu and Jiru are looking pretty jealous but I don't mind it at all.

Furthermore there was a mountain of dirty trash or dust in a corner of this room.

While I was identifying the magic stones I ordered Jesu to investigate but it seems it was just a pile of some kind of small dirty board so after all it was trash.

There's no time to be digging through trash so I put off investigating things for later.

I've found doors all over the place but for the time being I've decided not to bother with them so we're hurrying ahead.
For now I still haven't found any traps.

.....

And then I regretted hurrying ahead.

It happened after turning at a certain corner and proceeding for a short while.

"Bzzt..zaza...tsugudafu..above de.missu...mukaru.meinri..zaza...is..distance biku recognition baru to group hivu plate desshi...sai..place..removal that's why.fiku..inside ni rogu.hi sa ne kuryugu..mai tsu mimu"

Huh?

It sounds like the ancient Ragudariosu language.

I was unnerved by the sudden broken announcement as if it was coming from a speaker on the verge of breaking and was unable to decipher the meaning of what it said.

We all stopped at once and started concentrating on our surroundings to determine where the announce just now came from but no one could find anything suspicious.

However, I was somehow able to figure out the meaning of what it said.

"Bzzt..zaza...(Warning)..(forbidden from proceeding beyond this point)..zaza..(qualification holders)..(immediately present your identification)..(otherwise you will be removed as dangerous individuals)..(please depart within 3 seconds)..3{Three}.."

It's probably like this.

"2{Two}"

"GO back!!"

I turned around to the right.

"1{One}"

Everyone obeyed my warning in a hurry.
However..!

"0{Zero}"

However, Henry who was walking at the front was hit by an invisible attack and collapsed!

Mekku who approached to save him ended up taking damage in the same way and fell on the spot.

It must have been because they were one corner ahead of from where we were walking in the back.

Zulu and Angela dragged them along in a panic and returned back to the corner of the hall.

And then by the time we went around the corner of the hall the announcement stopped.

"Where were you hit!!?"

I asked Henry and Mekku who were being dragged by Zulu and Angela.

"Ggu. M..My leg."

"M..Me too."

It seems there's no danger to their lives. I was a bit relieved.

"I'll heal you now! Do you know what you were hit by!!?"

There was a wound almost like they were hit by a gun on both of their thighs. A hole that's several mm in diameter and has burn marks went through their tough leather pants and a bit of blood is coming out.

The wound goes through from the back to the front and there's only a small hole where it seems to have entered.

The starting point of the wound almost looks like it was burnt and that also acted to stop the bleeding.

This..isn't a gun.

Is it a spell?

But, I don't know of any spell like this.

In any case, right now I need to heal them up.
I used {Cure All} on them consecutively.

Both of them had a single wound on their right legs.

"I..I don't know. Just as I turned around in order to retreat it suddenly.."

"I don't know either. I'm very sorry, master."

After I finished healing them and was looking around everyone was standing on edge while scanning the surroundings.

Other than that there wasn't anything particularly unusual.

There's no more attacks.

"Mekku, lend me your sword. No, just the scabbard is fine."

Makku took the scabbard off his sword band and handed it to me.

After receiving it I returned to the edge of the hall and slowly stuck just the scabbard out beyond the corner.

Nothing happened.

I stuck it out even further and waved it around.

Still nothing happened.

Hm~mm...

Spontaneously with my left hand..scary~

Should I use my combat slaves here..No, I should do it myself.

Even if my fingers are blown off I can heal it.

Ah, it would be unpleasant if my gauntlet is broken.

Thinking that I took the gauntlet off my left hand and it was just as I was about to take off my glove.

"Master, that's dangerous! Please stop!"

Zulu stopped me.

"If you need a decoy leave it to me!"

Angela started advancing.

..I guess leaving it to these two is fine as well?

No, that's no good.

If it's me I can use {Anti-Magic Field} in an instant.

In the first place I was just planning to stick my left hand out while using {Anti-Magic Field}.

Or at least that was what I was thinking but I also thought it wouldn't attack right away even if I showed my hands, legs, or entire body.

When it attacked just now it was after something like a warning announcement happened and that was after advancing about 10 meters past that corner.

The details of the announcement was that if you approach within a fixed distance it'll drive you away.

Adding to that the attack seemed to be aimed at the legs and there's no major bleeding from the injuries so even if you were to leave it alone you wouldn't die right away.

In other words, if you just approach that close it won't try to kill you.

"No. I'll go. Give me the rope"

I tie the rope around my waist and if anything happens I'll have them pull it to bring me back right away.

If it aims for and shoots the rope that's the end but it still better than nothing.

First I covered my left hand in an {Anti-Magic Field} and stuck it out just a bit. Several tens of seconds passed as I waved my hand up and down but nothing happened.

I tried stretching my hand out a bit further and did the same thing again.
Even then nothing happened.

I go all out and expose my entire body.
Nothing happened.

Just as expected.

I returned once and put my glove and gauntlet back on.
I went back out from the corner to the right and showed myself again. This time without an {Anti-Magic Field}.

And then I used the spells {Find.Trap}, {Detect.Snare}, and {Detect.Pitfall}.

Found it!

Roughly 150 meters ahead I can feel traps set on both sides around the floor where the hallway bends to the left!

It's too far so I can't really tell but..that shape is..!

Cannon!?

No, a gun!?

Aa.De.Ra~.Ku-Type 3

"Wha!!?"

I reflexively let out my voice.

Ah the "Aa.De.Ra~.Ku" is lined up with the {Common.Letter} characters of the Ragudariosu language so it's probably some kind of model number.

I froze for a moment with my eyes opened wide but immediately remembered to slam some attack spells into it.

{Fire Cannon}!

One more!

{Ice Cannon}!

I focused solely on rapid-fire without adding the missile effect to them.

Also, in reaction to the dangerous sounding explanation about it being a heat ray gun {blaster} I used two different types of attacks just in case.

The {Sentry.Gun} was effortlessly destroyed by my spells without a chance to intercept them.

It seems that sensor or whatever doesn't react to spells.

"Bzzt..who is it, out there? Is it you again Wazumun? I always say not to forget your identification card when you're carrying prey in..Even though you had it just before..This is why barbarians are..I'll be there in a moment so wait there..Bzzt"

There was announcement.

But, it wasn't a recording or synthesized voice but a natural voice.

However, what in the world was with the content just now!?

On my right, everyone is dumbfounded in the shadow of the hall.
Basu and Jiru seem to be speechless for a variety of reasons.
It must be the first time they've seen attack spells that flashy.

"I've removed the trap. Let's go! Hurry!"

After saying that I took my bayonet from Zulu who recovered first and then ran off.

I run while calling out to my slaves and cast the spell {Grave.Strike} on their weapons.

I cast it on Basu and Jiru's swords as well.

I don't know if the owner of that voice is that {Lord} or whatever but it should be moving to somewhere from where it just was.

We pass by the remains of the {Sentry.Gun} I destroyed.

Up until here just in case I confirmed if there was anything like a sensor but unfortunately I wasn't able to find anything at all.

It must be either very well hidden or inside of the walls of the hallway.

Right after the remains the hallway turned to the left again with a 90 degree angle.

Several meters beyond that is..a dead end!

However, my {Identify} vision shows that the wall of that dead end is a door.

There should be a switch for opening and closing it somewhere. No, it would be strange if there wasn't one.

It was when I approached to investigate it, the door gave off sounds like, "Psshhh..ga~ ga~" as it slowly started to sink into the floor.

An automatic door?

And then further inside of the automatic door is probably the owner of the voice from the announcement just now.

The moment I saw what seemed to be the top of someone's head I used {Identify}.

On the other side of the automatic door that's descending at an almost irritating speed what appeared before my eyes after using {Identify} on just the top of his head was a shocking status window.

Rather than that what caught my attention were the words {True Ancestor Lord}.

As well as {Immortal}.

And the characters mixed in there that were red like blood.

Above all else his experience point field had disappeared just like Kaku and Sara as well.

I won't let him make a single move! First move wins!

Chapter 313 : The Un-Dead 6

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 15

I wanted to use the {resist} spells but I was at my limit just using them on myself.

Sorry about that.

The automatic door was descending at the extremely slow speed of 5 cm per second or so.

It seems to be breaking down somewhere from age.

It's pretty shaky.

The moment I identified the top of his head I quickly took my left hand off my bayonet and started making a {Delayed Blast Fire Ball} with 10 times the power.

The delay timer is set to 2 seconds.

At the same time I gave out the order to everyone for them to crouch down and maintain a low posture.

Basu and Jiru were one breath later than the others but they still crouched down right away.

"..Really, even though it's troublesome for me to have to cut the security every single time.."

I can hear the grumbling voice of an older man complaining from the other side of the door.

It seems he's still misunderstanding.

Judging from the details of his announcement just now, I guess from inside he can only determine that the "defense system activated"?

Either

there's nothing like observation equipment or a camera setup in the hallway where the sentry gun was or I guess even if there originally was they've already broken down from aging.

If that's not the case then our identities should have been exposed the moment the defense system activated.

Also, the activation switch for the security system is definitely near this door, most likely on the other side of it.

Since he probably came over to hit the switch and opened the door in addition to that.

His kindness towards his subordinate(?) ended up backfiring on him.

"Wazumun. Either you've got some bad taste or you're pretty patient..this light..take off the preys equipment before you.."

It seems he can feel the light coming from a weapon with {Grave.Strike} cast on it.

How carefree~

Although, I don't know if it's several hundred or several thousand years but I'm sure no one other than his subordinates has made it this far.

It's not unreasonable for him to misunderstand and be a bit careless.

I just need to take advantage of that.

The mana continues to gather in my hand and becomes a crystal almost like diamond a bit smaller than a fist.

It's done.

The moment this thing explodes it'll turn into a giant {Fire Ball} with a diameter of 50 cm.

It'll then send countless burning stones flying in every direction.

Whether it was faster that the other side noticed me or faster that I threw my grenade to the other side of the door like "Enjoy~" Of course the moment I threw it in I didn't forget to use {Anti-Magic Field} and create a defensive wall.

"Wha!!?"

He raises his voice in shock.

Well, I'm sure.

It seemed like he wasn't expecting an attack after all.

Soon after a large explosion echoed out and a few burning stones flew through the half open door before bouncing off the ceiling and flying over here.

I had expected it but this door is pretty sturdy.

Soon after the stones were offset by my spell I stood up, quietly walked over to the door and put my left hand on the top of it, then jumped over into the room.

Of course I'm still maintaining {Anti-Magic Field} all the while.

On the other side of the door a hallway continues for roughly 30 meters and beyond that seems to be another T shaped split.
I guess this hall is the base of the T.

Along the wall just before the end of the T shaped hall.

I can see the shadow of a person that must have been blown away.

His clothes are completely in tatters though rather than saying they were blown away by the {Fire Ball} they seem to have originally been pretty worn out.

I can see quite a bit of gray hair growing out of his lowered head but considering how he was exposed to the {Fire Ball} it's probably been quite a while since it was taken care of either way.

With his back to the wall he has his arms crossed in front of his face as he takes a defensive stance.

Including his arms there's stones embedded into his entire body almost like bullets as smoke rises from them.

He seems to have been blown away but it doesn't seem that he was smashed into the wall.

I was able to guess after seeing the top of his head from the other side of the door but he's probably about 20 cm shorter than I am.

I can't really tell his physique because of the worn out clothes but judging from his forearms he doesn't exactly seem to be like a dead tree.

HP: 0+367(498) MP: 508+50(558)

But I'm surprised.

Even though he took a direct hit from a {Delayed Blast Fire Ball} with 10 times the power he still isn't dead!

Though he's taken some serious damage.

He quickly lowered his crossed arms to their original position then raised his head to look over here.

Below his hair was the wrinkled face of an old man just as could be imagined from his voice and his eyes are giving off an evil red light.

Honestly speaking there's a variety of things I'd like to try asking him about but right now there's more important things I need to think about than conversation.

In the first place I'm sure anyone would be pretty pissed at someone who suddenly hit them with an attack spell when they were off guard.

I can hear the sound of several people jump through the door behind me.

The wrinkled old man's face twisted into a sneer.

I understand everything. These people are unexpected intruders.
Or at least that's sort of expression he made as he stretched his hand out.

"It's coming!!"

I gave out a warning and continued maintaining my {Anti-Magic Field} while charging forward.

Now, come!

I'll take on all of your attack spells!

The old man made a slightly surprised expression seeing me run over while maintaining my spell but soon after electricity was fired from his hand.
It's a narrow hallway so it's probably {Chain Lightning}.

The
electricity gave off a crackling noise as it cut through the air and was received by my {Anti-Magic Field} before disappearing with a small discharge.

Even though his own attack spell was erased the old man just made a slightly impressed expression.
Without panicking he fired off another attack spell.

A giant stone spear was fired from the old man's hand.

This is, {Stone Cannon}!?

But, if it's just this level then I'll you I can take it even easier than the {Chain Lightning}!

I adjust the position of my {Anti-Magic Field} that's floating in front of my left hand and took the hit.

The head of the stone spear gave off purple flashes off light as it was swallowed by my {Anti-Magic Field}.

During that time the distance between the {Vampire Lord} and I continued to shorten.

Now~ what do you plan to do next?

No matter what spell you use I'll take them all.

And, suddenly the vampire lord jumped to the side and disappeared.

Wind Magic is it?

I was able to kill off a larger portion of the wind but I can't erase the air that was pushed by the air produced from wind magic with {Anti-Magic Field}.

The speed I was running at was slowed down by a bit.

From where I'm looking the old man vampire lord took off running to the left.

Further down the T shaped hall, it seems the left side leads into a room while the right side leads into a dead end about 10 meters ahead. Though it might not be a dead end but just a closed door.

Down the hall near the entrance to the room the vampire was bent over with his left hand to the ground as he knocked on a portion of the wall with his right hand.

Behind me I can hear the same sound as when the door opened just before.

"You all, protect me! Earn me some time!"

The old man ordered someone before using wind magic once more and retreated further into the room.

I guess he intends to come back when he's ready.

In that case.

While looking over my shoulder I cancel my {Anti-Magic Field}.

Right after I cast the spell {Acid Cloud} with 20 times the mana in front of the door that started to open.

Down the hall is filled with 5 meters of yellow gas.

I still don't know what was hiding behind that door but it would be good if this can slow it down for a bit...

Even if they're vampires there's no way they can pass through highly corrosive acid gas without taking any damage right?

"I'm leaving the rear to you! Team up and take out everyone that comes out!!"

Now, the real thing starts here!

Those eyeballs, I've already got a reservation on them!

.....

The room was 20 meters or so wide and about 50 meters long I guess?

Most likely it's the vampire lords living room.

Chairs made of bones and skin.

What seems to be lighting magic tools are embedded all over the floor so it's pretty bright.

Even though the hallway was bright from just the ceiling, it seems this room has magic tools embedded at fixed intervals.

With just the light coming from below these vampires have bad taste.

Inside of this room I'm engaged in life or death combat.

Both of us are using wind magic to instantaneously move at high speeds while firing off attack spells with the missile effect added to them almost like throwing knives.

However, it's absurd to do that with my normal living body, there's no way for me to keep it up.

Now I'm standing in a place about 5 meters from the entrance of the room where there's no furniture as I deploy an {Anti-Magic Field} in front of my left hand and wait for the vampire lord to run out of MP, that sort of conservative fight.

The vampire lord was making light of me with movements and stamina that are unimaginable from his appearance..and seems to intend on continuing?

No, that's wrong.

The expression on his face is impatience.

HP: 0+997(498) MP: 164+50(558)

...

.....

Several minutes prior, just as I was charging into this room following after the vampire lord as it escaped.

From behind I heard Zulu's shouting voice say, "Basu, Maruso, and Mekku you all act to split them up!! Advance! Stay on the defensive and don't let them reach master! Henry and I will block them here! Rubi, Jesu calm down!?" It seems Zulu is skillfully taking command disregarding Basu and Jiru. At the same time I can hear things like, "Come on!! " and "Slow them down! Aim for the legs! I can't hit!" and such but I have no leeway to mind it.

The reason being that my opponent isn't just the vampire lord that retreated into the room but there's three others as well.

The three people in the room that seem to be vampires(they have red eyes and fangs) don't seem to fall behind the vampire we just killed on the 4th floor several hours ago. Furthermore all of them are geared up.

One of them seems to be a middle aged Hyumu woman.

She's wearing the remains of leather armor that's so damaged it normally wouldn't be useful at all and has a round shield and long sword in her hands.

The next one seems to be a male tiger-race in his late 20s or so.

Just the same as the woman, he's wearing a set of banded mail that was probably pretty high quality at one point but is now completely damaged, as well as holding an ellipsoid shield in one hand and a large sword in the other.

And then the last one. Wearing a set of splint mail armor that could be considered a wazamono with a long sword specially made from Fuggusu sword shop in his right hand and a custom made spiked buckler with it's surface dyed in a brilliant emerald green color in his left hand, it's a middle aged elf. Miduchi called it a "Rikugan Shield" or something like that. With this it's been confirmed my bonus is up in flames.

These three are standing at the front showing a frightening level of cooperation as they earn time for the vampire lord to use some kind of spell to heal his wounds. Since the vampire lord is an undead he doesn't seem to be using healing spells but some other kind of spell to heal them but he doesn't seem to be used to it so it's taking him some time.

Properly practice your recovery spells.
Though I'm sure he's never actually been injured before now.

At first I was able to freeze both Viruhaima and the middle aged woman with good timing.

During that time I stabbed the tiger-man twice with ym bayonet as well as landing one hit with {Stone Bolt} and was fortunate enough to deal quite a bit of damage.

I ended up taking a single good hit as well and while thanks to my armor I wasn't directly injured, the force of the impact broke a couple of my ribs on top of sending me flying into the entrance wall. Obviously I immediately healed it and erased the damage though.

In any case, while I was playing with the tiger-man like that either Viruhaima or the woman used {Anti-Magic Field} to erase the ice. Since it would probably take quite a bit of time for Viruhaima to concentrate in order to use {Anti-Magic Field} it was probably the woman.

Though I don't have any time to use identify so I can't tell.

Seeing that I panicked for just a moment(they used {Anti-Magic Field} in less than 20 seconds or so) but on the contrary since I was able to cool my head I was able to calmly use spells.

When the tiger-man started swinging his sword down towards me I used {Disintegrate}.

Of course, against the sword that is.

These fellows aren't vampire lords so it would have been fine to just quickly use {Disintegrate} and turn them to dust but as expected the amount of MP required to change an entire person into dust is too huge.

The tiger-man had the sword he was swinging disintegrated and then tripped over after making an empty swing in a flashy way.

I guess even for a vampire he couldn't gain his balance right away after something unexpected happened.

At that moment I used the spell {Vacuum Blade} and sent it flying towards the back of his neck.

The tiger-man's head was sent rolling on the ground without any blood spraying out.

As expected it seems even undead can't survive with their heads cut off.

What was it again?

Miduchi mentioned it.

Ah, Durahan or something like that.

If they aren't one of those then they'll die I guess.

After facing the woman who erased my ice and Viruhaima I fired off a {Flame.Strike} to keep them in check.

It seems Viruhaima opened his eyes in shock for a short moment but soon after laughed in scorn as he brought up his shield to deflect the baseball sized {Fire Ball}.

However, in a hurry the woman blocked all three of the shots flying at her with her shield and body. Since she's an undead she obviously should have taken quite a bit more damage than normal.

Did she not want her masters bedroom to be set on fire?
Or does she want to commit suicide?

"That's dangerous! Put it out!"

The woman ordered Viruhaima with a strong tone of voice.
After nodding once Viruhaima stopped moving towards me and started concentrating once again.
As if spells from someone of your level could offset my spells!

In that case I'll just fire countless more.

{Flame.Strike}!

This time the woman didn't try to use her body to block them but jumped over the fire balls and started coming at me from head on.

I guess it's Viruhaima's turn to sacrifice his body?

Now then, this woman, how should I cook her up?
Since she's not the naked vampire she shouldn't use paralysis or whatever else for as long as she's using the sword.
Though her skill with the sword itself should be quite superior just like the tiger-man vampire thanks to the increases in their physical abilities but against a weakened vampire that's taken two hits from small fire balls...

In that case!

After firing off the spell I immediately went on guard with my bayonet and charged towards the woman.
At the same time I used {Iron Skin}, {Stone Skin}, and {Bark Skin} one after another.

My body is covered in the blue light from the spells.

On top of that I twisted my body so that her long sword would hit my shoulder guard in order to reduce the damage and then from a close distance that can't be dodged shot 8 {Fire Javelins} straight through her.

Huh?
It didn't hurt as much as I thought it would.
Or rather, I don't feel like I took any damage at all.
This, could it be pretty useful?

I brought my bayonet covered in sunlight up as I sliced the woman from below her jaw and cut her face in half as I thought it was strange and looked behind her.

Why? Because I couldn't hear the sound of my {Flame.Strike} exploding.

I was so surprised I thought I might fall over but Viruhaima was deploying the purple colored power field that I'm used to seeing. How in the world is this possible!? That old man, he was able to deploy an {Anti-Magic Field} this fast? Was it the old man who erased the ice just before?

"Fushi~!! Feels good..Greed, you seem useful, come over to this side!"

Viruhaima said that while laughing to himself.

You sure are taking it easy even though I just defeated your senior.

Also, he seems to have lost his human emotions.

Chapter 314 : The Un-Dead 7

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 15

Though I'm sure he didn't willingly become like that I have no intention of listening seriously to what someone who's given up their humanity and fallen to being an undead says. Even more so we're in the middle of combat right now.

I silently brought up my bayonet and face off against Viruhaima.

It'll be bad if I don't do something about this guy now while the vampire lord is still recovering.

A {Stone Bolt Missile} firing from my forehead was the signal for the start of the battle.

I control the {Stone Bolt} while charging towards Viruhaima.

"Fushi~~~~!!"

Viruhaima spit out air almost as if raising his fighting spirit as he skillfully deflected my stone arrow with his small buckler.

Aiming for that opening I thrust forward with my bayonet which was brushed away by his long sword, expecting that I fired off one more {Stone Bolt} and landed a hit on his side through the gaps in his armor.

"Gu..."

For an instant, Viruhaima's movement slowed down as if he couldn't breathe.

However, pretending as if he couldn't breathe was just a feint.

This guy, he intentionally left an opening on his side!

As he brought his blade back down he came to cut at me.

I twisted my bayonet around and swiped away the long sword with the gunstock then took a bit of distance.

Undead don't breathe after all.

Even I had already seen through this far.

However, I've figured it out with that.

Originally Viruhaima's close combat strength is below mine. Or at least I think so.

But, through being made into a vampire or familiar he's powered up and at the very least seems equal to me.

His reaction speed and the speed which he cuts in are strengthened to a completely different level.

It might be even higher than that fellow from the 4th floor...

If he were to get naked I feel like he might even be able to display better movements than him.

I guess it's still better that he's wearing heavy armor and swinging a sword around?

"Gre~~ed~ Aren't~~ you~~strong~ It's quite something to be able to go that far with a living body~ right~ think it over again~"

He sure seems easygoing...

Viruhaima exaggerates with an easygoing smile about four meters away.

Even though I'm feeling uneasy not knowing when the vampire lord might return to battle.

I still have over 4,000 MP remaining.

Though I can't tell exactly how much without using identify, but around there. Most likely this guys mana has increased as well but it's minuscule compared to me and since he just used {Anti-Magic Field} it's probably decreased by quite a bit.

I guess that means the vampire lord can make someone into a vampire in one go.

In any case, I should finish this match off before he completely gets used to the body of a vampire.

He was still managing until just now but things won't be so simple this time!
I use wind magic behind me to the left.
I take off at an angle while adjusting the direction I'm going and use an attack spell.

{Flame.Strike}!

This time I poured a bit more MP into it. The small {Fire Balls} started to launch from the central point not just to the left and right but to highs and lows as well.

That's not all. I also increased the speed by quite a bit.
Those spread out almost like a square pyramid as they fly towards Viruhaima.
If you dodge them they'll hit your boss who's focused on recovery!~

"Gu!!"

As expected a bit of impatience showed in Viruhaima's expression as he remained in place.

And then I can tell he's gritting his teeth as he prepares to use {Anti-Magic Field} at a speed as if he's already used to using it.
However, it seems he didn't make it in time.

Of course that's the case right~
The first time took him around 20 seconds. And while the next time only took him a short 2 or 3 seconds of concentration to use {Anti-Magic Field}, I increased the flying speed of my spell this time by almost double.

Additionally the distance between us was close at around two meters.

All five shots of {Fire Ball} landed hits on Viruhaima.

As expected he didn't try to evade or deflect them...

It's difficult to fight while protecting something after all.

If it's something spiritual then there's times it'll become a great strength but if it's something physical then...

"Guao~~!!!"

Leaving behind an excessive dying scream Viruhaima collapsed with both knees to the ground.

The leader of the super first-rate adventurers the {Verdure.Brotherhood} died pathetically without even decently displaying his power.

I made a slight frown before glaring at the vampire lord further inside.

I exchanged glances with the vampire lord.

"Not only intruding in a person's house but even killing their servants, you have some guts brat."

What he said was so close to the truth that I couldn't think of a reply.

However, in exchange my slaves replied for me.

"It's weakened, don't let your guard down!!"

"Chase it over here!!"

"Mekku! Now!!"

"Rubi, move!!"

It seems they're splendidly in the middle of surrounding and beating the crap out of something.

Furthermore, the opponent doesn't seem to be a vampire as I can hear growling an occasional voice of "Kyan!", so it's probably a guard dog.

They seem to have already done quite a bit of damage to it so it shouldn't be a problem to just leave that side to them.

Now then, I need to confirm.

There's no problem with exposing my origins.

Since either way I have to kill him.

The vampire lord is wearing tattered clothes and damaged boots with his toes showing through.

I can't tell what his boots are made of but probably some kind of leather.

His messy hair is grown down to his shoulders and he's got a light grey beard the same color as his hair growing from his wrinkled face.

"Old man, what's your name?"

The vampire lord in front of me didn't show even the slightest reaction when hearing my Japanese.

Since he was born 1,500 years or so before me, I guess he doesn't understand modern day Japanese?

Otherwise, maybe he was a foreigner?

He doesn't really seem to have a Japanese looking appearance after all.

Though he's a wrinkly old man so it's hard to tell.

"Shuailao sherao, zhege myoji..kumintsu?"

I guess he can't understand.

Well, he doesn't look oriental and his eyes look green, so it can't be helped.

"?????? shitadikku, ??? eto ??? bashu ??? imya?"

Still no good?

"{Hey dotage, what's your name?}"

Just in case I tried asking in English but as expected there was no reaction. Well, among those the only ones that are similar to the Ragudariosu language are the first and the last parts, so the only part which the meaning is conveyed should be the last part.

"..This country bumpkin. What dialect is that?"

The vampire lord replied.

If Japanese, Chinese, Russian, and English don't get across to him then it's beyond me.

"..{Name} I'm asking what your name is~, {Name} {Nemu}"

I use {Identify} to confirm how much he's recovered while asking.

HP: 0+1245(498) MP: 269+50(558)

He's recovered quite a bit.

All in all I did spend a good bit of time to finish off those three.

"If you want to ask someone's name then you should first give your own."

That's quite right.

"I'm Alan.Greed {Kawasaki Takeo}."

"That's a long name..This lord's name is Deioiku."

"Not that one. I'm asking your previous name. The name you had before you reincarnated. Person with a Unique Ability. What country are you from?"

For the first time surprise appeared in the vampire lord's expression.

"Ho?"

How did you know that...Greed {Kawasa}..was it, how about it? If you know about reincarnation then how about serving me? If you do then I'll give you eternal life."

"Ha...By becoming an undead? Sorry but no thanks."

Ah, though it might be the non-aging{Immortal} instead but I'd rather not have that either.

I remain cautious with my bayonet at the ready.

"Mu..A {Tseru} is it..No, just in shape?"

seeing the wooden bayonet the vampire lord's expression changed to caution for just a moment but then quickly regained his composure.

"Hmph, something like a fake {Tseru}.."

After saying that he stuck his left hand into the surface(!) of the desk just to his side as he took out something and pointed it at me.

Th..That is, a pistol? Is it?

Just from a glance it looks like a pretty strange gun.

He's holding onto the grip with his finger on the trigger.

Above the grip there's a barrel shaped almost like a large acorn or a tear and then from there's it's streamlined to the muzzle..but I can't see it.

The tip of it is just like a spike.

It's shaped almost like a toy beam gun.

Is he messing around with me?

Hn? Beam gun?

Do.Tsu~~.Ku-Type 52

Condition: Broken(Aging)

Manufacture Date: -/-/-

Value: -

Durability: 6

Ability: -(?30)

Effect: Heat ray gun{blaster} made by Wido Company. Officially adopted in Himunosu calendar year 43648. It's a masterpiece gun with an extremely high reputation for the many meritorious deeds made with it during the third great Enkudo war.

It's seriously real!? But, isn't it broken~

However...

I, wonder exactly what kind of face I'm making right now?

I don't know why but a vampire lord is pointing just the muzzle(though there isn't one) at me while slowly waving the gun back and forth.

"I thought there was no way but, are you reading it...It can't be, Gein?"

This time for sure the vampire lord's eyes are opened wide in shock.

Though I'm being left behind.

Or rather~ that movement, does he know about {Identify}?

If the target being identified is in my field of vision then the window doesn't move.

Therefore my eyes shouldn't be moving all that much while reading the window.

Furthermore, it doesn't require following the targets movements with the eyes.

"Th..There's no way that can be..Definitely..I definitely killed him..Zugutomore, No, Gein should have died back then!"

What are you getting all agitated on your own about.

"You, what country were you born in? Do you know about {Japan}? {Yamato} or {Wanokuni} are fine as well. Do you understand the {Gregorian calendar}? {A.D.} or {Anno.Domini} is fine as well. Do you know about {Christ}?"

"What are you saying?"

"I don't know which country but you're an {Earthling} right? Though {Earthnoid} is fine as well."

He was making a strange face.

"So you aren't..Gein. I can't understand a lot of the words you're using."

"Same for you."

"I am..No, it doesn't matter. I'll ask once more. If you're a reincarnated person then become my subordinate and cooperate with me. We'll return this mistaken planet back to normal."

Wafun?

Mistaken planet?

Seeing that I was speechless the vampire lord continued his words as if he was irritated.

"You..is that not the case? Well whatever..Then I'll say it so even you can understand. Kamira, No, do you know a woman called Lilus? The dark elf {Dyurou}"

Obviously I know her but somehow I got a back premonition so I didn't say anything.

"..So you don't know. It's already been several hundred years since I heard anything so as expected I guess she's given up..No, that shouldn't be the case..was it. We'll stop that woman's objective."

"Objective?"

I reflexively said out loud.

"That's right. Without trying to correct mistakes, solely insisting on her initial objective to the point where it's now just a grudge."

Judging from your appearance as an old man who hasn't taken proper care of himself, I'd say you look more covered in grudges to me though. Even without looking at it in a biased way.

"What is?"

But I still have no idea what it's about.
I wish he'd explain everything from the start.

"There's no need to explain it to someone who couldn't understand everything until now. Now, become my servant and gather fresh energy."

This is no good~

He's basically saying to become his servant vampire and go kidnap adventurers from the dungeon right?

I don't really get that bit about fixing mistakes but like I would do that.

"I don't understand what you're saying at all. Like anyone would accept an invitation without receiving a decent explanation. Rather than that, either leave behind your eyeballs, or die, pick whichever you want."

I say something worse than armed robbery while holding my bayonet ready. It seems Zulu and the others still haven't finished things up. They're still in combat as I can hear them giving out commands and the sound of weapons hitting the walls and floor.

"I have no personal grudge against you but I'm going to start killing you. Though if you'll give me your eyeballs I'll quietly leave."

"Hm~mm..Other than us..I guess we should investigate? No, at this point.."

He lowered the useless heat ray gun he was holding up and grumbled about something while looking over here.

"..If you have no intention of serving me then I'll force you to obey..Ke~!!"

The vampire lord threw the broken heat ray gun at me with just the snap of his wrist. And then he used wind magic behind himself and charged over from where he was.

"Mu!!"

At the same time as he charged over he fired a {Stone Bolt}. Though I don't know whether it has missile added or not but I immediately used {Anti-Magic Field} to erase it. However, the vampire lord maintained his charging speed just like that and raised his right hand in a chop towards my shoulder.

He must be aiming for paralysis or something like that.

He's stretched out his right hand. The thrust moved at a considerable speed but since I was able to predict it I was able to dodge.

I countered him by smashing the gunstock into his stomach.
However, it was blocked by his left hand.
Not a parry but a block seriously..without his bones breaking..what a guy.

Right after I cancelled my {Anti-Magic Field} and sent five {Stone Bolts} flying.
I guess he saw through it as he used wind magic to evade them.

"Nu..You use spells at an astonishingly fast speed.."

Just like this, we started a high speed battle using spells and physical moves.

.....

And then we arrive back at now.

"Ku..So it's not getting anywhere.."

The vampire lord whispered with an expression of impatience.
If my body lasts then I'm sure it would eat up a bit of time but continuing to shave him down like this would be fine.
However, as expected my bones are creaking and continuing to fly around like this is pretty harsh.

Just as the vampire lord says I'd like for some new developments.

Both of us gradually shifted our positions while glaring at each other and trying to find an opening while holding each other in check.

I stand behind the female vampires corpse.
He stands behind the tiger-man's corpse.
I guess he's trying to pick up the knife stabbed into the tiger-man's waist, he's slowly stretching out his hand while looking over here.

Like I'll let you!

I immediately used an attack spell to interfere.
The knife should have been crushed.
He's glaring over here with a disappointed face.

I stand behind Viruhaima's corpse.
Additionally I used my leg to kick the long sword he was holding behind me.
Seeing that opening the vampire lord tried to jump for the woman the female vampire was holding.

It's an invitation, you fool.
My {Stone Bolt} hits the hand he was stretching out to grab the sword in the woman's hand.
Being hit by my spell the vampire lord's arm shifted and grabbed onto the woman's hand.
During that time I used one more {Stone Bolt Missile} to knock away the long sword.
Don't make such a hateful expression~

Whatever the case, even if you're a vampire lord it's impossible to use spells while doing something like me. Though his spell casting speed itself is considerably fast. However, on that occasion there's always at least one moment where he doesn't seem to be able to do anything, so as expected that's where I should aim.

I want to use {Identify} to check the sub-window but I can't cut my sight from him while we're glaring at each other like this.

We've come to a point with good footing where there's no corpses, tables, or chairs.

Right before the vampire lord Viruhaima's corpse is laying around.

Since I've got him locked in such a good position I don't really want to move...

However, I was surprised when he used an attack spell while flying over after using wind magic.

Something like using wind magic again to change his trajectory, if it's just using the basic elemental magic then the vampire on the 4th floor did it as well though.

Even for complex spells..that he can manage something like that...

But, now that he's brought it into a stalemate I'll carefully observe his actions and if he tries to use some kind of spell I'll immediately hit him with an attack spell.

If he tries to directly attack me with a spell then I'll calmly offset it then it's just a matter of taking action after that.

And then, finally the vampire lord got tired of waiting and took action.

Even though we were over 10 meters apart facing each other he slowly took a step forward to the side and then just stopped though.

What's he aiming for?

However, it's doubtful why he stopped his feet in that sort of place.

This guy, he isn't familiar with combat?

Was he just getting by using his extremely high physical ability and his abnormally fast spell casting speed?

I don't really get why he seems so attached to having a weapon either.

Is he particular about the reach?

Though I'm more afraid of when he's barehanded.

It's reached to where Viruhaima is laying right to his side.
It should be a considerable impediment to his movements if I were to move.

Stopping his feet in that sort of place..does he not understand?
Viruhaima's long sword is in the other direction you know?
He probably at least has a knife on him but in order to get it you'd probably have to flip him over.
What's he aiming for?

But he's stopped moving so it's obviously magic just like up until now.

However, no matter how long I wait there's no spell light coming from his hands.
I can't determine if he's concentrating on the spell or just pretending to be.

"To the right!!"
"Uwa!!"
"Jesu, be careful!!"
"Gwaruru.."
"Ou~ch!!"
"Even though it should be weakened!"
"Shit!"
"Gwon!"
"Aim carefully!"
"Sorry!"
"Henry, Mekku, we'll go with Riku 6, 4, 8!"
""Understood!""
"Say it so I can understand"

It seems they're still pretty busy over there.
Though they shouldn't count on reinforcements anytime soon.

I need to carefully observe his actions so I can immediately switch between attack and defense.

"Fuffu. This match is settled."

His lips raised into a sneer as he whispered with his hoarse voice.

"Waa!!!"

The vampire lord shouted in a loud voice as he stabbed his hand into Viruhaima!

His actions were unexpected but the {Stone Bolt} I immediately fired pierced into the vampire lord's side.

One more shot!

This time I fired off eight of them with missile added.

"Ogo~!!"

All of them hit!

HP: 0+289(498) MP: 164+50(558)

It did huge damage!

Just like this I'll finish him off all at once..What!?

"Go! Defeat him!!"

The vampire lord squeezed out his hoarse voice which is even more desperate after taking the direct hits from the stone bolts as he said.
It's certain that he's in quite a bit of pain.

During that, appearance that quickly stood up.

With his body covered in wazamono splint mail, while his right hand is empty, he still has the emerald green spike shield in his left as his characteristic, the middle aged elf.

Viruhaima was revived.

Condition: Vampiric.Death.Knight

Shit!

Chapter 315 : The Un-Dead 8

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 15

That bastard Viruhaima, his HP has recovered..Hn?

Between Viruhaima and the Vampire Lord, I wonder who I should finish off first?

Obviously the more troublesome one.

In that case it's the vampire lord but I'm sure he'll interfere.

Viruhaima's looking at me with his shining red and empty eyes but judging from how he moved when he stood up just now and this will be pretty troublesome.

If it's just this guy then it'll only take one shot of {Disintegrate}.

It would be fine to just quickly turn him to dust.

I still have more than enough mana for just that.

However, Basu and Jiru are here as well so I want to at least leave the corpse and magic stone for them.

In regards to the vampire lord I still need to take it's eyeballs so there's no way I could use {Disintegrate}.

I hesitated for a moment but decided on a plan.

First off I'll defeat Viruhaima.

After that will be the vampire lord who's started recovering his HP again.

Just as expected this guy seems to be an amateur at fighting.

If you have magic skill levels that high and MP remaining then use it on a {Lightning Bolt} or {Fire Ball} instead of something like recovery.

I'm not worried about the woman and tiger-man becoming {Death.Knights}.

The reason being, I used {Identify} on Viruhaima and the maximum values in the parentheses of his HP and MP are slowly dropping. Though in exchange for that his ability points are slowly increasing. Since I was curious about it I tried using {Detect.Magic} and there's a mana line connected between Viruhaima and the other two vampire corpses.

I guess he sacrificed several other vampires in order to power up Viruhaima or something like that?

Just before, I guess the reason he was trying to take weapons from the two corpses was just pretending so he could touch them...

That bastard Viruhaima is currently in this state.

Whatever the case it shouldn't be a spell(?) that can be used consecutively.

"Gryeee~dwo~~~you bastardddd~!!"

Viruhaima roared with a considerably hoarse voice.

His face looks like he's rapidly losing moisture as his skin dries, his eyes cave in, and his cheeks thin as well.

There's still fangs showing from the edges of his mouth and his eyes are giving off an even stronger red light than before.

If I leave him be it feels like he'd continued to power up even more so I can't waste anymore time.

Though if I drag it out I feel kind of like he'd destroy himself all on his own. I can't imagine that the vampire lord will remain quiet forever though.

It's unknown whether {Grave.Strike} will pass through {Magic.Resistance} but the duration of the effect should continue for a bit longer.

Fortunately this place is a bit open.

There's plenty of space to thrash around.

This is the critical moment.

Let's go!

"Uuu~!!"

I charged at Viruhaima who was holding up his small buckler.

I twisted my body to avoid the spikes embedded in the shield but Viruhaima displayed a frightening reaction speed as he shifted the direction of his shield thrust.

Reflexively I knocked away the spikes with my gunstock and kicked him in the stomach.

Viruhaima fell backwards on his ass.

Thinking it's a chance I twisted around my bayonet and thrust it towards the gaps in his knees and thighs while looking at the area around his chest.

I guess he was tricked by my line of sight as he quickly tried to cover his chest with the buckler.

Thanks to that my thrust splendidly went through.

However, in that instant the sunlight disappeared from my bayonet. But, I still felt the real sensation of piercing flesh. The damage properly went through to his HP as well. Though not very much.

Viruhaima quickly rolled over.
{Double.Acceleration} I guess?
He was a lot faster than I expected.

But, I found it just a bit unexpected.
Why evade?
Don't let this chance go!

I decided on eight shots of {Stone.Arrow} aiming at his sides and the areas with no or thin armor as I fired them one after another. It's fine even if it misses a bit.

In any case I fired them consecutively as fast as possible.

Until he got up I landed several tens of hits.

Of course there were some that missed and were deflected by his shield and armor as well.

"..It doesn't work."

He jumped up while happily saying.

Although it seems he was surprised by the fact that I increased the number of attacks and the speed I was firing them.

"What!!?"

The one who was considerably surprised was the vampire lord as his voice was trembling in shock.

Furthermore it seems his concentration was broken for the spell he was using so the spell failed.

When he jumped up I charged at him with my bayonet and thrust it towards his face!

The edge of my bayonet was caught up in two of the spikes on his buckler as he quickly dodged it.

What an amazing reaction speed!

However, I made the thrust for things to end up like this.

This was the decoy!

I let go of my bayonet with just my left hand and then the grip left my right hand as well as I grabbed on to the sling strap and fired off an attack spell once again with my left hand.

This time it's eight {Flame Arrows}!

Even though they were fired at close range Viruhaima deflected almost all of them with his super reaction speed and the ones he couldn't deflect he used wind magic with his open right hand to evade them.

I take back my bayonet.

Hmph. Just as I thought.

Just in case right after firing the {Flame Arrows} I used wind magic in front of me and put some distance between us though.

It seems that undead feel pain but it's only for the instant of the attack.

As expected I can't imagine him being able to ignore the pain from when I stabbed between his knee and thigh in order to use spells.

Though he just took a number of attack spells from me, he still has plenty of {Magic.Resistance} remaining.

Even though that's the case he still put priority on evading and defense.

It seems his awareness as a vampire still hasn't completely overwritten his awareness as a living adventurer.

If it was me then I'd rather endure a bit of damage to throw away evasion and defense in order to focus it all on attack.

In actual fact that's why I did against {Franken} and {The.Gazer} after all.

In that case, there's only one thing to do.

I just need to shave down his {Magic.Resistance} while Viruhaima still isn't used to it.

Since there's some distance between us there's no problem with using spells..he's fast!

While swinging down the spikes on his shield the momentum with which he came charging at me was tremendous.

Even though his knee should be injured..is it because it didn't reach the bone!?

I use wind magic behind me once more and flew backwards while once again firing eight {Flame Arrows} this time with missile added as I aimed them towards Viruhaima's legs.

"Ja!!"

Viruhaima tried to evade as he jumped up.

Just a bit late my {Flame Arrows} suddenly shifted upwards and all of them hit. Obviously they disappeared the moment they hit though.

I obviously aimed for the moment he was going to land and fired off some more!

Several of them were deflected but there wee some that hit as well. Of course, one again they disappeared the moment they hit.

"You'reeee goooood~!!!"

Viruhaima said that as he charged at me the moment he landed. I didn't have any time to do anything but recast {Grave.Strike} on my bayonet.

It seems Viruhaima intends to challenge me with the spike shield in his left hand using speed.

I evade the spike and hit his body with my gunstock.
Just as he evades that with his super reaction speed I crouch down and do a round kick towards his injured right knee.
My leg was obviously diverted and evaded.

Without losing my momentum I roll and while rolling cast the spell {Grave.Strike} on my throwing needles before throwing them.

They hit him in the ass!

"Tha~t hurtsss~!!"

We changed standing positions.

Still another 23 left on his {Magic.Resistance}.

Hurry!

"So I'm at a disadvantage against you with attack spells..But, I can break your bones with just a single blow~!!"

It seems you get it~

I fire off one {Stone Arrow} and as he evaded that one more shot!

It was deflected by his shield.

Another shot!

It was deflected by his shield again.

And then one more shot!

Obviously, it was deflected by his shield.

This time it's a shot with missile added!

I slightly shift the center of my gravity of my body before firing it.

Viruhaima cautiously held up his shield.

Aiming for the instant he deflects it I throw more throwing needles without magic cast on them(it was timing where I couldn't cast any).

"Gu!!?"

They hit his flank.

I immediately fired off eight more {Stone Arrows}.

Then charged at the same time!

"Kwu!!"

Viruhaima rolled to the side to evade.

As expected it seems he can't immediately use wind magic after taking damage!
My charge was a feint as I quickly used wind magic to jump backwards and returned to where I was but it seems he still got caught up on it..Shit.

Viruhaima picked up his long sword in the direction he rolled.

However, I've finished aiming there with a {Lightning Bolt}!
Obviously it disappears.

There's no way you can deflect this right?

And then while his muscles should still be contracting {Flame Arrow}!

..And it was deflected again.

Something like not experiencing muscle contractions, that's cheating right!
Though if I think carefully about it the spell was erased so I guess it can't be considered a hit.

Something like muscle contractions didn't occur.

Err, I was tricked!

Now there's only 10 meters distance between us.

He twists his face in joy seeing my surprised expression.

Get full of yourself and charge at me!

"Fushi~aa~!!"

Along with a small shout he charged over.

Now!!

{Fire Wall}!

Instantly a three meter high wall of fire appeared.

I'm sure you'll just erase it as you come over just like that right?
How unfortunate, there's a {Growth.Spike} right in front of the wall of fire!
A large serving set of 150~!!

The speed at which the stone spikes grow from the ground isn't all that fast.
However, even if it's half-assed the goal is to have his charges of {Magic.Resistance} get used up so that's fine.
For that reason I took distance and used {Fire Wall} to seal off his vision.

The spikes grew up to a height of 10 cm.
On his first step he stepped on two of them with his right foot as they disappear.

20 cm.
Another seven of them were kicked by his next step with his left foot as they disappeared.

I fire off a {Fire Arrow} aiming above Viruhaima!
I won't let you jump up!

"Shit!!"

30 cm.
Another 10 of them disappeared as they hit his body.

Viruhaima made a sudden stop with his frightening physical abilities.

Obviously the moment the {Fire Arrow} flew over him Viruhaima went to jump over the remaining stone spikes.
They've already grown to 40, no, 50 cm after all.
And then...

{Fire Catapult Missile}!

Of course there's eight shots.

"Gugya!!!"

The best you can manage is deflecting one of them right?
Like that he shouldn't even have any negative HP remaining.
It should be pretty close to instant death.

Now then, next up is finally the vampire lord. It's your turn~

My remaining MP is just below 2,000.
It hurts that the {Growth.Spike} trap consumed over 1,500.
But that can't be helped.

It seems Zulu and the others are still struggling.
It's only about two or three minutes since I charged into this room but aren't they taking too long...
Though it can't be helped.

HP: 0+751(498) MP: 32+50(558)

Hmph, it seems he was able to recover a decent amount.
His MP has decreased by quite a bit as well.
Though that's the case, as long as he can use {Cannon} it's plenty enough to kill me several times over.

"This is plenty.."

The vampire lord stood up from what appears to be a bed a bit further in the middle of the room and smiled in satisfaction while looking at me.
He's too far so I can't tell what he's saying.
Is that so?
My position has returned back to around where I entered the room.
I guess there's over 20 meters between us.

"Mwun!"

He came flying at me with no preparatory movements!
Wind magic I guess.

At almost the same time I erased the {Stone Bolt} that came flying with {Anti-Magic Field}.

The vampire lord continued his charge just like that.

I guess he wants to continue our high speed close combat battle with spells again?

Honestly speaking this is the hardest to manage against the vampire lord.
My body is already creaking from continuing to blow myself around with wind magic.

Added to that the vampire lord's physical abilities are above even the powered up Viruhaima.

Even though he's an amateur the speed he charges over and thrusts forward his chops is still more than enough to make up for it.

I pass under his thrust and swing my bayonet, that is evaded and then my kick is parried as well.

"So you aren't running away with wind magic?"

seeing my station the vampire lord put on airs.

Shit.

In any case should I fire off a big one to blind him then put some distance between us?

The moment I thought that..!

The vampire lord in front of me stepped in at a super speed almost leaving behind an afterimage!

"Gu..Oaaaa!!?"

I felt a sensation as if all the power in my body disappeared at once.

His chop has stabbed into the inside of my left elbow!

Paralysis!?

I immediately used the spell {Remove.Paralyze} and then in desperation used wind magic to retreat.

Then used a healing spell on my left arm.

Additionally I used {Identify}...After all that was the case...

What the hell!

The larger portion of my injuries are healed but I lost the level I just gained!

That's a big problem as well but the sensation of losing all the power in my body is harsh.

If it's come to this then I'll to use my final method.

{Delayed Blast Fire Ball}!

15 times the power!

Delay time 1 second!

Seeing the diamond like crystal that rolled on the ground the vampire lord's face twisted.

"You bastard! Where do you think this is..!"

Like I care!

At the same time I used {Anti-Magic Field} with 700 MP which I'm most used to!

The giant {Fire Ball} over 60 cm in diameter exploded.

No matter how high his physical abilities are there's no way he can avoid all of the stones!

Chapter 316 : The Un-Dead 9

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 15

Boom!

The {Delayed Blast Fire Ball} with extra power exploded.

Furthermore, at the same moment as I used {Anti-Magic Field} the vampire lord seems to have used his super reaction speed to cast earth magic alone for defense.

Also, he jumped to the ground at the same time.

From a place a bit lower than the ceiling of the room dirt started to fall and cover the ground.

However, an earth wall won't be completed in such a short time as one or two seconds.

As if a half-assed earth wall without it's maximum volume would be able to completely block it.

As proof of that a large majority of the flaming stones continued to fly and pierce through it.

"Uooo!!!"

At the same time as the {Fire Ball} exploded and the flaming stones were offset by my {Anti-Magic Field} I charged at him!

I jumped over his earth wall!

On the other side of the earth wall I could see the vampire lord taking several flaming stones as he was on the verge of death.

Gon!!

Something hit me in the face as stars appear in front of my eyes.

"Buge!!"

If I wasn't wearing a helmet I would have been seriously injured.

I ended up falling to the ground just before the earth wall in a pathetic way.

Though it was still better that I didn't fall on the back of my head, since I ended up being shocked from the pain I wasn't expecting at all I let go of maintaining my {Anti-Magic Field}.

Shit, instead of acting cool I still had my {Anti-Magic Field} left so I should have just charged through while erasing the dirt...

However what in the world happened!?

I spontaneously looked around.

But I couldn't find anything.

However, around the ceiling of the room. There's something like small sparks coming from here and there but...

Could it be...

But, something like that can wait for later.

Thanks to the visor of my helmet while I was hit by a bit of the shock from it hitting my head, I guess I should just be grateful a tragedy such as my neck breaking didn't happen.

It couldn't be helped so I made another {Anti-Magic Field} with the bare minimum mana(just from a glance it seemed to be earth magic at around level 5 after all) and erased the already completed mountain of dirt.

On the other side of the dirt mountain the vampire lord was on the verge of death from being hit by the flaming stones on half of his body but was still trying to run further inside the room.

It seems his left arm has carbonized from the elbow down where he was hit by the flaming stones and is completely useless.

His left leg is barely still attached below the knee by a layer of skin and there's several holes opened up in his left flank as well.

Though there's nothing coming out from those holes I can see a portion of his guts being cooked from the tears in his skin.

HP: 0+8(498) MP: 0+5(558)

With this recovery should already be impossible so he probably can't do anything but crawl.

If I gouge out his eyeballs his HP will probably go into the minus and he'll die.

If I leave him be he might revive but it's unknown whether he'd revive together with his eyeballs and thinking about it with common sense it's hard to imagine his gouged out eyeballs returning to normal.

Though if he uses the spell {Regenerate} they'd probably come back, since he's an undead there's a high chance that the remaining eyes would become useless.

Ah, maybe the reverse magic {Deficit} would work?

My remaining MP is..556.

Just in case I can use it without a problem.

Room for negotiations I guess?

"Fu..Fu..Fu..."

I don't know if he really needs to breathe but he's breathing pretty heavily as he runs almost like an inchworm.

I raise the edge of my bayonet up and slowly took a step forward standing about three meters behind him.

"Wait."

I have a lot of things I want to ask.

The vampire lord trembled in surprise hearing me call out for him and slowly turned around to lay face up.

"You, Greed{Kawasa}..was it. As expected of a reincarnated person, is what I'd like to say. Let alone defeating that fellow even me is quite..something...How about it? Do you want to team up together?"

The vampire lord asked with a stiff face.

At this point?

Putting aside at the start, it's already too late~

But, just as I said before there's a lot of things I want to ask.

"Have your guard dog back off."

The moment I said that I heard cheers coming from behind me.
I guess they were finally able to finish it off.

"..It seems there's no need to have it back off.."

The old man said slightly disappointed. And then, right after asked me.

"Who in the world are you?"

"I said it before right...Alan.Greed. I'm an eyeball robber."

"You're reincarnated right?"

"You could say that's the case."

After I replied the vampire lord looked at me hatefully before whispering.

"{Japan}..{Christ}..I see, I remembered..The natives from Duvain 4-3 huh..I guess it could be considered a pity.."

"What are you.."

"It should have been siphoned after advancing quite a bit..Hmph, I guess he has a decent amount of knowledge...Up to here huh..Hey, Greed or whatever"

"Ah?"

The vampire lord made a grin before slightly opening his clenched right hand. In his hand a small black box about the size of a match box was being held and at the edge of it there was a green light lit up.
It can't be!?

"Oh~

don't move. That face, it seems you can somehow guess what this means right? Whether it's fortunate or unfortunate that the first one I've met in so long could understand that much..Fufu, it's already been activated. Just the impact from falling at this height is plenty."

Could it be..

A self-destruction switch!?

No way!?

Seeing my expression change the vampire lord made a smile in satisfaction.
Shit, even though it's reached this point it's the same as if he's taken the priority for negotiating.

"Master!"

With the sounds of footsteps Zulu and the others came over.

"Have them withdraw."

The vampire lord demanded.

Damn it!

However, it's hard to negotiate with the fellow that turned Viruhaima into an undead in front of Basu and Jiru.

That's just fine, you could say it works better that way for me too.

"Don't come over! Return!"

I yelled without looking at Zulu and the others.

I'm sure Basu and Jiru are here as well but if my combat slaves are here then they should definitely bring them back.

They should be able to think of the possibility that we're using dangerous spells.

However, this is bad.

Bad bad bad!

This is a bad situation!

Something like a self-destruction switch I've never heard of it outside of jokes in a manga.

Ah, though I guess the SDF does use it in missiles and such...

Though it's not used like this.

My face distorts as I glare at the vampire lord.

It would probably feel good if I could kill this guy with a look but whether I use magic or anything else it's probably impossible to steal that box faster than he opens his hand on top of not causing any shock to it.

If it's true that even the slightest shock will activate it, but, it's probably true...

"Old man, if you obediently give me your eyes then not only will I fix them with magic but I wouldn't mind letting you go?"

Even though I say that, it probably looks like I'm completely bluffing. However, I think it should still be a reasonably attractive proposal. Or at least I think?

"Ho? Even though you've used that many spells still you have that much mana remaining? Do you think I'll honestly believe that?"

"What you want to think is up to you, but.."

It was when I said up to there that I heard something the old man was grumbling about to himself.

"Now that I've already lost my original body, there's nothing that can be done about the Ikusu gene gon(?) information..Even though I fell to being an undead and spent this much time after all this was the limit..the primary body of the {Ban} mechanical {Vein} has already been lost..already..I'm tired.."

Primary body of the {Ban} mechanical {Vein}?

The primary mechanism?

Primary machine?

Engine?

"At least..nothing left but to entrust it, I guess"

Entrust?

"Kamira..Please stop Lilus"

"Stop?"

"That's right. She's making a mistake. Even to the point of twisting Providence..No, it's fine. Please kill Lilus."

Huh?

"Like I could do something like that. She's the woman that was my wife."

"..What..are..?"

The old man made a dumbfounded face for a moment but soon after returned to normal and continued speaking.

"Hmph, you're just being deceived. Her real name is Kamira. Kamira.Erisuna was her name in the past..before she reincarnated."

This guy, what in the world is he saying!?

Kamira.Erisuna?

It's not some strange name like that!

It's Miki. Kawasaki Miki was her name!

If that wasn't the case then why would she have Miki's face!

How would she know about it!

He's screwing around!

"After reincarnating it was Lilus.Jinzelin. After marrying Gein, no, Rusukku.Zugutomore she changed her name to Lilus.Zugutomore."

I guess I must have been making a face revealing my feelings towards Miki. Seeing my face the vampire lord let out a small sigh before starting to talk in a low voice.

"Using Sharaizudan and Neral's relationship as a trick she defeated them and ascended to divinity herself, that woman is possessed by mad delusions..putting that aside and..it seems it would be best to tell you this. We were originally..Hmph, I guess it doesn't matter anymore..Kill me, you need my eyes right?"

"Wait"

"You don't need to worry. It just fixes it in place. Here"

"Ah!!"

The vampire lord smashed the match box he still had in his hand against the floor.

The green light on the lamp changed to red and that broken announcement started echoing around again.

"Zaza...Pi~

the fixed wreck of the natural {Mofosu} will..please..demise {Mindo} shima..bzzt..zzt...within rogu.hi..operation Mahetto Takudaru..self {Kane} destruction {Somunbu} management {Damin}..10{Ten}"

This is...

"Not just defeating my servants but you were able to drive me this far..I guess it was worth it holding out to the point of becoming an undead.."

"9{Nine}"

"Hey, what is this {Countdown}!? Stop it!"

"I can't understand a lot of the words you say. Is it the native language of Duvain 4?"

Just before he said "Duvain 4-3" I think it was right...

"..You won't be buried. But, I'll have you let me hide what can be hidden. I have no intention of showing everything."

Damn it!

"8{Eight}"

"What are you..!"

"How about killing me? You want my eyes right? Right now I can easily be killed right?"

"7{Seven}"

"Tell me!"

"About what? Fu...I thought about saying it but like I'd tell you. If I carefully think about it I was just capturing the natives of Rugu 3 and obtaining life energy from them. And even that was a small number.."

"6{Six}"

"A small number you say!?"

Don't screw with me. In just today he's killed three people on top of making them into vampires, I'm amazing he can so shamelessly!

"The amount of life energy I need is at most one per month. It's only a small number compared to you who is eating the primitive animals of Rugu everyday right? Barbarian"

"5{Five}"

"Don't screw.."

"Oh~ even plants are native creatures of Rugu 3 {Orth}? right? You've consumed far more lives than I have right?"

It's not that sort of problem!

"4{Four}"

"Rather than something like that, stop the {Countdown}!"

"..What are you saying again..Ah, it already won't stop. Even I have no way of doing it."

"What...!?"

"3{Three}"

"Don't panic so much. It won't do anything in particular to you. Just, I've given up on it."

Just now that announcement was,

..starting preservation of (somethings) environment. Completed. 10 seconds later the console will begin disintegration. 10..."

I guess?

"2{Two}"

"It would be best if you don't remain standing?"

Shit.

"Crouch down! Lower your posture and protect your body!!"

I don't really get it but for the time being I warned Zulu and the others.

"That's right, that's for the best."

"1{One}"

"You bastard! I'll have you tell me everything!?"

"I have no intention of that. Intruding my residence as you please, injuring my servants, and on top of that trying to steal my eyes..That power is quite impressive but why should I act friendly towards someone like that?"

Gu...When it's put like that I can't deny it.

"If you want to know then figure it out yourself. Although there's not much data left"

"0{Zero}"

From all around the ceiling I can hear sounds like "Bang!" and "Bzzt!!" as if circuits are shorting out.

In mid-air several holograph like monitors appeared for just a moment before disappearing.

After all that was it.

I use the spell {Detect.Illusion}...

I realized that including the ceiling the upper half of this room has some sort of illusion cast on it.

Of course, there's several illusions cast on the floor as well.

For example, the desk that the vampire lord took the heat ray gun out of at the start.

I use the spell {Dispel.Illusion}...

Over half of further inside changed into the appearance of a rustic console almost like the CIC of the command center of a battle ship.

In other words, everything that I thought was the floor until now was actually the ceiling and what I thought was the ceiling was actually the floor...

The automatic doors weren't buried in the floor but instead rise up into the ceiling and the reason why the floor of the room was giving off light was because it was the lighting of the ceiling. Originally the floors of the hallways must have been lit up.

The {Sentry.Gun} seems to have originally been suspended from the ceiling and not the floor.

Now it makes sense why the female vampire told Viruhaima that {Flame.Strike} was dangerous and to erase it while charging into it with her own body.

Even during battle it was only when they had their backs against further into the room that they didn't show any openings for me to use attack spells.

Since Viruhaima was a newcomer he either must not have known or not been educated yet.

The thing that appeared to be a desk was something like a large box and other than the heat ray gun there's several things in it but all of them are broken.

Hn? A battle ship?

Baldukk is a basin town that's shaped like a crater...

Shit, there's too many things to think about.

"So it's finished..Now, feel free to kill me. Take my eyes or whatever else you like."

"I can't do that. I'll have you tell me everything you know."

I cast {Grave.Strike} on my bayonet again and walked towards him with large strides.

"I have no intention of saying anymore than this...If you stab that into me then it seems like I'll be able to die.."

It's a spell which greatly increases the damage to undead but if it's just that then killing a single hit is difficult.

Particularly for a vampire lord who should have a lot of negative HP.

"If it comes to that then I don't mind. I'll fix you up with {Bruise.All} or {Bruise.Critical} as much I need to."

Since his sense of pain still seems to remain torture should be effective as well. Ah, that's right, I guess the reason he was taking so much time with his recovery was because he couldn't completely ignore the pain.

Even then it's quite impressive he was able to use spells at that speed. It's not up to my level but I've never seen anyone else other than me.

"That's quite frightening. I might end up speaking everything I know."

Isn't that the case.

"Let me heal myself."

The vampire lord made a powerless smile before saying as if he was begging.

It's more difficult to think logically when you have lower mana.
However, before I could even reply he quickly seems to have used a healing spell(the reverse magic that is).
And then, without hesitation stabbed his hand into his own chest!

"Ah!!"

If he takes out his magic stone then it's all over!
I immediately moved to cut off his right hand with my bayonet but didn't make it in time...

.....

Just in case I gouged out both of his eyeballs and carefully put them into the preservation bottle.
Before calling Zulu and the others over I took a look at the nearby console but I can't tell how to operate it at all.
In the first place it's unknown how it even gains electricity(?) and I guess because of the short circuit the mesh itself was giving off quite a bit of heat.

The match box the vampire lord used was just a small switch with a slider and a lamp, and considering there's no crevices it almost seems to have been made all at once.
After making up my mind I tried moving around the switch but it didn't change from the red lamp.

It couldn't be helped so I called for Zulu and the others.

"Master, I'm glad you're okay.."

I cast identify on my combat slaves who are humbling themselves before me. Including Basu and Jiru who are calling out for Viruhaima in shock there's several people who are injured but none of them have lost any levels. It seems Jiru and Mekku used magic to their limits as their mana is less than 6. While healing the injured I heard Basu and Jiru's voices.

"..{Status Open}"

The two of them are checking Viruhaima's status.

"{Vampiric.Death.Knight}?"

It probably looks like this for them.

Roberto.Viruhaima's corpse(Elf(Vampiric.Death.Knight))

My {Identify} can see a bit more.

Elf(Vampiric.Death.Knight)

Condition: Good

Manufacture Date: 15/7/7447

Value: 1715398

Durability: 21

I always think it but I can't help but think that the Condition of a damaged corpse being Good is some kind of bad joke.

Although, if I were to take it as meaning that it's a clump of meat that has no chance of reviving then a part of the Condition being Good makes sense.

..I guess saying there's no chance of revival is saying too far huh? As expected after that Condition becomes Death there's no way for them to revive no matter how hard they try after all..Or maybe there could be? Miduchi said something like "it's possible for that sort of spell to exist" but in our situation where we can't even properly heal light illnesses that sort of thing is a dream within a dream.

Nevertheless the Value sure is amazing.
I'm sure it's also because we haven't taken out the magic stone yet but isn't it because all of his special skills and his high level added up?

I ordered Zulu and the others to search the room to see if there's anything else worth something.

Around the area where the vampire lord was living the only things found were old worn out clothes and some parts that seem almost like a trash.

I wonder if it's possible to repair the heat ray gun?
The structure is unknown and obviously I have no clue what kind of principle it works based on.

Other than the small button that seems like the trigger in front of the grip and below the acorn part it appears to be a single whole and there's no visible seams.

But just in case I collected a total of six heat ray guns.
Also, I managed to obtain several types of magnifying glasses from a shelf along the wall.
After that, there was also various handmade tools(even something like a tester) so I helped myself to them as well.

There weren't very many things that could be sold for money but we were able to find several {Magic.Items}.

In a small box on a shelf further in the room we found two more {Invisibility.Rings} with 451 and 226 charges left on them.

Furthermore on the same shelf where the tools were lined up we found the right hand piece of {Dexterous.Working.Gloves}.

In another where trash seemed to be piled up we found an

Other than that there was a {Fire.Ball.Wand} and {Lightning.Wand} with no charges left. Also, two more {Bruise.Staffs} with no charges left.

Well since we can't recharge these they're just trash.

Hn?

{Fire.Ball.Wand}..

Charge?

When I realized it I almost started grinning to myself.

If it's the {Invisibility.Rings} with not many charges left then I don't really mind.

Ah, come to think of it I still had one on.

Though it only has about 40 charges left.

I wonder if this will be enough?

Though I guess it's impossible because you have to be naked?

Other than that for things that'll be worth money there's the Vampire Lord's magic stones(four of them each with a value of 4,000,000 or so), two magic stones for each of the vampires for a total of four more(each with a value of about 500,000), and then two more magic stones(each with a value of about 10,000) from the {Zombie.Dog} that Zulu and the others killed. Just the same there was another considerably large dog called {Ortoros} with one magic stone with a value of about 600,000. I didn't include Viruhaima in the calculations.

From just magic stones it totals over 130,000,000.

I wonder if Viruhaima has multiple magic stones?

As expected in regards to him I'll be handing the entire corpse over though.

Somehow, I feel like things are about to get very busy...

Chapter 317 : A Distant Journey 1

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 15

While we were looting anything worth money, Basu and Jiru were taking the armor off Viruhaima's corpse.

I'd feel a bit sorry for making them wait too long.

There was an original objective for entering the dungeon this time.

Rescuing Viruhaima was one of those.

However, it was impossible because he was made into an undead.

In other words, the request ended in failure.

Whatever the case I should quickly report the results of the job I accepted to the employer.

I still haven't finished investigating the rooms but I wonder if we should return once to report things?

Obviously not!

I think there would be no problem in coming back to this location on the floor. Since the lighting of the room is still alive there should be no problem with the supply of energy as well.

The teleportation device from this floor to that place on the 4th floor is probably fine as well.

However, what about the door to this room?

I wonder if we can leave the automatic door open?

Thinking about it with common sense and it should have already long since closed.

Since we're inside it right now I think it should be possible to at least open it. Thinking that I went to check and as expected there was a switch near the door so you can freely open or close it from inside.

However, the method of opening it from outside is unknown.

I feel like if we don't obtain that identification card or whatever we won't ever be able to get back in once it closes.

At least until we find that I can't afford to leave this room.

I feel sorry for Basu and them who are depressed after losing their leader but we're continuing our house looting.

"Master, how about this?"

Henry handed over something like a tablet.

Strangely enough when I used {Identify} it came up with a proper model number

{I.Mi~.Ku-67 Do} but when you use {Status Open} it just appears with a hyphen in the name field.

Since a name didn't appear it seems they thought it was trash but since it has something like glass covering it they thought it might still be worth something.

But there's quite a few scratches on the surface of the display.

However, the mesh seems to be made of some kind of resin and it appears to be well used with no sign of dust covering it.

In the first place he said he found it on the sofa along the wall.

I'm sure this is some kind of terminal.

Most likely some kind of general purpose one.

It's well worth investigating.

"However, what in the world is going on with this room? It's filled with stuff I've never seen before..but, almost all of it is trash and there's few things worth any money right.."

Basu whispered while looking around the room.

Zulu and the others seem to think it's strange as well but they won't speak needlessly.

While I was playing around with the tablet-like thing that Henry discovered, Jesu handed me some trash.

"This is..probably trash. Place it all together over there."

After looking at it for a moment I gave out my judgement.

"You can tell?"

Seeing that Jiru asked in doubt.

"No, I don't know. But as expected that should be trash right."

What Jesu had brought over was some kind of rod-shaped object filled with various kinds of unknown parts.

It seemed almost like it was made from a gathering of random parts.

There was no uniformity in the design of all the parts being used.

Most likely it was some kind of device the vampire lord was trying to put together with various parts and ended up in failure.

It was covered in dust after all.

While we were doing that we finally discovered something like an identification card.

Several small cards like ID you can stick on your chest came out.

There seemed to be something written on the surface but it felt like it was already chafed away and barely readable.

A small portion of it was remaining but I was only barely able to decipher one or two characters.

However, I can understand the characters.

It's the alphabet of Orth.

As a test I had Angela carry one then go outside and closed the door.

I told Angela to hold the ID up while wandering around in the hall.

After a short while the door opened even though we didn't operate it from our side.

If we have these then it's possible to come back to this room again.

At this point I decided to pause our search and return.

I'm bringing along the tablet.

There's only a single button but it seems this is the button to turn on the power.

After turning it on a cursor prompting some kind of entry appeared in the center of the screen.

There's a hole that seems almost like a microphone so it's probably possible to make voice commands.

Though it might be a speaker.

Most likely in order to login you need to use the Vampire Lord's name as a keyword or something.

Since it seems like he reincarnated as well I don't think there's anything like a voice print recognition.

In regards to the voice commands I decided not to try it here.

There was nothing like connectors and the method of recharging it is unknown so I quickly cut off the power.

It's possible it's not operating using electricity but that's not something to investigate right now.

"Let's start heading back."

I declared after acting like we've already gathered everything worth any money.

"Is it already fine?"

Basu asked so I honestly nodded.

However, "we're planning to come back here again."

I didn't forget to add that.

Additionally, I said a few more words.

"Now then, Basu-san, Jiru-san. Before we return there's something we need to discuss."

"I know. We have no intention of blaming you for the matter with Roberto. I think it couldn't be helped."

After replying Jiru nodded next to Basu.

"I apologize for not being able to make it in time. Also, I offer my sincerest condolences in regards to Viruhaima-san."

It feels a bit strange as the person who killed him to say but it can't be helped.

"It can't be helped. Even though you all cleared through that fast you still didn't make it in time. In the first place if it was just us then.."

"That's true. There's no way you could have made it in time and in the first place whether you even could have made it up to here.."

There were almost no monsters on this floor.

They might have been able to take out the ghouls or so we met along the way.

But, the combat strength of the {Wight} and the {Specter} is still unknown so even if they were lucky enough to clear through I'm sure getting past the security system would have been impossible.

I think they would have been beaten by the Vampire Lord or Vampires there and all had their life energy absorbed together.

"And about the route leading here?"

Basu continued with a face as if saying he understands.

"Eh?"

That doesn't particularly...We've already gathered everything that seems like it would be worth money and in the first place it's all stuff that Vampire Lord saved up over time after all..I think I have the right to pick through it first since I defeated it but after that.."

"..I guess that's true."

Basu replied while looking around.

The only thing with glass used on it was the tablet and the coating of the console and such are all peeling off so while they do look like a clump of exposed metal they don't look like valuable metals like silver, platinum, or gold.

Since we're carrying out all of the {Magic.Items} even including the ones with no charges all that's leftover is trash that even I couldn't figure out what they do.

However, on our way back while I was walking at the very rear I didn't forget to bury the hallway in dirt right before turning at the corner. I can only bury the area as far as I can see and I didn't have much mana remaining but the hallway had a lot of long straight lines so I think I was able to bury quite a bit of it.

Even if someone were able to wander into this floor unless they're able to use {Anti-Magic Field} they should only be able to go as far as the hallway after the first small room they teleport into.

Even if they can use it then they probably won't be able to advance very far as well.

I don't know if Basu and Jiru realized I was burying the hallway with earth magic on our way back. Of course I was careful when using it so they wouldn't notice but even if they did notice it seems they ignored it.

Incidentally, it was determined that the pile of board shaped trash in the room the {Specter} was in was the ID cards. It seems Jesu couldn't tell they were ID cards and reported they were trash. It's not unreasonable so I can't blame him. After all they did look like nothing but trash.

We were safely able to return back to the room on the 4th floor. Additionally by the time we returned to the surface it was several hours after the date had changed.

Toris and two others were waiting at the entrance plaza.

Rizara.Redflare from the {Verdure.Brotherhood} and Vikkensu.Barukemi from {Black.Topaz}.

It seems everyone else is at a bar called Merukku which the {Verdure.Brotherhood} use as a gathering place.

Seeing that Basu was carrying Viruhaima, Rizara.Redflare scratched away at her head for a moment seeming to try and calm herself down. After saying a single word, "Thank you" to me she quietly took the remains from Basu and then steadily walked off somewhere. Probably heading towards Merukku.

Basu as well as Jiru who was carrying Viruhaima's equipment just silently followed after her.

Since it seems the {Slaughterers} were gathered at Merukku as well we ended up having to head there along with all the items we found.

The time was already well past midnight but the bar was still lit up and doing business.

In the bar was all of the survivors from the {Verdure.Brotherhood} and {Black.Topaz} along with Zenom and Rodrick from the {Slaughterers}.

Including Toris that's three people. Other than that there was an old man I don't know, a young man who I've seen somewhere before, and a woman in her mid 20s sitting at a corner. It seems these three are in a guardianship type position of those three young ladies.

Also, the remains of Kaku and Sara who had become vampires are wrapped in blankets as well.

There's ice surrounding them.

It's not all that unusual to be able to recover the remains of your members killed by monsters in the dungeon.

These sorts of parties appear once or twice a month.

It's not as if everyone ends up being wiped out in every case.

Though they often enshrine them in the inn the person them self was staying at.

I wet my throat with some lukewarm beer while reporting the series of events to the employer Anderson.

Since we weren't able to save Viruhaima it's impossible to get the compensation doubled so it's necessary to report back as soon as possible.

"..Got it. Thanks for your work..Here.."

Anderson replied with an expression of exhaustion and mental fatigue after losing Kaku.

At the same time she handed me the compensation in gold coins.

After taking the compensation I paid off the bill for the combat slaves and I eating and drinking and then we quickly left the bar. All that should be left is about the funeral and such for Kaku and the others and I don't particularly have anything to talk about with the young ladies attendants.

However, when everyone was walking out the bar one of the attendants called out to me.

"Please wait just a moment, Greed-sama. I would like to request a bit of your time but.."

If I remember right he was..James. James.Nokkufyuri I think it was. That second daughter the eldest daughter of Baron Refaisu, Yorire's attendant.

But you know, I want to quickly return to my inn and smack Miduchi awake so I can discuss the items we found and the information I learned. If possible I'd like to gather all the reincarnated people and return there once more by this afternoon. I'm getting tired after just eating as well.

"What is it?"

I guess that's why.

I ended up speaking in a displeased tone of voice that surprised even myself. Though, in the first place if those young ladies hadn't acted so spoiled then old man Viruhaima and the others wouldn't have gone to the trouble of switching their base to the 4th floor..though I guess it's kind of late to bring that up now.

And even if they hadn't tried to switch bases they might have ended up going to that room.

I guess that was a bit cold. Sorry about that.

I guess they saw that sir Nokkufyuri came over to my side, the other two attendants also came over to start greeting me a moment late. Sis Anderson was just glancing at us from the side. She just let out a small sigh and didn't say anything.

..So the real reason they were waiting here until this late was this.

Honestly speaking, I don't really like these sorts of things when we're still near several of their escorts and mentors that died. The only thing worth respecting is how hard they're trying to be useful to their masters. Though it's ironic.

"Yes nice to meet you. However, please think of the time and place. Right now I have no intention of having a discussion that's not appropriate for this place. And rather than discussing things with me don't you have something to say to the adventurers you hired to escort you?"

Since I stated it outright from my end before they could state their business all three of them made expressions as if they couldn't argue back.

Well, plenty of time has passed so I think there should have been plenty of time for them to finish offering condolences for the victims.

What I want to say is there's no need to specifically do it right now in front of {Black.Topaz} and the {Verdure.Brotherhood} right.

"Well them, please excuse me."

I coldly said before heading towards Boil Manor. I sent all of my combat slaves including Giberuti back to Shuni.

.....

"It seems like we made quite a bit of profit this time. First off is this, {Invisibility.Ring}."

""Oh~""

"Moreover 3 of them!"

""OH~""

"Also, this. Though there's only the right hand, it's called {Dexterous.Working.Gloves}."

""Hohou~""

I took out the {Magic.Items} that are useless with no charges as well but said "they have names attached but I couldn't detect any mana with {Detect.Magic} right..I don't really get it but I'll use identify on them later".

I didn't take out the tablet and ID card.

"Sorry but first let me get some rest for today. After I wake up I'll discuss things in more detail. I used up quite a bit of mana this time so I want to recover it. That's why I'm sorry but it doesn't seem I'll be able to go running at the usual time tomorrow."

Since it's the first time I've said something like this everyone obediently left the room.

Of course, I told them that we'd be going back into the dungeon again in the afternoon.

In the first place today was normally a day where we would be going into the dungeon so everyone should have returned to their inn.

The members are the four who returned from Merukku with me, Miduchi, Bel, Ralpa, Gwine, Basutorial, and finally Giberuti as the porter.

For the women just this time they're not allowed to have the day off because of their period.

I'm sure Miduchi is tired since it's her second day but we can't afford to be missing even one more reincarnated person to investigate that place. It's hard to tell who might notice what after all.

Ah, that's right.

It's late at night so I think she's asleep but just in case...

I go to Miduchi's room and after lightly knocking on the door it was opened right away.

Oh?

Miduchi came out with a worried expression on her face but smiled after seeing me.

I guess it would have been best if I came over right away.

"Did you not sleep?"

"Yeah..Umm..are you, hurt?"

Her expression says she was waiting for me to return.

"Nn, well, I was injured a bit but I've already healed it so I'm fine."

"Sorry.."

"There's nothing for you to apologize about. It's something I did because I wanted to and..Umm..Even though there was the problem of your condition, I know you really wanted to go and the one who stopped you was me..as a result it's for the sake of my..my future fa..family after, all."

"Fufu. Thanks~"

"Sorry for the wait. This..I confirmed that it was properly from a former Hyumu."

First off I handed her the bottle with the eyeballs in it.

"Th..Thank you.."

While holding two bottles with eyeballs in them to her chest he smiled with tears coming from her eyes.

Well, the bottles themselves are resistant against shock with a rubber coating and they have a cloth tied around them so you can't see the contents.

"With this all that's left is.."

A {Dragon}, is it.

"Yeah. One more to go."

"Just act like you're riding a large boat. No matter where it is I'll definitely find and defeat it."

I was acting cool as I said it but that's assuming it actually is somewhere I can go..

"Yeah..But, don't"I'll do anything even if it's impossible.""

"Eh?"

"I'll do anything even if it's impossible. A present is necessary when I go to greet my older brother-in-law for the first time right. At least let me act cool."

I smiled while saying.

"Really~, just come in.."

Let alone taking a shower I still haven't even taken off my armor though...

"Um..Umm, I want to recover a bit of mana so just a bit of, mugu!!"

She put her hands around my neck and sealed my mouth.

You always get really forceful during your period.

Well at least today it isn't in my room so the one the brat will glare at after dirtying the sheets won't be me, I think.

.....

We decided to camp in the teleport room of the 2nd floor.

Since we entered the dungeon in the after noon I thought there was no reason to push ourselves.

In regards to the {Butchers} and {Exterminators}, Rodrick skillfully explained to Kamu and Kimu so they and Zulu are acting as the leaders in each party as they enter the dungeon.

According to Rodrick it seems he was able to explain it quickly because they know about us being reincarnated.

Taking into consideration the fact that my combat slaves are tired he put emphasis on not overdoing things this time and just carefully acting around the lower floors.

We were luckily able to take up a corner in the room so even though I say the teleport room of the 2nd floor it's still reasonably comfortable.

Miduchi was looking a sluggish but she still gave her best without complaining. I guess the timing just coincidentally matched up but Gwine was on hers as well so she was complaining right and left though.

.....

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 17

We cleared through the 4th floor and then from the teleport room went back towards the room from before.

Using the teleportation device(?) behind the hidden door we were all successfully able to teleport to that one floor.

The time was 1:30 PM.

We decided to have lunch in the hall.
Since there's no light in the room after all.

"Now then, I can finally talk about it.."

I bring up everything I didn't say much about until now.
The reincarnated person from the distant past. Vampire Lord.
Though it's just my guess that he was an alien.
Though I don't know whether it covers the entirety of the dungeon of Baldukk but at least a portion of this floor is supposedly a space ship.

While everyone was speechless I took out the ID card and tablet.
I even turned on the electricity(?).
The climax was showing them the six broken and useless heat ray guns.

Furthermore, I had trouble trying to explain what a space ship was to Zenom.
Exactly how high level of scientific technology is required for it.
Rather than that I had to explain things about the universe and planets to him but it seems it was a good review for everyone else including myself so it wasn't a waste of time.

The things about how Lilus might have been pretending to be my wife or about the being called Zugutomore I still haven't told them about.
It's because I thought I shouldn't make a light decision until we obtain some kind of information during this search.

We ended up using up over two hours in total but since it also acted as a rest break then it should be fine.

When we went into the first room I was on guard expecting the ghouls to revive but that wasn't the case.
They were still laying around after we took the magic stones out on our way back last time.

Beyond that, they were amazed at how the hallway was buried in dirt but we smoothly advanced forward and were able to pass by the rooms where the {Wight} and {Specter} were without any problems.

Without the automatic security system reviving and not seeing even a single monster we were able to arrive in front of that one room.

Everyone held up an ID card(when I alone held one up it said "please display one for every person") and the automatic door opened before we went inside.

Chapter 318 : A Distant Journey 2

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 17

The interior of the room was just as we left it last time.

Starting with the Vampire Lord's corpse the other two vampire's corpses are laying around in the same condition with their magic stones taken out.

Around the entrance of the room where the battle took place I chose a slightly open area as our campsite and had Giberuti prepare dinner.

We all split up to see if we could find any kind of information.

Last time because we didn't spend much time at all searching I think there's quite a few things we probably overlooked.

I'm going to take another look at the things I determined were trash last time.

Several hours later, it was time for dinner preparations to be over.

We were able to gather several pieces of informative material.

First off, their living necessities.

There was cloth, string, and needles for repairing clothing and such.

Just these were different from the tablet and stuff as their name properly showed up in the status so the results of identifying them were just as I thought. Most likely they're different from the things that were originally in the ship(?) and they're items the Vampire Lord or someone else brought in from outside.

Furthermore there's a number of {Magic.Items} we overlooked last time.

One Ring of Sustenance{Glut.Fill.Ring}.

A single {Giant.Control.Horn} with five charges remaining.

A single {Climbing.Rope} with a hook attached to the end.

An {Illusion.Scepter} with 238 charges remaining.

And then the items believed to be important.

Two more tablets similar to the one I brought back.

However, we can't turn on their power(?) and my {Identify} says one of them is broken while the other one comes up as {Remains of I.Mi~.Ku - 67 Do}.

Also, there was another two more broken heat ray guns.

These I can use {Identify} on but can't see the status of them.

Including alcohol for fluids and such if you use {Status Open} on them they come up as a hyphen but just the same as that there's not even a name displayed in the status window.

All of the items that seemed to originally be on the ship(?) are kind of like that.

And then finally the equipment.

Above one of the shelves further in the room, in a place where you can't see from just standing on the floor(ceiling) we discovered several types of switches similar to a control panel. However, in the first place almost all of the switches are just the hardware and even if we try to switch them on or off nothing seemed to happen but there was just one useful thing we found.

Though it's just half of the lighting in the room.

Putting aside the jokes, among the consoles growing from the ceiling(floor) we discovered a slot that perfectly fits the size of those tablets.

Almost all of the console slots were covered in dust so even if they could be used it seemed completely impossible without cleaning them first but just two of the console slots were cleaned as if they had been in use.

I wonder if they can be used like a docking station for recharging?

If that's not the case then I'll be troubled.

In the first place I can't even tell if they're operating using electricity so I can't say anything at all though.

If we were to carelessly put it in and break it then it would be the worst so for the time being I decided to start with investigating the tablet we have on hand.

I press the switch and turn on the power(it's already a pain explaining so just power is fine right?).

After a short wait I can confirm the flashing cursor prompt requesting entry.

"What do you think I should do?"

Ralph looked between me and the screen while saying but that's my line..the screen display suddenly changed to say that "what do you think I should do" is a "incorrect".

I turned off the power in a hurry.

"It uses voice commands right."

I nodded as Miduchi asked. But, I didn't think the sensitivity on it was this good...

Well then, after collecting ourselves once more.

I'm sure it's just that Vampire Lord's name right?

"Masetto.Deioku"

The tablet display showed "Ma~setto deio~ku" along with "incorrect".
I cut off the power.

"Huh?"

"You were wrong."

Ralpha said as if making fun of me but I thought it would be this~

"That name, is it the one from before they reincarnated?"

Miduchi said.

Ah.

It's true I don't know what his name was before he reincarnated.

The names I heard from before they reincarnated were..first let's start with this one since it's a full name I guess.

"Kamira.Erisuna"

The display of the tablet showed the text "Kamira.Erisuna" along with the words, "This equipment belongs to the Engineering Department. In order to operate in a different department please enter the group password".
I cut off the power.

I don't know it!

However, there's one more I know, though this one isn't the full name.

I turn the power back on again.

"Gein"

The display of the tablet showed the text "Gein" along with the words "Gein.Fu~guria.Ba~haddu". It came up for a short moment before suddenly displaying the words "Welcome, First-Rank Engineer Gein.Faguria.Bahaddu. Activating personal operation mode."

"Oh!"

After that there was several icons displayed on the desktop screen just like the smartphones and pads I used in the past. On the top right there was something like a bar graph showing the remaining battery so I was able to confirm it had about 80% remaining.

"Alright.."

.....

I tried messing around with it for a bit but without a manual I can't really figure this stuff out.

I left Bel, Miduchi, and Toris to flipping it upside down since they seemed like they would be good at it and then we decided to have dinner first.

Of course, we tried calling out to Miduchi and the others as well but they just said "We're at the good part now" and told us to eat first.

It couldn't be helped so Zenom, Rodrick, Ralpha, Gwine, Basutorial, Giberuti, and I all had dinner without those three.

"I feel like the scenery in this room is just a bit nostalgic.."

Everyone other than Zenom and Giberuti nodded at Rodrick's words.

"Machines.."Computers" I guess..something like this, it's the first time I've seen it since reincarnating."

Basutorial said while taking another look around the room.

"That's certainly true but I still get the feeling it's somewhat strange right. Like the design"

Gwine whispered with a hotdog in one hand.

It's just as she says.

All of the consoles and such hanging from the ceiling(floor) in here don't have the scent of Earth.

The designs seem to put emphasis on slippery curves and when you sit down on the chair in front of the operation table the console seems to have a slope coming down from in front and the sides.

Not even the surface of the desk is a level surface but rather the center of it is caved in with a curved surface.

There's not a single thing resembling a button on the console and not even anything like a keyboard.

It's not like there's a mountain of gauges either(not a single one).

Of course, there's nothing like liquid crystal or CRT displays as well.

Ah, didn't the monitor project into mid-air like a holograph was it?

We can't find a single switch but I wonder how in the world you operate it?

"Certainly..It's not a design that gives off a very good feeling.."

While saying that Ralpa continued biting into her hotdog and washing it down with soup without seeming to be bothered by it at all.
Eat your food a bit slower.

"However, it's unbelievable that this could fly through the sky..you said it was different from that aeroplanes as well.."

"I don't understand anything about what's going on here."

It seems Zenom and Giberuti have abandoned trying to think about it as they stare at the box we're using as a trash can while eating cabbage salad and soup.

"..!"

Suddenly voices were raised from a bit of distance away where Miduchi and the others were messing with the tablet.

Ralpa seems to have gotten a bit interested in it as she ran over with the hotdog still in her mouth.

I thought about going as well but since I was still in the middle of eating I decided to go after I finished.

After all they've been acting like that every time some insignificant software application or whatever opens up so it's been a while since everyone stopped reacting.

"Giberuti, pour me some more bean tea."

"Yes, master. Please wait just a moment."

I watch Giberuti make a pot of tea while talking with Rodrick and the others.

"..Probably, that guy wanted to repair this spaceship..Giving it his best for over 1,000 years.."

I glance at the Vampire Lord's corpse while whispering.

"If you become an undead then I'm sure you wouldn't even need to sleep after all.."

Basutorial added while making a slightly sad expression.

"Even I would if I had some kind of method to go back.."

Rodrick said while looking into the air.

"Me too..But, I don't understand it at all so there's no helping it~"

Beard-san made a lonely looking face at just the start but soon after started eating salad without a care in the world.

Seeing that the three of us all exchanged looks with bitter smiles on our faces.

Around the time I started drinking some bean tea, Miduchi and the others finally put down the tablet and came over to eat.

"How was it? Did you figure anything out?"

"Nn~ Several things I guess."

Oh!?

"That tablet, it seems the real way to use it is after putting it into the console."

Bel said but that's something everyone was somehow able to guess.

However, we've already confirmed that nothing at all happened after sticking it into the console slot.

"Even though we used it that much it didn't seem to use up much of the "battery" at all. It seems like we'll be able to mess around with it for another two full days or so without "recharging" it."

Toris said the good news. In the worst case if we can't recharge it then it'll just become a useless pile of junk so this is good news. At the very least we'll be able to test various things out for another two days.

"Was there any problems with the characters or language? It seemed like it didn't use "English" but the language of Orth after all."

What Miduchi said was just what I had expected.

"I see. After eating, we'll trying searching for any hidden doors that might open outside. There's still places we haven't gone to on this floor after all. During that time, I'll leave the tablet to you three."

I told everyone the simple plan and sipped on some bean tea.

.....

Starting from the conclusion and even if we presented the ID card none of the hidden doors(?) would open.

Even when we tried touching the door itself or the wall nearby with the card it wouldn't move at all.

In regards to this we guessed that all of them are locked because even that subordinate vampire had to go back and forth from that location on the 4th floor when he had an ID card.

In order to unlock the doors it's probably necessary to perform the operation from the console.

Also, we tried investigating down the other split paths but in the end they were dead ends and all that was there was more hidden doors that don't open along the way, there weren't even any monsters.

However, what was waiting for us when we returned with our shoulders drooping down was a major development.

It's getting pretty late at night and close to midnight.

Certainly it's true that it would be best to get some sleep but with some new developments right in front of us there's no way I can fall asleep.

By putting the tablet into the console with a certain application running the console started running.

However, it seems the majority of the functions of the console were lost(of course I'm sure my {Delayed Blast Fire Ball} was the number one reason) and on top of that we struggled quite a bit with operating it because it's still attached to the ceiling(floor).

This time excluding Zenom and Giberuti all of us spent over two days with almost no rest gathering information.

First off I'll start talking about the reasonable important points.

I'll bring up the really important points last.

There were limits on the information we were able to access using the authority of that tablet's owner(Though I don't know if he was the real owner or not. According to Miduchi and the others and it seems the original owner was a different person). Even then we were able to find out quite a few things.

This ship(?) itself was in fact not a spaceship.

It seems when the main body of the spaceship(we couldn't figure out the ship's name) crash landed on Orth it was completely lost. However, it seems this isn't an escape ship either. Though it's nothing more than a conjecture based on words with meaning close to the one's displayed but it seems the real name of the place we're at now is called the "Sixth Collection Terminal and Denaturation Device".

On the spaceship that could be considered the mother ship there was a total of eight ships with similar functions and this one of them.

It seems you can't call this device(?) a spaceship as its primary function is to perform Terra-forming of a planet and in the first place it was fired into the ground of this planet in order to remodel it.

Furthermore,

this planet that we call "Orth" seems to be formally called "Rugu 3" by the civilization that made the spaceship. It seems that the star system where Rugu 3 is the primary planet is an extremely unique star system even in the universe where the star that acts as the sun revolves around it.

Both the primary moon Karutari and the sub-moon Neitari were actually planets that revolve around Rugu 3 as well. Furthermore, Rugu 3 itself is rotating. This star system has a total of nine planets but the two moons are the first and second planets, and the sun is the third planet.

Beyond that there's another six planets.

And then,

the solar system(the formal name this civilization uses for it is the Duvain 4 star system) which is where we originated from is in another spiraling galaxy in the galactic system.

It seems the original objective of the spaceship was to absorb some kind of data from the gathering terminal and denaturation devices that it fired into several habitable planets in the distant past including Earth, and then separate from that they were also supposed to fire eight more new terminal and denaturation devices into Rugu 3.

Normally there's no interaction between these two operations.

Each of them are independent and should have been done as separate operations.

However, while no problems occurred in regards to gathering the data and they were able to progress with it without delay, after that it seems some kind of accident occurred in the middle of {hyper drive}. It's unknown exactly what kind of thing happened.

They returned to normal space and then it seems some kind of trouble occurred when they were firing the gathering terminals into Rugu 3. This trouble was the cause and their spaceship crashed straight into Rugu 3's sun causing all of the crew to die.

But, by the time they realized it they had received new life as inhabitants of this planet.

You could say they're the same us on this part.

One of these people was Kamira.Erisuna. And then, Gein, also known as Gein.Faguria.Bahaddu. Furthermore, it seems the original name of the Vampire Lord Masetto.Deioku was Tarubo.Fakuna.

Of course there were several other people as well. In one of the easiest places to access on the working console there was a file which was most likely a list of as many details as Tarubo the one who made it could remember.

Other than this list of people's names in the stuff I'm about to talk about I think all of our conjectures are probably included in it.

Though whether or not it's all true is something only God knows I'm sure.

It seems among the crew members who reincarnated there were those that encountered others and those who died without ever meeting anyone else.

In regards to this I couldn't think much of it because it's suspicious whether someone who they never met was actually reincarnated but that's what he guessed and since the list of reincarnated people was shown to him by God when he leveled up after reincarnating so it seems that was his confidence to conclude they had all "reincarnated".

And then among those who were fortunate enough to meet it seems before long they had split into two factions in a dispute.

Kamira.Erisuna and Gein were members of one faction while Tarubo seemed to be a part of the other faction. It seems that the faction Kamira.Erisuna and Gein were members of had the superiority but it seems that some member of a certain department in Tarubo's faction had deciding information about the spaceship so they were never able to settle things between them.

Tarubo

and the others faction wanted to somehow search for the spaceship, repair it, and return, while the other faction had some similarities it seems they had a different ideology or some kind of understanding.

Additionally supplementing further and including when this spaceship crashed it wasn't listed what date all of this happened.

Of course, we couldn't figure out or even guess when the spaceship with this gathering terminal was made or when one was fired into Earth either.

In the distant past right, is the best guess we could make.

In that case the time difference with Earth becomes completely unknown but considering how I'm talking with you like this, I don't think they're all that far apart.

It seems that Toris and Miduchi were into SF novels in their previous lives so they came up with the hypothesis, "Was there some kind of time slip?" but when everyone rejected it they got stubborn and started going on about all kinds of crazy ideas like, "if you go at a speed beyond light then the possibility of connecting between the past and future is.." and "even with just a tremendous distance apart the way time advances is.." so everyone ended being unable to close things up as we all just replied "Yes~yes" to whatever they were saying.

Next up is an idea based on these facts which is a lot less credible, something considerably close to a delusion.

In regards to whatever the data that was being absorbed from several habitable planets including Earth but normally they were collected into a data-bank on the spaceship. However, because of either the accident during hyper drive or artificial accident, though the reason is completely unknown, a portion of that data ended up influencing the gathering terminals that were fired into Rugu 3.

It's believed there's no mistake that these gathering terminal and denaturation devices are capable of gathering information about the culture and civilizations of living creatures through brain waves but through what method it's capable of modifying the planet is completely unknown.

The

speculation was that at the very least this sixth gathering terminal ended up spreading information about aspects of English and Japanese culture to the area. Putting aside the characters there's aspects of the language that appear all over the place.

Isn't it same for the monsters? or at least that's what we were discussing but we couldn't come to a conclusion. Some of us thought that it might be possible for a portion of cultural data from Earth to be influencing things here while others said there's no way that's the case.

Miduchi and Toris

even went to the point of advocating that legends and such told in various places on Earth might be some kind of adverse phenomenon where the data from the gathering terminal fired into the Earth caused a bit of influence there.

Bel and Rodrick fiercely argued back that it sounded idiotic.

There's no way we would be able to figure out any of that just by thinking about it and even if we did figure out I couldn't imagine it being of any help to us from here on out so Basutoral and I said to think about more useful things.

Meanwhile Ralpa and Gwine gave up on thinking entirely as they played games using the small round parts rolling around in the pile of trash.

Zenom couldn't keep up with anyone from start to finish so he just started maintaining his beard.

And Giberuti started cutting up vegetables while glancing at that from the side as if saying that making food was his job.

In any case not only did we not have access to very much information but we weren't able to obtain any definite information(things we could conclude were definitely facts) so no matter how many guesses we make right now there's not much meaning to it.

I activated the power of the leader and forcefully made them continue investigating the information.

Regardless of that the amount of information we obtained was far too little so in the end it doesn't really close well with tons of conjectures but it can't be helped.

According to Bel, it seems that the dungeon of Benkelish in Devas is also shaped like a crater like this Baldukk.

It's probably a different gathering terminal and denaturing device from this Sixth one.

I decided that in the future I want to try investigating there as well.

Putting that aside and in regards to the dungeon but it seems that this gathering terminal and denaturation device is performing some of the management of this dungeon of Baldukk. Though I say that it seems it's been a long time since a number of functions have malfunctioned so it isn't working normally.

We weren't able to obtain any information at all about the monsters in the dungeon but it seems it was originally some kind of experimental facility to create carbon based lifeforms.

And then we found out that the data is different from what it was originally supposed to have. It's even possible that it's meant to cause changes or sudden mutations in lifeforms. At this point Toris and Miduchi's assertions were put aside and they were making depressed expressions.

Finally is the really important parts.

First off about magic.

Though we weren't able to obtain any defining information but the sole thing we figured out was that the crew members only touched magic for the first time after they were reincarnated.

In other words, there's a high chance that magic is something unique to this Orth.

Next up about the Gods.

It seems that after all the Gods actually exist.

Whether they're a higher order being or the will of the universe, or whatever else is completely unknown.

But, it seems through some kind of method it's possible to ascend to become a God.

Other than that we couldn't figure out much else.

And, about the other hidden doors.

This ended with the extremely unfortunate result of only learning that we wouldn't be able to figure out anything without a higher access level of the data since that was also necessary to unlock the doors.

Going

off that Tarubo's words and it seems like there's still another terminal or something where we should be able to gain more information.

After that in regards to a map of Orth.

We searched as much as we could thinking there might be some kind of geographical data of Rugu 3 Orth from the spaceship but not a single piece of information like that was rolling around in the areas we could access.

In regards to this we'll either have to login with an account with higher authority or somehow find a way to open the hidden doors and access the terminal that we're guessing might exist beyond them, otherwise there's no choice but to give up.

And then in regards to the facilities including the console where we obtained this information.

We were able to determine that the energy used to maintain the dungeon and the energy used to recharge the tablet and console are completely different, and the energy used to maintain this console is already on the verge of running dry.

For that reason we decided to stop investigating things here.

Anything more than this would require a higher level of authority for operating the tablet or console.

Furthermore, in regards to methods of forcefully opening the hidden doors with attack spells we had no choice but to give up.

The reason is because we obtained the information that if someone intrudes into the room through any unlawful method the facilities in those rooms will automatically start erasing all of the data on the terminals in them.

If the facilities aren't running then in the first place we wouldn't be able to look at the data.

If it is running then it would be erased. In other words a stalemate.

We also gained understanding about why several heat ray guns were left laying around without being repaired.

It was simply because Tarubo didn't have the knowledge required for repairing them and didn't have any data on the structure or method to fix them.

He didn't even have the right repair tools.

It seems from the start he was giving it best trying to somehow repair the broken console but in the end he wasn't able to properly fix it.

Now that it's come to this there's nothing left we can do at the current point.

There's no choice but to be satisfied with obtaining a decent amount of information.

Chapter 319 : Cashing In 1

Year 7447, Month 7, Day 19

After returning to the surface just like that we all returned to our inns. Putting aside Zenom, Giberuti, and a small number of exclusions like Ralpa and Gwine, everyone's steps are somewhat heavy. Ah, for it to be two out of eight reincarnated people then that's 25%. I guess 1/4th isn't a small number but a decent sized faction.

In any case the primary cause is that we learned about things we never would have expected going into the dungeon this time. Of course, it's not that the mood is dark but the amount of things we found out is just too many that everyone is a bit confused.

The other members of the {Slaughterers} are supposed to return from the dungeon tomorrow so I want to organize everything by then. There's a lot of positive topics after all.

During dinner whenever everyone was gathered together we all went over things again.

In the first place, even if aliens came along in the distant past there's no relation to us right now at all.

If we mention that they were gathering some kind of cultural data from the Earth and Orth, all I can say is so what?

Even if they were trying to modify the environment, in the end thanks to that it's a fact that we're able to live here, so normally it would be something to be grateful to them about. Somehow it's vexing though.

"In the first place you know~ Orth, no, Rugu 3 was it? Isn't it doubtful that it would be the central planet of the star system?"

There were those who nodded at the question I raised and those who made confused faces at it as well.

"Why?"

The representative of those who were making confused faces, Ralph replied.

"Why you say? You, stars are normally unreasonably heavy you know? The diameter of the sun is over 200 times larger than the Earth and its weight should be some tens of thousands of times greater. There's also the fact that the star isn't shining but normally they're "pulsar" after all. In that case gravity and such.."

Tori started a lecture.

In other words, if by chance Rugu 3 Orth has the same size as the Earth, then thinking about the mass and it's extremely unnatural.

For a fixed star(the normal meaning of a fixed star is that it's constantly in place and doesn't move around. It's not just a planet that gives off light) that acts as the primary star of the star system it has too small of a mass.

We also mixed in the conjecture that the sun of this star system is probably about the same size as the sun from the solar system.

After all stars that shine are extremely big and heavy.
Interruptions joined in from multiple sides over this.

It's because in that case we'd need to assume that the distance between the Earth and the sun in the solar system and that the age(?) of the sun on Orth are about the same.

If the distance is closer then it's fine if the sun is much smaller and even if the mass of Orth is heavier then it doesn't hold true.

Although, if it's far heavier than the gravity would increase as well so the same kind of carbon based lifeforms as Earth wouldn't be able to grow.

As the alcohol started to make it's rounds we kept repeating discussions like that.

Rather~

you know. Why are we always bringing up the Earth as the comparison?

What was it again? Ah, that's right, even in astrology there are countless things we still haven't found an explanation for right?

Couldn't Orth just be that sort of planet we can't explain? I don't think there's much meaning even if we knew the size or mass of the planet though."

Ralpa started questioning the meaning of learning itself.

Of course, she received quite a few retorts but asked in a carefree way,

"Then explain magic and monsters and such to me. We might be able to explain magic as super powers so just monsters is fine. I can't understand how something like undead could exist even less." and shut them up.

Hearing that said and it's certainly true.

Putting

aside undead, things like Minotaurs I really don't understand how they could exist. How in the world could they have evolved to become cow people? Even the {Wyverns} flying through the air with that body size completely goes against the laws of physics. In the world there's even giants with a height of over 5 meters and {Frost Lizards} that spit out frost. Something like a Treant that's a tree walking around, no matter how I think about it's a phenomenon close to a nightmare. That fellow, even after disassembling it we couldn't find a single trace of anything like internal organs, even the structure of it's body after death no matter how I looked it couldn't be anything other than wood.

It's true that monsters themselves are the much closer mystery.

"It ends up that there's no meaning in thinking about it right? Let's just stop. For starters, it wasn't a spaceship, and even if it was I can't imagine that we'd be able to repair it."

Bel closed things up by saying that.

It seemed like Toris and Ralpa hadn't had enough of arguing but what Bel said was what Bastoral and I had been saying all along and since Rodrick and Miduchi stopped participating the topic gradually changed to a different direction.

About the {Magic.Items} that we obtained in the control room(?) of that gathering terminal this time.

Remembering that we suddenly obtained a large number of treasures all at once and everyone's faces loosened up.

Though you know, I don't want you to misunderstand but things like the {Fire Ball.Wand} and the {Lightning.Wand} had no charges left.

Even the method to charge them is unknown so unless we use them for fraud or something they're dirt cheap right.

After I said that they objected saying there were things with charges still left and things that are unrelated to the charges.

Yeah.

That's true.

My bad for throwing cold water on your conversation with such a boring topic.

Right now, the amulet we have an auction going for is expected to land a considerable price so the topic gradually shifted to what the final price tag will be.

However, it's already in the middle of investigation so when I mentioned that we should get news on the initial estimates soon they started getting excited over this and that again.

.....

Afternoon, before the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} returned from the dungeon the caravan from my family arrived. One day sooner than planned. Sean the squire leader was leading the caravan again.

Around the same time as the caravan arrived a messenger from Tokerin the healer in the capital arrived as well.

The survey of the four territories along the northern parts of the Dirt Plains must have finished.

It was right before our allies return from the dungeon so I told the messenger that I'd go and listen to the report after I finish making deliveries to the castle tomorrow and let them return, then suggested Sean and the others have a night's rest in Baldukk.

After talking about how we finished off a {Wyvern} on the 11th floor and starting with Sean all of the squires were considerably surprised and pleased as if they had done it themselves.

"However, to bring down a {Wyvern}, as expected of Al-sama."

"We wanted to see the head as well."

"Eeeh..Is it really that big!"

"Ho~hou~ So it's become that popular even in the capital!? Doesn't that make you a hero!"

They started making a lot of noise again praising me for defeating the {Wyvern}. But, honestly speaking it feels good.

By the way, are Kuro and Mary still not coming?

I think they're also doing something like a newly-wed trip so it's fine even if they take their time a bit but I hope they at least come within the year.

As expected I'm sure it won't take that long huh?

Year 7447, Mont 7, Day 21

After delivering the armor, Miduchi and I went to Tokerin's clinic.
Of course, we're bringing along some sausages as a gift.
This time it isn't the usual five varieties but some new products that still aren't being sold yet with crushed nuts, liver mixed in, and 100% beef.
After we arrived, we were politely lead further inside.

In the inner room other than Tokerin there was a good-looking man with a good physique and a sharp glare sitting on the sofa.
A tall dark elf.
Deep purple skin that's close to pure black.
His hair that's white as snow is trimmed up short but the border at the back is grown out long and braided as it looks extremely well on him.
The clothes he's wearing are simple linen but the design is loose and it's clean as if it had just been washed.
On the parts of his arms coming out from his sleeves I can see quite a few old wounds similar to Miduchi, in comparison to his beautiful face without a scratch.

There's a considerably high quality long sword on his waist.

The moment she saw that man Miduchi jumped up in surprise and lowered her head.

"Ch..Ch..Chief warrior! It's been a while!"

Chief warrior? I guess that means he's an important person.

"It's nice to meet you. My name is Alan.Greed."

After entering the room and greeting him the good-looking man stood up from the sofa to greet me by stretching out his right hand.

I stretched out my right hand and said {Status Open} while using {Identify}.

Uho~ this is quite impressive.

He can put up a good fight against the commanders of the first knight group! Even his MP is extremely high on the same class as Tokerin and Miduchi, and close to my older brother.

If older brother's level were to go up I wonder if it would be like this?

Listening to his conversation and it seems this chief warrior called Zageruforu lead several subordinates himself to investigate the Dirt Plains.

Hearing that and Miduchi started lowering her head again like subordinate.

"Rank one warrior Chizumagurol. There's no need to humble yourself to that extent. We accepted a job and just accomplished it accordingly."

He said with a quiet smile and a calm tone of voice.

But, even though it's not anything important when this kind of handsome person says it it sure sounds cool.

In comparison to Toris who has the blood of a Japanese person mixed in and you get the impression of a delicate and beautiful elf but still the overall balance is good in combination with his age he gives off a cool and tasteful aura.

"Tokerin-san. This, it's nothing great but it's the new product of our company. If it's alright please enjoy them."

"Hohou! A new product is it!?"

When I handed over the package Tokerin's expression loosened up. Sausages are one of his favorite foods after all.

"Yeah, I think they'll be delicious again this time. They're still products we have yet to put up for sale but please try them."

Tukerin accepted the package and immediately started to confirm what was inside.

Take your time eating them later on.

The chief warrior looked at that Tukerin with a slightly bitter expression.

I'm getting along with him reasonably well after all.

Please don't hold that much against him.

The chief warrior handed over a booklet.

"Now then, Greed-san. This is the report you requested. Please confirm it."

The booklet was made up of several tens of pages of cheap parchment with a decent width gathered together.

It's lighter than it looks but it's certainly a width that has some feedback to it.

"I'll take a look at it then."

I flip through the pages glancing at them.

Ho? So that place was like this...

He~ that territory, so it isn't making tobacco...

Mu. 70% tax rate..Seriously?

An? Damage from Centaurs..Those Centaurs?

Hmm..the words written down have quite a few strange usages of words just like

Miduchi used to speak but it still feels like they did a good job investigating. Though I can't say much without taking a better look just from a glance it seems pretty well put together.

There were several places where I thought, "they investigated this much but why is just this part missing?" but I think the details in the report are still plenty useful. It doesn't seem like there's any problem with the amount and quality of information.

Several minutes after flipping through the pages.

"I think it's a sufficient investigation. Thank you very much."

I lowered my head and thanked him.

The amount of crop that can be harvested per area is completely missing(when I asked Miduchi about it afterwards because they aren't knowledgeable about field crops she said they were probably satisfied with just investigating the types of crops. However, she didn't think they had enough time to investigating the area of the fields) and most likely the local information like the distinction between the kingdom knight group, the local knight group, and the local squires hasn't been done either.

However, I'm sure Kuro and Mary will keep an eye on those things so it should be possible to complete the data.

"No, please raise your head. Our country has been greatly in the care of Greed-san's company so we want to maintain a good relation going forward as well."

Ah, come to think of it, Miduchi said they were struggling quite a bit to obtain foreign currency.

I guess they think I'm a good customer to earn a stable amount from investigations and such from here on out?

That must be why the chief warrior himself came out...

Though I say that something like surveying isn't done all that..No, periodic surveys are necessary right.

"Of course, I'm also receiving a great amount of help. These are important pieces of information."

I made a friendly smile and continued speaking.

"Also you know, this is about after next year..Depending on the case it might be a bit later but I would like to ask for another investigation different from the one this time."

"Ho? What is it?"

Zageruforu and TUkerin both leaned forward.

Both of them are putting up faces almost like a Noh mask to not convey their expressions but the only one succeeding is Tukerin while Zageruforu is giving off a pleased, "Alright!" kind of feeling.

"There's two requests I'd like to make for the time being. First, I've heard that in your country those who break the law are sold outside of the country as slaves as a punishment. If possible please tell me the information on where they've been sold in the past. Also, it's fine if I buy them from here on out. In regards to this it's fine even right away. The other one is.."

I watch their expressions while speaking.

There's no impression on either of their faces that they heard something unpleasant.

I couldn't see anything particularly unusual.

Although, I heard from Miduchi that something like a criminal being sold outside of the country as a slave almost never happens in Lail Kingdom where the public security is high and there's almost no crimes. It seems it barely even happens once every 10 years or so.

However, even if they have a bit of a problem with their personality if it's an adult dark elf then there's a considerably high chance they'll be able to use magic.

On top of that taking into consideration they have MP in the triple digits and there's no way I can miss them.

If they're hopelessly beyond my ability to manage then I'll just kill them to prevent future trouble.

In that case, I'll end up wasting quite a bit of money(it seems that fundamentally when dark elves are sold as combat slaves they have a considerable price) but if any other foreign reincarnated person sets their sights on them it's much better than them cooperating. Rather than their combat strength including their magic skills, my main objective is preventing Lail Kingdom's efficient method of raising warriors from spreading around.

Well in regards to this after I obtain my territory I'll have Miduchi return to her country once then I intend to have her give out the prohibition from selling others off as slaves so it's just something like insurance.

According to Miduchi and if she uses Lilus to give out the command then there's pretty much no problem with prohibiting it after all.

"I'd like to enter a stable mercenary contract. The warriors from your country are extraordinarily excellent after all. Even as an adventurer I think being together with people like that makes it somewhat easier to relax.."

Their expressions moved a bit.

"I was thinking of carrying out the contract over a span of years. If it's possible that is..I guess so, setting within half a year as the target I'd like to ask for an estimate on the price."

The rank one warrior class? I think it was? that underwent harsh training to be assassins just like Miduchi are probably without a doubt impossible.

When it comes to the second and third ranks then the compensation drops quite a bit as it seems there aren't many who receive more than 2,000,000 in wages per year.

It should still be considerably cheaper than employing knights.

After that we went over the small conditions like their age and commander class while I conveyed my simple requests and then left Tukerin's clinic.

Incidentally, I received a polite letter of thanks for the gift of sausages with both of their signatures on it at a later date.

Supposedly Zageruforu was moved almost like when he first ate a Baldoggie. It was that they would definitely love to purchase them the day we start sales of the products.

Well, it seems he's got quite the high salary so he should be able to purchase them without a problem.

.....

Year 7447, Month 8, Day 5

Miduchi and I, the two of us have come together to the Sandak Company in the capital.

Yesterday was the cutoff date for bids on that amulet.

While I said the two of us, Zulu, Angela, Henry, and Mekku, my four combat slaves are along as escorts as well.

They're waiting at the entrance to the company.

Obviously we're not empty handed.

We've brought along a reasonable amount of luggage.

"Welcome and thank you for coming."

The company president politely welcomed us.

"Now then, about the bidding on that but.."

Miduchi and I both gulp.

"The winning bid was 7,050,000,000 Z."

Ooooh!!!

Miduchi and I spontaneously exchanged looks.

"Please confirm it."

He showed us a copy of the proof of sale.

I took out the sales proof for Greed Company from my pocket and with a trembling hand wrote down the price of 5,992,500,000 Z, 85% of the 7,050,000,000 sale amount. Since it was such a high price, my fingers were trembling from excitement so the characters looked like earth worms squirming around. Furthermore, in regards to a thumb print it already had a wax seal ahead of time.

After going through the paperwork when I finally thought we would receive the cash I went to hand over the proof of sale that we just made and I was stopped as he laughed. As expected the opening of the bids only just finished so it seems they haven't received the payment for the goods yet. Thinking calmly about it and that's only obvious.

I doubt there are very many people out there that could pay that amount in full on the spot and even if there were if they live in a foreign land it's necessary to transport it over. Even if they're in a nearby area the amount was only decided yesterday. Yesterday and today, not to mention in the morning there's no way the payment would already be finished right...At best they'd be going over to the shrine to take out money by now.

The proof of sales is something you hand over in exchange for the money so it would be strange to hand it over ahead of time, so it was a bit embarrassing that I couldn't think that far(I even brought along the slaves as escorts) as I tried to change the subject to something else.

"By the way president. Today we've brought along some different items. Is it possible to auction them again?"

I turned red while saying that and the company president was slightly surprised before happily laughing that it was fine. Since there's the people who missed out on the bid this time there's no reason to overlook a chance to profit.

What I brought out was two of the {Invisibility.Rings}. The one with 47 charges remaining and one with no more charges left.

The president looked at the status very interested and used the spell {Detect.Magic}.

"These two both have the same name. However, I can feel mana from one of them but I can't feel any kind of mana from the other."

I didn't mention how there's charges on them.

"Hm~mm.."

After confirming the ring the president made up his mind and put it on his finger.

For a lot of the {Magic.Items} you can equip you can understand how to use them after you put them on after all.

"I see..It's true I can understand the method to use even this ring.."

Even when it comes to the {Invisibility.Ring} with no charges left if you put it on your finger the method to use it will float into your head when you focus on it. Of course even if you attempt to use it nothing will happen though.

"Obviously we tried using both of them. When you use one of them you can become transparent for a considerable period of time and can't be seen by other people. Nothing happened for the other one. It's strange right?"

I tried saying that. It's testing out whether he knows about the concept of the "charge usage count" but I'm trying to appeal that I "have no knowledge" of that concept.

"Mwu..What in the world is this..."

Seeing the confused president and I felt a bit disappointed and just a bit of dark happiness.

Of course the disappointment is that "it seems impossible to recharge" and the dark happiness is because I think "there's a high probability that the {Fireball.Wand} that's considered a national treasure probably has a charge count to it".

"As a matter of fact, there's still more."

Next what I took out was the {Loincloth.Of.Daring}.

What kind of evaluation this will get I can't even imagine...

Chapter 320 : Cashing In 2

Year 7447, Month 8, Day 5

"Uh..This is.."

The

moment the company president saw me take the {Loincloth.Of.Daring} out from my bag without even using {Detect.Magic} he was lost for words.

That's not unreasonable.

We've already washed it so the bad smell is long since gone(if you carefully try sniffing it then it'll probably still be there) but it still looks like nothing more than a worn-out and dirty piece of leather.

Even then he still took it in one to check the status and additionally used the spell {Detect.Magic}.

"..{Loincloth.Of.Daring}

is it..It certainly seems to be a {Magic.Item} but...However, this..for a piece of leather that looks considerably worn out, that is..."

Here, it's a loincloth so try winding it around your waist.
Even if you put it on nothing will float into your head though.

However, just as expected from the president of a major company.

The president quickly stood up from the sofa and put on the loincloth.

Of course, it's normally not underwear.

The Mino was only wearing that so it was like underwear but you can wear it over your waist above armor almost like a miniskirt.

"I can't feel anything in particular.."

Just as I thought...

For items where the main effect has an influence on your status even if you put them on you won't feel anything.

This is something we figured out from testing the {Bracer.Of.Might}.

Eh? The only one who put the loincloth on was Zulu.

Somehow, that is..isn't it unpleasant right?

Even when I asked Zulu he said, "I don't feel anything in particular" so I thought that was the case but after all.

No~

between the bracers and the loincloth I think the loincloth is more powerful but when it comes to wearing it the slaves should start first right.

There's no meaning other than that.

The president took off the loincloth and carefully put it on top of the table.

"What do you think about that? Do you think it would sell?"

The president remained silent and looked at me before saying, "It will be difficult..however, the mana that can be felt from it is quite impressive so it isn't like there wouldn't be anyone interested in it."

"Putting aside an auction do you know anyone who might know the effect or a method to investigate it similar to the previous ring?"

"Hm~mm.. Well I can at least try asking.."

"That's true. Putting aside whether or not we'll sell it, if I can get you to even just investigate it then..there's no way to put a price on it just like that after all.."

"I understand. Please leave this item to me. The fee for the investigation will be determined based on the magic used on this loincloth and the degree of it but is that alright?"

"What kind of price do you think it'll be?"

"It's just a general estimate but the if effect on it is converted into magic levels then please think that every 1 level will add about 2,000,000 Z. Also, in the case we can't determine the effect within 2-3 months then there's no need to pay the fee."

"I understand. Please investigate under those conditions. I'll leave it in your care until then."

Miduchi and I lowered our heads to the president and then excused ourselves from Sandak Company.

Something like a lender's note for the loincloth there's no need to write one over every little thing.

We've made a number of transactions and trust each other a reasonable amount, and above all else we're even slightly distant relatives.

Furthermore,

it seems they expect the payment for the amulet to come in either today or tomorrow so the person who purchased it must be from the capital. It was decided that we'd come to pick up the payment tomorrow evening.

.....

"That president sure is amazing at reading right."

On our way back to my company from Sandak Company, Miduchi whispered in admiration.

"That's right. He almost deserves a reward for it. And it's quite impressive that he has connections and clients that can pay that much money."

It's close to impossible for me right now.

Eventually I want to develop connections with rich merchants and nobles but it's impossible for the time being.

"But, with this.."

"Yeah, if the money from this time comes in then after paying taxes I'll have just over 9,000,000,000 on hand..I'm sure that one {Wyvern} armor will be even higher so.."

I looked at Miduchi over my shoulder and she was gently smiling.

"Yeah, that's great isn't it."

"It was really fortunate that I was able to reach my goal with money before turning 20 years old..If it was just me alone then.."

I'm sure it would have taken a lot more time.

"Isn't it fine not to worry about that? I don't think everyone would like it if you paid too much attention to things like that right?"

That's certainly true.

After arriving at the company we went up to the second floor and took a break.

However, I can't afford to laze around without doing anything.

After a short break while drinking cold tea with ice floating in it I got to sorting out the account books in the morning.

In the afternoon after having lunch I went around greeting our suppliers.

Obviously bringing around something like a gift for being in their care but including negotiations for the ranch owner to move and such, there's a mountain of things to do.

.....

Year 7447, Month 8, Day 7

"Uo..."

"Pretty.."

"How big right. Chomp..So they're harder than gold."

"Don't bite them..It's dirty right."

"This is..{Status Open}.."

"Hohou, me too. {Status Open}.."

After paying the taxes for the sale price on that {Earth.Amulet} and the remaining was 5,287,500,000 Z so I gave out bonuses.

All of the reincarnated people and Zenom excluding Rodrick and Bastoral were targets of it.

It's over 100,000,000 Z per person so I decided to give platinum coins to those people.

The size of platinum coins is about two sizes larger than gold coins with a diameter of roughly 70 mm. They're considerably thick and the weight is probably over 200 grams.

After spending some time staring at the platinum coins in my room at Boil Manor, we all went together to leave them in our lockers at the shrine.

"Hey, we made quite a bit of money this time right? Is it over 10,000,000,000?"

Ralpa asked with an excited expression but hearing that everyone's attention fell on me.

"Nn~ I'm still about 1,000,000,000 short. But, after the Wyvern armor from last month is completed it should easily exceed it."

I smiled in a good mood while replying.

"Around Spring of next year was it?"

What Gwine is mentioning is probably the period when the armor should be completed and delivered.

"That should be the case."

"But, we don't know what kind of price it will be so until then I think we should continue earning in the dungeon."

Toris nodded as he said. Bel agreed.

It seems they're thinking about purchasing some slaves as well.

For that sake it's necessary to earn a lot more money.

In order to create some surplus I want to earn a bit more and it seems everyone else is in agreement with thinking that.

Of course, it seems that the Wyvern armor will end up with an outrageous price on it so there's an extremely high chance that it'll go way over the amount of my goal(other than the 10,000,000,000 Z that I'm paying to the King I think I'll need another 1,000,000,000 Z or so that I can use for shopping and various strategies). If it doesn't reach it then we still have various valuable {Magic.Items} so it's fine to just make up for it by selling those. Excluding the {Breeze.Horseshoes} there's nothing else that I feel is absolutely necessary after all.

And

the Wyvern armor will be completed in the Spring of next year. It's just a matter of diligently exploring the dungeon and earning as much as we can until then. Although, while earning is important there's also investigating that gathering terminal..though I wonder what we should do about it? Well, I have some interest in it. Though either way something like repairing the spaceship is definitely impossible so rather than that I'm more interested in the information on Rugu 3 Orth that should have been stored in the data-bank.

There's not a very good outlook that we'll be able to find anymore information than this but I intend on investigating it until we're sure that we won't be able to find anymore information than we already have. If we don't then one day we might think, "if only I had searched more properly at that time.." I'm not the only one thinking that way. It wouldn't be strange for anyone to think of it.

.....

Year 7447, Month 8, Day 13

In the evening we returned to the surface from the dungeon. Even in the middle of the summer Baldukk doesn't get very many evening breezes because it's a basin. We met up with everyone who were wiping away their sweat as they wait for us to return and then went to eat dinner.

In order to change from our equipment we returned to Boil Manor and the head clerk called out for me. It seems there was a message for me. It's probably either one of the young ladies trying to get into contact with me or some random adventurer asking to join the {Slaughterers}.

Since it's always the same when I'm called out by head clerk everyone went ahead up the stairs towards their rooms.

...

"When did you take this message?"

According to the head clerk it was yesterday. It seems they said they would return after hearing that we were in the dungeon and would return today. Supposedly they came once in the morning and around noon today to see if we had returned yet.

Hmhmm~ They were quite a bit faster than I thought.

I take off my equipment in my room and Miduchi came over as I was changing.

"About Kuro and Mary. It seems they've already arrived in Baldukk."

"Eh? Ah, those people. Didn't you say it would take them a bit longer?"

I said it but that was just my guess. If you go from Kiru to Baldukk without a carriage then it takes three weeks while hurrying. If you come normally then four weeks. Even if you take your time coming it's about a month. If there's a carriage as well then plus two weeks or so I guess. They had contacted me saying they would leave Kiru in the middle of April so it comes out to them having spent over two months investigating things.

"And, where are they now?"

"For the time being it seems they're staying at Matoson Inn. Since they probably don't know Ginger or Hisu's faces I left a message at the front for them to come to Murowa if they come again today."

"Should I go and get them?"

"Nn~ even if you end up missing each other..Well I guess it's fine. Let's go together."

Then I'll hurry up and change.

A short shower is fine.

I left the message at the front just in case we end up missing each other.

I told everyone to go ahead to Murowa as Miduchi and I went towards Matoson Inn.

.....

After arriving at Matoson Inn and checking Kuro and Mary were there but Giner and Hisu had just left. We were invited to their room so we went into the room Kuro and Mary were staying in. These fellows, how cheeky taking a two person room. Even though they're underage..err I guess they're already adults now.

"Sorry about that. We were in the dungeon until now."

I said that while sitting on one of the two chairs. Miduchi took the other chair while Kuro and Mary are both sitting on their beds. We finished up greetings.

"Umm, Al, this.."

Mary handed several gold and a dozen other coins to me.

"It's fine. Hold onto them. If it's just an amount of 20,000,000 or 30,000,000 then we can earn it back quickly so it's fine if you return it all to me at that time."

When I laughed while pushing back the coins and the two of them exchanged looks in surprise.

"Hey, rather than that the two of you got married right?"

When Miduchi asked them while smiling they both stretched out their hands with an embarrassed expression.
I guess they mean to check their status.

"{Status Open}.."

Mu..Kuro's {Charm} has increased in level.
Sorry about that.

And Mary's ability points are still a bit higher.
It's most likely because she was able to get proper nutrition and exercise helping out around their restaurant while she was still a child.

Stuff

like farming and training wit the sword are heavy labor for a child in the single digits so I guess that means the way she was raised was optimal for increasing ability points.

Just as expected other than MP there's various things before 10 years old.
Though they do say anything is bad when taken too far...

Well, it's not a significant difference and if it's just this much then after training them in the dungeon for half a year it'll be like a measurement error.

Also, it seems that the proficiency level of the ability points is completely different so I can't exactly say that it's better to have higher ability points after all.

Rather than that I can tell how much effort they've put in from their experience points.

They haven't participated directly in combat during any wars and stuff like defeating monsters was at best once or twice per year.

Even that was surrounding a {Horned Bear} with several tens of people and beating it from all sides so it's still a pitiful amount.

In that case, most of those experience points should be earned from training.

Even for the magic skills they shouldn't have been able to use it to damage living creatures so everyday in and out they must have put in effort for them.

"The two of you, congratulations on getting married."

"Congratulations."

I said it blessing them from the bottom of my heart.

I thought Mary would turn bright red from embarrassment and lower her head but she was just laughed shyly.

"My bride is over 20 years ol..ow!!"

"I've told you not to talk about my age right!!"

However, it's something I thought when I met him last year but the naivety I used to see in Kuro's face has disappeared.

I guess being chafed by the knight group he's grown up a good bit.

I think he should have been forced to take some amount of responsibility.

In that sort of meaning I don't think Ralpa and Gwine have grown up very much..is it my fault?

Even if they reincarnated Ralpa and them were originally high schoolers.

After that they've spent a number of years as adventurers so they don't have any of that sort of naivety but I still feel like a lot of their actions are like brats.

Adventurers aren't all that different from homeless vagrants so wandering around exploring with just Zenom, I guess she's just spent two childhoods without having to shoulder any kind of responsibility...

Until we met up with Gwine she should have been under the protection of her parents who were merchants so she shouldn't have had very many responsibilities either.

They don't seem like people who've lived for over 30 years since being born right...

Well, whatever.

I've gotten bored of smiling while watching their couple gag.

"By the way, what about investigating the Dirt Plains.."

The two of them pulled out the report made of a pile of parchments similar to the ones the dark elf gave me.

Hmm...

It seems reasonably well put together. There was no way they could take proper measurements so it was just estimates but this one actually has two tables of the estimated harvest amounts and the types of crops. They also mentioned the industries other than farming and while it's insufficient there's some notes on the types of ores that are mined.

There's also quite a few details on the army and local knight groups that are stationed in them.

Unfortunately there's not a single note about the public safety situation but it's fine to reference that from the dark elves report.

The only thing worth taking note of is that the reputation of each of the lords of the various villages and towns they passed through are written down.

After

I obtain the territory quite a few of the people who were acting as governors of those villages and towns will return to the capital as well so it's not like they all remain in my territory as low ranking nobles but there's some that were originally settled in those places so they'll remain and you could say this will be a good reference point for them.

"Thanks. This will be a big help."

After thanking them Kuro and Mary exchanged looks once. And then Mary nodded once before speaking.

"Hey, because you told us we investigated it pretty seriously but what do you plan to do?"

"Yeah. What in the world are you going to use it for?"

Ah, I never told them about it.

"In the near future I'll receive peerage as an high ranking noble and receive a territory. One of these four territories will become mine and I'll raise my flag there. It's the preliminary investigation for that."

Hearing the details for the first time the two of them made expressions as if they were lost for words for a moment but soon after leaned closer to me.

"Hey, you'll take ownership of it you say? What do you mean?"

"You'll become a high ranking noble?"

I simply explained the situation and told them to confirm the small details with everyone else at the restaurant we're about to go.

I introduced Kuro and Mary to everyone at Murowa.

I had mentioned before that I threw the two of them into the knight group in my home town and Gwine and Angela had already met them before so there was no problem with them mixing in with the reincarnated people. However, the two of them seemed a bit timid in front of the non-reincarnated members.

Well, they are the strongest adventurers in Baldukk so I guess it's to be expected.

Rokko has the face of a good guy but his actions are pretty rough and then Kamu, Kimu, and Misu who has a bouncy image all originally gave off the atmosphere of strong adventurers so they can feel that.

Of course the other members are pretty similar as well, I guess Mary and Kuro who have barely risked their lives are being swallowed by the atmosphere so it can't be helped.

"Now then, starting next time I'll be changing our lineup for entering the dungeon a bit. It's fundamentally the same as up until now but I'll be leaving the {Saviors}. For a short while I'll be threshing these two on the 1st floor."

An unpleasant grin appeared on everyone's faces.

They must be remembering how after we absorbed {Sun.Ray} they were forced to slaughter monsters on the 1st floor day in and day out for a while.

Kuro and Mary who don't get it are confused about what part of that would cause such a mean looking smile.

"The two of you probably won't be able to keep up with everyone else at all just like you are now. Well tomorrow morning I'll check your skill so if my reading is off then I'll think about it again."

"Mu..Of

course~ as an adventurer..we've never entered the dungeon but both Mary and I have officially received investiture as knights. I don't think we'll fall that far behind when it comes to using the sword or spear."

Kuro seems to be getting a bit stubborn. Mary said as well, "I won't be luggage. Even I'm a knight you know" seeming a bit angry. Of course I didn't say it intending to make fun of them at all. In some ways I just gave out the obvious evaluation and though it would be difficult if we don't force them to earn some experience but...

"Hey now~ the two of you. It's fine for you to have confidence but you should honestly listen to what Al says. Or are you underestimating the dungeon of Baldukk? Han?"

Kevin quietly scolded them.

"But, we came here to help become Al's strength. Not to weigh him down."

Kuro argued back. I'm grateful for those feelings but you know. Don't get so on guard.

"That's right. I think the skills of the Webdos Knights are reasonably high."

Ah, I see. These two think we're underestimating the Webdos Knight Group.

"It can't be helped~ Hey, Henry, Mekku. Tell these two your history."

Binsu activated his authority as a noble and ordered Henry and Mekku.

"Yes.

I, Henry.Okonnell, joined Duke Stahlz Knight Group in Devas Kingdom 10 years ago and received investiture as a true knight 7 years ago. After that I was taken as war prisoner the year before last and on that occasion was purchased by master. I had a good bit of confidence in my skill but I was far from reaching everyone else. Even though it's almost been two years since I started entering the dungeon I still feel like I'm holding everyone back. However, master. I'll definitely show you I can be useful."

Even though he was born in Devas Kingdom a foreign country, they were a bit surprised hearing that someone who's been a true knight for five years was even struggling as an adventurer.

"I, Meisun.Garunashu, joined the Viscount Makaraito Knight Group 8.5 years ago and received investiture as a knight 6.5 years ago. After that just the same as Okonnel I was taken as a war prisoner and purchased by master. I thought I was skilled just like Okonnel but after all I'm still far from everyone else..However, I'll definitely show you I can be useful as well, master."

Since a Laio like him was the same as Henry and said he couldn't keep up with us right after being purchased

Kuro and Mary were considerably surprised.

Of course, it's not like he couldn't match up at all.

Even just from learning sword and spear techniques formally under someone they were a decent combat strength right from the start.

"Don't

bully them so much...Kuro, and Mary as well. It's fine if you feel unsatisfied but I need to confirm your skills first. Right after you've just married it doesn't concern just your lives but everyone else as well. And no one here is looking down on the Webdos Knight Group. It's strange putting it this way but it's fine as long as you can prove your abilities after all."

Well, even though everyone is reincarnated if the newcomer suddenly says not to treat them like luggage then it's only obvious to tease them a bit for acting cheeky. It's something they'll learn right away after all.

Furthermore, just as expected during the combined training the next day, Kuro and Mary were beaten left and right. However, I can read the feelings behind everyone.

They're afraid that there are more competitors trying to enter the {Saviors} with the two of them joining. Even more-so when the two of them are reincarnated people and on top of that skilled enough to receive investiture as true knights. They aren't like Rodrick who almost automatically received investiture because he was the eldest son of a Count.

Ah, for the sake of their honor I'll add on this as well but they certainly had a decent level of skill. It's not as much as Fio in the past but they were quite a bit better than Rodrick was back then. If it's this then they should be able to manage the 2nd or 3rd floor as long as they don't let their guard down. It should be fine.

In other words, that means I can push them a bit hard.

There's no time to be taking it too easy after all.

I need to train them as thoroughly as possible in the time available.

Chapter 321 : Rapid Growth

Year 7447, Month 8, Day 17

The entrance plaza of the dungeon.

After finishing our morning run and having breakfast it's around nine in the morning.

There's already no one that seems to be an adventurer left in the surroundings. All that's left are the stalls trying to do business with people who walk past them.

Obviously, everyone else from the {Slaughterers} has long since gone inside as well.

Furthermore, I finished taking care of Kuro and Mary's contract yesterday.

..The same one as Basutorial is fine I guess.

1% of the earning from magic stones during their period as apprentices and other than that a fixed salary of just 200,000 Z per month.

I

guess it's because they heard the average amount Basutorial was earning but the two of them signed the contract without a single complaint.

"Did you confirm the condition of your weapons?"

"I did."

"It's fine."

Of course.

"What about a knife?"

"I have one."

"On my waist."

Having a knife is extremely convenient for gathering magic stones, making a marking somewhere, or in the worst case if you have nothing else on you so it's something adventurers should always have on hand.

"What about the emergency pack?"

"I properly have it."

"I've brought it."

From just a glance I can tell that they have the emergency use pack we bought yesterday with a rope, potions, and hard biscuits in it on them but it's a necessary confirmation.

"What about the condition of your armor?"

"It's fine."

"There's no problem."

The two of them are wearing leather armor that isn't very well made. It seems they were made fun of quite a bit in the knight group but it seems after learning the two of them were Free People there were those who courteously taught them how to maintain it as well.

"Did you confirm the contents of your bags?"

"Of course."

"I just confirmed it twice."

It's in the worst when you're missing this and that when you need them.

"Then here, take this."

I handed them the lunch Giberuti prepared.

"Oh, a bento is it. But.."

"I prepared some as well."

It seems they prepared some bento for themselves.

The fact that they didn't give me one is..Well, that is, fine.

"Alright, the two of you. Are you ready?"

"Yeah."

"Yes."

Kuro and Mary replied with a dispirited expression.

As a result of 14 days of combined training, it seems the two of them have some thoughts so they've been participating in the running since the morning of the day before yesterday. Obviously enough there's no way you can suddenly start running 20 km. Though I say that because they're reincarnated people they have a deep understanding about training. That's why even in the knight group it seems the two of them went running everyday.

But, according to what they said it was just running 5 km a day without any equipment on after all~ They knew about how I would run around wearing my rubber armor when I was in Kiru so at least try and do that much. If it's without any equipment on then even in the normal departments of the SDF the serious members would run it everyday so running 5 km naked everyday was nothing more than a warmup.

But it's still much better than nothing. In the knight groups they carry out sword and spear form training and the always promised sparring matches which are normally done while wearing armor so they build up a decent amount of stamina but running is far more efficient for obtaining endurance.

I don't really get why but it seems after seeing Kuro and Mary's growth rate Knight Leader Sendhel started to include running in the training of the knight group since a year or so ago. Come to think of it when I was in Kiru I met with the knight leader when I was in the middle of running as well. I think I said it was because I can train (swinging a wooden sword and doing forms doesn't cost any money but when it comes to sparring matches the pain from those tools is fast so just in case it costs some money) without it costing any money at that time was it?

And while I was thinking about things like that we arrived at the teleport crystal.

"Zabuhodoku!"

After chanting the teleport incantation we teleported into the 1st floor.

"Uwa! Amazing!"

"So it ends in an instant.."

It's their first time so it can't be helped but it's possible for there to be monsters right nearby so don't let your guard down. I said it that many times so let's raise our awareness~

But, was I like this at the start as well...

Well, I didn't know about things like this at that time so, just cut me some slack.

"Don't let your guard down."

I opened up the map and taught them how to confirm the number.

"Then, this way. Since it's the first time I'll lead but after proceeding for a bit I'll hand you the map and you two lead the way."

"N."

"Got it."

.....

"" ... ""

After I cleaned up over 20 goblins the two of them were speechless. I told them to watch over my blind spots before charging in so I defeated almost all of the goblins this time.

"The value of magic stones from goblins is low after all. They're about 1,000 Z each so it's a waste of time and there's no need to gather them."

"Al, you.."

"Amazing.."

"Hey now~ putting aside Mary, you've fought against Goblins before right Kuro?
These guys are the weakest monsters that use weapons. If it's just this much then any of our members can.."

Probably not.

As a matter of fact I'm saying this and acting cool but something like 1v20 with just close combat was really pushing myself.

Though I had them watch my blind spots, it's close to a miracle that I ended up not taking a single hit.

Honestly speaking I challenged them expecting to take a few hits.

"Well, in any case you can say goblins are the weakest individual monster in this dungeon of Baldukk. Though because there's a lot of them they aren't exactly the easiest either."

I let Kuro and Mary each experience standing at the lead during an assault.
I'm sure they'll get injured and it'll take some time.
However, freezing things will come after that.

.....

Just around lunchtime.

We started having our meals in the middle of a hallway with a clear view.

Their bento was sandwiches that Mary made using bread and ham they purchased yesterday.

No matter how you look at it the hotdog(cold) lettuce(more expensive than cabbage), cucumber, cut carrot-like vegetable, along with diced crunchy bacon salad with a dressing the reincarnated people had Giberuti make based on rapeseed oil is better. Of course it includes soup as well.

Well, they're still young so I'm sure it's fine to overeat a bit.

In the afternoon I don't have any intention of letting them participate directly in combat after all.

"After all sausages are delicious right."

"Yeah, really."

"You're supposed to call them Baldoggie there. The naming was done by Basutorial though."

They were moved to tears after eating them the other day but right now they're challenging a sausage that's over 30 cm long made from the large intestine of a cow. If this is completed then it'll be possible to supply more at a lower price than ham which takes some time to make. There's no mistake it'll become popular.

"By the way, about that contract but"

A short while after having some after meal tea Mary started talking with a bit of restraint.

Hn? Is there something she's not satisfied about?

"Ah, I don't want you to misunderstand but it's not that I'm unsatisfied you know? But you know, I really have to wonder about that 1%?"

"It's

the apprenticeship period after all. I said that after your apprenticeship ends and you enter one of the three parties it'll be different right?"

"Things like that, did no one make any complaints about it?"

I see, so what Mary wants to say is that sort thing?

It seems Kuro heard about this matter from Mary last night and is just silently looking at me.

"There weren't any. I've heard that when it's newbies who have just come from the countryside they'll sometimes split things up equally based on the number of heads. But, well, when it comes to about second-rate parties it's normal for the leader to foot the bill for the entry tax into the dungeon and the consumables for the entire party. They also need to buy a map and such so there's various expenses."

"But the danger is the same right?"

Mary said as if she was a bit unsatisfied.

"Eh?"

Like they're the same. The weight of the responsibility is different.

The leader holds responsibility for everything that happens in the party. There's no time to discuss things while in the dungeon. The leader has to quickly decide everything and give out orders or it just gets that much more dangerous. That's why there's a lot of adventurers who want to be together with a leader that makes quick judgements and can earn well while preventing injuries. It's precisely because the leader receives the biggest share that they can make proper decisions."

"But you know, if you think about it with common sense wouldn't it be best to take a portion out for the expenses then split up evenly and make the amount taken out at that time just a bit extra to create a pool of funds just in case?"

Finally Kuro started joining in as well.

Kuro said he spent a lot of time playing games and such in his previous life. Mary nodded at that opinion as well.

Also, when it comes to the average adventurer who doesn't enter the dungeon in most cases their compensation amount per person is decided before hand. When it comes to escorting caravans with a lot of people then it seems the leader receives quite a bit more but that's just the employer adding a bit more the compensation amount.

However these guys, they really don't understand dungeon adventurers at all.

Different from normal adventurers the ones in the dungeon have tendency to focus on exploration and combat so there's a high probability that they'll fall into life or death situations. On top of that depending on the case you might even come across an amount of money that could change the rest of your life. Things like, try to get a bit more creative with your imagination.

"Yeah, it's not as if there's parts about what Kuro is saying that I don't understand. But, in the end that's just a game right? It doesn't have any relation to real money or your life, it's just for play. That's why it's fine as long as everyone is okay with it.

However, in reality things aren't that easy."

In regards to splitting things up you could say I'm already doing that there's just a lot of people to split it between.

Even for normal parties above second-rate it's normal for them to split it up between over 20 to 25 people.

In my case, we have more people than others and it's just a matter of splitting it between 50 or 100 people.

That's why in terms of percentage per person it's less than half of other parties though.

Though that's just a matter of the {Saviors} and the others are splitting up their portions to the point where you'd have to question if they can really do maths.

When it comes to the half first-rate parties the leader decides the shares. You do a good job so you get 7% this time, you get injured right away and barely did any work so you get 2%, and such, it depends on the number of people in the party but as a general standard it seems each person gets about 4~7% every time they enter the dungeon and some places give out bonuses as well.

Otherwise every month they give out a certain amount in wages and depending on the earnings for that month there will be plus alpha as a bonus, there's quite a few places like that.

"Why?"

"Why?"

"Hey now, just think about it for a bit. You two, in the morning we only fought against goblins but how many did you defeat?"

"U.."

"That is.."

Kuro defeated 3 and Mary defeated 4.

And even that was where they probably would have died if I wasn't covering their blind spots.

Well, if it was just the two of them and I wasn't around they probably wouldn't have been fighting them in the first place though.

Also,

in the case that we discovered a group of goblins or such on a T shaped hall, we'd wait for them to pass before attack them from behind, or next time starting from the one on the right, pay attention to the left, endurance while focusing on defense, keep an eye for an opening on the left, thrust with your sword now, using heal spells is a waste of mana so don't use it, the one giving out all the orders was me.

"In

the first place do you get that while splitting things up equally based on the number of people may look fair it's actually not? In that sort of way my way is unfair as well though."

I said with a bitter smile.

"Then, since the front line are always getting hurt wouldn't it be fine for them to get a larger share? Also, those who have to spend more on equipment and such."

"You can't consider people who can use magic and who can't use it the same right..Though it also depends on how proficient they are with it."

That's a reasonable opinion.

However, it's the leaders job to decide by what standard to evaluate them right.

In my case, I originally started by hiring Zenom and Ralpa with a fixed salary with added bonuses and then we came along to here with it slightly distorted.

It's because I didn't want to set any differences between the father daughter relationship they had. Because I thought that Ralpa would be able to do a better job than Zenom early on since she was a reincarnated person. Though in reality I just didn't want to pay Ralpa more than her adopted father. But as expected now Zenom holds an immobile position as a super first-rate front line fighter. Also, several days after we arrived at Baldukk we met up with Bel so I hesitated a bit to put any differences in how much I give everyone.

After that when we met up with Toris and Gwine I gave them the same treatment just like that so it was hard to change at that point, even then I feel like I can boast that I was able to pay everyone plenty of compensation for them to be satisfied.

When Basutorial joined us I tried to somehow put a difference in the treatment but it still ended up at the same place.

Also, things like it costing money for equipment or being a part of the front line might be worth taking into consideration but in the end sooner or later it's normal for everyone to fight monsters on the front line so paying any one person extra for a high class item like armor or pooling money to purchase would just be a reason to cause conflicts. Everyone wants equipment that costs more money and if it's capable of increasing their survival rate then they want to use it. In the first place, if that person were to die and you have to retreat before you can collect it you'd suffer a heavy loss though.

"You know, I don't know what kind of dreams you're seeing in adventurers but you should try about it a bit more realistically. First off, about pooling money. What would you do if someone takes and it runs away? It's fine even if that's the leader. If a reasonable amount of money builds up I think there are a good number of people who would be blinded by the money."

"That's why you should gather together allies you can trust.."

"..Wait just a minute Kuro. That's certainly true."

"How will you decide that someone is a trustworthy ally? If it was a parent, sibling, or relative then they're probably fine. Though it's strange saying this but even between reincarnated people it "might" be considered another standard as well. But, even among reincarnated people you never know? In the past Bel was tricked, almost raped, and about to be killed because of that."

Hearing that their eyes opened wide in shock.

"And you know, Kuro. Think about yourself. Before you met Mary, what about the you when you were teamed up with Begulu? Let's assume that the you from that time were in my current party. And, everyone month we were pooling together a considerable amount of money. Since I'm softhearted I reported the amount without withholding anything and even borrowed a shared locker at the government office. The lockers at the government office are cheaper than the shrine and for the most part you can relax so normally that's plenty after all. It's fine even if it's not you. Do you really think no one would try to steal it?"

"..Gu."

"It's the same even for Mary. What would you do if your family needed a bunch of money? Even if you discuss the reasons they might reject loaning it to you because, "this is everyone's money". It's a bad example but listen without getting angry. It's fine if it's the previous Mary and you're being hounded by the yakuza or it's fine if your little brother gets abducted and they're demanding a ransom as well. Though something that's even more likely would be the restaurant burning down in a fire or something. No, I don't want you to reply to it. But, if I were in that sort of situation then I'd have stolen the money and disappeared."

Come to think of it, Zenom and our reincarnated members were all sharing a locker in the shrine.

..No matter how I think about it everyone's already considerably rich so I can't imagine anyone stealing the money and disappearing at this point.

Also, they might be afraid of me as well.

After all if anyone were to betray us and run off they probably think I'd chase them down and kill them...

And it wouldn't be strange for them to think I'm capable of doing that after all~

..Well, someone who is unable to trust others is unfortunate.

Though I say that previously I wasn't able to trust other people very much.

Because it was necessary to worry about all of the risks after all.

But, now it's different.

I can trust my current allies.

Even if they betray me, haven't I changed to just honestly think it was my own fault?

Come to think of it, in my previous life I think I used to trust people like this.

No, or maybe it would be more correct to say my hurdle for trusting people was low?

..Hm, I guess~ I've grown up a bit myself?

Kuro and Mary seem to have accepted what I was saying at least on the surface.

"You need to think of all possible risks and how to deal with them right.."

"It seems that being a leader has a lot of things to worry about."

"But, it's true that we know about Al and feel a debt towards you..However, when it's put like that I don't think we could leave our money in the care of other people after all.."

"I guess so..There's things more important than money, or at least I've heard that only people who are really rich can say that."

Yeah, there's no you would leave your entire fortune in the care of some random person you're just going into the dungeon with.

It's difficult to make even a relative co-sign for a loan right?

Since you're entrusting your life which is more important than money with them so anyone who says to trust them just because of that is begging to be preyed on.

"Well, it's still normal for people who have spent several years together to build up a decent amount of trust. Even then there's times when new members join like you guys this time. At times like that the leader has to set terms that both the original members and the new ones can accept. If a lot of the members don't accept it then they'll be dragged down for their position and thrown out of the party. If it's just a few of the members then they might split off from the party and make a new one or just join a different party. In either case the combat strength of the remaining party will definitely drop."

Just like how outsiders saw our party during the {Sun.Ray} incident a few years back.

"Then this time it's Kuro's turn. Finish it off in a single hit. It'll be hard to sleep if you cause it more suffering right?"

I froze the lower halves of monsters for them to defeat almost as if mowing down grass.

At first they were saying things like, "no matter what this is too pitiful" and throwing up when it came time to take out the magic stones.

However, while forcing them to do it over and over they've completely gotten numb to it I guess as the two of them are silently working away now.

Just like this my first day with Kuro and Mary ended after dragging them around until seven in the afternoon.

Both of them were completely exhausted and devoured dinner as if they were starving.

Today we didn't go up against any room bosses but even then I had them finish of a decent number of orks and hobgoblins so they earned about 4,500 experience points in just today. After all, it was 9 orks and even 13 hobgoblins. Even just that adds up to over 3,000 experience points per person.

After that is the portion earned from killing goblins and gnolls. Kuro's level went up and Mary's level should go up tomorrow.

The earnings from the magic stones was only a bit but was still over 1,000,000 Z.

The last time I earned this much on the 1st floor was several years back when I would go into the dungeon with Zulu or Angela on our days off.

Well, it's a good start right.
We rarely encountered this many orks and hobgoblins after all.

.....

Year 7447, Month 8, Day 18

Starting today we'll be fighting against room bosses as well.

They already don't need an example.

Just the first time, when they were having trouble with a {Gargantuan

Spider} I supported them using magic but they properly defeated it using close combat.

After that was freezing in the ice the same as usual.

Starting today we don't have Giberuti's bento so we're having hot dogs with baldoggie that are sold by Murowa. It seems Mary's energy ran out as she didn't have any leeway to make the bento herself. Well, I did say that I'd be taking care of all the meals in the dungeon so there's that as well.

Today I dragged them around until 7:30 pm.

The experience points were less than yesterday as we only earned just below 3,000 but Mary was still safely able to level up.

Now then, with this they've graduated from the 1st floor.

Let's try going to the 2nd floor tomorrow.

..Hn?

In just two days, three days since they've started entering the dungeon, going to the 2nd floor might be some kind of record in Baldukk.

...Though if I think carefully about it we suddenly brought Basutorial deep into the dungeon right from his first day.

.....

Year 7447, Month 8, Day 19

The 2nd floor isn't all that different from the 1st floor so we should quickly just clear through.

Just today should be plenty.

If we continue at this pace then the 3rd floor should be the same so it might be correct to copy the {Verdure.Brotherhood}(now they're still giving it their best as a first-rate party with Basu as the leader) and {Black.Topaz} when they were training those young ladies by camping on the 3rd or 4th floors.

It seems Kuro and Mary aren't as exhausted for the portion that we slowly walk through the dungeon so tomorrow maybe we should try going all the way to the teleport crystal on the 4th floor.

After say that, since the two of them don't have much knowledge about the dungeon they happily nodded.

"I want to hurry and return the favor after all."

"I want to be useful."

Being clueless sure is scary.

Starting tomorrow whether it's the room bosses or the monsters in the halls they're all getting frozen.

There's no point in gathering magic stones from gnolls either.
Orks and hobgoblins..I guess it's fine.
Let's just gather them from the bosses.

.....

Year 7447, Month 8, Day 20

"We'll spend today going to the 4th floor. You've brought along food right?"

"I brought quite a bit."

"Just as you said, we properly split it up and brought it along."

The only adventurers who bring along daily necessities to camp in the teleport crystal room on the 4th floor are the {Verdure.Brotherhood}, {Black.Topaz}, {Gehenna.Flare}, and several other half first-rate parties who are trying to switch to first-rate. Among them, we {Slaughterers} have all graduated from camping on the 4th floor while the {Verdure.Brotherhood} and {Gehenna.Flare} are often spending long periods camping on the 5th and 6th floors.

That's why, there's not very many people camping on the 4th floor.
There's bedding so as long as you can solve the problem of food other than when you're sleeping you always remain in that area earning experience.

If things go smoothly then it's just a matter of going to the 7th floor and continuing against ogres.

Against ogres if I let my mana speak for me and freeze them to where they can't get out then it's possible to earn over 5,000 and maybe even 10,000 experience points in a single day.

This time I'm acting under the pretense of teaching Kuro and Mary how to act in the dungeon and intend to continue with them like this until the end of this month.

The {Saviors}, {Butchers}, and {Exterminators} are all moving according to this schedule.

The {Exterminators} should be in the teleport crystal room on the 5th floor while the {Saviors} and {Butchers} should be in the teleport crystal room on the 6th floor.

I thought we wouldn't be able to meet up this time but if we continue like this then might be better to meet up and camp together with them.

Chapter 322 : Interval

Year 7447, Month 8, Day 30

By the end of last month when we returned from the dungeon Kuro and Mary's levels had increased by another two and they had reached level 10.

If they continue like this then it's not just a dream to reach level 15 by the start of the next year but they should easily be able to make it into reality.

Matters such as the gathering terminal and denaturation device sleeping in the depths of the dungeon, things about the spaceship, and about Miki and Lilus.

There were a lot of things I wanted to take my time thinking about but I told myself now isn't the time to be thinking about them as I almost mechanically concentrated on leveling up Kuro and Mary.

Also, after we cashed in the magic stones and I handed them their 1% plus a bonus they were making expressions that were somewhat grate and somewhat embarrassed by how much it was.

After all I had them kill close to a total of 150 ogres.

Including the magic stones from monsters we obtained along the way the bonus was over 1,300,000 Z.

They were extremely surprised by this amount and seemed to be satisfied with it.

Ah, we didn't go into the ogre mage rooms.

After all, even if I freeze them just leaving their heads out of the ice they can still use magic.

And we didn't go to the 8th floor either.

In terms of efficiency to time for earning experience points(magic stones as well) it's certainly true that going further into the dungeon is more efficient.

However, whether it's the crickets or the praying mantises they're all pretty fast so it's difficult freezing them.

It's not that I can't do it but I end up needing to freeze almost the entire hallway that they're coming down as well.

Doing something skillful like leaving just a part of their body out of the ice is difficult so in the end I end up aiming to suffocate them to death.

In any case, while the two of them were surprised with gold coins in their hands I said, "Repay the 20,000,000 debt with each of you paying back 1 gold coin." and took back the 2 gold coins I just gave them.

They're gold coins after all.

They shrugged their shoulders as if accepting it while still reluctantly watching as I put the gold coins into my wallet as I suggested, "Even then you earned over 300,000 this time and you should still have the money I lent you before so how about going to play in the capital once?"

The two of them showed reservation saying it's unreasonable to take a break when they still haven't properly worked in the dungeon yet and if they're not going to the dungeon then they'll train but I said, "Since we were in the dungeon for a long period this time starting tomorrow is a five day break and the last day of the break is combined training so it's fine as long as you return by then. And you two should have accumulated quite a bit of stress and exhaustion. Go and stretch your wings. Miduchi and I are just about to head there ourselves and we have horses so do you want to come with us?" and almost forcefully brought them along. It's because I felt like they wouldn't rest unless I did this.

Training is important but right now they've been constantly under stress so it's best for them to relax and rest their tired bodies.

Of course, Zenom, Ralpa, and Gwine all want to go shopping so they'll be heading to the capital on the days off as well. It seems Rokko and Kevin are going to play and unusually it seems Binsu wants to buy something too. Toris and Bel don't seem like they'll be coming to the capital this time. They plan to relax and spend their time in Baldukk.

Rodrick is bring his two combat slaves, Sanno, Ruttsu, Ginger, and Hisu as they go to a city roughly 40 km to the south of the capital to play, it's called Rasuho and has a population of about 8,000. Supposedly they started selling a new type of cooking using lamb meat this year so they're going to try some.

It seems Kamu plans to spend it sleeping and Kimu is excited about playing with her cat. Misu said she was going to do some running and Jeru plans to accompany her. Keep up the good work I guess.

When Basutorial came out of the dungeon

Cathy was worried about Maru and Rinbi and waiting for them so just like Toris and Bel he's not going to the capital this time but going to watch over Jesu as he teaches Maru and Rinbi.

Out of my combat slaves excluding Zulu who wants to get along with the sister from Murowa, it seems they plan to go to the factory in the capital centering around Giberuti.

I told the members going to the capital that we'll be going ahead and sending Kuro and Mary to the inn they usually stay at in the capital. After telling them to help them out a bit in the capital, Miduchi, Kuro, Mary, and I all went ahead towards the capital.

Along the way we talked about various things as they opened up quite a bit with Miduchi.

After throwing the two of them into the inn, we immediately went to the dried goods store and bought some dried fish.

This time it's dried fish from the capital but it's pretty much attached to Baldukk so the products aren't all that different.

And then we showed our faces in my company once before taking the long route back around to Baldukk.

Thanks to that the month changed before we returned to Baldukk.

.....

Year 7447, Month 9, Day 1

We went to the fairy village and met with Mila-shisho and Karl. After feeding them dried fish until they're full as usual and before we started magic training I said I had something to talk to them about so I tried asking them about the spaceship and such right away.

However, I only figured out that the fairies didn't have any information at all in regards to this matter.

Also, when I tried asking about the method to recover the charges on {Magic.Items} they said, "The majority of {Magic.Items} are said to have been made by high order beings using special skills and magic so let alone how to make them we have no idea how to even recharge them". This can't be helped.

In that case the things with no charges aren't useful for anything but bluffing..Shit..

In that case it might be best to just sell them off while saying they can't be used. Otherwise pretending not to know and just sell it like that..though I'm sure they'll figure it out in no time at all and beat down the price.

The only thing we figured out was the method of entering the fairy village from the 3rd floor.

They didn't know about the method of singing the Japanese national anthem that we heard from Lilus.

Previously, when we tried bringing up the topic we only ever talked about them knowing this much but I never confirmed what the method Lilus taught to them was.

Rather~ I didn't feel there was a need to bother asking about it.

Even if we knew we would still have to go down to the 3rd floor in order to use it so it would be the same...

The method they knew about involved grabbing the crystal rod before making a special symbol and then touching the top of the crystal rod before making a different symbol. After that if you grab the crystal rod once more then the incantation that appears on the surface will change. If you chant that incantation within one minute then it will transfer you to this area.

In the past, it seems that's the method Lilus taught the fairies when leading them into the dungeon.

In doubt Miduchi and I immediately went to try it but we were able to teleport in using it without a problem.

Shit. Did she think I wouldn't be able to remember this symbol so she said that the Japanese national anthem was the key...

Of course, what that Vampire Lord Tarubo.Fakuna, or, Masetto.Deioku said about Miki, no, about Lilus being the reincarnated person Kamira.Erisuna I don't believe at all in the slightest.

I wouldn't believe a single thing said by a person so obsessed with the delusion of returning to his hometown that he'd fall to become an undead. Though I think the records are the truth but that undead only said it with words. It was also on the list of crew members and their names after reincarnated but it's definitely some kind of mistake. That's obviously the case.

Seeing me feverishly insist that Miduchi was making a vague expression but in regards to this matter she didn't say anything.

Sorry.

No matter what you think, I think Lilus is Miki.

Didn't even Miduchi say it?

Chopsticks are used in Lail Kingdom and the entry sign to Lilus's bedroom under the palace is written in Japanese.

That's why, Lilus is Miki.

That's why, she was nostalgic for Japan and looked at your memories.

That's why, she continued looking at your memories and searched for me.

..That's why, worrying for my sake and to apologize to Miduchi even just a bit she gave her various advice and helped her out...

Until she was about to run out of mana.

While I was grumbling to myself and organizing my thoughts and Miduchi had properly started learning some spells.

It seems it's a spell called {Enchant.Weapon}.

I look vaguely at Karl who's got his hand on his waist while holding his chest out as he arrogantly teaches Miduchi.

...

Karl.Milais/21/6/6811

Male/21/6/6811.Fairy Race.Baldukk

Condition: Normal

Age: 636 Years Old

Level: 12

HP: 22(22) MP: 241(242)

Strength: 1

Speed: 31

Dexterity: 25

Endurance: 1

Special Skill: Naming

Special Skill: Fairy Eyes
Special Skill: Water Magic(MAX)
Special Skill: Fire Magic(MAX)
Special Skill: Earth Magic(MAX)
Special Skill: Wind Magic(MAX)
Special Skill: Void Magic(MAX)
Experience: 239994(270000)

Other than his age I don't think it's changed much at all.
Well I don't remember every little of details everyone's status though.

...Ah. Come to think of it.

Baldukk: The Sixth Seed

Yeah..I remember checking it the first time I met Karl.
And, I let it go just like because I couldn't understand it.
The gathering terminal and denaturation device sleeping deep in this dungeon of Baldukk is the sixth one of eight units. It's full name was the, "Sixth Gathering Terminal and Denaturation Device".
Somehow I think there's some kind of relation between them.

Karl is different from his grandfather in that he doesn't know the outside world.
Starting from his parents generation they were born and raised in the dungeon of Baldukk.

Since it seems there's priests even among the fairies they're properly named.

Humans and monsters all have the information about their birthplace written on their status from the moment they're born. Like  Race or  Family Eldest Son and such.

I only know a general outline of things about the naming ceremony.
They say there's roughly three different types of the naming ceremony.

The first one is attaching a unique name to a living creature.
In most cases this is done when they're a baby. Though there are exceptions.
The amount of money you have to donate in compensation is fixed.

The next one is attaching a unique name to non-living things.
The amount isn't fixed but in this case the name doesn't always stop at just a single item.
There's times when the name changes for every instance of the item under the same group.

And then the last one doesn't change the unique name but adds or changes the details relating to origins and nationality.
When buying or selling slaves, marrying someone, or receiving investiture as a knight should be representatives of this case.

They put all three of these together into the single definition of the naming ceremony but it's not hard for anyone to imagine that the actual details of each of them are different.

Well that's exactly the case and it's said to be well known that, "there are priests who can do it and those who cannot", and obviously I knew about it as well.

It seems to be said that the {Special Skill: Naming} might have levels similar to the magic special skills.
Even if you ask the priests they'll supposedly never tell you so it's just rumored and there's no basis for it though.

I check all of the fairies flying around using {Identify} on them one at a time.

.....

Hmm.

"..Shisho. There's a bit of something I'd like to ask but?"

"Hn?"

I doubt that's the case though.

"How many priests are there here?"

"We only have a small shrine so it's plenty with just one."

Yeah. I'm sure the number of fairies in the fairy village is known, so it's just as I thought.

"What about the naming ceremony when you get married..."

I couldn't find a single fairy with the proof that they've been married like the  Wife or  Husband.

"We don't have one. The priest here can do that much after all."

Just as expected.

But, I want to confirm this.

"Why does shisho and the others origin come up as Baldukk?"

"Ah, that. It's said to be because we were born here."

Mwu..then, if a pregnant woman were to give birth to the child inside of the dungeon, what would happen?

According to the common sense that I know no matter where they're born they should come up as  Family Eldest Son and such.

I wonder if that "Denaturation Device" or whatever has some kind of influence on it?

I tried bringing things like that up but shisho just said, "Even I have some things..that I don't know." But well, I guess that's exactly the case.

Switching gears and I started to learn a new spell as well.

It's a spell called {Blade.Barrier}.

It took me quite a bit of time to acquire this spell.

When it came time to leave the fairy village Miduchi and I courteously lowered our heads the same as usual.

"Shisho. I'll come again four months later. Other than dried fish is there anything you want?"

"..No, nothing in particular."

"I see. Also, I have a request."

"What is it?"

"Most likely the next time we come will be the last time. It seems I'll be able to obtain a territory in the Spring of next year. If it comes to that then we'll be too busy so I won't be able to come visit here for the time being. There, I'd like you to decide by the next time I come but if it's alright with you would everyone be interested in moving to my territory?"

"Hou~n?"

"I think I'll be able to provide you with a reasonably sized area. If you live on the surface then you'll be able to eat as much dried fish as you want everyday and..That's right! I can even make the area everyone lives a protected area and prohibit any entry! I'll guarantee the peace in your lives."

Mila-shisho replied after making the first gentle thinking face I've seen since I met her.

"..Thank you. But, we'll restrain ourselves from that. We like this place.."

"However.."

"It's fine. It's plenty just to accompany the people who occasionally wander in like Al. We want to live quietly...And it's been said since our parents generation. This land is the final paradise given to us...We can't afford to waste Lilus-sama's good will."

"..Is, that so..

However, if you ever have a change of heart then please tell me. In that case I'll come to get you near the end of next year."

After saying that we temporarily said our farewells with Mila-shisho and the others.

.....

Year 7447, Month 9, Day 2

I open my eyes in the inn in a corner of Baldukk where we left our horses. In the morning we returned to the surface and were tired when we entered the inn so Miduchi and I soon collapsed on the bed and fell asleep. Right now it's already 8:00 pm.

..We need to go to capital again.
I need to take a look at the company and the factory.

The two of us crunch of some hardtack while entering a considerably expensive inn in the capital.

In any case, things are looking good as Kuro and Mary's levels are quickly going up.
It seems like things will be difficult for a short while but if we continue like this then...

{Enchant.Weapon} Enchantment

(All Elements Lv. 6, Void Magic Lv. 7, Consumed MP 31)

Any item the user recognizes as a weapon can be the target. However even if the user recognizes something as one, it won't work on a natural object such as a rock laying around the ground. It's necessary for it to be worked on by human hands to some extent. For example a branch cut off from a tree, if the end is crafted into a grip then the magic will recognize the target as a club but just a random log laying around there that's just the right shape won't be a recognized target. Also, it's necessary for the target to be completed as a weapon. For example, this spell can't be used on just the arrowhead of an arrow. If the arrowhead isn't attached to the arrow shaft ahead of time then this spell will fail.

Furthermore, it's obviously possible to cast this spell on the firing device but the objects fired from it won't be under the effects of the magic. Though it would take effect if you hit something with the firing device itself.

If you touch the target weapon while using this spell and the entirety of the weapon will continue to give off a faint spell light. Because this light is extremely faint it won't act as a substitute for a torch. Also, the light will continue in the center where the effect is being displayed.

The effect of this spell is that it will temporary grant the weapon a magical effect. It only slightly raises the ability but the weapon will become effective in dealing damage to living creatures that can only be damaged using magic weapons.

The duration of the effect is the casters level multiplied by 60 seconds.

The volume of the weapon that it can take effect on is within 500 cm^3 added to the casters level multiplied by 30 cm^3 .

If it's within the effective amount of volume then it's possible to target multiple weapons but in that case the total volume of the weapons that can be a target will decrease as $1/2$, then $1/3$, and so on. In other words, if a level 10 caster uses this spell on 2 knives with the same shape and the one knife can't have a volume of $(500 \text{ cm}^3 + 30 \text{ cm}^3 * \text{level } 10) / 2$ or 200 cm^3 .

Example: The average long sword has a handle length of 15 cm and a blade length of 70 cm so the volume is 700 cm^3 . Also, the average arrow is at most 40 cm^3 .

{Blade.Barrier} Enchantment.Phantasm.Evocation

(Earth Magic Lv. 4 Double, Water Magic Lv. 4 Double, Fire Magic Lv. 4 Double, Wind Magic Lv. 6 Triple, Void Magic Lv. 8 Double, Consumed MP 58)

Magic long swords appear and start rotating in the surroundings of the caster at a high speed and automatically intercept anything that would do harm to the caster that enters within a radius of 2m from the caster's head.

The long swords that appear are of a standard size with a blade length of 70 cm. Also, the number of swords that appear is the level of the caster multiplied by 2 swords.

The hit rate is dependent on the caster's skill with the sword.

The duration is the caster's level multiplied by 6 seconds but for every level the caster has the duration decreases by 1 second. However, at minimum 1 second of duration continues to accumulate.

Example) if a level 20 caster uses this spell the duration of the effect will be $6+5+4+3+2+(1*15)=35$ seconds.

Chapter 323 : Greater Depths

Year 7447, Month 11, Day 23

As expected it's starting to get sluggish.

What is you say? Kuro and Mary's rapid growth.

Even then it's true I had them earn experience at the terrifying speed to where they're one step away from level 14 within a mere three months.

If we maintain this pace then they'll reach level 15 by the end of the year, or at least it's not just a dream.

Everyday on the 7th floor after defeating ogres I confirm there's about 200 meters that are before we do 50 laps of running for a total of 20 km.

Just in case to be on guard I have them wear their armor so at first it took around three hours to complete.

Now it's been shortened to around 2.5 hours.

Ah, of course, I'm not forcing them to run.

The two of them are running of their own free will.

On the side of them running with expressions as if they're about to die

I'm running together as well but keeping up with a considerably slow pace is pretty tiresome.

I also wonder about having to take a close to 30 minute break after running just to be able to move properly.

They're still lacking quite a bit in basic stamina.

..Though I guess they're still better than Bastoral was at first.
I never had Bastoral wear armor after all.

On our days off and such when everyone is running together the only one who wears their armor is me though.

Putting aside the running, let me talk about everyone in the {Slaughterers} over these past three months.

Don't be surprised? Of all things each of the parties obtained a different {Magic.Item}!

When the {Exterminators} defeated what seemed to be a leader individual among a group of hobgoblins wandering around the 3rd floor they obtained a wristwatch magic tool that let alone being super high class could be considered top class, worth over 10,000,000 Z. And in an altar on the 5th floor they obtained something like this.

In great anticipation with Ralpa as the leader, Rodrick and the eight of them brought this thing for me to use my identification spell on it.

Since

there was a chance that it could be e a {Cursed.Item} they didn't try equipping it and just confirmed the name before bringing it to me.

Of course I was excited as I used identify as well.

Sword of Light {Light.Saber}

Bashuto Steel

Condition: Normal

Manufacture Date: 18/10/7447

Value: 1

Durability: 4096

Ability: 89-159

Effect: A sword with a powerful light spell contained within it. If you properly hold on to the grip while pulling it from the scabbard and the entire blade gives off a white colored light. This light is brighter than 10 large braziers.

I don't know what Bashuto Steel or whatever is. After checking the sub-window and it's considerably better than the average cast iron but it still seems to be just at the level of steel that doesn't reach the level of stainless.

It seems like something somewhat unusual. Well, you can still expect it to be at the level of a sword from the middle ages on Earth it seems.

By the way..a light spell? If it's the mana of light then is it not Light Magic? Could it be it's only got the spell Light cast on it with no duration to the effect? There's not even an explanation about it having any sort of magical effect other than giving off light.

But, a magic sword is a magic sword.

"I can feel mana and it seems to have a spell of light cast on it so it's certainly a magic sword. What do you want to do with it?"

By asking them what they want to do with it, of course I mean confirming if they want to sell it or someone wants to use it.

If they sell it then excluding my two combat slaves, the final price will be split up among the seven of them including myself.

"Wouldn't it be best to keep it?"

Ruttsu agreed with Ralpa saying that.

"No, it doesn't seem very impressive as a {Magical.Weapon} so wouldn't it be better to sell it?"

And Sanno agreed with Rodrick and his combat slaves Denda and Karimu. Even if I were to agree with Ralpa the majority would still be for selling it. Rather, there's no point in holding onto something like this and it's appearance is flashy so it's possible it'll fetch a good price.

"If you're going to sell it I'll act as the middleman?"

In the end it was decided that it would go to Sandak Company together with the wristwatch.

And then the item that the {Butchers} obtained from an altar on the 6th floor was.

{Poison.Dagger}

Mithril Steel

Condition: Normal

Manufacture Date: 2/11/7447

Value: 1

Durability: 25000

Ability: 28-52

Effect: When the user succeeds with an attack(in the case that over 2/3rds of the blade enters the body of the target) a powerful poison is secreted from it. However, in order for the poison to take effect there's a relationship between the levels of the user and the one being attacked. If the one being attacked is the same level as the user then the poison has a 50% chance of taking effect. For each level that the one being attacked is higher than the user the chance of the poison taking effect is reduced by 2% and for each level that the user is higher the chance increases by 2%. In the case that the target is poisoned, they'll be attacked by a strong fatigue, chills, a fever, and due to the effects of those they'll suffer a decrease of 1 HP every 10 hours from both their current and maximum HP. And then if an effective recovery method isn't used by the point where their HP reaches half of it's original maximum value the target will lose consciousness and be unable to take any actions. In order to recover you either need to use a spell that removes the effects of poison or have a spell which removes the effects of poison cast on the target.

Since the name is what it is I was pretty nervous when they asked me to identify it.

"It doesn't have a curse on it..Hmm, it seems that it has a 50/50 probability of poisoning the person stabbed with it. But, in order for it to take effect you have to stab it in up to about here it seems. Just a scratch is no good. Also, it seems the poison is the type that slowly deals damage over time. It seems after being hit by it you'll survive for a pretty long period of time. Even a normal person should be able to survive for about a month but after that point they'll collapse and be unable to do anything so without curing it they'll probably die from starvation before the poison. In order to recover from it supposedly using the spells {Neutralize.Poison} or {Remove.Poison} is fine."

This time the one who was acting as leader was Zulu.

However, after Rokko whispered, "It seems like it'd be pretty useful for torture when you capture someone during war" everyone agreed on not wanting to sell it.

Hearing that I thought, torture indeed..but didn't say anything.

Everyone has a decent amount of leeway when it comes to money so as long as they accept it that's fine.

Since he was the one who said it, I told Rokko to hold onto it and forced it on him.

Rokko seemed pretty happy.

Even as a joke don't lick the blade?

I think you'd probably be fine but still.

And then the {Saviors}.

During September they finished making the teleport crystal room on the 10th floor into a base and then the 11th floor during October. On the occasion where we made the 11th floor into a base Kuro and Mary joined the {Exterminators} for the first time with Toris as the leader, so I was able to return to the {Saviors} for the first time in a while.

Just around that period Ginger had her period the night before they were supposed to enter the dungeon so a big part of it was that there were two openings in the {Butchers}. I dispatched Angela and Basutorial as leaders to the {Butchers}.

The Wyvern still hasn't respawned on the 11th floor as the fog is still just whirling around.

Without the lightning bolt cage coming down, the rainbow colored pillars rising up, or encountering a single monster we arrived at the teleport crystal room.

And we just took a peek inside of the 12th floor.

I'll talk about the 12th floor later but during that time we found three 10,000,000 class magic tools, one 30,000,000 class magic tool, and one magic tool that's worth more than 100,000,000. Also, we obtained one {Magical.Weapon}.

{Sword.Of.Aiming}

Mithril Steel

Condition: Normal

Manufacture Date: 3/11/7447

Value: 1

Durability: 65000

Ability: 90-160(+10)*

Effect: It looks like a completely normal long sword but it's made with an extremely good balance making attacks easier to hit exactly where it's being aimed. Through making attacks easier to hit where they're being aimed there's a high chance that it will deal a lot more damage than normal.

You could say this is another item worth a good amount.

However, because of the craftsmanship of the hand-guard, once again it didn't seem like it would fit into the holding space of my bayonet.

Miduchi is already using a magic sword on top of it almost definitely being more powerful than this.

Zenom and Ralpa are both using magic axes.

And putting aside Zenom, Ralpa is bad at using the sword.

Bel doesn't use the long sword and already has the infantry-use short sword, and that's a magic sword as well.

The {Flame.Tongue} Toris is using is probably more powerful than this as well.

Zulu normally uses a bastard sword with one hand so I feel like it might work as a low-grade replacement but if the reach changes by 10 cm I'm sure it would be difficult, and if he can't make two-handed attacks when he the time calls for it then...

Since Angela is using a broad sword I guess it's possible to exchange them just like that I guess...

Rather since the knuckle guard will disappear she should be able to change to a slightly better right gauntlet..I guess the weight would change by quite a bit huh?

Gwine and Basutorial use spears as their main weapons and haven't even properly tried using swords.

Kamu uses a small sword and Kimu uses a spear as well.

Using it in the {Saviors} is a bit awkward.

Then in that case I guess we could use it in the {Butchers} or {Exterminators}?

I wonder who would be good?

The ones using long swords are Rokko, Binsu, Rodrick, and Sanno. Also my combat slaves Henry and Mekku I guess.

Taking their skill into consideration and Rokko is two or three heads above the others.

Or rather, among adventurers who stand at the front lines in the dungeon his skills are close to Zenom.

If it's against monsters then he could put up a good match with me though only limited to when I'm using just a long sword and not my bayonet.

The only one among the members that stand on the front line and have enough leeway to swing a sword is Rokko.

Of course, the other members attack as well but the front line usually focus mainly on defense and the sword is mostly used in defensive ways. In comparison because of how high is skills are Rokko is good at creating openings and attacking with a pretty high ratio.

No matter how I think about it Rokko would be the best.

When I handed the long sword to Rokko he accepted it with trembling hands as if he never thought it would go to him.

"It's a {Magical.Sword} you know!? Is it really okay for me to use it!?"

I just said, "protect everyone with that". Including the combat slaves almost everyone else said similar things and pat Rokko on the shoulder.
However, Zulu and Angela were both making unsatisfied faces.

Since it seemed like they had something they wanted to say I asked them about it later and,

"I think that master should be the one to use that magic sword this time."

"Letting that elf lacking in brains use it..Even though those 5 {Troll.Kin} were powerful opponents."

and said things like that.

No, I wanted to use it too you know?

But, if I don't use my bayonet it's a power down right?

It can't be helped~

"However..!"

"Even then..!"

They were stubborn.

I'm grateful that you're willing to say that to raise me up and worry about me but you know~

Isn't it something I said before?

Do I really look so weak to you that I need to use something like that magic sword?

"But, it's a magic sword!"

"That's right! Didn't the madam say it as well! There's monsters which attacks don't work on unless you use a magic sword!"

If an opponent like that comes out then it's fine because I'll just use magic... Since it seemed like they'd never give up I,

"What is it? Do you have any complaints about something I decided on?"

said that and they finally shut up.

..minus one point for each of them.

Though I don't know what the points are for.

..However, permitting my slaves to speak back to me like this so many times, I guess I'm still to softhearted right?

.....

Year 7447, Month 11, Day 29

Once again this time I left Kuro and Mary to the {Exterminators} to have them experience the uncouth battles of the 5th floor. The leader of the {Exterminators} is Bel. Kim is taking care of the {Butchers}. And, I've returned to the {Saviors}. We've already finished making the 11th floor into a base so this time Giberuti went to the factory.

Last month, when we were making the 11th floor into a base we took a look into the 12th floor but I wanted to try investigating it.

Well, just from a glance it was..that is, how do I put it. The 11th floor could definitely be said to be below it...

Yeah. It's the same in that there's no walls.

And after that it's almost as bright as daytime so the sight range is as good as the 7th floor.

Clouds can be seen above and in the distant central region we saw a pillar thinner than a toothpick.

Also, it's the same in that you always teleport to somewhere along the outer wall.

However, there's a much bigger problem.

Most likely, the 12th and 13th floors are stuck together.

No, stuck together might be a bad way of describing it..maybe I should say they're connected together?

The ground is shaped almost like a giant abura kiri where the inner circle of the dungeon is spread out like a cylinder...

In the air there's just something like a 10~100 meter or so wide esplanade or suspension bridge remaining(?) and the larger portion of it was a giant hole.

The hole is a distorted circular shape without a fixed form and the size was different on each side.

Also, the diameters of the smaller ones were believed to be at least 200 meters across while the larger ones seemed to be in the kilometers.

In regards to the esplanades the ground was dry and depending on the area there were some mountains and valleys with some lows and highs but there didn't seem to be any sudden slopes at all.

In various places along the walkway there's large rocks up to 5 meters in diameter similar to the ones we've seen on previous floors laying around. Incidentally, in regards to plants we couldn't even find a single blade of Penpen grass growing anywhere.

And then, obviously from that hole we were able to see the floor below which is the base of the 13th floor.

Looking down on the floor below and you can tell right away but frighteningly enough this ground is only 10 meters or so thick in some of the thinner areas. Since it seems like it's attached to the outer wall with a width of about 100 meters it looks like an overhang so you can still relax feeling like you're standing on the ground. However, the gaps of the several holes that almost make the esplanades seem like a floating island attached by several slightly large suspension bridges is the problem.

The rear of the floating island is covered in something like stalagmites or stalactites and the ground is hanging down thicker than the other areas.

On those narrow esplanades with no thickness from one connection to the next between the holes if for some reason it were to collapse it gives off the impression that the entire island might fall with it.

And then, the best part is that you can see an artificially made structure stabbing into(?) the lower floor when looking down from the hole. It's diameter should be several hundred meters and it's height should be several times more than that. Most likely that should be that gather terminal and denaturation device or whatever.

After all it seems it wasn't the spaceship as we couldn't see anything like engine nozzles coming from the back of it like a rocket. Though they might just be below it. Also, it's difficult to tell from the distance but the surface seems to be made of metal and it seems that there's some uneven parts and structures sticking out from it in some places.

After that the ground in the center of the 13th floor rises up almost like a mountain.

The location the gathering terminal is stabbed into is considerably high on that mountain.

Whether it's because of the impact from it stabbing into it or whatever else but the surroundings of it are largely collapsed and it almost looks like a large hole was being drilled into the mountain.

In the center of the circular dungeon there's a pillar that almost seems to be growing out of the center of the mountain.

Including the surface of the mountain a large portion of the ground seems to be covered in a deep forest and it almost looks like a green carpet is spread out.

I don't know if it's because there's a mountain on the lower floor so there isn't a hole opened up in it like this 12th floor but the difference in height from this floor is..even the summit of the mountain is too high so I can't tell.

10 km?

In that case it's higher than Everest.

But, considering the diameter of the dungeon is 10 km then it seems like it should be about that?

I guess the base of the mountain is about 10 km?

In that case the height of the mountain should be about 2 km?

But if that's the case then there should be clouds in front of our eyes..it's not the surface so what in the world am I thinking about inside of the dungeon.

Well, the 12th floor has this sort of feel.

The view is good so we tried meeting up again after teleporting in from the 11th floor.

If it's close then we can see each other.

Nothing happened when we walked along the outer wall so regathering itself should be easier than the 11th floor.

Even when it comes to aiming towards the center, the narrower areas of the suspension bridges are at least 10 meters so there shouldn't be anything like your legs stiffening up and not being able to move.

..This, should we bring along the {Butchers} and {Exterminators} as well? It looks like there aren't any monsters around but there's no guarantee there isn't something like the Wyvern from the 11th floor.

If we assume there is something then would it be a smarter move to bring along more people?

"For the 11th floor and the 13th floor? that we can see below then that's probably fine. But I wonder about this area."

Miduchi said something that caught my interest.

"Why?"

"Somehow, just somehow you know? I don't have any basis for it but.."

"Stop putting on airs."

"I feel like there's a {Dragon}."

Hohou, a {Dragon} is it.

In that case it's greatly welcome so we can take it's heart right!

And what was it again, that's right, we can call ourselves "{Dragon Slayers}" right?

Isn't there no better achievement than that?

..And putting aside counting our chickens before they've hatched, something like a {Dragon}, I have to wonder about that?

There's nothing like a protuberance high in the sky along the pillar like on the 11th floor.

Even below there's nothing that stands out within the range we can see.

It might be on the opposite side of the pillar from where we're standing right now but even after teleporting over and over again in the end we still haven't found it.

There's no place where a {Dragon} might be?

Hearing our conversation before we realized it everyone from the {Saviors} had surrounded Miduchi and I.

"Normally, {Dragons} fly just like {Wyverns}."

I've heard about that before.

"Also, they spit out breath."

I've heard that too. But, isn't the effective range only about 20~30 meters just like the {Frost Lizard} and the {Lesser Yowie}?

If the distance is any further than that it should spread out and accelerate the speed it weakens right?

"Yeah, that might be the case. But, since we don't know the size of the dragon, I don't think we can make any guesses. Thinking about the size of that Wyvern and it wouldn't be strange for it to be several times larger than that right.."

In other words at two times larger a length of about 30 meters or so? If I think about the size of all the enemies that spit out a breath until now then you could say the effective range should be about five times larger.

That means 150...

That's certainly makes grouping up something to think about.

If it continues to spit out breath while we're all gathered in one place then we might end up taking an irrecoverable amount of huge damage.

"It seems there's not many places on this floor where we can hide from an opponent flying in the air after all.."

Certainly.

"I can understand what Miduchi is saying."

After quietly listening with his arms crossed Zenom lowered his arms while saying.

"However, that's if we were to fight in this net-like area, right? If we were to fight on the floor we can see below then the trees should be in the way so I think it would be best to bring along as many as we can and regroup though.."

Certainly it's just as Zenom says.

If we don't fight on this floor but the one we can see below...

Suddenly I realized it.

How did that reincarnated Vampire Lord get to that device in the first place?
Did he coincidentally find that teleport plate on the 4th floor?
It can't be! It's an astronomically low probability right?

Most likely, there's a high chance that he knew ahead of time the location of the device was in the dungeon of Baldukk.

After all it was supposedly something they fired in themselves from the spaceship they were on.

It's not strange from him to remember the general location.

If when he arrived in the nearby area he heard about the crater and the underground dungeon then wouldn't he realize it?

It's possible he was already a Vampire Lord by the time he entered the dungeon of Baldukk as well.

His direct combat power was high. And with that skill at using magic and his massive amount of MP then wouldn't exploring from the surface to here be possible?

If that's the case then what did he do about the floor guardians...

Maybe only undead aren't considered as intruders from outside by the dungeon...

If that's the case then it's possible he might not have to fight against the floor guardians.

..Or at least I can't think of anything but that.

Author's Note: In regards to skill with the sword but Rokko is just that strong.

He can also use the shield. Al is considerably strong as well but he also has a portion where he depends on his stats.

Not only the maximum values of ability points increase during level up but at the same time there's a bonus addition to the proficiency degree of the ability points as well. The proficiency degree bonus granted during level up is based on the actions taken prior to leveling up and the base level (normally it's about 10) is decided based on luck when you're born with a coefficient factor (minimum of 1, maximum of 50 but the median is about 5~6. reincarnated people generally have a relatively high trend at 7~8) that acts as a multiplier.

The numbers guided by that is the proficiency degree bonus granted on level ups. Furthermore, 1000 of this value is equal to 1 point of "this ability point actually be made use of". Of course, even without relying on level ups you can slowly raise this number through accumulated training.

That's why in terms of pure sword technique let alone the commander or leader class of the first knight he would even fall behind Zenom. However, this is in regards to technique and at the current point in terms of ability and proficiency values Al's overall close combat strength is in the upper ranking of this world.

The speed you can swing the sword or bring them back, body balance, and such are unrelated (though not completely).

These things are included in how well you're making use of your ability points.

Also, when using a weapon the proficiency degree of that weapon will become the basis. The degree of proficiency for that weapon is equivalent to the experience from training with that weapon.

Incidentally Al's coefficient factor is 7 while Fan's is 47. If we were to assume that the basic value is 10 then during level ups Al receives 70 proficiency degree points towards his ability points (equivalent to his ability points increasing by 0.07) but Fan's increase by 470 (equivalent to ability points increasing by 0.47).

Translator note: If you can't understand that basically it means that whenever you level up the stats like Strength, etc... that increase by 1 that Al can see using Identify are just increasing the max value, and the actual value the matters is the proficiency degree which Al only gains 0.07 of each stat for per level up, and requires 1,000 points of to reach 1 full stat point increase towards str, spd, etc... In comparison his talent sucks compared to Fan because fan gets 0.47 per level up, basically every level his Strength increases by a solid half a point. Not to mention it goes up from training. Ex. Al's actual strength would be something like Strength: 28.37/40 when what he sees with identify is just Strength: 40. The 28.37 is the proficiency degree of his strength from training and the 0.07 bonus per level up, basically how strong he actually is.

Chapter 324 : 12th Floor

I dragged along Kuro and Mary up to the teleport crystal room on the 8th floor. These two have have realistically entered the range of level 15 and beyond that they were already taught the fundamental combat techniques from the knight group.

They're not lacking to the level where they could join a second-rate party. Well, the kinds of people who have received investiture as knights all have a somewhat decent level of combat strength so as long as they get used to the combat and actions in the dungeon then it shouldn't be wrong to hope they can manage this much.

However, this time raising their levels wasn't the primary objective.

The {Butchers} being lead by Zenom were already taking a break and the {Exterminators} were dragged up to here by Miduchi and Kimu.

Of course, everyone from the {Saviors} arrived long before and have all finished taking showers already.

"So this is what it meant by there being teleport crystals all over the place on the 8th floor.."

"Tomorrow is the 9th floor, so that will come out right?"

"That?"

"Crabs, the crabs."

"I'm looking forward to them right. I've only eaten them a countable number of times after all."

"By the way, I wonder what kind of price that {Light.Saber} will sell for?"

"Of course~ it's that flashy of a sword after all. I'm sure it'll be amazing~ right?"

Just from the conversations I can hear it seems the {Exterminators} are still able to take it easy up to here.

Although, they're normally active primarily on the 5th floor so in terms of combat strength you could say they're equal to the first-rate parties of a while back.

Furthermore, the matter of the {Light.Saber} came up so I'll mention it but I was told they still need a bit more time to get an estimate on the {Loincloth.Of.Daring} so it's still left in their care jsut like that.

Putting that aside, we all entered the dungeon this time the day before yesterday on the 13th of December.

On the first day we all regrouped on the 3rd floor.

And then yesterday, we all regrouped once again in the teleport crystal room on the 6th floor.

Today we cleared through the 7th and 8th floors.

Tomorrow we'll be clearing the 9th and 10th floors including regrouping in the teleport room on the 11th floor assuming we don't encounter any combat and can make it straight to the teleport crystal there.

"In regards to tomorrow. Miduchi continue just like that, Kimu you reutrn to the {Saviors}. Kamu, you enter the {Exterminators}. They need a rear guard. Also, Sanno and Zulu you exchange places. After that Binsu and Jeru. Tomorrow the two of you should accompany the {Saviors}. In exchange Zenom, Toris..and also Gwine go to the {Butchers}."

As long as I have a map there's no problem.

The {Exterminators} will have Miduchi so they should have plenty of combat strength.

She's skilled at freezing things in ice with magic just like me so as long as they have the map they should be fine.

If the {Butchers} who I sent Gwine over to have Zenom there's pretty much no problem.

With Zenom and Rokko at the top I have Kevin and Henry acting as assistants. Ginger, Gwine, and Rubi will deal a lot of damage with spears and then Misu can back them up with magic and her bow.

Toris normally fortifies the front line but if need be he can support them with magic.

Zenom can lead the front line unit and Ginger can lead the spear unit.

Of course Toris will take the overall command but if things come to it then he can move to the front or fall to back so it's possible for him to move in a fluid way.

The {Saviors} ended up with the lineup of Bel, Ralpha, Basutorial, Kimu, Binsu, Jeru, Sanno, Angela, and Giberuti so Ralpha and Sanno act as the front line, Binsu can act as a half front line similar to Toris, though even including the spear unit they technically have 8 combat roles so you could say their formation is pretty fragile but I'll be having Angela and Bel equipped with the rifle and net gun so there shouldn't be any problem with their combat strength.

Obviously all of us will regroup before battling the 7 Minotaurs that act as the guardians of the 9th floor.

It's for that reason we already decided on the gathering place ahead of time.

.....

Year 7447, Month 12, Day 16

"Have you finished checking your equipment? Then starting from the {Exterminators}. Go"

"Alright, let's go. Zentomofu!"

Zenom is acting as the leader of the {Exterminators} but he's teleporting in bringing the newly organized {Exterminators} with Kuro and Mary included.

Several tens of seconds after they turned into beads of light and disappeared into the 12th floor the teleport incantation reappeared in the crystal.

"Then next up is us. We'll be going ahead~ Robukoniha!"

After confirming the incantation Miduchi and the {Butchers} she's commanding all disappeared teleporting over.

"..Let's go. Meketeruho!"

And then leaving Giberuti behind all of us {Saviors} teleported into the 12th floor as well.

"Th..They're over there!"

Ralpa was the one who noticed first. I reflexively looked in the direction she was pointing but it was too far so I couldn't see anyone. It seems they're over 7 km away in terms of distance straight to them. Taking into consideration that the outer circumference is shaped like a circle and we're separated by 1/3rd of the distance around.

According to {Party-ization} and I can feel Zenom and the others from the direction

Ralpa is pointing so that should be the {Exterminators}.

Even further beyond that I can feel the reaction for Miduchi and the others as well.

The distance between them and Miduchi and the others is pretty close, probably within 1 km.

"Miduchi-san is a bit further ahead..It seems like they're both pretty close to each other. It seems that we were the unlucky ones."

Bel said.

Certainly. We're the only ones who teleported into a place pretty far away.

We've already gone over what actions to take after teleporting into the 12th floor.

If the distance between the three parties is close to the same or at least 5 km apart then the {Exterminators} will remain in place while the others will try teleporting again.

If the distance is less than 5 km between two parties then those two will regroup while the remaining one will try teleporting again.

Doing that is more efficient in covering the distance after all.

This is the case where we're the only ones who have to teleport again.

Last week, without me the {Saviors} tried repeatedly teleporting into the 12th floor so at the very least they've already confirmed there's no traps along the outer wall.

And the 12th floor is just as bright as the 7th floor with the ground being close to a level surface so it's possible to walk a normal speed.

40 minutes later we were safely able to regroup with all the members of the {Slaughterers}.

After teleporting for the 12th time we finally were in a location less than 2 km away from them.

Now then, we've safely finished gathering together.
Next up is marching towards what appears to be a pillar towering in the center which should have the teleport crystal room inside.

We didn't change the member lineup of the parties.
Though it's a combination of three parties, it's because we decided that taking action all grouped together was too dangerous.
It should be fine to just keep an eye on each other's location using {Party-ization}.

Of course, all three of our parties are departing in order with a distance of about 100 meters between so we can back each other up with projectile weapons and magic in a few seconds if anything happens.

First off is the {Saviors} taking the lead.
In the case that the floor guardian comes out we should be the ones who have the highest chance of encountering it first after all.

If the lightning bolt cage appears it would be useless if the party with the highest attack power gets left behind after all.

Although, if it's a {Dragon} or a monster that flies like the {Wyvern} on the 11th floor then the lightning bolt cage shouldn't come out in a way that limits it's movements.

In that case just as expected it should appear close to the outer wall just like the 11th floor and should at least be several hundred meters behind the party advancing at the front.

Which is why we thought there's not much to worry about with this kind of division.

.....

On the extremely large mid-air hallway leading across almost like an abura kiri net.

What can be seen of the 13th floor below is at best a hazy forest when straining your eyes.

If you gently look down even if you don't have a fear of heights it's enough to make your legs tremble.

Nevertheless even on the narrowest of the walkways they're over 10 meters wide and in the wider areas over 100 meters so it's possible to pass by without needing to look down at all.

There's nothing like the strong winds or snow storms that can hit you in the mountains on the surface either.

There's a slight breeze that's almost even comfortable gusting over the skin and the humidity is just barely slightly chilly similar to the other floors of the dungeon.

Normally it would be a tasteless sight that you could never experience but combined with the grand scenery and it's almost enough to make you forget this is in the greater depths of a dangerous dungeon.

Through that we continued walking for two hours while remaining cautious of any attacks from monsters including the guardian.

Without anything happening at all we arrived at the pillar in the center of the 12th floor that leads to the lowest part of the 13th floor.

The pillars in all of the floors up until now were at most 50 meters per side and shaped like a square but just from a glance this one looks even thicker than 60.

However, when looking at it from nearby the shape of this pillar is close to a circle and it's diameter should be around 100 meters.

Just as expected it's huge.

It's thick to the point where the Tokyo Government Office seems like nothing.

"The entrance is..on the opposite side I guess?"

While waiting for everyone to regroup we tried going around to the opposite side of the pillar and just as expected we discovered the same 2~3 meter wide and high cave opening as usual.

Just in case we remained on guard while entering and were able to confirm that it was the teleport crystal room.

It's still not even 10:00 am yet.

"I wonder why there wasn't a guardian?"

Miduchi asked in doubt but no one had an answer.

"Indeed I wonder why...It can't be because they were already defeated by that Vampire Lord enough times after all.."

I couldn't do anything but grumble in response.

"Could it be, because the period that no~ one came in was long that they all died of old age?"

Ralpa is still saying slightly odd things as usual.

"There's no way that's the case right. The floor guardians just remain standing in place without moving as long as they don't discover any opponents. Just like you've seen plenty of times up until now.."

Toris replied in amazement.

Since we spent a long time observing the Minotaurs on the 8th and 9th floor there's some things we've guessed.

For as long as they don't recognize an intruder or are meddled with from inside of the teleport crystal room they seem to be close to being in something like a deep sleep or hibernation.

Well, prior to even that I wonder if monsters in the dungeon even die from aging in the first place?

More-so when it comes to the floor guardians...

"Since it wasn't around it might be fortunate.."

Hearing our conversation Ginger said there's no way of explaining it so we cut off guessing why the guardian of the 12th floor wasn't around.

"But you know~ not being able to get our hands on the {Magic.Item} is.."

Everyone nodded to what Jeru said.

About half of the reason why we went to the trouble of coming to the 12th floor was to obtain valuable {Magic.Items}.

The majority of the other half was because I'd definitely like to defeat that {Dragon} or whatever and use it to raise our reputation.

We came based on calculations that we can defeat it.

According to what they say, if this many first-rate adventurers fight it in cooperating then it should be possible to defeat it.

According to what they say, while they're still newcomers, Kuro and Mary aren't just true knights but these past few months they've been trained by AI using a special menu.

..And above all else, they say that I(AI),

Miduchi, and the others are reincarnated people(though this just for the people who know about reincarnated people), so I(AI) am most likely a special talent.

Furthermore, all of the former members of the {Slaughterers} who can control powerful spells are here as well.

Everyone is thinking like this so when we discussed defeating the {Dragon}(a high possibility of there being one), everyone agreed without first or second thoughts.

In addition to that they've heard the story about how just Miduchi and I defeated the {Death=Tyrant.Kin} on the 14th floor. A big part of it is how Miduchi said that depending on how you think about it that monster might be stronger than a dragon.

Since

it was that sort of powerful monster and we were able to defeat it with just the two of us, they probably think it's fine as long as Miduchi and I are here.

Also, Toris and Bel are thinking the same thing as me that the title of {Dragon Slayer} will be an extremely useful weapon to us in the future.

If you ask me I want for everyone to be able to use that title.

In the future, when the time that will definitely come where they have to deal with stubborn old men and women who say, "even though your just dirt adventurers who weren't even born as nobles after all" I think they'll be able to gain some respect without being underestimated that way.

But, in the end that thought was useless..though I guess there's still the 13th floor.

However, it's also true that it was a bit of let down, it's only obvious but everyone has some desire for the reputation and treasures as well.

Obviously, going through all the trouble to come here without even having the chance to defeat a guardian and going back empty handed is unprofitable so we're still moving ahead.

Either way, I want to see that device from nearby.

In the end, after taking a short break we decided to teleport into the 13th floor.

.....

The 13th floor was a dense forest just like the 11th floor.
This time we started off with the {Saviors} teleporting inside excluding Zulu and Angela.
It's just a measure we took since we didn't know what kind of monsters could be lurking near the teleport crystals there.

Immediately after teleporting we spread out and scanned the surroundings but we couldn't find any monsters.

As a result of carefully investigating the surroundings and just the same as the 11th and 12th floors we seem to have been teleported to somewhere along the outer wall of the dungeon.
However, it's not like we determined it by teleporting a number of times so it's not good to let our guards down.

We returned to the 12th floor where everyone was waiting and reported the details of what we saw.
After that just the {Saviors} continued teleporting over about 10 times.

All of the teleport locations were along the outer wall on top of not being able to discover any monsters nearby so we were able to guess that the 13th floor is most likely the same as the above two floors.

During

the roughly two hours until lunch, our three newly organized parties repeated teleporting inside over and over to confirm but there was nothing outside of our expectations.

However, after investigating around the outer wall a bit away from the teleport destination and in most cases within 20~30 meters away there's a slightly large 2 meter wide path almost like a mountain climbing route and we were able to discover a similar path that seems to circle all around the surroundings of the floor.

Since this path exists it seems that we should be able to regroup relatively easy.

After having lunch, our three parties teleported inside and we all agreed to pass through the forest while climbing the mountain towards the central area after regrouping.

The time is about 4:30 pm.
The location the 30 of us are at is in the middle of the outer circumference and the central area.
Roughly 2.5 km from the outer circumference.

Since either way I wanted to see that device from as close as possible we regrouped based on the location facing the device.

If you were to think of the lowest point along the outer wall as zero altitude then just from a glance the mountain towering in the center of the 13th floor should have an elevation of about 1,000 meters or so. In that case it should be a steep hill with an average incline ratio of about 20%. Though that's if there's a path that leads straight towards the center. Well, the fact that it's a winding path is something we determined in the early stages of investigation so you could say it's a salvation that it isn't that much of a steep incline but for that portion the overall distance we have to walk increases.

In order to reach this point it took us close to four hours to regroup and start climbing but it isn't just because we've been careful in passing through the forest. After all the greatest enemy is the fact that the hill and it's distance are stretching out. The path started out winding around but after that it started to slowly rise up almost like a whirlpool so it was pretty exhausting.

Also, there's some things we only noticed for the first time after starting the climb.

We took a bit of time in investigating those things as well.

Rarely a bit off from the path there's places with no trees growing.

We tried going to investigate those places a number of times but it's not like anything happened.

However, all of the bald spots scattered across the forest almost seemed like they had been somewhat dug up.

It's unknown whether or not a monster dug them.

Since it seems that giant stag beetle, the {Great.Underground.Vojanoi} specializes in digging tunnels so it might be that thing.

But, it wasn't to the extent of being a tunnel either.

A lot of the bald areas had large holes but even then the largest of them was at most 10 meters or so.

Even the depth was at most 30 meters.

Because of the time as expected opinions of returning once for the day started to come out.

Those opinions are quite right so we decided to return after everyone takes a short break.

We all stood up preparing to head back.

.....

..And now.

We {Slaughterers} are facing the crisis of being wiped out.

There's still not a single person who's suffered any injuries but almost all of the members are in a state of panic from the fear and they can't stand up.

The ones who have fallen into a panic are all crawling along the ground as they try to hide behind the nearest bush.

However, I guess because of the fear, their bodies have stiffened up and won't move as they please so they're just trembling in place.

I can't say anything for sure but I think it happened shortly after a tremendously loud roar as if you'd think it was Godzilla crying out reached us from the direction of the top of the mountain.

..I know this!

I've experienced it during the time with the {Horned Bear}.

But, when I used {Identify} to confirm their {Conditions} almost everyone has changed to the {Condition: Panic}.

They've completely skipped past things like (Small), (Medium), and (Large) and are suddenly in a complete state of Panic.

There's only a mere two people that didn't fall into a panic.
Myself and just one more person.

Incidentally I don't know of any method other than time to escape from a state of panic.

Author's Note: TL: author explains how the MC learned the spell {Remove.Afraid} but it's different from the spell {Remove.Fear} that would be requires for the Panic status condition. He also goes on to explain some other potential counters for it like legendary spells {Bravery} and {Resistance.Fear} which offer a slightly chance of countering it but basically just mentions them in passing and that not even the fairies would know them/Al didn't ask about them, etc...

Chapter 325 : Dragon People

Year 7447, Month 12, Day 16

This time we were proceeding through a forest with low visibility so you could say it was fortunate that we weren't putting as much distance between parties as we were on the 12th floor.

Before it can find us we can hide in the forest off from the path.

It seems that the lightning bolt cage still hasn't appeared so it might not have specifically been menacing roar because it had found us. Angela wasn't influenced by the effects of the roar but she doesn't seem to understand what in the world happened.

Well, if you don't know about it then that's not unreasonable so I scolded the panicking Angela while herding everyone and hiding them in the grove of trees.

Of course, kicking and dragging the ones who are too slow, in any case I put the highest priority on quickly retreating.

They were originally trying to run away because of the overwhelming fear but because their legs stopped working they all couldn't move.

I guess the only salvation is that because I was treating them roughly it didn't take all that much time to finish finding them shelter.

However, judging from the {Roar} of that dragon(?) just now and the power of the {Horned Bears} is not even worth comparing.

Even Miduchi and Bel who have a lot of MP were sent trembling in fear in a single blow.

Though they only lost 4 MP.

Although, thanks to that Jesu who's young on top of having a low MP went straight into mana exhaustion and stopped moving without even trying to escape just threw his spear to the side and held his head while crouching down and sobbing, praying to the God of Battle Onuwasu.

It seems he pissed himself from the fear as well but maybe he should be praised just for not losing consciousness.

Though I think it would have been easier to carry him if he did pass out.

Angela is the only one who not only didn't lose any MP but I couldn't find any abnormalities with her at all.

Her level is 24 so she holds the next highest level after me.

After that Miduchi, Zenom, and Zulu are all lined up at 23 but these three just had their MP reduced by 4 and their faces are stiff as tears come down from the fear.

Everyone else below that was the same.

Damn it. It's impossible to bring everyone along and retreat from this place.

..In that case, there's no choice other than to fight.

Not to mention, I should drag it out to a place a bit of distance away from here so it doesn't cause any damage to everyone.

"Alright, we've already finished hiding everyone right? Angela, you use this sword. I'll use Gwine's spear."

I handed Toris's sword to Angela while I lowered my bayonet and grabbed Gwine's magic spear.

"No..No way! This is something that Karosutalan-sama takes great care of.."

"Don't worry about it. If the opponent is a dragon then it's better to have a magic weapon. It's not that I can't use the spell mana enchant but if the battle drags out I don't know if there will be enough time to recast it..though.."

Going off the abilities I think the sword Miduchi uses would be the highest but neither Angela or I have confidence in skillfully using a scimitar. And taking the reach into consideration the spear is best but Angela's never used the spear before, her main is also the rifle so it's better if it's a sword that won't get in the way. Even I'm not exactly the best at using a spear but I was taught how to use it when I was a kid and bayonet fighting was originally based on spearmanship after all. Most likely, I don't think I'll need any other techniques then thrusting upwards so that much should be plenty.

"Hand me a bullet."

In the bullet bucket that Angela has attached to her waist I cast the spell {Enchant.Weapon} on one row or about 10 bullets.

We haven't tested it against monsters in live combat yet but I already knew that they would work as a target for the spell {Enchant.Weapon}. I'm sure it won't be anything more than a consolation though.

There's no time so I can't cast magic on any more bullets than this.

"Alright, I cast magic on the bullets from this row. If you determine that the gun isn't working then even if you have to throw out the remaining bullets in the cylinder change to these."

I said that while taking several {Arrows.Of.Blindness} from Bel's quiver and sticking them into the back of my belt.

In the past Basutoral showed live proof that as long as they stab into the target even if you don't fire them from a bow the effect will work.

"I'm going to cast defensive spells on you now. After I'm finished then we'll fight as far away from everyone as possible."

"Yes."

I cast all elements of the resist type spells on Angela and myself and then the two of us ran towards the summit of the mountain at our full speed.

.....

The change occurred when we were running through the mountain paths and could see up the mountain.

They're still far away to the point of just looking like sesame seeds but I could see several flying creatures circling around the mountain top.

For another five minutes we ran up the mountain path at full speed.

On the top of the mountain it seems there's something like a cave entrance with it's mouth open.

The flying creatures seem to be jumping out from there.

"...That is..!?"

Angela said from my side while out of breath.

But, they're still too far so I can't really see them.

The number is..9, 10..No, they keep increasing.
And...

"Ha...The..they look like humanoids..{Imps}?"

It would be strange for it to be {Imps}.
They seem a bit larger and the shape as well...

It was then that high in the sky above a loud bang as if the air was being torn echoed out.

Since it was so far away the sound only faintly entered my ears but judging from the distance away it should have originally been a thunderous roar.

"This is sound is..!"

Just as Angela said, this sound is the one made when the lightning bolt cage appears!

In a hurry I looked around to our sides but all I could see was the outer wall of the 13th floor in the distance and nothing else...

No, I can faintly see something like consecutive lightning coming from the gaps in the net floating above.

The lightning bolt cage on the 12th floor activated!?

At this point?

..I'm sure that's the case but I noticed the reason right away.

The sesame seeds that were circling around above the mountain have become the size of rice.

I guess we should assume we've been discovered.

In other words, those flying insect like things were the floor guardians of the 12th floor!?

That was the case.

The sizes went from sesame seeds to rice and are rapidly increasing in size as they fly over.

"Angela, pull them in until they reach a distance which you're confident in hitting them then fire away!"

I said that then put some distance between us and used the spell {Audible.Clamor} while climbing further up the mountain path.

Together with Bel I've had Angela practice shooting moving targets at every chance possible.

I lower the speed to an appropriate amount and have them fire at spell warheads that have been shaped relatively short in size.

As expected they can only hit {Arbalest Class} warheads with a 50/50 chance but {Light Catapult} is better than 50% and they can almost always land hits on {Heavy Catapults}.

If they're the size of humans and she can quietly take her time to aim then there's no doubt she'll hit within 200 meters.

I guess they're almost about 500 meters away..They've entered the range of {Identify}.

If it's just this level then we should be able to manage.

..Hn?

It seems there's several types of them.

Dexterity: 17

Endurance: 31

Special Skill: Poison

Is something different?

Ah, poison.

It's necessary to finish it off before it gets close.

"Angela! After you fire a shot change your position!"

Either way I've already been discovered so I have no intention of running or hiding anymore.

Shouting is an important factor if you want to lure over the enemy.

Bang!

When the formation of Dragonians was 200 meters or so away Angela fired the rifle.

Though it was within the forest there was nothing to block the sound so the gunshot spread out pretty far.

A short moment later my {Audible.Clamor} echoed out covering up the gunshot. One of them started falling from the group of 20 or so.

I couldn't tell which type it was but I guess it only takes one shot if they're hit?

Alright, me too!

First off as a test case and in order to reduce their numbers I used the spell {Chain Lightning} on one of the weak looking Bazu types flying at the lead.

The dragonian that was about 150 meters away was hit by electricity that tore through the air!

Additionally it split off the same as usual and hit another two, no, I guess just one because of the distance..However, it split off even further from there and hit more, then split again and hit three, then..I guess that was the limit.

After seeing seven of their allies dropped from my spell the dragonians quickly split up out of caution.

But you know...

I immediately cast {Stone Javelin Missile}!

I fire off five {Stone Javelins} with missile attached to them.

Oh, their reactions themselves are pretty fast.

But, there's a limit to their mobility in the air.

Also, the speed they're flying at is only just a bit faster than an adult running so about 30~40 km/hour I guess?

I'm sure it's faster than continuing to run on the surface for a long time but like that Bundo birds are a lot faster.

In the end, the one who shifted their body to try and dodge was chased by my five stone spears and let out a scream as they fell to the ground after being pierced through by them.

When their distance got closer I noticed yet another type mixed in with them.
What's with this guy!?

There's only a few but guys like these are mixed into the ground.

It seems they were positioned at the rear of the group so I couldn't see them from the distance.

Though I might have finished off several of them with the {Chain Lightning} just now.

I guess it's flying use that {Special Skill: Mana Flight}?

..Magic from above might be a bit troublesome.

This one properly has wings.
It's body is the biggest and it's magic levels are high so is it the boss?
It also has a special skill like {Clone Body}.
However, this one is quite...

HP: 146(146) MP: 53(58)
Strength: 31

Dexterity: 20
Endurance: 25
Special Skill: Mana Flight
Special Skill: Earth Magic Lv. 5
Special Skill: Water Magic Lv. 5
Special Skill: Fire Magic Lv. 5
Special Skill: Wind Magic Lv. 5
Special Skill: Void Magic Lv. 6

..There's no mistake!
This one is the boss!

It's level is high and it can use magic at a considerably high level. Additionally mentioning it and the other ones have a tail that stands out quite a bit but this one either doesn't or it should be pretty small so it doesn't stand out.

However, now that they've approached this close I can finally tell what they look like.

Every single one of them is almost like a lizard, no, almost like a dragon shaped into a humanoid.

I've never seen something like a dragon before so I don't really know though. But, they look quite a bit more ferocious and threatening than a lizard.

The Bazu.Dragonian is covered in brass colored scales with almost no glaze to them.

The Gabaku.Dragonian has old looking copper color scales, the Vozaggu.Dragonian looks bronze colored but with green rust mixed in, the Seibaku.Dragonian has dark grey scales, and the Worakku.Dragonian has dull gold color scales.

It seems like they also have equipment on them but they're just wearing clothes like worn-out cloth and holding what appear to be clubs.

We were able to finish off two more before the group was able to reach a distance where they can fire attack magic.

Since my magic levels are high my attack range is a lot farther after all.

One of them was hit by my attack spell and the other was sniped by Angela after she changed positions.

Angela didn't miss her mark. Great!

"Hmph"

Several of the dragonians started firing attack spells aimed at me.
I was surprised they can use magic while in flight but you're too far away.
If you don't accelerate the speed of something like attack spells then they just fly at the speed you can throw a ball.

Just by shifting my position a bit all of the spells missed.

I immediately fired off spells in counter attack and shot down one more dragonian.

Nuhhawwa, shooting birds from seven sides is it?

And just as I thought that the enemies aren't just targets, the Worakku.Dragonian fired an attack spell with missile attached!

I had to give up on controlling my missile and offset it with an {Anti-Magic Field}.

I should have carried along a shield, shit.

But, it's big that we were able to bring down 11 of the dragonians up to here.
Only half remain.

First off it would be best to get rid of that Worakku.Dragonian that's using missile.

"Start with that gold colored one! I'll act as the decoy!"

After ordering Angela I ran off in a way that stands out.

"Go~~ga~~!!!!!"

Once again what seems to be the roar of a dragon echoed around.
It might just be my imagination but it sounds a bit more irritated now.
The dragonians flew into the air after the first roar so I was already able to guess it wouldn't have an effect on them.

Due to that, I didn't have any strange hopes.

However, I can feel something like impatience from the dragonians after the roar sounded out.

This is, something's happened...

I don't know what kind of relationship there is between the dragon(?) and the dragonians but it seems there is one.

If that wasn't the case what seems to be the guardians of the 12th floor the dragonians wouldn't be on the 13th floor.

The dragonians have arrived several tens of meters away from before starting to descend.

I guess since they can't make quick movements in the air they're planning to try finishing me off in a ground battle.

It seems Angela's shooting didn't make it in time.

However, if it's a ground battle then I'm all for it.

Around the path I used earth magic to create several dirt piles.

Using these dirt piles as bunkers, first off is a shooting match.

The reason I didn't make them the shape of a wall is to prevent it from being harder to flee if I get surrounded.

Though I say that, the dragonians are about the same size as people or maybe a bit larger depending on the individual.

It might have been a mistake to leave behind my bayonet.

A gunshot echoed out.

One of the ones that was in the middle of descent let out a dull scream before falling at the edge of my sight.

Sorry, Angela.

It seems I underestimated you.

So they wouldn't try to focus on Angela's gunshot I used {Audible.Clamor} several times again.

Look over here!

Chapter 326 : Suicide Attack

Year 7447, Month 12, Day 16

The {Audible.Clamor} I used was successfully able to grab the attention of all the dragonians.

I hide half of my body behind the bunkers I made and fire a {Stone Javelin Missile} with extra mana at one of them that's late to land.

The dragonian twisted it's body to try and dodge but it's chest was pierced by a javelin moving at a considerably faster speed than normal and crashed.

In my case, in order to raise the flying speed using void magic it actually consumes less mana than a normal usage for others. It's one of the benefits of having void magic at MAX level.

Nine remaining is it?

I guess it can be considered good that with just two of us we were able to reduce the enemy forces by over half before they made contact with us.

From around the area where the dragonian crashed a loud explosion echoed out with a "Boom!"

Th..These guys, do they have gunpowder or something on them!?

Since the only thing they had in their hands was a club I couldn't believe it. Unintentionally, I clenched down on the {Spear.Of.Piercing} with my left hand to confirm the grip.

There's four dirt piles dotted around the mountain climbing path. I'd like to skillfully use these while getting backup fire from Angela to reduce their numbers.

On both sides of the path I used the spell {Quagmire} to make a large moat of mud in the forest.

Of course I've left gaps in just once place on both sides.

If they use these gaps then it'll be easier to aim.

Above the mud I used the spell {Gas.Sleep.Cloud} but I can't hope for much of an effect from it.

I only used it because the gas created with this spell is transparent and with no scent.

If they try to glide at a low altitude with those wings and just happen to flap them into the gas then they should fall and if it even has a bit of an effect it helps.

Depending on the case a {Fire Wall} or {Stone Wall} would be fine as well but those would block our sight after all.

Even if a mountain fire starts in the dungeon and it ends up bald I couldn't care less so it's not like I didn't use it because of the trees.

My aim is obviously, nothing other than freezing them in ice.

Though I say that, the visibility in the forest is bad so it's impossible to freeze them all together.

It would be great if I can freeze at least half of them but even if I'm lucky wouldn't it be at best three or so?

If it's the magic type then they'll probably erase the ice as well.
But, the aim is just to slow them down for a short period of time.

At the same time I'd like to reduce their numbers by even just a bit more.
In any case with this the simple fortifications are done.

...

There's one..two dragonians looking over here from the shadows of the trees.
Another 10 meters until they reach the 10 meter wide quagmire I made on both sides of the path.

I'll pretend not to notice them until they approach at least up to the quagmire.

If I use the ice now it would just end with those two frozen.

..Three..just this many?

Get a bit closer.

Mu, Angela, she's in that sort of place...

I saw Angela in the shadow of a tree about 100 meters away from the lower parts of the path I'm on.

She's in a position where it's difficult to fire upwards but I guess it's still better than firing downwards.

There's not much wind though at this distance there's not much meaning to gravity or wind gusts so it's just a problem of feeling though.

Come to think of it, including myself I still haven't done any outdoor shooting practice.

I guess it's fine after I obtain a territory.

Putting that aside and it seems Angela is making good use of an old tree and a thick branch to secure a difficult to find position.

With her skill, as long as I don't make any strange moves and get in the way she should be able to fire two shots from that location.

If I can skillfully cover up the gunshot then maybe even 3~4 shots.

I scanned the surroundings and after confirming there's a bit of leeway left I started controlling my mana to use the spell {Telepathy}.
Angela is in my sight range so I can use it without a problem.

"Angela, hold out so you can fire three shots from there."

The only flaw is that if you don't at least speak in a whisper the other side won't be able to hear it but it's a convenient spell.
If it's like hearing a person right in front of you talk with a normal volume in a quiet room so there's no problem.
In other words, even a whisper is fine.

"For the time being, I intend to leave my right side from where you're looking to you but depending on the locations of the enemies I might use magic over there first. In that case I'll use it so you know it's coming and leave the ones on the left side to you. Right now, there's three on the left side and one, no, two on the right side. Alright?"

We're on the same slope so if I face in the same direction as Angela the sides we're looking at will be the same.

"I understand, master."

I heard Angela's voice as if she was whispering in front of me.

"And after that, among the ones that have wings the copper and bronze colored ones can't use magic. Put aiming priority on the other ones. The highest priority is the gold looking one without wings."

"Understood."

The three on the left side from where Angela is looking slowly started to approach.

Judging from the color of the scales it should be two Bazu.Dragonians and 1 Gabaku.Dragonian.

Unfortunately I can't tell how many are hidden behind them still keeping an eye on things.

And then the two on the right side slowly started to approach as well. Both of these seem to be Bazu.Dragonians.

I guess this is the limit.

If I don't move a good distance away from here then I can't see both sides at the same time so after all I should freeze the left side here!

I was successfully able to lock all three of them in ice!

It's impossible for these ones to escape on their own so it should be fine as long as that Worakku.Dragonian that can use all elements isn't nearby.

And then at that moment a thunderous roar sounded out once again.

This time I could clearly feel anger and irritation from the sound of the roar.

I reflexively looked towards the top of the mountain.

I guess it means, hurry up and kill the intruders?

In a hurry I turned around to look behind me at the ones coming from the right side but they were looking upwards as well.

I can somehow feel like their actions are a bit human-like.

They're humanoids after all so I guess that can't be helped.

I use {Lightning Bolt} on one of the two!

At the same time as I started to use my spell they both started dashing at me. Their wings are still folded up against their backs.

The {Lightning Bolt} arrived in an instant and surrounded the Bazu.Dragonian. A direct hit!

"Goke~!!!"

The dragonian let out an unpleasant scream while falling over.

The other one flew off to the right as if it was hit in the head. I immediately use {Audible.Clamor} in the surroundings.

Angela, nice support.

The Bazu.Dragonian that was shot fell over and stopped moving. Judging from how it fell it must have been hit in the head by the bullet. I can't tell because blood and brain matter didn't scatter in the surroundings but..I'm surprised. For it to take a hit from the M80 and not pierce through..but, it seems to have died instantly when it's brain was destroyed.

With this just four remaining!

I raised cheers in my heart but my eyes opened wide. The glaze-less brass colored scales of the two Bazu.Dragonians we just defeated rapidly started turning white and in no time at all..changed to two stone statues in the shape of the fallen dragonians!

What in the world is this!?

Shortly after thinking that an attack spell came flying from the forest behind the two stone statues! I somehow managed to evade it by hiding behind the bunker.

There's ice behind me so it should be fine for a short while.

Even if the Worakku.Dragonian is in that direction I should have some time before it can erase the ice, go around, or fly up over...

But, of all things!

From above the mountain, in the area where the dragonians came out... I can see something massive taking flight...

I saw it.

I ended up seeing it.

Now that I've seen it, there's no way I can take my eyes off it.

For an instant, it was to the point where it completely drove off my awareness of the dragonians that..

My awareness returned hearing a gunshot ring out again.

Did Angela not see that thing!?

I guess her sight was blocked because she's crouching in the forest so she didn't see it.

Not only did I forget to use {Audible.Clamor} but being caught up looking at the massive thing created a lethal opening.

The Worakku.Dragonian that came out from the forest started using magic.

Impudently it even seemed to intend to use earth magic and bury me in dirt. However, because of it's low level of earth magic(it's plenty high though) the amount of dirt it can make wasn't high so it didn't try to directly bury me but just created it above me.

Immediately I fired another shot of {Lightning Bolt}.

I ended up being buried but at almost the same time the electricity arrived at the {Worakku.Dragonian}.

I can't tell if I was able to defeat it or not.

I immediately used {Anti-Magic Field} to erase the surrounding dirt.

At the same time as I erased it seems I erase an attack spell that one of the dragonians fired at me.

It seems the Worakku.Dragonian from just now didn't fall but it's on it's knees suffering from the electricity.

With that MP even if it can recover from the electrical damage itself, it won't easily be able to escape from the numbness and pain.

"Dadda.godo.buru.ka~!!"

The dragonian with it's knee to the ground let out a voice as if spitting out it's breath and pointed towards the base of the slope while giving some kind of order.

Angela, it seems several of them are going to head over there?

By the time I Realized it a different Worakku.Dragonian was using {Anti-Magic Field} to try and release the first three I froze.

A Gabku and Bazu were already released and are heading towards me!

I fire a {Wind Cutter} at the Gabaku.Dragonian to hold it back and fight back against the Bazu.Dragonian with the spear in my hand.

Once again a gunshot rings out and I can hear a scream in like "Goga!!" from behind me.

Alright, Angela! Keep it up!

At the same time as that before the Bazu.Dragonians club could reach me I thrust towards it's chest with the {Spear.Of.Piercing}.

"Nueee~!!"

With a single shout filled with fighting spirit, I used all of my strength to pierce straight through the center of it's chest.

The response was plenty!

I quickly pulled out the spear and aimed it towards the Gabaku.Dragonian I was holding back just now.

At the same time I used {Audible.Clamor} right in front of it's face!

It's a feint.

I guess it was no good.

This, in most cases it doesn't work.

Since it's not like suddenly clapping your hands in their blind spot I guess.

Incidentally, {Light} and {Darkness} are effective but it's only limited to when the opponent isn't moving around.

The Gabaku.Dragonian moved to parry my spear with it's club.

If it doesn't first close the distance then it doesn't stand a chance, so it can't be helped.

But, even at a time like this I can use spells.

I fired a {Fire Javelin} at point blank and finished it off.

And then, I fired off the spell {Ice.Cone} towards the last Bazu.Dragonian that was freed from the ice and the Worakku.Dragonain that was about to cast a different spell at me after freeing it.

The charge of the Bazu was interrupted and the Worakku's concentration was broken.

But.

"Emeron!"

I heard Angela's voice from below the hill.

I guess she's finally entered close combat.

Since {Flame.Tongue} is a powerful weapon, she should have the advantage.

I don't cut my concentration from the {Ice.Cone} I'm using on the Bazu and Worakku in front of me.

However, the corpse of the Gabaku I finished off with a {Fire Javelin} just now has..started giving off a lot of smoke while melting down!

This, is it the gas from {Kill Cloud}!?

I maintain my focus on using {Ice.Cone} while falling back.

Just as I was about to change direction and move down the hill to regroup with Angela and...

The Worakku that I damaged with {Lightning Bolt} was behind me!

Shit!!

I remembered before taking an attack so I was barely able to dodge it.

I somehow managed to regain my posture as I faced the Worakku that's attacking me but it seems there's still some pain remaining as it's movements are dull.

However, my spear is useless at this distance.

"Shi!!"

I drop the spear and punched it with my fist.

A hook with my brass knuckles.

The Worakku that took my punch staggered.

In order to finish it off I throw one more punch from the opposite arm!

This time on that huge jaw..it isn't effective!?

"It was a mistake to let go of your spear, brat."

The dragonian's face twisted into a sneer as it spoke with a hard-to-hear voice.
The {Common.Language}!?

It swings down the club it was holding with its claws.

I sway backwards and evade the club, if it's come to this then an attack spell, and just as I thought that.

Boom!!

The dragonian that should have been twitching on the ground a bit of distance away and the Vozaggu that was shot by Angela before both exploded in an instant and..exploded into pieces!

And at the same time with a "Bang!!" an impact that shook my entire body hit me.

When I was caught up with the sudden explosion and covered with the spray from the corpse I ended up taking a hit from the WOrakku's club on my left shoulder.

But, I succeeded in firing a {Fire Cannon} into it while falling!
Get blown away along with that sneer on your face..!?

Along with a loud boom the corpse of the headless WOrakku.Dragonian exploded!

The explosion was huge to the point where it was incomparable to the Vozaggu from just now.

I desperately grit my teeth in order to not pass out.

That massive fellow I saw just before flashed through my mind.

Chapter 327 : Shadow of Death

Year 7447, Month 12, Day 16

Not only are my ears ringing with a ki~~n but I feel dizzy as well.

I had intended to at least somehow cover my exposed face with both of my arms..but I didn't make it in time.

Several fragments of the Worakku.Dragonian that exploded(most likely scales or something) have pierced into my jaw from my left cheek.

The

dizziness and ringing in my ears is severe to the point where I don't even have the leeway to concentrate on using a healing spell.

Picking up the {Spear.Of.Piercing} that I dropped on the ground and pulling out the foreign object in my left cheek was the best I could manage.

..It seems that at least from my jaw to my neck is safe so I was able to be relieved about that.

What happened to the Bazu and other Worakku that I was using {Ice.Cone} on until just now?

In a panic I looked over there and the Bazu had already changed to stone while the Worakku was covered in injuries and on the verge of death.

It was desperately trying to use healing spells on it's larger wounds.

I should kill it now while I still have the chance.

However, I still don't have enough composure to use spells.

In regards to just injuries I had confidence that I could use it no matter how great they were but that dizziness and the ringing could break my concentration to this extent...

I don't have the time to worry about Angela for a short while so in any case I need to finish off that one first.

I glanced towards the top of the mountain.

Even though not much time at all has passed since it started flying it's already halfway here!

Though it didn't seem like it was flying directly over in this direction so it was just as it adjusted the direction it was going to over here.

Additionally, there was one more important thing I realized.

The usual lightning bolt cage.

A cage of lightning bolts that surrounds the outer wall of the 13th floor was completed.

There doesn't seem to be much of a problem with it from what I can see from here but from its end there's still the trees so it doesn't seem to have discovered us yet.

However, I guess that huge explosion let it recognize the existence of enemies...

I shake my head and stand on guard with the spear.

"Uooooaa~!!"

I shout while charging at the Worakku.Dragonian that's frantically trying to use healing spells!

But, my legs are tangled so it's suspicious whether I was able to run straight.

The reason I shouted was because I felt like I would pass out if I didn't do it.

I had intended to shout with all my strength but I felt like I only let out a pathetically weak voice.

Obviously I thought the other side would notice right away but it seems it doesn't have the composure while it focuses on the spell.

By the time it realized my spear was already in front of it.

Along with a crisp response the head of the spear was thrust through the center of it's chest.

The scales of the dragonians looked like metal so the spears effect of ignoring defense might have worked.

In any case, I let go of the spear with my hand and covered my head while jumping to the side to hide behind a nearby bunker.

I'm sure another huge explosion will happen after all.

I stuck my finger between the gaps in my helmet and blocked my ears while at the same time opening my mouth and rolling my tongue.

I remembered a short elementary level course I took in the military college in the distant~ past.

It's only obvious to hide behind whatever obstructions you can when explosion happens nearby but you're also supposed to block your ears and open your mouth.

Blocking your ears is to directly protect your eardrums while opening your mouth is also to adjust the pressure and indirectly protect your eardr..I can't hear!?

I wasn't blocking my ears or opening my mouth when the first explosion happened just before.

Though I still had my helmet on, there's small holes in the sides of my helmet and it was that close of a distance.

That explosion was way beyond the level of the nostalgic firing sound from howitzer tanks.

I don't really know but wouldn't it be kind of like that where the explosion hits?

I guess not to that extent since I'm still alive.

Shortly after thinking that and I felt a pressure vibrate through my stomach.
It seems it exploded.

I recovered the spear.

Come to think of it..I suddenly got worried and used {Identify} on the spear in my hand.

If only magic weapons are effective then, it might have been dragged into the dragonian's explosion and broken!

Value: 1

Durability: 6652

Ability: 190-240

Effect: Ignores the defensive capabilities of metal(for defense provided from other sources than metal including magic damage is applied normally).

The durability has decreased by quite a bit but if there's this much left then it should be fine.

Though it would be a problem if it takes another one of those explosions at point blank again.

I wonder how Angela is doing?

I can see flashes from a sword clad in flames swing around from the forest below the path.

It seems she's still safe for the time being.

Sorry, Angela, wait just a bit longer for reinforcements.

It's a bit too harsh without my five senses intact.

There's also damage other than that.

There should be a bit more time until that thing gets here.
I need to recover before that...

...

Alright!

With this I've completely recovered!

There's no pain remaining and, "Ah~ ah~" I can hear with my ears as well.

That thing is..it's already several hundred meters away!

It has a long and narrow body like a snake.

It's length probably exceeds 30 meters.

I guess the thickness of it's body is around 2 meters?

It has ferocious looking claws growing from it's strong forelimbs and hind limbs.

There's two bat-like wings that are small to the point where they don't match up with the rest of it's body.

And then it's black body color that almost seems transparent to where you can see through to the other side of it's body.

Th..There's..no way to win..against this...

I was about to be overwhelmed by despair but if I'm defeated then everyone will jsut be eaten by that guy.

Escape?

How?

There's several things I'm curious about but I don't have the time to look at the sub-windows.

Ah, the name was probably attached at some point after someone continued calling it that.

Almost like "Pointed.Rock".

My remaining MP is about 7,000.

I guess my advantages are my level and that I can use all elemental magics at a high level...

How unreliable~

But, first strike wins.

First off I'll shave down that hindrance of a {Magic.Resistance}!

{Stone Light Catapult Missile}!

I aim at it with eight warheads.

Obviously it hits!

The reason I used a spell equivalent to level 6 is out of caution for that {Minor.Globe.Of.Invulnerability}.

Just as expected the remaining uses of {Magic.Resistance} decreased.

It seems that putting aside it's flight speed it's mobility in the air isn't all that high just like the dragonians.

"Gyagoooo~~n!!!"

The Shadow Dragon {Howled} in irritation.

Different from up until now since I was hit by such a frightening roar at this close distance I reflexively flinched but I was just reacting to it's loud voice.

I continue firing off {Stone Light Catapult Missiles}.

I'll hold out to the limit with this!

My spell warheads continue to hit it.

It's {Magic.Resistance} continues to get shaved down by that.

However, the distance between us is already only about double it's body length.

We're less than 100 meters away from each other.

I meet eyes with it's orange colored eyes filled with hatred that almost seem like flames.

I guess it's only obvious towards someone who didn't just intrude on it's territory but killed it's subordinates the dragonians.

The Shadow Dragon twisted it's body in the shape of an S about 30 meters in the air and seemed to suck in it's breath.

A breath attack!?

Don't mistake the timing!

The Shadow Dragon spit out it's breath!

Wind magic against my back!

I've heard from Miduchi.

Most breath comes in the shape of a cone.

Even if that's not the case the other portion is supposedly in a straight line so it's easiest to evade by rushing at an angle towards it or straight towards it.

But, I don't know what kind of breath the Shadow Dragon uses so I tried to move at my maximum speed.

"Guauu!!"

My body is blown forward at a speed that causes all of the bones and joints in my body to ache.

I fire off a {Stone Light Catapult Missile} while jumping.

There's no time to confirm the state of the ground.

"Ga!!"

I plunged into the ground and rolled.

In the air above the Shadow Dragon stopped it's breath to look around I guess because it lost sight of me.

But, on the verge of plunging into the ground I saw that all of my attacks hit it!!

I'm wearing armor so I'm protected against scratches but I must have hit my leg when I hit the ground.

There's some intense pain coming from my right leg.

I guess I broke the bone.

But, I put off healing it and fired off another {Stone Light Catapult} while still laying on the ground.

After firing it I use {Cure All} on my right leg.

Once more.

And again one more time.

Alright. The pain has completely disappeared.

It was without missile attached but all eight of the {Stone Light Catapults} hit it in the stomach.

"Goru.byugu.geinderu.buru.dakuto.de~!!"

The Shadow Dragon started speaking some words I can't understand in a loud voice.

It feels like my ears will break.

If it can speak words then it might be possible to communicate with it.

But, since it's a floor guardian there's probably not meaning in it.

I'm sure it'll just end after the dragon takes whatever information it wants.

There should be 36 more uses remaining on it's {Magic.Resistance}.

Something like this another five times..can I endure it?

But, even if it's impossible~ I've got to do it or it's all over.

The Shadow Dragon realized I was below it's stomach and stopped flying as it started falling down!

Does it intend to crush me with it's stomach!?

Since I was already kneeling down I escape my jumping to the side!

At the same time as it crashed down I thrust forward with the {Spear.Of.Piercing}!

It pierces in deep.

After pulling it out and bright red blood gushed out.

I used {Identify} on it's tail while running and, HP: 11058(11446) MP: 330(335)!

OOh!! As expected this spear is amazing.

Even though it was against a massive monster that's easy to hit, the damage from that single hit was big.

It's completely different from my bayonet and long sword!

Though I say that, it's still nothing much.

But, if it's this then..thinking that I smile.

The Shadow Dragon begins to coiling up as if to try and capture me.

If I get caught it'll all be over.

Considering the size.

"Nuo~~!!"

I leap with all of my strength and jump over the trunk of it's body to evade.

At the same time I fired off {Stone Light Catapult} again!

Hit!

However, I didn't notice the end of it's tail stretching out from outside of my vision.

Bashin!

I was hit by the end of it's tail and flew into the forest.

The direction I was sent flying was below the hill.

There was no way I could wind magic because of the impact from being hit.

Along with snapping sounds the branches of trees and bones in my body broke until I finally rolled on the ground.

"Ah..gu..gabo"

I guess my broken ribs are stabbing into my lungs as I spit blood up from my mouth.

Calm down!

Recovery!

Bang!

A gunshot rings out.

It seems Angela was safely able to finish off the dragonians without my support.

Alright, earn just a bit more time!

I consecutively use {Cure All}.

"Gwe..gobu"

I hit my chest and spit out the remaining blood from my trachea before finishing my revival!

By the time I realized it Angela was standing a bit of distance away from me reloading the next bullet into her rifle while covering for me.

"I'm already fine, continue with the backup fire!"

I call out to Angela and dash past her side.

The Shadow Dragon crawled down the hill towards us.

"Genzu barufa byuma bore?"

It's saying something.

But I don't bother with it.

{Stone Catapult Missile}!

The movements of the Shadow Dragon when it's crawling on the ground are incomparably faster than in the air.

However, as expected with that huge body it couldn't evade my attack spell with missile added to it.

They all cleanly hit it!

Bang!

I hear the gunshot from Angela's backup fire from behind.

It seems the bullet hit close to the dragon's eye.

A hole opened up in its scales..the hole closed right away!?

I guess this is what I heard about, "not being injured except by magic weapons"!

"Angela! Switch to the magic bullets!"

"Ha!!"

During that time I need to earn some time!

"Over here, you snake bastard!"

I use wind magic against my back again and jump forward at a high speed while firing off an attack spell.

Partway I used wind magic from the side to change my trajectory.

The attack spell didn't have missile added so it seems to have evaded it.

Although, even if I had added missile I wouldn't have been able to control it.

"This annoying insect! I don't need a slave like you!"

Don't be misunderstanding! This snake bastard!

However, it's huge.

Thinking about it's close to 2 meter in diameter body and one size larger head at the top and in the worst if I were to be swallowed...

But the head isn't like a snake right.

It's almost like a crocodile, iguana, and the dragons that used to come out in legends in Japan added together, around the back of it's neck(?) I can see several protruberances that seem to be horns.

On the top of it's snake-like body it's almost shaped like a shark with a lot of huge triangular dorsal fins going along it.

Gou~!!

Everything in front of me went pitch black!

It feels like all of the strength is leaving my body.

However, I somehow endured it and used wind magic to move from there.

Shit, I was hit with the breath!

I'm sure my level was decreased.

But, there doesn't seem to be any damage other than that.

Even if I get hit by it consecutively, I should be fine as long as my level remains above this guy right?

"Master!!"

Angela's scream entered my ears.

I wasn't sure if it completely understand until now but with this it's definitely realized that there's multiple of us.

Leaving me behind as I fire off spells at it the Shadow Dragon started charging towards the direction I came from where Angela is.

Ah~, damn it!

I stab the spear into it's body and cling onto it.

Pay attention over here!

Chapter 328 : Maurso.Angela

Year 7447, Month 12, Day 16

Gumwu~!!!

Relying on the spear I stabbed into it I was somehow able to cling to the charging Shadow Dragon.

While I'm stuck to you I'll rapid-fire attack spells!

That's what I thought.

With my right hand on the spear and my left hand holding it's dorsal fin, I clamped with both of my legs around it's body but it's body was too thick so there was no helping it.

I mean it's body is close to 2 meters in diameter after all, there's no way my legs would be long enough to get a hold on it.

It couldn't be helped so I tried to lock one of my legs on it's dorsal fins but the vibrations from it's movements were too intense so it was no good.

In the end, I was at my limit with just clinging to it with my arms so I'm not thrown off like goldfish poop.

Obviously there's nothing I could do about using something like the {Arrow.Of.Blindness} stuck in the back of my belt.

If I were to let go with either of my hands I'd be thrown off.

The vibrations are huge because it's crawling across the ground and as expected I can't concentrate to control my mana in this sort of situation to attack use some kind of attack spell.

I'm positioned behind one of it's wings so at least the wing is knocking away tree branches.

After charging for a short while the Shadow Dragon stopped and started looking around the area.

Did it lose sight of Angela?

A chance!

Even though I'm stuck this close to it, if it's right now when it's not moving then..!

Since it still has remaining uses on it's {Magic.Resistance}, attack spells with fire normal bullets are no good.

I start controlling my mana for my certain kill attack spell.

But, in that moment the Shadow Dragon stopped looking for Angela and seemed to remember that I was clinging onto the middle of it's body.

I could tell the Shadow Dragon started curving it's body.

I guess it's trying to knock me off with it's tail.

No, it's not!

It flew up!

I frantically cling on it again so I'm not thrown off.

Obviously I cancelled the magic.

The reason why I can control mana while enduring pain or taking action in the middle of combat is because I'm consciously moving my body.

It's completely different from this situation where I have to adjust my body weight to match with it's movements and hold on so I'm not throw off without knowing which direction it'll move next.

About the only magic I could use is the basic elemental magic in it's base form.

But you know.

I thought something like this might happen so there's an incantation I desperately learned.

"Gafuto.mosurazuku.gevuanikkumiru.hakuzatorimi.miru.goru.kirumu.inremo~to

It's a spell to shoot five {Ice Javelins}!

..It seems it was no good...

I guess it was blocked by {Minor.Globe.Of.Invulnerability}.

After all level 3 doesn't seem to work...

If it's much higher level then the incantation gets considerably long.

Even then it's not as though I can't remember it and I actually have but I'll definitely fail partway through in this situation.

I was feeling pretty nervous about just failing the incantation just now while I was saying it.

I don't have any intention of calling it miraculous but in terms of failure and success it's about a 50/50 chance.

In order to use a higher level attack spell it requires chanting an incantation about three times longer with a fixed rhythm in a pre-decided period of time.

Impossible right.

Owa!!

I've been flipped upside down!

Maybe I should just let go of the spear and quickly use an attack spell then use wind magic to attempt a soft-landing...

Impossible!

Definitely impossible!

First I don't have any leeway in my altitude.

Right now it's at best 20~30 meters high.

It should be at least possible to fire off an attack spell while I'm falling but after that before I can use something like wind magic I'd die from the crash landing.

Like I could survive being smashed into the ground from this height!

Even if I'm fortunate enough to have tree branches cushion my fall I'd be lucky if I just end up with heavy injuries.

I might be able to at least shave down it's {Magic.Resistance} but while I'm trying to control my mana to heal myself I'd end up being swallowed and it's over.

Using wind magic first to breakaway and then using an attack right after might be possible but there's no way the Shadow Dragon would just quietly watch until I use the attack spell.

Either it'll bite at me or it'll use it's breath and my attack spell will fail.

The best I could manage is using wind magic once more and somehow aiming to land.

However.

I suddenly saw something being clutched in the front claws of the Shadow Dragon.

..That is!

A portion of rubber protectors!

A spaulder!?

Or is it a cuirass?

My rubber protectors are alright so I realized it naturally must belong to someone else.

If it's not mine then there's no one else who it can be but Angela.

Worrying about her safety I looked up(ground) and saw a person collapsed on the ground.

It's not a dragonian.

It's Angela who's rubber protectors were torn off!

I guess her helmet was knocked off as well because her face is completely exposed.

Hidden in the trees I could only see her from above the chest.

But, there's no way I'd mistake my slave!

I felt like time had stopped.

Angela's eyes are closed and she's not moving.

Her retriever shaped ears looked appeared strangely vivid to me.

..Congratulations, master!..

The time when we discovered a {Magical.Weapon} when just the two of us were clearing through the dungeon and she made a pleased face with her tail waving as if it was about herself...

Angela's eyes are closed and she isn't moving.

Instantly I started to get pissed off.

This bastard, to Angela!

Angela looks as if she's dead.

But, I might still be able to save her.

Hurry! If it isn't instant death, if she's still alive I can save her!

In the first place if I keep holding onto this Shadow Dragon it'll just smash me into the ground.

I intend to aim for an altitude of 5~6 meters and use wind magic to escape.

After making up my mind I let go of the spear..!

"Uoooo~!!!"

I use wind magic and attempt a soft landing.

I somehow managed to land while getting caught up in branches.

With a furious dash I run towards the direction Angela is...

Ange..laaaa~~!!!"

I shout her name with a loud voice while running.

Don't die on me yet!

Bang!

At almost the same time as I shouted I heard a gunshot..from a bit behind me.

Eh? A gunshot?

She was alive!?

I was relieved.

"Yes!!"

Angela replied from behind me..Huh?

Dooooo~~n!!!"

Along with an earth quake the Shadow Dragon threw itself against the ground.

If I had remained holding onto it I would have been flattened about now.

Putting that aside why...

The one hiding behind a tree trunk is the Angela laying over there.
I can see the side of her face.

"Did you call for me, master!"

The one who came running over towards me from behind is Angela as well.
There's two Angelas....

"Ah, Eh? Over there..."

I point to the collapsed Angela and after arriving by my side Angela saw it and swallowed her breath.

"Ah..No way, what's collapsed over there should be a monster! I just finished it off! It isn't me!"

Ah, I forgot to use {Identify}.

The Angela in front of me has the same info as usual.

And then the collapsed Angela is...

..

Female/19/6/7440.Seibaku.Dragonian

Condition: Death

Age: 7 Years Old

Level: 18

HP: -23(139) MP: 24(36)

Strength: 32

Speed: 25

Dexterity: 21

Endurance: 23

Special Skill: Clone Body

Special Skill: Earth Magic Lv. 3

Special Skill: Water Magic Lv. 3

Special Skill: Fire Magic Lv. 3

Special Skill: Void Magic Lv. 5

So it was a dragonian.

It must be the special skill {Clone Body}.

"..It's fine as long as you're alright. Hide and move while continuing to fire, go"

"Yes!!"

However, for me to be so upset that I would forget to use {Identify}.

Rather~ even though she's supposed to be an disposable combat slave what in the world was I doing...

Angela started making some distance.

The Shadow Dragon has already realized I've separated from it and is holding it's head up to search for me.

I was found right away.

Shortly after a breath is flying..or not, it's an attack spell!

I use wind magic to dash in a direction I had decided on beforehand and..it's got missile attached, shit!!

It was my limit using {Anti-Magic Field} to offset the {Stone Trebuchet(?) Missile}.

On the verge of it firing it's attack spell I caught a glimpse of the {Spear.Of.Piercing} still stabbed into it.

Ah, I forgot to tell Angela to leave behind {Flame.Tongue}.

The only weapon I have now is my knife but..I had the {Arrow.Of.Blindness} as well.

In any case I'll stab this into it!

The one magic arrow that I had in the back of my belt.

I hold it properly in my right hand and head towards the Shadow Dragon.

The Shadow Dragon has started firing attack spells consecutively.

Because of that I was at my limit using {Anti-Magic Field} to offset them so I couldn't move forward much at all.

Not to mention this dragon, it's considerably used to using magic and doesn't even need 1 second to concentrate.

Particularly it's usage of attack spells it's considerably proficient.

It hasn't used a single shot with the method of just aiming for firing it over the shortest distance.

It's making full use of the fact that missile is added to them.

A huge stone spear was fired from the brow of the dragon.

I can't tell if it's got missile added this time but I still have to deal with it.

However, it wasn't a missile.

I shift my body from the line of attack and this time for a sure counteratta..no good huh?

In the intervals between using attack spells the dragon is crawling around with it's large body and knocking down trees so the footing is getting worse.

There's trees collapsed on each other in the directions it's easy for me to escape.

It couldn't be helped so I dashed in the opposite direction and thinking to evade a blow with it's tail I cancel my {Anti-Magic Field} to use wind magic.

Of course even I'm firing off several attack spells into it in the time between.
There should only be 4 remaining uses on it's {Magic.Resistance}.

If I use one of my more proficient attack spells with multiple bullets then it should come with some change after shaving it off.

Angela is backing me up with the rifle as well.

With several seconds in between gunshots ring out and there's gradually injuries increasing on the dragon's face.

Of course damage as well.

HP: 10622(11446) MP: 142(335)

Roughly 100 damage per shot.

Though it's enchanted with magic, in the end it's just a small bullet.

A pea-shooter I guess.

If I don't do a lot more damage then I can't break it's concentration to use magic.

Judging from the damage I guess it feels kind of like having a needle stabbed into your face.

It seems to be pretty irritated.

And then I managed to succeed in getting it to consume quite a bit of MP in the battle up to here.

Come on, use even more!

A gunshot rings out.

Luckily it seems to have hit right when it was in the middle of concentrating to use magic.

Nice Angela!

Also, it seems Angela has taken quite a bit of distance.

Alright!

With this I can use magic without hesitation.

Until now Angela was around so I didn't even consider it.

Earth magic, level 9 MAX!

In any case I put the highest priority on the speed of manifesting it so it was impossible to specify the range or shape.

Of course I didn't specify a multiplier either, or rather even the short period of time it takes is a waste.

I simply started creating dirt centering from in front of my open hand.

Even that was just sending out huge globes and flying dirt centering around with my hand.

However, the amount is the amount you know?

Even if it has {Magic.Resistance}..!

Shortly after thinking that the dirt appeared in the air almost like a half spherical carpet it started to scatter as it fell.

Level 9 MAX earth magic is amazing.

The radius of the dirt that appeared was over 60 meters!

Though I don't think much of it has appeared behind me.

But, with this amount no matter how fast it is as crawling along the ground it can't run..What..

The moment the first pile of dirt falling touched the Shadow Dragon..all of the dirt disappeared!

Is this, {Magic.Resistance}?

It can't be {Minor.Globe.Of.Invulnerability} right?

It's level 9 MAX magic after all.

In a hurry I use {Identify} and it was {Special Skill: {Magic.Resistance 3}}.

Ah, I'll shave it with this, no, I guess it's just a matter of time before it's buried to death.

Then one more shot!

Without a moments hesitation this time I used water and fire magic to freeze it! Since it's crawling along the ground the water welling up from below should quickly make conta..shit, it flew.

But, I don't know if the water came into contact with it or not because the ice didn't manifest.

I guess it succeeded in shaving down it's {Magic.Resistance}.

It can't be helped if it flies.

Next time is earth magic once more..Wh~ut!?

The Shadow Dragon used it's characteristic super speed flight to escape from the effective range in no time at all.

Let alone burying it just scratching it's tail was the best I could manage.

Though I'm not sure if I actually even scratched it or not.

Ah, since the dirt spewing from the air has disappeared so I guess it scratched it.

So my specialty burial is no good either...

Just from judging with my eyes it seems to have gone to a distance about 3 km away from here in less a minute so just as expected of boasting it's high speed, burying it seems impossible whether it be dirt or ice.

Honestly speaking I thought it would take more time to accelerate but I guess I was too naive.

Of course, it doesn't seem like it suddenly reach it's top speed either but I'm in awe over it's motorbike-level of rapid acceleration.

Even though I intended that to be a certain kill move.

The Shadow Dragon started twisting it's body while still flying and with an abnormal speed switched directions.

A short moment of stiffness.

An attack spell!!

Bang!

A gunshot echoed out.

No~ Angela, that was really nice timing!

I use {Stone Light Catapult Missile} towards the dragon that just had it's spell cancelled..

Shit, it's breath!

Using wind magic to blow myself away and evade it is first.

I cancel my attack spell and..Eh...

I thought the Shadow Dragon shortened it's body for a moment to spit it's breath but, it seems it was different.

After returning it's body and it came flying over at a furious speed like a spring!

And to a different direction from where I am!

This is bad, so it's aiming for Angela!!?

"Gwau!!"

The Shadow Dragon bit into Angela with the end of it's mouth.

With it biting around her stomach, her legs and upper body are sticking out from both edges of it's mouth!

..Umm, master. This, it's insignificant but..No, since I happened to profit..that is, it's a bit of my feelings of gratitude..

The sight of Angela smiling at me flashed through my mind.

Like I'd let my allies get killed right in front of me!

A consumable?

Like I care!

"Maruso!!!"

Chapter 329 : Counterattack

Year 7447, Month 12, Day 16

Dwo~~n!!

The Shadow Dragon which charged into the ground to try and bite Angela to death lost a lot of it's momentum from the ground.

And then it quickly changed directions while still biting Angela and it ended up facing off against me.

My vision narrows to the point where you'd think my eyes are going bad and I can only see Angela being held in the Shadow Dragon's mouth.

The Shadow Dragon leisurely raised it's head.

Angela is laying face up with her head on the right side from where it's biting and there's no spaulder on her left shoulder from where I can see.

It's probably the one it was holding in it's claws earlier.

She, must have dodged the charge of the dragon with a paper thin difference.

Angela is moving as she's still being held in it's mouth at a height of about 6~7 meters.

She's still alive!

I use wind magic against my back and rapidly accelerate towards Angela.

Rather than an attack spell I need to use a healing spell while she's still alive and probably {Cure All} or {Regenerate} is necessary.

I don't have the time to take off my left glove so right before using wind magic I used fire magic to burn it and expose my hand.

I'll burn my hand like that?

It's just for a short while so it's nothing big, it doesn't matter at all.

A burn of this level, it's nowhere near an obstruction to my mental concentration!

I activate {Identify} to check her condition..Eh!?

Angela used her free left hand to pull out {Flame.Tongue} which she had on her left hip!

"Emeron!"

Angela shouted the command word.

The blade of the sword was surrounded by flames.

At the same time she thrust it into the tip of the shadow Dragon's nose!

But, in the first place why was she able to pull out the sword?

It seems to have been firmly biting down on her.

No, she is being bitten down on.

Her waist? No, it's fangs are stabbing into her stomach and she's completely bleeding out!

The Shadow Dragon didn't seem to falter from the blow with {Flame.Tongue} and started putting more power into it's jaw.

However, I don't know why but it doesn't seem to be able to close it's mouth beyond a certain point.

Another 20 meters ahead until I reach Angela.

Ah..is she using the rifle to block it's mouth!?

She's holding that and propping it up so she can't use her right hand!?

I guess from the dragons point of view it's like having a metal toothpick stabbed into it's mouth...

But, that itself can't be considered fatal.

The {Flame.Tongue} the prey in it's mouth is swinging around is considerably more lethal.

In that case it should just spit her out..I guess that's my hopeful thinking.

Another 10 meters.

"Gaha!!"

Angela spit out blood and continues swinging the sword with a smile on her face for some reason.

But, she can't seem to gather any strength so it's just like she's punching it with it.

Ah, I guess rather than hitting with it she's trying to stab {Flame.Tongue} in further.

Ah!!?

Seeing that I was charging over the Shadow Dragon didn't make the mistake of just waiting for me as it tilted it's head just before I was about to reach Angela and had me fly past.

Since I was flying I was trying to concentrate as much as possible to use the spell {Regenerate}(I'm not used to it so it takes some time) as I used wind magic to adjust my position to touch Angela as best as I could.

But, it was too slow.

I passed her about 2 meters to the side...!?

"..You called me by my name for the first time!"

Angela shouted while hitting it with the sword.

Shit!!

Even then I used wind magic once more to try and touch Angela.

It seems Angela noticed me as she stopped hitting with {Flame.Tongue} and stretched her hand out to me.

She's gritting her teeth with a crying smile on her face.

I stretch out my hand towards Angela...

Crunchcrunchsnap!!!

The Shadow Dragon finally succeeded in closing it's mouth.

In front of my eyes Angela's upper body was bit in half from around the chest.

The right hand she had stuck further into it's mouth to prop up the rifle was bit off as well.

Most likely her lower body as well...

I stretch out my hands to Angela as she's falling and used wind magic once more to chase her.

In the past I've read something about it before.

Supposedly people are still conscious for a few seconds after being decapitated.

In that case, I should still be able to make it in time!

If I immediately use {Regenerate} on all of her vital organs including the heart, then consecutively use {Cure All}..!

Of course, since I have no leeway to use wind magic I'm sure I'll smash into the ground but if I skillfully cover Angela then as long as I don't fall head first I won't die instantly.

If I don't die instantly then I can manage it!

However.

Goa!!!

After reopening it's mouth the Shadow Dragon changed directions in the air and caught me.

Those large atrocious fangs that just split Angela's upper body and lower body in half caught me in it's jaw.

While I had my head facing downwards and was following after Angela I was swallowed feet first.

Angela continued falling to the ground while her blood and organs scattered around.

Shittt~~!!!

In front of my eyes it's jaw closes.

I reflexively grabbed out for {Flame.Tongue} which she had stabbed into it's nose.

Not just with the left hand I was stretching out but I wanted to secure the sword with both of my hands.

{Flame.Tongue} is still covered in flames.

My left hand touched somewhere on the sword and I felt the heat from the flames.

However, the jaw was closed and my left arm was bitten off.

No, I guess my right hand as well.

I heard the same sound of the ebonite armor being crushed as when it bit through Angela's body as it bit through the gauntlets on both of my arms.

Quite literally I had both of my arms bitten off from the middle of my arms. I barely have them remaining below the elbows.

An intense pain runs through them and at the same time everything in front me turned pitch black as the Shadow Dragon closed it's mouth.
Because of that I couldn't see where Angela hit the ground.

It's just fortunate that I didn't have my head bitten off but it's still a desperate situation.

..Or maybe not.

It hurts considerably but it seems adrenaline and endorphins are pumping so for me who practiced healing spells while injuring myself when I was kid it's not much at all...

..Though what hurts still hurts.

It's my first time losing a part of my body as well.

I'd like to start by using {Regenerate} but right now the first priority is escaping from here.

I can feel a lukewarm wet and at the same time rough unpleasant sensation on my face.

Conveniently the Shadow Dragon's {Magic.Resistance} should already have no uses remaining or at best be 1 or 2.

Guwu~tto I felt my entire body being raised up.

I guess the dragon raised it's head so it could completely keep me in it's mouth.

I can feel something like a tongue moving to try and swallow me and at the same time the muscles around my legs are tightening as if it's trying to swallow.

The fact that I was able to get stuck on the remains of the rifle stabbed into it's mouth was of course thanks to my reaction speed but I think a large portion of it is also a luck and a miracle.

However, there wasn't much meaning to it.

The force of the swallowing was strong so it quickly came out...

But, if it's not going to open its mouth then I'll make it open with force!
Of course, I've already resolved for the first one or two shots to end up pointless.

{Stone Cannon}!

Since I don't have any hands I concentrate around my brow to activate the spell..I can't control my mana?

Calm down.

I'm just temporarily stunned after seeing that happen to Angela in front of me and unable to concentrate!

And there's the sharp pain running through both of my missing arms.

Once more!

In the first place, the pain I'm feeling should be nowhere near what Angela is feeling!

Swallowing me as I was trying to save Angela who was bitten in half, that I would experience the mummy-taker becoming the mummy in person.

..Though if things continue like this I'll be eaten as well.

I won't let that happen.

Alright, I start controlling my mana again.

Let's go!

I calm down and once more.

{Stone Cannon}!

..And just as I thought that it was cancelled.

Even if {Magic.Resistance} is remaining it's still possible to shave that down.

But, what's next after {Magic.Resistance} disappears is?

Obviously I use once more shot.

The spell bullets appearing from my head have a weak momentum at first. Though I say that they're still reasonably powerful so in the worst case I'll open it's mouth..No, right now it should be possible to tear it's throat(?).

But at moment, what would happen to my head?

If I get stuck between the spell bullet and it's esophagus...

I still have my helmet on but it's not even a consolation.

In that case what about directly using elemental magic?

In the worst case, using earth magic, water magic, or maybe even fire or wind magic might work.

The amount of the element created is massive.

Whether it's a dragon or whatever else if that were to suddenly appear in it's body it should rupture right!

And then, my head will probably be crushed stuck between my magic and the inner barrier of the dragon.

..In the first place I can't see anything.

Even if I were to use it a small amount would appear and then it would end.

It's fine to use it after casting {Light} but sooner or later the amount I make will probably still crush me in the end.

There's also the possibility of wind magic but I feel like the pressure would pop my eardrums and crush my body which is probably weaker than the dragon's organs first...

Using {Identify} to figure out it's weakness..!

I can't imagine any future other than suffocating while I'm reading it.

Wait!

Wind magic, air..if it opens it's mouth then it might not rupture but even if it doesn't it should do quite a bit of damage, and I'll be able to breath..

Ah, on top of that..!

I immediately put in practice what I was thinking.

First off I used {Identify}, then after seeing the visor of my helmet with that I use {Light}.

After securing my vision I use wind magic!

Level 6 or so should be plenty.

I feel like it might be a bit too much but if it's blocked my {Minor.Globe.Of.Invulnerability} then there's no meaning after all.

I resolved to abandon my ear drums.

I bent my raised arms to try and make the space in front of my face even just a bit bigger.

Alright.

I use wind magic.

Bago!! along with a sound like that my ears popped.

I closed my eyes the moment I use the magic so I don't think there was much damage to them.

But, it doesn't do any significant damage.

It must still have some {Magic.Resistance} remaining.

I check it and with this the remaining uses is 0.

Alright, let's go!

I use wind magic again this time.

But, you can slowly use elemental magic you know.

In the past, I made ice slowly fall out in front of Kuro and Mary before and you already know about when searching for pitfalls on the 3rd floor I would slowly create water using water magic right?

Gugwutto the entirety of the esophagus swells up.

I inhale the dry air while creating more air at a fixed speed.

It's esophagus gradually swells up as it becomes necessary to spread my legs to support myself.

And then that time came along right away.

Goooe...and the Shadow Dragon burped.

Immediately the air pressure dropped.

I look up and see a small amount of light other than my {Light}.

But, even then I don't loosen my hand.

I thought about using {Air Blade} but I remembered something like that won't kill it unless I use it a number of times so just as originally planned I made more air.

Since it has it's mouth open it doesn't seem like it's esophagus will expand anymore than this.

I slowly take a deep breath.

I continue my wind magic and crouch over with both of my legs almost horizontal.

The entire body of the dragon is largely tilted so I can feel the fall.

It must be painful.

I felt that it landed right away.

Now!

I stop using wind magic and started controlling my mana to use a different spell.

Gu...

I practiced it quite a bit but it still takes close to 5 seconds to complete.

Additionally there's the pain and physical shock from both of my arms being severed so it feels like it's taking forever for this kind of complex spell to complete...

Jakin!

With my head as the center several tens of magic sword appeared!

The {Blade.Barrier} that I just learned from Mila-shisho several months ago let's out a roar as it revolves and begins cutting through the pink colored wall of flesh in front of me.

Die!

Chapter 330 : Battle Is Over

Year 7447, Month 12, Day 16

Zaku!!

Zakuzaku!!

The magic long swords let out a roar while revolving around my surroundings. At first I thought that several of the swords would get caught in the esophagus and felt chills for a moment thinking they would stop.

But, being sliced consecutively by several tens of long sword the wounds were gradually cut open.

Even the long swords that were blocked from spinning gradually seemed to regain their power as they switched to attacking again.

The attacks from the magic long swords turned the Shadow Dragon's esophagus into tatters in no time at all.

The Shadow Dragon is roaring in pain so loudly that I want to block my ears. Of course I don't have any arms below the elbows so I can't block them though.

And then soon after the muscles and nerves further in it's esophagus as well as it's trachea and such were all cut apart in no time at all.

The roaring of the Shadow Dragon gradually got smaller together with that and finally it went silent.

"Aaaaaa~~!!!"

Along with that momentum I cut off it's neck or body or whatever that was torn to pieces.

I quickly wanted to use {Identify} to confirm that it was dead but if it isn't dead it would be bad so I continued to attack the opening of it's wound until the duration of {Blade.Barrier} ended..

Huh?

The magic long sword stopped attacking the dragon.

This spell, was supposed to automatically attack though...

Ah, so it died!

There's still some time remaining on the effect but I cancelled the {Blade.Barrier} and used {Identify} to confirm it's death.

I look around the surroundings.

It seems we moved a bit away from where I was swallowed.

"Angela~~!!!"

I shout my loyal combat slaves name with a loud voice.

"Where are you~~~!!!"

I didn't even have the composure to confirm if the lightning bolt cage had disappeared at that time.

Well, it had disappeared though.

Before I realized the lightning bolt cages from both the 12th and 13th floors had disappeared.

I don't know how long I searched.

I'm sure it wasn't long before the pain in my arms returned me to reality though.

I sit on the ground and calmly used the spell {Regenerate}.

First off is my right hand.

A dark red lump starts protruding out from the cross-section where my arm was bitten off.

Most of my arms length had returned.

But, it's still not done.

I use {Regenerate} even more.

My right hand which was like a flesh club gradually became flat.

And then every time I use the spell something like small flesh sprouts grow outwards.

In the end I was able to confirm that all of my fingers grew back.

When I was about to switch to my left hand I realized I had already used quite a bit of my concentration.

If it's during combat then I'd do it frantically but since I'm a lot less tense I somehow was still able to manage it several tens of times.

But, I guess from losing the tension with the lack of threats in the surroundings, it becomes even more difficult to concentrate and use it consecutively.

When I was a kid I tried various things to use a lot of MP all at once but this was the reason for it.

..Even then I was able to grow all five of my fingers back on my left hand as well.

On my right hand even the regeneration of the skin is finished and there's a bit of hair growing out so it's recovered to where you can't tell it apart from the previous one.

Without waiting for the recovery of my left hand I stood up and started searching for Angela again.

I found Angela shortly after.

"Angela.."

No matter how I look at it she's dead.
She doesn't have anything below her chest.
Her right arm was bitten off from above the elbow.
But, there's not a scratch on her face.

Even though she fell from that height...
I guess because her body weight is several times less...
Or maybe thanks to her helmet.

I fall to my knees by her side and closed her eyes while taking off her helmet.
She still has a bit of warmth remaining in her body but it's clear she's beyond that point where I can do anything.

"Angela..You did a good job. You fought well. You are.."

I suddenly stop.
There's a bit more remaining on the left side of the wound to her chest and I can see something what looks like her magic stone.
If I were to carefully carry her like this it might fall out along the way. I checked the surroundings and found her lower body, there was still a knife on her thigh.

Since my knife disappeared off to somewhere I took out her knife and carefully took out her magic stone.
Strangely I didn't shed any tears.

After finishing up to there I suddenly noticed my own appearance and made a bitter smile.
I'm way beyond worn out as I'm covered in the dragon's blood and saliva.
It's truly annoying but I should at least pour some water over myself.

I pour some water over myself with my armor still on and wash away the saliva. Losing my mental vitality while my arms have been restored every time my heart beats the pain from them being bitten off causes me to feel dizzy.

Ah, I guess I should cast healing spells on them...

I still have quite a bit of MP remaining but I wonder about my HP?

..78 remaining I guess. It's been a while since I was pushed this far.

Ah, my level went up.

Hn? Since I was hit by {Energy.Drain.Breath} in the end I guess my level went up by 2...

It had a mountain of HP and it's level was high as well after all. It even had a lot of special skills and above all for it's magic skills to be

MAX...

I guess it doesn't matter.

First off is recovery.

After that, I need to return to where everyone is...

It's troublesome but I want to do something about this pain.

I use healing spells consecutively and completely erased the remaining pain.

And then I put Angela's magic stone into the survival kit I have attached to my waist and stood up.

Ah, that's right.

What about that dragonian that had become Angela's corpse?

I searched around the area and after going back to the mountain climbing path I found the naked body of Angela that caused me to misunderstand the first time.

If I remember right it was a Seibaku.Dragonian.

..After all that was the case.

The {Special Skill: Clone{Dead Body}} let's it take the shape of either the person who killed it or the last person it killed. The duration is the same number of hours as it's level.

Furthermore, I figured out that when the dragonians die they either turn to stone, melt into poison gas, or in the worst case blow up.

What troublesome things...

Ah, that's right.

I need to return to where the dragon was again...

It would be good if I can at least get a hint on how to escape from that panic though...

And I need to recover {Flame.Tongue} and the {Spear.Of.Piercing} as well...

.....

"Hie..hie~"

When I returned to where everyone was Miduchi was still in a state of panic sobbing to herself as she had her sword drawn.

Even after realizing that I was the one approaching she didn't let go of the scimitar tightly gripped in her hand.

After hugging and talking to her she seems to have calmed down a bit and finally sat down.

Everyone else was more or less the same, I had no way of helping them.

I guess it helps just that they barely didn't recognize me as an enemy.

You could say Miduchi was a bit better off just being able to stand on guard with her sword.

Incidentally, when I read it from the status of the dragon it seems that it stacked {Special Skill: Howl.Type III} on top of {Special Skill: Fear.Aura.Type II}. According to that even the faster people(higher level) to recover would take at least almost a full day. The slower ones(lower level) could take up to a day and a half so I had no choice but to leave them like this.

Eh? Of course, I tried doing everything I could. But, none of the spells I know were effective.

Since the {Identify} window that appears in my eyes is written in Japanese all of their {Condition} fields say {Panic}.

If it was in English or the {Common.Language} then I feel like it would be written in a different way.

Since the {Condition} of {Fear} is strange in Japanese after all... It must be grouping both {Fear} and {Panic} together as {Panic}.

I checked the time on the clock Zenom was holding and it's only been about an hour since we first heard the {Howl} of the dragon. I feel like I was fighting for a lot longer but I guess that's about it.

It couldn't be helped so I went back up the mountain again and froze the dragon's head in a large piece of ice that wouldn't melt very easily. Next I checked inside of it's body and searched for Angela's abdomen. The crushed and broken rifle I shot into pieces with {Stone Cannon} and threw away.

In regards to the dragonian's corpses I gathered what I could together and then froze them so they wouldn't rot as well.

Since they explode, turn to stone, or become poison gas it was too troublesome to search for the magic stones so I just left them alone. Additionally, I discovered my right hand but it's not like there was anything I could do with it after collecting it so I just burnt it using the spell {Flame.Thrower}.

I wanted to give Angela a burial on the surface so I recovered all of her remains and froze them.

I thought about returning above to where Giberuti was waiting but it would take several hours to make a round trip and in the worst case if monsters attack during that time then I feel like even a single goblin could wipe everyone out.

It couldn't be helped so I continued to wait near everyone.

.....

Year 7447, Month 12, Day 17

Close to the evening Miduchi, Zulu, Zenom, Ralpha, Toris, and Bel regained themselves in that order.

Each of them came to apologize for being useless.

But, it couldn't be helped so even if it bothers them it's troubling.

"It can't be helped so even if you let it bother you at this point there's no way of recovering from it. Rather than that, I'd prefer if you level up so nothing like this happens again."

After I said that they made apologetic faces.

I just told them not to worry about it but I guess this can't be helped.

"Where's Maruso?"

Miduchi asked.

I lowered my head with my legs still crossed and let out sight before taking Angela's magic stone out of my survival kit and just replying, "She's here."

Everyone was shocked at this and kept silent.

Miduchi and Ralpa stretched out their trembling hands to check the status of the magic stone.

"Dear..that hand..."

Miduchi was surprised after noticing that my hand seemed unnatural. It seems everyone noticed it.

"Yeah, it was bitten off by the dragon. Soon after that I used the spell {Regenerate} to restore it so there's no problem. Though my gauntlet is already completely useless.."

I replied while putting away Angela's magic stone and gave out a new order to everyone who's probably shocked.

"Angela's corpse is frozen up there near the corpse of the dragon. Putting aside the dragon, there was a number of dragonians that are like the children of dragons and humans together with them so first gather the magic stones from them."

Even if it's insignificant I pushed a job onto them as it's necessary to focus on something else.

Miduchi who was on her knees in front of me holding my hand stood up and said, "Everyone, let's go."

..Yeah, I leave it to you.

Shortly after the six of them went up the mountain Kamu, Rokko, Gwine, and Basutorial started to wake up from the panic as well.

Just the same they came to apologize for being useless but I drove them away saying to quickly go up and help with gathering the magic stones.

..Putting that aside, exactly how many hours are they going to take to gather the magic stones from the dragonians?

I put them all together so they stand out so there's no way they could have missed them.

Since Miduchi is there it shouldn't have taken much work for her to remove the ice as well.

Though a bit of it was shaved off with the {Howl} she's long since recovered all of her MP.

Kuro and Mary regained themselves.

In terms of time it's already close to midnight.

The surroundings are the same brightness as usual though.

"Al..Sorry."

"I'm sorry.."

The two of them are embarrassed about being useless today so they came to apologize to me.

Just the same as the others I told them that we lost Angela so there's probably that as well.

However, that~ wasn't their fault.

It's no one's responsibility other than my own.

If I think back on it now I'm glad I had left the {Loincloth.Of.Daring} for evaluation.

If he still had that then there's a good chance I would have even lost Zulu.

In that sort of meaning you could say we defeated the dragon with the least sacrifice.

..Gaining the title of {Dragon.Slayer} in exchange for a single combat slave isn't that great.

Right~ Angela...

..Damn it.

Several tens of minutes after the three of us started going up the path. We ran into everyone who was in the middle of working.

Everyone was praising the dragon for it's size and the huge pure white magic stone they took from it.

The magic stone wasn't as large as I thought it would be.

The value when using {Identify} is 1,234,567 so even selling it's about 10,000,000 I guess.

It's outstanding for the value of a single magic stone but I feel like it's a bit of a disappointment as well.

But, judging from the numbers lined up there's no mistake it's the magic stone of a floor guardian.

..These fellows, so they were spending time tearing off the scales from the dragon?

Angela's corpse is still frozen.

I sat down by it's side and watched as they continued to peel off the scales.

Chapter 331 : Acquisition

Year 7447, Month 12, Day 17

The dragonian

that was disguised as Angela had changed back to the corpse of a dragonian before anyone realized it after a day. I guess that means it's disguise was peeled?

Everyone was working energetically.

They formed into small groups and were cooperating to pull the scales off from the dragon's corpse.

It seems you need quite a bit of strength to pull the scales off.

Just from watching I can tell it's quite the difficult job.

Everyone seems to think it's their fault they couldn't participate in the combat and because of that we didn't have enough forces so Angela died.

Whether that thought is correct or incorrect there's no way of knowing now.

Whatever the case it's something that's already happened so we can't turn back time.

Since I'm just silently sitting on a rock while looking at everyone with dispirited eyes they might be feeling pressured.

They're continuing with the work without saying a thing.

It was too troublesome to dig through Zenom's bags to confirm the time so I don't know exactly how long I was sitting here but shouldn't it be about 2 or 3 hours?

I look at the ice to the side of the rock.

Angela has her eyes closed as if she's sleeping inside of a transparent and frozen coffin.

It's probably because I'm like this that everyone is giving off a depressing atmosphere.

Things are no good like this.

Ever since they recovered from their trembling state it's been over a full day since even the quicker ones have eaten anything.

I just let everyone eat the hardtack we had at that time.

Since they haven't eaten more than the bare minimum everyone is probably feeling considerably hungry.

"Hey, it's about time for us to eat. You're hungry right?"

I stand up from the stone and consciously speak with a cheerful voice.

Since I called out to them everyone gathered together and started eating hardtack.

I guess the fact that my atmosphere changed was conveyed to them or they're just paying mind to me, Zenom started talking to me in a cheerful way.

"Hey~ Al. It must have been a considerable challenge to take this thing down right? Tell me about."

I was waiting for it.

"Yeah, just listen. Angela was amazing. Even after being bitten by the dragon she still kept swinging the sword.."

I told them everything about defeating the dragon and put plenty of appeal on Angela's efforts.

The fact that I couldn't deal any major damage to the dragon with attack spells because they were blocked by it's special skill.

The fact that I stabbed it once with the spear while Angela shot it several tens of times with the rifle and blocked it's concentration every time interfering with it's spells from activating.

Just like that she took the dragon's focus away from me and became the decoy herself.

..And then, the fact that she died in front of my eyes.

I wanted to tell them about how heroically she fought.

By the time my story was finished everyone was looking at Angela sleeping inside of the ice.

Jesu who pissed himself after just hearing the dragon's roar from the distance was even looking at her with reverence.

That's fine. Just keep up like that.

.....

After our meal we spent almost a full day to tear off all of the scales of the dragon while fearing the respawn of the dragon and dragonians.

Miduchi was successfully able to collect the heart as well.

On my end with this I could say we were able to achieve most of the objectives but there's still things remaining.

There's two things we have to do before returning.

One of them doesn't even need to be said investigating the gathering terminal and denaturation device.

The other one is searching through the dragon's nest(According to Miduchi most dragons spend their time sleeping in nests and collect treasures centered on shiny objects).

Sorry for getting straight to the physical evidence but I decided to first try searching the nest.

Ah, so we didn't make the same mistake as last time we split up the scales based on the sizes and then froze them once more before placing them beside the dragon.

For the time being the only monsters we've seen on this floor other than the dragon are the dragonians which we believe to be the floor guardians for the 12th floor.

But, there's no guarantee that there aren't any others so we can't let our guards down.

It was just as everyone was getting excited and ready to run straight to the summit of the mountain.

Ralpa started talking to Miduchi.

Probably because the atmosphere was heavy until now so she was hesitating to whisper.

"Hey, Miduchi. Can dragons be eaten?"

"I've heard about things like dragon steak and such.."

Heh~ Well it does have the feel of a reptile so if you wanted to eat it should be edible.

"Oh! Steak is it. Cook a bit of it for me."

Rokko who had already stood up ran straight over towards the dragon's corpse. I guess he means to cut off a bit of meat and have Miduchi cook it for him.

"Wait just a moment, stop that. Something like dragon meat there's no way of knowing whether it's safe or not.."

Kamu told him off but Rokko continued cutting off some meat without minding it.

Miduchi glanced at me so I nodded once to her and then she approached to use {Flame Thrower} on the meat he had stabbed into the end of his sword. Of course, when he cut it off and brought it over I already finished using {Identify} so I've confirmed there's no poison.

"Don't worry about it, first off let Rokko try eating a bit of it. It's true that we're lacking in food after all."

"I guess so. If half a day passes and nothing happens then it should be fine."

"Hey Rokko. Make sure you only eat a single bite."

Kevin, Jeru, and Kimu said as if it couldn't be helped.

The things they're saying are quite right as well.

It's obvious that it would take a decent amount of time for searching things. Thinking about our remaining food and we would need to return to the 11th floor where Giberuti is waiting within the next half a day.

If we can eat the dragon meat then we wouldn't need to worry about food for a short while longer.

Since he wasn't going to eat more than a single bite it seems he cut a smaller portion.

It was grilled right away.

...

While everyone was watching with interest Rokko continued to move his mouth as he chewed it.

"Hmm. It's not bad. But it feels light and doesn't have much of a flavor."

..If you don't use any salt or pepper then I'd say that's about right.

.....

We took about 2 hours to climb the mountain and found the mouth of a giant cave opened up just before the summit.

Incidentally, the gathering terminal is stabbed in on the other side of the summit from here.

Just in case I sent in Zulu and Jesu to scout things out.

After a short while of hiding in the shadows and waiting the two of them came running over.

"Master!!!"

"There's an extremely large gold nugget!!"

Hohou!

That is~ quite the harvest.

Since it seems there's no monsters hiding in the nest we decided to go take a look.

Lead by the two of them we all moved over to the nest.

The surface of the nest was round and has a diameter of about 10 meters. It was a huge nest the size of the dungeon's halls. And then about 100 meters inside there was a spacious 30~40 meter in diameter room.

Inside of there was, starting with large gold nuggets that could fill both of your arms, a large amount of all sorts of metal clumps sparkling in the light.

Just from using {Identify} at a glance there wasn't very much of precious metals like gold, silver, or platinum.

However, there was things like mithril, blue mithril, orihalcon, gemo.orihacon, adamantite which no matter how you think about it sound precious, as well as tungsten, titanium, gallium, aluminum, chrome, nickel, and molybdenum all of the silver minerals that I'm already familiar with it laying around.

"Oh~"

Someone naturally whispered.

In the next moment everyone raised their voices in excitement.

However, after a short while that quieted down.

There were two reasons.

One is because my combat slaves all said, "All of these treasures belong to master who defeated the dragon. Those who didn't participate in the combat shouldn't have the right to a cut." and then while I was thinking of about to react Kamu, Kimu, and the other {Saviors} all started agreeing saying, "That's right that's right."

"But, we defeated a lot of monsters up to the 11th floor..And there's this much of it, I won't even say half so shouldn't you at least split up 20% of it or so?"

And the one who complained like that was Mary but Kevin, Jeru, and Misura all said, "Stop, that's shameful! It's just as Zulu and the others said.

People who weren't able to do anything but trembling don't have the right to claim any of the treasure."

"This time that's the case so give up. There's no problem~ if you just work properly then you can still earn as much as you want."

After I said that taking advantage of Mary's acting and everyone agreed.

"It's just as everyone says, Mary. In the first place we just came together with them up to here. We haven't done anything to help defeat the dragon right."

After Kuro said that Mary reluctantly withdrew.

I wonder how many of them realized that Mary intentionally complained without feeling ashamed?

I can't tell that much but at the very least thanks to Mary everyone gave up on any shameful claims and accepted it on the surface.

I thanked her from the bottom of my heart.

The other reason is because everyone started checking the status of the ores that were sparkling from the {Light} spell.

All of the sparkling metals that were believed to be silver, gold, or platinum were mostly tungsten, chrome, and nickel, which aren't worth much money at all, those took up close to 90% of it, and the precious metals such as those worth money only made up 5% of it.

The remaining 5% was made up of magic metals that while the value on them is high they take a lot of effort to sell.

"Toris, what's chrome?"

"It's a variety of iron."

"What about Molybdenum?"

"That's a variety of iron as well."

"Then..{Status Open}..Uwa..galli..um is?"

"I guess a type of mercury which is slightly more difficult to melt?"

Toris was saying whatever works. But, he still knows quite a bit so he's already obtained the position of someone who can be relied on.

"Hey Rodrick. Can this aluminum or whatever be sold?"

"It's not the extent of lead but it's a considerably soft metal. A characteristic of it is that it's comparatively light I guess? It's not something worth very much~"

"That's boring..Oh!!? {Status Open}..Cheh..It's Molybdenum again."

"{Status Open}..Ah, this is platinum!"

"Oh!! It's huge!"

Rodrick was saying whatever as well. But his words felt a bit more kind than Toris.

Right now Miduchi is making a list of all of them.

While we were doing that a single {Magic.Item} was found.
It was an unrefined long sword.

{Dragon.Slayer}

Gemo.Orhalicon Steel

Condition: Normal

Manufacture Date: 15/6/6445

Value: 1

Durability: 278241

Ability: 130-200

Effect: Octuple damage when making attacks against dragons. Also, through using the abilities of the sword, it's possible to select 1 of the following abilities up to 3 times per 1 month. 1. Negate all effects from any type of breath weapon within three meters of the sword(Duration 1 minute).

2. Negate any spells that attack the user(Duration 1 minute). 3. Gather the attention of all enemy creatures within 5 km of the user(Duration 1 hour). 4. Heal the wounds of the user(However, only applies to external wounds. It doesn't matter how many wounds there are but it only takes effect once).

The emblem of a floor guardian of Baldukk is engraved on the grip.

For some reason the blade is emerald green.

Seeing that Miduchi whispered, "Dorua" or something like that.

I'm sure she was just trying to say dragon and made a mistake.

Incidentally the scabbard was laying around in a completely different place but the scabbard had the same emblem carved into it so it probably originally a set with this.

..So this is the 13th floors..Just as I was thinking that.

"Oh!! This is..{Status Open}..Ooh!!?"

It seems Henry found something.

He respectfully handed it over to me.

{Utility.Ring}

Ruby.Gold

Condition: Normal

Manufacture Date: 19/6/6445

Value: 1

Durability: 30

Effect: Recovers 1% of HP every 1 hour. Also, deploys a spell-based defense layer along the entire body of the user which reduces the penetration of all physical attacks towards the user by 20%. Furthermore the user won't receive any negative influence from external temperatures. Finally it makes the user extremely difficult to root similar to the {Freedom.Ring}.

Hmm. This is quite the impressive ring.

..Ah, this is probably the treasure from the floor guardian of the 13th floor and the long sword is probably the treasure from the 12th floor.

Though I don't know if the dragonains brought along the {Dragon.Slayer} to attack this floor on the year 6445, month 6, day 19 but in any case that dragon probably killed the dragonian that was equipped with the {Dragon.Slayer}.

Though I don't know if it was in this place or not.

Judging from the dates, the dragonians probably left the 12th floor several days before that.

I'm sure they can't use the teleport crystal so they probably flew over...

Well, whatever.

Hn?

That is...

It was halfway buried under the metal ores so I didn't notice it until now but I'm sure it's a shrine.

Not to mention it's the huge type like the one on the 8th floor.

I'm curious what's inside of it.
Obviously I tried going beside it.
Though I don't know if the door of the shrine is open or not.
The metal ores are extremely heavy so I'm sure it wouldn't collapse.

I climbed up all at once and went to where the door of the shrine should be.
The door of the shrine wasn't open because the metal ores were in the way.

I called over Zulu and my combat slaves and had them move the metal ores.

There was a single gem-like object in the shrine.

Judging from the shape it almost looks like a magatama.
The size wasn't anything great.
At best about the size of a child's head I guess?
I gently stretched my hand out.

{Gem}

{Agate}

Condition: Normal

Manufacture Date: 16/12/7447

Value: 1

Durability: 10

Hmm.

Since it doesn't have an {Ability} or {Effect} field I guess that means it isn't a {Magic.Item}?

Just in case I tried using {Detect.Magic} but I couldn't feel any mana.

"What's that? Show me."

Ralpha asked so I handed it to her.

"It looks like a {Magatama}."

Miduchi, Bel, Rodrick, and Toris all checked the status and started debating as if they knew about it.

Incidentally the people from Orth just glanced at it and seemed to lose interest. The price of agate changes based on the patterns on it but there's a large difference in price.

However, it's still generally one of the gems with a lower value.

At best you could get a slightly better price for the same weight in base metals.

But, well, there's some room to think about it.

There's a lot of things that come out from shrines which seem to be a miss from a glance.

This is probably one of those as well.

But, it came out from this specially made large shrine.

It's said that George.Rombert the First founded his kingdom from the treasures he obtained in the dungeon.

There's no way you could suddenly found a country from gold, silver, and treasure just 10 people can carry back right.

Even defeating a dragon the amount of precious metal you get has it's limits.

It seems like there's a decent amount of it but even if we were to sell all of the silver, gold, and platinum here it would at best about 1,000,000,000.

With just that much...

Until Rombert Kingdom was founded supposedly this area was flooded with self-governed territories run by small lords.

He must have found something that let him bring them all together.

.....

Year 7447, Month 12, Day 18

After that we continued searching and found a hallway further inside of the large room.

Since the hallway was buried in metal ores as well it took us a while to find it.

The size of the hall was at most 2~3 meters in width and height.

It zigzags further inside.

I had a combat slave hold a stone with {Extended Light} cast on it and investigate inside.

After all or you could say it's just as expected but about 100 meters ahead there was a room and a teleport crystal enshrined there.

It seems we'll be able to carry back the metal ores without that much trouble.

Even then no matter how you look at it the amount is something we can carry in one or two trips.

In order to carry out everything here even mobilizing all of the {Slaughterers} it would probably take over 1 month.

The fact that we defeated the boss of the 13th floor, a dragon, is a secret for a short while.

I guess we'll slowly carry out the metal ores a bit at a time, the precious metals, and finally the dragon's head.

..After that is investigating the gathering terminal and denaturation device.

But, that, I wonder if you can get in from outside?

If I were that {Vampire Lord} I would have made it so you can't get inside.

The inside was still closed and there were a lot of doors we couldn't do anything about.

Air-lock? Hatch? I don't know if it has them but if it's locked from inside then there's nothing we can do about it.

Even then it's necessary to investigate just in case.

We walked steadily through the forest and went nearby it.

Looking from outside it's almost like a giant building.

Incidentally, I couldn't use {Identify} on it.

Just as expected, we were able to find something like a hatch.

But, also just as expected we weren't able to open it.

Ah, nothing at all happened to Rokko after eating the dragon so while it wasn't very good we all ate the dragon steaks.

Miduchi said if we eat it there might be some kind of effect but nothing good or bad happened to anyone.

Chapter 332 : Ceremonial Bonfire

Year 7447, Month 12, Day 18

Now then, we've taken care of everything that needs to be done.
There's one more thing that needs to be done but...
Even without mention it's the 14th floor.
The walls of this teleport crystal room on the 13th floor are covered in stone almost like sandstone and the floor piled with fine sand.
I remember back to the time I spent with Miduchi...

In the center of the room the teleport crystal is enshrined and it's exactly the same as the other floors in how the surface has the incantation "Return us" to teleport to the upper floors is blinking in yellow light.
However, the teleport incantation for going to the next floor that usually flashes in purple light doesn't appear on it.
Come to think of it the teleport crystal on the 14th(?) floor didn't even have the incantation for teleporting to the upper floors on it.

..We tried holding, caressing, and hitting it but nothing happened.

I guess you can't get to the floor that {Death=Tyrant.Kin} is on from here?
Is the only way to get there from entering one of the wall pitfalls on the upper floors?
There's only one pitfall where you can definitely get there.
Though in regards to wall pitfalls we've found easily over 100 of them.

Whatever, I guess it's fine.

If we have that much treasure then it's plenty no matter how I think about it. Something like the {Death=Tyrant.Kin} just like Miduchi previously said, depending on how you think about it might more dangerous than the dragon.

I don't want to walk over anymore dangerous bridges than this.

I guess we'll just hold all the ores we can and return once.

Even after returning there's a lot of things to do...

First off is Angela's funeral.

Next is borrowing a warehouse to store the ores we've brought back.

I haven't taken them being stolen into consideration.

Since I don't intend to bring the precious metals and magic ores back until the end.

Even if a thief breaks in if they see the status there's no way they would bother trying to carry out the heavy and cheap tungsten and such.

When I find the chance I'll make ingots from these ores.

They seem to already have a considerably high purity but just in case.

And...I guess it's fine to worry about it after we get back.

I called out to everyone and said "we'll return once", then we all went outside to carry the dragon's scales into this teleport crystal room.

Also, I need to make the size of the ice with Angela's remains in it smaller so three people can somehow hold it with one hand.

If they don't have one hand open they can't hold on to the teleport crystal after all.

After leaving the cave we noticed a whirling fog in a place quite a bit of distance away from the entrance.

..Ah, so after all the dragon will respawn as well...

Let alone a full day close to 40 hours have passed since then.

Since we were focused on the work up until now and the fog is the same size as the monster respawn fog up until now in an area covered in trees we must have overlooked it.

It really doesn't seem like it would be able to cover a monster that will reach 30 meters long.

It's the same size as the {Scavenger Crawler}, {Ogres}, {Minotaur}, and such.

Putting that aside and the high level Minotaurs still haven't respawned so I don't think the dragon will respawn right away either.

However, it's certain that it'll respawn again someday.

I refuse fighting against that guy once more.

Of course~ the experience points he gave were several 100,000s and it's also appealing that we were able to obtain it's scales.

But, even if it were to come to ambushing it since {Magic.Resistance} would respawn with it then it would considerably difficult.

It probably even be difficult using the {Dragon.Slayer} I just obtained.

If right after respawning it holes up in it's nest then it might be possible to rapid-fire spells from the gap between it's cave and the teleport crystal room but for as long as we don't know how far the guardians recognition stretches out, there's too many problems that could come up.

If it's recognition doesn't reach right near it's nest then it would probably be fine but if it goes up partway there then the moment it notices us we'd be screwed.

If it were to use that {Energy.Drain.Breath} down the cave hall..just thinking about it is terrifying.

..In that case, there's no choice but to carry all we can out now.
If it's like this then the guardians of the 12th floor, the dragonians have probably started respawning as well and considering their lower levels they might have even finished appearing.

I roughly do some calculations in my head.

First, the smaller and lighter ores of the ones we obtained from the dragon's nest were just about 10 kg.

The larger and heavier ones are easily over 100 kg.

There's a slight slope from the nest to the teleport crystal room with the teleport crystal room being lower.

This is something Miduchi and Kamu said so it should be correct.

If I make rails of ice that go along this hall then we could roll or slide things down with the minimum effort.

If we do it with 30 people then at most it should take about 4~5 hours.

Next up is the amount of time it takes to get the dragon's scales, frozen head, and Angela's remains to the teleport crystal room but I think these will take about 6~7 hours including the round trip.

Even including breaks about half a day I guess.

And then the amount of time it'll take to teleport everything to the teleport crystal room on the 12th floor but...

The maximum weight a single person can carry in one hand when teleporting depends on the person but on average it should be around 50 kg.

The amount of time they need to be holding on to the luggage is plenty if they can do it for 10 seconds, so it shouldn't be a problem to estimate that much.

In regards to the things over 100 kgs we should be able to manage them in any way as long as 2~3 people hold it at the same time.

If everyone carries things then..it should be plenty to estimate it at roughly 10 round trips.

The thing that will take the most time to do a round trip for is..it doesn't seem like there's any monsters on the 13th floor so if we just ignore the dragonians on the 12th floor then it should be fine to estimate it taking 5 hours.

If it just comes to moving things to the teleport room on the 12th floor then 50 hours..five days..No, if we rush it then three days should be fine I guess.

It'll be a harsh schedule but I want everyone to work hard here.

I looked around the area and order Zulu to carry over the metal ores I had my eye on a short while ago.

With a weight of easily over 20 kg it's a gold nugget that seems to have quite a high purity.

The light from the spell {Light} is reflecting off it beautifully.

Seeing that I could hear someone gulp.

"Everyone.

For another few days endure just eating the dragon meat for meals. It's necessary to carry out the items we obtained this time. It's different from the usual dungeon exploration so I'll pay a special bonus just for carrying the items this time. When we get back we'll split this thing up evenly between everyone."

Everyone cheered.

Well, 30, no it's just 29 people.

Excluding me 28 people, with just that many, even excluding my combat slaves it's being split up among 23 people.

That'll come out to about a 1 kg gold nugget per person so I guess it's only obvious.

The value of it will no doubt be close to 4,000,000 ~ 5,000,000 Z.

Alright, first off shall we move all of the ores.

.....

After we teleported to the 12th floor, just in case we tried taking a look outside of the teleport crystal room.

And then just as expected the dragonians had respawned.

However, there's a different point about them from the floor guardians up until now.

These guys, they're moving all on their own without us doing anything.

Just from the range I can see I can only count 15 of them.

If I remember right there should have been over 20.

What should we do...

Of course, we're in the middle of going between the 12th floor and the 13th floor right now so there's also the option of ignoring them.

But when we're carrying things to the 11th floor we'll have to walk back to the center of the 12th floor from the edge again.

Going from our experience of defeating floor guardians up until now we can expect them to stop respawning after the stock(?) runs out.

Additionally the equipment of the dragonians is considerably worn out so they've probably been killed by the {Shadow.Dragon} quite a few times.

I guess it would be best to reduce the stock as much as we can.

..No~ it sure is easy when you can use magic before the guardians can find you.

.....

Year 7447, Month 12, Day 21

Just like this we spent 75 hours and succeeded in carrying all of our spoils to the teleport crystal room on the 12th floor.

During that time we defeated around 50 dragonians.

I had expected that the dragon wouldn't repawn but even then I think we were fortunate that it didn't respawn.

Now then, the problem is from here on out but...

If we want to start carrying things from the 12th floor to the 11th floor right away then I guess waiting for the timing right after we wipe out the next set of dragonians should be fine...

If we return to the surface then the next time we come down we'll have to fight against over 20 dragonians from the front.

As expected I can't say anything about that..it's not like we can't manage it.

Though thinking about the defense I think it'll be coming with the bare minimum of people including me.

But in that case, we'll have less people so there won't be very much meaning in carrying things right~

Though that's the case the dragonians have ones which specialize in magic so there's the worst case when fighting them with a large number of people...

I'd like to keep using the teleport crystal room as a cover to hit them with magic like now.

No, the respawn period is longer than any up until now.

If I were to use an extreme case, just me or together with Miduchi we could wipe out the dragonians.

After wiping them out we could return to the 11th floor and report that it's safe then all come back to the 12th floor again I guess.

If it's just me it's extremely~ annoying but this should be fine.

After we carry things to the 11th floor then it's fine if we just take our time carrying it back after that.

In any case, for now we should return to the surface and get some rest. Everyone's been working with the bare minimum of sleep so they're considerably tired.

We return to the teleport room on the 11th floor.

Of course we brought back Angela's remains, the {Magic.Items}, the dragon's head, scales, and as many ores as we could carry.

Since we were quite a bit later than planned it seems Giberuti was pretty worried.

It seems at first he made dinner preparations and was waiting but since we never came back no matter how long he waited they ended up being wasted.

And then he started trembling after seeing Angela's remains.
I see..Sorry about that.

"Umm..Master..What in the world happened to Maruso..."

Giberuti asked nervously.

"Yeah..I hadn't told you about it...That dragon was strong in a difficult way."

I pointed at the dragon's head while talking to Giberuti.
Giberuti is still looking at Angela's face as she sleeps in the ice.

"Because of that we ended up having to defeat it with just Angela and I...I..I won't forget Angela's final moments for the rest of my life..She was a splendid combat slave."

I show Angela's magic stone to Giberuti.
Giberuti stretched out his trembling hands and gently caressed the magic stone.

His jaw was trembling.

"Sorry. Angela will be in my care until we finish the funeral."

"No, not at all! There's no problem with that at all."

"It's fine. After the funeral is over..you bury her."

I gave Giberuti a tap on the shoulder and then gave out instructions to everyone that we'll return to the surface holding the ores this time.

In regards to the dragon's head I left it in a corner of the room still frozen in ice.

Even if we leave it be it shouldn't melt for at least a month.

The {Wyvern} still hasn't respawned so we just killed the pair of giant stag beetles for a tip when passing the 10th floor on the way and also defeated the seven Minotaurs on the 9th floor as well.

Those two high level Minotaurs still haven't respawned as usual.

It was close to the evening when we returned to the surface.

Everyone's exhausted but I want to take care of Angela's funeral as soon as possible.

I had them go and borrow a two-wheeled wagon and we put Angela's remains on that until we got to the river side.

I paid an extra tip and express charge for the funeral stand.

I don't know how much it originally costs but I feel like I paid the bill at the asking price without feeling a thing.

Until the preparations were done we didn't have anything to do so we all stood on the river side spacing out.

Shortly after the funeral stand and a large amount of fire wood was carried over.

I erased the ice and carefully placed Angela's remains on the stand.

I took off the remains of her rubber protectors and everyone poured sotomu oil on her.

I guess because it's been a long time since we had the custom of pressing our hands together to pray, not a single person did it.

"See you later, Angela.. You were a good combat slave."

I whispered that and lit the fire.

Thanks to the sotomu oil the flames spread to the entire funeral stand in no time at all.

After that it was fine for us to just add more fire wood in order.

We just, kept watching the trembling flames that were sending Angela to the heavens.

Partway through I suddenly realized that my vision was blurring.

I don't know if there was anyone else who was shedding tears.

I didn't intend to look at anyone other than Angela until this was over.

Finally we all took turns using a hammer to crush her remaining bones and then let them go in the river.

Just like that we helped Angela's body return to nature.

After sending off Angela for one last time I strongly held onto her magic stone and carved the sensation of it into my memory.

And then I handed Angela to Giberuti.

It was already pitch black outside.

"Now then, it's gotten late. Shall we go and eat? Is there anyone who wants to change before that?"

Several people raised their hands so we decided to return to our inns once and then eat after changing.

.....

Year 7447, Month 12, Day 22

The night passed.

I opened my eyes a bit earlier than usual.

After arranging my equipment while it was still dark and then going out in front of the inn quite a few people were already waiting.

""Good morning, master!""

I reply to the greetings from my 5 combat slaves and the 2 apprentices and then we start warm up exercises.

During that time the remaining members gathered together.

"Alright! Shall we go. Basutorial, let's sing for enthusiasm!"

"Yes! Nnn..hakkonenno yamma ha~~ tenka noken!.."

The reincarnated members who know the lyrics sing together with us while those who don't know them are singing along as they seem to have completely remembered them as well.

Come to think of it Angela would randomly sing along with us as well...

I made today and tomorrow days off.

I still need to borrow a warehouse so there's quite a few things to do after all.

The consecutive holidays will be reduced and all lumped together but I wanted to move at least the remaining ores to the 11th floor by the end of the year.

Just like this our Year 7447 ended.

Chapter 333 : Unrequited Love

Year 7447, Month 12, Day 29

This time going into the dungeon we were able to carry all of the luggage up to the 9th floor.

Also, we brought a portion of the ores up to the 8th floor where the Treant wood is left.

With this we can return to our usual activities starting next year.

It's fine if the {Saviors} just slowly bring the rest of the stuff out when we return from the dungeon to the surface.

Right now it's about 3:00 pm.

Shortly after leaving the dungeon we cashed in the magic stones from the monsters we defeated at the usual magic tool shop Danhiru.

"Everyone,

good work. Next year we'll start entering the dungeon again from January 6th. I want everyone to follow Toris's orders when I'm not around. Get some rest until then."

I commanded Ralpa and the others as they were about to bite into some baldoggie from a cart and declared that it was the start of the New Year's holidays.

Tonight I've reserved out the high class restaurant Dorureon so we {Slaughterers} can have a year-end party.

I still haven't return to Boil Manor so I don't know if the caravan from Bakuddo has arrived yet but if it has then it's fine if they join us as well.

Ah, the reason why Miduchi and I won't be around is because we're going to Lail Kingdom together.

We've finished the medicine for Miduchi's older brother after all.

Separate from that I also wanted to try visiting Lail Kingdom once as well.

We have the magic horseshoes from when we previously defeated the giant stag beetles so it's a great help that we should be able to move at a considerable speed.

For that reason, we've estimated that it'll take about one month to make the round trip to Lail Kingdom and back.

Also, it was necessary to split up the teams with the expectation that they'd be active on the 7th floor while we're gone but I decided to leave this up to Toris.

After returning to Boil Manor and the caravan still hadn't arrived. However, there was an unexpected message.

"Hey~ does anyone know a person named Logwood?"

Separate from the usual promotion letters from the masses there was a message asking me to come to a restaurant called Barankusu in the evening if it's a Tuesday when we get back from the dungeon and to their room in Shuni(the largest inn in Baldukk) if it's a Monday.

That was the only thing written down so they didn't state their business or anything else.

Since today is Friday I guess they're in Barankusu.

I don't know why but for some reason it bothers me.

I tried asking the head clerk who received the message and it seems on Monday of this week(the 24th) a young man in his 20s came to leave the message.

Incidentally, no one knew about the person named Logwood.

I thought it might be a new type of promotion message for entering the {Slaughterers} so I considered ignoring it but the caravan still hasn't arrived so I don't have any plans in particular until night other than magic training.

Somehow it was bothering me so I decided to skip magic training and try going there.

"Al-san, I think you should avoid going alone."

Hearing about it from Toris said with a doubtful expression.

Yeah, I think thought so too so I was planning to bring along Zulu and another two combat slaves.

After saying that he was relieved and said, "In that case it should be fine."

I haven't done anything that would make anyone resent me but there's still the worst case scenario so it might just be one of the attendants of the King's illegitimate children that I can't remember.

Or rather, I think that's the most likely possibility.

But, I wonder if that sort of person would call me out without specifying the reason?

At this point for the first time I looked at the people who were looking for the timing to start talking to me since I entered the inn.

In the properly polished lobby young lady Noirura the daughter of Baron

Jibekuto was waiting for my return along with one of her attendant knights.

Young lady Noirura stood up from her seat and started approaching me so I guess everyone was showing discretion as they quickly disappeared to their own rooms.

"I received investiture as a knight at the end-of-year ascertainment."

I see.

"That is..congratulations."

Well, she's the oldest one among the three of them so I'm sure there was also her pride.

"And then you know. I'd like to introduce Greed-sama to my foster father but.."

Why?

Look, hasn't Miduchi started glaring over here from halfway up the stairs.

"..What are you talking about?"

There's no what or anything else about it.

"Fufu. Oh Greed-sama you~ I was just thinking of starting with greetings."

Young lady Noirura made a refined smile with a fluffed-up expression.

She looks to be the quietest of the three of them but somehow recently she's been the most aggressive one in trying to make contact with me.

It seems since I saved her underling, otherwise known as subordinate, in that one rescue play she's developed quite a bit of interest in me.

"If

it's in regards to that matter then I'm very sorry but I believe I've already turned it down before..and I have my company to take care of as well. It's quite busy during the end of the year so if your business is just that then please excuse me."

I forcefully ended the conversation and tried to return to my room.

"No way, please don't say such cold things. The reason I came myself like this was because I wanted to see Greed-sama's face in person."

I'm

sure she came to try and appeal that she's useful now that she's received investiture as a true knight but if it's my face she's already seen it so would she just go home already...

"Also, I've heard that you lost a combat slave you've trusted and cared for over many years. I was worried that Greed-sama would be depressed so.."

Gu, mu...

In regards to the matter with Angela I just read something similar in the messages from the other two a moment ago.

However, this young lady Noirura went to the trouble of saying she came over because she was worried.

I don't know what her true thoughts on it are but at the very least I have no choice but to recognize that she's given a high evaluation to Angela.

It couldn't be helped so I accompanied her in a conversation for a short while.

In addition to that I tried indirectly asking her about the person named Logwood but it seems she didn't know him.

Then who in the world is he?

After taking a shower and changing I took a break for a few minutes and while I was relaxing the caravan from my family arrived.

It seems brother was leading it this time.

"Oh, Al! It's been a while. Supposedly you defeated a huge wyvern since the last time I saw you!? It's unfortunate that I wasn't able to see it's head but I'm proud of you! Or did you just move it to some place? If we go to the capital can I still see it now?"

After the brat of Boil Manor informed me that brother and the others had arrived I went out and he quickly called out to me.

Nfufu. Something like the wyvern wasn't much of anything at all. I'm serious you know?

After all we defeated something way beyond that..Oh~

"Yeah. It's been a while."

I calm brother down while he excitedly praises me for defeating the Wyvern and told him that that we'd be eating a restaurant for a year-end party tonight so he agreed to rest in Baldukk for today.

I then brought brother to my room as he happily brought up the topic of how I defeated the wyvern.

And then while sipping some bean tea Miduchi made in my room I started telling brother about how we conquered the dungeon.

"A dragon you say!? You're sure amazing!"

Brother was speechless as if he didn't believe it when listening to the story.
Miduchi glanced at me so I nodded.
Take out the sword and ring.

"This is the dragon's magic stone."

I took out the Shadow Dragon's magic stone and showed it to him.

{Rongaruzamuryuzorufaren's Magic Stone(Shadow.Dragon)} is how it should appear.

"{Status Open}. It's quite impressive.."

My nostrils flare up.

Ueee~

"Also, these are the ring and sword we obtained after defeating the dragon."

Miduchi handed him the {Dragon.Slayer} and {Utility.Ring}.

"..{Dragon.Slayer} it says?..Amazing~!!"

Brother was shocked seeing the status.

"Well, we're still keeping quiet about the fact that we conquered the final floor of the dungeon and defeated the dragon. I'm sorry but please don't tell everyone about it yet."

"Why? You defeated a right, doesn't that make you a hero!"

Brother shook his head as if he didn't understand.

"Yeah, about that. The dragon's head is still frozen deep inside of the dungeon. That's why I was thinking of remaining quiet about it until we bring that out. I've already told everyone to remain quiet about it until then."

"Nn..Well, I guess it's true that it would be best to have something that makes it easy to understand."

.....

Later in the evening I left Miduchi to look after brother and left the inn. Just in case I equipped just the {Dragon.Slayer} and went towards Shuni.

At Shuni all of my combat slaves other than Zulu were gathered.
..Is Zulu at his woman's place?
Well whatever.

"Henry, Mekku. Sorry but accompany me for a bit."

I brought out the two former knights and went towards Barankusu.
On our way there I told the two of them there was a strange message calling me out and I was curious about it.

"And, you two, do you know a person named Logwood?"

"Logwood is it..sorry I don't..have any idea about him."

Henry replied.

"..Logwood..I feel like I've heard it before but also maybe not..But I know about that place called Barankusu. It's not a very tasteful place."

Mekku said.

Come to think of it I've never heard of the place called Barankusu either, even though I don't go there myself I didn't question the location.

I already knew the rough location.

Where had I heard about it again...

Shortly after we arrived at Barankusu.

"Master, first I'll go inside and check if there's anyone suspicious."

Henry said that and went into the place before I could reply.

"Even though it's fine not to worry that much about it."

I looked at Mekku with a bitter smile but he said, "No, it's only obvious since we don't know the identity of the other party." and stood by side with her hand on the grip of his sword while glaring around the surroundings.

..Umm you know~

I don't know about other places but there's no one in Baldukk who doesn't know me.

Additionally there's no way there would be someone in this town that would try to do something to me using violence.

Quite literally unless I'm ambushed I have confidence in cutting through just about anything.

"Ah, Greed-san. Hello~su"

Look, the representatives of unreasonable violence the yakuza who use the back alleys as their base are even lowering their heads to me.

"Hey, it's Greed-san! That person supposedly defeated an insanely huge wyvern you know."

"Yeah, I know. I even went to the capital to see its head."

"Was it as big as they say?"

"It was this~~~ big!"

"Uo! That's huge! If just the head is that big then how big would its entire body be.."

Some people I don't know the name or face of but they're walking along the opposite side of the street just like us five years back while talking about me.

However, this place called Barankusu, looking at how it's not only cheap but pretty tasteless no matter how I think look it doesn't match up to my tastes.
Where did I hear about it again...

The store sign that was once lit up with a flashy and venomous color has already worn out.

I was looking up at that and trying to remember where I had heard about it when someone called out to me from the side.

"Greed? You really came..."

The one who called out to me was a Dog-person male in their mid 20s. He had a normal and healthy looking physique but his face was pale as his cheeks were abnormally caved in and there were deep clouds under his eyes making him look unhealthy.

Just, the look he was giving me was a sharp glare.

"Hey, you, what business do you have with master?"

Mekku moved in between the man and I.

"I have no business with you."

The man squeezed out his voice in a low tone while glaring at Mekku but unsuitable for how unhealthy he looks it was easy to hear.
I don't know a person like this but could it be this is?

"Are you Log..foot-san? Certainly I'm Alan.Greed."

I intentionally said his name wrong while putting my hand on Mekku's shoulder and had him move to the side while I walked forward.

"..Kufu.."

Seeing my face the man made a creepy smile.

I reflexively used {Identify} but he's a slave named Besshiraizu.Logwood.
Something like slaves are so common if you throw a rock you'd hit one so that part doesn't really matter at all but I really don't have any ideas on who he is.

The moment I thought that!

"Revenge for Maruso!! Die~!!"

He quickly slipped a knife out from his sleeve and thrust that towards me!
His thrust without any preparatory moves was excellent but even I was already on guard from being called out without knowing the reason.

As I twisted my body to the side I knocked the knife out of his hand.
Almost simultaneously Mekku pulled out his sword and kicked the man in the stomach.
It's not the formal movements of a knight group but the movements of an adventurer fighting against monsters.

Ah, just in case I'll mention it but when their levels aren't all that different in most cases the formal swordsmanship that knights and squires use are overwhelmingly stronger than most adventurers.
There's no way someone who spent countless years learning the techniques of soldiers would be standing on the same ground as the average adventurer that's like a random jack-of-all trades with a bit more hair growing.
Although, when it comes to those considered first-rate among the adventurers then it's a different matter.

Ah that's right, come to think of it, I was just being attacked.

After dropping the knife Logwood's body was bent like the character for ku(<) as he vomited all over the ground.
I stopped Mekku who was about to finish him off there and waited for Logwood to recover from the damage.

"Hey, you. What did you say just now?"

There was something I couldn't overlook included in the words just now.

"I can't understand if you remain quiet right! You, just now said "revenge for Maruso" right?"

I guess he finished throwing up everything in his stomach, Logwood glared at me from the ground with yellow fluids coming from his mouth.

"Yeah

I said that. So what about it, you brute! Last week, I heard that Maruso died in the dungeon! You used her as a shield right! If that wasn't the case there's no way she would die!"

..This guy, is he an acquaintance of Angela?
But, he said something I can't overlook again.

"You, what are you to Angela? I'm her owner you know. Who in the world are you?"

I used Angela as a shield he says?
I don't care about anything else but just this is something I really can't overlook.
In the first place, even if I really did use Angela as a shield there's no reason I should be blamed by anyone for it.
Whether I boil or bake and eat her it's my choice as her owner.

"I am..I am the man who swore to be together with Maruso in the future! I'll take revenge for her!"

Ha?
I spontaneously opened my mouth.
Since the words he spit out were far too unexpected both Meku and I exchanged glances.

You, did you know about this?
No, I didn't know.

Oh~
I quickly returned to my senses.

"Don't screw with me, idiot. What's that about swearing to be together in the future~!? Even if that was true you have no right to call me her revenge!"

I reflexively said back to him.

I guess arguing in front caused a disturbance, Henry came out from the door of the place.

After seeing our state he ran over.

"Master! What's going on!?"

"Yeah, Henry. It seems this guy is the one who called me out but..I don't really understand what he's saying."

"It seems he's claiming to be Maruso's man but.."

Hearing Mekku and I, Henry made a face as if he didn't really get it but he had already drawn his sword and hit Logwood with it.

An old man who came out after Henry came along and whispered, "Beshu, you..What in the world.." while in shock.

Is it the owner of this place?

Since it occurred in the evening on a road with a lot of traffic there's a lot of witnesses.

Since Logwood doesn't just have a sword held in front of him, we're not letting our guards down at all so it seems he can't attack us at all.

I guess because we were causing a disturbance in front of the place the man who came out together with Henry regained himself and tried to lead us inside.

However, as someone who was just called out to this place and attacked I felt a bit against obediently following along.

I used that as the reason not to go inside.

The old man was the owner of this place and he introduced himself as Bagu while saying he was Logwood's owner.

And then he called a different slave from Logwood and had them tie up Logwood who was still crawling on the ground in agony.

I was told that I should relax since now Logwood can't move but since I can't put aside the possibility that this entire place is working together with him, I decided to listen to things outside.

Of course, he already tried to attack me so normally there would be no need to listen to what he has to say.

Let alone that while I'm at the lowest sub-nobility he still tried to attack a full-fledged noble which is without a doubt a major offense. It's fine to hand Logwood over to the knight group and it's fine for me to cut him down on the spot in self-defense without any blame as well.

However,

since he brought up Angela's name and even said he was Angela's man, now that he's claimed to be getting revenge for her I felt it was only natural to listen to what he had to say.

I guess I'll give a simple summary about what I heard from him.

It seems it's true that Angela had reasonable relationship with this man called Logwood.

On her days off, it seems Angela would frequently visit this place and play with Logwood.

That's something that the owner of the place Bagu as well as those other than Logwood from the place personally witnessed.

Though it seems no one else knew about the matter of swearing to be together in the future.

And, it's not as if we particularly tried to hide the fact that Angela had died last week so there were quickly rumors about how one of the front line combat slaves of the {Slaughterers} died.

Obviously Logwood found out about that as well.

Logwood seemed to believe that Angela died from being used as a shield in the same way as the average combat slave.

Since that's usually the cause of death for the average combat slave, it's not unreasonable for him to think that way though...

In any case, Logwood believed that was the case and since him believing was the important point the actual truth didn't matter.

Well since he lost his future partner Logwood fell into despair about his future and started planning to kill me as revenge for her. Up to there was fine at least.

If you leave that kind of message then it's only obvious for us to be on guard when coming over.

Since he's a slave being used in a store the amount of free time he has is limited so I'm sure something like observing me until I'm alone was impossible.

There was the difference in the days he called me out but Monday was the weekly day he got off early it seems.

Since something like holidays don't normally exist for slaves after all.

The slaves being used by store work everyday from opening time until closing time.

About the only ones that have days off are quite literally combat slaves so calling me out with a message was probably the only method he had.

After hearing the reason there was nothing to it at all.

It's just a matter of him seeking revenge for driving his future family to their death right.

Though I don't know whether Logwood claiming that they would be family in the future is true or not.

In any case, we figured out the motive so I left Barankusu.

In the end I said, "My combat slaves aren't so cheap as to be used as disposable shields. It's the same as you having insulted Angela." while glaring straight into his eyes.

It would have been fine to beat him down as well but if what Logwood was claiming about having sworn to be together with Angela in the future was really true then I just felt like it would be unpleasant to kill him or hand him over the knight group.

Logwood's owner Bagu, the owner of the store just kept watching the color of my face as well so it made me feel unpleasant.

Incidentally, I thought Angela and Giberuti were in a good relationship so when I tried confirming it with him later he said, "Eh? I've heard about that person named Logwood. Though I wasn't aware that their relationship was that deep.."

And then he also said, "Maruso and I weren't in that sort of relationship. Just as I'm sure master knows, we've had that sort of relationship once but it seems I wasn't really her type.." with a lonely smile.

..Well, whatever.

Logwood, it might have been the right choice not to kill you.

.....

Year 7447, Month 12, Day 30

Today is busy.

In the morning I'm going to the castle together with brother and the others to make deliveries of the rubber protectors and after that I'll split up with them to visit Tukerin's clinic and meet up with all of our vendors.

Then at night Miduchi and I will return to Baldukk to go to Mila-shisho's place. And after that either tomorrow or the day after tomorrow we'll depart for Lail Kingdom.

In between moving and the appointments I need to buy the dried fish and various other things as well.

In regards to going to Lail Kingdom we already told Tukerin about it when handing him a late year-end gift on our days off last week.

Miduchi

said it as well but there's no problem with me going up to the entrance of where the underground city their capital Erurehei is located.

Well,

in addition to delivering the medicine I'll be greeting Godu.guru-san and I also planned to talk with the head warrior that is Miduchi's superior. Also, if possible I'd like to make some connections with the elders and build up a friendship with them.

"Then, Al, we'll be heading back to the company once to have a break. Today we'll be staying at a random inn and then return to the village just like that. I'll come back again in the spring so make sure you show me the dragon's head at that time."

"Yeah, of course. Then I'll see you in the spring."

.....

Just as planned I finished up greetings at Tukerin's clinic and our various vendors.
Right now it's just before the New Year.
Miduchi and I carried the large amount of dried fish we bought in the capital while it was still daytime and went into the entrance of the dungeon.

It took quite a bit of time.

First off we need to quickly clear to the 2nd floor.

Chapter 334 : Ceremony

Year 7448, Month 1, Day 2

"Hey, are you bringing along Gwine again? What about me~?"

Just as expected Ralpa started throwing a tantrum.

"Hey Ralpa. Things are difficult without you around. You understand right?"

Bel tried to pacify her but it wasn't very effective.

"Ralpa, did you forget our disgrace when we were fighting against the dragon?

I can't say anything about anyone else but we were a disgrace because our skill levels were too low right...You should enter the dungeon together with me everyday."

Zenom let out a roar saying that and Ralpa made an expression as if she realized and backed off.

It's recognized as the cause for Angela's death.

Everyone's expressions stiffened up as they lowered their heads after hearing Zenom's words.

However, I can see several people with something like a strong resolve in their eyes as well.

"..Toris.

Don't get impatient and overdo things. There's no such thing as an absolutely safe place inside of the dungeon but even then..make sure you do your best to keep things safe."

I put emphasis on it several times to Toris who was making a face as if he was brooding over it.

Honestly speaking, in regards to the {Saviors} who are mostly all over level 20 I really don't think there's a need for them to earn anymore experience than this in a hurry.

Rather I almost wish they'd just stop entering the dungeon and focus on nothing but training.

Though I won't say anything like that because it concerns our income.

Generally speaking the people whose levels are in the double digits are generally famous for being skilled and in over 30 years old. Let alone us who are barely 20 years old and our levels are 20 I've never seen anyone else like that.

Even among the knights who went to war and made great achievements there's no one this high of a level.

Baron Logan who was acting as the leader of the first knight group was only level 17. According to what I've heard when he was still young and had just received investiture as a true knight he was a member of Duke Zamu's knight group but back then around 30% of Duke Zamu's knight group were stationed in the Dirt Plains. Supposedly since he was a member of those stationed troops he participated in combat and made quite a few achievements there. Well, almost all of the people who enter the first knight group are like that so you could say just that place is the exception among exceptions.

On the contrary you could say that even though we're all around our 20s we've earned more experience points than those sorts of people.

In the first place, it's already about time for us to say farewell to the dungeon of Baldukk.

Eh? It's hard to understand? Then I'll get a bit off topic but is that fine?

..For example, in order to reach level 20 you need to earn over 1,000,000 experience points.

In order to earn just that many experience points then you would need to kill over 3,000 enemy soldiers in their late teens who are between level 5~6.

Of course this is just in the case if your opponent is a Hyumu who hasn't gained very much experience, if it's someone who has the special skills of magic, from non-hyumu races, or someone who has a lot of experience and is a high level then the number would decrease even more from 3,000.

If I were to bring up one example then if the ones you were killing are the same class of adventurer as the one I first killed back in Bakuddo then it would only take several hundred people to earn the same amount of experience.

Obviously if the opponents level is even higher or they have special skills like magic or you focus on non-hyumu races then that number will be even lower but I don't think things will be all that convenient.

Though it would be a different matter if high level creatures with a bunch of special skills like that dragon are all over the place.

Although, it's possible to earn experience points from other methods than just training so this is limited to assuming you're earning experience points solely from killing people.

Even then it's not limited to people but killing living creatures with mana MP is the most efficient method though.

..Just as you can understand from this, level 20 is something like a super human. It's not something you can reach that easily.

Though if you have as much MP as sister then you could probably manage it if you wanted to do it.

Even then it's still probably impossible in just one or two battles.

It would probably need a much larger scale war.

No matter how much MP she has sister only has level 6 magic skills so they're still pretty inefficient.

As the magic special skill levels go up the efficiency in earning experience points towards it goes down.

That's one of the things that differs from earning experience points towards raising the body level.

For example, if there was an orc that earns 100 points of experience towards the skill when using attack spells to kill things other than the normal experience points.

If the level of the elemental magic skill that is being used is 0 then when the attack spell deals damage it'll earn 100 points of experience towards the skill but as the level increases if they use the same method against the same opponent and deal the same damage then the amount of experience points they earn towards the skill will go down.

At level 8 one step away from the final level you'll only be getting 20% of the experience points you gained when you did it at level 0.

Ah, just in case I'll mention this as well but in order to use attack spells level 1 void magic is necessary. But in that case you can't deal much damage at all so it's normal to think you need over level 3 void magic. This is close to a fact unless they have excessive amounts of MP like sister and I so I don't want you to forget that it's still technically, "theoretically".

Putting that aside and it's about time to return to the matter at hand.

The ones going to Lail Kingdom are Miduchi, Gwine, and I.

I thought about bringing along some combat slaves as well but we didn't have enough horses so I gave up on it.

This time we'll be traveling in a hurry so I didn't feel the need to increase the number of riders like when we went back to my home village.

Incidentally all of the members of the {Slaughterers} have ordered their own horses.

Horses are one of the top things to purchase that even if you have the money to buy them if the timing doesn't match up it takes time to get them.

After all there's not a large number of them.

Since she was originally part of a merchant household and they owned horses in the past Gwine was quick to get her own.

Above all else it's necessary to remember the geography so she can't afford to go without it right.

"That's right, just like that..here."

I was helping her attach the {Breeze.Horseshoes} to the legs of her horse. One of the goals of the journey this time is confirming the abilities of these {Breeze.Horseshoes}.

Whether they can really walk over rivers and swamps, if they can really run for half a day without fatigue, I wanted to check things like that.

Normally

it's a trip that takes over a month and a half to do a round trip but if the abilities of the {Breeze.Horseshoes} are just as they say we should be able to reduce the amount of time it takes to return by quite a bit.

It's a necessary journey to understand exactly how much time they can reduce it to and actually get a feel for it.

"Then we're heading off. I think we'll return by the end of the month. I'm leaving things in your care."

After saying short farewells to Zenom, Toris, Bel, Ralpa, Basutorial, and Cathy who came to see us off we left the town of Baldukk with a load full of baldoggies.

Ah, and about Mira-shisho and the others.

In the end they said they couldn't abandon the comforts of the fairy village. If you've lived there for hundreds of years and haven't felt it was very inconvenient then I'm sure you wouldn't feel like moving right...

It seems like one of the reasons is also because it's a place the demi-god Lilus prepared for them as well.

But well prior to that, if someone like me who doesn't even have much of a relationship with them asks there's no way I'd receive a good reply immediately right.

Well, it wasn't a matter that I had very high hopes for in the first place so it can't be helped.

Of course, while I'm saying that I still haven't completely given up.

.....

Year 7448, Month 1, Day 8

No~ this is crazy~ these {Breeze.Horseshoes}.
The horses were really able to run for a half day with a full load without any rest and no fatigue.
Even the rivers they were able to pass over them without a problem as long as the current wasn't fast or too many waves on the surface.
They even smoothly passed through a swamp area off the side from the road
The horses weren't getting tired so if we wanted we wouldn't even have to take any breaks.

Thanks to that we were able to arrive at Lail Kingdom in just a single week, seven days after leaving Baldukk.
That's on top of wasting time here and there testing out various things and intentionally taking the round about path so we could avoid other people from seeing it, so if we were to have focused on just speed I think it would have been even faster.

After all according to Gwine on average we were traveling over 100 km a day. During the longer days we even went close to 150 km.

On our way back I planned to take a different road so it'll probably take a similar number of days though.

Incidentally, if the rider were to skip over taking breaks for drinking water while keeping the horse running then it should be possible to move close to 200 km in a day.

With a trot of about 15 km/hour it's possible to move for 12 hours after all. If it's during one the seasons with longer days and you don't mind letting the horse get a bit exhausted then you could probably go another couple hours.

Of course it's fine to go even faster as a speed close to the limit but if we were to try and ride for a long period at that speed our bodies wouldn't be able to endure it.

Even riding for half a day at a speed of 15 km/hour is exhausting.

If it were an emergency messenger riding forward without thinking about the consequences then it's not even a dream to go 400 km in a day.

If a single person rides with the bare minimum of baggage at the maximum sprinting speed then it can manage around 40 km/hour after all.

At speeds like that even excellent horses will only last a few minutes but if you use these {Breeze.Horseshoes} it's almost like you're riding on a race horse the entire time.

According to Gwine the distance from Baldukk to the entrance of Lail Kingdom's capital Erurehei is just over 600 km in a straight line.

Previously Miduchi said it was about

1,000 km but that's after stopping at towns and villages here and there along the way so her sense of distance must have been thrown off.

In any case I was very satisfied with the performance that went beyond my expectations.

It was just when we were having lunch in a village at the base of Mount Kinru~ when Miduchi proposed, "Let's switch the horseshoes with normal ones".

The reason was because it's unnatural for horses to not be tired at all after climbing up the mountain road.

That was certainly true so we decided to take off the {Breeze.Horseshoes} and switch them with normal horseshoes.

Since we weren't very used to re-attaching horseshoes it seemed like we were going to struggle quite a bit with it.

However, just as expected from Miduchi for suggesting it she was pretty used to readjusting horseshoes so it only took us about 1 hour to readjust them for all three horses.

And then about 2 hours after we started climbing the mountain roads.

The sun was still plenty high in the sky.

"Shall we raise the pace a bit more?"

Miduchi called out to us.

It seems there's still a ways to go.

Following Miduchi's suggestion we raised the pace by a bit.
And then an order echoed through my brain from {Party-ization}.

""Get up""

..Ah, a lookout is it.

We already discussed and decided this code on the way here.

"At earliest when were about halfway between the base of Mount Kinru~ and the entrance I think a lookout will start watching us. If you notice it then don't mind it. If possible it's best to act like you didn't notice them so the lookout doesn't get tense."

However, is there really a lookout?

I can't tell at all.

But, since Miduchi says there is one then I'm sure there is.

Hey, Gwine, stop looking around so much.

About 2 hours after that.

We finally arrived at the entrance when it was close to the evening.

Since we switched out the horseshoes for normal ones as expected the horses have started to get tired.

"I'll go a talk with them so wait a moment."

Miduchi got off her horse and walked while holding the reins as she went towards a male dark elf guard.

Gwine and I got off our horses and watched from behind.

Miduchi talked to the guard-like man about something for a bit then came back over to us.

"After all we can't just go in as we please. Sorry. Wait for a while longer."

It's something we originally heard about so we just nodded and waited.
The entrance to Erurehei is a building like a small fortress.
Gwine and I were on the outside of it's fence brushing our horses.

"I wonder what it's like inside of the underground city?"

Don't ask me...

Even I've never seen it before either.

"I've only heard stories about it after all. I don't really know. It's supposedly dark inside but still better than the dungeon."

"That's exactly what Miduchi-san this morning."

It can't be helped right...

We continued talking about pointless things for another several tens of minutes.

Finally Miduchi came back and just as expected we aren't able to go inside.
However, we got permission to stay in a room inside of this fortress.
It seems merchants that occasionally come along stay in them as well so I've heard that there's several guest rooms.

After Miduchi told the leader of the guards that she got permission he glanced at me for a moment and then returned to the underground city.

I felt like it would give a bad impression to just lock ourselves up in our rooms so Gwine and I decided to spend the time watching the setting sun.

On a mountain about 1,000 meters high in the middle of winter.

We watched the bright red sun while trembling from the cold near the gate of the fortress and drank hot soup.

The sun set in no time at all and then we ran out of things to do.

It couldn't be helped so we went back into the fort.

Gwine and I are in different rooms so we can't talk.

We were told not to pass by the decided areas inside of the fort so it felt a bit off to chat in the halls or dining room.

Of course, I wanted to hold back on going to each others rooms to talk until after I talk to the head warrior or an elder.

Just like that 2 hours passed and Miduchi finally came back.

She brought along her older brother.

I've covered things up by giving proper reasons for the journey up until now but honestly speaking the number one goal this time was to greet her older brother.

Her older brother was just as I heard, he has a considerably weak constitution and his body is weak as well.

Though I was a bit surprised when I was introduced to Miduchi's uncle, aunt, and cousin as they carried her older brother in on something like a stretcher.

I had heard about it but for him to be in this bad of a shape...

Supposedly he hasn't even been able to walk on his own over the past year or so.

Since I was sure Miduchi would ask about it later I checked using {Identify} and it was {Condition: Full Body Autoimmune Disease}, that sort of really troublesome sounding name.

Rheumatism is a difficult disease that costs a lot of money for treatment even in Japan...

However, he's clearly conscious and he can talk with a quiet tone of voice.

I politely greeted her older brother after he seemed to painfully apologize for greeting me while laying down.

I told Miduchi not to give him the medicine until I finish greeting and talking to him.

Of course, it's different if he was in a condition where there's no time to waste but it seems there was no need to worry.

"I apologize for calling you at so late in the evening. But I'm happy to be able to meet you."

"Don't worry about it, Greed-san. Since it seems Midu~~ritto is in your care everyday I'm grateful to you."

It was frail but even then he spoke in a firm voice.

There's a lot of common points between the Dyurou language Dyurorisshu and the Ragudariosu language {Common.Language} so I can understand what he's saying.

Though when I asked about it afterwards it wasn't the Dyurou language Dyurourisshu but just the way they speak the {Common.Language} in Lail Kingdom.

Now then..

Ah..I'm getting nervous.

"I'm sure it will affect your body so I'll get right to the point in saying it. Chizumagurol-san please give your little sister, Midu~~ritto-san to me. I'll definitely make her happy. The reason I came today was to ask for permission from Chizumagurol-san."

It seemed that her older brother couldn't grasp the meaning for a moment but soon after made a surprised face.
I guess it was unexpected.

"Miduchi"! '%$#')"?

It seems he started saying something to Miduchi.
Miduchi started replying something with a serious face.
Her uncle and aunt who were standing to the side participated as well.

..In my previous life, when I first went to greet Miki's parents I felt like this.
Even on the second time I can't get used to it.

If I were to speak honestly I don't really want to go the trouble of doing greetings as stressful as this.
Of course even on Orth it's considered important to obtain permission from your partners family to get married.
Particularly when it involves the successor of nobles.
Even in the case of commoners and Free People living in the same town or village it's the same.

However, there's countless people who can't do it even if they wanted to.
When it comes to purchased slaves let alone when getting married it's common to not even know where they are after all.
After the next child after the second leaves a noble or commoners household then they usually cut off contact there as well.
Until they die, no, even after they die it's not uncommon for them to next meet again.

Even if you know their location it's common to be unable to go and greet them because of the physical distance away and more-so Miduchi is a member of the dangerous warrior class.
It's not a joke but completely serious to think that this might be the last time they meet in this lifetime when leaving Erurehei.

That's why Miduchi said there wouldn't be a problem even reporting about it to him afterwards.

Particularly when it happens between two adults it's not uncommon to report it to their families long after they're married.

But, I think it's something that's necessary.

It couldn't be helped if it was absolutely impossible but even if we didn't have the {Breeze.Horseshoes} it wasn't impossible to come and greet them.

In that case I just need to do what I wanted to do.

Also, it's only human to want to get to know the family of your partner right.

I think this is something in common whether it's Orth or Earth.

And, they've sure been talking for quite a while...

Could it be, they're against it?

"Greed-san. Please take good care of my little sister."

...

A.

"Thank you very much! Brother-in-law-san!"

I only heard about it afterwards but it seems they were against it at first.

It seems since Miduchi's reputation in Erurehei went up quite a bit there were quite a bit marriage proposals for her.

Entrusted with a mission from her majesty the Queen and her position is equal to an elder. And then since almost all of her need to worry about money has disappeared she was proposed to by a man from a considerably good family.

Rather than some random foreigner from who knows where even more-so of a different race it's obvious that as her older brother he felt marrying someone of the same race would be better.
I can understand why he would be against it.

But, in the end I was able to receive permission so I guess we could say the outcome was alright.

.....

Year 7448, Month 1, Day 11

In the end we weren't able to get permission to enter Erurehei but I was able to talk with Fantodu and Zagurocchi, two of the elders. Also, I had the chance to talk with the head warrior Zagerforu again.

I think it was thanks to Tukerin making good reports about me that I was safely able to discuss what I wanted to and proceed with negotiations.
Of course, there's also the supply of baldoggie through Tukerin and the investigation into the Dirt Plains which were all a plus for Lail

Kingdom, so I think that helped as well.

Also, they were very pleased with the gift of baldoggies that we brought along. Since we brought along an assortment of various flavors rather than the plain ones they always eat they were especially surprised and welcomed us. Miduchi's cousins were also full of smiles as they came to thank me for the baldoggie.

Furthermore, it's of note that the medicine for brother-in-law was completed and he started taking it so there's no more need to worry about passing away early.

Being seen off by the several dozen people that are related to Miduchi we departed Erurehei early this morning.

.....

"How nice~ Miduchi-san... My father and mother aren't around anymore after all.."

On our trip back Gwine said.

"It was my ideal for my father to reject the person I wanted to marry once. Even then they would continue to beg and finally get permission. Doesn't something like that sound so dreamy.."

And started saying something like that.

Something like that, isn't it a nightmare from the guys point of view.

Chapter 335 : Triumphant Return

Year 7448, Month 1, Day 13

"Eh? They disappeared?"

On our way back to Baldukk Miduchi said that while sitting on a bed in the inn we stopped at.

Yeah.

This morning before leaving the inn it was there when I was going through our bags.

Last night, didn't we just open a new one.

I properly tied the opening of the bag shut so the seaweed lotion wouldn't spill right?

"I don't know."

I know I had put it into my bag.

"But, it's not there right? Then, did you drop it somewhere?"

Was it when we were taking a break at noon?

"Isn't that the case? But, since we don't have any should we stop for today?"

...

Shouldn't around today be a safe day?

"Aren't you the one who said that you don't know whether it's the same as humans or not."

...

That's true, but you, aren't a human right~ You're a dark elf~

Though I'm not a human either.

Supposedly it's a bit easier between reincarnated people but even then isn't it difficult to conceive between different races...

"That might be the case but you never know right? In the first place, aren't you the one who said we need to put into order the foundation of the territory before having kids."

..Certainly.

Even though they're my own words I'm very sad.

Can I endure it?

I'm sure I can.

..We only did it once.

But, we properly make sure to be careful so I'm sure it'll be fine.

Even when using {Identify} on Miduchi afterwards it was {Condition: Normal} after all.

I still have the experience of using {Identify} on sister-in-law Shani when she was pregnant.

It was a relief.

But, I remembered afterwards.

I only used {Identify} on sister-in-law Shani after her morning sickness started...

Morning sickness only starts around one month after getting pregnant I think it was.

I wonder if it's possible that I had gone a full month without using {Identify} on sister-in-law Shani when she was training the village's squires back then?

I completely forgot about that.

Ah, well, in the end Miduchi didn't get pregnant this time though.
It was at this time when I ended up with the misconception that, "If the condition shown with identify isn't pregnant then they're not pregnant".

.....

Year 7448, Month 1, Day 18

We took quite a few detours on our return trip but just as expected it was still fast.

In the end it didn't even take us three weeks to do a round trip.

Everyone who didn't know the exact distance to Lail Kingdom just said, "Aren't you back quite a bit earlier than planned?" and weren't very surprised. However, during dinner when Gwine discussed the distance and speed we were moving they were all shocked. It was so fast that Toris said he wanted to bring Bel home with him once, Rodrick wanted to return home once as well. Also, Misu and Jeru wanted to make a trip but these two aren't used to riding horses so it would be unreliable with just Gwine. I guess it would be fine to send Ralpa. Since she seemed to want to go after all. Obviously I received an immediate reply from all of them.

First off it was decided that Toris would go together with Bel to greet his family. Toris and Bel have used Miduchi and my horses so they're reasonably familiar with riding.

Their combat strength is also high so it should be plenty if I just send Gwine along.

After they get back Gwine can accompany Rodrick to his home town..Eh? It's in the place called Robamorusu that we passed when we came back?

Then

just as I was thinking it's fine if Gwine doesn't accompany him on that end they said it might be fine to try going down a different route so in the end Gwine will follow along with Rodrick and the others as well. Under Rodrick's guidance his combat slaves Denda and Karimu are learning horsemanship as well so Gwine can focus on grasping the geography.

After that, when Misu and Jeru go back to Misu's home town it'll take the shape of Ralpha teaching them how to ride so Gwine won't have much of a burden on that end either.

During that time everyone who remains in Baldukk will continue exploring the dungeon.

Of course, to earn money.

There would be nothing more to say if we can obtain more useful magic tools and magic items that go along with it.

Also, at the inn there was contact from various directions including Sandak Company.

It's about the {Invisibility.Ring} and {Loincloth.Of.Daring} that I left in their care. It seems that there's a high probability of the {Invisibility.Ring} with charges remaining reaching a price of over 1,5000,000,000 if it's put up for auction.

It's expected that the one without any charges remaining will only be worth about 1,000,000 or so.

Also, the {Light.Saber} will easily sell for over 2,000,000,000 so that was quite excellent.

Incidentally, Sandak Company itself decided to buy the wristwatch for 8,000,000.

However, since the effects of the {Loincloth.Of.Daring} are still unknown it was written that the price will at best be around 30,000,000.

Hm~mm...

They most likely asked Marquis Dasurain the head court magician to look at it but I guess even using his so-called "special spell" it ended up with this conclusion...

Thinking about the price it was clearer than day that it'd be a lot better to just let Zulu use it.

The next day I went to Sandak Company in the capital and said we would sell the {Light.Saber} and wristwatch. Ah, also the two {Invisibility.Rings}. Putting aside the one with no charges left, the remaining one had lost 16 charges as well.

Aft hearing his expectations that they would sell by the summer I returned to Baldukk.

I have a lot of things I need to do after all.

There's organizing all of the ores we're carrying to the surface and some things I need to make using them.

I want to make some more guns in the dungeon as well.

I also need to decide what to do about Greed Company from here on out.

I've already decided most of it after sorting through the results of the information the dark elves and Kuro brought me but I need to start planning the policies for the current time while thinking of whether I really want to decide on that place as my future territory.

Also, I need to order more slaves.

This isn't just me but Toris and quite a few others all want to purchase slaves as well.

If we were to order them all together I'm the madam from Ronslail would be pleased.

After that, it can't be helped thinking about recruiting immigrants from those above commoners before I've finished deciding my territory.

In regards to that I'm not actually bothering with it very much.

In the first place I have no intention of making some strange person into a squire so even if I were to actually do that it would just be in form.

For the next few months, I don't think I'll have any time to rest.

In some meanings this could be considered like my final holiday.

.....

Year 7448, Month 2, Day 14

Today is the 20th birthday of us reincarnated people.

Going off the common sense from our previous lives it's a day that should be celebrated.

But, since we've all long since adjusted to the way of doing things on Orth for us it's nothing more than a day where our age goes up one.

Even then we threw a pretty flashy birthday party. Obviously, we invited all of the other members as well.

Rokko was partying as he said, "It's nice and easy to remember all of you reincarnated people's birthdays because they're all on the same day". Certainly including myself there's 10 people, almost 1/3rd of the people are have the same birthday. We all exchanged looks and made a bitter smile but it's pretty late to bring up at this point right.

Ah, we've already told everyone in the {Slaughterers} about the fact that we had reincarnated. They were shocked at first just like Kamu and Kimu but soon after seemed to lose interest. Though it seems there's some that think it was a joke as well.

It's not like we particularly care if they believe it or not and it's not that sort of matter so we just mentioned it in passing and that was the end of it.

Of course, there were those like Misu, Hisu, and Ginger who were considerably interested in it so I responded to their questions as best as I could.

But, several days later all of our lives were on the line as we entered the dungeon.

Since there's no time to bother with things like that everyone stopped focusing on it.

Well, even if I were a pure Orth person and I heard about something like this, I'd probably only be interested at first and sooner or later I'd just start to think, "So what?" I'd say that's about all there is to it.

.....

Year 7448, Month 4, Day 1

The royal palace got into contact with me.

It seems his highness Richard's portion of the armor made using the wyvern's scales was completed so they can put a price on it.

Thinking about how it will be several billions and I can't help but grin.

I'll be in attendance at the castle on Tuesday of next week. It's planned for April 8th.

I guess we should announce it around here.

In regards to the precious metals we obtained from the dragon, I've already long since paid off everyone's portion.

The remaining portion is stashed away in my safe at the shrine.

In regards to the other items we got anything that isn't being used in the dungeon is stored in my warehouse on the surface.

It's finally time to bring out the dragon's head, scales, and magic stone.

I entered the dungeon with Miduchi and my slaves and we went up to the teleport crystal room on the 8th floor.

Different from them it's been a month since I last entered the dungeon.

Though I never missed out on my training and running roughly 20 km a day in 2 hours so there was no problem with maintaining my stamina.

.....

Year 7448, Month 4, Day 8

"Master, as you please."

Zulu humbly knelt in front of the dragon's head frozen in ice.

"Umu"

I deploy an {Anti-Magic Field} and erase the larger portion of the ice surrounding the thick dragon's head.

With this it should be possible to carry it with the strength of a few people. It's only for a short period when teleporting so even two people should be fine.

We regrouped with everyone on the 7th and 5th floors just as previously planned and then made our triumphant return to the surface.

Different from when we carried back the wyvern, we chose to carry it back in the early morning when traffic was it's peak and the streets were filled with adventurers and stalls.

Obviously we didn't do anything to try and hide it so the moment we appeared from the entrance plaza a huge uproar started as if poking a bee's nest.

"Hey, that!"

"Wha!!?"

"What in the world is that..!?"

"Dra..gon?.."

"It's huge~!"

"Did they defeat it?"

"Of course they did."

"Amazing~!"

Muhihi. It sure feels good to be exposed to so many looks of shock, admiration, respect, and envy.

"Supposedly the {Slaughterers} defeated a dragon."

"Just how big~ is it!?"

"So..Something like that, how in the world did they defeat it?"

"Since just it's head is that big, what about it's body.."

"That is~ I'm sure it's huge right."

"I wonder how much the dragon's magic stone is worth?"

"Like I would know. But I'm sure it's worth quite a bit."

I feel like everyone is praising Angelas and my achievement seeing the dragon's head.

"..{Dragon.Slayer}"

"Yeah, quite literally they're {Dragon.Slayers}."

Naturally from the masses surrounding us people started to bring up the words "{Dragon.Slayer}".

Those words spread around the entire entrance plaza in no time at all before everyone was using them.

"Congratulations, Greed-san! You're quite impressive!"

Church-san who was acting as the guard of the entrance plaza today praised me.

"Is it alright to shake your hand?"

"Ya~ Church-san. Thank you very much."

I thanked him and gripped the hand he was holding out.

A large and sturdy hand covered in sword blisters firmly gripped my hand. But, his hand was warm.

"Uooo...A {Dragon.Slayer} has appeared from Baldukk!!"

"It's the {Slaughterers} who just brought down a huge wyvern a while ago!"

"As expected of Greed-sama! The number one adventurer in Baldukk!"

"Even among the top teams they're a full head above the rest~"

"Greed-sama! This time for sure, this time for sure let us Boton siblings join you!"

"I'll follow you to the depths of the abyss!"

"Gekudo-sama~! Marry me!"

In response to the cheers I waved my hand.

Half of these voices are for Angela.

I need to be proud of her portion of the achievement as well.

"Kya!! Kalstalan-sama~~! Face over here!"

"Rokko~! Come over tonight!"

"Iyan~ designate me!"

"What are you saying!? Rokko is my best customer you know!"

"Kimu! After all you were a good woman!"

"I wonder if it's just as expected and Firefreed-san finished it off in the end?"

"Isn't that obvious! He's so cool! I look up to him!"

After sevel tens of minutes passed the crowd finally split in the direction we were moving and a flower arrangement was made.

"However, that sure is~ amazing!"

"That's right, dragon's sure are huge."

"Gwine-cha~n! We've got a new beard grooming set!!"

"Karimu! The pride of Berosu Village!"

"Faruergaz-sama! Please let me serve you!"

"No, me! I who was once the second company commander of Viscount Yoraizu's knight group!"

"Ginger-san! We've got some good vodka!"

I walk forward standing at the lead.

I waved my hand at the surroundings and acted courteous.

"Kamu! After all you were first-rate, no super first-rate!"

"But, just as expected if you don't have this many people there's no way to defeat a dragon like this right.."

"I wonder how they regrouped?"

"Ruttso yo~!! Ehe the greaves you ordered will be done by this weekend!"

"That's the guy who created the baldoggie right? Saji was it, he's a genius!"

"Hey~hey~hey, Ralph!! Aren't you~ amazing~!"

"It's the triumphant return of the {Dragon.Slayers}~!!"

Zulu is following me from behind.

"Oh! Zulu! The star of the Laios!"

"Sanno! Pay your tab!"

"It's that dark elf right? She's supposedly an amazing magician."

"Not just that I've heard her skill with the sword and bow are impressive as well."

"She's a beautiful woman but a dark elf huh..."

"She doesn't look elvish right."

"Supposedly she's Greed's woman."

Behind that Henry, Mekku, Rubi, Jesu, Denda, and Karimu are carrying the dragon's head as they slowly follow along.

"Ransun! You're looking great again today!"

"Hey now~ do you want to get yourself killed by Jeru!? You're sure reckless with your life!?"

"Ge?..Jeru! So you were there."

"Just relax since there's no way he'd bother with someone like you."

"Hisu! As expected of the archer of the demon shot! Is it true that you don't have a man! Then with me"

"No with me!"

"No~no with me!"

The dragon's head being carried by six large men was sparkling as the light from the entrance plaza reflected off its scales and seemed almost like a portable shrine.

"Denda! Do you remember me!? It's me! Me!"

"Kevvin! Let's have a toast tonight! I'll treat you to a drink!"

"Bernadette-cha~~n! You're cuuu~te again today, so cuuuute!"

"That combat slave, he's called Henry right? Is it true he was a knight?"

"Let alone that the Laios opposite from him, the one named Mekku, it seems he was a knight as well."

"Amazing~ slaves right. According to what I've heard that fellow named Rubi is pretty impressive as well."

"Jeswu!! Come to big~ sisters place again today!"

Ha? Just now was..that bastard Jesu, even though he's just a slave...

Further behind us the other members all followed along carrying bags filled with the scales.

"I~ was expecting it right from the start, that the {Slaughterers} would some day do something huge!"

"You, didn't you always say they were no good because they were just a bunch of brats?"

"Ha? When it comes a veteran watcher of my level I say things like that intentionally."

"Who was it that said they lost a lot of their combat strength since that female slave died?"

"I don't know, a conversation like that."

"You, are you not embarrassed saying that?.."

"Not really? It's fine if I just complain about whatever when it comes to that time as long as I enjoy myself."

Hn? Maru, Rinbi, and Cathy came to greet us.

Then I guess Cathy came over to Baldukk last night.

She's being dragged along by the crowd trying to get a glance at the dragon while waving her hand high up.

It took us quite a bit of time to regroup and arrive at Boil Manor.

.....

In the afternoon I arrived at the royal castle.

Obviously I'm wearing the {Dragon.Slayer} on my waist and I have the {Utility.Ring} on my finger.

Of course, I chartered a carriage so the dragon's head is here as well.

I covered it with some cloth when transporting it so it wouldn't stand out but obviously they checked the luggage when I was passing through the gates of the royal castle.

It was just as I expected that there would be another huge uproar here.
It was even more than the time with the wyvern.
Nevertheless, after telling them my business I was let through into the outer citadel.

I was made to wait for a bit in front of the audience room of the outer citadel but after a short while I was allowed to enter.

"Greed. Raise your face."

Her highness Queen Morin gave me permission so I raised my face.
In the audience room other than her highness, the King, and prince Richard, there were several knights acting as guards.
And then to the side from the throne there was a stand for armor with magnificent set of armor hanging on it.

"Greed. Just look at it. This armor, it's amazing~"

Black Sky Scale

Pure Breed Wyvern Scales.Cowhide

Condition: Normal

Manufacture Date: 29/3/7448

Value: 1

Durability: 1625147

Ability: Body Restriction Rate: 7%

Ability: Average Penetration Rate: -38%

Ability: Armor-Protection Area Average Damage Reduction Rate: 69%

Effect: {Half Effect.From.Breath Weapon}

Effect: {Weight.Alleviation}

Effect: {Impediment.Minor.Magic}

..Well~well, this is quite impressive.

It has a penetration reduction rate on the level of splint mail and a higher defensive rate than full plate mail.

On top of that the body restriction rate is on the same level as leather armor.
The special effects are excellent as well.
Additionally, just as the artisan expected it has a unique name attached to it.

"Thus, this armor. About the price.."

I was given permission so I stood up and started acting as if I was using {Status Open} while the King was putting on airs as he said it.

Ah, I couldn't help but be charmed by it.
..Gulp.

Chapter 336 : Promise

Year 7448, Month 4, Day 8

Now then, I wonder exactly what kind of price will be put on it.

"The estimate for this armor came out to be 3,620,000,000 Z per suit."

Hmm. Well I guessed about that much.

I returned to my original position and knelt down taking the retainer's pose.

Taking out taxes, bonuses, and wages then my income should be about 3/4ths..I guess roughly 5,400,000,000 for two suits of armor?

"You may raise your head...And also other than an amount of scales equal to one suit of this armor there's about 40% of the scales remaining. The estimated price of these was evaluated to be 2,762,260,000 Z...This before tailoring them into armor so they're expected to be made into a similar named item but because the effects of the magic attached to it are unknown. Also, I have no intention of making this portion into armor after all."

In other words..It's over 7,500,000,000.

However..No, I guess it's fine. It might be the place to settle on.

"But.."

"But?"

Even though it's rude I unintentionally asked back.

I wonder what he's going to say.

I can think of several things but it's probably that.

"..It's exceeded 10,000,000,000."

Eh? So it was that one.

Well I guess it's fine.

"Ha."

Looking strange at my eyes the King made a faint smile before opening his mouth.

"I said I wouldn't spit any lies. What should I do?"

Hmm. As expected the greatest matter of concern was that.

Though I guess you could say it's only obvious.

In the end something like armor is just equipment for an individual after all.

No matter how good the abilities are on it there's a limit.

"Well then, I present the armor and remaining scales this time to the Royal Family."

I wonder if he'll let himself be tricked?

I tried saying it with as honest an expression as possible.

Well, just in case.

"Hey now, just because I said it would be worth a bit over 10,000,000,000 Z don't try to change it to paying in kind. As expected it's not worth that much right?"

The King said while sneering.

Shit.

If he would have accepted payment in kind then I would have been able to go without paying the 1,000,000,000 in luxury tax...

I thought there might be a chance but as expected I guess that's no good? No matter what I was underestimating him too much.

"So it's impossible.."

I made an expression like I was disappointed and looked up at the King.

"Right, this guy, you can't let your guard down? He tried to cover up the luxury tax."

So he saw through it.

The Queen and his highness Richard are both making bitter smiles on the side.

"No, not at all! There's no way I was trying to cover it up! I just thought that since it was worth 10,000,000,000 Z then maybe, nothing more! It's a misunderstanding!"

I said it as if I was flustered but all three of them relaxed their expressions.

"Look, Richard. It's just as Morin and I said right? This guy would definitely try to make the payment in kind."

The King made a triumphant face while looking at his highness Richard.

"Ha. Certainly. It seems I still need to cultivate my eyes for looking at people."

His highness Richard said to the King while laughing and looked at me.

"Greed-kun. I've already heard about the matter his majesty promised to you. However, I think it'll be quite difficult."

Yeah, I know.

I made an obedient expression while looking up at his highness the prince.

"Certainly the soil is good and it's easy to raise crops. There's almost no hills so I think as long as you can cultivate the land then there's no doubt you would have better harvests than anywhere else in the Kingdom. If you just think about that then 10,000,000,000 Z is an exceptional price."

Right.

His highness the prince changed his expression and tone of voice before continuing.

"However, a conflict always occurs in that area every couple of years. And it's only been about 100 years or so since people started settling there so there's a lot of monsters. No matter which land, other than the northern parts which aren't included in the Dirt Plains and are safe, are dangerous areas to the point where you can't relax and live in them without guards."

That's why the army is stationed there, is what you want to say right?

"You understand that there's that sort of reason behind the price of 10,000,000,000 Z right?"

"Ha. That's something I've already resolved myself for."

His highness the prince looked into my eyes for a short while before nodding and backing off.

"Hmph.

Something like that, this fellow should have known it since long ago..Last year, several dark elves have been spotted wandering around the Dirt Plains. I'm sure it was this fellow having them investigate.

Right? Isn't that correct?"

The King said while making an expressions as if everything was on the palm of his hands.

Oh my.

It's true dark elves stand out after all.

I'm sure they only made some small talk for the sake of the investigation which is easy to forget about but it would still leave an impression that they talked with a dark elf.

"So you already saw through it all.."

In that case there's no meaning in acting dumb.

"And? Which place do you want?"

"Well then, I'll state it without reservation...I wish for the territory farthest to the west, Count Riguru's territory."

I said it respectfully with a smile on my face.

"Hm~m.

I could have sworn you would pick the second territory from the east, Count Doresura's territory though...Can I ask the reason why?"

The King asked as if it was really unexpected.

Well, normally it would be as just as the King says.

It's going slightly off topic but let's go over a simple review of the Dirt Plains.

The northern parts of the Dirt Plains. In other words the southern side of Rombert is largely split into the territories of four Counts lined up with each other.

Going from the east they're Count Erasu's territory, Count Doresura's territory, Count Ranseru's territory, and Count

Riguru's territory.

First, the one further to the east Count Erasu's territory. It's said to be the territory with the narrowest area. Additionally it's the territory with the lowest amount of area that's a part of the Dirt Plains as well but every part of it other than the Dirt Plains are reasonably cultivated. There's 5 towns. 11

Villages. Among those 3 are pioneering villages. The portion of the territory which stretches out to the eastern part of the Dirt Plains has comparatively sparse forests so it would be the easiest to cultivate the land. However, it's the one with the worst progress in cultivating.

I'll mention the reason later.

Next, the second territory from the east Count Doresura's territory. In the ranking for how much progress has been made in the territories it's number two. Also, out of the four territories it's said to be one with the largest area. However, even if we say that the territory has been cultivated, the parts of it covering the Dirt Plains are covered in deep forests and because of the monsters living there not much progress has been made to spread it out.

The primary source of income is the crops from the cultivated portions of the northern Dirt Plains and the ores mined from the mountainous area. There's 4 towns. 17 Villages. Among which 7 are pioneering villages.

Then, the second territory that spreads out from the west is Count Ranseru's territory. In terms of cultivation progress it's the highest and obviously the area which can be used for farmland is the largest as well, in the north of it there's a small mountain region that spreads to Count Doresura's territory in the east which copper and iron are mined as well. The number of towns is 5. 18 villages. Among which 7 are pioneering villages.

Finally is the territory I asked for, it's Count Riguru's territory farthest to the west. It's third in terms of area of the territory. It's also third in the amount of area the Dirt Plains take up within the territory. Just like Count Erasu's territory this place has a decent amount of territory outside of the Dirt Plains as well. However, more than half of that is a mountainous district shaped like a scrunched up bowl leading over to Viscount Yoraizu's territory. The number of towns is the lowest at 3. 13

Villages. Among which 4 are pioneering villages. In the southwest of the territory there's a mountain called Mount Berosu which acts as the border with Devas and in the north of that while it's only a bit it's the only territory among the four which is touching the sea.

Among these Count Riguru's territory and Count Doresura's territory are the ones with comparatively long terms of conflict with Devas Kingdom while Count Erasu's territory and Count Ranseru's territory have comparatively short terms of conflict compared to that.

Count Erasu's territory has the lowest amount of territory that's part of the Dirt Plains but almost all of the territory in the plains is covered in sparse trees so since it's the one that seems easiest to cultivate and the nobles that live on the Devas side of that are considerably ambitious and belligerent that seems to be the reason.

Count Ranseru's territory has the most progress towards cultivating farmland and is abundant so it's easy for others to have their eye on it.

Therefore, first Count Erasu's territory and Count Ranseru's territory disappeared from the options.

Count Doresura's territory is the one with the greatest area and along with that it's obviously the one with the largest area in the Dirt Plains as well. On top of that there's an already developed mine in the safe northern parts of it.

I thought this was the best candidate at first as well.

However, I changed my thoughts after seeing the results of the dark elves, Kuro, and Mary's investigation.

While the quantity is low for each type the mountain in Count Riguru's territory produces lead, mercury, sulfur, and various mineral resources. Of course, it also produces iron, copper, and brass as well.

In other words the Count Riguru's territory is more convenient to me from a mineral resource front than Count Doresura's territory.

And then there's another two more reasons.

One is a problem with the lords of each of the towns and villages. The territory with the highest proportion of indigenous lords is Count

Riguru's territory. In other words, you could say it's the one where I will inherit the largest number of low ranking nobles as well. Among our current members I intend to have several of them elevate to peerage but I'm sure it would difficult for them to suddenly be in possession of a village. The more low ranking nobles they have as seniors in the area the better.

Hn? What if I don't have enough seats? Isn't there as much territory outside of Rombert that I want spreading to the south? If it develops to the point of running out of seats then it's just a matter of invading, stealing the territory, and splitting it up to them.

The other reason is close to a gamble. But, I think it's got reasonably good chances. Count Riguru's territory hasn't been the stage for conflict over these past 7 years. Most likely the next stage will be here. It would be ideal if the conflict occurs before I inherit it then they split up it like usual. Well, for the time being after I inherit it I have no intention of going out from my side but in the case that they attack I'll use guns or gunpowder or whatever to repel them.

Now then, returning back to the discussion.

It was the reason I chose Count Riguru's territory.

"I'm sure your majesty already knows but I was born on the Jindaru Peninsula. In order to do trade with rubber products Count Riguru's territory which is the closest is the most convenient. Also, it's strange saying this but another major reason is because the frequency for conflicts with Devas Kingdom seems low."

"I see...Hmm, well fine. Even if I leave it to you at soonest it'll take one year so I'm sure you're aiming for the next battle to occur during that time."

The King showed a bit of admiration but soon after changed his expression and stood up.

And then, stepped off from the throne and came before me.

"The only ones here are my family after all...Hey, Greed"

"Ha"

"This armor is quite impressive. Not only does it have a magic effect so you don't feel the weight but it's also got an excellent defensive effect as armor. To the point where a full suit of plate armor can't even compete with it."

"Ha"

"That's why this time I'll give you a big discount and permit paying in kind."

"Wa ha...Thank you very much!"

So he has a good side. Though it doesn't suit his face.

"And then..it was a promise. I'm sorry for making fun of your dream back then. It seems I was mistaken. Sorry about that, forgive me."

"..Of course there's no problem."

So he remembered?

When the King said that, hearing it her highness Queen Morairu made a faint smile while looking at his back.

Fufu...

I had to desperately resist my face loosening up while still prostrating myself.

"There's still the matter of withdrawing and taking over from Romiosu and his subordinates that I've appointed as Count Riguru. Starting in the summer of next year you'll be Count Riguru. Don't be negligent in your preparations until then.."

Count Riguru Alan.Greed is it.

There's still plenty more to go after this!

Chapter 337 : The First Seat

Year 7448, Month 4, Day 8

Before

excusing myself from the audience room I was told about the schedule for the next meeting and the elevation of my noble ranking. It seems it's next Wednesday, April 14th. I was ordered to make sure I'm available that day and then when I was told "it's fine to leave", his highness Richard started talking.

"Your majesty, there's one more thing to report"

"There's still something remaining."

"Hn?"

The King and her highness the Queen both made slightly curious expressions.

"Sorry about that, Greed-kun. Both his majesty and her highness had a different audience up until right before this one. I still haven't had the chance to tell them. Though I say that, I only just heard about it myself a short while ago...Now, tell us about it, your great achievements!"

"Ha...Well then, with all due respect please allow me to announce"

Sorry about bringing this up while you're excited over the Wyvern armor.

"The other day we were able to defeat the guardians of the 12th and 13th floors of the dungeon of Baldukk. It was determined at that time but we believe that the 13th floor is the lowest floor of that dungeon. We were unable to teleport into any floors lower than that."

"Ho?"

The King leaned forward from his throne in admiration.

"We obtained a sword from the guardian of the 12th floor. Also, we obtained a ring from the guardian of the 13th floor. Ah, I left the sword with the knights at the entrance of the castle."

"Hmph, I'm sure it's just that right, at best a well-made sword so there's no need to bother with that. However, it's the first time something like a ring has come out."

"Ha. I'm wearing it right now. Would you like to take a look?"

I took of the ring and presented it.

It's the {Utility.Ring} but obviously it has a reaction to {Detect.Magic}.

However, it's just a light reaction to earth, wind, and void magic. I don't think there's any easy way to investigate its effects.

If it's that imperial court magician, Marquis Dasurain's "unique spell" then he might be able to figure out the details a bit better. However, after the matter with the {Loincloth.Of.Daring} I can more or less guess what kind of effect that "unique spell" has.

I think that "unique spell" or whatever is capable of detecting something like the mana waves(?) of the spell cast on the item.

In the case that he knows a spell with an effect similar to the one cast on an item then he probably can feel waves similar to that spell from the item.

And then he can make a guess about what kind of effect it'll have based on the spell he knows.

For example the {Ring.Of.Protection}, I think that's the reason why he was immediately able to confirm it was real and test it out.

After all that Marquis already had a ring with the same name.

I'm sure it wasn't exactly the same but he probably felt an extremely similar mana wave.

Also, the accuracy of that "unique spell" might not be all that high.

In comparison to the ring which he already knew the effects and mana waves, he didn't know any similar spells to the {Loincloth.Of.Daring} which mainly affects status so he probably wasn't even able to guess. Even if he was able to guess the effects of it, I think he might only be able to that that it has an extremely weak(it might be that the effects are too weak that he wasn't even able to detect it, or even if he could detect it he could only tell it's even weaker than the effects of {Bark Skin}) defensive ability?

Things like HP recovery or damage reduction, those sorts of spells are pretty well known.

Putting aside HP recovery, quite frankly the spells which reduce damage are barely usable. Something like {Bark Skin} is barely just better than nothing, or at least it feels like that, and even I don't feel like bothering to use it most of the time.

Well, even then precisely because it "supposedly" has a magic effect it still had the value of 30,000,000 Z.

"{Status Open}..Hm~mm.. I don't really get it but for the most part it still seems to be a {Magic.Item}.."

The King said with an expression as if it completely betrayed his expectations.

"Ha.

Just as you say. There's no way of determining the effects, the magic reaction is weak but I'm still thinking of making it into the heirloom of my family in commemoration for reaching the lowest floor."

"That's for the best."

Just in case he tried putting it on his finger, then after seeing it the King took it off and returned it to me.

"Then continuing on. About the guardian of the 13th floor but.."

"Yeah?"

"It was a dragon. Or to be more precise it was a {Shadow.Dragon}. Ah, it even arrogantly had a name such as Rongaruzamuryuzorufaren."

...
The King and Queen's eyes opened wide in surprise.
His highness Richard happily gazed at them.

"What was that? A dragon!?"

"Ha, this is from the guardian of the 12th floor, and this is the magic stone from the {Shadow.Dragon}, the guardian of the 13th floor. Also, today I brought along the head which we cut off as well."

I casually said with a refreshing expression as if I wasn't talking about anything important.

"A dragon you say! I definitely want to see it! Where is it!?"

Her highness spoke out in excitement.

No interest in the magic stone huh? Even though I went to the trouble of bringing it.

"Ha. On my carriage in the stables of the third outer citadel.."

"Richard! Bring it right away!"

After being ordered by the Queen, his highness Richard nodded before leaving the audience room in big strides and then said something to the guards in the hall.

The King is grumbling about something like, "Grrww..really a dragon..seriously..Shit" and whispering to himself.

They still seem to have no interest in the magic stone I'm holding. After a short while a messenger came to say that my carriage with the frozen dragon head on it was brought into the side garden in the second citadel.

After going outside right away and there was a large crowd gathered around the carriage looking from a distance.

They must have heard rumors about the dragon's head being on it and want to attend it's unveiling.

However, when both the King and Queen appeared they all took the retainer's pose all at once.

"I'll open it.."

I went to the side of my carriage while putting on airs and slowly untied the string on the canopy.

""Oh~~!!""

Shouts in admiration were raised from all over the place.

The ice is giving off a gleam in the spring sunlight.

Inside of that was the head of a black dragon the color of shadows glaring at the surroundings.

"Uumu.."

The King approached to the side and stared at it while groaning.

"As expected, of a dragon huh? It sure is big~"

The Queen was blocking her mouth with a folding fan while looking at it from all sides with her eyes opened wide.

"For it to be this size.."

His highness Richard seems to have regrouped with one of his subordinates from the first knight group and is nodding with his arms crossed as well.

"Hn? This is..Hey, Greed. What made this kind of wound?"

It seems the King noticed something.

I guess it caught their attention but his highness Richard and his subordinate came over for a look as well.

The wounds the King is pointing at are the numerous small round holes around the dragon's eyes and head.

The gunshot wounds that Angela fired.

They ignored the stab wound from {Flame.Tongue} on it's nose.

Well, since the stab wound looks more exaggerated they probably think it's from an attack spell or something.

The surroundings scales of the holes where the bullets pierced through are cracked and the scales themselves were completely torn so we tore them off.

Ah, obviously we already removed the remainders of the bullets as well.

"Yeah,

that's an arrow wound. It was done by one of my combat slaves firing a crossbow. Though regrettably she lost her life in our fight with this Rongaruzamuryuzorufaren...It was precisely because I had her support that I was able to defeat it."

"Ho~ from a crossbow.."

Hearing my reply the King and Prince,

"Richard.

You said that even when the Wyvern's scales were unprocessed they were able to deflect quarrels from a crossbow right?"

"Yes. Certainly. I confirmed it with my own eyes."

"..For a moment I thought I made a mistake rushing with the Wyvern armor but that's a relief.."

"It seems that when it comes to the scales themselves the Wyverns are better than the Dragons."

"That seems to be the case."

And were whispering things like that.

It's a relief right?

When it comes to this fellow, I won't hand over this dragon.

After that I erased a portion of the ice so they could directly touch the head and let them check the status all they please.

Not just the King but all of the people in the surroundings lined up to touch it and check the status while raising their voices in excitement.

"However..it's certainly a dragon..Uumu, magnificent."

"Your majesty, the horn is splendid right."

The King and Queen are talking in front of the dragon's head.

Around this time the remaining Queens all gathered and were admiring it.

"For Greed to become a {Dragon.Slayer}.."

"I, just thought he was a simple rubber craftsman at first..Just as expected of Greed's younger brother right."

"I wonder if my little brother was together with them as well? Hey, greed...Eh? With your slave, just the two of you!?Cheh..that brat.."

"Well isn't it fine. But, for a {Dragon.Slayer} to appear in our country."

"Greed, you..It's amazing you were able to defeat this sort of giant monster~"

"Eeeh!!? You were swallowed by it once...That is"

"It seems that Greed is the number one adventurer in Baldukk."

"I see, then it's no wonder.."

After waiting for the conversation to calm down I took the chance to start talking to the King.

"Your majesty, there's one request I'd like to make."

"Hn? What is it? Try saying it."

"It's about the head of this dragon but would it be alright to leave it here frozen in ice like this for a short while?"

"I don't mind but why? I'd like to see the bones of it, so wouldn't it be best to stuff it?"

"Ha, as a matter of fact at the end of this month my family will be coming to the castle to deliver armor and saya. I definitely want to show them a true dragon."

"Greed has quite the cute side as well~ Isn't that fine, your majesty?"

Queen

Morin helped follow-up for me so it was decided that it would remain on display while still frozen to the side of the castle gates for the time being.

By the way, I don't know if it's because this dragon matter came up but he didn't ask about those three illegitimate children today.

It would be the best if he could just give up on it though.

Whatever the case my elevation to peerage has been decided so I need to do what I need to do.

Incidentally, elevation to peerage is one variation(?) of naming ceremony that's done at the shrine.

However, it's not much different than delivering your notice of marriage to the government office in Japan so it's nothing more than a required ceremony for the nobility.

The investiture ceremony is done properly in the castle on a different day. These past 20 years or so there hasn't been any upper ranking nobles born other than successors who inherited the noble ranking.

Well, it's something that's rarely performed to that extent so quite a few nobles will be in attendance at the investiture ceremony.

Though
there's also the matter of their circumstances so what would be the reception party of a wedding for the investiture ceremony will take place around the fall of this year.

On the evening of this day, after returning to Baldukk I properly confirmed the remaining amount in my wallet and then went to do what needed to be done together with Miduchi.

It can't be done alone after all.

.....

Seeing me arrive at the castle the guard left me pass with just a simple body check.

After all right now my reputation is at it's peak.

Along with that it's to the point that considerably high ranking noble families are making marriage offers.

Though I've been rejecting them all saying while I'm a borderline noble it's still too much for a mere adventurer so we don't match up.

The frozen dragon's head is still hanging from ropes as it's displayed on the side of the gate.

The knight or squire or whatever who's acting as the guard was looking at me with admiration.

This morning I have a lecture which will cover all of the details that the King knows about Count Riguru's territory.

Of course, even if I call it a lecture there's not that much to it.

Things like the taxes these past few years, the organization of the local knight groups, how many low ranking nobles will withdraw when the transfer is done, and when that will take place, etc...

After that there's deciding the safety fee for when I become the Lord.

I tried negotiating to make it even just a bit cheaper but I was told that if I want to try and decrease it below the current safety fee of 30% of the taxes then they'll lower the number of stationed troops to match that so I couldn't do anything about it.

Eventually I'll have to manage everything on my own but since I have to leave the stationed troops of the second knight group to maintain public security and protect against invasions until then, there's no helping it.

Either way I'm sure I'll have to discuss the fine details of things like this sooner or later so it should be fine then right?

And then 10:00 am.

It was finally time for the naming ceremony required for the elevation to peerage.

I put on a plain but high quality robe that doesn't stand out and went together with the King wearing a hood low over his head as well as several knights from the second knight group to visit the shrine that's to the side of the castle.

It seems they've already made preparations with the shrine so we were able to perform the ceremony with zero waiting time.

Certainly I was able to confirm that my association had changed.

Furthermore, in regards to the family name it's fine if I change it to match up later or there's no problem if I just want to keep using Greed as well. Noble ranking is normally something that comes attached to the territory you rule after all.

Though it's not absolute since there's also nobles who don't rule any territory.

After returning to the castle this time I was pulled over by the chief of emblems under the ministry of internal affairs and made to wait.

It's supposedly about my family emblem.

The current Count Riguru family emblem is what you could call "Two Hawk Feathers in a Circle".

It's confirming whether I'm fine with keeping it as it is now or if I want to change it to a different design.

The Greed family emblem is "Three Columns in a Circle".

Incidentally, the Kawasaki family emblem from my previous life was "???" which is basically the Wisteria flower spreading out it's petals.

It's not anything that particularly needs to be hurried but it can't be helped worrying about something like this.

Though that's the case, it's what's going to be my flag so I don't want to decide it simply either.

I was told since I defeated a dragon and became a {Dragon.Slayer} what about a design that includes a dragon.

That sounded right but then I remembered my origins.

It's rubber.

That's why I decided on the rubber tree and made it the flower from the quasi-rubber tree.

It's a quasi-rubber tree shaped like a hanging bell with a lot of small yellow flowers blooming from it.

They have five flower petals.

As a matter of fact they're almost like tri-color bread shaped like three eggs stuck together.

I designed it matching up with that.

I guess it would be best to describe it as having three circles overlapping with the flower of the quasi-rubber tree placed in the center of that?

Well it's a simple design but I was satisfied with it.

Before going back I thought about going to the tailor shop and ordering a flag.

Ah, I guess it would be fine to go right now as well.

I'm making Miduchi wait right.

It's just right so I'll go now.

After I told the director of emblems "I'll order a lot of flags from the tailor and give you one when they're done" he finally let me go.

In addition to the order I said I would go and get some lunch before heading out.

However, in the afternoon I have a meeting with a different official.

I was told to come back right away.

It's expected that I'll be considerably busy for the next few months.

I took off on my horse from the castle and met up with Miduchi who was waiting at the factory of my company and had a simple of lunch of hotdogs.

And then we immediately went to do what needed to be done.

After

returning to the castle I was lectured by an official from the ministry of internal affairs about Count Riguru's territory and it was evening when the portion for today was finally over.

Just when I was about to leave the castle it seems his highness Richard was waiting for me as he called out for me.

It seems the King is calling for me.

Just as I entered the audience room the King threw a bomb at me.

If I hadn't been prepared for it before hand then I probably would have been at my limit avoiding an immediate reply.

"I thought about bringing it up next month but it's better to do things like this sooner rather than later. Hey, Greed. Just in case I'll listen to your wishes. Out of the three of them, which one do you want?"

So he's finally come.

This "three of them" is probably referring to his three illegitimate children.

"..What now? Out of the three of them? Whatsoever could you mean?"

"Don't play dumb. The daughters of Jibekuto, Refaisu, and Fokein. I've heard about it. You've already met them in person right?"

"..Jibekuto..Refaisu...Fokein? Ah, those.."

I replied while making a difficult expression.

"In regards to those three there was something I wanted to report to your majesty."

It seems my expression and reply were unexpected to him. The King leaned forward from the throne with a bit of interest.

"Hn? What is it? Try telling me."

"I don't know what the reason is but those three are frequently coming to Baldukk. Last year they entered the dungeon after asking some adventurers who I've had friendly relations with for many years to act as their guides."

"That's right. It was originally my idea after all. Since in the future I'm sure they'll have to defeat monsters so I encouraged them to do it."

On the side of the King who was making a triumphant face his highness Richard was nodding to himself as well.

"..Judging from that state it seems you didn't receive a proper report about things."

"What?"

The King replied as if he was surprised.

"In accordance with their play acting as adventurer in Baldukk they caused various disturbances. As a result of that they weighed down the adventurers and caused several casualties. The original underlying cause was because they were unsatisfied with their campsite inside of the dungeon."

Since they couldn't stand the filth and stares from other adventurers inside of the dungeon.

Thanks to that they had to move their base camp.

And then that caused a large number of casualties including the leader of one of the adventurer parties.

Moreover they ended up becoming undead so I had to kill them with my own hands when I went to their rescue.

"..Hey, Richard. Did you know about the matter from just now?"

"No, I didn't know about it.."

His highness Richard was making an expression as if he had suddenly swallowed 100 bugs or so while replying.

"..I see."

Viruhaima's already dead so I'm sure Anderson wouldn't bother explaining the fine details at this point.

It seems the King has already regained his composure.

"However, what are you trying to say about that? Isn't it only obvious that there will be casualties inside of the dungeon?"

"That's right. It's obvious for there to be casualties. However, the problem isn't the fact that there were casualties. It's because there were casualties that normally wouldn't have been necessary. And the cause of that was the selfishness of those three."

"You bastard..Are you insulting my daughters?"

The King said with an expression of anger.

"No way! That's absurd. It's my humble opinion that the problem here is the environment they were raised in but how about? Your highness?"

I

requested the opinion of her highness Queen Morairu who's just been standing with no expression like a Noh mask and not participating in the discussion.

After having the discussion thrown to her Morin quickly changed her expression as if he realized and then smiled.

"Your majesty, do you understand the meaning of what Greed is trying to say?"

He's saying that they weren't properly disciplined and grew up getting whatever they want because they're your children you know?"

On Orth, no, at the very least in Rombert Kingdom the treatment between genders is almost equal.

Women can inherit households and there's quite a few female soldiers as well. Also, just because they're nobles doesn't mean they're free to act as selfish as they please either.

Though in reality it's still pardoned to some extent, exactly like how it was for those three.

However, it's also because most nobles understand things like that they throw their younger generations into the army while they're still young.

In that sort of way it's certain that those three entered the knight group a lot later than the period most noble's children do(though it's not the case for just the youngest one) even more-so in an environment where their family's squires are already there to take care of them...

It's spoiling them too much right.

In any case, those three fail as someone you can leave a large number of subordinates to on the front lines.

I don't know whether or not they have political talent in the royal palace.

"Also, this time it was adventurers but please think about if that was kingdom's knights. What would happen if the battle ends up at a disadvantage because of their selfishness? What if a skilled knight or squire loses their life? Greed is pointing out those sorts of points."

Her highness the Queen politely and kindly sad as if scolding a small child.

"Gu..Mu.."

"Ha, mother, that is.."

"I think so too..if they were..that's right more like her highness Biagitte with great wisdom and deep prudence, a splendid lady then I wouldn't have had any reason to reject the marriage."

That's

right, something like an illegitimate child that royalty like you didn't raise, unless they're exceptionally skilled there's no way I'd be willing to put on those shackles. If you were to try and sell me a favor like that and put a collar on me then it would all be pointless.

"Is that so~ It's said that Biagitte is too gentle but I guess for those who are looking they can see through it...However, it's already been 9 years since Biagitte married into Baguweru's place. Nobles can't divorce after all. Greed, unfortunately no matter how interested you are in her."

Her highness was pleased that the eldest daughter she gave birth to herself was praised.

However, her highness Biagitte..though she's already not her highness anymore..as expected that's raising her up a bit too high, she's not that intelligent. Though it seems she's a fluffy beauty but I've never seen her face before.

"Also, your majesty. It's more important than anything else but..while they're just illegitimate children I think it would be a bit bad for appearances sake if I were to take your majesty's daughter as my second wife.."

When I said that all three of them made surprised expressions.

"What? Second..you say?"

"You, were married?"

"Wh..when...?"

I've won in terms of speed.

On the night when my elevation to peerage was decided Miduchi and I got married at a shrine in Baldukk, since I wasn't a successor to anyone I became a commoner as the {Greed Family Head}.

And then today, after gaining the noble ranking of Count Riguru, when I went to lunch with Miduchi we had them change or status again.

And conveniently just as the Queen said Rombert Kingdom doesn't accept nobles to divorce.

Since as the head of the Count Riguru family I Alan.Greed brought a woman to change her status to {Greed Family First Wife} and said, "I became a count so use naming to change my wife's status as well" then there's no reason why the priest would refuse it.

Furthermore it was still fresh in his memory that I had just formally become a count this morning.

There's nothing particularly wrong with being the second or third wife. However, in the average household it's common for the lower numbers to have more authority so it's often the case where that's considered obvious.

This

goes the same for households with men as well, the third husband has less authority than the second, and the second has less than the first so it's common for the head of the household to put more priority on their opinion.

It's not like there's any particular reason it's just how it ended up as a culture though.

Since that's the case, I had a proper reason to directly reject the marriage with those three.

Happily ever after.

Now then, what happened next was...

.....

One night in the late 21st century.

Even after the usual time arrived there was no contact from AI.

It's the first time this has happened but I didn't panic. It's still too soon to panic. I'm sure he's busy after all.

With my mobile terminal connected to the charging cable I left it on the side of my desk and decided to start finishing up the work I brought home first. I'm sure there's days like this as well.

..However, after that day, over a week later and there's still no contact from AI.

I was already starting to panic quite a bit.

I thought I wouldn't be able to record the continuation like this.

It's already about time for me to stop panicking over it.

The contact is made through AI's spell and he said it was pretty close to the result of an accident.

We discussed quite a few things like the gaps between time and space, distortions and whatnot, but in the end we couldn't figure out the reason.

I can't find any abnormalities with my terminal.

There's no problem with calling my family, friends, or associates from work at all.

It's possible to both make and receive calls with no problems. Of course, there's nothing wrong with sending mail or checking the web either. I tried bringing it into the shop of the carrier I have a contract with but just as expected there was no problem.

I wonder if something happened to AI?

I was worried but I couldn't do anything other than what I was able to think of doing.

Grasping for straws I tried buying the exact same model of terminal and even tried changing my personal authentication.

However, just like usual there was still no contact.

And then time passed just like that.

I was busy with my own life and before long the number of times I remembered him decreased.

.....

After over 10 years had passed, one night when I was digging through the desk drawer in my house looking for something.

The mobile terminal I used in the past rolled out.

Huh? Ah, this...

It's the old terminal before I bought a new one.

It's long since run out of battery so just as I was staring at the mobile terminal which can't be turned and I suddenly remembered the strange event that happened in the past.

Come to think of it, how many years back was that again...

For a while I even tried to think of it as just a dream.

However, the data that was carved into the octuple.level.self-flash memory(OLC) through the voice recording function on my mobile terminal proves it wasn't a dream.

Back then it was such a strange occurrence that I even requested a record of where the signal came from I think it was...

In the end there wasn't anything suspicious about where the signal came from...

For the first time in a while I wanted to hear his voice.

I guess I'll try replaying some of the recorded data.

Where did I put the charger cable from back then?

I'm sure there's no way I threw it away.

Is it inside of the drawer?

Just as I held onto the mobile terminal to stick one of my hands into the drawer...

The mobile terminal in my hand had...

started ringing that it was receiving a call...

and shook.

Even though it shouldn't have any battery remaining...

On the display was...

"Receiving Call"

just that.

There wasn't any information on the other side's registered name, number, or whether they're using a public line, just the words "Receiving Call".

I felt a shock as if I was hit by lightning and just stared at the display.

And then with my trembling fingers I tapped the "Pick-up" button.

..Yo~ sorry about yesterday..

The voice that was nostalgic for a period of time came out from the speakers.

"Is it AI!?"

..Yeah, it's me. Did you forget my voice after a single day?..

There's no way, there's no way I would forget it!

"Yo..You!! Al!! You were alright!?"

..Ha? Alright..What are you saying? I'm lively and well..

"Until now exactly..how many years do you think has passed!! It's been over 10 years since then!"

..Han? It's only been a single night since our last contact you know..

"A single night? What do you mean?"

..Like I know. But, I see. So that much time has passed....

It seems Al only missed calling me for a single night.

..Sorry~sorry. Various things happened on my end as well..

"You're still just as carefree as usual."

..That's why I apologized right. But, I see. 10 years is it....

All of the events that happened after the first night I was contacted by him flew through my mind.

I investigated his address from what he was barely able to remember at the time and found out that after the wife he left behind retired from the office she was working back then she returned to her family's house and died at the age of 97.

It was regretful that if I had received contact from him another several months sooner then I might have been able to somehow let them talk to each other. Al seemed disappointed as well.

I don't think I'll ever forget the deep sigh and stifled silence I heard from his disappointed voice through the speakers of the terminal when I reported it to him for the rest of my life.

I started listening to the story of his second life and at first I couldn't believe it at all but before long I started to look forward to the continuation.

I wonder when exactly it was that I got his permission and started recording it. Before long recording his stories became a hobby of mine.

When that ended up being cut off I was considerably worried but I can listen to that continuation again...

..Hey, what's wrong? Going quiet. Are you listening?..

"Yeah, sorry. I was just remembering back."

..What is it? Ah, you did say 10 years have passed over there..I wonder why..

"Like I could know! In the first place isn't the cause on your side Al, since you're using magic!"

..Even if you say something like that..I can't even guess why..

"That's right wasn't it..But, that's right, it's been 10 years. I was worried you know."

There's already no meaning in questioning why one night over there was ten years over here so there's no choice than to put it aside.

..Sorry about that. But 10 years is quite long..Rather than how have you been? Did anything change over there?..

"Yeah, I got married and had a child."

..Ho~ then congratulations..

"Yeah, thanks. Also, I'm about to leave my company and go independent. Right now I'm in the middle of preparations for that. Though it might lose in comparison to you. Even then the reason I was able to put in efforts towards making my own business was because I heard your story. I've already got promises from several major clients. One day I'll definitely be in the Nikkei 225."

..The Nikkei 225 how many decades has it been since I've heard that..But, I see. That's quite impressive....

"Is that sarcasm? But, well, it's that. If you're a man..Right, if you're a man then you've got to aim to be the King right!"

Intermission Nel's Adventure 1

"Nel, after all you have a disposition that's skilled with magic. Normally there's no way to reach level 2 in this short a period of time."

The elf healer said with an amazed tone of voice but there's also probably admiration mixed in as well.

Level 2.

On this world of Orth reaching level 2 with an elemental magic skill holds an extremely important meaning.

After all it's the same as being able to use healing spells.

Once you reach that stage no matter what you do it's not easy to be troubled.

Nel nodded while making just a slightly satisfied face.

Her official name is Neilen.Nobufomu.

A girl who received her new life as the second daughter of the squire Nobufomu family of this Hattorizu village.

Today she came to report to the teacher and healer that taught her magic shortly after she reached adulthood that her elemental magic level reached level 2.

Honestly speaking, her elemental magic levels have all reached level 3 and her void magic is already at level 4.

On the first day she started magic training she learned void magic, then within a mere week after that she learned two elemental magics, furthermore the following week after that she had acquired the remaining elemental magic skills as well.

And then, in less than a month her void magic reached level 1 and then the next month after that all of her elemental magics increased to level 1.

As expected even Nel was surprised by this pace and in order to avoid any unnecessary jealousy

she decided to remain quiet about the levels of her magic special skills.

After all, the healer who taught her magic is mature in both age and wisdom in their 50s and both of their elemental magic skills have only just finally reached level 5.

Well, in regards to magic training once you've acquired the skill and learned how to use your mana after that it's easy enough to do it all on your own.

The wide variety of high level techniques that make use of combinations of magic called spells aren't very important during the initial stages.

In any case, Nel was blessed in her mana amount.

If it's the bare minimum magic that just creates a small amount of an element and the most minimal amount of mana like the spell {Light} then if she wanted she could use it a considerable number of times.

She made effective use of her large amount of mana and just like this within a year from when she started learning magic she's reached the skill level of a full-fledged sorcerer.

Making use of her mana that is several times greater than others she failed countless times and even reached the level of using attack spells.

Nel has hated farm work since the past.

It's plain and dirt, she wanted to avoid a future of spending from morning to night covered in dirt abusing her body no matter what.

For that sake, she put quite a bit of enthusiasm into the close combat that's an obligation of squire families.

If it was possible then she wanted to open up the path for entering a knight group in her future.

However, she was born as a gnome that wasn't blessed in body size, her abilities when it comes to the spear and bow were somewhat average, and when it comes to using the sword or shield she's considerably low compared to others in the village.

She ended up giving up quickly that there was no helping it in that regard.

After all when it comes to close combat techniques as well, the training has to be continued not any less covered in mud or plain and difficult than that of farm work.

Something as troublesome as that, Nel got tired of it quickly and went to the point of almost throwing it down countless times.

Just, if she were to throw it down there then even at best her future would be the bride of some squire family where she ends up doing farm work.

In the worst case she might have even been sent to be the bride of a slave and ended up entering the slave ranking herself.

No matter what she didn't want that, it was just that thought that kept her going with it.

Since the time she started close combat training was long before she started learning magic, there was also the circumstances that no matter what she does in her future she wanted to gain enough power to directly overcome combat.

Even if she were to try and do business in the future there wasn't enough leeway in the finances of the Nobufomu family at that time to allocate it to helping her.

In any case, she was blessed enough in mana amount that it surprised even herself, so she was able to rapidly increase her skill with magic and in no time at all grew her abilities.

It was a feeling of relief to Nel.
If it's this level of magic skill then no matter where she goes she'll be able to find a job as a healer.
Since there's already two healers in this Hattorizu village it would be impossible to make a lifestyle here but there's any number of larger towns with a higher population or villages with few healers.

It's not all that bad of an idea to start traveling around searching for a place for her to settle down in the future while she's still young.
In the meantime, she planned on wandering around acting as an adventurer, doing escort jobs, or healing as she builds up her wealth and looks for a place that's easy to live.

.....

"Then, I'm going."

It's not going and coming back. The chance that this will be their last meeting in this lifetime isn't low.

Nel firmly embraced her parents, grandparents, and siblings as they said their farewells.

It seems that her uncle and aunt left the village just like this as well.

Her father said, "stay well" while patting her shoulder, and her mother said "if things get difficult it's fine for you to return anytime" while kissing both of her cheeks.

Her grandparents and siblings all offered her words for her departure as well.

The lord's family of the village came to see off her departure and offered her warm words as well.

It's a good village with a warm atmosphere but it's also certain that Nel had too many complaints to live here.

Negotiating with a merchant who periodically circles around the villages in this region with his caravan and having them hire her as an escort was Nel's first job.

When leaving the house the fortune that Nel was allocated was used on some sturdy leather armor, a spear, a properly made bow, a rucksack capable of holding her belongings.

As well as some durable boots made of several layers of thick pig leather. And then an amount of cash made up of gold Shu and silver that somehow adds up to around 1,500,000 Z in all was everything.

After this for the next 20 days, she'll be acting as escort until they reach the capital of this territory Hemudozu for the cheap amount of 100,000 Z. It seems that they'll reach Hemudozu after passing through five villages. There's no fixed number of days that they'll remain in each village but matching it up with the schedule of the distance it should be about 2 or 3 days.

Just like this Nel fundamentally started acting as the escort for caravans as she wandered here, wandered there, spending two years of time like that until she reached the spring of her 18th birthday.

Along the way of her escort jobs, she's experienced close to 10 attacks from monsters during these past two years.

It was just once but she experienced an attack from bandits as well.

During that time, Nel fortunately managed to repel all of those attacks without being injured even once.

Of course, it's not as if she was the only escort so it's hard to say that the achievement all belongs to just her but at the very least thanks to her spells she was able to escape dilemma a couple of times as well.

This achievement gave her confidence.

"Hmhmph. Even I'm a child that can do it if I try right!"

The merchants who hire adventurers as escorts often spread rumors around over the achievements of their escorts after jobs if they end up being attacked along the way.

It's not an obligation or anything else but it's that sort of custom like an unspoken rule.

I hired the adventurer, , and they magnificently chased off the Orks.  who I hired the over day managed to chase of a group of over 20 goblins with just four people. No way,  who I hired last year was able to overcome an attack from Harpies with just two people. That's the so called first-rate.

Just like that they advertise them.

However, that's only limited to cases of success.

In cases where an escort job fails it's often that the merchant them self never comes back and even if they were to have fled for their life the escort adventurers ending up in the stomach of the monsters is almost always a fact after all.

Even the adventurers who make their living primarily from escort jobs would prefer being employed by merchants who pick safe courses and pay good money(In other words, merchants who have done steady business for many years are trusted just that much).

Also, they want to exchange information about the other adventurers they're doing jobs together with as well.

The fact that she was able to use magic skillfully ended up becoming a large advantage to Nel here as well.

If she shows her status then they can confirm she has multiple elemental magic skills, then on top of that she can show off a flashy attack spell..{Ice Bolt} and such..then it's often the case that they'll offer her even higher escort wages as well.

Since at the very least they can confirm that she has water and fire magic at level 2 and void magic at level 3, even if it might take a bit of time it's actual proof that she can use the spell {Cure Light} with water magic as a bonus.

Just by having her participate their ability to undergo multiple battles consecutively if needed increases by one grade.

Nel was in great demand among the adventurers no matter which town she visited.

As a matter of fact Nel's assessment wasn't just that.

She's extremely precise with time and she's never been late for a meeting time. Even if it's a job that starts several weeks later she won't mistake the date and time and properly appears.

It might seem only obvious from a glance but this is something surprising. Portable clock magic tools are reasonably expensive so there's generally no adventurers with them on hand and of course Nel doesn't have something like that either.

That's why, adventurers often gather in meeting places with leeway in time. Depending on the case they might even be waiting in the meeting place since several hours early or mistake the day they were supposed to be meeting, those types of things are a daily occurrence. However, just Nel was always precise with time.

"The scheduler is considerably useful."

She was able to gain the added bonus of being thought of as reliable.

It's not unreasonable that her heart was gradually grasped by the words she heard many times just like that.

"If you go to the dungeon while it's dangerous you can earn that much more. If it's Nel then wouldn't you be able to earn even more?"

It's

been just over a year since Nel started wandering around and has been active centering in the Miyoite region along the coastal areas of Duke Dantes's Territory, she's also built up a bit of confidence in her abilities as an adventurer as well.

After all since she's a reincarnated person if she does things she's a child who can get them done.

When she luckily managed to come across a caravan escort job going to the West towards Benkelish, she decided to go with the momentum and try going to take a look.

.....

One month later, Nel's figure could be seen in the town of Benkelish. This town is well-known as a dungeon town and she's heard its name countless times since her infancy as well.

The stories about adventurers who challenged the dungeon in this town and fortunately managed great success.

The founder of the neighboring Rombert Kingdom, it's said that their founder and King was also able to found the nation on the fortune obtained in a dungeon as well.

Other than that there was also a female Tiger-people race who used the treasure she found in the dungeon as capital to become a great merchant or the hero Kai.Raiza who was able to rise in the world from an average adventurer to the commander of the White Phoenix Knight Group, those sorts of legends are in great number centering around the dungeon.

Although, there's also countless stories of those who left their home towns with great expectations and disappeared never seeing the surface again, that sort of average joe who boasted of being the strongest in the territory they lived, or the noble princess who was supposed captured in the nest of the living dead and is still wandering the dungeon after several hundred years.

If you were to ask, Nel also had a closer to image to that of the latter scary stories so she avoided it up until now.

However, since she was able to enter the ranks of a first-rate adventurer while still in her teens, for future reference she wanted to at least take a peek into that famous Benkelish dungeon as well.

Furthermore, if you can really earn that much then...

If it seems impossible then it's fine if she just gives up and tries going down a different path.

Several days after she started staying in the town of Benkelish.

Nel was able to enter a group centered around female adventurers with the team name Rabiusu.

Rabiusu is the name of the home town of the central members.

Since they had just had an opening for the position of a magician {Blast Back}, they were recruiting.

After confirming her skills with magic, she was downhearted after unexpectedly being told she somehow managed to receive a passing point but she decided to be satisfied that she was able to join a party of adventurers with a considerable level of skill.

One of the reason she chose this party as also because there's only two male members as well.

Those two are also the combat slaves of the leader so it's safe.

It's not like she's particularly afraid of men but until she gets used to Benkelish dungeon she wanted to reduce as many anxieties as she could.

And then, after undergoing several days of training her first day of challenging the dungeon.

Inside of the spacious dungeon.

It's common to feel the need to pee while in the middle of exploring.

Furthermore since it was her first day challenging where she was tense it couldn't be helped.

After putting in word with her party she lowered her pants and underwear while crouching down to go.

With Nel at the center her seven party members were on standby and the two male combat slaves were facing in the direction they came in up until now.

It was exactly as she had just started to go to the bathroom.

The party received an ambush from the front.

The two combat slaves who were on guard with their weapons at the rear started dashing to the front as well.

"Kya~!! Do..Don't come right now! Don't look!"

Nel reflexively raised her voice but the combat slaves didn't even glance at Nel as she was feeling embarrassed.

They were running by with a frantic look in order to save their own master.

"Ah! It! It got caught and I can't put them on.."

Soon after the sounds of combat and roars of monsters echoed through the passage.

She couldn't tell if they were from ally or monster, or whether a weapon hit, but there's screams in pain being raised as well.

Around the time Nel finally somehow managed to finishing going to the bathroom the monsters had already been repelled.

"Nel. That's quite the good standing you have right."

"Even though we're being attacked for you to be leisurely going to the bathroom you have quite the thick nerves indeed."

"Well, it's fine since we won't so easily fall behind monsters on the 1st floor though."

As she couldn't help but feel like flames were going to appear from her face as she turns red Nel thought.

(U..Umm, I.. If..If I can..just..wear them.. I'm a child that can get things done! It's true!)

"I'm sorry.."

This day ended without Nel showing her abilities.

Intermission Nel's Adventure 2

It's been a bit over a year since she started to challenge Benkelish dungeon. Nel has reached the spring of being 19 years old. She's already completely gotten used to her conduct in the dungeon.

The party Rabiusu that she's a member of is ranked considerably high in Benkelish.

After they recruited Nel who wasn't used to it they were active on the 1st and 2nd floors of the dungeon but their true abilities were that of a half first-rate party that can deal with the 3rd floor and the foremost line of the 4th floor.

Today, just now they were finishing up a room boss monster from the 3rd floor. Since around 500 meters along the side of the hall ahead of here is a good place for mining silver ores, they couldn't avoid passing through this room no matter what.

The group of 12 {Gnoll.Silverheads} and 2 {Green.Owl Bears} was a powerful opponent even for Rabiusu.

However, while a few of their members were injured, they were able to defeat them without a single victim.

Members putting their weapons away and taking out their knives to gather the magic stones.

A member putting a water pouch to their mouth while taking a short break. And then, Nel who starts looking at the injuries of her allies from the intense combat just now.

If it's a serious injury then it's necessary to heal it with magic.

One person with a bone fracture in the thigh area.

One person with three broken ribs.

One person with an open break in their right arm.

One more person, she has some cuts that aren't very big along her arms and legs but since she's a magician as well it's necessary to heal her so she can use healing magic as well.

The rest don't need to be healed right away and are fine to postpone.

First off is the spear using attacker who has an open break in his right arm.

"Please endure it for a short while.."

She carefully took off the leather armor of her upper body and rolled up her sleeve to expose the portion of her upper arm that's broken.

She needs to return the bone that's exposed from outside of the skin to it's correct position to make it easier to connect together.

After confirming her injury she pulled on her arm and returned the bone all at once.

"Nnn!!"

The spear user Dog-people woman makes a frown from the pain.

After that she concentrates in order to use the healing spell.

Po...

The instant the blue spell light that came from Nel's hand touched the affect part of the woman's arm, it quickly spread across the entire affect portion.

At the same time the fact that the bone reconnected could be felt.

"Please try moving it."

The Dog-people woman who was running a cold sweat nodded at Nel's words and slowly tried bending her fingers and wrist.

"There's no meaning if you don't try to move your elbow."

Seeing that Nel was a bit amazed as she called out to her.
It must be the first time this Dog-person has suffered a bone fracture.

"A, Ah. Got it..Gu!!"

She was properly able to bend it at the elbow. It seems she was able to heal the bone fracture without problem.

The Dog-person takes a breath while making a relieved expression.

One more time.

This time it's the muscle organization and skin.

Po...

The open wound in her upper arm closes in no time as you watch and the bleeding stopped as well.

"I think it should be fine with this."

Nel smiled at her.

In the next moment, an arrow stabbed into the face of the Dog-person in front of her.

"Eh?"

Nel raises her voice in surprise.

However, she can't afford to be standing around forever. She immediately rolled to the side.

After all it's not strange for anything to happen in the dungeon.

They've already been attacked by other adventurer parties twice before after all.

"Gwu!!"

However, it was only a slight bit faster for another arrow to stab into the side of her shoulder.

"It's an attack!!"

"Shit.."

"Ouch!!"

The Laios woman who acts as {Shield.Holder} held her large tower shield on guard while still kneeling on one leg as her thigh bone is broken.

The Hyumu combat slave who has broken ribs also holds his round shield while trying to deal with the arrows.

"Ora~!!"

"Di~e!!"

The attackers all shout uncivilized things while charging at the members of Rabiusu.

The one charging at the front is a Tiger-man with a large build wearing black polished leather armor, a long sword, and a kite shield.

"Ei!!"

The skilled leader of Rabiusu, a female Bunny-person fires off an arrow with her bow.

However, the arrow ends up futile as it just stabs into the kite shield.

The moment Nel thought "A" the leader Bunny-person was stabbed with the long sword the man was holding.

"Sani-sama!!!"

"How dare you!!"

The male combat slaves the leader Sani.Ramyuru owned charge at the Tiger-man.

(Fl..Flame Javelin!)

Nel starts concentrating so she can use attack spells to protect herself while enduring the pain.

However, the pain from the arrow stabbed into her back is intense and she can't seem to materialize the spell.

(Ah! It's completely impossible to use magic! If..If I just had more time!)

It was the moment Nel strongly, very strongly thought that.

The flow of time surrounding her, No, the flow of time for just her changed!

The expansion ability of Nel's Unique Ability, Clock 【Time Lord】 from reaching level MAX activated.

For a number of seconds equal to the square root of her body level, just Nel's movements and actions are multiplied by the square root of her body level.

Currently Nel's body level is 9.

In other words, for just 3 seconds it makes it possible for her to take action at a speed 3 times faster.

Obviously the MP used is no more than a mere 1.

Incidentally, there is a penalty.

For just the time you've used it and moved during usage your body gains that additional time as age.

If it's the current Nel then every time she uses it her life span shortens by 9 seconds.

It's only obvious but she doesn't know about this.

(! This is! The 【Clock】 Unique Ability!?)

In the usual location of her upper right field of sight, the scheduler and alarm menus that she's set ended up being displayed below.

And then, on the upper left side some new green characters similar to the time display appeared saying "Remaining time 2.87 seconds Currently Moving At 3.00 Times Speed".

She noticed right away that the members of Rabiusu and the attackers were moving strangely in slow motion.

The instant she recognized the display she intuitively felt "It's my Unique Ability!" while Nel quickly stood up.

By that point there was already 1 second remaining.

Another attacker who noticed Nel stood up was yelling "Uo~~~~~ra~~~~~" with a really stretched out voice as they charged at her.

Nel quickly drew her knife from her waist and used her Unique Ability again. The display of the remaining time returned to 3.00 seconds.

She ignores the pain in her back and runs towards the attacker holding a buckler and hand axe.

The male attacker swinging the hand axe in his right hand and buckler on guard in his left hand looked down on Nel as just a slender young girl. Of course, he also just saw her try to use magic just now but since he also saw the moment the arrow hit her in the back magic wasn't anything to be afraid of.

Rather, unable to use magic, he came at her underestimating her because she was a wounded and easy to take down opponent.

The movement she stood up was so fast he couldn't imagine that she was injured and the speed she pulled out her knife was that of a master.

However, Rabiusu is a party that's close to first-rate.

If it's a member of there then it's not strange for them to do manage that feat.

The man gathered his resolve for just a moment before doubting his own eyes.

The young girl stepped in at a speed that was completely unbelievable and was already within range of attacking him in no time at all!

No matter what it's too fast!

"Gu!!"

He spontaneously let out a grown while raising the buckler in his left hand to hit the head of the young girl.

Pan, and just as the man felt the inner part of his left arm brushed away he felt a burning sensation and pain from his neck.

"Ge!!"

He drops his hand axe and almost reflexively brought his hand to his neck.

As the man crouched down a bit the last thing reflected in his eyes was the glint from the blade of a knife.

Just as he thought "a" his consciousness was cut off.

Zee..Ha.....

The deep breathing of Nel echoes through the dungeon room.

While Rabiusu put up a struggle, since they were suddenly ambushed shortly after combat with power monsters they ended up being wiped out leaving just Nel.

Also, all of the other adventurers that made up the attacking party turned into corpses as well.

"U..Ow..."

While enduring the pain from the arrow as well as the pain from overworking her body she pulls out the arrow in her back.

After that, she spent an exhausting amount of time trying to concentrate, and was finally able to use the spell {Cure} on herself.

In reality, let alone {Cure Light} she really wanted to use the more powerful {Cure

Serious} but because of the pain she couldn't maintain her concentrate long enough to use that complex of a spell.

Just in case, at the point she finished sealing her wound Nel checked to see if there was any survivors among the members of Rabiusu but in the end it was a wasted effort.

Since it couldn't be helped she started concentrating again to heal the rest of her wounds.

"U..Gusu..."

Nel sobbed while using her knife to stab into the corpses of the members of Rabiusu she was close with as she gathered their magic stones.

It

was just the feelings that she didn't want to leave them alone in this place where the sun doesn't reach that kept Nel moving.

Of course,

she also understood that if she gathered the magic stones of the attackers they could be sold for money but since she didn't want to bring them out to the surface where the sun shines she just decided to ignore them.

After she gathered the magic stones, she ate as much of the dried food as she could fit in her stomach, then gathered all the money she could from the attackers as well.

She tied up all of the equipment she could gather with a rope and carried it with her.

After confirming the contents of the map case that the leader had on her waist she put it on her own waist.

Obviously she confiscated the map the attacker side had as well before gathering them into one and putting it in the map case.

Even though the attacking side is gone, it's not as if she was able to secure her safety.

Also she has just enough mana amount remaining for it to naturally recover but it's most likely only a couple percent of her maximum amount, so she's on the verge of exhausting it.

Since she doesn't know when monsters could approach, she can't wait around here for long.

..I need to move right away.

Nel holds back her feelings of wanting to rest here on the side of everyone while standing up.

For at least another few hours she has a harsh path ahead which she can't relax.

Intermission Nel's Adventure 3

Nel returned to being alone but she was able to sell the equipment she brought back from the dungeon and change it into money.

Since the equipment of her allies was considerably high quality, she obtained quite a bit of money all at once.

Since she was planning to bury the magic stones of all the Rabiusu members in their home towns, she decided to make it into funds for that.

Among them there was the combat slaves of the leader whose origins she didn't know but she decided to bury those together with them the leaders.

.....

Last night, she not only got lost but it was quite regretful Nel even ended up having to camp in the forest.

While she was looking over the campfire to keep it from going, she couldn't help but start falling asleep.

Although the reason for that is because she's been walking all day long and her stamina was quite exhausted but even then it's quite the careless story.

Nel got arrogant after realizing that she could accelerate for just 3 seconds. On her travels up to here from the town of Benkelishu she's entered combat with monsters several times but she managed to cut her way through all of them with her Unique Ability Time Lord.

Her genuine close combat skills are only at the average level but since she can move at three times the speed, her combat abilities in close combat can easily exceed even that of a master.

Even if there's multiple opponents I'll be fine.
After all I'm a first-rate adventurer.

That self-assessment itself isn't completely mistaken.
In actual fact if it's one on one or even if she's losing a bit in numbers she's easily been able to overturn things.
Also, the experience she gained as the magician {Blast.Back} in an upper ranking part of Benkelishu dungeon gave even more backing for her confidence.

Certainly if you just look at her combat power she's not lacking to call herself a first-rate adventurer.

However, that's only when she has free control over her body.

If a number of people sneak up on her when she's dozing off, even if she can move at three times the speed there's not much meaning to it.
She was held down and had several of her fingers broken at the same time, she ended up laying flat on the ground unable to concentrate enough to even properly use magic.

The man in front of her covered Nel's mouth with his large hand probably in order to prevent her from raising her voice.

Since she's got such a small build it even ended up sealing her nose so she couldn't properly breathe.

"If you want to scream then feel free to raise as many as you want. It's not like there's anyone nearby after all~"

The man who was holding Nel down made a vulgar smile while saying that. Nel nodded a number of times while tears gathered in her eyes. However the man took that, he removed his dirty hand from blocking her mouth and nose.

One reason for that was Nel's face was obviously in pain from seeking air but there was certainly enough time in between for the words to be taken into consideration.

It seems the man who was holding Nel down was the same Gnome race as her. They're the same in the small build they have but the fact that they both only have four fingers on each hand is another sign he's a gnome.

And then, he cut through Nel's clothes to her lower body all at once.

Nel's lower body was exposed and as her skin showed through her torn clothes the men raised cheers.

There's already no time!

Her broken fingers hurt so she can't use magic!

Her only way of escaping this situation is her Unique Ability~~!

She uses her skill Clock consecutively in order to think three times faster.

"It hurts so let go of me. It's not like I can use magic anymore already..And, if we're going to do it let's enjoy ourselves."

Nel endures the pain while desperately trying to make as seductive of an expression as she can.

"Ehe..That's how things need to be.."

The gnome man nodded to the two men holding Nel's arms to the ground. The thick blonde bear that's even grown to his cheeks gives off a strong color reflecting in the remaining campfire as it's about to go out.

The man continues to make a vulgar smile while loosening the belt on his pants himself.

"Hey, I'll call out everyone's names while doing it. {Status Open}..{Status Open}.."

Nel confirms the status of the Elf and Dog-person who were holding her down.

"Heee. You sure say some cute things..This kinky bitch..let go of her. Oh~ properly confirm if she has any weapons."

The gnome man said while lowering his pants grabbing Nel's chin with his hand. The knife she had at her waist was pulled out by elf and thrown away.

"Fufu..{Status Open}"

Nel confirms the status of everyone.

Fortunately none of them had any magic special skills.

And then, she immediately uses her Unique Ability.

In order to use her Unique Ability there's a necessity for her to know the other persons real name and have confirmed their status.

First off, the man in front of her showing off something dirty.

Johnson.Rukasu huh?

She uses the Unique Ability Time Lord.

She sets the alarm on Johnson.Rukasu to go off 5 seconds later.

The duration it will continue is the maximum of 5 minutes.

The sound of the alarm will be..the cry of Godzilla she saw in a movie in the past, also the sound of a large dinosaur like creature's footsteps. Obviously on the loudest volume!

Next is the Dog-person on the right, Hamiru.Esuta.
The alarm on him is set for 3 seconds later.
And then the Elf on the left, Kakuriddo.Imisuteron.
The alarm is set for 1 second later.

Finally three times the speed!

""Uwa~!!""

The three men raise their voices loudly surprised at hearing a tremendously loud sound.

Suddenly the loud cries of a monster they've never heard before echoed out right near their ears.

Simultaneously they heard the loud thuds of a giant creature running towards them.

"What is it!?"

"Is it a monster!?"

The men go into a panic as they try to pull their pants back up and look around the surroundings.

Obviously Nel didn't miss that chance and starts taking action.

She rolls from the spot with all of her power and grabs one of the burning pieces of wood in the campfire.

A sharp pain runs through her broken fingers to her entire body.

The pain was so intense she felt like everything in front of her was turning bright red.

But, she doesn't have the leeway to take the pain in her fingers into consideration right now.

Just like that continued rolling and stood up in a hurry.

She increases her speed by three times again.

"Iya~~~!!"

She ignores the pain from her fingers while raising a loud voice and charging at the men!

Her speed was almost like lightning!

She goes to defeat the Dog-person who noticed her and went on guard first!

Zubu!!

She stabbed the burning wood into the Dog-persons right eye with all of her power.

Zukin!!

The impact of that causes pain to run through Nel's entire body again.

"Ugu!!"

"Guaaa!!!"

Nel couldn't hold back letting out her voice in pain while the Dog-person screams in agony.

Zubotto the burning wood is pulled out.

The burning wood gives off a sizzling sound and white smoke.

The elf raises his arms to block while moving to avoid Nel's attack.

Nel's hand moves almost like a snake through the gaps in the elf's arms as the burning wood stretches out.

The end is still covered in the blood of the Dog-person as it gives off a burning heat.

Nel's aim is the almost shaped eyes of the elf.

"Ugoaaa~!!"

The elf lets out a scream and rolls around.
She extends three times the speed once again.

"This bitch!!"

Seeing his two allies taken out in no time at all Johnson felt an instinctive fear while pulling out his knife.

The speed he pulled out his knife was that of a veteran but to Nel the speed wasn't all that different from an inexperienced child.

But, what let Johnson block the burning wood piece Nel tried to stab him with twice was purely his skillful technique.

However, there's a limit to even that.

Around the second time he blocked the thrust from the woman, a kick came in to the back of his knee from the side at a frightening speed.

The strength in his knees disappeared as he staggered.

"Yaa!!"

While yelling a voice several times louder than just now, the gnome woman stabs at him with the burning piece of wood.

Even when with his posture collapsed Johnson frantically tried to move his body to avoid the fatal attack.

The burning wood hit Johnson's cheek.

"Gya!!"

The burning wood which still had plenty of heat remaining burns Johnson's cheek along with the beard he has there.

Johnson didn't miss the opening in her defense during the time she was thrusting at him.

He uses the knife in his right hand to move it around the woman's back as if embracing her and goes to stab!

But, at a speed he had no way of comprehending the burning wood was drawn back and thrust it into his eye socket.

The burning wood leaves the hand with a broken ring finger and thumb(Gnomes have no middle finger).

While leaving the burning wood still stuck in the man's eye stock Nel extends her speed by three times once again and endures the pain as she jumps for her own spear.

Nel hatefully looks at the men rolling around on the ground in pain and bleeding while enduring the pain from her fingers as she stabbed them to death one at a time.

After confirming the death of the men, she collapsed in place. Every time her heartbeat rings out a sharp pain runs through her broken fingers.

"Ouch..I need to heal it.."

She desperately starts concentrating and kneading her mana in order to use the spell {Cure}.

But, not just the pain from her fingers but her entire body was giving off a creaking ache on top of being considerably exhausted as it begs for rest.

Every time she tries to use three times the speed consecutively this happens. There's no choice other than enduring the pain of the bone fracture for a short while.

She overworks her exhausted body until she can somehow find her knife and by the time she found it Nel sighed seeing her broken fingers and hand swollen up like a glove.

In order to escape the pain and fatigue she just wants to go to sleep.

But, no matter how hard she tries it doesn't seem like she could. It's the same for the pain but the stimulation of just being attacked and killing her attackers wouldn't let her fall asleep.

Around the time night ended, she was finally able to concentrate enough to use a healing spell.

She spent around one hour and was finally able to heal one of the bone fractures.

After stuffing her mouth with portable food and satisfying her hunger, she continued concentrating again.

Furthermore, while Nel herself still hasn't noticed it but she was fortunate there were no "nameless" among the attackers.

.....

Around the time over another six months had passed.
Nel had turned 20 years old.

It was only just one week ago when she had finally finished traveling around to the home towns of all of the Rabiusu members.
Now she's on the route to return to her home town once.

She still has plenty of money.

In all it's just below 5,000,000 Z but if she has this much then it's plenty to start as a healer somewhere.

She can't hope for a place facing the main street of a large town somewhere but if it's a used house in the back streets somewhere then she should be able to purchase one.

Where should she open up business?

She thinks about all of the places she's visited, the towns, and villages she's stayed as she steadily walks down the road.

This area is the western part of Devas Kingdom, in other words a small territory in the southern parts of the Dirt Plains.

The formal name is Count Kamuraushu's territory.

The location the road stretches out to is a village called Namin and the lord of it is called Viscount Bofitto.

Since it's considerably to the south of the Raheru River which is for convenience sake considered the borderline between the conflict zone with Rombert Kingdom, the chances of war reaching to Namin village are unlikely.

Nel had heard at least that much before so that's why she chose it for her trip back.

Nel arrived in Namin village just before evening and first walked to the place in the center of the village that seems to have quite a few people.

The population of this Namin village is over 1,000 people and it's considered to be in the larger category as a village so she thought it might even have an inn.

In order to stay the night in an inn she asks a person wandering down the road the place of it.

"Umm, excuse me. Where is the inn?"

"Hn?"

The man who she asked looked at Nel's face for a short while but without saying anything in specific told her the location of the inn.

Around two hours after she got a room in the inn.

After wiping her body clean with the hot water she bought and getting refreshed it was just as she was biting into some dried meat.

Knock-Knock.

She heard a knock on the door.

After answering it and it was the voice of the inn owner she just talked to a short while ago.

It seems she has a visitor.

Since Nel had no knowledge of any acquiescence in this village she hides a knife in her left hand behind her back while staying on guard as she opens the door.

In the past, ever since she was attacked, she's stopped letting her guard down. Or rather, it would be more accurate to say she's too afraid and is unable to let her guard down.

After opening the door and other than the owner of the inn there were two armed men who seem like squires of the lord standing with tiresome expressions.

When the two men saw Nel's face they nodded to each other.

"Ah, you. I'm sorry when you've only just gotten relaxed but I want to ask you some questions. When is your birthday?"

"Eh? Why..."

Nel let out her voice at the unexpected question of suddenly being asked her birthday.

"Umu.

It's not unreasonable for you to think it's strange but I'd definitely like for you to answer the question. Ah, we don't particularly have any intention of blowing it up into a problem or anything like that..Sorry about that. This is one of our duties as well."

"..Please check."

Nel stretched out her right hand.

She thought it would be faster to let them check her status then saying it herself.

"Then please excuse me, {Status Open}..Mu! Hey, it matches!"

After confirming Nel's status the squire nodded to his partner squire.

"Here, just in case. {Status Open}..He~ so they really are out there."

While the two squires were nodding to each other Nel was making a face like she had no idea so they started telling her about it.

It seems that it has some kind of relation to an official notice sent out by the Crown Prince of the country.

If it someone who has black hair and eyes and their birthday is Year 7428, Month 2, Day 14.

Furthermore, if they can answer the question provided with no hint then it seems they're to be recruited for the imperial guard of the crown prince.

Nel had no idea what it was about at all.

However, that's the same for the two squires as well they didn't really get it either.

"In any case, since your birthday matches up then..the lord, sir Viscount Bofitto is calling for you. Sorry about this but could you please come with us to the lords mansion?"

It seems like they don't mean any harm to her.

They say the noble who rules this village wants to meet her and ask her some kind of question.

If she can answer the question then she'll be able to become one of the imperial guard for the Crown Prince.

Somehow it's really suspicious.

But, she doesn't have the courage to reject the calling from a noble either. Since it couldn't be helped she had them wait for a moment while she gets ready.

Just in case she wanted to make sure at least her wallet with her money in it was still on her body.

While being lead by the squires to the mansion of the lord, Nel tried to think about what the situation was regarding but couldn't think of anything.

However, she understood the moment she saw the figure she was showed by Viscount Bofitto in the lords mansion.

Somehow it's Weird.

It's strange.

Why is the map of Japan...

She was quite troubled maintaining her expression without showing the surprise on her face.

"Eh? This..Is it fine for it to be this sort of simple question?"

Nel said answering his question with another question while looking up at the tall Hyumu Viscount Bofitto.

"Ho? Do you know what this is!?"

The Viscount leaned forward a bit excited.

Overwhelmed by the force, Nel replied while shrinking back a bit.

"Square, Triangle, Square, Square...Wun, you could say it's a square, right triangle, and two rectangles as well."

Hearing Nel's answer the Viscount openly made a disappointed expression.

"As expected the second one, I guess things won't go so that easily huh..No..you, Nobufomu-kun. Do you not know any other ways of saying it?"

The second one? Different ways of saying it?"

Nel answered his question with a question again but Viscount Bofitto didn't criticize Nel for her rudeness and replied to her.

"Umu.

Just the other day, we sent off one young man from this Namin village who had the qualifications for becoming one of the imperial guard for the Crown Prince. However, if you can't reply then it can't be helped. Sorry about going to the trouble of calling you. It's fine for you to leave already."

"Eh? Is it just this?"

"That's right. It's just this but since you couldn't give the right answer it's unrelated to you. Ah, I can't teach you the right answer. It would be bad if you replied with it in a different town or village after all."

Having been told that there was nothing more Nel could do. There was no choice but for her to obediently back off.

But, she was able to obtain one interesting piece of information.

A Japanese person in this world of Orth is?

The distance past which for some reason she still hasn't been able to forget, the experiences from soon after she was born appear in her mind.

Victims of the accident.

Reincarnation.

She vaguely believed in it but since it was far too unbelievable of a story she couldn't completely bring herself to accept it.

However...

They've already sent out one person who met the conditions from this Namin village?

Come to think of it she remembered she still hasn't tried visiting the capital Randogurizu yet.

She decided to put off returning to her home town.

That's right the capital, let's go.

Intermission Nel's Adventure 4

Arriving at the capital Nel was surprised by it's size and splendor.

The shelves of the stores lined up along the main street were all filled with a mountain of food items and clothing.

If you walk into the street stall area the merchants will call out energetically trying to sell their products and you can't help but stop and listen to what they say.

The town of Bankelishu was quite something as well but it still falls several levels in comparison to this capital of Randogurizu.

After all the population is definitely over 100,000 people and depending on who you talk to they even say it's close to 200,000.

She buys some fruits, confectioneries, and unusual foods being sold in stalls and takes a room in an inn.

Her first night there ends and while ordering porridge with the option of honey at a restaurant she thinks, now then, what should I do from here on out.

Nel doesn't particularly have any interest in Japanese people and it's not like she really wants to meet or talk to them.

After all it's been 20 years since she was reborn.

Since she's lived her life up until now with no relation to Japanese people, regardless of what someone from where she used to live in the past does at this point doesn't matter at all.

Rather than that what interested her was the movements of trying to gather former Japanese people and make them into that imperial guard or whatever.

Fortunately or unfortunately, she's already obtained enough funds to open up her own business as a healer in a remote place somewhere.

Just when she thought of finally starting up the new life she was longing for, since she heard some very strange information it's only obvious to investigate it.

She took up a position in a restaurant that lets her observe the main street leading to the front gate of the castle Gamuroi and decided to watch if anyone that seemed like a Japanese person passes by on it.

If there is one then she'll tail them on their way home and confirm their house.

After that is..she'll decide on it later.

She wants to check the level of their lifestyle.

If they seem wealthy then it's fine to try approaching them from her side and talking to them.

If that doesn't seem the case then the treatment of those imperial guard might not be very good, in that case not having the fetters, and living a slow life as a healer would be better.

If it comes to that then she'll start business in a place as far away from Randogurizu as possible.

If possible then a place in another country where the Crown Prince's official notice won't reach might be best.

Fortunately Nel is of the commoner social standing so she can move around freely within the country.

Since it's possible for her to move as close to the border of another country within Devas as possible, it should be possible as long as she makes sure she's not seen by anyone when crossing the border.

Something

like walking a path without a road for a few days should be nothing at all for a first-rate adventurer and member of Rabiusu like her.

This time she'll properly remain careful.

Otherwise it might be good to slip in as the escort for a large company's caravan that does business outside of the country as well.

If she does that then she should be able to openly walk along the road into another country.

After that if she just hides her whereabouts in an adequate town, there's no way they'd bother spending the time and money just to find a single escort brat.

Since her status has just Nobufomu Family Second

Daughter written on it, if she just falsifies her birthplace as an appropriate remote town in the country she ends up as long as they don't seriously try investigating it she won't be exposed as a foreigner either.

In the worst case, she could marry a random man as well.

Since they're not a noble she can even get a divorce.

If she gets married twice then it's possible to erase the display of Nobufomu from her status as well.

Nel started watching the main street while thinking things like this.

And then several hours later, just around the time when the sun was setting she finally succeeded in discovering someone who seemed like a Japanese person.

There's two people.

One is a considerably good looking guy with his hair grown out in a half-assed way and another is a man with a frivolous looking expression and his hair tied up behind his head.

Nel confirms the appearance of the two men and the clothes they're wearing from under the hood of her robe.

Since she heard that one of the searching conditions is black hair and eyes she purchased a large robe with a hood since then.

"Hmph..I guess their clothes are pretty decent.."

The self-proclaimed first-rate adventurer Nel started following the men while maintaining a reasonable distance in order to avoid being noticed.

.....

"Ku...Well, I guess it's only obvious they'd go different directions.."

A mere several minutes after she started tailing them.

When the two men arrived at a certain cross road they raised their hands and split up in different directions.

Now then, which should I continue following...

She decided to give up on the frivolous looking one and follow the one good looking one simply because his face matched her taste.

It's only obvious but he wasn't paying any caution to being followed so even with Nel following about 10 meters behind he showed no signs of noticing.

Around 20 minutes after she started following him.

The good looking guy opened the door to a single house in the residential area. In comparison to the size of the house just the gate seemed a bit large.

The construction of the house itself doesn't seem particularly extravagant but it's not so terrible that you could call it dilapidated either.

It looks to be the same construction as the other houses lined up along this street.

The hedges surrounding the perimeter of the house are high and thickly grown out but they don't seem to be very well maintained so it's like they were just ignored from being trimmed.

However, while it's small there's a lawn as well and unexpectedly there's even signs of horses.

"Horse? He owns a horse? Not to mention two of them!?"

Putting it simply horses are assets on the level of super expensive foreign automobiles.

The treatment of these imperial guard might actually be pretty good. However, it might just be something he originally owned.

She's spending time to investigate things like that.

The good looking guy opens the gate and enters the door of the house a short distance inside.

It seems the door wasn't locked.

In other words, he doesn't live alone huh?

Until she heard things from Viscount Bofitto in Namin village, she had completely forgotten that all of the reincarnated Japanese people had the same birthday and black hair and black eyes but now she's remembered.

Reincarnated people can't forget the first information that was sent direction into their heads(if they try to remember then they can remember it vividly) but the other information they heard from the conversation with God after that is just the same as normal memories, if they don't remain aware of it then they can forget it.

"20 years old..It's not strange for him to be married and have children, huh?"

If he has a family then there should be a lot of information that can be gained from the level of their meals and the content of their conversations as well.

Also, if she can see the clothes of the family and the furniture in the house then she should be able to figure out even more details.

She tried searching for a gap in the hedge but couldn't find one.

Also, since it hasn't been maintained, it's not low enough to be jumped over. If she pushes herself she might be able to do it but it's easy to draw other people's attention and she'll end up making noise as well.

What should I do, and while she was thinking that she ended up passing by the front of the gate.

She killed time while passing through to the next block of the town.
And then, after the sun had completely set she returned.

It's something she noticed after getting close but there's also light shining from the windows of the house.

The light she can see from the gaps of the windows is exactly the same as the surrounding houses and no flicker can be seen to it so it means they probably own a lighting magic tool.

It can be thought that they have a reasonably good level of lifestyle.

There's an old house on the verge of collapse standing in a place around 10 meters from his house.

It's been neglected for a number of years, surrounded by the hedge almost like a thicket. She thought there might be some vagrants living in it but as expected it's a location with pretty good public order and the fact that the roof has completely fallen made it so there was no traces of anyone living in it.

It seems like no one has stepped foot in the grounds there for quite a while.
It's suitable for observing that house.

After confirming that far, she decided to stop the investigation this day.

After that for several days.

By sneaking into the decrepit house without gathering any attention and observing his house there's some things she's learned.

There's at least three people living in that house.

Japanese people, probably a pair of twins and then one Orth person, probably a slave or something.

Since she hasn't seen anyone else entering or leaving she's confident there's no other people than that.

Just, it's not like she's seen all three of them at the same time either though...

Particularly when it comes to the twins, one morning when one of the twins who seems to be an imperial guard left to go to the castle she noticed it.

Just the same as usual several hours after a man with a Japanese person looking face left the house and before he returned home, no matter how you look at it another man with the exact same face left and went towards the stable.

He must have been lured out of the house by the neighing of the horses demanding food but thanks to that she was able to realized there's two people with the exact same face.

At first she thought she just didn't notice when the man who left in the morning had returned but after seeing the man who returned in the evening his clothes were the same as when he left.

Even more strange than that was the fact that one of the twins and the slave would alternate days they looked after the horses.

On the days the slave looks after them, he brings the horses out for a walk, goes shopping and outside pretty often, but on the days one of the twins looks after the horse it's completely incomprehensible but not even the slave comes out.

Also, while occasionally the slave and one of the twins will go out together, they never go out with all three of them or just the twins.

As expected Nel was thinking that it was her misunderstanding since they were twins.

However one morning, shortly after one of them left for work she saw another one use magic to fill a bucket with water to give it to the horses. It was a timing that was completely impossible for them to return without Nel noticing.

It seems that one of the twins is a hikikomori.

It's unusual for someone who lives in a city, they almost never go outside to eat. Even on the rare occasions when they go out to eat it's only when one of the twins is believed to be remaining in the house.

Therefore it would be difficult for her to get into a position where she can peek in through the windows of the house while they're all outside.

However, she was able to understand the general level of their lifestyle. It seems they're able to live a lifestyle above the normal and there's occasionally times where the ingredients used for one of the twins are reasonably high class.

It seems they're paying plenty in wages to the slave as well and his appearance is considerably good for a slave.

One such night.

While hiding herself inside of the decrepit house with weeds growing through the rotting floor continuing her boring stakeout as usual.

One of the twins who left in the morning returned to the house. And just when she thought that, they came back out right away. Along with the slave.

I guess they must be going to eat?

In that case it might be a good chance to listen to their conversation so she stood up in order to start following them.

However, she ended up seeing it.

The slave locked the door of the house.

Is that house uninhabited right now?

If it's uninhabited even if she can't sneak inside she intended to hide in the back near the stable while waiting for them to return.

Since

they'll turn on the light when they return, when they do that she might have a chance to observe things inside through the gaps.

After that if she just waits until everyone is asleep it's fine if she quietly sneaks out.

It's almost been close to 10 days since she started observing this house.

She's already gotten tired of it and it's plenty.

Nel had decided to end her investigation here today and switch over to the other frivolous looking man.

If he's living a similar level of lifestyle then that would be it's very possible that the imperial guard are living a slightly better lifestyle than a healer in a remote town.

She still needs to carefully take into consideration whether it's worth the trouble and anxiety acting in service to the royal court but it's better to have more samples.

In the end she thought to just peek into the house a bit and confirm the furniture and such.

It's extremely boring but she decided to wait for what seems to be one of the twins and the slave to return from their meal.

After checking the surroundings she quietly moved close to the house and checked things.

She had already identified that there was no lock on the gate.

The hikikomori must already be sleeping because there's no light on inside of the house.

She quietly hid herself in the back of the stables.

Just like that after around 2 hours passed.

One of the twins and the slave came back.

The paper-lantern the slave is probably holding stopped in front of the gate.

Including Nel, just because you can use magic there's almost no one who uses the spell {Light} right and left.

It's certainly convenient but who would willingly go through the effort of deeply concentrating every 5 minutes when the spell duration runs out.

"Fui~ I drank~I drank."

"You did drink quite a bit, big bro."

It's her first time hearing Japanese!

She tried listening in on their conversations while tailing them during meals up until now but because of the distance she wasn't able to hear them at all.

I already knew about it but after all they're Japanese people..But, big bro?

She felt like tears were welling up from how nostalgic she felt.

But, the fact that she heard some unnatural words when one of the twins isn't around helped Nel hold them back.

And then she continues listening in even further.

"I mean, starting tomorrow you're going to Benkelishu with Ren right? If I don't drink today I won't be able to drink for a short while."

"That is true.."

It seems they unlocked the door for the house.

The door opens and she could hear the sound of it closing.

Gakon, and she heard the sound of a latch being lowered.

Different from the simple locks which you lock from outside, if someone is inside it's common to use the large latches instead of the locks.

Nel

pushes her ear up to a portion of that wall that seemed thin which she had already planned on before hand and confirmed she could hear sounds from inside.

She hears the footsteps of people walking.

It seems they're still talking about something but she can't tell what they're saying.

Chi..and she quietly clicked her tongue before approaching the window which opens upwards and looking through the gap.

There's light in the room.

It's a narrow gap but she can see reasonably well inside of the room.

The furniture in the room doesn't seem very high class and is normal stuff you can find anywhere.

"Do you intend to extend it?"

"Nn..That's fine as well but since I was drinking alcohol after all. It's a bit unpleasant but I guess I'll return before the morning when the alcohol disappears."

What are they saying?

"Ogu!! Gugugugu~gi~~"

The slave suddenly started groaning in pain.

It seems he continued suffering for about 1 minute but one of the twins just watched that with his eyebrows raised a bit and sat down in a chair as if not paying any mind to it.

And then, Nel almost reflexively ended up raising her voice.

She saw the slave that had been holding it's body with both arms from the pain as it suddenly raised it's face.

That face was that of a man she hadn't seen from anyone in the house up until now.

Suddenly she noticed but his height and build seemed to have changed slightly as well.

What?

What in the world, is that?

Cosmetics or a disguise..it's absolutely not on the level of that!

Nel struggled to suppress her excitement while making sure she wouldn't miss a single word as she carefully focused all the nerves on her eyes and ears.

Intermission Nel's Adventure 5

The bizarre happening that occurred inside of the house.

One of the twins who didn't even flinch seeing his sibling (?) suffer that much in front of his eyes.

No, are they not twins?

Nel couldn't understand what in the world was happening at all.

There's one cause for why she was stunned at the shocking scene that suddenly played out in front of her eyes.

However, thanks to that you could say it was good luck that she didn't even have the time to remember her Unique Ability.

"Oh~ Atatata...Just this is painful.."

"Rather than something like that big bro, how are the preparations for tomorrow?"

"Something like you say..."

"Didn't you say you were used to it because you do it every day?"

"That's true but even if I get used to it things that hurt still hurt..I said it right? Also, after all being myself is the best. I can't help but feel this discomfort."

"Rather than something like that the preparations for tomorrow, are they already finished? If they aren't done then I'll do them starting now.."

"Things are already perfect on that end. The maintenance on the armor is already done and I've properly bought up some food as well. I brushed every inch of the horses and double checked the harnesses as well."

Come to think of it they were saying something about going to Benkelishu tomorrow morning with someone.
It must be the preparations for that.

"Then it's fine. Also you know, this, look at it."

"An? Sandals? Is there something wrong with that?"

One of the twins took a pair of sandals out from the bag on his waist and showed it.

No, since they don't seem to be twins I guess I should just call him the little brother.

Nel looks at it as well but...

"Don't you think something is strange about it?"

The little brother handed a sandal he took out to his older brother.

"..This! Rubber!? Isn't it a good sandal!? Where were they selling it?"

"I found it when I was out today shopping in the Damuru district with Nabasukasu-san. They said it was made in Rombert. They only had that one pair remaining. It cost 220,000 Z but don't you think it's amazingly~ good?"

"Expensive! But, this is nice. I want some too."

If you mention 220,000 Z then it's enough to stay for a month at a decent inn and eat three decent meals a day and still have some left over.

It's on the level of the monthly salary of an artisan who's been working for several years.

In Nel's home town it's an amount equal to a year of wages for a four person family of slaves.

It's a lot of money.

There's no way Nel could pay that much money for just one pair of sandals.

"Isn't it nice? I'm wearing these when we go to Benkelishu tomorrow."

"..You said it was made in Rombert right..So you can get rubber in Rombert huh.."

"That seems to be the case."

"Rubber can be made by just drying out the sap. But the quality shouldn't be this good with just that. Also, this color.."

"An?"

"It's a manufactured product, this. Isn't it close to yellow-brown? It's got sulfur mixed into it. Furthermore the precision is pretty high. Even the soles as well have two..No, there's three different types of rubber in them. Something like this, if you don't have machinery you can't make it.."

"Eh? Machinery?"

"Yeah, the production of rubber involves the sap of rubber {latex} and mixing it with sulfur, carbon..charcoal and things like that. If you just have the willpower it's something that can be done with human power as well but look at this surface. It's smooth right? Furthermore the cuts are close to perfectly uniform. I think something like a large-scale cutting machine would be needed for this."

"..Big bro.."

"Hn?"

"Big bro always forgets right away~

Isn't it magic? The other day Ren showed it to you as well right? If it's {Air Cutter} then it should cut pretty smoothly and in the first place if you just make a mold and pour it into there shouldn't it take the same shape as well right?"

"Ah..I see..Magic huh..But, even so it's strange that they would have manufactured rubber."

"Is it strange?"

"Yeah, it's strange. This, I'm sure the one making it is a reincarnated person just like us.."

"Ah, that sort of thing. But didn't we already predict something like that? Isn't it only obvious at this point."

"That's true as well but this sort of case is a first."

"What's the first about it?"

"We, No, unless it's a high ranking noble like Alex and Sel it shouldn't be so easy for someone to be making things like this."

"Futami-san, wasn't he making eyeball balloons?"

"Idiot, don't compare it to something like that."

"Then, even we were able to make black gunpowder. Even when it comes to guns, while it's just a matchlock, but we were able to make a prototype."

"It's close to that. But, try thinking carefully about it. Both the black gunpowder and gun were the result of everyone gathering their knowledge. It took us a considerable amount of time as well and above all else it used up quite an amount of money. If we didn't have Alex and Sel then at best we would have only been able to make gunpowder."

"That's only obvious right."

"This rubber is in some meanings an industrial product. Just like you said I'm sure they're using magic for it but..the fact that it's even circulating over to a foreign country like this means that they should have succeeded in mass producing it. It means they're probably profiting in a considerable amount of money as well."

"I see that sort of thing. But you know, isn't it not strange for there to be someone like that?"

"That's right. There's nothing strange or weird about it. That itself is fine.

It's a matter of there being a high probability of someone who's succeeded quite a bit in Rombert or if that's not the case a high ranking noble of the same class as Alex. This is a problem you know?"

"What is?"

"You should use your head a bit more. Do you really think someone capable of doing that wouldn't gather Japanese people?"

"Ah..I see. I guess that's true. If it's something like that then obviously.."

"Yeah, it means there's a limit on how far our recruitment of Japanese people will go. We don't know how many more it will reach. We might not even gather one more person than this."

"Nn..Me, big bro, Alex, Sel, Myulu, Tsetto, Ren, Aluko, Kris, also Futami-san. 10 people huh..Whether that's a lot or few.."

"Since it's this sort of world, it wouldn't be strange for there already to be people who have died after all, I think it's decently high number. But, if there's someone like this in Rombert then..if we don't have double this number there's no room to relax."

In other words there's another force out there gathering Japanese people than them huh?

Nel quietly removed her face from the window and leaned with her back against the wall while thinking.

The force on this side of Devas Kingdom has members who are considerably high ranking nobles included in it.

After all they're the imperial guard of the Crown Prince.

And then, it seems there's one more force(?) in Rombert Kingdom as well.

It seems there's someone who has a reasonable position in that one as well but it still hasn't left the realms of speculation.

However, we were able to tell that it seems they're making rubber and selling it spaciously.

It's hard to say which side seems the best.

Nel lets out a small sigh and lifts her body back up while moving her face close to the window.

"Nn..Come to think of it you know, it seems that one invasion plan will be around the fall. They decided on it today."

"Hmn, so they decided on it huh? It seems they're putting quite a bit of fighting spirit into it. Th~at, Baron Denbiru is the general right?

Putting aside Tesetto as the sub-commander, it seems they put quite a bit of effort into the maneuvers forcing that idiot old man Denbiru in as the commander.."

"Yeah, it seems they went through quite a bit of trouble to make it so that our side wasn't the one that recommended him. Things in that area are probably Sel's achievement. Well, regardless of what it is we need them to properly succeed. It will connect to the foundations for us being fortified as well...It seems Myulu is a commander of 10 just the same. What should we do big bro? Should we both go? If we're together with Ren then I'm sure we'll be fine after all.."

"Hn~

Even if it's as Ren's escort it's unnatural to go to a battlefield with the face of a slave..It might be fine to take the face of some random person but adjusting the timing on the duration in the middle of a war is just a bit..I want to reduce the chance of increasing the number of people who know my face..Putting us aside, that Nasukasu was it, Well whatever, Futami-san? We need him to do at least the bare minimum leveling up as well~after all.."

"It's not Nasukasu. It's Nabasukasu..Well whatever. Futami-san isn't a bad person. I've only had him help me out in the past."

"I don't think he's a bad person either. Well, putting aside leveling up it's necessary for him to be able to use magic. For his own sake as well."

Things like an invasion plan and human resources maneuvers suddenly a suspicious sounding conversation has started up.

Nevertheless I wonder if an imperial guard really has a job that's this closely related to the backbone of the country?

Even since her past life Nel has never bothered to think very deeply about the background details of politics, war, and such so she only ever thought, "that sure does seem like a job with heavy responsibility".

However, she can at least understand that they seem to be talking about a matter of great importance.

After all the discussion is about the next invasion plan.

Plans for a war are on the level of a national secret right?

"But you know..Futami-san's Unique Ability, that {Rotten.And.Drain.Tolerance} was it..It sure is useless right..About the only one happy about it was Myulu."

"That isn't Futami-san's fault so it can't be helped right?"

"But you know.."

"I get your feelings but stop trying to tie every little thing into secret maneuvers and combat. It's certainly convenient on that front, and easy to understand. However, don't try to rank people on whether they're useful or not based just on that. In the first place wasn't Futami-san your senior? You were in his care right? Isn't just that enough of a reason to look after him for the time being?"

"Nn~ Even if you say that it's already a story from decades in the past after all.."

"That might be true. But, do any acts of kindness you can. Compassion doesn't exist just for the sake of people, you know. Those sorts of favors are something the person who received them don't forget. It's fine if you just think of it as something that will eventually work its way back around to you some day."

"Chi...Big bro is a teacher the same as usual. Preaching has become a habit."

"Fu~

Something's wrong with you feeling something like this is preaching.

Even though we've done things over from brats again, you should grow up a bit.."

Somehow I don't really get it.

It seems they're talking about looking after someone though.

However, since the words Unique Ability came out Nel was able to understand how his appearance changed.

That should definitely be that man's Unique Ability.

In other words, he's being called big bro but they're not definitely twins.

But, judging from their faces it's very possible they might really be siblings.

"By the way about the war in the fall, but was schedule decided on yet?"

"Yeah, three months later until the end of August in..What did they say it was again..That's right, they'll gather the invasion troops in the town of Bondai. One month for training on the organization and deployment. Then in the middle of September they'll invade just like that. And, at latest within two weeks they'll approach Komin village. And then they're making maneuvers for that thing to reach the unit with that timing."

"Hmn~Hmn~, a discharge letter from Alex huh?"

"That's right, also it will include orders to execute the Baron and promotion orders for the sub-commander."

"Illegally selling the food supplies of the White Phoenix Knight Group was it..Putting aside a different knight group that's seriously bad for the White Phoenix knight group right?"

"Yeah. And, we, or rather, that's where Ren comes into play. For that sake up until then we need to endure a poor diet though."

"I wonder if Ren will agree with that?"

"That's the problem isn't it right. Well, if an official letter of discharge on top of order for his execution come up then, furthermore if it specifies her name in a flashy way to execute him then I'm sure Ren will have no choice but to do it. After all it's the corruption she hates and our meals up until then should be nothing but the oatmeal porridge she really hates. And above all else it should be a good appeal for her, if they know there's a magician of that high of a level with us then it will raise the morale of the unit as well. Though persuading her over things on that end is the job of Myulu and I."

"Do you intend on telling her it will show off the effectiveness of magic and make it easier for her to gather students for her national magic school or something like that?"

"I think there's no choice but to think about things like that when the time comes to it."

"I guess that's true."

"In any case, after Baron Denbiru is executed Tsetto will take over command. And, then we'll have Ren make full use of her magic and quickly capture Komin village. If additionally we can even capture Wakka village even further in it would be the best."

It seems somehow they're intending to murder someone in the White Phoenix Knight Group and make that into the achievement for their acquaintance.

"And, Tsetto and Myulu will get a promotion huh?"

"Yeah."

"I wonder if things will go that well?"

"It's a method that even big bro approved of right? For that sake we've had Baron Denbiru illegally selling food supplies since a several years back after all."

"I don't mean that part. I'm sure there will be no problem on that end. What I want to say is about the war. It's fine that Tsetto is taking over command. He's done well in studying and I've also heard he's got quite a bit of popularity in the knight group as well.

However, it's his first battle as the commander of the overall forces."

"Big bro has been worrying about that since the start right."

"That's only obvious right..If you were to ask me, I find it strange that including you no one else is worrying about it."

"In that regard Myulu is acting as an assistant right, putting aside big bro but since Ren and I will be there I think things will go fine.

Losing even though Ren is there that itself is impossible right. It seems that "Black Witch" of Rombert is quite something as well but look, there's no way there's a magician greater than Ren out there right?"

"Nn..Certainly that's true. I guess things will be fine if Ren is there huh?"

"That's right. Also, it seems that "Black Witch" appeared in that last battle as well so she most likely won't appear in the one in fall."

"..Well,

we were aiming for the gap when that "Black Witch" wasn't around after all..It seems like it would be best for me to come along as well."

"If you think that way then come along. After all it's the first war for both Ren and I."

"I guess so."

In other words they tailored up a noble who's corruption they had hold over as the command and their ally as the sub-commander.

Just before the combat starts they arrest the commander under the charges of corruption and after executing them make the sub-commander into the temporary commander.

And then immediately after that the plan is to let their allies achieve victory in combat in grand way after that to get promoted.

"Well, in any case we have to get up early tomorrow. Let's get to sleep pretty soon."

"Isn't it still early evening? Big bro is the one who's still a brat."

"..It's fine. Let's just sleep already."

"I get it~ I get it~"

It seems they intend to sleep pretty soon.

Even if he says early evening it's already about a good time.

Right now...What..time..was..it..?..

23/4/7448 20:12:59 appeared in the top right of Nel's vision.

"Hn?"

The little brother who was just about to leave the living room made a surprisingly serious expression and turned around.

"What is it?"

Overawed by his look, the older brother questioned in confusion.
Nel thought it was strange as well.

"Big bro.."

The little brother whispered something into the older brother's ear.

"Eh.."

The older brother raises his voice in surprise.

".."

After something was whispered to the older brother he ordered something of the little brother and reached out for the handle of the sword hanging on the wall.

Nel instinctively felt the crisis and immediately tried to increase her speed by three times while retreating from that place.

She turns around and dashes!

She tried to forcefully climb over the hedge.

It was there that she finally realized it.

The display for 【Time Lord】 isn't floating up in her vision!
In other words, she's not moving at three times the speed!

"Eh?"

She tries to increase her speed once more!

..Usually the multiplier speed and remaining time would immediately appear in the top left area of her sight. On the upper right there's the date and time display, and below that the scheduler menu is floating.

Up until just mere moments ago, when she confirmed the time there was no problem...

Ban!

A loud noise comes from the window as it was violently opened and the man sticks his face out.

"They're here! Over there!!"

The reason is unknown but they've noticed that she was peeking in!

And then, the reason for this is unknown as well but she can't use 【Time Lord】 to increase her speed by three times!

Nel desperately jumped over the hedge and ran towards the main street.

She doesn't turn around to look behind.

Along the way, fully aware that it would lower her speed a bit she ran in zigzags a number of times.

Of course, being careful of attacks from magic or arrows.

Since it seems that they've lived for quite a while in this Randogurizu, they also have the local advantage.

She didn't do something like running directly towards her inn.

The only belongings she left there was her bow and arrows, spear, and some daily necessities like changes of clothes.

They're nothing expensive, just completely normal goods but both of her weapons cost several hundreds of thousands of Z.

If you were to say it's regrettable then that's true but you can't replace personal safety.

She walks around with all of her money on her.

Since she's already heard that kind of conversation no matter how she thinks about it, things will end up badly.

Thinking that Nel was overcome with fear.

Nel ran, ran, and ran as if she thought her heart might burst.

Even after leaving Randogurizu she still couldn't relax.

And then, when she thought she had already gotten quite a bit of distance away, she nervously turned around.

The road she ran down was just illuminated by the moonlight of Karutari and Neitari and there's no sign of pursuers.

She quietly tried using 【Time Lord】.

In the upper right area of her sight 23/4/7448 22:16:32 appeared.

.....

"It wasn't Tsetto right?"

"Yeah, it looked a lot more slender than that. It might be a woman.."

"A short woman and Japanese person huh.."

"I felt it when they used their Unique Ability. It's true."

"Don't get into a panic I'm not doubting you. Hmn..if it's not someone from this side then that's still better."

"I wonder how much they heard?"

"Today, it would be best to think they heard everything since we returned back to the house I'm sure. Rather than that.."

"Yeah, in regards to big bro, I guess they realized?"

"If it was a Japanese person then I'm sure they'd understand the conversation so it's best to think they realized."

"What about the Transformation?"

"I don't know that far. It might have been seen."

"I wonder if someone else was sheltering them like big bro?"

"..I wonder about that?"

"Wouldn't things become troublesome if that's the case?"

"Nn~ I think it would be troublesome but in our case, we can make up excuses for it after all.."

"Yeah, that thing where in the worst case you can act as the body double for Alex or Sel?"

"That's right. In that case, it would be difficult to take their place without being found out though.."

"If someone was sheltering them I wonder who it was?"

"I can't really that far either..but, if we think about the possibilities then it's probably impossible other than Alex."

"That guy, I wonder if he'd really go that far?"

"I really doubt it. But, now that it's been seen once.."

"Shit!! This much trouble.."

"In any case it seems it would be best to discuss things with Ren tomorrow."

"Yeah."

"And also.."

"Hn?"

"It might be good to reveal things about me to Futami-san as well."

"Yeah, we need him to become an ally."

"Yeah."

"Tomorrow when we meet up with Ren we'll discuss it with her right away. If on the way to Benkelishu some pursuers sent by Alex and the others come for us or there's some kind of contact then we'll clearly know their identity."

"If that isn't the case then..."

"I can think of several possibilities. First off, regardless of whether he knows about me he's letting me swim. But, as expected that's too unnatural even though he's putting so much effort into gathering Japanese people."

"That's true."

"In that case the possibility of it being someone we had no relation to at all up until surfaces."

"Wun. I wonder about that?"

"Why?"

"Don't you think it's unlikely for them to be in Randogurizu without knowing about the official notice? Then why didn't they come forward?"

"They might not have any interest in the gathering of Japanese people or it's possible they're suspicious of it as well."

"Certainly..Even when it came to Futami-san he said that if he can't bring along his wife and kids he absolutely won't and can't cooperate after all~"

"Yeah, that official notice, the one place it was lacking is that it doesn't make any reference in regards to their family. I forgot about it as well. It didn't even cross my mind that someone as young as us would be married and have kids..I'm still plenty young myself."

"Returning to the conversation but, wouldn't that mean they're simply a person that hasn't made contact with anyone yet..

"Yeah, that would be the most optimistic and relaxing way of looking at it. In that case, at worst it just reduces the chances of one Japanese person from becoming an ally after all."

"It doesn't mean the possibility has disappeared?"

"It's not like we've completely become enemies yet right. We've only just noticed that they were eavesdropping. There shouldn't be any problem with trying to pursue a suspicious intruder who entered our property right. If we explain that itself then I'm sure they won't so easily get angry or rather can't."

"Then what can we do for now?"

"Nothing.

Although, we should remain careful with our conduct tomorrow but..even in the off chance that it's someone Alex was sheltering, it's not like we were talking about anything that would make him into an enemy after all. It's nothing more than the fact that you were sheltering me was exposed. Also I doubt they would try to do something like suddenly trying to kill a Japanese person."

"Certainly.."

"..Nothing will start from worrying about it. Let's go to sleep."
